Sanctions may imperil grain sales

WASHINGTON (UPI)—South African President F.W. de Klerk will ask the United Nations Security Council to consider lifting sanctions against South Africa in order to encourage the country to return to negotiations with the United States.

The sanctions, which were imposed after the bombing of a South African Embassy in New York last month, have been in effect since January 1985.

In a statement to the Security Council, de Klerk said the sanctions have not had the desired effect and that they are causing hardship to the South African people.

He also said that the sanctions have not helped to bring about a resolution of the conflict in South Africa.

The United States and other countries have imposed economic sanctions on South Africa in response to the country's policies, including its apartheid system.

An earful

Another immortality has crept its way into the telephone book, of the sort that the "AT&T Guide to Services," adding a new twist to telephone almanac lore.

For years, AT&T has continued to do a number and lately to a recording of a woman begging for sex. But there's a new one. For only 99 cents you can get your favorite phone number live on the line.

In addition, an AT&T official said: "We don't make a judgment of what our subscribers carry. We don't keep up with what's on their lines."

With copyspace of this nature it is easy to comprehend a safety generation claims to be outlawed and disfranchised.

In a hypocritical, nationwide crusade we are telling America's kids to make a decision not to use drugs or be prepared to be destroyed individually. If we want to set any sort of example for our youth, this easy access policy.

Later, I was in a subway car with children up in a quality atmosphere with products designed for adult consumption.

Maybe I'd be better kept starting an eye on the kids.

Historical History could avor Reagan

By Jean-Francois Lowe

President Ronald Reagan seems to have his place in history, but he has one eye on Tibet and another on the Middle East. The United States is now trying to promote democracy in the Third World through its "Doctrines of Dilemma," and that is a major step forward.

The Pinera government, which has been in power since 1970, is notably committed to democracy in the Third World. It is an opening that could give the West the opportunity to use influence in this vast region.

This is important in the context of the current crisis, in which the situation in the Middle East is critical.

Dity changes have taken place on the left and right in Latin America over the past 20 years. This means that a large and active segment of the Western democracies "Venezuela left is important, and the change of the political climate in this region, represents the continuity of Pinochet.

A new wave of leftists has emerged in Latin America in the last 20 years. Chavez is a good example of this. It is a new wave of leftist opposition to the US. The new wave has split the country into two camps. Chavez and the US are in a struggle that is, however, not a struggle of ideologues. The US and its allies are planning a new wave of intervention in the region.

Military reform bill signed by Reagan

WASHINGTON — President Ronald Reagan signed a landmark reform of the U.S. military budgetary and personnel policies Wednesday to attempt to cap the runaway cost of personnel and to bring more accountability to the military’s planning, construction and procurement activities.

The bill, which has been a drive to reform Pentagon practices, was signed by the president at a Rose Garden ceremony Wednesday morning.

The bill is expected to reduce defense spending by $5 billion over the next five years, and $10 billion over the next decade, according to Administration officials.

Reagan has said that the bill is a “major step” in the direction of fiscal responsibility and accountability in the defense establishment.

The bill, which was passed by the Senate 74-21 and by the House 242-147, is aimed at reducing defense spending by $5 billion over the next five years, and $10 billion over the next decade, according to Administration officials.

UI honors students enjoy challenges, opportunities

By Karla Carbon-Carranaga

Special to The Daily Iowan

While many students struggle to find the right major, Honors College students are not only selecting a major but are also devoting part of their college career to taking on some of the most challenging courses the university offers.

"The Honors project is a way to display all the things you've done in college," said Scott Anderson, professor in the Department of Communication. "It's a thesis on the role of those honors courses and projects in art history.

Specific requirements for a degree with honors vary from department to department, according to the major, but generally include some sort of capstone project. The honors project may take the form of a thesis, a creative project, or perhaps a series of essays, when the student is working with one or more professors.

Funding threatens to affect resources for special studies

Although faculty and students agree the UI Honors Degree is beneficial in developing skills, beyond graduation, the small amount of funding available is some departments.

UI-Iowa has to be a self-sustaining entity, and the additional income needed to support the program may be a threat," Anderson said.

"I think it's the same in a lot of our programs," Anderson said. "We're trying to get the most bang for our buck with our students, but the amount of funding is limited in new ways.

It's a way to introduce the value of those honors courses and projects in the classroom and in the community.

There's been a lot of history of honors in UI-Iowa; we're pretty good at the program, and it's likely to succeed.

Reagan speaks at dedication of Carter Presidential Center

ATLANTA (UPI) — President Ronald Reagan, a gracious victor of a contentious battle over labor relations, paid homage Wednesday to Jimmy Carter as a man of faith and integrity.

Reagan spoke at the dedication of the Jimmy Carter Presidential Center, four ornate buildings on a hilltop outside Atlanta housing the 39th president’s library, a museum and scholarly research facilities.

"It was the first full-scale dock strike to hit East Coast ports in eight Atlantic states Wednesday, clashing for cruise line passengers, truck drivers and longshoremen who were forced to lug their own bags up and down gangways.

"It's a pretty crude scene out there," said Port Authority spokesman Allen Morrison. "Police reinforcements have been sent in and now we have a majority of our men on the scene. It is going to take police and workers to help us keep order and prevent violence."

The walkout began at dawn at the Port Authority's Terminal 3 on the New York area and Boston waterfront and continued throughout the day. By afternoon, picketing had spread to nearly all the ports except those in New York area and Boston.

"Police reinforcements have been sent in and now we have a majority of our men on the scene. It is going to take police and workers to help us keep order and prevent violence."

In New York and Boston, longshoremen who were bargaining with their own shipowners separately approved master contracts but rejected longshorelabor talks. At a Wednesday afternoon news conference in New York, the New York area local association said it had made a 90 percent offer to its New York area union members, who are now struck. Illinois seat belt law upheld by court

The law argued it violated a person's private right of choice and should be struck down. A lawyer added that while seats may save lives, their benefits are offset by the potential discomfort they can cause. The court agreed, stating the law was an unconstitutional restriction on a driver's choice.

Two of the court's seven judges dissented, arguing that the law is necessary to save lives. The majority, however, ruled in favor of the state's interest in public safety.

Social Security numbers of all drivers are required on Illinois state's license. The state has been in a legal battle with the court over this issue, but the court ruled in favor of the state.

Any driver who violated the law would face a fine of $50 for the first offense and $250 for each subsequent offense. The law also applies to all Illinois residents, regardless of whether they are licensed to drive in Illinois or another state.

According to Paul Clay, the

According to Paul Clay, the technical director, holograms are "three-dimensional representations of life-size photographs." These holograms are created by projecting images of moving objects through a laser beam. The laser beam is focused at a point where the image is being projected, and the resulting interference pattern is then recorded on a photographic plate.

The projection of images is not limited to the images themselves, but also includes the environment in which they are projected. This is done by the use of projection devices such as mirrors and lenses.

Imagination Real Image

Imagination Real Image shows a young woman named Beckett. As she stands on a building platform, a laser beam is passed through the air. The beam is then reflected off a mirror and back into a camera. This process creates an image of the woman that is projected onto a screen. The image is then manipulated to create a hologram, which is then used to generate a 3D image of the woman.

Imagination Real Image

Imagination Real Image is a theatrical production of a Beckett novel also entitled "In Memory of the Lone Mark." The novel involves the use of holograms to help create a sense of pattern and flow of images. The production is directed by Roland Holst, and the cast includes a variety of actors and actresses.

The novel is set in a city where a hologram has been planted in the sky. As the hologram begins to grow, it becomes a symbol of hope for the people of the city. The story follows the life of a young woman named Beckett, who becomes involved in the creation of the hologram. She is eventually able to overcome the challenges she faces and bring the hologram to life.
