Property downtown seen as hot lots

By Bruce Japsen
Staff Writer

Fierce competition for limited building space downtown may mean high rent for business people, but for Iowa City realtors and owners, business couldn't be better.

For example, the building that formerly housed Needs, 18 S. Clinton St., was off the market in no time when the owners of a pizzeria took over the lease. Ron Boose of Iowa City Housing and Inspection Services, said officials with Serpico Pizza signed permits to start construction just this week in one of the last buildings open to lease.

"It was only vacant for a short time," said Haywood Bell, owner of the building. "It was only a matter of changing the leases from the past owner to them."

Bell said commercial leasing is booming downtown.

"AT THIS TIME last year there were some vacancies, but as expected, it just doesn't seem possible that there would be too many now," Bell said. "It's really a premier area."

"Traffic and the amount of people downtown makes it ideal," he said. "In that proximity, there is a tremendous 'walk-by' of college students." Bell said rent for business space is high, but that isn't the main concern of most prospective business people. Finding a location is the real problem.

"Rents are higher now but people are willing to pay," said Carol Barker of Scheuerman-Richardson Inc., a real estate business. "Our office gets about one-half dozen calls each week for downtown space. There really isn't much else other than the Seifert's building."

The building that formerly housed Seifert's, at 10 S. Clinton St., is one of the last rental buildings available downtown, but unlike other sites, it has been vacant for about a year.

"IT'S BEEN VACANT for so long because it's so large," Barker said. "Most businesses want 1,500 to 2,000 square feet where this building's main floor has 4,000 square feet."

But Barker, who is handling the account for the building, said she is optimistic it will be sold soon — she is currently negotiating to lease the building.

Those who lease downtown buildings say it's worth the price of high rent to stay there. "We could probably sell our lease anytime," said Mike Walt, manager of Create-A-Cone & Gourmet Popcorn, 112 E. Washington St. "There's always someone looking for a downtown lease."

But not always. Bell said McDonald's Corporation is having difficulty in finding a building for a downtown restaurant.

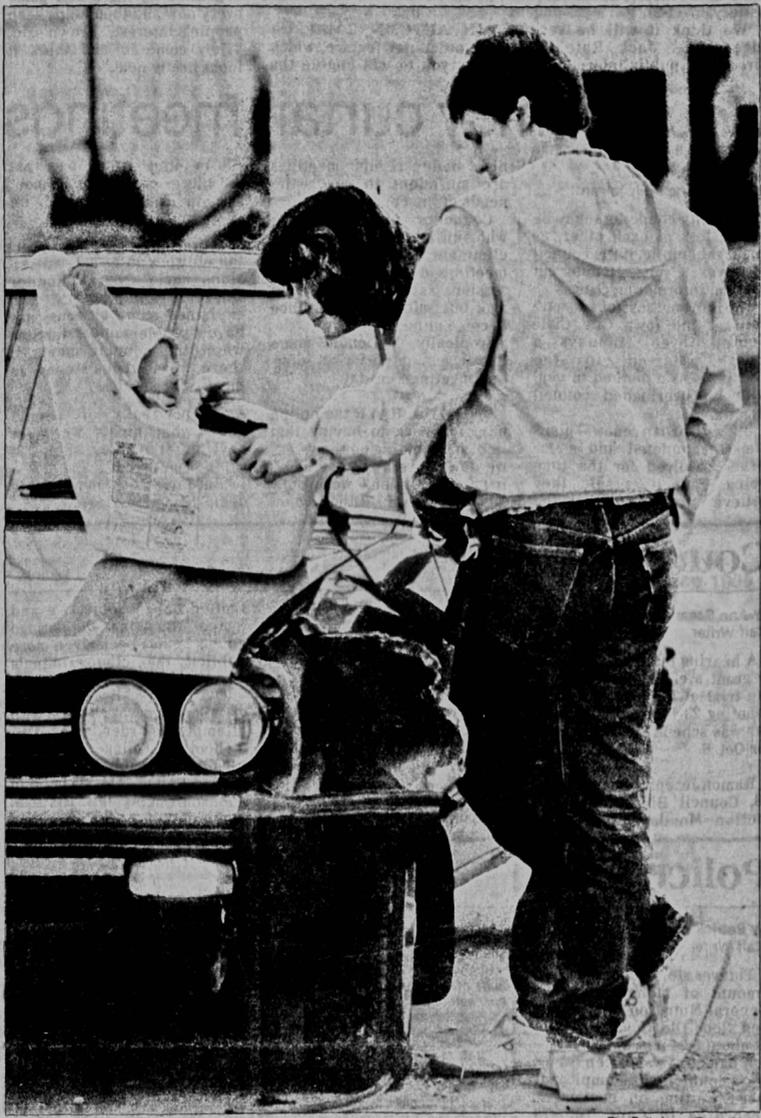

"I think their problem is that they like to own," Bell said. "Most owners downtown lease."

But Kevin O'Brien, of McDonald's Iowa City office, said he's not sure of the fast-food chain's plans for expansion.

"I know they are looking at something in the downtown area, but I don't know what it is," O'Brien said. McDonald's corporate officials will not comment because it might jeopardize their chances of getting a location, O'Brien said.

There were rumors among the business community that McDonald's would try to put a restaurant on the property where the Plaza Mini-Park now rests. But the City Council's recent decision to redevelop the park foiled any plans for businesses to locate there.

"I don't think the city will ever get rid of the park now," O'Brien said.

Sanctions may imperil grain sales

WASHINGTON (UPI)—South African Foreign Minister Rieffers "Pik" Botha Wednesday called key senators and threatened to cut grain purchases from the United States if President Ronald Reagan's veto of sanctions against Pretoria is overturned.

Sen. Richard Lugar, R-Ind., leader of the fight for sanctions, called the phone call to Sens. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., Edward Zorinsky, D-Neb., and Chuck Grassley, R-Iowa, "despicable."

"I cannot imagine that a senator would be influenced by bribery and intimidation," Lugar told a news conference as debate began on the veto override vote. "It's an affront to the decency of the American people."

Helms denied Botha made any threats and dismissed charges the phone call was orchestrated by him or White House officials.

But Sen. Ted Kennedy, D-Mass., said, "We should not let the bullies and thugs of Pretoria intimidate the Senate of the United States. Doesn't this tell us a little about the kind of people who are running that government?"

Sen. Nancy Kassebaum, R-Kan., said Botha promised to increase grain imports if the Senate voted to sustain Reagan's veto.

An agreement was reached to begin debate on the measure late Wednesday with a showdown vote on overturning the veto set for this afternoon.

The House voted overwhelmingly Monday to override the veto and if the Senate follows suit, the stern sanctions — including a ban on any new U.S. investment and a further restriction of U.S.-South African trade — will become law despite Reagan's objection. The legislation does not prevent U.S. agricultural exports to South Africa but does bar imports.

Reagan contends the harsh sanctions would sever the diplomatic links needed to pressure Pretoria to abandon its racial segregation policies and would hurt blacks already living under oppressive conditions.

Senate Republican leader Robert Dole of Kansas, who supports Reagan, conceded the cutoff of grain purchases "will not wreck the American farm economy."

But he added: "When we make the judgment that we are going to go beyond what the president of the United States recommends... then we may be asking for some problems."

Helms, chairman of the Agriculture Committee, said Botha, whom he described as a longtime friend, called him to say: "Our farmers are indignant. We cannot hold them off any longer — we will have to cut off purchases of United States grain if these sanctions go through."

Council targets costly building codes

By Carlos M. Trevino
Special to The Daily Iowan

In hopes of bringing down the cost of housing, Iowa City councilors said Wednesday they're initiating a meeting between members of the housing industry in order to revise costly city building codes.

Councilors say such meetings may result in updated and modified building codes that could reduce the cost of building, and thus the cost of housing for potential home buyers and tenants.

Councilor John McDonald said the city will ask members of the Home Builders Association of Iowa City and the Iowa City Realtors Association to form a committee to meet with city staff.

"With all these rules and regulations I wonder, what does this all do to the cost of housing?" McDonald said. "We all hear from different contractors from time to time... they say it's stupid they have to spend more money to meet regulations," McDonald said.

COUNCILOR Darrel Courtney said he was approached by contractors who have delayed projects because of the codes, but he added, "It's not like it happens everyday, where it's to the point they'd band together and do something to us."

"I think the biggest problem will be getting them all together," he said.

Councilor Ernie Zuber said it would be a problem getting some of the home builders involved because "they won't show up unless they get a fee."

Some councilors suspect apathy among contractors, engineers and architects, but City Manager Steve Atkins said he will be contacting people to meet with the city staff anyway.

HBA legislative representative John Balmer said he welcomes the opportunity to meet and work with city staff on revising the codes.

BALMER SAID there are some home builders who would not want to meet with city staff or councilors because "they feel that we've done this before and nothing really ever happened. The city will listen but not do anything."

Most home builders, however, have an interest in meeting with the council, he said. The city needs to modernize the building permit application procedure because "a week or two of delays is costing money. Time is definitely money."

Another element causing delay is the city staff's attitude toward blueprints, Balmer said.

"When an individual goes down there with building plans and he's met with negatives — you can't do this, you can't do that — he wants to know what can be done," he said.

"I don't know what (regulations) the city would be willing to back off on in order to reduce cost," said Larry Schnittjer, another home builder representative. "For subdivisions we're designing Cadillacs, and then we end up having to build a cracker box of a house to live in."

SCHNITTJER explained smaller developments cost less for the city to maintain.

Although home builders, councilors and their support groups have their differences, both Balmer and McDonald agreed on one goal.

"We want to see if there's a less costly way for them to meet rules and regulations," McDonald said, adding that at the same time the city is also concerned with maintaining standards that protect the health and safety of residents.

"You've got to have rules and regulations," Balmer said. "But they need to be tailored to each locale."

Reagan maintains no win for Soviets in Daniloff's release

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Nicholas Daniloff was welcomed home after 30 days in Soviet custody Wednesday by President Ronald Reagan, who denied there had been "any caving in" on the deal that won the reporter's release and ended a superpower stalemate.

On a day that saw him return to work at U.S. News & World Report with a hero's welcome, Daniloff, 51, accompanied by his wife and two children, paid a visit to the White House to thank Reagan for intervention on his behalf.

"This is a very complex situation," Daniloff said, "and if it hadn't been for President Reagan taking a very deep and personal interest in my case, it would probably be some years before I could stand in front of you and say, 'Thank you, Mr.

Nicholas Daniloff
President."

DANILOFF, WHOSE arrest on spy charges escalated into an international incident that threatened to put superpower relations into the deep freeze, was allowed to leave Moscow Monday in a complicated deal that also enabled alleged Soviet spy Gennadi Zakharov to fly home to Moscow after pleading no contest to three counts of espionage in New York.

The arrangement also produced a Kremlin agreement to allow Soviet human rights leader Yuri Orlov, 62, and his wife to emigrate to the United States.

Amid charges by conservatives that Reagan gave away too much to win Daniloff's freedom and clear the way for an Oct. 11-12 superpower summit in Iceland, the president said, "I don't think there was any caving in at all."

"No one had to cave in," he added.

Prostitutes rally for equal rights

BRUSSELS, Belgium (UPI)—Prostitutes from around the world gathered at the headquarters of the European Parliament Wednesday for the second World Whores Congress, denouncing alleged violations of their human rights and demanding equality with other working women.

"We feel it is so important that women, prostitutes and non-prostitutes, know the rights of prostitutes are violated in every country," Margo St. James, co-founder of the International Committee for Prostitute Rights.

"We want to work for prostitutes rights, make it a labor issue," she said after the first morning session of the three-day congress.

UI to host farm advocate conference

The UI will be the site of the first national conference of university-related farm advocates.

Running Oct. 16-18, the conference is for university students, faculty and staff from around the country who are interested in keeping family-based agriculture alive.

Sponsored by the University Rural Crisis Group, workshops at the conference will include discussion of the economics behind the current farm crisis, the relationship between the arms race and the current farm economy, the mental and emotional stress faced by farmers in danger of losing their land and how to organize to help keep family farming a viable option in American agriculture.

UI senior Joe Barry, one of the group's organizers, stressed that the conference will provide a unique opportunity for family farm advocates on college campuses around the country to share their interests and concerns, as well as hear some of the top leaders in the national movement to save the family farm.

Peace prayer service planned locally

On Friday, Oct. 3, the Ecumenical Consultation of Iowa City will sponsor an Ecumenical Prayer Service for peace in Nicaragua.

The service will be held from noon to 12:30 p.m. at the First Christian Church, 217 Iowa Ave.

The half-hour service will involve prayer, reflection and song centering on U.S. government involvement in Central America.

During the past four weeks, members of the churches of Ecumenical Consultation have been collecting signatures of those opposed to the $100 million in U.S. aid to the Contras.

Immediately following the prayer service, members of the Ecumenical Consultation will take the petitions to Republican Sen. Chuck Grassley's office in Cedar Rapids.

Concert to highlight parents' night

The choral groups, under the direction of vocal music instructor John Stam and accompanist Dan Hackmann, will perform in the school gym at 7 p.m.

The musical performance will highlight a general meeting which opens the night's activities. Parents will then follow their child's daily schedule and meet with teachers. Class sessions will last approximately 10 minutes. Refreshments will be provided.

Autumn Gold leads to green

By James Cahoy
Staff Writer

Iowa City stores will begin selling their first new "Autumn Gold" lottery tickets today, and state lottery officials hope the new game will be just as successful as the last one.

The Iowa Lottery Commission launched their seventh game in Ames Wednesday following the end of the first sellout game in the history of the Iowa Lottery, "7-11-21."

"We think it will be very successful," Jack Ratekin, director of public information for the Iowa Lottery Commission, said of the new game. "It's the first Iowa lottery game with a spokesman, pianist Roger Williams, and that can only help."

Williams is a Des Moines native who achieved acclaim for his hit song "Autumn Leaves." He was paid $12,000 to promote the new game.

Ratekin said the new game, which will last about eight weeks, is different than 7-11-21.

"IN AUTUMN GOLD, we have a doubler feature, which allows you to win double the amount shown on the ticket," Ratekin said. "In this case, if you find a gold coin on the ticket, you double your winnings."

He said the new game will offer $8 million worth of prizes, ranging from $50,000 to a free ticket.

Steve Brown, an employee at Hy-Vee food store, 501 Hollywood Blvd., said he was looking forward to the new game.

"I think having a new game every now and then helps keep people's interest," Brown said. "They come in and think it looks pretty neat."

Council may curtail meetings

By Carlos M. Trevino
Special to The Daily Iowan

Iowa City councilors may be seeing less of each other, as might the public, if the council approves a suggestion to cut back on informal meetings.

The informal sessions, usually held at the Iowa City Civic Center three Mondays a month, started in the mid-1970s as a method to deal with an overloaded council agenda.

But with urban renewal plans almost completed and major issues resolved for the time being, councilors said they believe informal meetings the night before regular meetings are sufficient to cover the needs of the community.

Councilor John McDonald, who initiated the proposal to eliminate one of the informal meetings, described the casual sessions as a good idea years ago, but said they have since become unnecessary.

Ironically, McDonald made his suggestion during an informal meeting Tuesday.

"WE WILL HAVE the option of going back to having that informal meeting on the weeks we don't have a regular meeting if things don't work out," McDonald said. "Other councils in cities within Iowa that are bigger than us don't meet as much as we do," he explained.

The only concern for dropping the off-week informal sessions came from Councilor Darrel Courtney, who explained some citizens may have a problem understanding when the council meets if there is no consistency in meeting schedules.

"I'm not really sure people know what nights we meet anyway," Courtney said. "It can be confusing."

"But I guess it won't be a big deal," he added.

A hearing to decide whether to grant a change of venue in the trial of a man accused of shooting 23-year-old John Slager was scheduled Wednesday for Oct. 6.

Ramon Joseph DeSantiago II, 18, Council Bluffs, filed the motion Monday in Johnson County District Court through his attorney, Marsha Bergan. In his petition, DeSantiago contends an impartial jury could not be chosen from Johnson County.

The motion states that "the publicity about the case is so pervasive and inflammatory that prejudice must be presumed."

The motion also claims the pretrial publicity has not been limited only to objective and factual reporting. DeSantiago claims he has been given more publicity than other criminals of recent memory.

DeSantiago was charged with attempted murder in the Aug. 3 shooting of Slager and later pleaded innocent. He is being held in lieu of $111,525 bond in Johnson County Jail. His trial is scheduled for Oct. 27.

CIA recruitment sparks policy review

By Joseph Levy
Staff Writer

Concerns about the Central Intelligence Agency's recruiting practices have prompted members of the UI Faculty Council to discuss policies governing organizations who recruit on the UI campus.

CIA recruiters are scheduled to conduct their first set of interviews this year on the UI campus next Monday.

According to Faculty Council President Michael Brody, the UI lacks a definite policy guiding organizations wishing to recruit UI graduates.

"It is possible that some of the organizations that recruit here have engaged in activities that the university might find not consistent with its own moral ideas," Brody said. Last year the CIA interviewed students to rally against recruiters, and three students were put on probation for trying to invade the office where the interviews were being conducted.

BRODY AND OTHER members of the council are concerned because they say UI currently draws its recruitment policy from many sources, making the guidelines difficult for organizations to interpret.

"We don't really have a formal statement in the operational manual about policies governing recruiting," Brody said.

The council's intent is to devise a policy that consolidates all of the rules into one package, Brody said.

UI Spanish and Portuguese Department Chairman Thomas Lewis and UI Associate Professor Sheldon Pollock presented such a plan to the council in March. Discussions began again at the council's Tuesday meeting.

According to Lewis, the plan would require organizations recruiting on campus to:

- Comply with affirmative action and equal opportunity regulations.

- Make a full and accurate presentation of all relevant information available to the applicant in the recruiting process.

- Adhere to state, federal and international laws.
- Not advocate or engage in violent activities.

- Not undermine the purpose of the UI.

THE PLAN would also incorporate a review board responsible for enforcing the policy, Lewis said.

But stopping the CIA from recruiting on campus is not the purpose of the plan, Lewis said.

"Concern over CIA recruitment prompted these discussions," he said. "The concern grew much larger."

The plan is a matter of moral judgement, Brody added. "It's asking the university to determine what moral position it wants to strike," he said.

But Brody said the council's discussion over the issue is still in preliminary stages.

RAs set to tackle Anamosa inmates

By Tom Hunter
Staff Writer

Competing with prison inmates and being surrounded by guards carrying guns doesn't stop UI Residence Hall Assistants from playing in an annual flag-football game with the Iowa State Men's Reformatory.

This Sunday, eight R.A.s will travel to Anamosa for a day they say will be a "little leery" but enjoyable.

"We thought these guys were gonna be foaming at the mouth and kill us," Hillcrest R.A. Joe George said Wednesday.

George said while in past games there has been full-contact blocking and "kind of rough" play, the games have been enjoyable.

"There's a little bit of contact, but it's not like they're out to hurt you," said A.J. Carrier, another Hillcrest R.A.

The players on the inmate team are selected from the best players in the prison, he added.

"IT JUST KIND of gives you a leery feeling, all the guards are carrying weapons," Carrier said.

UI Assistant Director of Residence Services Dave Coleman said he organized the team so the R.A.s would have the opportunity to see a different way of life.

"It's a way of exposing the inmates to the outside world," Coleman said. "And the R.A.s see what it's like being on the inside of a prison wall."

When the R.A.s enter the prison compound they are forced to leave all of their personal belongings outside and are marked with a stamp that only shows up under a black light, he said.

"It's kind of strange when you hear that big door slam behind you," Coleman said.

But there have always been R.A.s willing to play because the inmates are so well-behaved, he said.

"I HAVE A LOT of people who are interested in playing with the inmates and seeing what it's like on the inside," Coleman said.

Iowa State Men's Reformatory Activities Specialist Tom Beadle, who organizes the football game, said the inmates play games with several different groups around the state.

"We try to adapt our game to those from the outside," Beadle said.

The inmate players were selected to play on the basis of ability and good attitude, he said.

"The attitude is real good sportsmanship," Beadle said, adding that the inmates shake hands with the opposing team after each game.

Beadle said the medieval appearance of the Anamosa facility alarms some visitors.

"If you've never been here before it would be scary," Beadle said.

Besides football, the inmates also have softball, football, basketball and volleyball teams, he said.

A real winner

The precious balance between the "winning is everything" attitude and the safety of high school athletes began to tip precariously to one side last week in two small Iowa communities.

On one side of the balance there is Martensdale-St. Marys High School football coach Mark Peterson, who has been indefinitely suspended from his coaching job for pulling his team off the playing field in a game against Earlham High School. Concerned about the unusually rough playing and lack of penalties, Peterson withdrew his team in the third quarter. Earlham, leading 25-0, won by forfeit.

"The officials were not calling players for clipping and punching," Peterson said. "I took my kids off the playing field because one kid had already been sent to the hospital with a neck injury. The officials were creating such an unsafe event I had to take them off before another 17-year-old had to be taken away in an ambulance."

But on the other side, there are many observers who charge that Peterson was only angry that his team was losing, therefore, he should be permanently suspended for displaying poor sportsmanship and being an inadequate role model.

One Earlham fan, in a recent letter to The Des Moines Register, wrote that Peterson's actions showed that "it's easier to give up... It is disheartening to imagine that a child's jubilation at play can be tainted in his youth by one man's teachings that the word 'play' is not nearly as important as the word 'win'."

Although football is a contact sport, and risks and injuries are to be expected, Peterson did the right thing in pulling his team off the field. Rather than quitting because Martensdale might not win, Peterson gave up before other players were seriously injured.

"The kids were complaining about being hit," he explained. "I didn't teach my kids to quit, but there is no pride being lost when you're getting injured needlessly."

Yet many observers do not see the situation in the same light. This leads one to wonder what is more important to players, coaches and fans — winning a football game or preventing more players from being injured because questionable calls are being made. Injuries are a part of football just as touchdowns and tackles are, but when a fight on the field has already erupted and players on both teams are complaining of illegal hits someone must stay stop.

Peterson put his career as a coach on the line when he pulled Martensdale off the field. Instead of being chastised for his behavior he should be congratulated for his willingness to stand up for the safety of the players. Winning is not everything, and Peterson has proven just that.

An earful

Another immorality has crept its way into the telephone system as part of the "AT&T Dial-It 900 Service," adding a new twist to teen-age slumber parties.

For a mere 50 cents, customers can dial a 900 number and listen to a recording of a woman begging for sex. But wait, there's more. For only $35 you can get you're favorite phone floozy live on the line.

Although these audio activities have caught heavy criticism from some — and heavy panting from others — AT&T contends its customers have the right to use their phones however they see fit.

In advocating freedom one official said "We don't make a judgement of what our subscribers carry. We don't keep track of who's doing what."

With cop-outs of this nature it is easy to comprehend why today's younger generation claims to be confused and disillusioned.

In a hypocritical, nationwide crusade we are telling America's kids to make a decision not to use drugs or be gripped by any destructive immoral vice. If we want to set any sort of example for our youth, this easy access porn line must be cut.

How can we bring our children up in a quality atmosphere with prostitution hanging on the kitchen wall?

Maybe Ma Bell should start keeping an eye on the kids.

History could favor Reagan

By Jean-Francois Lisee

PRESIDENT RONALD Reagan is worried about his place in history. He has one eye on Geneva and another on Managua as places where he might leave his mark, but he and his advisers are missing an angle — an important opportunity to propel his reputation into the next millennium.

The angle sweeps from Santiago, Chile, to the capitals of Western Europe. It is an opening that could give the West a dramatic ideological edge and do more to hurt Communism than a million Contras or other "freedom fighters."

Part of the new opportunity lies in Western Europe. The rupture, in early 1984, of the French "Union de la Gauche" ended a century of cooperation between the democratic left and its totalitarian cousins — in this case, between the socialists and the Communist Party.

Similar changes have taken place on the left in Spain and Portugal and may soon be repeated in England and Italy. This means that a large and active segment of the Western European "democratic left" simply will no longer compromise its democratic beliefs. It is also increasingly interested in finding new allies on the international scene.

EUROPEANS DO NOT, however, see much that recommends itself in Reagan's foreign policies. True, America played a role in ousting dictators from the Philippines and Haiti, but Washington's conduct in both cases looked like so much damage control. From Europe, Grenada looked like a standard imperialist crackdown, and the promotion of democracy in El Salvador still seems tactically motivated. To many Europeans, it seems that Washington is still pursuing the same old policy toward the third world, no matter what the local dictator looks like.

Reagan has been sitting on this fence for some time now, apparently unaware that its makings of a political realignment lie waiting in Europe. He ought to see that Europeans are ripe for a signal from Washington.

Gen. Augusto Pinochet is the most brutal dictator the Americas have had in a long time. Washington surely had a hand in helping install him in 1973 — and that, together with the general's 13 years of represive rule, has given Moscow one of its best propaganda tools.

The State Department is well aware of this. A former Assistant Secretary of State for Inter-American Affairs, Langborne A. Motley, said of his meeting with General Pinochet in February 1985: "I told him that if he were writing the script for the Communists, he wouldn't write it better than he is doing." The situation in Chile today offers an opportunity to take that script away from the Communists.

HOW? OPTIONS ARE FEW. Not only is the general willing to extend his control of the country — personally or by proxy — to the turn of the century, but many observers say that he would be able to do so, thanks to a divided, if not local, opposition. The Reagan administration is increasingly annoyed by the dictator's brutality, and it has dug into its bag of pressure tactics. But the Chilean economy has not proved quite weak enough, or the army quite divided enough, and it is unlikely the United States will get the general to leave voluntarily.

Yet surely there are other possibilities. The United States has been propping up General Pinochet for 13 years. Why not now remove some of those props? The Reagan administration could make it known that it would not oppose his replacement by a pro-American military junta. Such a transitional government would be expected to bar local Marxist parties from running in the first election, giving the democratic right and left time to gain precious ground.

With such steps, the United States would clearly implicate itself in the removal of another dictator in its own backyard. This would also put other Reagan initiatives in a new light: Grenada, the Philippines, Haiti and El Salvador would appear to be so many dominoes falling on the way to Santiago. And it would lay the foundations for a new alliance between Western European and American opinion.

The surge of Marxism — and its attraction for democrats, particularly in Europe — has been the major ideological event of this century. Reagan has the opportunity to bring this chapter to an end and open a new one, while insuring that his name gets good play in the history books.

Readers vary on drug crisis

To the Editor:

Phil Thomas' solution to the drug crisis won't work (The Daily Iowan, Sept. 29). Getting tough with the abuser with a quarter ounce bag of pot would be a regression towards the days when merely having a seed of marijuana could get a person five to ten years in jail. How tough is tough?

While stiffer prosecution of traffickers seems to hold an answer, it doesn't solve the problem of demand. Besides, the biggest operators can often successfully bribe public officials into looking the other way, or else bring to bear other means of coercion to dissuade active pursuit of their illicit trade.

I agree that drug testing is not out of the question. When I was in the Army I disliked very much the random urine sample collections. It struck me like a search conducted without a warrant. There was no privacy as the Non-Commissioned Officer watched me urinate in the test tube.

Often times "stage fright" set in and I couldn't immediately provide the sample. This added more frustration to an already undesirable duty as the sergeant had other things to do besides wait for me to drink enough water.

My solution is to push for the social unacceptability of using drugs. Showing people that single out and attacked separately. It must be approached with the idea that drug abuse can be curtailed only when the things that cause people to resort to drugs are also brought to light.

Gerhardt E. Goeken

To the Editor:

Phil Thomas failed miserably with his editorial on stopping "the drug problem." (The Daily Iowan, Sept. 29). He wrote, "it must be stopped in the production, marketing and sales stages, because the consumers will always be there." I disagree that the consumers will always be there; in fact, I would say that "the drug problem" itself is that so many people find drug usage desirable.

In "stopping the problem where it starts" — which Thomas rightly suggests — instead of looking at production, maybe we should look at why there is drug usage in the first place: it's the thing to do, it feels good for a while, it's a good social device.

The drug problem, it seems to me, starts with our society which pushes alcohol and tobacco, which condemns people to poverty, which puts money and competition ahead of love and cooperation. In stopping the problem where it starts, I suggest we suggest we start fixing a cold, competitive, lonely, world.

Rob Hogg
Rt. 6, Iowa City

To the Editor:

Shame on you Daily Iowan! In a recent article and editorial, you said that Gov. Branstad's plans to combat drug abuse and fight drug trafficking are just headline-grabbing, politically motivated hype. That is just plain wrong!

Drug abuse is not a Republican or Democratic issue. Rather, it is one of the most serious and far-reaching issues facing all Americans today. In light of the recent, well-publicized cocaine induced deaths of public figures such as John Belushi, Len Bias and David Kennedy, you should be complimenting political leaders such as Branstad for their efforts to deal with the drug abuse problem.

Only by educating the public on the dangers of drug use and abuse and stiffening the penalties for drug dealers and users will drug abuse be brought under control. Therefore, I hope you will recognize and applaud the efforts of Branstad as a positive step in attacking our nation's drug abuse problem.

New UI law building relieves crowding

By Shawn Plank
Special to The Daily Iowan

The new UI law building's price tag may be $25 million, but it relieves overcrowding and even comes with showers, according to two law professors.

College of Law Dean N. William Hines said the building's two showers are there for people who like to exercise during noon hours. They're also handy for students who want to change clothes for interviewing, he said.

But while the building's spaciousness gives students elbow room and makes it easier to study, some law students and faculty said it spreads people out more and makes it harder to have contact with other law students.

"We may lose some of the humanity we had in the old building," Hines said of the old Law Center, adding that the building's cramped conditions sometimes cause a "forced coziness."

ONE THIRD-YEAR law student, who asked that his name be withheld, said he misses that coziness.

"The spirit's not the same. There's no climate to foster

"We may lose some of the humanity we had in the old building," says UI College of Law Dean N. William Hines of the new Boyd Law Building.

discussion or social relationships between any students," he said. "There's no camaraderie."

He added that he didn't know the name of any first-year students which he said was unusual.

But the building's new library evoked a different response from law students and faculty.

The new law library is two-and-a-half times as large as the old library, providing shelves for books that were forced to be stored in other buildings on campus because the old library had reached its full capacity, according to Executive Librarian Kathie Belugm.

IT PROBABLY WON'T reach its 800,000 volume capacity until the year 2020 or 2025, Belugm said.

The library also has more room for private studying. The old library had 110 private studying carrels while the new one provides 380 students with their own carrels, she said.

Some of the law students said they wish the library was open more hours, especially on Saturday, when it is currently open from 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. But Belugm said one of the library's problems is that it is understaffed.

The building cost $18 million to build, according to UI Vice President for Finance Dorsey Ellis, but the price tag rises to $25 million if all other costs, including the equipment and the construction of the parking lot and footbridge across Grand Avenue, are included, he said.

ALTHOUGH THE Board of Regents issued bonds to finance the building, almost $1 million of help came from private contributions, Ellis said.

"The UI law school had one of the shabbiest, least functional law buildings of major universities," Ellis said. "Now we have one of the premier buildings."

The library will be the first on campus to complete an on-line computer catalog, scheduled to be in operation by September 1987.

The building will be named after former UI president and law professor Willard L. Boyd, who is the head of the Museum of Natural History in Chicago.

Teen death declared homicide

NEWTON, Iowa (UPI) — Doctors Wednesday said the death of a 13-year-old Newton boy last Friday was a case of homicide, noting his weakened heart would not have failed had he not been struck by a schoolmate.

"We know now his death was a direct result of a blow or blows he received to his chest," said Polk County Medical Examiner R.C. Wooters, who performed the autopsy on Justin Charles Cupples.

"I will be listing the manner of death on the certificate as homicide, but that simply means death due to the action of another person," he said.

Wooters said a plastic valve implanted in Justin's heart last August was dislodged by one or more blows to the chest, causing the boy to suffer a heart attack last Wednesday.

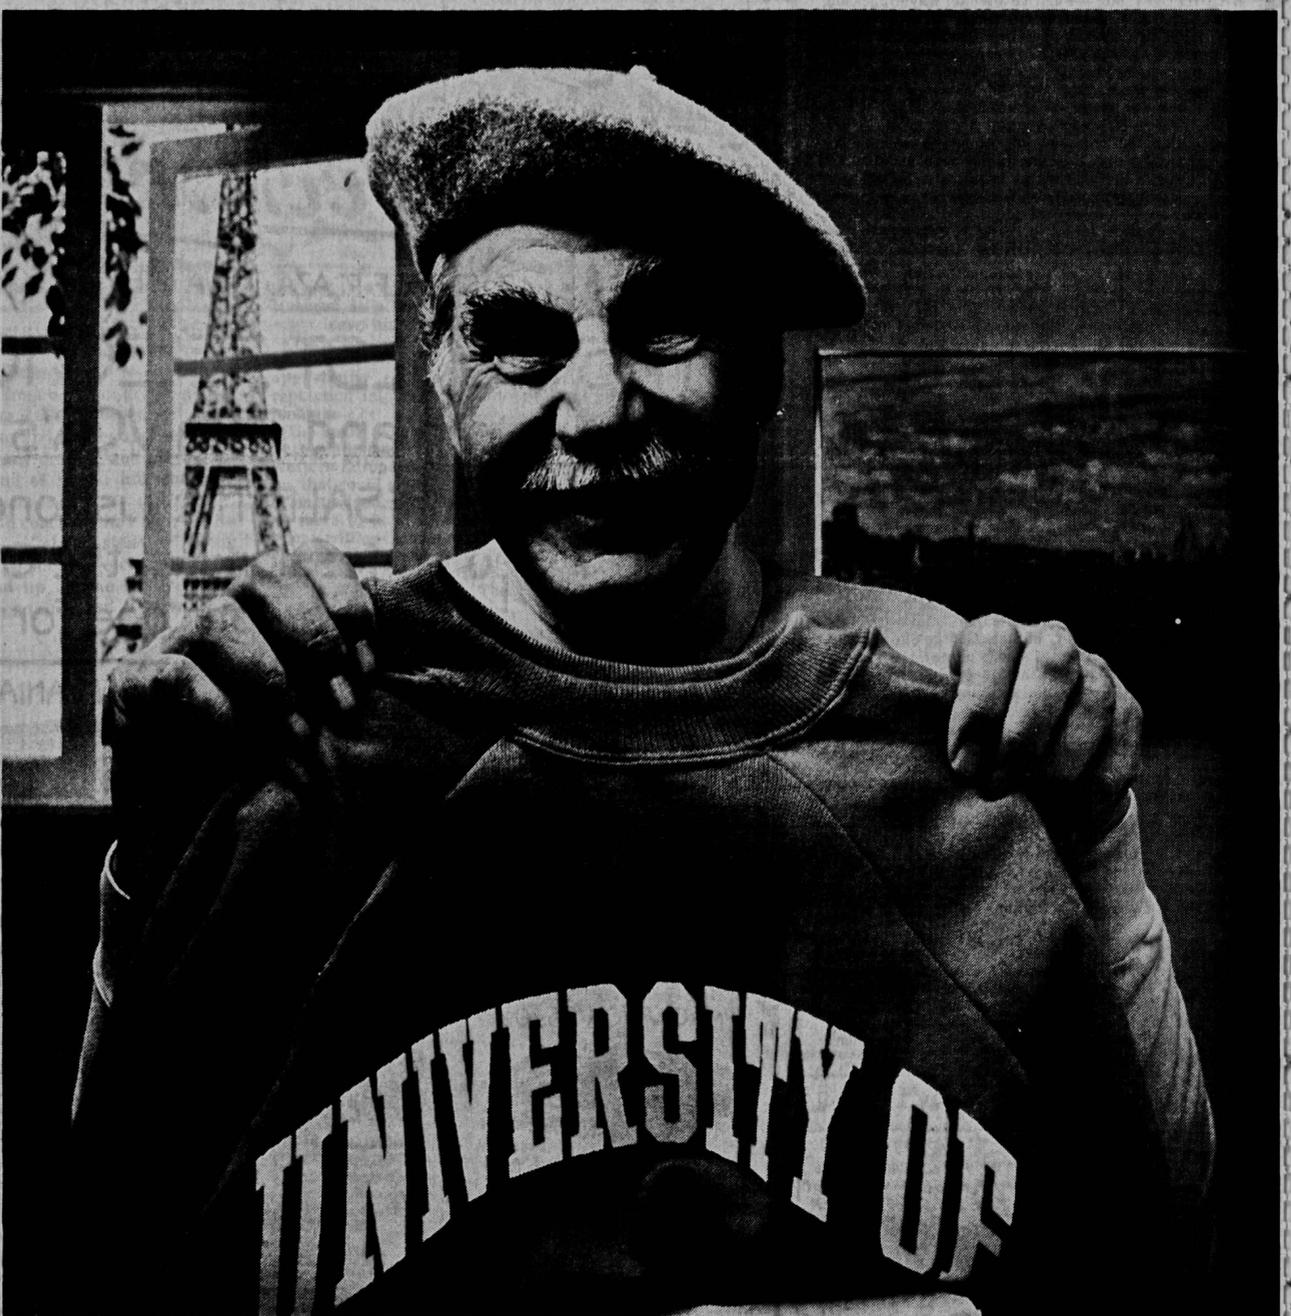

The boy was kept alive for two days by life-support machines while doctors at Des Moines' Mercy Medical Center launched a frantic search for a donor heart to replace his damaged one. The search ended when Justin suffered a second heart attack and died Friday.

"HE WOULD still be alive if he hadn't been struck in the chest. On the other hand, if he had not had this recent surgery, the blow would not have killed him," Wooters said.

The fatal injury occurred during a scuffle with a 15-year-old schoolmate in a Berg Junior High School hallway last Wednesday.

Jasper County Attorney John Billingsley said he is conducting a full investigation of the incident and will decide by the end of the week whether to file charges against the unidentified boy who hit Justin.

The boy, in an interview with the Des Moines Register Monday, said he only hit Justin once in the back and that he did not mean to hurt him. The boy added he had no idea Justin had a heart condition.

UI honors students enjoy challenges, opportunities

By Victoria Carlson-Casaregola
Special to The Daily Iowan

While many seniors struggle to meet graduation requirements, some UI students are deliberately making degree programs more complicated.

Each year about 100 students put forth the additional effort, in the form of an honors project, necessary to earn an honors degree from the university.

"The honors project is a way for me to challenge myself," UI Senior Judi Westhoff explained. "When I came here, I thought I'd just do the minimum. Now the more I do, the more I know I'm getting my money's worth."

For Westhoff, going beyond the minimum has involved a trip to Africa. To earn an anthropology degree with honors, Westhoff is currently writing a thesis on the role of women in African agriculture, a subject she researched firsthand during her stay in Botswana last summer.

WESTHOFF CREDITS
Sandra Barkan, assistant director of the Honors Program, with helping her find an appropriate program to sponsor the trip.

"A lot of what we offer is in response to student initiative," Barkan emphasized. "The honors project allows students to fill in the gaps they find in their own education and to learn to ask questions on their own."

Honors Director Irwin Levin explained that admission to the honors program requires a 3.2 grade-point average. Interested students may join at any point in their undergraduate careers by contacting the Shambaugh House Honors Center. The level of participation, including the decision of whether or not to pursue the honors degree, is up to the individual student.

"Students who join the Honors Program are not contracting into a series of courses," Barkan added.

SPECIFIC requirements for a degree with honors vary according to each UI department's policy. Specific honors curricula may include special coursework, an individualized honors project or a combination of both.

An honors project may take the form of a thesis, experimental research study, artistic performance or media project, depending on the student's major. Students undertaking a project usually work under the direction of a designated pro-

Funding threatens to affect resources for special studies

By Victoria Carlson-Casaregola
Special to The Daily Iowan

Although faculty and students agree the UI Honors Program is beneficial to students' academic careers and beyond, funding has threatened the resources available in some departments.

According to John Lyne, associate professor of communication studies, honors programs within individual departments are important, even with the present financial difficulties.

"I don't see it (the program) as elitist," Lyne said. "Honors is justifiable. The most outstanding students come in contact with each other, and it's a chance to present the material in new ways."

Budgetary restraints already limit the availability of faculty for work with honors projects, and the problem is likely to worsen.

Wallace J. Tomasini, director of the School of Art and Art History, foresees a serious shortage of resources for honors courses and projects in art history.

TOMASINI acknowledged the educational value of the honors curriculum but explained that the shortage of faculty available to teach honors classes causes the school to reduce the number of classes and possibly alter graduation requirements.

professor, although they eventually submit the finished project to other members of the department.

According to Associate Professor John Lyne, honors degree candidates in Communication Studies have a wide range of options in planning a project. Lyne said honor students have shown a variety of creative and scholarly effort in past years. One former student wrote a one-man play based on his independent research of the life of George M. Cohan. Meanwhile another designed a junior high school speech curriculum.

"WE HOLD OPEN the possibility of a creative project such as film production, but we maintain some ground rules," Lyne said. "We're not just looking for an artistic Faculty members may not be able to work closely with individual students," Tomasini said. "With these kinds of budget cuts we can't offer a class for five people."

Despite low budgets, the Colleges of Nursing, Pharmacy and Business Administration are currently developing new opportunities for undergraduates who seek academic honors.

The honors program in nursing will require students to take special honors courses, including at least one honors seminar.

ELEANOR McCLELLAND, assistant dean of undergraduate studies in the College of Nursing, expects the new program to benefit both students and the field of nursing education.

"There's not a long history of honors in nursing; we're relatively young compared to other professions," McClelland said, adding that the program shows that nursing requires an academically-skilled student.

The College of Business Administration will begin its honors program this spring with a special seminar course. William Albrecht, associate dean of the undergraduate program in business, anticipates the development of an independent project for seniors, which could be a thesis, a computer program or a business plan.

project but for a verbal rationale of the work as well."

Administrators, faculty and students associated with the honors curriculum agree that the honors degree gives the student impressive credentials and offers a valuable learning experience.

Scott Anderson, communications assistant at the UI Foundation, maintains that the experience of writing an honors thesis has helped him with the writing and editing demands he encounters on the job.

Anderson also found the honors degree gave him a little bit more to offer employers.

"I'd advise would-be honors students to pursue a topic that interests them and not to sell themselves short," Anderson said. "Honors is not a threat but an opportunity."

Reagan speaks at dedication of Carter Presidential Center

ATLANTA (UPI)—President Ronald Reagan, a gracious victor at a monument to the vanquished, paid homage Wednesday to Jimmy Carter as a man of faith and integrity and said their political differences "attest to the greatness of our nation."

Reagan spoke at the dedication of the Jimmy Carter Presidential Center, four circular buildings on a hilltop outside Atlanta housing the 39th president's library, a museum and scholarly research facilities.

"For myself, I can pay you no higher honor than to say simply this: You gave of yourself to your country, gracing the White House with your passion and intellect and commitment," Reagan told the man he drove from office with a 1980 landslide.

The library was dedicated on Carter's 62nd birthday. Before the speeches, he and his wife, Rosalynn, gave Reagan and his wife, Nancy, a private tour.

CARTER, WHO acted as master of ceremonies, delivered no formal speech, but handed over the deed to the library building to the U.S. archivist.

"Now, as you look across the lake, you see what the future holds for me and Rosalynn and many of you," Carter said.

"We appreciate the past, we are grateful for the present and we are looking forward to the future with great anticipation and commitment. I hope that our lives will never be a disappointment to you," Carter added.

Carter, appearing to enjoy the attention, told reporters hounding him and Reagan that "your questions make me very glad to be a former president."

In one of his few direct references to Carter's actions in the White House, Reagan reflected on the memories each president takes with him when he leaves office and said one of Carter's fondest must be the welcoming ceremony for "the hostages you did so much to free."

That praise contrasted sharply with Reagan's 1980 campaign rhetoric, when he blasted Carter's failure to win freedom for the Americans held captive 444 days in Iran. The hostages were freed moments after Reagan took the oath of office to succeed Carter.

Former President Jimmy Carter's granddaughter, Sarah, cuts the ribbon officially opening the Carter Presidential Library.

Strike hits East Coast ports

By United Press International

Thousands of longshoremen struck ports in eight Atlantic states Wednesday, clashing with non-union workers and forcing cruise line passengers to lug their own bags up and down gangways.

It was the first full-scale dock strike to hit East Coast ports in 15 years and involved a variety of regional pay cuts that shippers insist they need to cope with increasingly deregularized competition.

The strike hit Boston, Providence, R.I., New York City and nearby New Jersey ports, the Delaware River ports of Philadelphia, Camden, N.J., and Wilmington, Del., as well as Baltimore and Norfolk, Va.

In Newark's container port, pickets roughed up non-union truck drivers who tried to cross the line, breaking their windshields and dragging at least one driver from his cab, hurting his leg.

AT LEAST two Port Authority police received minor injuries as they helped drivers escape the strikers' wrath.

"It's a pretty rowdy scene out there," said Port Authority spokesman Allen Morrison.

"Police reinforcements have gone in and now we have plenty of cops on the scene and riot gear to prevent further violence."

The walkout began at midnight when the International Longshoremen's Association failed to reach agreement on a new master contract with the Council of North Atlantic Shipping Associations, which represents port employers of all the ports except those in the New York area and Boston.

In New York and Boston, longshoremen who were bargaining with their own shipping associations tentatively approved master contracts but rejected local contract offers.

At a Wednesday afternoon news conference in New York, the New York Shippers Association said it had made a proposal to extend the contract for its New York-area union members while local issues were being worked out, but the offer was rejected.

No talks were scheduled in any of the disputes.

Floods continue to threaten Midwest

United Press International

Floodwaters fed by heavy rain deluged the central part of the nation Wednesday, forcing thousands of Illinois residents to abandon their homes, threatening to burst a Wisconsin dam and sending water gushing through windows in Tahlequah, Okla.

"We're going to have the highest water we've had in history," said James Waters, a civil defense worker in Tahlequah, where the Illinois River was expected to crest at 24 to 25 feet, about 13 feet above flood stage.

Thunderstorms stretched from the Ohio Valley into the Southern Plains, pouring rain on areas already saturated by showers. Flooding also was reported in Iowa, Indiana, Michigan, Missouri, Montana and Ohio, spokesmen from the National Weather Service said.

FOUR DEATHS in Illinois, one in Indiana, one in Oklahoma and one in Montana were blamed on the flooding. Illinois was among the worst hit states with $30 million in flood damage reported. "If it stays up much longer, people won't have much to go home to," said Greg Durham, assistant director of Illinois Emergency Services and Disaster Agency.

In Oklahoma, floodwaters swollen by 15 inches of rain over two days swept one motorist to his death, sent water gushing through windows in downtown Tahlequah and covered Muskogee streets with 10 feet of water in places.

In northern Illinois, floodwaters engulfed more of Chicago's northwest suburbs where at least 2,200 families already have fled their homes since flooding began Sunday.

IN WESTFIELD, WIS., officials kept a constant watch on a 20-foot high dam on Lawrence Lake weakened by high waters from heavy rain but allowed about 300 evacuated residents to return home.

In northeastern Missouri, flooding closed a 23-mile stretch of Interstate 70. Between 75 and 100 secondary roads in the state have been closed by flooding.

Flooding has completely inundated this subdivision in Des Plaines, Ill. Gov. Jim Thompson has declared McHenry and portions of Cook County disaster areas.

Illinois seat belt law upheld by court

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (UPI) — The Supreme Court Wednesday upheld Illinois' mandatory seat belt law as constitutional, saying it does not violate the due process clauses of either the federal or state constitution.

"We believe that the General Assembly could reasonably assume that a law requiring drivers and front-seat passengers to wear safety belts will reduce traffic-related injuries and fatalities," the court said. The law, which took effect in July 1985, requires motorists and their front-seat passengers to buckle up or face a $25 fine.

The seat belt law was voided by four trial court judges in separate cases late last year and came to the Supreme Court on a direct appeal because of the constitutional questions involved.

The Supreme Court heard oral arguments in the case in June. Lawyers representing motorists who were ticketed under the law argued it violates a person's private right of choice and should be struck down.

THEY ALSO ARGUED that while seat belts may save lives, statistics also have shown that belts can help cause serious injuries.

But a lawyer for the state argued the law was little if any intrusion on individual rights and — even if it was — the state has an overriding interest to save lives.

Illinois was one of the first states to enact such a law. Currently 26 states and the District of Columbia require seat belt use.

Two of the court's seven justices — Justice Seymour Simon and Chief Justice William Clark — did not take part in case due to conflicts. Simon's son works for the law firm that represented the state. Clark was the state's attorney general when the high court dealt with the motorcycle helmet issue.

Trial ordered for accused Nazi guard

RAMLEH, Israel (UPI) — A judge Wednesday ordered retired U.S. autoworker John Demjanjuk be held for trial on charges of killing and torturing thousands of people in a Nazi concentration camp during World War II.

It will be the first Nazi war crimes trial in Israel since Adolf Eichmann, a top aide to Adolf Hitler, was prosecuted by the Jewish state in 1961 and hanged the next year.

Demjanjuk's trial, expected to last up to six months, probably will begin in December or January, Justice Ministry officials said. He faces the death penalty if convicted.

The Ukrainian-born Demjanjuk, 66, who emigrated to the United States in 1952, is accused of being a sadistic death-camp guard known as "Ivan the Terrible," who allegedly herded hundreds of thousands of Jews into the gas chambers at the Treblinka concentration camp in Nazi-occupied Poland.

JUDGE ZVI COHEN issued the order two days after Demjanjuk, 66, was indicted on war crimes charges. Cohen's order during a three-hour hearing at Ramleh Prison near Tel Aviv extended the detention of Demjanjuk until his case is finished. It was the seventh such hearing since the United States extradited him to Israel last Feb. 28.

Demjanjuk, a husky and balding former autoworker, entered a prison courtroom with his hands clasped together, then raised them and shouted: "Boker tov" — Hebrew for good morning.

Mark O'Connor, Demjanjuk's American attorney, argued that his client should be freed. He said Israel "has submitted no proof other than sheer unsubstantiated allegations that this man is the one who committed these base and despicable acts."

Demjanjuk was not present Monday when a Jerusalem court handed down the 24-page, four-count indictment accusing him of war crimes, crimes against humanity, crimes against the Jewish people and crimes against persecuted people.

John Demjanjuk smiles while being led away by Israeli police officers.

Chirac warns countries aiding terrorists

PARIS (UPI) — Prime Minister Jacques Chirac threatened retaliation Wednesday against countries judged guilty of helping terrorists responsible for the Paris bombing wave.

He said Middle Eastern countries were prime suspects but declined to name any individual nation, although Syria has been mentioned by other officials as possibly being involved.

"France will not change its policy," Chirac said in a speech in Vitteuil to conservative members of parliament. "It will not give in to blackmail and will sooner or later make those who attack France pay dearly."

Chirac threatened retaliation two weeks ago, once proof can be found, against those responsible for a wave of five bombings in Paris that killed 10 people and wounded more than 160 between Sept. 8 and Sept. 17.

SECURITY MINISTER Robert Pandraud warned Monday that senior officials believe "the worst is not behind us." All vacations for French police have been canceled for the next two weeks to help security at public events, such as the visit this weekend of Pope John Paul II.

Responsibility for the bombings has been claimed by two Arab groups, the Committee of Solidarity with Arab and Middle Eastern Political Prisoners and the Partisans of Right and Liberty.

They have threatened to strike again in their campaign to gain the freedom of three Middle Eastern convicts from a French prison, notably Georges Ibrahim Abdallah, presumed leader of the leftist Lebanese Armed Revolutionary Faction.

The government believes Abdallah's four brothers were involved in the bombings and has hinted it thinks Syria may have given them logistical support. Syria has denied involvement.

CHIRAC WARNED that once "sufficient proof" is found, countries judged responsible for helping the terrorists would face "political retaliation bearing serious economic consequences."

"We will not hesitate for a single moment to use these means ruthlessly," he said.

The prime minister called on French citizens to remain "vigilant" against the threat of terrorism, because "no one can say if the acts of terrorism are going to be continued or not."

Chirac said the police investigation points to Abdallah's group as responsible for the bombings with "internal or external links that are difficult to discern."

Hawk Junior sparks squad

By Steve Williams
Staff Writer

Iowa's women's volleyball team is off to its best start ever. The 10-2 Hawkeyes are gunning for a Big Ten championship and a trip to the NCAA tournament, both of which would be firsts for this squad.

One of the reasons for this newfound optimism which has been growing each week, is junior co-captain Ellen Mullarkey who has shown her leadership qualities off the court as well as on.

"Ellen has been a real competitor for us," Iowa Coach Sandy Stewart said. "She thrives on pressure situations and she gets the whole team excited with her play. She's much more of a leader than she was a year ago."

Mullarkey is clearly the leader in the team's statistical department, leading Iowa in aces (39), kills (129), block assists (48) and block solos (7). She is also second in hitting efficiency at .254 and third in digs with 113.

BUT WHILE SHE does lead Iowa numberwise, Stewart cited Mullarkey's ability to bring her teammates back into a contest when all seems lost.

"Last week, we had a very tough match with Minnesota," Stewart said, "and in the fourth game, when we needed somebody to turn to, Ellen was there. Everytime we gave her the ball, we knew it was going to be a winner."

"I like to be in situations

Junior co-captain Ellen Mullarkey, top, practices passing Wednesday at Iowa women's volleyball practice at Carver-Hawkeye Arena. Mullarkey leads the team in the statistical department with 39 aces, 129 kills, 48 block assists, and 7 block solos.

Volleyball

where I can get the rest of my teammates up playing well," Mullarkey said. "I just want to be on top of my game at all times, and playing the way I did against Minnesota really gave me confidence for the rest of the season."

Mullarkey graduated from Riverforest High School in Oak Park, Ill., where she was an all-stater in volleyball and basketball. During her senior year in basketball, she averaged 27 points per game. She also contributed to the 1983 AAU squad which finished second in the volleyball national championships as well.

"IN HIGH SCHOOL, I was a better at basketball than volleyball," Mullarkey admitted.

ted. "But I liked volleyball better and felt it was something I wanted to continue in college."

Mullarkey came to Iowa in 1984 where she has since made quite a name for herself. Last year, she was fourth in the Big Ten with 270 digs, and her total of 470 kills ranks her fifth on the all-time kill list for the Hawkeyes.

"Last season, I had to get used to playing a position I wasn't familiar with, that being the middle hitters spot," Mullarkey said. "Now I think I've made the adjustment and I want to prove it."

"Ellen's been put in a much different role for us this year," Stewart said of her newest co-captain. "But she knew what was expected of her and she has responded very well."

USFL asks judge to grant new trial

NEW YORK (UPI)—Citing the American public's interest in a clear verdict, the U.S. Football League Wednesday tried to convince a federal judge to grant it a new trial to re-examine the $1 award in its antitrust case against the NFL.

Judge Peter Leisure, who presided over the 12-week trial in U.S. District Court in Manhattan, said he hoped to issue a written decision by Thursday on the request for a new trial.

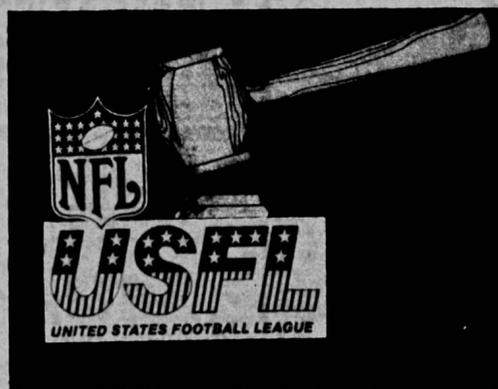

Leisure noted the USFL had a "heavy burden" to overturn the six jurors' finding on July 29 that the NFL had monopolized professional football but had caused the 4-year-old league only $1 in damages. The USFL had been seeking between $301 million and $565 million in damages.

After the verdict — which under antitrust law tripled to $3 — the financially strapped USFL suspended operations for this season. This fall was to have been the USFL's first head-to-head challenge to the NFL after three spring seasons.

"THE AMERICAN public is still sitting, waiting to understand what happened," said Harvey Myerson, the USFL's attorney, in his hour-long oral presentation. "The American public retains a continuing interest in this case."

"The jury did not understand what they were doing when they awarded $1 in damages. They understood — because of the way they answered the (verdict sheet) questions — that the NFL deliberately intended to injure the USFL."

Myerson, contending that competition has been reduced since the verdict, noted 135 former USFL players were now playing for NFL teams and another 35 were on injured-reserve lists for NFL teams. He added that those players and the former USFL coaches now with NFL teams could field four USFL teams.

United Press International

Myerson cited several statements made by jurors in interviews with reporters immediately following the verdict, which came after 31 hours of deliberations over five days, to support his contention that the jurors had confused the court's instructions on antitrust law.

HOWEVER, LEISURE made clear he believed Rule 606 (b) of the Federal Rules of Evidence would prevent him from considering the jurors' comments. To preserve the finality of jury decisions, the rule forbids the use of a juror's out-of-court statements as a basis for attacking the verdict.

Myerson argued the rule was never designed "sweep (juror confusion) under the rug."

Frank Rothman, co-counsel for the NFL, bristled at Myerson's implication that the NFL was "hiding" behind a legal technicality and said case decisions supporting 606 (b) "are legion."

Rothman said Leisure's lengthy instructions to the jury on the complexities of antitrust damages were "a model" and "letter-perfect."

The judge is also expected to rule on the NFL's motion to overturn the jury's finding that it monopolized pro football, but NFL sources said they did not expect the court to upset the verdict.

Although the jury's finding against the NFL spares it a large financial penalty, it leaves the door open for the USFL to seek reimbursement for its legal fees — estimated to exceed $5 million — as well as other relief.

The USFL has asked the court to invalidate one of more of the NFL's contracts with the television networks on the grounds that its existing arrangements with the three broadcast powers prevent competing leagues from getting nationwide exposure.

Rain may stop fall campaign

By Steve Williams

Here's a message for all those die-hard Iowa Hawkeye fans who don't get enough black and gold during the fall.

Iowa has begun its fall softball season for the first time since joining the Big Ten and, weather permitting, the Hawkeyes will host a tournament against Creighton, Drake and Northern Iowa this weekend at the Hawkeye Softball Complex.

Iowa finished with a 26-19 overall record last season, which included a 10-14 conference mark. But with the Hawkeyes losing only four players to graduation, Iowa Coach Ginny Parrish is full of optimism about the upcoming season.

"This is the first year that the Big Ten has allowed us any kind of fall competition," Parrish said. "With this, I think it will give us a chance to see how our recruits are shaping up, that is, if we get a chance to play."

GONE FROM LAST year's

Softball

team is all-conference second baseman Lisa Nicola, back-up catcher Alice Darland and pitchers Diane Roorda and Ann Coughenour. But even with such extreme losses in Iowa's pitching rotation, Parrish feels that her new recruits will more than pick up the slack.

"We have two excellent newcomers in Cris Barry and Pam Brown," Parrish said. "Barry was a junior college all-American from New York and Brown is a talented freshman from Illinois, so we feel we will have as much depth in the pitching department as we did last year."

One thing which might dampen the Hawkeye's pitching optimism will be the new rule moving the pitching rubber back three feet from a year ago. The idea behind the move is to generate more offense in otherwise low-scoring affairs.

However, with the rain coming down the way it has lately, Iowa's new pitchers have had little opportunity to check out this new standard, other than during indoor practices, something Parrish has said just isn't going to be enough.

"THERE'S NO substitute for outdoor practices," Parrish said. "We can throw inside all we want, but if we don't get outside and throw under some game type situations, we just aren't going to get any better."

As if there weren't enough things holding Iowa back, the Big Ten has decreed that games may only be scheduled during weekends when there isn't a home football game. Also, the Hawkeyes are not allowed to travel off campus to play their games, leaving few scheduling options.

"If we don't get this tournament in this weekend, we won't play it at all," Parrish said. "This is really an all or nothing proposition, but it is more than we were given last year, so we really don't lose anything if we don't get any games in."

Big Ten coaches support round-robin format

By Robert Mann
Staff Writer

The Big Ten football conference starts its 91st season this week, and once again the conference will play one game short of a round-robin schedule — which disappoints some of the league's coaches.

During their weekly teleconference, many of the coaches spoke out in favor of a schedule that would include every team in the conference. The coaches most in favor of such a plan are those who have been quite successful in the conference in recent years.

Ohio State Coach Earle Bruce has taken the Buckeyes to the Rose Bowl twice in the past seven years, and his team may have had a shot at it in 1981 when they tied for the conference championship with Iowa.

The Hawkeyes went to the Rose Bowl because of the selection process, which favored Iowa since the two teams did not play each other during the year and a longer time had elapsed since the Hawkeyes last attended the Rose Bowl.

"I'VE ALWAYS been in favor of it," Bruce said. "We were hurt a couple of years ago when we just played eight league games. They went to the Rose Bowl, and we did not play Iowa that year."

Even though the selection process may have favored Iowa in 1981, Hawkeye Coach Hayden Fry would still like to see a full conference schedule.

"I'd prefer playing all the teams in the Big Ten in order to have a true champion," Fry said. "If that cannot be worked out, I'd prefer to go the route that has been successful with the Southeast Conference, maybe just playing six or seven of the teams. I don't think the idea of playing eight is good at all."

Wisconsin Coach Jim Hilles favors the round-robin for much the same reason that Bruce does — losing out on the opportunity to go to the 1981

Rose Bowl.

"WISCONSIN HAD played all nine members of the Big Ten for a stretch through the early 80s," Hilles said. "The only thing that upset me about that was that it was our understanding that everyone was going to play a round-robin schedule. As we got into that, we found that everyone wasn't."

"There was one year in particular, 1981, that we had a chance to go to the Rose Bowl. We had played one more conference game than the Iowa had played, but of course Iowa beat us here, and they ended up going to the Rose Bowl. I like to think that we might have had a little better chance had everyone played a round-robin," Hilles said.

Michigan Coach Bo Schembechler, whose team is annually in the race for the league title, also favors the round-robin format.

"I always have felt that the most important games are those played in the conference," Schembechler said. "If you're going to play in a conference like this, then a conference championship is what you play for."

"I DON'T THINK we ought to worry about non-conference games. If we have two of them, then that's enough. What we want is a true champion, and a true champion plays every other team in the league."

NCAA Commission refuses to limit collegiate spending

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (UPI) — The NCAA Presidents Commission heard a report Wednesday that college sports were "exceedingly" expensive, but refused to support any measure to limit spending.

The commission met this week to hear financial issues and academic requirements, and also heard a report from a committee of the American Council on Education.

But with the deadline for proposed legislation just a month away, the commission said it would wait before submitting cost-restrictive measures to the full NCAA convention.

"These represent a rather significant package that need to be brought together and thought through quite carefully," Commission Chairman John B. Slaughter said. "With the very short time between now and the first of November, we realized it would not be in the best interest of intercollegiate athletics to try to ramrod something into shape that could be brought before the convention in a very short time."

Teams admit ticket misuse

United Press International

Michigan State and Indiana said Wednesday they have voluntarily informed the NCAA of illegal use of complimentary football tickets intended for the families of players.

Complimentary game passes for 16 Indiana University football players will be suspended for the rest of this season because of the violations.

There were 84 violations in all at Indiana, including some that will cost 10 other players some of their passes. The names of the players involved were not disclosed.

Athletes are given four complimentary tickets for each home game, but NCAA rules state they may only be used by a player's relatives or a student at the same school. The rule was recently changed to allow use by any student at a four-year college.

MANY OF THE violations involved a player letting a girlfriend, who was not an Indiana University student, use the tickets.

Coach Bill Mallory said he knew of the rule but did not consider the violations a big deal.

"Other students will be out there scalping them," Mallory said. "If they (players) can pick up a few extra bucks, I don't see anything wrong with that."

Peay agreed with Gutekunst and Mallory, saying that increasing the number of non-conference opponents would give each school more national exposure.

But one coach out of the ten says he does not care one way or the other.

"I don't really care," Michigan State Coach George Perles said. "Whatever the presidents and athletic directors decide — just let me who we're supposed to play, and we'll go out and do that."

"I have promised myself a long time ago that we'll leave that stuff up to the administrators. I don't care as long as it's fair."

Big Ten

When the conference played a round-robin schedule in 1983, the Fighting Illini went undefeated in the Big Ten and advanced to the Rose Bowl. Illinois Coach Mike White would like the conference teams to return to playing each other.

"I've always favored a round-robin," White said. "I was extremely disappointed when they gave up the round-robin, because there are always a lot of 'what ifs?' I think we ought to play everybody, and play a couple of good teams prior to that. Your fans deserve it."

There were, however, some coaches who would prefer more freedom in scheduling opponents.

Cavs land top pick Daugherty

RICHFIELD, Ohio (UPI) — Brad Daugherty, the No. 1 pick in the NBA draft, Wednesday signed with the Cleveland Cavaliers.

The 7-foot center-forward from North Carolina signed a six-year pact worth $6 million, the largest contract in the team's history.

Daugherty, 20, will receive $500,000 a year at the start of the contract, but that amount will increase to $1.5 million by the end of the six years. There is no signing bonus but the agreement does include incentive clauses.

"The whole situation of money and signing and whatnot was not that important to me," Daugherty said. "I just wanted to be able to get into training camp and get a good start."

"I'm not a very materialistic person. The idea of monetary value does not occupy an important part in my thinking. I just want to establish myself and try to become a great professional athlete."

THE START OF THE Richfield Coliseum news conference was delayed 55 minutes by what Cavaliers Vice President and General Manager

Wayne Embry termed "the need to make sure every 'i' is dotted and 't' is crossed."

"He will be a very important player for the Cavaliers," Embry said. "We've followed him since his freshman year at North Carolina. He has matured as a man as well, and he's the type we want to build this franchise around."

Coach Lenny Wilkens, who opens his first training camp

"I'm not a very materialistic person," Cleveland Cavaliers rookie Brad Daugherty says. "The idea of monetary value does not occupy an important part in my thinking. I just want to establish myself."

with the team Friday, said Daugherty probably will play center and forward.

"Basically, we have to see what Brad and everybody else can do," Wilkens said. "We know he's worked on improving his upper body strength this summer, and he does look stronger."

"His work ethic will be an inspiration to the rest of the team and his reporting on time means he can grow as the team grows."

THE TOP PICK used to select Daugherty was obtained from Philadelphia on the morning of the June 17 draft. The 76ers received forward Roy Hinson and future considerations.

Daugherty, of Black Mountain, N.C., averaged 14.2 points and 7.4 rebounds over 135 games with the Tar Heels. He averaged 20.2 points a game last season, second in the Atlantic Coast Conference to the late Len Bias of Maryland.

The Cavaliers are far from an agreement with swingman Ron Harper of Miami (Ohio), the eighth player taken in the draft. He is believed to be seeking a four-year pact worth $2 million. It was learned the team has offered $1.25 million.

Negotiations with second-round pick Mark Price of Georgia Tech are reportedly at a standstill.

In other NBA news, Los Angeles Lakers center Kareem Abdul-Jabbar, at 39 the NBA's oldest player and leading scorer, is close to signing a contract extension for the 1987-88 season.

Shula, Alabama too tough; Holtz's Irish will lose again

United Press International

Alabama (minus 6) over Notre Dame — The Irish gave Lou Holtz his first victory at Notre Dame last week against Purdue and freshman quarterback Jeff George. In its opening two losses to Michigan and Michigan State, Notre Dame was hurt by the passing of Jim Harbaugh and Dave Yarema. Alabama's Mike Shula should also be able to take to the air, especially with the strong running of Gene Jelks. The Tide defense has been powerful with linebacker Cornelius Bennett, who is getting over a hamstring injury. The Irish have played well but the momentum generated by Holtz's arrival starts to wear off this week.

Brewers name new skipper

MILWAUKEE (UPI) — Tom Trebelhorn, who this year was to have managed in the rookie league in Montana, Wednesday was named manager of the Milwaukee Brewers for next season.

Trebelhorn, 38, was appointed interim manager last Friday, one day after the retirement of George Bamberger. Financial terms of the one-year contract were not disclosed.

"I can't even place in words the feeling I have," Trebelhorn said. "The excitement that is running through me at this time, to be entrusted with the responsibility of running this club and the excitement that goes along with that, well, it makes me speechless."

Trebelhorn had been scheduled to be the Brewers' minor-league hitting instructor and manager of the rookie team at Helena (Mont.) of the Pioneer League.

HE JOINED THE Brewers in spring training when third-base coach Tony Muser was hospitalized following a natural gas explosion at the club's training facility in Chandler, Ariz. He served as the third-base coach until being appointed interim manager.

"He's done extremely well," General Manager Harry Dalton said. "Not only in the nine-inning performance, but in the preparation. As a player contact, the determination to let players know what to expect and where they stand. All that's been very, very impressive."

Dalton said Trebelhorn was selected from a list of about 20 candidates. He did not name the others, although former Cub Manager Jim Frey had been prominently mentioned.

The Brewers, who were 70-81 under Bamberger, responded with three victories in four games under Trebelhorn.

"I tried to show players that this is the way I am," Trebelhorn said. "If you don't like the way I am, you better run upstairs quick and tell Mr. Dalton that this guy is not the answer... so that we don't fool anybody, that there's no tricks."

"I'm not going to try and be somebody now and get the job and completely change and be somebody different next year."

Astros, Mets recall early days

NEW YORK (UPI) — After spending most of their first 25 seasons in the second division, it seems fitting that the New York Mets and the Houston Astros celebrate their silver anniversaries at the top of the class.

When the Mets and Astros open their best-of-seven National League Championship Series Wednesday, it will mark only the second post-season meeting between two expansion franchises. In 1982, the California Angels and the Milwaukee Brewers met in the American League playoffs.

This season, the National League East champion Mets, who have posted only 10 winning seasons in their history, will be the winningest team in the majors. The Astros, a winning club in 12 of their 25 seasons, could compile their best record ever.

Both teams have come a long way since 1962. The Mets went 40-120 that year, the worst record in modern major-league history. The Astros, originally known as the Colt .45s, finished in eighth place in the 10-team league with a 64-93 record.

THE METS, who played in the Polo Grounds and were managed by Casey Stengel in 1962, were a laughingstock. The team was composed of aging veterans such as Frank Thomas, Richie Ashburn and the infamous "Marvelous Marv" Throneberry.

Arthur Richman, who has been with the Mets since 1965 and is currently a special assistant to General Manager Frank Cashen, remembered New York's early years.

"The first year was like a joke," Richman, who at the time was a sports writer for the New York Mirror, said. "It was never a joke to the players, because you never like to lose. But they didn't have much to work with. There were probably a lot of guys on the club who didn't belong in the major leagues. But they were trying to do their best."

The Mets lost their first nine games in 1962 and endured a 17-game losing streak that lasted into early June. The Mets, who were no-hit by Sandy Koufax that year, were so bad people pitied them and

The New York Mets and Houston Astros, who meet in the National League Playoffs next week, have each been in existence for 25 years. In that time neither franchise has produced a World Series they attracted a cult of followers.

"THE PEOPLE in '62 and '63 were without National League baseball since 1957 (when the Giants and Dodgers moved to California)," Richman said. "They were hungry for a National League team. New York has always been a National League town and they were glad just to see National League baseball back in New York. They backed us tremendously. People grew up as kids following the Mets."

The Colt .45s, meanwhile, were managed by Harry Craft and played their home games at Buff Stadium, a minor league park.

"We had a lot of fun that first season," Bob Lillis, an original Colt .45 and a coach with the San Francisco Giants, said. "It was a new club and when we swept the Cubs in our first series, we thought we were really going places. We did manage to beat out two teams that year, the Cubs and the Mets."

After playing in the Polo Grounds two seasons, the Mets moved into Shea Stadium in 1964. Shea was located across the street from the World's Fair site and the Mets drew more than 1.7 million fans.

HOUSTON GAINED a new home in 1965. The Houston Astrodome opened and the Astros revolutionized baseball when they became the first club to play indoors and on artificial grass.

The Astrodome originally had real grass and a translucent roof. The dome was soon Painted, however, because the glare of the sun made it impossible for players to follow fly balls. That solution only led to another problem. Without sunlight, the grass inside the stadium died. So Houston struck a deal with the Monsanto Co., and "Astroturf" was installed in the dome.

New stadiums, however, did little to alter the fortunes of either team. The Mets finished in either ninth or 10th place their first seven seasons. The Astros' highest placing during that period was eighth.

"THE MANAGEMENT decided to go with young players and build from that," Lillis said of the Astros. "They were confident they would get us there and we felt we had a chance but there were all sorts of tragedies and injuries."

Fenway Park: A fan's delight

BOSTON (UPI) — Famous for its Green Monster and fabled by its rich history, 75-year-old Fenway Park is best loved by Red Sox fans for its cozy quarters, earning it the fond nickname of "Friendly Fenway."

"What I love is how small it is for the spectator," Steve Wax, who recently moved back to Boston from Houston, said. "It's the friendly confines of Fenway that's so great. And the hot dogs aren't bad either."

Fenway Park, site of the first two games of the American League Championship Series between Boston and California (also Games 6 and 7, if necessary), seats just 33,583 and is used for baseball only.

Built in 1912 in Boston's Fenway section, the ballpark is surrounded by colleges, museums and the bustle of city sidewalks. Fans walking from the nearby subway stop are greeted by the chants of street vendors and the pungent aroma of grilling sausages.

SPECTATORS SEEKING a modern oval stadium surrounded by acres of parking

"What I love is how small it is for the spectator," Red Sox fan Steve Wax, who recently moved back to Boston from Houston, says of Fenway Park, which has been in existence since 1912. "It's the friendly confines of Fenway that's so great. And the hot dogs aren't bad either."

lots are advised to look elsewhere. Fans are seated close to the natural-grass playing field, and even Fenway's so-called "sky boxes" are located at the mezzanine level of most stadiums.

"There's a thrill coming here because everybody here is friendly," said a woman named Donna, enjoying last weekend's division-clinching game against the Toronto Blue Jays. "There's a family feeling here. Everybody talks to you. You don't feel you're by yourself."

The ballpark measures 420-feet to deepest centerfield and 302-feet at the right field foul pole. But right field is just a passing thought to the Fenway Faithful.

"I like the Green Monster," Steve Kelly, 17, said. "Anything can happen off the wall. It's the strangest shape of a ballpark, which makes it more interesting."

Topped in 1936 by a 23-foot net to keep home runs from breaking windows across Lansdowne Street, the wall has been backdrop over the decades for star Red Sox left fielders Ted Williams, Carl Yastrzemski ("Yaz") and Jim Rice, all experts at playing the Monster's wild and crazy bounces.

In postseason action, perhaps the most famous play was Boston catcher Carlton Fisk's game-winning 12th-inning home run in Game 6 of the 1975 World Series, which struck the foul pole atop the Green Monster.

Fenway was also host to the memorable 10th inning muff of an easy fly ball by Fred Snodgrass in Game 7 of the 1912 World Series, leading to a 3-2 Boston victory over the New York Giants and legendary pitcher Christy Mathewson.

"It's exciting here because it's so historical," young Mark Lozzi, whose personal history spans all of 12 years, said. "There's been so many great players — Ted Williams, Jimmy Foxx, Yaz. Everybody loves it at Fenway and everybody has a good time."

Sci-fi aficionados active in Iowa City

By B. Gordon
Staff Writer

ASK LOCAL science fiction fans what they think about their literary passion, and it's like popping the synth-cork on a bottle of Saurian brandy.

"Actually, I think of it as speculative fiction," said Les Roth, president of the Science Fiction League of Iowa Students. "It's fiction about things that could be but aren't necessarily now."

The group's main activity is the organizing of the only annual Iowa science fiction convention, otherwise known as ICON. "If nothing else, we help people not be scared of science fiction," said Roth.

"Normal procedure at meetings is to ask if anyone has any business, and everybody yells, 'Hell no!'" said Roth.

"Then we go out to dinner," said Laura Majerus, the group's secretary. "We always go out to dinner."

FOR THE MOST PART, the members of SFLIS are part-time UI students or former students who have settled in Iowa. "Most people here have been reading science fiction their whole life," said Majerus. "If you took a poll everyone could remember their first science fiction book."

Meetings, usually held on Wednesday nights at The Mill Restaurant, 120 E. Burlington St., are as much gossipy get-togethers as formally structured sessions. At one meeting, Roth told the group about a preview he had seen at the World SF convention in Atlanta of a soon-to-be-released movie involving a "cute little cuddly robot which gets blown away in the first 15 minutes." There was general applause.

There was also big surprise for Blade Runner fans: Harrison Ford's character, according to a former publicist for Universal Studios, was actually the sixth replicant. Some may remember that Ford played a freelance hunter of the androids. Edited portions of the movie hinting at this were shown at the convention.

WITH THE announcement of a weekend BYOB party for the membership featuring Duck's Breath "Ask Dr. Science" videos, the meeting began to disintegrate. Some members were discussing science fiction's "bum rep."

"In order for society to run smoothly, everybody has to be on the path," said Joan Zimmerman, a physical therapy student at Coe College. "And if you don't go down the path, you're outside society."

"Contrary to popular belief, we're not all 'techies,'" Zimmerman said. "I hate math with passion, but I will read like there's no tomorrow."

"I love to read about other cultures," she continued. "I find it fascinating that a writer can come up with a viable social structure. There's something in science fiction for everyone: psychology, economics, biology."

"ALSO, IT makes world affairs not seem so — so, 'oh my God,'" she said. "In 200 years it's not going to make a bit of difference about (Libyan leader Moammar) Gadhafi."

"People who like science fiction are people who have a tolerance for diversity of ideas," said Jim Hess, local technician and businessman. "Most people don't think that way."

Sharon "Hank" Stubbs, who works for the Iowa City Press-Citizen, recalled, "We all came to conventions because we wanted to see what other SF fans looked like."

"We know that people at science fiction (conventions) tend to be above average intelligence, and with the same wide breadth of interest," said John Stately, a UI law student. "Everything they talk about at Mensa (an organization which gives an IQ test to prospective members), we talk about at SF conventions. We just do it without the pretentiousness."

SFLIS' FOUNDER and permanent feature of ICON is Joe Haldeman, whose books include Forever War and the recent Dealing in Futures. Haldeman is a UI Writers' Workshop alumnus and former teacher. According to Roth, ICON attracts an average membership of 250 to 300 from Iowa and surrounding states. This year will mark the 11th anniversary of the convention.

"Only science fiction people still have the childlike sense of wonder," said Zimmerman. "We're the ones who look at the night sky and say, 'Gosh, wow, when can I go up?'"

'Company' accommodates Beckett fans

By Hoyt Olsen
Staff Writer

MABOU MINES' production of Samuel Beckett's Company is a rare delicacy. A comparison with such culinary delicacies as escargot, caviar and pate de foie gras is appropriate: For the sophisticated palate of an avid connoisseur, each is a delectable taste treat.

But to those with unrefined taste buds, that stuff is snails, fish eggs and goose liver paste; when average blokes encounter such fare, it sends them screaming into the night in the general direction of McDonalds.

Hal Holbrook doing Mark Twain is the McDonalds of the one-person theatrical impersonation; Holbrook's perennial entertainment is viewer-friendly fare designed for the broadest popular taste. On the other hand, Frederick Neumann's interpretation of Samuel Beckett is best suited for a select audience well-versed in Beckett's work.

Frederick Neumann in Company

ary to confine human potential.

Frederick Neumann's performance is terrific, despite the difficulties of holding audience attention during a play that is all one long, difficult, philosophical interior monologue. Neumann seldom permits a lapse in attention. His commanding voice and strong, natural mannerisms reveal reflections of his considerable experience.

Props are fairly minimal. The most striking are three large disks at stage rear, which serve in part as a reflection of the character's complexity, each holding different, shifting variations of his shadow.

The intelligence and complexity of Company at once invites and prevents interpretation. It is a production that will leave some viewers raving about its merits, but others merely raving.

Mabou Mines has won 16 Obie (Off-Broadway) awards in its 17-year existence; Company shows both why the awards were merited and why the innovative performance group belongs away from the box-office priorities of Broadway. It is a delicacy but definitely not for common consumption.

Company will be performed nightly at Mabie Theatre through Oct. 4. Mabou Mines will also present Cold Harbor Oct. 3-4 at Hancher Auditorium.

Theater

the author's life but with his state of mind.

The central image of the play (adapted from Beckett's original by Neumann and his co-director, Honora Fergusson) is of a man (presumably Beckett himself) lying on his back in the dark trying to decipher the nature of his existence. This act involves some use of memory, such as a memory of trying to imitate his father's chuckle and his father continuing to chuckle for the delight of hearing his son's imitation. More frequently, though, the man is involved in imaginatively trying to interpret his own reality; he becomes "the devisor of himself, as if for company." The repeated imagining of devices that may provide "company" accentuates Beckett's familiar image of an individual who craves contact but finds only new forms of isolation.

EVENTUALLY the man tries to crawl to a new starting point. But after making some progress, he retreats from each new direction — not because he encounters an obstacle or dead end, but because he has failed to do so. The very openness of existence, Beckett seems to suggest, becomes another bound-
