Ortega appeals for court ruling

UNITED NATIONS (UPI) — Nicaraguan President Daniel Ortega said Tuesday he wants the World Court to order the United States to end U.S. "occupation" of parts of Honduras and Costa Rica from which Contra rebels operate against his country.

Ortega earlier told the U.N. Security Council the Reagan administration's refusal to abide by a World Court ruling against Contra rebel aid could lead to a "military escalation" in Central America.

"We do not want confrontation," Ortega said during an unusual appearance before the 15-nation body at the United Nations. "We have not come... to cast insults at the U.S. government but to seek peace and respect for international law."

ORTEGA TOLD a news conference his government has brought the matter to the Netherlands-based International Court of Justice just one month after it declared illegal U.S. aid to rebels fighting against the government in Managua. The court has no enforcement power.

U.S. Ambassador Vernon Walters said Nicaragua had "misused" the world court for its "propaganda war against the United States." He said "the only way to solve the crisis is through negotiations involving all the parties."

In Managua, Nicaragua, the Defense Ministry reported Tuesday U.S.-backed Contra rebels attacked a refugee settlement with mortars, killing four children and a woman and wounding 20 people.

There was no immediate confirmation of the attack from independent sources and spokesmen for the Contra rebels fighting the Nicaraguan government were not immediately available for comment.

A DEFENSE Ministry spokesman said rebels attacked the Panali relocation camp near the Jinotega province town of Wiwili, 105 miles north of Managua, shortly before midnight Monday.

In Washington, a Vietnam veteran and former priest who carried 20 wounded men to safety while under enemy fire gave up his Medal of Honor Tuesday to protest U.S. aid to Nicaraguan rebels, calling Central America "another Vietnam."

Veteran Charles Liteky put the gold medal — the nation's highest military honor — in a large manila envelope and placed it at the Vietnam Veterans Memorial with a letter outlining his reasons for renouncing the coveted award.

High winds forced a freight train to derail late Monday, sending sixteen cars into the Des Moines River near Boone, Iowa. One derailed car contained a toxic chemical.

Derailed train spills chemical near river

BOONE, Iowa (UPI) — More than 200 teenagers were evacuated Tuesday from a summer camp because of toxic chemicals spilled near the Des Moines River by a train blown off a 190-foot-high trestle by 60 mph winds, officials said.

"All indications are the train was hit by extremely high winds or a tornado," Chicago and North Western Vice President Jim Foote said. None of the train's four crew members were injured, he said.

Eighteen cars of the 31-car westbound train jumped the tracks around 11 p.m. Monday, and 16 plunged to the river or its banks. The seven cars that fell into the river carried Oreo cookies and appliances, a railroad spokesman said.

One of the cars that landed by the side of the river contained 190 drums of Pyradine, an agricultural insecticide that can cause serious respiratory problems in humans, authorities said.

GOV. TERRY BRANSTAD surveyed the damage from a helicopter Tuesday, and declared the accident site a disaster area. The declaration allows the federal Environmental Protection Agency to assist state workers in the cleanup.

Branstad also placed units of the Iowa National Guard on alert, in case they are needed to aid in the cleanup.

State officials said it appeared none of the Pyradine leaked into the river, adding a retaining wall was built Tuesday along the bank to prevent it from flowing into the water. However, they said, it would be Thursday before the area is cleaned up.

"It's a grim looking situation — the number of cars in the water," state Disaster Services Director Ellen Gordon said. "There's one area that's a big pile of debris. It appears it will take time to clean it up."

Dick Anderson of Fremont, Neb., one of the crew members, said he was riding in the caboose when the cars derailed.

"I'm still pretty shook up. I'm scared of heights," Anderson said. "I just thought how lucky we are the caboose wasn't down there with the other cars."

MORE THAN 200 teenagers and their adult counselors were evacuated from an Assembly of God Church camp on the banks of the river and taken to the Ogdan High School.

None of the campers witnessed the accident, but learned of it when Boone County sheriff's deputies arrived at the camp around 3 a.m. and told them to leave. Twenty farm families who live within 1 mile of the accident also were asked to leave their homes. Authorities said it would be several days before the evacuees would be allowed to return home.

A state trooper assigned to secure the area and five Department of Natural Resources workers involved in the cleanup were injured slightly by fumes from the chemicals. All were treated and released from a Boone hospital, officials said.

Al Farris, of the state Fish and Wildlife Division, said there were no fish kills in the river Tuesday, but he said boaters and residents would be asked to stay away until the cleanup is completed.

Committee challenges Rehnquist

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Senate Republicans called Supreme Court Justice William Rehnquist an exemplary nominee to be the nation's 16th chief justice Tuesday, but Sen. Edward Kennedy urged his rejection on grounds of an "appalling" civil rights record.

Rehnquist, President Ronald Reagan's choice to replace retiring Chief Justice Warren Burger, sat expressionless through the first day of his confirmation hearings as Kennedy, D-Mass., ripped into his record before a packed hearing room of the Senate Judiciary Committee.

Rehnquist's nomination has been challenged by civil rights activists and some Democrats who charge he is an extremist. His confirmation is expected in the Republican-controlled Senate, however.

William Rehnquist

"AS A MEMBER of the court, (Rehnquist) has a virtually unblemished record of opposition to individual rights in cases involving minorities, women, children and the poor," declared Kennedy, who voted against the conservative jurist when he was first nominated to the court in 1971.

Such harsh criticism was countered by the opening statement of Committee Chairman Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., who asserted, "Rehnquist, in his almost 15 years on the court, has displayed integrity, courage, an understanding of the law and compassion."

"His ability and intellect, his understanding of the role of the judiciary and his performance as a member of the Supreme Court are exemplary," Thurmond said.

REHNQUIST SPOKE briefly before the hearings were recessed until today at 10 a.m. and said he welcomed the opportunity to testify.

The first witness, former Attorney General Griffin Bell, told the committee he supports Rehnquist's nomination and does not consider him an extremist.

"He's a conservative. I would not support him if I thought he were an extremist. No extremist can lead the court," said Bell, a Democrat who served as attorney general under President Jimmy Carter.

Sen. Howard Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, said the panel must get to the bottom of allegations that Rehnquist harassed black voters two decades ago. The FBI has opened an investigation at the request of Democrats.

"Some of the positions Justice Rehnquist has taken both before and after he went on the bench suggest that he holds extreme views," Metzenbaum said. "In examining the record, we find that Justice Rehnquist has been the sole dissenter 54 times, more than any other sitting justice."

BUT SEN. Alan Simpson, R-Wyo., warned the panel against focusing on "events that occurred 20 to 25 years ago, possibly to the exclusion of this man's distinguished career on the bench."

The harassment charges against Rehnquist first were aired in 1971 when he was nominated to the Supreme Court by President Richard Nixon. Rehnquist opponents say the Judiciary Committee never fully explored the accusations that he improperly used so-called literacy challenges to prevent minorities from voting.

Witnesses contend they saw Rehnquist approach black and Hispanic voters at the polls, challenge them to read a card and question their qualifications to vote.

REHNQUIST, 61, has been a justice since 1972 but has become increasingly controversial with the resurfacing of the voter harassment charges and some 34-year-old memos he wrote while a Supreme Court law clerk that supported racial segregation.

A spokesman for Sen. Paul Simon, D-Ill., said Democrats hoped to have five witnesses later this week after Rehnquist completes his testimony before the committee.

Reagan has nominated federal appeals court judge Antonin Scalia, 50, to step into Rehnquist's seat. His confirmation hearing will follow Rehnquist's.

Officials: More victims report rape

By Robyn R. Wright
Staff Writer

The number of rapes reported to the Rape Victim Advocacy Program increased by almost 50 percent during the past fiscal year and the increase has been attributed to a higher number of victims willing to report the crime.

Sixty-seven rapes were reported to RVAP between July 1, 1985, and June 30, 1986. During that same period last year, 45 rapes were reported.

"I don't think more rapes are happening, necessarily. I think there's a higher incidence of reporting," RVAP Coordinator Karla Miller said Tuesday.

The recent figure falls just one shy of RVAP's worst year, fiscal year 1984, when 68 rapes were reported.

"THAT'S PRETTY SCARY when you realize that only about one of every 10 rapes are reported," Miller said.

Reports have increased for a variety of reasons, she said, including greater public awareness and more cooperation and sensitivity from law enforcement officers and officials in the Johnson County Attorney's Office.

"Women are just tired of this kind of behavior and realize they don't have to put up with it," Miller added.

The number of rapes reported to local law enforcement officials during the past fiscal year was 27, compared to just eight during fiscal year 1985. But police maintain that only about half the victims report the crimes.

"There's still a social stigma attached to rape, which prevents people from reporting," said Detective Tommy Widmer of the Iowa City Police Department. "Only about 50 percent actually file charges."

DETECTIVE Dave Henderson of the Johnson County Sheriff's Department said county officials have not seen an increase in rape complaints because most incidents are reported to Iowa City and Coralville police.

Most of the rapes reported to RVAP took place in the victim's residence, and the attacker was known by the victim in a clear majority of incidents. Fourteen of the rapes occurred either outside or in a vehicle, six were in UI residence halls and six occurred in businesses.

RVAP statistics reflect 31 rapes took place in Iowa City, seven in Coralville, three in rural Iowa City and 19 took place outside Johnson County.

Rape is generally associated with a man committing a forced sex act against a woman, but the past year has evidenced different types of rapes. In four of the incidents, the victims were men attacked by other men. In one case, one male victim was sexually abused for nearly three hours. Thirteen of the rapes reported to RVAP were gang rapes, which Miller says are related to party situations and peer pressure.

Miller said victims come from specific groups that are especially susceptible to intimidation — including women, children, the mentally retarded and people from various racial groups.

"People can be empowered," she said. "There are definitely things we can do to make the chances of victimization less." Some of those include being assertive, being aware of your surroundings and know where to turn for help, she said.

Week's second Beirut car bomb kills 24

BEIRUT, Lebanon — An explosives-laden car blew up at a crowded market in Moslem west Beirut Tuesday, killing at least 24 people shortly before a mass funeral was held for 32 victims of a car bomb Monday in Christian east Beirut.

The car, packed with 160 pounds of TNT, exploded at 11 a.m. under a bridge in the Barbir market area, which was teeming with pedestrians, shoppers, pushcart peddlers and taxi drivers.

The blast destroyed part of the bridge and caused a huge fire in an eight-story building, turning the street into a black inferno of smoke and dust, twisted metal and rubble, witnesses said. Windows were blown out of the nearby Barbir hospital.

Jenco to request assistance from Pope

ROME — Lawrence Jenco, carrying a message from his Moslem extremist kidnappers, arrived Tuesday to meet with Pope John Paul II and said he would ask the pontiff for help in winning the release of three other American hostages.

Before leaving West Germany, Jenco said he would deliver personal messages to the families of "Tom, Terry and David" — Thomas Sutherland, dean of Beirut's American University agriculture school who was kidnapped June 9, 1985; Terry Anderson, the Beirut bureau chief of the Associated Press who was seized March 16, 1985; and David Jacobsen, an administrator at the American University who was kidnapped Jan. 8, 1985.

All three were held with Jenco in the same small room in Lebanon.

Botha rejects Howe's pleas to negotiate

PRETORIA, South Africa — President Pieter Botha Tuesday sent British Foreign Secretary Geoffrey Howe away empty-handed at the end of his seven-day peace mission, rejecting pleas to free black nationalist leader Nelson Mandela and negotiate with black opposition groups.

In Washington, Senate Foreign Relations Committee Chairman Richard Lugar, R-Ind., released a 12-point plan of sanctions to force South African President P.W. Botha to grant blacks political rights and release their jailed leaders.

A White House spokesman said Tuesday President Ronald Reagan has recently warned the South African government time is running out to begin negotiations with black leaders.

Afghan rebels making alleged advances

NEW DELHI, India — Moslem guerrillas have retaken control of most of Kandahar, Afghanistan's second largest city, from Soviet forces and last week launched rockets into the capital of Kabul almost daily, Western diplomats said Tuesday.

The diplomats spoke on condition they remained anonymous and their reports could not be independently verified. Few Western journalists have been admitted to Afghanistan since the December 1979 Soviet invasion that installed the communist government.

In Moscow, a Foreign Ministry spokesman said Tuesday the United States has the "technical means" to monitor a Soviet troop pullout from Afghanistan and U.S. claims that a limited withdrawal is not verifiable are meant to "minimize" the offer.

Reagan: 'now the ball is in Soviet court'

WASHINGTON — President Ronald Reagan said Tuesday the United States and the Kremlin have begun for the first time to move toward reducing and eventually eliminating nuclear weapons but "now the ball is in the Soviet court."

"We are seeing the first cautious steps" toward arms reduction from the Soviet Union, Reagan said.

In a speech to interns who work in Republican offices in Capitol Hill, the president gave hints about a letter he wrote last week to Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev.

But he challenged reports that he was offering to delay deployment of his pet Strategic Defense Initiative — or Star Wars — program in return for Russian missile reductions.

Hills shootings spur insurance battle

By Carol Monaghan
Staff Writer

A legal battle brewing between the insurance company of a Hills farmer and the survivors of three people he shot to death could land in the Iowa Supreme Court and may set a precedent, one attorney predicted Tuesday.

A petition for declaratory judgment was filed in Johnson County District Court Tuesday by IMT Insurance Company, asking the court to declare the company is not financially responsible for the actions of Dale N. Burr.

Burr committed suicide Dec. 9, 1985, after shooting his wife, Emily, his neighbor Richard Goody, and Hills Bank and Trust President John R. Hughes. Burr was reportedly distraught over debts.

Robert Horak, a West Des Moines, Iowa, attorney representing Marilyn Goody, wife of Richard Goody, said the case may go to the higher court if a settlement is not reached out of court.

THE PETITION filed Tuesday states the company will not cover claims made by survivors because the deaths were intentional and a provision in Burr's policy does not cover "bodily injury caused intentionally by the insured."

But Horak said the company may be liable if the court determines Burr was "mentally deranged or insane" at the time of the shootings.

"Other cases do not insure for intentional acts, but this is not appropriate in a case where the victim is injured by an insane or deranged party," Horak said.

Horak said similar cases have been ruled in favor of the victim in lower district courts, but the legal question of whether insurance companies are liable for victims killed by a mentally deranged person has never been tackled by the Iowa Supreme Court.

"The Iowa Supreme Court has not ruled on this issue," Horak said. "This case could potentially set precedent in the Iowa Supreme Court."

HORAK SAID he believes the court would rule in favor of the defendants, the family members of the victims.

"There's no question the act he did is totally out of the character of Dale Burr," Horak said. "The fact that he shot himself further proves the point."

On April 29, Goody filed a $3 million wrongful death suit against Burr's estate on behalf of her and her children, Mark and Rachael, both minors. Burr's son, John, also filed a $3 million suit against his father's estate for the wrongful death of his mother. Both are suing for loss of support and other damages resulting from the deaths.

"I expect the case will not be short," said Robert Downer, attorney for Karen Hughes, wife of John Hughes. "The facts are not seriously in dispute. However it's a complex situation, to be sure."

HUGHES SUBMITTED an assertion of a claim to Burr's insurance company on behalf of her and her daughters, Emily and Amy, demanding "the full limits of coverage."

Downer said the question of liability is one that is necessary for the courts to decide.

"There's a substantial sum of money involved," Downer said. "Essentially the claim by the insurance company to see if they're liable."

Horak said Goody is ready to settle out of court, but found IMT Insurance unwilling to settle.

"My client is willing to take a reasonable settlement," Horak said. "The insurance company did not want to settle my client's claim unless all parties involved are willing to settle."

Police hear reports of several break-ins

Iowa City police received reports of a burglary, an attempted break-in and a car vandalism incident this week.

Wade Sass, 202 Ellis Ave., told police Monday that a Lloyd brand stereo system, valued at $179, was taken when his house was burglarized. Also, Betina Hass, 2204 Miami Drive, told officers and attempted break-in occurred at her residence Sunday. Someone unsuccessfully attempted to gain entrance to her laundry room, according to police reports.

On Monday, a Cedar Rapids man reported to Iowa City police his car was vandalized while parked in a ramp on Capitol Street, according to reports. Richard McDonald told officers a radar detector worth $125 was taken after his car was broken into.

Scott Schmallen of Fargo, N.D., waits by the truck he attempted to drive under the Crandic railroad bridge while traveling eastbound on Iowa Avenue Tuesday afternoon.

DUBUQUE (UPI) — Branstad's proposal for a windfall from changes in federal tax law, the state's treasury debt, Democratic leaders said Tuesday. House Speaker Doris Oelwein, said the windfall of $125 million will be needed for state programs of budget year that begins July.

Avenson, one of 551 attending Dubuque legislative days for said about $175 million needed to balance the budget. He said the endorsement last year of the state's 4 percent sales tax and machinery and equipment elimination of the personal property tax, estimated $50 million shortfall.

IN ADDITION, Avenson said the state faces a loss of funds ranging from $10 million to $180 million.

Gays oppose Robertson appearance

Pat Robertson

By Michael O'Connor
Staff Writer

Local gay rights activists plan to protest the upcoming Iowa City appearance of possible presidential candidate the Rev. Pat Robertson because of what members say is the Republican evangelist's anti-human rights stance.

Gay Liberation Front member Ryan Marco said members of his group — which he described as an "ultra-left-wing group" — will protest at Robertson's appearance Tuesday.

"If he is elected, this country will be in trouble and all human rights will regress," Marco said.

Protesters will attempt to stir apathetic voters who might support Robertson without understanding his right-wing political philosophy, Marco said.

ROBERTSON WILL speak at the Iowa City Holiday Inn at a $25-a-plate fund-raising dinner to benefit the Iowa branch of the Freedom Council, a Virginia-based organization he founded three years ago.

Robertson's Iowa City appearance will be followed by a trip to Des Moines the following day.

But Freedom Council State Coordinator Steve Scheffler said he cannot understand why Robertson's appearance would meet with protest.

"He holds views similar to those of a wide range of American people," Scheffler said.

Robertson's speech will likely center on family, community and political awareness, he said. SCHIEFFLER DENIED the appearance was designed to promote possible presidential aspirations for Robertson in 1988.

But state Democratic Party Spokesman Phil Roeder said despite the fact Iowa voters will not participate in state presidential caucuses for some 18 months, Robertson's appearance is politically motivated.

With Christian fundamentalists becoming a major factor in the Republican party, Roeder said Robertson will be looking for their political support.

But Robertson's political success depends on his ability to tap the mainstream of American thought and address such issues as trade, taxes and the farm crisis, Roeder said.

Student discount cards ready for fall

By Dana Cohen
Staff Writer

UI students will be able to enjoy discounts at 23 Iowa City businesses this fall with the new UI Student Senate Discount Cards, senate Acting Vice President Paul Thompson said Tuesday.

The cards, which are currently being printed, will be sent to students in August and will include the name and location of each advertiser as well as the discount offered, he said. The cards will have four folding panels and fit inside credit-card holders, he added.

In one month of promoting the card, the senate raised $4,000, twice the amount they expected, Thompson said.

The variety of advertisers is better this year than last, he said, adding that discounts including optical services, car services, video machines and fast food, will be offered to students.

Of the $4,000 garnered from ad sales, $3,000 will go into the Save Our Students Scholarship fund, and the remaining

Paul Thompson

$1,000 will be used for the production cost of the cards, he said.

LAST YEAR the senate lost $4,300 on the discount card project, but advertising rates were raised and a cheaper method of distribution was employed to cut costs, Thompson said.

"We raised the advertising fee from last year's $43 to a fee of $150 or $250 depending on the size," he said. "Our basic goal was to raise the money for student senate rather than lose the money."

"Our efforts were very successful this year," senate President Joe Hansen said. "I'm happy that we raised money so we can have a credible S.O.S. scholarship this year."

Rocky Rococo, 118 S. Dubuque St., is one of 15 businesses to offer student discounts for the second year in a row. A free soft drink will be given away with any food purchase, Russ Kashian, marketing director for the restaurant said.

"I THINK THE STUDENT senate has made a good offer for the advertisers," Kashian said. "And I think it's very profitable for the students."

Last year the cards were not used by many people because the discount offers were listed on a separate cover letter that was mailed to students with the cards, he said.

"Everyone threw the letter out and wondered what the hell the offer was," Kashian said.

One of the additions to the discount card will be a 10 percent discount off any general reading book at the IMU Bookstore.

"We weren't approached when the student senate did the card last year," bookstore manager George Herbert said. "Generally speaking, we thought the card was a good attempt by student senate to involve us with them."

MIKE PREFTAKES, operations manager for That's Entertainment, 218 E. Washington St., said the video store will offer students a free video cassette recorder rental with the rental of two movies.

"We thought it was a good way to reach the students," he said. "I think it was also a good way to get our name out there."

The cards will also include advertisements for senate-run operations such as Whistles-top, a rape prevention service, and Saferide, which provides students free rides home from downtown bars.

Information aimed at generating more interest in financial aid battles and tuition increase prevention will also be on the cards.

Democrats criticize Branstad's tax plan

DUBUQUE (UPI)—Gov. Terry Branstad's proposal to spend a windfall from proposed changes in federal tax laws is poorly conceived and will put the state's treasury deeper in debt, Democratic legislative leaders said Tuesday.

House Speaker Don Avenson, D-Oelwein, said the estimated windfall of $125 million to $175 million will be needed to pay for state programs during the budget year that begins next July.

Avenson, one of 55 lawmakers attending Dubuque's annual legislative days festivities, said about $175 million will be needed to balance the state's budget. He said the deficit will be caused by the legislature's endorsement last year of Branstad's proposal to eliminate Iowa's 4 percent sales tax on business and agricultural machinery and equipment, the elimination of the state's personal property tax and an estimated $50 million revenue shortfall.

IN ADDITION, Avenson said the state faces a loss of federal funds ranging from $100 million to $180 million a year.

"The governor has to show us a complete plan," Avenson said, adding Branstad has yet to explain how the state will deal with the cuts in federal funds and bail out its own budget.

Branstad has proposed spending the windfall on educational improvements and property tax relief. Under his plan, minimum salaries for starting teachers would be raised to $18,000 a year.

Branstad Press Secretary Dick Vohs said the governor will present the second phase of his plan when Congress passes the new tax measure.

Avenson charged the plan is a ploy to pull Branstad up in polls, which show him locked in a tight race with Montrose Democrat Lowell Junkins.

"The plan is incomplete, or the governor is trying to buy an election with money he's already spent," Avenson said.

Senate Majority Leader Bill Hutchins, D-Audubon, said it is too early for Branstad to propose ways to spend the money on what the federal government may or may not do.

Unholy wars

Too often, when the issue of U.S. involvement in Central America is discussed, battle lines are drawn between "warriors" and "peace activists." The distinction is frequently erroneous, as in the case of Charles Liteky.

Liteky won the Medal of Honor — this nation's highest award for military service — in 1968 for his heroic actions in Vietnam, where he carried 20 wounded men to an evacuation zone despite heavy enemy fire.

On Tuesday, Liteky gave back his medal. He left it in a large manila envelope at the Vietnam Veterans Memorial in Washington, D.C. It was a protest against U.S. policy toward Nicaragua and El Salvador, which, as he said, is making "Central America another Vietnam."

Liteky's comparison is one we've all heard a lot. Perhaps that makes it less effective. Perhaps we've heard it so much that it doesn't really matter whether or not it's true. Perhaps we secretly hope that Central America is "another Vietnam" — so this time we can win.

Whatever the truth of the comparisons, Liteky's refusal to treasure his medal as most veterans would have demonstrates that something is definitely wrong with U.S. policy on Central America. If those who take up arms to further American policy around the world cannot in good conscience accept the rewards the U.S. government bestows upon them, it may just mean that our goals are not worthy of the fight.

Choosing sides

As the turmoil and violence in South Africa escalates, the debate over divestment becomes moot and the urgent need for U.S. sanctions becomes greater.

The debate over divestment is declining in intensity because as the violence increases, more and more companies are making for economic reasons the decision they refused to make for moral reasons. It is just getting too risky to have much money invested in South Africa.

Still, it should be more comfortable for the 9,000 UI employees to know that their pension fund (TIAA-CREF) has called on the approximately 160 U.S. corporations in which they have investments to withdraw from South Africa.

But what that means is that the case for sanctions becomes more critical. It is now not just idealists and bleeding heart liberals, but conservatives who should call for sanctions. The withdrawal of money from South Africa means that business analysts have studied the situation, found it dangerous and decided their money is safer elsewhere.

That means they are betting that the violence will turn to civil war and if it does, sooner or later the black majority will defeat the white minority. If the United States does not quickly and clearly side with the emerging black power structure it will go down with the white racist ship and lose all those precious minerals the Reagan administration hopes to hold on to by appeasing the South African government.

Letters

In defense

To the Editor:

In answer to my critics concerning a guest opinion on homosexuality and AIDS (DI, July 14), it appears my points of argument were either distorted or ignored.

Firstly, I did not and have never advocated violence or hatred towards gays nor the denial of anyone their Constitutional rights of freedom of speech, assembly, etc.

I stand by my definition of what is deviant and what is not. What was noted was the vast difference between one's ability or power to do something and their right in such matters and whether I must accept it.

I would re-examine the source of the so-called lies and myths. I stated that the gay lifestyle is the foremost, not the exclusive, transmitter of AIDS — 73 percent of AIDS sufferers are gay from a recently quoted figure.

The statement that gay behavior harms no one is unadulterated nonsense — tell that to the infected hemophiliac, newborn or to the taxpayer. I weary of the incessant labeling of those who disagree with the liberal establishment as "homophobiacs." One could just as easily accuse gays of suffering from "heterophobia."

Finally, my opinions have no bearing whatsoever on my qualifications or performance as a graduate student in chemistry, or as a reflection on the department. To suggest otherwise is slander and completely irrelevant.

Gregory Turner

The new spirit

To the Editor:

Gov. Terry Branstad reportedly senses a "new spirit" rising among the people of this state.

Perhaps this spirit is founded upon the hope that Iowans will soon be relieved of Branstad's failed policies and consistently weak leadership.

Motto mistake

To the Editor:

On July 30, 1956, Congress approved without debate or dissent Public Law 84-851, which made "In God We Trust" our national motto. Not one of our elected officials seemed to recall the First Amendment ("Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion...").

Let's make the 30th anniversary of this mistake the occasion for seeking its repeal.

Civic Center access needed

By Julie Eisele

In a city supposedly on the cutting edge of society, it's distressing to realize the community's Civic Center — where one goes to pay water bills, parking fines, apply for employment or, ironically, file discrimination complaints — is not accessible to handicapped residents.

The multilevel building is slated for renovations that would include the installation of an elevator, but accommodations have been put on hold because of budget constraints.

City officials are somewhat at a loss — especially in the face of federal funding cuts, thanks to the Gramm-Rudman Balanced Budget Act. The Iowa City Council will not even discuss the matter until December or January, when funding for 1987 capital expenditures will be determined.

But the council does have authority to prioritize spending, and it's no secret the city has been dragging its feet on the issue of handicapped accessibility. This hesitance must be viewed in light of deficits in the city's transit and recreation departments, as well as a federal mandate to upgrade the city's sewer system.

BUT THAT'S LITTLE comfort to persons confined to wheelchairs, who only have access to the council chambers, the police department and the lobby. Handicapped residents must remain in the lobby — after a bystander opens the door to the building — and wait to be helped by a city employee.

City staff members are very willing to come to the lobby to accept payments, complaints or applications. But as Dave

From the Metro Desk

Lesztz, a Johnson County social worker, pointed out, "constantly asking for help starts to work on your self-esteem." And what are the employment chances of a handicapped person, who doesn't even have access to city offices?

Aside from that, the building does not comply with provisions of the Rehabilitation Act of 1973, which states that agencies receiving federal grants must make their facilities accessible to the wheelchair-confined. Some improvements have been made in past years, including a wheelchair ramp to the Civic Center's entrance, but a series of needed changes still exist.

IN 1984, A committee comprised of city staff members and local residents evaluated a number of city facilities. The Civic Center's inaccessibility was seen as the largest problem.

Recommendations included installing an elevator in the center and restrooms on other floors. Other suggestions included installing handicapped restrooms in upper City Park and the purchase of a portable pool lift to allow handicapped residents to use the city's pools.

The most important changes to be made are in the Civic Center, however, and residents should pressure elected officials to see that the changes are made — soon.

As Lesztz commented, "if our government has an inaccessible building, we're really getting the message across that some people are of less value" in society.

Daily Iowan City Editor Julie Eisele's column, From the Metro Desk, appears on the Viewpoints page every other Wednesday.

Profile of an American hero

July 19, 1986 was the seventh anniversary of the Sandinista triumph over Nicaraguan dictator Anastasio Somoza. I spent it with the manager of a Midas Muffler Shop in a well-to-do Chicago suburb.

Jimmy P., has been the manager, or as he says, "running the whole show," for nearly five years. He works hard. They are open from 7:00 a.m. to 6:00 p.m. Monday through Saturday. So, when Jimmy goes on vacation he really likes to get away. Last October, he spent a month training Contras at a camp in northern Nicaragua, near the Honduran border.

"I'm not a Contra though," he explains. "I love to fight. I do it for the adrenalin high." Though he claimed he was neutral, and that the politics of the war never came up in his work, he admitted that he'd like to see the Contras "pull it off."

"The money's good... sometimes. But that's not why you do it. I can make more right here selling mufflers. You do it 'cause you love to fight — and living on the edge. My only rule is that I will never fight for a communist unit."

HE HAD A LOT to say about communism.

"Theoretically, it's a good thing. I mean everybody shares everything and has a job and enough to eat and all that. But it never works. And it don't work because people always have a drive to get more. We always want more. You know — the American Dream and all that stuff."

I asked him how he had become a mercenary.

"If you really want to learn about this stuff go down to RECONDO."

RECONDO is a training camp in the wilds of Alabama that specializes in two-week crash courses in guerilla warfare.

"You can find the address and more info in the back of 'Soldier of Fortune' magazine. I'm going down for another session in June — to get tuned up."

He pulls down a framed color glossy from a shelf behind his desk and hands it to me. It's a picture of a soldier in a camouflaged uniform standing in the woods. He is pointing an AK-47 rifle at the camera.

There is a cigarette hanging from his mouth and a proud but unpredictable look in the small, closely-set eyes. It's Jimmy.

"That's me last summer at RECONDO," he explains, assuming I don't recognize him.

THE BELL ON THE door clangs, another sweaty, impatient customer. He is well-dressed, self-assured, and wants a whole new exhaust system installed that day.

"Monday," Jimmy says. The man looks frustrated, then surprised and leaves.

"Who the hell was he supposed to be?" Jimmy smiles, while slipping another cigarette between his lips. It rises and falls with every word as he continues.

"Everybody thinks they're the President today... must be the heat."

As the day grows hotter and the customers more frequent, I begin to feel like I should leave.

But Jimmy keeps encouraging me to stay. He seems both afraid and anxious to talk. He keeps saying, "Don't use my name" and "I can't give you any hard facts." But he never seems to tire of taking.

At about 12:30, a fat sweaty mechanic comes in from the garage and says, "OK, we need it now."

"We gotta go for a ride," Jimmy tells me.

IT SEEMS 50 DEGREES hotter outside. We get in Jimmy's rusted Monte Carlo. He rolls his sleeves up and the windows down. We're going to another shop to pick up an engine. As we weave through the heavy traffic and humidity he talks more about Nicaragua. "I was a trainer... mostly hand-to-hand combat and munitions operation. I worked with a group of 15 soldiers for two weeks. We lived in a lean-to or in the bush. There was nothing to eat except rice and beans and whatever we could kill — pigs or goats, even an iguana once."

"Most of the ones in my group were peasants who had come to fight in exchange for food and clothes. There was an Indian, too. He didn't have the slightest idea what to do with an AK-47. He never really learned, either. I think he thought it was a damned canoe paddle."

The more Jimmy talks about Nicaragua, the more curious I become about his Spanish proficiency. Somehow, I just couldn't hear him speaking Spanish. I finally ask.

"Poquito," he says, and then explains, "That means a little bit. But you don't need to know much. This kind of training is better when it's non-verbal."

The sad thing is that he's probably right. But sadder still is the fact that the Reagan administration has taken the same non-verbal approach to the U.S.-Nicaraguan negotiations. That we've adopted the same aggressive "Rambo" mentality. That Jimmy P. is, in a way, a killer and an American hero.

Film wanders out of bounds

By Kathy Hinson Breed
Managing Editor

EIGHTEEN YEARS on an Iowa farm never prepared him for a summer in L.A., proclaim the posters for Out of Bounds. Apparently, years of making movies in California never prepared Director Richard Tuggle and Screenwriter Tony Kayden for portraying an Iowa farm, let alone an Iowa farm boy.

Tuggle and Kayden team up in Out of Bounds, touted as Anthony Michael Hall's first "serious movie." And, to his credit, Hall does a fine job of serious acting. It's the rest of the crew that cripples the movie with some strange ideas of how a "typical" Iowa farm boy acts and reacts.

Hall plays Daryl Cage, a teenager from DeWitt, Iowa. At the beginning of the movie, we see Daryl doing Hollywood's idea of farm activities: practicing throwing his knife, hanging about in the barn, riding a tractor through corn fields with his dog on his lap (just a tractor, mind you, not a plow or a cultivator).

MEANWHILE, back at the house, his parents are arguing about whether Daryl should spend the summer in Los Angeles with his older brother, a professional athlete. Daryl's mother seems to want him to "escape" from the farm (Hollywood filmmakers cannot fathom why anyone would want to live in Iowa, much less on a farm). When he leaves, his mother also takes off, presumably for more sophisticated places than Iowa.

So off Daryl goes to L.A., and the minute he gets there things start going wrong. His brother meets him at the airport and grabs the wrong bag off the luggage carousel. When Daryl wakes up the next morning he finds 10 kilos of heroin in his duffle instead of socks and underwear; discovers his brother and sister-in-law dead; and is accused of the murders by a neighbor who stumbles onto the scene.

POOR DARYL spends the rest of the movie on the run, aided by Dizz (Jenny Wright), a girl he met on the airplane to L.A. Pursuing him are police, undercover drug agents and one very angry and unsavory drug dealer.

Daryl's transition from naive farm boy to street-wise negotiator playing both ends against the middle is so rapid it's almost non-existent. One minute, Daryl is calling Dizz "Ma'am" — the next minute he's running around shooting at the bad guys and evading the police. It just isn't believable.

In fact, none of the characters are fleshed out enough. And because they never make the transition from screen characters to people the audience can care about, it's hard to get too worked up about their problems.

Out of Bounds is not a total waste of $3.50. The opening scenes of Iowa provide a few laughs, and trying to figure out where they filmed what is supposed to be the Cedar Rapids Airport adds mystery. Later, the intensifying search for the bag of heroin offers suspense and lots of chase scenes.

But if you're at the end of your paycheck, you may want to consider seeing something other than Out of Bounds. Chances are, you'll get more for your money.

You are at a nightclub talking to a girl with a shaved head. The club is either Heartbreak or the Lizard Lounge. All might come clear if you could just slip into the bathroom and do a little more Bolivian Marching Powder.

—Jay McInerney, Bright Lights, Big City.

SINCE HE WROTE those lines as a college student four years ago, phenomenal things have happened to 31-year-old writer Jay McInerney.

What started as a quirky short story, written by a student at Syracuse University, has blossomed into a bestselling book, Bright Lights, Big City.

"It was quite an ego boost, saying that all my work over the years hadn't been in vain," McInerney said during a recent interview. He added that he still wasn't expecting the book to garner rave reviews and months on best-seller lists.

"I was ready to take my satisfaction where I could and not expect too much," McInerney said.

A COMING-OF-AGE novel about America's Yuppie class, Bright Lights, Big City depicts the fashion, nightclubs and cocaine lifestyles of up-and-coming young professionals. Alienated by their careers and materialistic goals, the young adults in the book would rather wander city streets and nightclubs, snorting coke until dawn, cursing the shallowness of their lives.

It is being touted by some as the Catcher in the Rye of the '80s. To many, Bright Lights, Big City is the literary statement for this decade and Jay McInerney is its spokesman.

"It's a fairly hideous era that we're in right now, although I'm often taken as a spokesman for it," McInerney said. "Generally, I'm rather appalled."

FOLLOWING HIS graduation from Williams College, McInerney spent time in Japan and in New York City, where he worked for a publishing company. These experiences inspired Bright Lights, Big City and his second novel, Ransom.

But is McInerney really the alienated, cocaine snorting protagonist of Bright Lights,

Big City? "I would not write about something that I'm unfamiliar with," McInerney said. "My autobiography is actually duller than anything I'd really write about, but that's not to say that there's not part of me in that book. The trick is to use the material in your own life to some interesting effect."

McInerney eventually left New York and returned to college and studied writing at Princeton and Syracuse universities. He wrote the first draft of Bright Lights, Big City in six weeks during a summer session at Syracuse.

WHILE MOST of the notices for the book seem to be favorable, his first novel has its share of critics, including conservative ones who are upset with the drug use in the book.

"In these conservative magazines I'm often taken to task for being a lowlife and decadent," McInerney said. "There is not much to say to those people except 'Pass the Geritol.'"

A film version of Bright Lights, Big City has been slated with director Sydney Pollack overseeing the production. The movie, which may star Tom Cruise, is having difficulty making it to the big screen.

"I have pretty low expectations for this thing," McInerney said. "I won't be heartbroken if it never gets made."

MCINERNEY SAID it can be unnerving to have your first novel compared with J.D. Salinger's classic Catcher in the Rye, and have it be praised as the statement of a generation.

"It's a book about failure and losing everything," McInerney continued. "Those are not popular subjects in America, so I think a lot of people have missed the point."

McInerney said he is often approached by people who tell him that Bright Lights, Big City is their story. He says it is frightening to have people identify so closely with a piece of fiction he has written.

"It's scary and gratifying at the same time," McInerney said. He added that in his second novel, Ransom, the book's protagonist is stabbed to death in a Japanese sword fight.

"The fact that someone's boyfriend said they killed themselves because of my second book, that's not something I want to carry around with me."

McInerney said he hopes that he can create a body of work that will stand the test of time with other writers of the 20th century.

"I would be selling myself short if I didn't want to be as good as the best," McInerney said.

McInerney was recently married and is living with his wife, Merry, in Ann Arbor, Michigan. He is hard at work on his third novel, which is expected to be published in the fall of 1987.

"Somedays I hate it, somedays I love it," McInerney said.

Tigers' Grubb named week's top player

CLEVELAND (UPI) — John Grubb, who has been a role player for most of his 14 major league seasons, hit like a star last week.

"I've always tried to be at least a good player," said Grubb, who was named Monday as the American League's player of the week for the July 21-27 span. "I've never been one to want the spotlight — I'm just not the type."

"Right now, I'm just making good contact. I'm getting a chance to play, and that's the foundation for good hitting."

Indeed, Grubb, a 37-year-old native of Richmond, Va., went 6-for-14 with four homers, including a pinch-hit grand slam, and two game-winning RBI that added up to an .438 base percentage of .438 and a slugging average of 1.2.

His 12 RBI during the week nearly doubled his season total. Grubb is batting .342 with seven homers and 26 RBI in 32 games, mostly as a designated hitter.

"It's a bit of a personal triumph for me," Grubb said. "I played only about half a season in '85 (78 games with 155 at-bats) because of a bad left hand that really hampered me."

Cardinals' Worrell keeps flying high

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — Todd Worrell's pitching this season has been the one constant reminder of the St. Louis Cardinals' 1985 National League Championship team.

Worrell, who contributed mightily after being called up from the minors last September, has picked up where he left off, even though the rest of his teammates have not.

The hard-throwing reliever was second in the National League in saves with 20 entering Tuesday night's game against the Phillies. With a 6-8 record, Worrell had a hand in more than half of the Cardinals' first 45 victories this year.

Last week he saved four games in four tries to earn National League Player of the Week honors.

"I've been happy with my performance this year," Worrell said. "I've been consistent and now the momentum with the team going good helps me. I'm not much use if we're behind all the time."

The Cardinals have been playing well lately, compiling seven victories in a row entering Tuesday night's game. The streak moved them within five games of second place in the National League East. Second place is about the best they can hope to achieve, however, since the New York Mets are running away with the division.

Pacers' coach moves to front office

INDIANAPOLIS (UPI) — George Irvine resigned Tuesday as coach of the Indiana Pacers after two rocky seasons in which the team struggled to an overall mark of 48-116.

Irvine, who will assume the role of player personnel director with the team, said he wanted more time with his family and less of the strain caused by being an NBA coach.

"I want to spend more quality time with my family," said Irvine, who has sons ages 10 and 7. "My kids are at an age where I really enjoy being with them. There were things sliding by me I didn't like."

The move completes a shakeup begun four months ago when Donnie Walsh was installed as general manager. Irvine filled a vacancy created when Tom Newell left to become an assistant coach at Seattle. The Pacers are also without an assistant coach.

"We certainly are different than we were four months ago," Walsh said. "The next hiring will pretty much complete the picture."

Miami, top choice agree on contract

United Press International

The Miami Dolphins completed negotiations to sign their top draft pick Tuesday, while the Cincinnati Bengals and their No. 1 selection remained far apart.

Inside linebacker John Offerdahl of Western Michigan signed with the Dolphins. The 6-foot-2 232-pounder was Miami's top choice, though he was tabbed in the second round.

Miami coach Don Shula is counting on Offerdahl to help improve the Dolphins' weak run defense that ranked 23rd in the league last year.

The agent for the Bengals' top pick, linebacker Joe Kelly, said the club is approximately $500,000 short of meeting his client's contract demands.

Kelly was the 11th pick in the draft. He is expected to challenge for a starting job but missed Tuesday's practices at Wilmington College, the 12th day of training camp.

AGENT MIKE BLATT is seeking a contract comparable to that signed by Keith Byars, who was drafted by the Philadelphia Eagles one position ahead of Kelly.

"Keith Byars got $2 million over four years from the Eagles, and I think that's about a fair price for Joe," Blatt said. "But the Bengals are only offering a little more than what they gave Tim McGee."

McGee, the 21st pick in the first round, received $1.3 million over four years.

"We'll wait as long as we have to," Blatt said. "I think this is one case where a player's absence from camp is clearly hurting the team as much or more than it's hurting the individual."

Quarterback Doug Gandy, who agreed to terms with Cincinnati Monday, participated in workouts for the first time Tuesday. Gandy, of Long Beach State, will receive $366,000 — including a $76,000 signing bonus — over three years, plus an option year.

"IT'S NOT A GOOD contract," said Larry Muno, Gandy's agent. "I just felt Doug had to sign and get into camp because he's a quarterback. The negotiating process had reached a point of diminishing returns from the player's standpoint."

Elsewhere, the Green Bay Packers signed two veterans: quarterback Lynn Dickey and tight end Paul Coffman. Three veterans remain unsigned: wide receiver Phillip Epps, tackle Karl Swanke and center Mark Cannon.

Coach Forrest Gregg said any returning veteran would have to earn his spot on the team because Monday was the deadline for saving a position for a 1985 starter.

Quarterbacks coach George Sefcik said Dickey would become the No. 4 quarterback because he has to learn changes in the offensive system. Randy Wright still is considered the starter, followed by veteran Vince Ferragamo and rookie Robbie Bosco.

DICKEY WAS RELEASED by the Packers June 11 when they were unable to reach agreement on a new salary. Dickey earned about $850,000 last year and had invoked an option that allowed him to demand a 10-percent increase. But rather than pay it, the Packers released him so he could test the free-agent market.

In other news: Pittsburgh Steelers defensive ends Keith Willis and Keith Gary did not participate in workouts because of injuries. Willis suffered a mild concussion in Monday's workout and Gary is hobbled with a hamstring injury suffered Saturday. The Steelers' roster was reduced to 91 players when free-agent wide receiver Gary Mullin left camp.

Cleveland Browns coach Marty Schottenheimer said he expects an intense battle between Felix Wright, Chris Rockins and Darrol Ray to decide who replaces the late Don Rogers at free safety. Rogers died from cocaine poisoning last month. "We have a battle royal on our hands at free safety," Schottenheimer said. "It will be interesting to see how this shapes up."

Replay experiment will not be noticed in NFL

CHARLESTON, W. Va. (UPI) — Veteran NFL referee Fred Wyant said the league's experiment with using television replays to help make close calls in pre-season games will hardly be noticed by good officials on the field.

Wyant, a left-handed quarterback who led the 1953 West Virginia University team into the Sugar Bowl against Georgia Tech, said officials have an older NFL official up in the press box monitoring and deciding whether the play is correct.

"IF HE THINKS NOT, a signal will be given. This will be done quickly. There won't be much time spent on it, maybe 15 to 20 seconds. If it's clear that it's wrong, they'll change it. If not, we'll go on."

The instant replay will be

"They'll have an older NFL official up in the press box monitoring and deciding whether the play is correct," veteran NFL official Fred Wyant says. "If he thinks not, a signal will be given. This will be done quickly."

been under similar scrutiny anyway.

Wyant, a 52-year-old Morgantown insurance executive, has passed his physical examination for his 21st NFL season. This will be his 16th year as a referee after serving five seasons as a line judge.

"That'll be the first time they are doing that," Wyant said of the instant replay. "They'll used for possession plays only, such as pass receptions and fumbles.

Wyant says the new rule shouldn't shake up a good official.

"In effect, we've been on instant replay anyway," he said. "A good official doesn't worry about whether he's on instant replay anyway."

Violations

was used for expenses at a pro-am golf tournament and was later repaid.

Also, in October, 1985, volleyball Coach Sandy Stewart transported three athletes to another city where Stewart "evaluated prospects from the student athletes' former high schools," the report said.

The third women's department violation involved a former assistant softball coach who attended an opponent's softball game in April, 1985.

Stewart will be reprimanded, according to the report, and the women's coaching staff members will be given "educational seminars" on NCAA rules. In addition the women's golf team will lose a portion of its "grants-in-aid" allotments for members of the team.

Grant said the athletic departments are satisfied with the NCAA report.

"If we're going to run a good, clean program, our coaches have to know that even inadvertent violations are unacceptable," Grant said in support of the report.

Athletic Department Faculty Representative Sam Becker called the violations "trivial", and stressed that most of the infractions were reported to the Big Ten by the university itself.

"They're all trivial," he said of the cited activities. "Some of these we reported ourselves, some were reported by other people. We don't know who (reported them), but they're all trivial."

Nehemiah invited to Festival

HOUSTON (UPI) — The United States Olympic Committee Tuesday invited world record holder Renaldo Nehemiah to participate in the U.S. Olympic Festival, ending a five-year absence from the sport for one of the world's best known track athletes.

There was no immediate confirmation from Nehemiah that he would participate, but since he had originally requested an invitation it was expected he would take part in the Festival's track competition next weekend — even if his only appearance comes in a relay event.

NEHEMIAH LEFT TRACK for a career as a wide receiver for the San Francisco 49ers after becoming one of the most dominant track stars of the late 1970s. He still owns the world record in the 110-meter hurdles of 12.93, set in Zurich in August of 1981. Nehemiah was waived by the 49ers last spring after spending all of the 1985 season on the injured reserve list.

He then successfully petitioned to have his amateur eligibility returned to him by The Athletics Congress (the governing body of the sport in the United States) as well as the International Track and Field Federation.

HIS ATTEMPTS to have his Olympic eligibility returned will be heard by the IOC next October.

"An official invitation to compete in the U.S. Olympic Festival has been extended to Nehemiah by TAC and the USOC," Olympic committee spokesman Mike Moran said. "The USOC strongly supports a change in the IOC eligibility rules which would permit an athlete to be a professional in one sport and to compete in another sport."

The invitation to Nehemiah came as the Festival neared the midway point with 12 medals on the line Tuesday night in the boxing ring.

Most of the winners in the Festival boxing competition will return Saturday to face the challenge of a Soviet team invited for a special dual meet.

Basketball action also resumed Tuesday while the last evening of competition was held at the swimming venue where Vickie Vogt had won five gold medals.

Because of the lateness of the invitation, Nehemiah's chances of running in his favorite event were slim.

"The only available spot for him is a spot on the East 4x100 relay team," Moran said, "because Sunday's men's hurdles field is complete."

British flock to NFL football, 'Refrigerator'

LONDON (UPI) — William "The Refrigerator" Perry is the most popular member of the Chicago Bears with the British fans.

Perry, a 308-pound defensive tackle and sometimes fullback, was the center of attention Tuesday when the British media descended on the south London training camp where the Bears are preparing for Sunday's game against the Dallas Cowboys at Wembley Stadium.

The teams are sharing training facilities at the National Sports Center at Crystal Palace — but Perry is sharing the limelight with nobody.

"It's a weird situation, everyone knowing me here," Perry told the gathering of mainly soccer-reared sports reporters. "I know they show the football on the television here and I even did a commercial for a (British) supermarket. But it's still a little weird."

AMERICAN FOOTBALL'S army of new British fans descended on the Wembley ticket office a few weeks ago. All 80,000 tickets for Sunday's "American Bowl" were sold within 10 days.

The game will be televised live in the United States by ABC and two hours of highlights will be shown on British television Sunday night.

Sunday night television coverage last season, featuring highlights of the week's NFL games, averaged 3.25 million

"I got my nickname in college and it stuck," Chicago Bear star William "The Refrigerator" Perry says about his nickname. "I don't mind it but it has nothing to do with my eating habits. "I don't eat so much. This morning I had a couple of eggs, two or three sausages and a couple of strips of bacon. That's about average."

viewers. Soccer, the national sport, hovered around six million viewers.

The Super Bowl was televised live in England. That's where Perry sealed his fame with British fans, four million of whom stayed up in the middle of the night to watch the Bears crush the New England Patriots, 46-10, with the help of a touchdown run by Perry.

TUESDAY PERRY was quick to point out he did not receive his nickname because of his eating habits.

"I got my nickname in college and it stuck," he said. "I don't mind it but it has nothing to do with my eating habits."

"I don't eat so much. This morning I had a couple of eggs, two or three sausages and a couple of strips of bacon. That's about average."

Teammate Keith Van Horne, standing nearby, chimed in, "I don't know about that. You've got to get in before 'The Fridge' at the breakfast table."

Perry insisted, though, that of his seven brothers — "And one is bigger than me" — he was not the largest eater.

"I've got a brother 210 pounds and he eats twice as much as me," Perry said.

When called "Bill" by one reporter, Perry said that he was always called William, a point duly noted for the rest of the conversation.

Perry also said that while he might be "pretty mean on the field," away from the game he is "an easy-going guy who likes to go for a stroll with my wife."

Iowa penalized for NCAA violations

By Dan Milles
Assistant Sports Editor

The NCAA Committee on Infractions issued a report Tuesday, which cited the Iowa men's and women's athletic departments for a total of seven rules violations, and which adopted penalties previously levied on the university by the Big Ten.

The infractions centered on men's swimming and included the women's softball, volleyball and golf programs, but the NCAA report called the violations in the women's programs "isolated and inadvertent in nature".

"They were really, really minor infractions," Women's Athletic Director Christine Grant said of the violations in her department. Grant said most of the activities cited by the NCAA were reported to the Big Ten by the university itself, and that the Big Ten report had not been made public because the NCAA probe was in progress.

THE ACTIVITIES of the men's swimming program were of a more serious nature, and the penalties handed down were more severe.

The swimming program was cited for four violations, including the payment of $200 by the Hawkeye Swim Club to an Iowa swimmer for "training expenses" incurred from December, 1984 to February, 1985.

The Swim Club was also charged with paying transportation costs to and from Florida for an Iowa swimmer in August, 1984.

In addition, the report stated that in 1983 a now former Iowa assistant swim coach provided a recruit with transportation from the student's high school to his home, and that during the 1985-86 season and in the 1986 Big Ten Championships, an Iowa swimmer competed while ineligible due to a previous recruiting violation.

MEN'S SWIMMING COACH Glenn Patton denied knowledge of any wrongdoing in a press release issued by the university Tuesday night, but could not be reached for comment by The Daily Iowan. Assistant men's swimming Coach Dale Henry said he had been asked by Athletic Director Chalmers "Bump" Elliott to refer questions to the athletic director himself.

"(Elliott) requested that of me, and he's my boss, so I don't think I should go against that," Henry said.

Neither Elliott nor Men's Sports Information Director George Wine could be reached for comment Tuesday night however.

The penalties handed down against the swimming program prohibit Patton from recruiting individuals in person, off-campus for a one-year period beginning June 1, 1986, and it also removes one of Patton's 11 scholarships during the 1986-87 academic year.

THE VIOLATIONS in the women's department included a loan paid to a member of the golf team by a representative of the athletic department in March 1985. The money, $2,500, See Violations, Page 7

Tribble's bond cut to $75,000

UPPER MARLBORO, Md. (UPI) — A judge Tuesday reduced bond from $250,000 to $75,000 for the man suspected of supplying the cocaine that killed college basketball star Len Bias, court officials said.

Brian Tribble, 24, faces arraignment Friday on four counts of drug charges.

Following the hearing Tuesday, his attorneys were at a bondsman's office apparently negotiating to get the bond, a law enforcement official said.

Tribble watched Tuesday's court proceedings by closed circuit television from a holding cell in the county detention center as his parents and attorney William Cahill sat in the courtroom, sheriff's office spokesman Irv Smith said.

A SPOKESMAN for the defense said Cahill urged Judge Robert Woods to release Tribble on his own recognizance, contending Tribble is employed and has close ties to the community and his parents and should not have to stay in jail.

Brian Tribble

"I'm a little disappointed (in Woods' ruling)," said Tom Morrow, Cahill's associate. "The prosecution had made public statements, two weeks before the grand jury even convened, saying Mr. Tribble is a prime suspect — all avenues point toward Brian Tribble."

Tribble, a self-employed furniture upholsterer, would have to post $75,000 of his $75,000 bail to be released from jail.

"With all those accusations, he did not flee, although he had ample opportunity," Morrow said.

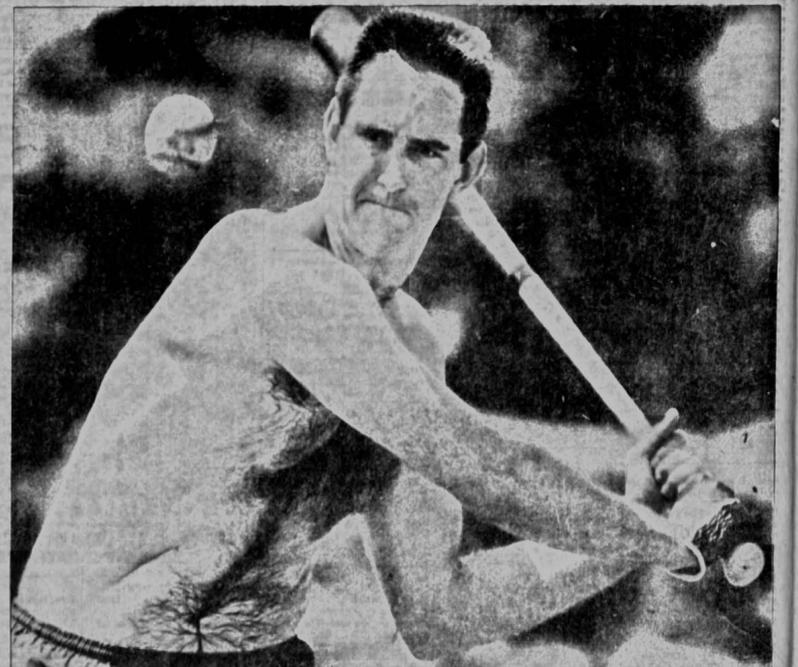

Tribble was indicted Friday by a grand jury investigating the death of Bias, a first-team All-America at the University of Maryland who died of cocaine intoxication after collapsing in his dormitory room June 19.

TRIBBLE, A LONG-TIME friend of Bias and a former Maryland junior varsity basketball player, eluded authorities for three days as they attempted to serve a warrant for his arrest.

He surrendered to police Monday morning and was jailed overnight.

He is charged with possession and distribution of cocaine and the hallucinogenic drug PCP.

Morrow said Tribble's arraignment set for Friday may not be necessary as the defense plans to enter not guilty pleas to the charges in writing this week.

USFL wins only $3 from NFL in antitrust suit

NEW YORK (UPI) — The struggling United States Football League Tuesday was awarded just $1 of the more than $1 billion it sought in damages from the National Football League despite convincing a federal jury the NFL monopolized pro football.

Antitrust law requires the damages to be tripled, which means the USFL is to receive $3.

After 31 hours of deliberation over five days, the six jurors found against the NFL and 27 of its 28 clubs on only one of nine antitrust and common-law claims brought by the USFL.

The jury of five women and one man considering the case after an 11-week trial in U.S. District Court in Manhattan sent out word at 2:55 p.m. that a verdict had been reached.

Approximately 40 minutes later jury forewoman Patricia McCabe began reading answers to the 61 questions on the jury verdict sheet in open court.

The jury found the NFL had monopoly power in pro football and that its monopolization had injured the USFL. But when asked to place a dollar value on the USFL's injuries, the panel allocated only $1.

THE USFL HAD estimated its damages to be between $301 million and $565 million over a 10-year period. When tripled, the 4-year-old league, which once had 18 teams and is now reduced to eight, sought up to $1.7 billion.

In the days before the verdict was announced, lawyers for both leagues said they would appeal if they lost.

The USFL, which plans to play its first fall season this year, is not expected to survive unless significantly greater damages are awarded through an appeal.

The jurors did not describe themselves as football fans when questioned in May during jury selection. Indeed, three of the six had never heard of the USFL when chosen for the panel.

During the trial they heard testimony of 43 witnesses, some on the witness stand and others through excerpts from pre-trial statements.

Those witnesses included NFL Commissioner Pete Rozelle, USFL Commissioner Harry Usher and his predecessor Chester Simmons, executives from each of the three national networks and the cable network ESPN, several owners from both leagues, New Jersey Generals running back Herschel Walker and ABC Radio commentator Howard Cosell.

THE CASE focused on the relationships among the leagues and the national networks. The USFL maintained the NFL's contracts with the three major networks were intended to exclude and did exclude a competing league in the fall.

The USFL also claimed the NFL exercised its monopoly power by exerting pressure on the networks to prevent the USFL from getting a television contract.
