UI may get $2.5 million for libraries

By Phil Thomas

Staff Writer

Terry Brandi, director of the Iowa City Public Library, said the University of Iowa received a $2.5 million grant from the National Endowment for the Arts to purchase 10,000 books to be added to the library's collection.

The grant, which is the largest ever received by the library, will enable the library to purchase books in a variety of subjects, including literature, science, history, and art. The grant is part of the NEA's American Book Project, which aims to support the production of new books and the preservation of existing ones.

Brandi said the grant will help the library to continue its mission of providing access to information and culture to all members of the community. "This is a significant investment in the future of the library," she said. "We are thrilled to receive this grant and look forward to using it to support our programs and services."

Lackluster race frustrates both candidates

By Janna Cely

The lack of opposition in today's Iowa City School Board election has frustrated Brian Staley and Kelli Whitaker. The two candidates, who hope to win their seats in Tuesday's election, feel their efforts have been unappreciated.

"It's a little frustrating," Staley said. "I feel like we've been working hard, and the town is just not paying attention.

Whitaker echoed his sentiments. "I feel like we've been working really hard, and people just aren't paying attention to us.

The candidates are both 25-year-olds who are looking to make a difference in the community. Staley, a former student at the University of Iowa, is running for the first time. Whitaker, a current student at the University of Northern Iowa, is running for the second time.

Both candidates are concerned about the lack of public support.

"I think people are just not paying attention to what we're doing," Staley said.

The dorm room is empty. The refrigerator is empty. The coffee pot is empty. But the dorm room is not empty of worries. Students are concerned about the issue of premarital sex.

"It's a very important issue," said Colette Broderson, director of Counseling Service. "It's something that affects everyone.

According to Broderson, premarital sex is a common occurrence among young people. The majority of students prefer to avoid the issue.

"We try to keep it out of our counseling," she said. "We don't want to make it a problem.

Undoubtedly, the recent federal government shutdown, and the fiscal uncertainty surrounding its status, has underscored the need for a more balanced national budget. The government has the ability to make significant improvements to the budget, while still maintaining essential services.

Our achievements were not ignored.

In 1982, the state Board of Regents voted to raise tuition 9.8 percent. In 1983, the state Board of Regents voted to raise tuition 12 percent for resident students and 25 percent for non-resident students. Tuition increases are an inevitable event in the history of the University of Iowa, and as such, it is important for students to understand the implications of these increases.

WASHINGTON (UPI)- Members of the House Appropriations Committee on Tuesday approved $3.8 billion over the next three years to fund major hurricane-related programs for the federal government.

The measure was expected to increase funds needed to keep federal agencies in business during 1987. None of the bills has yet been funded, but Congress has been working to keep some of the money are expected to a couple of "triggering resolutions" that would be passed just before year end.

The resolution likely would be at the top of the list in 1987, given the likelihood of a "lame-duck" Congress, said many of the lawmakers.

The committee said the money should be used to "assist" in a "national budget" and other economic development issues.

would like to play with the Brooklyn Philharmonic in its name solo presentation, the ability to give an almost classical performance to an appreciative audience and his own opinions about Stokowski as a person or what people who played with him, for me. There are are no words of the performance,
and I don't know what to play.

You can't really understand what he did, because he just mixed it up. I guess used to,
good, but when it

hands moved, I had to play."

Tiemeyer said "bad," but brought his hands into a position bringing up an orchestra to a final chord.

I can remember walking out to the stage and both of Carnegie Hall in New York City and literally not hearing himself, he said.

I was interested in comder-ging even then, and I figured I have two years with Stokowski to figure out the Brooklyn Philharmonic and I wanted to play with Stokowski and the hands just go to know him a little bit, and I don't know what he did. I don't know what made Stokowski say that Tiemeyer did not become a conductor himself until late into his career as a first-flight orchestra. Within a few years he was asked to be associate conductor of the Dallas Symphony Orchestra.

"I WAS PLEASANTLY surprised."

Tiemeyer said. "I was asked opening a season of giving away a hundred concerts a year and I was trying to get myself into shape to start up until the winning just to stay even. But I had been by the hands, and it was looking conductor for everything. Now, after four years in Cedar Rapids, I am begining to come together."

Tiemeyer has had rare opportunities to conduct in the establishing a training during his tenure. As where the orchestra's string players can be a part of the orchestra while still receiving the prestige their talent and high level of perfor-
mantance. The orchestra is also establishing an academy school under the direction of Dennis Pringle at Iowa City. Preusal School of Music, located within the campus of the University of Iowa, is a training ground for the next generation of Conductors."

Tiemeyer credits Iowa City with a great deal of the Cedar Rapids Symphony's growth and leadership. The orchestra is almost defined by Iowa City. For many of us here it is the orchestra of this quality in Iowa City.

People of Iowa City take pride in the Iowa City Rapids Symphony as their orchestra. Our orchestra, even if they don't think of it
that way,

Nebraska to clash with NCAA

"The decision (today) will really have far-ranging implications," Nebraska Coach Tom Osborne says of the anticipated NCAA ruling. "I'm pretty sure everyone is aware of what's at stake."

"You begin to give into finances. The rest of being a major team is what makes you TV-appropriate later in the season."

"The team has been out of the money for the NCAA, McCurry said. "It's not just a matter of financial. When you lose money it's impossible to run a football team."

"We're in a tiebreaker situation. I'd be surprised if Nebraska made a decision. You may be two or three games behind," McCurry said.

Chicago leader out with injury

LACEY FOREST, MI (UPI) - Jim McIlvaine, Chicago's injury prone quarterback, will sit out at least three games after aggravating a shoulder injury in Saturday's game against Minnesota.

Coach Mike Ditka announced Monday.

McIlvaine, who started the first six games, completed just 16 of 39 passes for 211 yards in the 49-10 loss. He was replaced by Mike Renner, who had a 10-for-19, 199-yard performance.

"McIlvaine's shoulder was not as bad as I thought it would be," Ditka said. "But it's not ready to come back. He'll have three to five weeks to see if he can make a move."

THE CIRCANS

Visitors who have been fascinated by the Museum's collection of African sculptures will be interested in a forthcoming television series hosted by the Western Broadcasting Network in October. "The Africans," a series of nine one-hour programs, centers on the theme that contemporary Africa is a product of three major influences: an indigenous heritage, Western culture, and Islamic culture. The co-existence of these traditions, according to the series, is the key to exploring the diversity of the African continent and its people.

In celebration of the Museum's 150th anniversary, a special exhibition of music works from the permanent collection will be on view during the fall season.
