Reagan arrives ready to break summit ice

REYKJAVIK, Iceland (UPI)— President Ronald Reagan arrived in rainy Iceland Thursday, promising frank talk without guarantee of success on arms control and other issues during his weekend rendezvous with Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev.

Reagan arrived at the Keflavik NATO base, 40 miles outside the capital, and made no comments as he was greeted by leaders of the island nation. Reagan will meet with Gorbachev Saturday and Sunday in a bid to continue what he called "the successes" of their earlier meeting in Geneva.

"We go to Reykjavik for peace," Reagan declared as he left the White House for Andrews Air Force Base.

"Today, we are making history," he said, "and we are turning the tide of history to peace and freedom and hope."

The pre-summit summit — described by Reagan simply as "essentially a private meeting between the two of us" — was arranged in haste during the past nine days.

CAUTIONING AGAINST raised expectations, Reagan said he and Gorbachev "will not have large staffs with us" and do not expect to "sign substantive agreements." Rather, he said, the objective will be to review the full scope of superpower relations and "face the tough issues directly and honestly" with an eye on "redoubled effort afterwards" to schedule a full-scale summit this year.

"We cannot pretend that differences aren't there, seek to dash off a few quick agreements and then give speeches about the spirit of Reykjavik," Reagan said. "In fact, we have serious problems with the Soviet positions on a great many issues and success is not guaranteed. But if Mr. Gorbachev comes to Iceland in a truly cooperative spirit, I think we can make some progress."

IN ADDITION TO the formidable test he faced in his talks with Gorbachev, Reagan left for Iceland dogged by political troubles at home that he addressed with a renewed plea for "unified national support" to strengthen his hand in Reykjavik. He accused House Democrats Wednesday of "playing politics" and "jeopardizing the success of our Icelandic talks" by voting for restrictions on his arms policies.

Iowa City schools see more students

By Jay Dutton
Staff Writer

With an incoming wave of elementary students this year, enrollment in Iowa City public schools is the largest it has been in eight years, according to Superintendent of schools David Cronin.

"It's an echo of the baby boom," Cronin said. He said the increase in elementary students will make up for falling numbers at the high school level.

"It's a good position to be in since funding is on a per person basis," school board member Ellen Widiss said. "The more people we have, the more flexibility we have in funding."

Projections released by school officials this week estimated enrollment will peak at 8,239 students this year, up 65 students from last school year. Widiss said the figures are based on "very accurate" surveys conducted by the Iowa Department of Public Instruction and the school district.

THE PROJECTED decline in high school students this year won't make much difference at Iowa City High School, Principal Howard Vernon said.

Although Vernon said he doesn't expect the school's crowded conditions to ease significantly, he said a declining enrollment will affect other areas. Books, teachers and class selections are all subject to enrollment changes, he said.

Cronin said he is not surprised by the rise in enrollment. "We went through a period of enrollment decline. It bottomed out (in the 1983-84 school year), and now we're returning to a period of increase," he said.

Cronin attributed this increase to a combination of reasons.

"It appears that fewer people are leaving the community, and more people are moving in with older children," Cronin said. "The strong economy of Johnson County, as opposed to other counties in the state, also plays a role."

CRONIN SAID while enrollment should remain relatively stable in the near future, the percentage of minority students in the district will continue to increase.

According to school district records, the proportion of minority students enrolled in Iowa City schools has risen from 8.9 percent last year to 9.1 percent this year. In 1976, the proportion was 4.3 percent.

Cronin said the UI plays a "big factor" in this increase with its "concerted effort to attract foreign students." He said the value of the American dollar also provides an opportunity "for people who wouldn't have had the chance before" to come to Iowa City.

Widiss connects much of the increase with foreign UI graduate students with children. It's a positive increase, she said.

"I see a minority trend that is growing and growing at a moderate rate," Widiss said. "It's a good thing for the community as a multicultural aspect."

Spencer Sundell voices his discontent with the CIA during a chant in front of Westlawn Thursday afternoon. About 75 protesters turned out to urge the UI to keep CIA recruiters off campus.

Protesters rip CIA tactics through anti-interview rally

By Joseph Levy
Staff Writer

More than 300 protesters kicked up their heels in a demonstration on the Pentacrest Thursday afternoon, slamming the UI for playing host to CIA recruiters in their search for students to undertake careers of "rape, torture and murder."

"I see the University of Iowa acting much like German universities did under Nazi rule," New Wave activist Bruce Nestor told the crowd.

"Any such policy which allows any agency with legitimate career opportunities to recruit here would surely have allowed the Gestapo to recruit here in the 1940s," he said.

Nestor said the size of the rally — 20 to 25 times greater than he expected — would send a message to the UI and the CIA that students here will not tolerate such recruiting.

AFTER THE demonstration on the Pentacrest lawn, a "mock execution" was held on Jessup Hall first floor in front of UI President James O. Freedman's office.

With chants of "Hey, hey, CIA, how many babies did you kill today?" and "The people united will never be defeated" ringing out, two protesters with toy guns

"I think that we showed them what we wanted to," says protester Stacy deCarion of the rally condemning CIA recruitment on campus.

dressed as President Ronald Reagan "shot" the rest of the group dead.

Following the mock execution, about 75 of the protesters marched to Westlawn. There they were greeted by UI Campus Security officers who had blocked access to parts of the building, where the CIA interviews took place uninterrupted.

At the end of the demonstration, the group gave Campus Security officers a large scroll with anti-CIA messages to be given to the recruiters.

THE SCROLL WAS the only contact the group had with the recruiters, but a man whom the protesters identified as a CIA recruiter watched the demonstration calmly from a second story window at Westlawn.

Protester Steve Publoski explained the UI has not been sympathetic to his cause.

"They're just trying to make us mad," he said. "We just want to keep the university from giving the CIA any special privileges for being here."

UI freshman Stacy deCarion was also satisfied with the protest.

"I think that we showed them what we wanted to," deCarion said. "They'll be back and we'll just be back again."

BUT SOME PEOPLE weren't sympathetic to the cause.

"The CIA has the right to interview anybody they want to in the United States," UI junior Eric Klein said.

"If a student has the opportunity to interview and get a job with the CIA, then more power to him," he added.

UI sophomore Ray Bianchi, who attended the rally as "a good American," questioned the views of the protesters.

Carrying signs saying "I love the CIA" and "Go home commies," Bianchi upheld the CIA. "I'll take the chance of America staying a safe country," he said.

U.S. Senate impeaches Claiborne

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Senate found jailed Judge Harry Claiborne guilty of "high crimes and misdemeanors" for tax cheating Thursday and threw him off the bench — only the fifth time in U.S. history a federal officer has been impeached and removed from office.

Convening as an impeachment court for the first time in half a century, the Senate convicted Claiborne of three of the four articles of impeachment — similar to indictments — approved by a unanimous House in July.

Lawmakers began impeachment procedures against Claiborne in July after he would not quit his post or give up his $78,700 annual salary despite his conviction and two-year prison term.

Claiborne, 69, who listened in silence to the historic vote, scribbled a statement on a piece of paper after his conviction.

"A part of me died here today, not because of defeat but because everything I believe in was assaulted beyond repair," wrote the Nevada judge, who was brought from a federal prison in Alabama to ask senators to save his job and the salary he has continued to collect while behind bars.

EACH OF THE three articles on which Claiborne was convicted was approved by overwhelming majorities, easily surpassing the two-thirds votes required by the Constitution in the rare Senate procedure.

"We did what we had to do. ... Even the judiciary is not above the law," said Rep. Peter Rodino, D-N.J., chairman of the House Judiciary Committee and head of the nine-member House panel that acted as prosecution in the impeachment trial.

Harry Claiborne

Under special rules used in the trial, Sen. Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., acting as the presiding officer in the absence of Vice President George Bush, instructed senators to stand behind their desks when their names were called and vote either "guilty" or "not guilty."

The Senate was eerily silent during the votes, a sharp contrast to the usual din in the bustling forum.

After the four votes were completed, Thurmond read an order formally stripping Claiborne of his judicial post.

"The Senate, having tried Harry E. Claiborne, United States district judge for the District of Nevada, upon four articles of impeachment exhibited against him by the House of Representatives, and two-thirds of the senators present having found him guilty of charges contained in the first, second and fourth articles of impeachment: It is therefore ordered and adjudged that the said Harry E. Claiborne be, and he is hereby, removed from office," Thurmond read.

Weather

You know a weekend is coming when the forecast calls for steadily deteriorating conditions. Look for partly sunny skies today with a high of 55 to 60. So far, so good, right? But tonight the clouds should roll in and the chance of rain will increase. By Saturday, gloom should prevail — the forecast says cloudy skies and rain are likely. Bah.

Herky gets company in corn caper

The Corn Monument stalkers returned to the scene Wednesday night to finish the job of destroying an Iowa Homecoming tradition.

Tuesday night, Herky the Hawk was taken off his perch on the 4-foot tall creation. Now Bucky the Badger, "of" and "I" are also missing in what has become The Great Corn Caper.

UI Campus Security officers are investigating the case and their reports seem to indicate Bucky's captor had a case of the midnight popcorn munchies. At 11:49 p.m. Wednesday, officers apprehended a male subject carrying Bucky off the Pentacrest, according to a report.

Nothing more is known about the whereabouts of Herky and "I," but a source reported that "of" is being held hostage in a campus apartment without food or water.

Correction

The Daily Iowan will correct unfair or inaccurate stories or headlines. If a report is wrong or misleading, call the DI at 353-6210. A correction or clarification will be published in this column.

In a story called "Pool project nearly goes down drain" (DI, Oct. 7), it was incorrectly reported that Iowa City School Board President Randall Jordison said negotiations on lifeguards for a new city pool were continuing between the Iowa City Community School District and the City of Iowa City. Jordison actually said the matter was settled and that the district would not be involved in hiring or paying for lifeguards.

In a story called "Construction crews working quickly to end frustrations" (DI, Sept. 23), Mike Watson was mistakenly identified. He is the supervisor of the Burlington Street bridge project.

The DI regrets the errors.

Homecoming spirit still high despite low rally turnout

By Shawn Plank
Special to The Daily Iowan

About 150 spirited UI students, cheerleaders and alumni wound their way from the Pentacrest to Kinnick Stadium Thursday evening as part of the Homecoming '86 spirit march.

Although the rally wasn't as successful as organizers hoped, it attracted more people than last year's rain-plagued rally, Suse Daniels, director of Homecoming '85, said.

But event organizers fell short of their goal of breaking a pep rally attendance record set in 1938. The Homecoming rally attracted 14,000 people that year, director of Homecoming '86 Audrey Finkle said.

Daniels, a 1986 UI graduate who came back to Iowa City for the festivities, said that about 50 or 60 people showed up for last year's march. However, she said she is confident the event will one day be as successful as it was almost 50 years ago.

"This is the second annual spirit march," she said. "As people become more familiar with it, I'm sure one day we'll have the numbers to cheer on the Hawkeyes."

ONE MEMBER OF the Homecoming committee, who asked not to be identified, said one of the reasons for the low turnout at the rally was the lack of advertising given to the event.

After the marchers reached the darkened Kinnick Stadium, the UI pompon squad and cheerleaders performed routines. Hawkeye quarterback Marc Vlasic and Assistant Coach Jay Norvell gave brief pep talks.

Homecoming king and queen, Cary Anderson and Jennifer Coyne, were also introduced, along with the six other members of the Homecoming court. UI sophomore Curtis Comer said he planned to attend the rally to avoid homework.

"It was either study or come here," he said.

DWIGHT ARMSTRONG, a resident of Coralville who attended the UI from 1966 to 1968, said he wasn't used to such a low turnout at UI pep rallies.

"I went to school when the team wasn't very good," he said. "But we had more people at the pep rallies."

Festivities continue tonight with the Homecoming parade scheduled to begin at 6:15.

More than 80 floats will be in the parade, Finkel said.

The Hawkeye Marching Band and the Homecoming court will also participate in the parade. Members of the court will ride in convertibles, she added.

The parade route will primarily follow Clinton Street between Washington and Bloomington streets.

A state employee charged with two counts of falsifying public records was sentenced to three years probation in Johnson County District Court Thursday.

Dennis Read Flatley, 50, Cedar Rapids, an Iowa Medical and Classification Center employee, was charged April 7 with changing his written and computerized time record to give himself more than 150 unearned vacation hours.

An Iowa City man arrested for attempting to break into an Iowa City residence made his initial appearance in Johnson County District Court Thursday.

Bryan W. Horrell, 19, 1916 Waterfront Dr., was charged Thursday with second-degree attempted burglary, fourth-degree theft and public intoxication.

Court records state Horrell allegedly escaped from Hope House and attempted to break into an apartment. Horrell was arrested after police reportedly observed him carrying a ladder.

Horrell is being held in lieu of $11,000 bond in Johnson County Jail. His preliminary hearing is scheduled for Oct. 17.

An Iowa City man who allegedly wrote a $198 check on a closed bank account made his initial appearance in Johnson County District Court Thursday.

Robert Harrison Goodspeed, 49, 245 Amhurst St., was charged with third-degree theft after he allegedly paid for a plane ticket with a bad check written to Meacham Travel Service in August.

Goodspeed's preliminary hearing is scheduled for Oct. 24.

UI student fills tough role of Johnson County planner

By James Cahoy
Staff Writer

When former Johnson County Planner Judd TePaske resigned this summer, he left behind personality clashes and controversy over his position. But with the recent appointment of UI graduate student JoAnn Lilledahl, county supervisors believe some of the problems may be solved. Lilledahl, a second-year student in the UI master's program in urban planning, was appointed Sept. 2. Supervisors say that, so far, they're happy with their decision to hire the 26-year-old.

The position of county planner was in the spotlight this summer when TePaske left his job of 10 years for a higher-paying position in Memphis, Tenn.

WHEN HE LEFT, TePaske said his position was not as effective as it could be. He attributed this to the supervisors' willingness to make "the least controversial decision."

Supervisor Harold Donnelly said TePaske also may have left because he disagreed with an arrangement that combined the county planning office with the county zoning office. Since then, changes have been made. The position is now under the sole jurisdiction of the zoning department.

But Supervisor Betty Ockenfels said she is not pleased with the change. She said Lilledahl may not be immune to conflicts with the zoning office.

"I think she's got a tough job working with zoning," Ockenfels said. "I can see where there might be some problems."

Nevertheless, Ockenfels expressed confidence in Lilledahl's ability to handle the situation. "I am very pleased with how she's handled the job so far. I am hopeful that things will go smoothly with her."

BOARD CHAIRMAN Dick Myers also gave Lilledahl a vote of confidence. "We wanted someone who had a fresh outlook on the job and who would work well with . . . the people at zoning, as well as someone with experience in planning. She fit the job on every count."

Supervisor Don Sehr said Lilledahl will be better in some ways than the previous planner. "There won't be the personality clashes, and she'll bring a fresh, new approach to the position," he said.

Lilledahl said the job is a good learning experience for her, and she hopes to make a career out of planning and zoning.

"The position deals with lots of zoning and rural planning," she said. "I've always been interested in working in government, and I had previous experience in planning, so it seemed like a good idea."

Former aide to Nixon, Ford may enter presidential race

By Bruce Japsen
Staff Writer

Former presidential aide Donald Rumsfeld hinted at running for the presidency Thursday at an appearance on campus.

Rumsfeld, who served in both the Ford and Nixon administrations, referred to a possible bid before about 40 UI students attending the speech on behalf of Iowa's Republican political candidates. "I may very well run," Rumsfeld said. "I've given a lot of thought to it. I look at it now and it's going to be a wide-open field."

Rumsfeld said people are impressed by early campaigners. "Presidential elections are for those who start early," he said.

RUMSFELD WAS the second Republican in the area this week who mentioned running for the presidency. Former Secretary of State Alexander Haig also hinted at a presidential bid during an appearance in Cedar Rapids Wednesday.

Rumsfeld said he is in the state to endorse Republican Mike Ketchmark — who is running for the Iowa House of Representatives 46th District seat — and other state Republicans, including Gov. Terry Branstad.

Donald Rumsfeld

"I'm very excited about your candidacy," Rumsfeld said to Ketchmark. "A lot of it's going to be decided on this campus."

Don Feeney, president of UI College Republicans, said Rumsfeld's visit will draw UI students' attention to the local races.

"He's a very well-known politician," Feeney said. "Students may not know much about him, but I know faculty and older people do. It's important that he came here because he has a lot of good ideas."

RUMSFELD SAID he is no stranger to Iowa because he has campaigned in the state in every presidential election since 1962. He also said he visited the state numerous times as a member of the U.S. House of Representatives and he realizes Iowa's problems as an agriculture state.

"I know the ultimate solution to overabundance is to reduce production," Rumsfeld said.

Rumsfeld said he agrees with Branstad that the key to solving Iowa's problems is economic development.

"He wants to create an environment that tells people this is a good place to live," Rumsfeld said of Branstad. "It can lead to a more diversified economy."

Ketchmark, who is running against Iowa City Democrat Mary Neuhauser, said Rumsfeld's visit to the UI would help bring attention to the races for seats in the state legislature.

"... More attention is being paid to the U.S. Senate and governor's races," Ketchmark said. "He realizes that races like mine are important, too. A lot of people overlook the state races."

Herky harassment

What a disgrace. That is all that can be said of the senseless destruction of a display built on the west side of the Old Capital in observance of the UI Homecoming.

UI Associated Students for Engineering Vice President Ann Hewitt, who helped design the $4,440 monument, said UI Engineering students put more than 100 hours of work into the display.

"There's no reason for it," Hewitt said. "It's tradition. It clearly shows that they don't have any respect for anyone's property," she said.

Not only does this act represent disrespect for other's property, but symbolizes the apathy among UI students. In a decade where students are moaning and complaining about overcrowded classrooms and low-quality campus life, it is ironic that such self-affliction would be displayed by ripping apart something designed to build morale.

This weekend, prospective financial contributors to the UI will be hording into Iowa City for the Homecoming football game. How impressed will they be when they see a piece of student workmanship torn apart? Will outsiders think UI students only show enthusiasm for three and a half hours out of the week when the football team is on the field?

The UI is a quality institution, but it needs all of the support it can get, every day of the year.

The great debate

Ladies and gentlemen... Voters of all ages... Step right up and witness the televised conclusion to the greatest spectacle in Iowa gubernatorial politics!

This is it — the third and final opportunity to watch the gubernatorial candidates face off on television before the upcoming November election. The dramatic conclusion of this year's televised debates between Republican incumbent, Gov. Terry Branstad from Lake Mills, Iowa and Democratic challenger from Montrose Iowa, Lowell Junkins, will take place Sunday in Storm Lake.

The debate is being sponsored by the Iowa Pork Producers Association and the topic is agriculture, the corner stone of Iowa's economy.

The subject of agriculture to many Iowans is of primary importance because it is a main source of income. To others, agriculture is boring. However, the topic of the debate is secondary.

This debate is important because it gives every Iowan in the state with a television a chance to watch the candidates in action. The candidates' answers and opinions can immediately be evaluated by the viewer.

It also gives both candidates an equal opportunity to "Open mouth and insert foot." It's been known to happen before. In 1960, Republican presidential candidate Richard M. Nixon, while debating the Democratic nominee John F. Kennedy, once inadvertently stated: "The nation's farmer should be eliminated." It was just a slip of the tongue, but when broadcast on live television to an estimated viewing audience of 100 million people, the remark was damaging.

In the upcoming gubernatorial election, either Branstad or Junkins is going to be entrusted with the job of governing the state of Iowa. It is essential that the choice for governor be made on the basis of a responsible, informed opinion.

Sunday at 9:00 p.m. on channel 12, the Iowa Public Broadcasting Network provides every Iowan with access to a television set an opportunity to see the gubernatorial candidates in action. So put your activities on hold for an hour, kick back with your favorite refreshment and watch the candidates go at each other in the final chapter of the great debate of 1986.

Remember... anything can happen!

Voter education

Today, The Daily Iowan Op-Ed page features the first in a four-part series of interviews with various political candidates. Today's package represents the views of the two candidates for the 3rd District Congressional seat, Republican John McIntee and Democrat Dave Nagle.

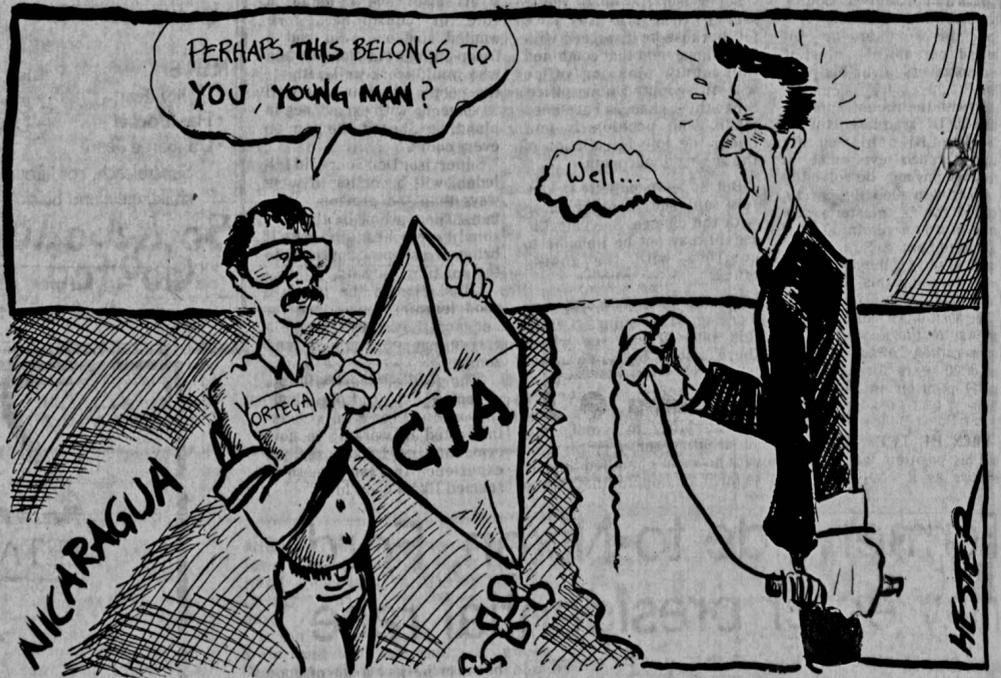

The interviews are intended to provide a clear picture of the candidates and the issues in the campaigns. Since being informed is perhaps the most crucial element in making any decision, it is hoped that printing these interviews will serve an educational purpose.

If there are additional ways in which The Daily Iowan can assist voters in their effort to become informed, suggestions will be welcomed.

Professors defend stand on S. African

By Philip Kutzko and Eugene Madison

WE HAVE READ the editorial "Open debate," (The Daily Iowan, Oct. 8) and we are happy to respond to the writer's request, for an elaboration of our views on the recent visit of Professor G. Delic, member of the Nuclear Theory Research Group, Department of Physics, University of Witwatersrand, Johannesburg, South Africa.

We would like to make several points. First, that Delic is "not the South African government" is certainly technically correct, but is, we feel, seriously misleading. Indeed, the announcement for Delic's colloquium, an announcement provided to the DI the day before his talk, identifies Delic as being from, "Nuclear Physics Group, Department of Physics and Schonland Research Center for Nuclear Sciences, University of Witwatersrand."

IN ADDITION, DELIC chose, in his abstract, to provide us with the information, "Research performed under contract to the Plasma Physics division, Atomic Energy Corporation of South Africa Limited." In case there is any doubt about the exact nature of this research, Delic provided us with the following information in the next-to-last sentence of his abstract. "Although only model cases are discussed in this work, an application to a real-life problem in Theoretical Plasma Physics is under study."

Thus, if it is relevant whether or not Delic represents his

Whether the extreme racism in South Africa is distressing to Iowans, accustomed to a multi-racial society where close bonds between blacks and whites is an increasing commonplace, makes the invitation of a mathematician engaged in atomic research, is debatable.

Guest Opinion

government, as DI Managing Editor Kathy Hinson Breed appears to think it is, it should certainly be clear that the apparent distinction being drawn is between those who actively further the goals of the government of South Africa and those under discussion.

INDEED, HINSON BREED'S remark that, "a lecture on non-linear diffusion does not in any way resemble a demonstration of support for south Africa's racial policies," when read in the presence of the above information, information which Hinson Breed had or ought to have had, appears naive at best and is at worst intentionally misleading.

Our second point concerns the clear implication of the editorial, that we are somehow against "the open exchange of ideas." Honest people may differ when the dissemination of an idea, or even the invitation to campus of a person who associates himself with those promoting an idea that is so hurtful to individuals whom it affects. It is prudent to consider the consequences to these individuals when such an invitation is made.

HOWEVER, WE FEEL it to be less than honest to argue that no such consideration may ever be taken without interfering with the open exchange of ideas. Thus, it would be surprising to find Hinson Breed editorializing on the right of individuals here to publicly, for example, show a film in which acts of extreme sexual violence toward women are graphically portrayed even if those showing the film argued it was impossible to know the point the film-makers were attempting to make. Presumably, the pain and humiliation caused both to women on campus and to their loved ones would be so great as to preclude such a showing simply as a matter of taste.

Whether the extreme racism in South Africa is distressing to Iowans, accustomed to a multi-racial society where close bonds between blacks and whites is an increasing commonplace, makes the invitation of a mathematician engaged in atomic research for a legitimate topic of concern, is debatable. What we tried to convey in our comments is that we feel such an invitation is cause for concern, and the presence of an individual engaged in such potentially harmful research for a government that believes all black people, including black citizens of Iowa, to be inferior beings, has to be extremely painful and embarrassing to all blacks in the UI community. We thus can make no distinction between South African racism and other forms of extreme violence and inhumanity. We wonder how Hinson Breed can.

like they're a bunch of Swedes or something, but what the heck. After we're through shooting the breeze, let's go try to find some of the little people and kiss the Blarney stone!

M.G.: Perhaps we should wait until negotiations have been completed, Mr. President, to see who kisses what.

R.R.: Say, I thought we decided last time to drop all that formal stuff — just call me Ronnie. And as long as we're being informal, just let me get this out of my pocket here. I suppose you know what this is.

M.G.: Its not a dribble glass, is it?

R.R.: No, nothing like that. You probably saw one of these the last time you had a check-up. So what can I say except — fill'er up!

M.G.: MY, THIS IS informal, isn't it? I don't mind sharing a glass with you but I'm afraid I left my only bottle of vodka in my room. Perhaps one of my aides could go and...

R.R.: You're still missing my point. See, back home, George Bush and George Shultz and I all took drug tests to set a good example for all the people we're going to force to take drug tests on pain of losing their jobs. I thought that, as a goodwill gesture, you might make a contribution of your own, so to speak.

M.G.: Yes, I read all about your drug testing in Pravda. According to our reports, you failed your own drug test rather badly. In fact, there was only one drug that didn't show up in your system.

R.R.: And what drug was that?

M.G.: Truth serum.

kid a kiddie. I see that twinkle in your eye. Maybe we should just set this aside for later. Right now, I've got a bone to pick with you, Micky. I thought this was supposed to be a working meeting but you've turned it into a media event.

M.G.: I have no idea what you mean, Ronnie.

R.R.: Like bringing your glamorous wife, Raisa, along when Nancy is cooling her heels at home. That was just for show and you know it. It trivializes the whole meeting. She did look awfully nice in that bikini, however. Woo woo, if you don't mind me saying so. It's so cold around here, I don't know how she could stand it.

M.G.: We're used to that, Ronnie. Perhaps you have something of a point, but other than that I think our delegation has conducted itself in a serious, businesslike manner.

R.R.: Oh, yeah? Well, what about those circus acts you brought along? I like chimp acts as much as the next fella, maybe even a little bit more, but having them hold up signs that said "I'd rather have rotten bananas than Star Wars" while they were riding their little bicycles was a little heavy-handed if you ask me. And what about throwing candy kisses to the press corps? Did you know that after your back was turned, Sam Donaldson took all the little reporters' candy away from them?

M.G.: Sorry, I was confused. I thought your press corps WAS one of our circus acts and I was giving them a treat. But now, might I suggest we turn to a more substantive matter, the one reason I suggested this pre-summit meeting?

R.R.: Yes, I've been wondering about that. What's on your mind, Micky? Nuclear testing, the arms race, Nicaragua, Afghanistan, world peace? M.G.: Raisa would like to be on "Star Search." Could you arrange something? Do you have any pull with Ed McMillan at all?

Iowa City, Iowa — Friday, October 10, 1986 — Page 5A

The Daily Iowan/Jeffrey Sedam

Democrat Dave Nagle is a practicing attorney in Waterloo. He was born in Grinnell, Iowa, and was raised in Toledo, Iowa. He received his undergraduate degree from the University of Northern Iowa in Cedar Falls and his law degree from the UI. He and his wife, Diane, have one son, Benjamin. Nagle served as chairman of the Iowa Democratic Party from June 1982 to May 1985. During his tenure, the Democratic Party retained control of the state legislature. In addition, Iowa maintained its "first in the nation" caucus status in selecting the party's presidential nominee. Nagle is also a member of the Democratic National Committee's Fairness Commission.

Republican John McIntee is a Waterloo attorney and home-builder. He and his wife, Jeanne, have two children, Nicholas and Jessica. McIntee was born and raised in the Waterloo area. The 35-year-old attended the University of Heidelberg in Germany and the Free University of Berlin in West Berlin. He received his bachelor's degree from St. Thomas College in St. Paul, Minn., and his law degree from Stetson University in St. Petersburg, Fla. McIntee has served two terms in the Iowa legislature and is past president of the Iowa Home Builders Association.

McIntee, Nagle vie to represent 3rd District

John McIntee

How do you feel about your constituency here in Johnson County and in Iowa City in particular? Are you someone who can represent them? Even though the district is thought of as an agricultural district, there are considerably more college students than farmers. There are two regents institutions and six private colleges within the district. Johnson County has the UI, a diversified economic base, and a rural population. It is a microcosm of the district in general. I feel able to represent Johnson County as well as other elements in the 3rd district. During the last few years of Rep. Cooper Evans' term, there has been some question as to whether he was truly representing the constituency. Will you be voting in patterns similar to Evans on the issues of Contra aid and defense spending? It's very incumbent upon whoever is the next congressman from this district to make sure reforms are made in defense spending so we don't continue to throw tremendous amounts of money into defense and not get results. We need to pay costs that are not inflated and introduce some integrity into the system. What specific reforms would you like to see in the defense department and how would you go about trying to institute them? The procurement system needs reform. The sole-source program needs to be a should-cost evaluation approach instituted instead of a cost-plus evaluation. In addition, I find it mind-boggling that since 1981 there has been an addition of 138,000 new civilian employees to the Department of Defense. I don't feel they are adding to the capability of our forces. Those levels should be rolled back to the 1981 levels, which would save another $3 billion to $5 billion. Were you in favor of sending aid to the Contras? Had I had assurances as to whether the first $27 million dollars that was appropriated for the Contras was spent appropriately... I would have supported aid to the Contras. I also would have attached another condition that would have given the aid in a staged approach. If there were movements on the part of the Sandinistas to enter into the peace process, the aid could be curtailed. Of course, when I go to Congress in January that issue will still be there. I'm watching Daniel Ortega and the Sandinistas and how they're reacting and I find it very encouraging that they are opening up a dialogue with the Catholic Church. I think the church poses the best opportunity for a peaceful settlement. Do you support the Solomon Amendment? ... I'm a very strong proponent of draft registration, and feel that we need to have that in place as a basic security in this country. To flaunt not registering is wrong and if denial of financial aid is a way to curtail that, I support the process. Do you have any plans to stabilize federal assistance programs for higher education? I spent some time here with UI Vice President for Student Services Philip Hubbard and asked him his thoughts on financial aid. He says we're not in bad shape. Fiscal year 1986 was funded above the levels of fiscal year 1985. Fiscal year 1987 is going to be funded at a higher level under the current bill moving through Congress. I'm going to do everything I can to maintain funding for education because I attach a high priority to those programs. I'm not saying education will be held harmless.

The one thing I've learned in politics is to tell people the way things really are, and not what they want to hear.

Do you see any hope of stabilizing funding for the Extension Service? You could go through a whole list of programs, and potential problems there going to be with funding if you try to adhere to the Gramm-Rudman Balanced Budget Law targets. My opponent and I agree we should adhere to those targets. I would hope additional revenues will be raised at the national level and, I think, there are a lot of things the state government can do to offset and augment various reductions in specific programs. The state of Iowa is going to reap a $100 million dollar windfall from tax reform bill. We have to adjust our priorities. Certainly aid to farmers and not just through the Extension Service, but also in areas, like job training. That's where we have to put emphasis.

Do you think cuts proposed by the Gramm-Rudman Balanced Budget Law are fair? There are no cuts put forth by Gramm-Rudman, unless Congress fails to pass its own budget. Gramm-Rudman is an unloaded gun. It is Congress that is making these decisions, not Gramm-Rudman.

What do you see as the biggest difference between you and your opponent, Democrat Dave Nagle? Our approach to politics is totally different. I have spent four years in the Iowa legislature, and I've had to make some tough decisions. The one thing I've learned in politics is to tell people the way things really are, and not what they want to hear. We both agree on Gramm-Rudman, no tax increase, and the same levels of defense department expenditures. But, somehow he is able to tell every group he talks to that he'll fund their programs or restore any previous cuts. I think Dave Nagle is way ahead on promises and way behind on solutions. He provides absolutely no solutions. He talks about a bi-coastal recovery, and the fact that we haven't shared in the recovery in the Midwest. But what are his solutions? I've talked about three programs through this campaign: financing world economic development program, Iowa Sen. Chuck Grassley's farm bill, and reworking the revenue-sharing program targeting areas of country that have been left behind in recovery.

Dave Nagle

Which constituencies do you think you best represent? I would like to see myself as the candidate of change. And with each of the constituencies, I would like to represent the movement within those constituencies which feels a change is necessary. I would not categorize myself on an ideological spectrum as the moderate candidate or the liberal candidate or the conservative candidate, because on some issues I'm very liberal — such as arms control — and on other areas — such as expansion of federal powers — I'm very conservative. Would you like to see an arms balance between the United States and the Soviet Union, or are you looking at reduction in U.S. arms? It's very difficult to engage in a balance with the Soviet Union because their strategic forces are so different from ours. They have a heavy reliance on intercontinental ballistic missiles (ICBMs); they only have 100 long-range bombers. We have about 500 long-range bombers and not as many ICBM launchers. ... It is suffice to say the goal of mutually ensured destruction has been reached — we can both destroy each other. That's a good place to stop building weapons. What is your position on the defense budget? I'd halt the production of the B-1 Bomber. I would not appropriate for the MX missile. I would not appropriate for Star Wars at the level the administration requested, at $5.1 billion. I would not vote to appropriate at the level Congress approved, roughly $3.8 billion. I would vote for $800 million which is a doubling of the funds received in 1981. You have to do that... because the Soviet Union is continuing to research. Research under our ABM treaties is permitted — deployment is not, development is not, but research is permitted. Why should a marketable UI graduate stay in Iowa? Because, as bad as things are within this state, we are not without our strengths. It's the strengths and attributes that ought to make you stay, plus the fact that, generally, in bad times come the best opportunities. You would be competing in a relatively empty field here if you started a business... And you would be competing in a state where I believe in the long term we are going to have growth again and we are going to have opportunity again. I also think you ought to stay for another reason, and that is because we need you... How do we keep them in Iowa? Are the jobs there? The jobs, I don't think, are there yet but, thankfully, one of the opportunities you have is to help create those jobs. We currently have a bi-coastal economy. You have tremendous, accelerated growth on the East Coast and on the West Coast. If you want to create jobs, you start with the theory of the United States of America not being a series of 50 independently operated, isolated economic entities. The premise of federal support for higher education... is that there are brains in every part of this country and those are brains that need to be utilized... It does not take a great deal of logic to say that you take the same approach to economic development. Transfer of industries, businesses and technological centers from one state to another is not equal to a growth of wealth. It amounts to a transfer of wealth because we've shifted the wealth within the circle. Do you support the Solomon Amendment? I don't support registration for the draft during peacetime, and I don't support the Solomon Amendment. What do you see as the role of the United States in Central America? I would not have voted for the $100 million in Contra aid. I would not have voted two years ago for the $27 million that was sent down there. I think the United States, if it is concerned about: a) the external threat to the region, or b) a Soviet launching base against the internal security of the United States, has a legitimate right to be concerned. The question is, when you have a concern in that direction, do you engage in a military operation to force the other side to talk or do you talk? ... I don't support military intervention in Central America. I don't support military aid, covert or overt to the Contras. And, I'd leave the administration with only one alternative by cutting off funding, and that is to sit down and talk. What is the biggest difference between you and your opponent, Republican John McIntee? Former President Gerald Ford was in town and said, I think legitimately, that a vote for John McIntee is another vote for President Ronald Reagan's policies. I think that's fair. I think we can have a very fair debate on whether or not we should continue Reagan's policies. On the Contra question he sides with the administration, on the MX missile he sides with the administration, on the B-1 Bomber he sides with the administration. He says, and I quote: "I can't guarantee no cuts in education. I think all areas of the federal budget need to be cut." I don't feel that way. There are really some fundamental differences that can be summed up: "continuation of policies" or "changes in policies." Specifically, which areas of the budget wouldn't you cut? I would not cut education and I would not cut our social security or medicare. I think you have two duties in a civilized society, the first is to educate your young and the second is take care of your parents... We have to prioritize. We have to fund what's essential: education, health, housing, food, defense. You fund those first and then you fund the rest on the basis of what's left over.

I think we can have a very fair debate on whether or not we should continue Reagan's policies.

To the Editor:
I am ashamed of the Mathematics Department. In the front-page story, "South African... stirs controversy" (The Daily Iowan, Oct. 7), not a single professor interviewed supported academics independent of politics. Speakers at the UI should be chosen on the basis of their expertise in "nonlinear diffusion," or any subject of academic interest, not on the basis of their citizenship. Even if Professor G. Delic fully supported apartheid, he is being invited as a mathematics lecturer, not a political philosopher.

Turned tables
To the Editor:
The Daily Iowan reported that two mathematics professors are opposed to an individual giving a mathematics lecture here because he is a white South African. To continue the reasoning of Professors Eugene Madison and Philip Kutzko, it should be noted that the Reagan administration is very unpopular in much of the world. Therefore, in the interest of consistency and fair play, there should be a ban on Madison and Kutzko to prevent them from giving mathematics lectures outside the United States. Whether or not they agree with the policies of the U.S. government is immaterial — they're Americans and shouldn't be allowed to lecture abroad. Of course, this might violate their human rights. Madison and Kutzko have shown us by example, though, that a person's race and nationality are more important considerations, so I'm sure they'll understand.

M.W. Chapin

Despicable defense
To the Editor:
Mathematics Chairman William Kirk says, "this person is from South Africa, he is not the South African government." Kirk knows very well that professor G. Delic is a researcher of the South African Atomic Corporation, which, like the Arms Corporation, ... is a government department. Kirk is one of those individuals who believe they have the authority to give cover for the direct support the U.S. government and the Department of Mathematics have been and still are giving to the murderous, bloodthirsty and inhuman fiends called a government in South Africa. Delic is a government agent and a government employee. He owes his status as a mathematics research scientist to the support and patronage he got from the murderous regime. His experiments and findings are being used to run a clandestine nuclear capability which the United States has been funding all along. How do you think he got the visas to visit the campuses where he speaks?

So, Daily Iowan Managing Editor Kathy Hinson Breed rushes in to defend what she calls open debate. She says Delic is not the government. Let Hinson Breed and Kirk know that Delic got his skills and his education through his government ensuring that I cannot get that same education and training, and for that matter neither will my children. I am black.

Spending bill battle stymies Congress

WASHINGTON — President Ronald Reagan and Senate Republican leaders told House Democrats Thursday to back off arms curbs in a bill to keep the government from going broke, warning they may undercut Reagan at the Iceland summit.

But House Speaker Tip O'Neill and other Democrats held firm, accusing Reagan of playing politics by threatening to paralyze the government if he cannot have his way on arms issues in the mammoth money bill the federal machine needs to keep running through next Sept. 30.

While the war of words raged between Capitol Hill and the summit-bound president, House and Senate negotiators continued talks into the evening, and Sen. John Warner, R-Va., said progress was being made.

But one congressional source close to the negotiations said no deal could be struck Thursday night and it might not be possible to finish today, pushing the issue over to Tuesday.

Possible filibuster postpones drug bill

WASHINGTON — A filibuster threat kept the Senate from considering the anti-drug bill late Thursday as leaders struggled to compromise with death penalty opponents who have vowed to fight the measure.

The bill apparently will come up today, at which time Senate Republican leader Bob Dole of Kansas will then file a cloture petition to limit debate on the $1.7 billion bill.

Under Senate procedure, that would mean the anti-drug bill could not be considered for two legislative days, giving both sides until next Wednesday to work out some kind of agreement. If no agreement is reached, it takes 60 votes to invoke cloture and cut off debate.

The House voted 391-23 Wednesday for the drug bill.

Marcos admits holding U.S. property

MANILA, Philippines — Ousted ruler Ferdinand Marcos admitted Thursday he owns U.S. property and stock in top Manila firms but denied obtaining them illegally and accused the new government of "stealing his wealth."

In an interview with Philippine Daily Inquirer Editor Luis Beltran broadcast on the GMA television network, Marcos also acknowledged holding a Lloyds Bank account containing $797,000 in Los Angeles. The Philippine government claims Marcos stole the money from the national treasury and is seeking its return in a federal suit in Los Angeles.

He said the money had been deposited in the account in the name of his wife, Imelda, for the "school expenses of our children."

The interview with Marcos in Honolulu was videotaped about a week ago, Beltran said.

Amtrak train derails, kills passenger

FALL RIVER, Wis. — Twelve cars of an Amtrak passenger train derailed Thursday in rural south-central Wisconsin, killing a crewman and seriously injuring at least 26 other people, officials said.

The train, the Empire Builder, carrying at least 231 passengers and eight crew members from Seattle to Chicago, jumped the track about 12:20 p.m., Police Chief Scott Rychnovsky said.

Two engine cars, two baggage cars and one coach dormitory slid off the tracks and overturned, Rychnovsky said. Seven other cars derailed but did not overturn, Amtrak Trainmaster Mike Duffert said.

The remaining cars stayed on the track but were pushed together accordion-style, witnesses said.

The body of the dead man, identified only as a crewman, was removed from the site about two hours after the accident, Dodge County Sheriff Ted Meekma said.

U.S. plane crashes in central Senegal

DAKAR, Senegal — A U.S. plane carrying pesticides to battle locusts in central Senegal crashed into the Atlantic Thursday soon after takeoff, killing three Americans and wounding a fourth, U.S. officials said.

Based on initial information, airport sources said the crash of the DC-7 aircraft followed the breakdown of one of its four engines just after takeoff from Dakar airport shortly after 7 a.m.

M. Peter McPherson, an administrator for the U.S. Agency for International Development, said in Washington that one of the plane's engines caught fire and the aircraft went over the ocean to dump its cargo.

He said for reasons that were not clear the plane crashed into the sea moments later.

Officials tape anti-CIA rally; student activists disapprove

By Deborah Goldberg
Special to The Daily Iowan
and Dan McClain
Staff Writer

A policy enabling UI officials to videotape campus protests drew heavy criticism from students Thursday following anti-CIA demonstrations on the Pentacrest and at Westtown. UI Campus Security officials, positioned in a second story festlawn window, filmed Thursday's protest, which attracted more than 75 demonstrators.

Bruce Nestor, a member of the UI New Wave student group, said he disapproves of the policy because some students, particularly foreign students, feel intimidated by the presence of videotape cameras.

"It scares me because it makes people unable to participate in the rally," he said. "There were people who left the demonstration today as soon as the cameras were pulled out."

Nestor said that in the past foreign students who took part in political protests while in the United States have been penalized upon return to their native countries.

AMERICAN students may be in danger because the CIA may be given access to the tapes and then start a file on student activists, he said.

UI student government leaders agreed the filming policy was a violation of student rights.

Collegiate Associations Council President Mike Reck said he opposes the filming of student protests.

"Anytime you inhibit a student from expressing their right to freedom of speech it should be questioned," he said.

UI Student Senate President

Joe Hansen concurred with Reck.

"It is an infringement on students' privacy and their rights," he said.

But UI officials said those fears are unwarranted, claiming the videotapes are viewed only by UI administrators and are quickly erased.

UI DEAN OF STUDENTS Phillip Jones said the standard practice of filming on-campus rallies ensures an accurate visual record of the demonstration is available in special cases.

"If there is a disruption, then camera records are a means of determining charges if there are any," he said.

UI Public Information Director Ross Hagen said the videotapes are used only by UI officials and are not shared with law enforcement agencies or any off-campus organizations.

See the world through tinted contacts

By Christine Selk
Copy Editor

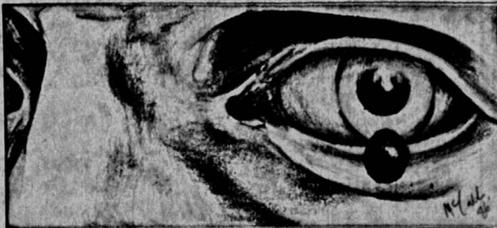

For anyone who has ever wished for Paul Newman baby blues or dreamed of violet eyes to rival Elizabeth Taylor's, the news is good.

With the advent of tinted contact lenses, changing eye color is as easy as changing clothes.

According to Larry Ellingson, an Iowa City optometrist, there are two advantages to wearing tinted lenses.

"The first benefit is obvious—it's a cosmetic one. They can change eye color," Ellingson said. "A second, less obvious advantage of tinted lenses is that they're much easier to see while the wearer handles them—especially if they're dropped."

Tinted lenses come in six shades: brown, green, aqua, blue, violet and amber. They cost about $25 more than clear lenses, although the price varies from one optical business to another. Also, just about anyone who wears contact lenses can wear the tinted variety.

The Daily Iowan/Gregory McCallum

"THEY'RE NOT available in all lens designs, but the range has increased quite a bit from when they first came out," said John McDonald, an optician with McDonald Optical Dispensary, 16 S. Clinton St.

"Tints can be put into hard lenses as well," McDonald added.

Tinted hard lenses have been around since the early 1950s, according to Tracey Myers, contact lens technician for Eye Associates of Iowa City, 1060 William St.

"Hard lenses are tinted basically for visibility purposes. They're a lot easier to handle that way," Myers said.

Care and cleaning procedures for tinted lenses are no different than those for clear ones. If properly taken care of, the life expectancy for both types of lenses is 12 months to 18 months.

Most eye care specialists agree there are no risks involved in wearing the special contacts. McDonald said most rumored risks were only problems when the colored lenses were first introduced.

"I'VE SEEN SOME articles that have said there was a problem with lens color going into the iris," he said. "But it was very rare and happened at the very beginning of colored lenses."

Although tinted contacts pose no health threats, the color in the lenses can fade over time. According to Ellingson, the cause of this fading is unknown, but he suspects certain chemicals in water could be responsible.

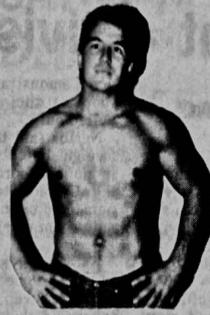

"There are chemicals in water that can break covalent bonds—these bonds are responsible for the color in the lenses—and the breaks could cause fading," Ellingson said.

Despite occasional fading, no other problems have been associated with the special lenses. This has resulted in greater interest from the corporate world.

Ciba marketed the first tinted lenses in 1983. Since then, two other major eye-care companies, Bausch and Lomb and Wessley-Jessen, have also marketed them. This competition has fostered new innovations and improvements in the lenses.

Colored, extended-wear lenses—lenses that can remain in the eyes without removal for two weeks—should be available within a year, Ellingson said.

Swandraws attention to tuition talks

United States Student Association President Tom Swan was at the UI Thursday urging UI student leaders to keep fighting the state Board of Regents and the Iowa Legislature for lower tuition and a high quality education.

The regents, who are scheduled to discuss tuition proposals for the 1987-88 academic year in upcoming meetings, should be the main concern of students at the three state universities, he said.

"Students from Iowa should really be hammering on that," Swan said.

But Swan said the highest hurdle for America's college students will be off-setting the effects of education cuts imposed by the the Gramm-Rudman Balanced Budget Law in Congress.

The USSA, based in Washington, D.C., heads more than 425 campus lobby organizations across the nation, including the UI chapter of the United Students of Iowa.

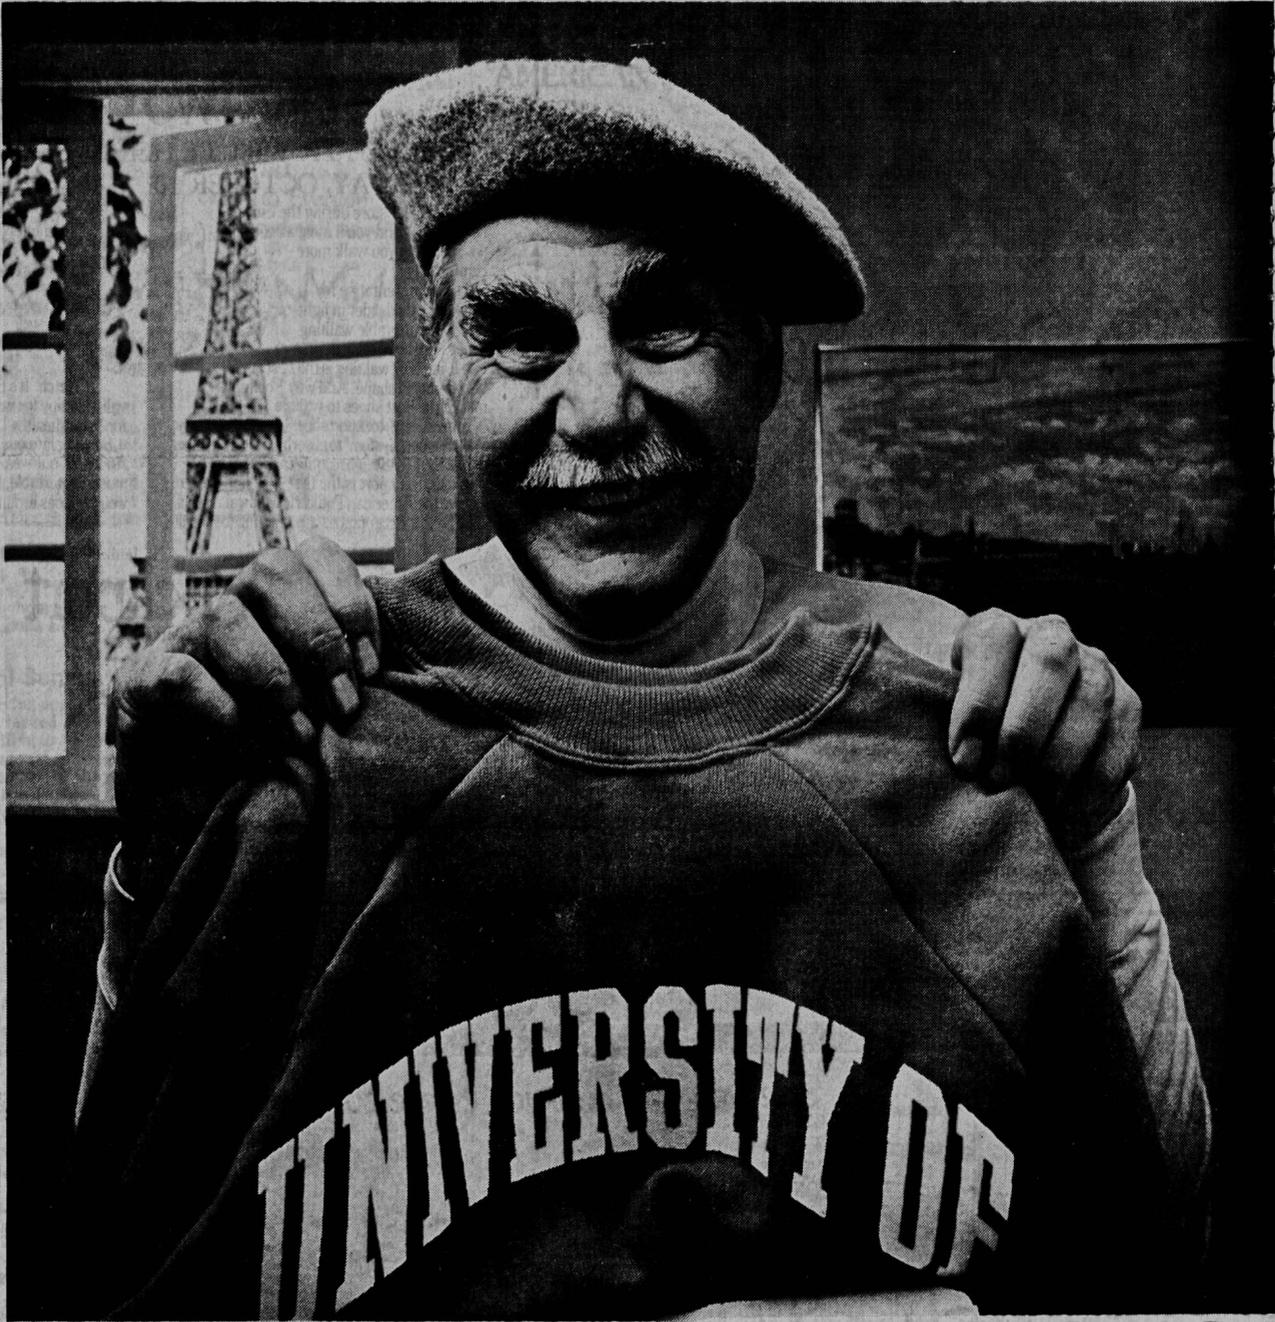

The USSA works with legislators in Washington on a daily basis, Swan said.

Iowa Rep. Neal Smith, D-4th District, and Sen. Tom Harkin, D-Iowa, are both sympathetic to USSA causes, Swan said, but added a lot of legislators are of little help on student issues.

WHERE THERE'S A NEED, THERE'S A WAY.

Thanks to you it works for all of us.

Groups urge safe drinking

Responsibility comes with understanding alcohol's effects

Victoria Carlson
Special to The Daily Iowan

Drinking can be a part of student life without jeopardizing the lives of students who drink, according to several local groups promoting responsible attitudes toward alcohol.

"We do believe at Health Iowa that there is such a thing as responsible drinking," Kurt Faubion, graduate assistant and health advocate for alcohol education at Health Iowa, said.

"The most important factor would be to know that alcohol is a potent, harmful drug," Faubion said.

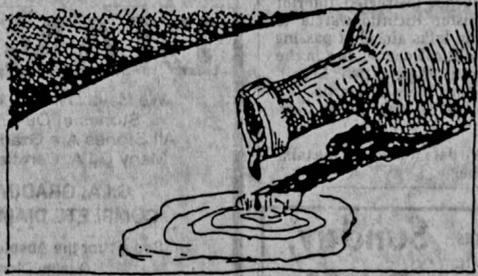

Dave Panther, president of Johnson County Mothers Against Drunk Driving, also emphasized the importance of understanding the effects of alcohol consumption.

THE MAIN THING a person has to realize is that they're dealing with something that will alter their decision-making process," he said.

Alcohol awareness not only involves learning about the physical effects of alcohol but also calls for an understanding of the importance drinking has in a person's life.

"Watch the relationship you have with alcohol," Dave Whiting, president of Drinking Responsibly in College (DRiNC), advised. "It's not how much or how often you drink, but how important it is to you." Personal alcohol awareness also involves recognizing situations or feelings that prompt drinking.

"DRINK FOR positive reasons, rather than for negative reasons," Faubion advised.

This story is the last in a series of articles examining alcohol use and awareness at the UI and in Iowa City.

"Drink to celebrate an accomplishment or to socialize, not because you're lonely or because of a disappointment."

Drinking alone should also be avoided, he said.

According to Faubion, not only are there preferable reasons for drinking, there are also healthier ways to consume alcohol.

"Sip drinks, or drink slowly, rather than gulping to get that buzz," he suggests, adding that "gulping might be a sign of a problem."

Drinkers can slow their consumption of alcohol even further by alternating non-alcoholic drinks with alcoholic ones, Faubion said.

FAUBION STRESSED that eating before drinking alcohol is essential because food slows down the absorption of alcohol into the blood stream. Moreover, food may alleviate some of the stomach irritation caused by drinking, an important consideration in Faubion's opinion.

"Alcohol is definitely hard on the stomach lining," he said.

Rick Sondag, manager of College Street Club, 121 E. College St., also advised drinkers to consider the physical effects of alcohol.

"The biggest thing is to realize a shot of whiskey or tequila takes about 20 minutes to get into your system," Sondag said. "The last thing anybody needs before they leave a bar is another shot. It's almost like looking for trouble."

TROUBLE CAUSED by excessive drinking often comes after leaving the bar or party.

"Drunk driving crashes are the leading cause of death in the college age group," Faubion said. He explained that hazards also threaten the drinker who staggers home intoxicated.

"Know your friends," Faubion advised. "In your group, take turns staying sober." He added that friends should watch out for each other when they walk home after drinking.

THE DRINKER'S self-awareness is a key in preventing drunk driving accidents, according to Panther.

"Having a good time for some people means 'drink till you puke.' If you're going to get smashed, you should be up front (about it). That's what it means. If that's your attitude, be responsible for it and have someone else drive you home," he said.

Whiting suggested that drinkers who need safe transportation home from the bars make use of Saferide, a service sponsored by the UI Student Senate. Still another precaution is to carry a few extra dollars for cab fare, he said.

While the focus of many parties is alcohol, the attention of the host or hostess should be on the rights of guests to choose whether or not to drink, advocates of responsible drinking maintain.

"Responsible hosting means providing alternative beverages and food and not pressuring guests to drink alcohol if they don't want," Faubion said.

TURNING DOWN alcohol may be awkward, Whiting acknowledged, but he said it is possible.

"Don't be preaching about it. Most of the time, just a 'no thank-you' will do. It's easier to avoid peer pressure when you have more self-confidence," Whiting said. "If you believe in yourself it won't matter so much what other people think of you."

UI Junior Jean Hancock said guests should take the initiative and ask for alternative beverages.

"They (people giving parties) don't ask 'Do you want a beer or a pop?' You have to ask for it. You have to be kind of assertive about it," she said.

Pressing News . . .

National Newspaper Week provides us all an opportunity to acclaim the extraordinary vision of our nation's founders in establishing freedom of the press.

They understood that our government would not work unless the people were informed of government activities by an independent and unrestrained press which fostered discussion of public issues.

A free press serves a free people by providing them accurate and timely information and enables them to make intelligent decisions.

The Daily Iowan, like other newspapers, functions as the ears, eyes and voices of free people, providing information not readily available to the individual citizen.

The DI staff works hard to provide coverage complete of local, regional, national and international events. You, as readers, can help improve our coverage by letting us know what you want to read.

Call, write letters, stop by. Do you have questions about voter registration? Would you like more coverage of the 3rd District Congressional race? Are we omitting results of sports that are important to you?

We welcome reader input on any issue. This is your newspaper.

Pilot declares CIA supported mission

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (UPI) — An American flier captured in Nicaragua said Thursday he flew 10 supply missions from El Salvador and Honduras to U.S.-backed Contra rebels and that the flights were directed by two Cuban-American CIA agents.

Eugene Hasenfus, appearing at a news conference conducted by Nicaraguan army officials, said he worked out of the Salvadoran air force base at Ilopango where two men, Max Gomez and Ramon Medina — who he said "worked for the CIA" — coordinated the supply flights for the rebels.

U.S. officials, including the CIA, the Pentagon and the White House, denied any connection with Hasenfus or his mission. The CIA is forbidden under current law to support the Contra effort to oust the leftist Nicaraguan regime.

"The CIA had nothing to do with the plane and nothing to do with the crew," a CIA spokeswoman said in response to Hasenfus's statements.

MEANWHILE, THE Nicaraguan government turned over the bodies of the two dead men to the U.S. Embassy Thursday. They were identified as fliers William J. Cooper and Wallace Blaine Sawyer Jr. of Magnolia, Ark.

The bodies, in two gray wooden caskets, were delivered to the embassy in the back of a pickup truck and placed on the driveway outside, where they remained for 10 minutes until workers put them inside in a second truck.

Outside the embassy, under drizzly gray skies, a small group of U.S. nationals who live in Nicaragua and who are fasting to protest U.S. policies against the Sandinista government, watched quietly. A banner atop a stop sign read "Peace with Dignity, No U.S. Intervention."

HASENFUS, 45, of Marinette, Wis., who parachuted out of the C-123 plane shot down Sunday by Nicaragua, was captured Monday.

The Sandinista government

said the C-123, loaded with combat gear intended for the Contra rebels, was shot down over southern Nicaragua by a teenage soldier with a ground-to-air rocket. Nicaragua said three crew members, including two Americans, were killed.

Hasenfus — called a "prisoner of war" by Nicaraguan officials — said at a news conference he worked for a company called Corporate Air Services, which he said is connected to the Miami-based Southern Air Transport. About 24 to 26 people, including flight and maintenance crews, staffed the operation, he said.

"There were two Cuban nationalized Americans that worked for the CIA and did most of the coordination of these flights and overseen all of our housing projects, transportation products, also refueling and some flight plans," Hasenfus said.

AS IN HASENFUS'S earlier news conference on Tuesday night, army officials did not permit reporters to ask questions.

Nicaragua has said Hasenfus, an ex-Marine who specialized in packing parachutes for cargo drops, and one of the dead crew members were U.S. military advisers in El Salvador.

Chilean government, opposition will meet

SANTIAGO, Chile (UPI) — President Augusto Pinochet's military government announced Thursday it will meet with opposition leaders for the first time since 1983 to discuss the legalization of Chile's political parties.

Opposition leaders seeking a return to democracy said the move was merely "cosmetic" and negotiations could only take place if the state of siege imposed Sept. 7 was lifted and freedom of expression restored.

Responding to U.S. pressure, Pinochet instructed Interior Minister Ricardo Garcia to begin talks aimed at passing a political parties law in the first quarter of 1987. Legalization of political parties is a necessary prelude to elections.

No date was set for the talks to begin.

Mets head back home after defeating Ryan

HOUSTON (UPI) — Wally Backman delivered two key singles and Bob Ojeda frustrated Houston in the clutch Thursday night to help the New York Mets even the National League playoffs at one game apiece with a 5-1 victory over the Astros.

Game 3 of the best-of-seven series is scheduled for Saturday afternoon in New York, with Houston's Bob Knepper opposing the Mets' Ron Darling.

Backman ignited a two-run fourth inning and singled home one of three runs in the fifth to disappoint a crowd of 44,391.

Ojeda pitched a 10-hitter and stranded nine Houston runners. Gary Carter doubled home one run and Keith Hernandez tripled home two more as the Mets showed the diversity of attack that gave them 108 regular-season victories.

NOLAN RYAN ONCE again showed that his 93 mph fastball doesn't scare New York much. Ryan, who went 0-3 against the Mets this season, retired the first 10 batters but was shelled over the next 1 1/2 innings and took the loss.

When the Astros finally did produce a key hit — Phil Garner's RBI single in the seventh — it proved way too late. The difference in team attack could scarcely have been more pronounced. The first seven Met hits all contributed to a run. Meanwhile, the Astros carefully developed an "almost" attack. In just about every inning, they almost scored.

National League Playoffs

The pattern of Game 1 — won 1-0 by Houston — persisted three innings into Game 2. The Astros failed to produce a clutch hit and the Mets failed to hit, period.

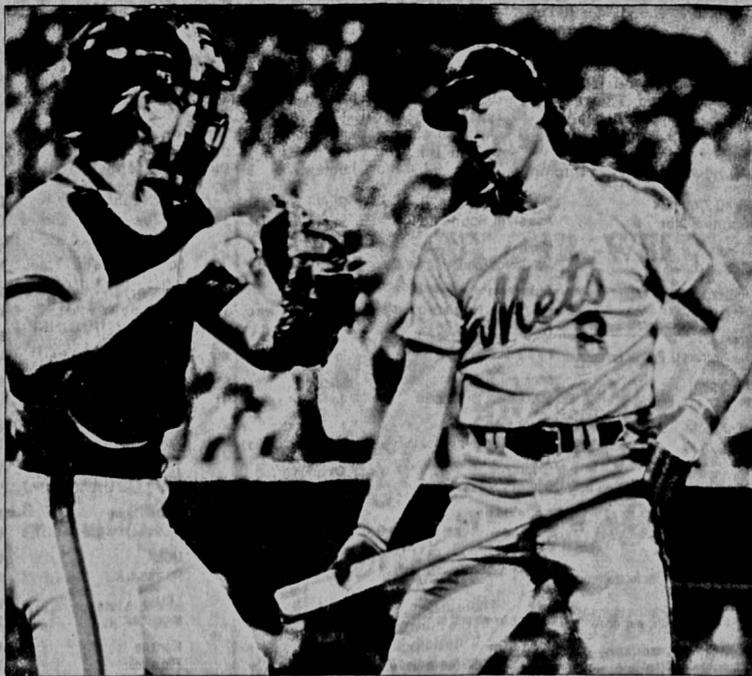

Ryan retired all nine batters, including Len Dykstra, who once again led off the game by bunting.

IN THE SECOND inning, Houston was unable for the fourth time in the series to deliver a runner from third with less than two out. With one out, Kevin Bass doubled and went to third when Cruz singled off Ojeda's glove. Ojeda then fielded Alan Ashby's checked-swing bouncer and tagged out Bass trying to score.

When Billy Hatcher singled with one out in the third, it marked the first time in the series anyone in the top three spots for Houston hit safely. Hatcher, however, was doubled off first on a short pop to the outfield, leaving the score 0-0.

The Mets finally scored in the fourth, collecting two runs on three hits. Backman and Hernandez singled, and Carter lined a double off the right field wall for one run. Darryl Strawberry then lofted a sacrifice fly for a 2-0 lead.

New York catcher Gary Carter shows his disgust in Houston. The Mets won the game and evened up after striking out against Nolan Ryan Thursday the National League playoffs at one game apiece.

Second family helped Salazar

By Laura Palmer
Staff Writer

When she first began running in eighth grade, Iowa cross country runner Janeth Salazar was doing it to waste time after school.

Now, as an Iowa sophomore, Salazar is preparing to run in the Grandma's Marathon in Minnesota in June.

"In eighth grade I played the piano for the chorus after school," Salazar said. "I wanted to be on a team and cross country was the only team you didn't have to try out for."

Salazar said that her love for the sport would come later. She would run nine-minute miles and would often walk during races.

As a freshman at Schaumburg High School, in Schaumburg Ill., Salazar finished 71st in the cross country state meet. Her sophomore year, the Saxons won the state title and Salazar placed 13th, making the all-state team.

SHE STEADILY progressed, and as a junior Salazar placed fourth at state meet. Salazar credited much of her success to her high school coach, Jon Macnider, who, Salazar said, infected the team with his enthusiasm for running.

Macnider became more than a coach to Janeth. During her senior year her parents moved to Fort Lauderdale, Fla., and so that she could stay and finish her career at Schaumburg, Macnider, and his wife Mary became Salazar's guardians.

"It started as a joke," Macnider said. "A couple years before I had a runner who moved away and after that I said, 'no one's moving away, they can live with me'."

"I wouldn't do this for just anyone," Macnider said. "It was important for her and her future."

After talking it over with Salazar's parents, the Macniders went through the official procedures and became legal guardians.

"It wasn't tough on us but it was tough on her because coach was always there," Macnider said. "She couldn't let her guard down to her parents when she was mad at her coach and she couldn't get away with not running on Sundays."

Salazar keeps in close contact with her adopted family and is thankful the Macniders opened their home to her.

Adjusting was hard on Salazar at first, and it showed in her running. Her senior year she placed eighth in the cross country state meet, but by the time track season rolled around Salazar had adjusted to being away from her parents. She captured first place in the 3,200-meter race recording a time of 10:25, making her a high school all-American.

This weekend Salazar and her nationally ranked Iowa team will compete in the Purdue Invitational in West Lafayette, Ind.

Big Ten letdown threatens Hawks

By Julie Deardorff
Staff Writer

The Iowa football team after fighting to a 24-21 win over Michigan State last Saturday will try to avoid an emotional letdown this weekend as they host Wisconsin at Kinnick Stadium.

With the Badgers sporting a 1-4 record, Iowa Coach Hayden Fry is primarily concerned with keeping the team's momentum rolling.

"It was a great big win (Iowa's 24-21 victory over Michigan State)," Fry said, "but we've got to go back to war Saturday. We have to rely on the leadership of the football team. I can talk till I'm blue in the face but it has to come from within."

"Every week you pick up the paper and see someone defeated because they took for granted all they had to do was put on their headgear and the other team would roll over and play dead."

IOWA ENTERS THE second week of Big Ten competition with a 4-0 overall record. The Badgers lost last week to Michigan 34-17, and are off to their worst start since 1980.

The Hawkeyes dominate the nation's statistics, leading the country in total offense with Radio — (Originating Iowa stations): WHO Des Moines, WMT and KHAK Cedar Rapids, KXIC and KGLI Iowa City, KZZX Davenport, KGRN Grinnell, KGLO Mason City, KFMH Muscatine.

Team Records — Iowa is 4-0 and Wisconsin is 1-4.

Attendance — 67,700 (The game is sold out)

Series — This is the 64th meeting between the two schools. Wisconsin leads the series 34-27-2. Iowa won last year's game in Madison, 23-13. The two teams tied 10-10 two years ago in Iowa City. Wisconsin has not beaten Iowa since 1976.

Homecoming — This is Iowa's 75th homecoming game. The Hawkeyes have a 35-34-5 homecoming record overall and have won six straight homecoming contests.

Coaching records — Iowa's Hayden Fry is now 145-119-5 in his career and 56-30-1 at Iowa, with a 40-18-1 Big Ten mark and a 29-13-1 record in eight years at Kinnick Stadium. He is 6-0-1 against the Badgers. Jim Hillis is in his first season as Wisconsin's head coach. His career is 1-4.

who also missed last week's game because of an injury, and Rick Bayless are among the Big Ten rushing leaders.

Wisconsin ranks eighth in total offense with 290.8 yards and tenth in total defense (410.6). Iowa center Mark Sindlinger doesn't feel they are to be taken lightly, however.

"It's the same defense last year that beat Ohio State at Ohio State, so that's something that we have to look at," Sindlinger said. "Their whole defensive line and linebackers are all the same, so they're really experienced. I hope guys can look up to me, look towards the seniors for leadership."

WISCONSIN LEADS the all-time series 34-27-2, but Iowa took last year's game in Madison, 23-13. The Badgers will be trying to snap a nine game losing streak against the Hawkeyes which dates back to 1976.

"We think that Iowa is every bit of the football team that Michigan is, and perhaps in the trenches up front on the offensive and defensive lines they could even be a little bit stronger," Wisconsin Coach Jim Hillis said. "We certainly don't find ourselves in a very

Lineman form backbone of 1986 Hawkeyes

By Mike Triik
Staff Writer

A rumor is going around Iowa City.

The rumor is that maybe this year's Hawkeye football squad could be better than last year's. It can't be. Take a look at the facts.

Iowa no longer has all-American Chuck Long to direct its offense. Ronnie Harmon has taken his talents to the NFL's Buffalo Bills. Also gone from the NFL is former Hawkeye lineman Mike Haight. There's no way the Hawkeyes could be as good as last year.

Well, let's not jump to any hasty conclusions.

Through the first four games Iowa has outscored the opposition 193-38. Last year Iowa outscored its opponents 198-54 through the first three contests. But how can Iowa continue to roll up all those points without Long, Harmon and Haight? The answer lies in the offensive line.

"They're doing a great job," Hawkeye quarterback Mark Vlasic said. "I can't believe the time they give me to pass.

"We're young as far as playing time goes, but we've all been around enough to know what has to be done," Dave Croston says.

Football

They just keep getting better week to week. I've only been sacked three times. The best part about them is they will only get better."

VLASIC ISN'T THE only

Hawkeye grateful for his front-line buddies.

"You're only as good as your offensive line," senior running back Kevin Ringer said. "I don't run in front of them — I run behind them."

The Hawkeye rushing attack compiled 995 yards through the first three games, and Vlasic has had enough time to become the Big Ten's and the nation's most efficient passer.

"We're young as far as playing time goes, but we've all been around enough to know what has to be done," said senior Dave Croston co-captain and anchor in the offensive trench. "We haven't really been tested yet. We've been getting out in front early, and it's easy to play when you have the lead. The real test will come when we are in a tight ball game."

The Iowa offensive line survived its first "tight" game last weekend. The Hawkeyes just held on to defeat Michigan State 24-21.

THE LINE'S SUCCESS shouldn't be so surprising. After all, by sheer size the Hawkeye hole-makers outweigh the world champion Chicago Bears' offensive line, 1,375 pounds to 1,369.

But Croston said he doubts the Hawkeyes will adopt a black-and-blues brothers image.

"We're not real vocal," Croston said. "We don't have any posters or anything. We have the potential to be a real solid line. We have a lot of leaders. We're anxious to see how we will do against the better teams."

"The Iowa program is at a stage where if someone goes down, there is somebody ready to step in and do the job," Croston said. "We've got guys like (Mark) Spranger who are pushing for our jobs in practice, so if one of us goes down, we know there is someone there to pick up the slack."

Spranger, a reserve guard and center, said he feels comfortable with his role as a back-up and is always ready to fill a vacant spot on the line.

"EVERYBODY HAS TO be ready to play," Spranger said. "I've played quite a bit, but there are some guys that haven't seen much playing time that are just as ready."

Spranger also believes the line has taken the loss of some key offensive players on their shoulders and can help fill some of the void left by Long and company.

"We wanted to take it upon ourselves to take more of the load," Spranger said. "We knew Mark was new at quarterback, we knew he was good, but he needs time to read defenses, and we knew we had new running backs. We just wanted to make it a little easier on them."

Iowa's fate for the entire Big Ten season is still unknown, and only time will tell how the offensive line will handle the stronger competition.

On The Line

In honor of homecoming, On the Line has a surprise for you this week. We're bringing you not one, but TWO guest pickers! Our first picker is a blast from the past in honor of homecoming, Chuck Long. Remember him? Roaming the halls (and lockerrooms) of the Silverdome in Pontiac Michigan, we caught up with Chuck. Although picking Iowa to win without hesitation, we had to give him a little suggestion on the reason. "Loyalty? Yeah, that sounds good! Put that."

Big Bad Chuck also picked the Spartans of Michigan State to bump off intrastate bully Michigan. The reason? — He hates Bo Schemmbecher, a common ailment in Big Ten circles.

Evidently, Chuck got up on the wrong side of the Silverdome Sunday, because he also claimed dislike for Iowa's intrastate rival Iowa State.

Chuck also predicted a huge upset in Bloomington, Ind., with the Hoosiers knocking off Ohio State, something Indiana hasn't done since 1951.

Sound like a crazy pick to you? Well, it didn't seem too nutty to ex-Dallas Cowboy receiver Butch Johnson, our second guest picker this week, who also believes the Hoosiers can break tradition.

Johnson, now an NBC color commentator, took a few moments out of his preparation time before broadcasting the Detroit-Houston game Sunday to speak to our On The Line representative.

"This job is more homework but it's basically pretty much the same," Johnson said of his move from the field to the booth. "You just have to get to know the players on both sides. Do I like it better? Well, I don't get hit as hard, that's for sure."

But apparently Butch was hit hard a few too many times on the field. Judging from his reasoning for some of his picks, he's still suffering from one too many well-placed Jack Tatum forearm.

When asked why he thought Iowa would knock off Wisconsin this weekend, Butch cited that key factor so often overlooked by gamblers and prognosticators. "They drink more milk," he said. Right Butch.

Johnson wasn't exactly scientific about some of his other picks either. Indiana being Larry Bird's home state was good enough for one upset, and being sick of Pittsburgh (a common disease) was grounds for another pick.

As far as Iowa's chances, Butch said after watching the Michigan State game last Saturday, he believes the Hawkeyes will make it back to Pasadena this winter.

"I saw Iowa play a little bit (Saturday)," Johnson said. "Without Chuck Long they seem to have recovered very well. They seem to be the type of team that will get to the Rose Bowl again — and lose again."

We would like to thank Mama's, which is located at 5 S. Dubuque St., for sponsoring this week's contest. We appreciate it.

Hawkeyes make final adjustments

A bundled-up Hayden Fry ran his team through its drills Thursday as the Hawkeyes prepared for their homecoming game with the Wisconsin Badgers.

Fry, who was bundled up against the cold with a coat and insulated pants, stopped after practice to sign an autograph for a fan.

"We basically ran through the same thing we always do on Thursdays," Fry said. "We go over their game plan and make final adjustments."

Fry who had said Wednesday that his team hadn't practiced well earlier in the week, said that he was pleased with Thursday's workout.

"The guys concentrated much better today," he said, "if we play that way on Saturday we'll be tough."

Rodgers charged with credit card fraud

DES MOINES, Iowa (UPI) — Authorities have charged former Iowa State football player Marques Rodgers with two felony counts for allegedly using a credit card stolen from one of his coaches.

Rodgers, a sophomore defensive end from Joplin, Mo., reportedly used the card to make $290 in purchases at a Des Moines shopping mall.

Rodgers had been arrested in Story County along with former teammate Hughes Suffman in connection with an August burglary at the home of Iowa State Assistant Coach Ed Lambert. Both players were suspended from the team after the arrest.

Iowa advances five in Nebraska Invite

By Scott Reifert
Staff Writer

Five of eight players netted first round wins as Coach Charley Darley's women's tennis team fought through Thursday's first round action at the Nebraska Invitational in Lincoln, Neb.

Wins by Michele Conlon, Pennie Wohlford, Liz Canzoneri, Madeleine Willard, and Patti DeSimone highlighted the day's action in the cloudy, chilly Nebraska climate.

"Patti DeSimone played a great match," Darley said. "The others were expected to win, but they all did very well in their matches."

First round losers for the Hawkeyes were Robin Gerstein, Ann-Christine Johnston, and freshman Colleen Nichols.

"Robin (Gerstein) played a girl who just played unbelievable tennis," Darley said, "she just didn't miss any balls, and she hit lots of winners. But one of the best things about the match was that Robin didn't give up. She expects to play well tomorrow."

DARLEY SAID he was pleased with the way many of his players adapted to some of the changes he had put in over the last week.

"Pennie's (Wohlford) serve is one thing we worked on with her," Darley said. "Her serve was really good today. She used it to put her opponents on the defensive more than she usually does."

Only two of Iowa's four doubles teams were able to advance into second round play. And both of those teams then lost in the second round.

The Liz Canzoneri-Patti DeSimone doubles team won its first match, and the team of Gerstein-Willard also won one match before losing.

Darley was happy with the play of both winning doubles teams.

"Canzoneri-DeSimone played all-around good tennis. They had good movement, and it was the best doubles I've seen from an Iowa team this year," he said.

Darley was also pleased by the play of Gerstein-Willard.

"That's as well as I've seen them play since last year," he said.

"This tournament is stronger and deeper than the Midwest-ern tournament in Evanston," Darley said.

Michigan rivalry showcases 2nd week of Big Ten action

By Scott Reifert
Staff Writer

The second week of the Big Ten season features a key intrastate showdown between the Spartans of Michigan State and the Michigan Wolverines in Ann Arbor, Mich.

Iowa, last year's conference champion and Rose Bowl loser, celebrates its homecoming by hosting the struggling Wisconsin Badgers in Iowa City.

Undefeated and nationally ranked Indiana tries to continue its success with a home game against Earl Bruce and his Ohio State Buckeyes.

And in two games featuring conference also-rans, Purdue visits Illinois, and Northwestern heads to the Metrodome for a clash with the Minnesota Golden Gophers.

Bo Schembechler

Big Ten Roundup

Michigan State (2-2) at Michigan (4-0)

Michigan State has won two of its last four games in Ann Arbor, but overall, Michigan leads the bitter rivalry 51-22-1. "So far we've been fortunate to win all four of our games," Michigan's Bo Schembechler said. "This week we play Michigan State, and the following week we play Iowa back-to-back. That's going to be a tremendous task for us. Fortunately we play both games here in Ann Arbor."

Ohio State (3-2) at Indiana (4-0)

Indiana hasn't beaten the Buckeyes since 1951, and Hoosier Coach Bill Mallory said his team must have a different attitude in order to win Saturday.

"In the two years I've been here, we've never given ourselves a chance," Mallory said. "We might as well have gotten on the bus at halftime and gone home. We've just done nothing. If we play that way again this year, then it will be 36 years since we've beaten them."

Wisconsin (1-4) at Iowa (4-0)

Coach Hayden Fry's Iowa Hawkeyes will try to avoid a letdown after last week's victory in East Lansing, while the Badgers hope a new quarterback can spark the offense to an upset win.

"The game with Wisconsin has us very uptight. They always play well against us," Fry said. "We expect a real knock-down drag-out fight this Saturday."

Badger Coach Jim Hilles said his coaching staff is impressed by what they've seen on the game films. "We think they're every bit the football team Michigan is, and in the trenches up front, they could even be a little bit stronger than Michigan."

Purdue (1-3) at Illinois (1-3)

Both Illinois and Purdue are coming off losing efforts last weekend, but Boilermaker Coach Leon Burnett will have freshman quarterback Jeff George back in action after a concussion.

Burnett said his team is very similar to Mike White's Illinois squad.

"When I look at Illinois," Burnett said, "I see a team very similar to ours in that they're trying to break in a lot of new people."

"These are also two offenses that have always been very potent, but are struggling at this time," he said.

Northwestern (2-2) at Minnesota (2-2)

The 2-2 Northwestern Wildcats head to Minneapolis to face first-year coach John Gutekunst's team. Coach Gutekunst's squad won last week by pounding Purdue, while Northwestern lost to undefeated Indiana.

"The Wildcats are hoping to regroup this week against a tough Minnesota team after a very lackluster showing against the Indiana Hoosiers," Northwestern Coach Francis Peay said.

Rematch no picnic for Iowa

By Julie Deardorff
Staff Writer

Iowa field hockey Coach Judith Davidson is forgetting about the fact that her team beat Purdue 3-0 less than five days ago. Playing the Boilermakers twice in less than a week, according to Davidson, just won't be as easy as it sounds.

"It's going to be a really tough weekend," Davidson said. "We may have a psychological edge, but Purdue is always ready. Plus, we're playing on grass instead of artificial turf."

The fifth-ranked Hawkeyes (9-1-1) are hoping to keep their undefeated Big Ten record intact, as they face the Boilermakers today and Michigan on Saturday.

Last Sunday Iowa shut out Purdue 3-0 at home on goals from Fred Koch, Liz Tchou and RosAnna Salcido.

Field Hockey

The adjustment to grass is Davidson's main concern about the game. "Getting used to the grass will be hard, it's especially hard to score... You can't carry the ball as much and dribble it. It's more of a receive and hit type game. Our stickwork is very good and we won't have as much of a chance to use it."

THE FIELD IS much slower on grass, and will also alter Iowa's game as far as corners are concerned.

"It's harder to execute corners which is what we do most of our scoring on," Davidson said.

Iowa will be trying to shut down Purdue's Meri Dembrov and captain Karen Moschetto, both all-Big Ten picks from last year. Defensively, the Boilermakers will be led by Jenni Hess and Stephanie Brady.

Saturday, the Hawkeyes face Michigan for the second time, after shutting them out earlier in the season 2-0 on goals by Michelle Murgatroyd and Patti Wanner.

"It will be a good game," Davidson predicted. "They're coming off a 2-1 loss in double overtime to Northwestern, the other powerful team in the Big Ten. I think the key to this game will be which team can adjust to the grass field."

"Playing on grass is a lot different, it's slower," Wanner said. "I'll be able to flick the ball more, hopefully get it over their heads. We'll be OK if we keep up our passing."

Michigan's defense is led by senior Trisha Mondul and juniors Katrina Warner and Dorie McCubbery.

Badgers

enviable position, being 1-4 at this point in the season. Before we dig a hole too deep we'd like to climb out of it."

Freshman quarterback Tom Poholsky will most likely get the starting nod after guiding the Hawkeyes last weekend by completing 18 of 29 passes for 240 yards and two touchdowns in his first college start.

"THE COACHES KEEP pushing us, we have to forget about last week and put everything behind us," Poholsky said. "We have to take every step at a time to get to our destination."

Poholsky's counterpart will be

Bud Keyes. The Wisconsin junior came off the bench to replace Mike Howard and turned in one of his best performances of the season in the second half of last Saturday's loss to Michigan by connecting on 16 of 19 passes for 198 yards and one touchdown.

"I feel I've given Mike an ample opportunity to show what he can do and even with the number of injuries we've had, I haven't been happy with the type of leadership and what we've gotten out of quarterback position," Hilles said.

The Hawkeyes aren't the only ones suffering from a multitude of injuries. The Badgers will be playing without tailback Larry Emery for the second week in a row, as he reinjured his hamstring before the Michigan game. Emery rushed for 104 yards on 19 carries in last year's game against Iowa, and in three games this fall has compiled 262 yards on 57 carries.

"We're kind of struggling right now to get an offensive lineup that has some validity in terms of being able to play Big Ten football," Hilles said. "We have lost five positions on the tight side of our line in the last five weeks."

Success pleases .38 Special vocalist

By Jill Lauritzen
Staff Writer

WHEN DONNIE Van Zant, lead vocalist for .38 Special, turned 16, his parents gave him a 1938 Buick Special, which he made into the equipment van for a band he had at the time.

Thus the name of his present band, .38 Special, right? Wrong. Vocalist Don Barnes said that was just a coincidence. It was a police raid which gave .38 Special (who performs at the Five Seasons Center in Cedar Rapids tonight at 8) its name.

"That was a little incident which happened just north of Jacksonville, Fla. (their hometown). We were rehearsing in an old warehouse and these policemen from around the area made a big raid on the building, because I guess they thought there was some wild parties going on with lots of noise," Barnes said.

"THE BUILDING was all boarded up except for an upstairs window, and they couldn't get inside, so they made some statement like, 'Come out peacefully or these .38 Specials will talk for us,'" Barnes said.

Since then, .38 Special has become good friends with the policemen around the area — so much so, in fact, that the group's new, "much nicer" rehearsal studio is guarded by the same men.

.38 Special has come a long way since that day in the old warehouse. Seven albums and over 10 hits later, the band is on the charts again with the song "One in a Million" from their current album Strength in Numbers.

"We're at the million mark now, platinum status, with Strength in Numbers," Barnes said. "We're doing real well and working on the second million. We've always felt if you shoot for the stars maybe you can hit the moon."

"One in a Million" was written by Barnes, Jim Vallance (song-writing partner of Bryan Adams) and guitarist Jeff Carlisi. Barnes said the song was written because it hit a common feeling people have.

"WE WRITE ABOUT a lot of relative feelings among people. If you strike that common feeling among people then you can help them relate the song to their own lives," Barnes said.

Strength in Numbers has a number of love songs on it. Barnes says it is a way for the band to break away from the "just another southern rock band" label.

"We have strived all these years to raise the awareness of the public that we are not just another southern rock band that writes about alligators and whiskey and that kind of thing," Barnes said, laughing. "We wanted people to realize that we have intelligence and sensitivities and that we've always been big fans of pop music. We've always just wanted to be regarded as an American rock 'n' roll band internationally," he said. "We feel that the fact that you come from a certain region of the country shouldn't place any limitations on the appeal of your music."

BARNES SAID after selling 5 million records they've finally got people saying "O.K., O.K., I believe you."

.38 Special plans to play more than just songs from Strength in Numbers during its concert tonight. The show will be approximately one hour and 45 minutes of "everything that everyone would want to hear from .38 Special."

"We'll play all the hits from over the years — a couple of special surprises there. As far as production, we've got five tractor trailers of staging and lighting," Barnes said.

"We always treat it like a big event," he added. "We want people to see that we give 110 percent every time and that when we're in their town we're there to perform just for them for that night."

.38 Special performs about 200 shows a year and have considered themselves a road band with a real commitment to their audience. In the past week they've been to Pittsburgh, Charlottesville, N.C. and Atlanta before arriving in Cedar Rapids.

Addressing concert-goers, Barnes said, "Expect a real escape to get away from everything. Just go out there and have a great time. It's just a real big party."

Blue Band colors weekend at Gabe's

By Michelle Tibodeau
Staff Writer

BALANCE is the key to success for The Blue Band. Not only do they play a variety of music, from '50s and '60s dancing tunes to songs with a reggae beat, but also the members contribute equally to each other's performances.

"We have four lead singers and four people that can play solos," the group's leader Bob Dorr said.

"Everybody seems to be supportive of everybody else's spotlight," he said. Each member plays solos, but "they also realize the importance of playing in the ensemble."

The Blue Band, which will play at Gabe's Oasis, 330 E. Washington St., tonight and Saturday at 9:30 p.m., recently changed its name from Bobby's Blue Band.

THE BAND BEGAN five years ago following the breakup of The Little Red Rooster Band. Dorr, Molly Nova and Bryce Loshman were all in the group. Dorr said the Red Rooster band had a lot of dates booked and couldn't get out of the commitments, so he and Nova put together Bobby's Blue Band to play in the Red Rooster's place.

Surprisingly enough, Bobby's Blue Band received a better response than the other group and "evolved into the best thing I've ever been a part of," Dorr said.

Music

Their newest album One More Won't Kill Ya, sounds very fresh, very vibrant. Six of the 12 songs were recorded live, showing the group's constant interaction with its audience and giving the recording a special energy.

ALL OF THE album's songs are upbeat and fun to move to, even their one slow song, "Stand By Me." Nova jams with her electric violin (yes, violin) in "Danger," and Dorr's harmonica adds flavor to "Not Fade Away."

There are no top 40 hits, no synthesizers and no country covers. Nova and saxophone player Bobby Thompson have their own songs on the album.

The album is very tight, with each member playing a key role in the recording as a whole, whether it's Thompson playing a sax solo in "Son of Groove Cat" or the strong beat of drummer, Loshman, in "Let's Go Lets Go Lets Go."

The music has a real rhythm and blues mix.

"We're playing music from the heart," Dorr said. The group keeps busy, playing between 175 dates and 225 dates a year, and they actually make their living playing in Eastern Iowa.

The Blue Band

"SEVENTY-FIVE percent of the time we play in the eastern Iowa, and up and down the Mississippi," Dorr said. The remaining performances are in major Midwest markets like Chicago and Kansas City.

"A lot of bands look at this (area) as just a stepping stone," he said. But The Blue Band feels differently. "We all really like the state of Iowa and this region."

The group's latest album is its fourth recording, and they're hoping to get some coast-to-coast airplay. If the record flies, Dorr said they'll pursue a bigger label for their recordings.

If the album doesn't take off, The Blue Band will re-evaluate what it's doing. Dorr said some members may move on, while others stay with The Blue Band. He added that the band is a very talented group of people, and although some members are content with where they are and what they're doing, others do have greater aspirations.

There will be a record release party and T-shirt giveaway tonight during The Blue Band's performance.

Oktoberfest offers polkas, beer, brats

wear dirndls, a peasant blouse with a big skirt.

IN GERMANY, the first week in October is dedicated to parties. It's called Oktoberfest, a festival that celebrates the harvest.

In keeping with the German tradition, the UI Foreign Language Club and several other student organizations are sponsoring an Oktoberfest party Saturday at 8 p.m. in the Union Ballroom.

"We try to make it like a (German) beer-drinking hall," German House Programmer Kent Klindera said.

"We're serving German imported beer, bratwurst, sauerkraut, pretzels and lebkuchenherzten," Klindera said, explaining that the last item is a heart-shaped gingerbread cookie.

"We'll also be raffling off gingerbread houses," he added.

This is the ninth year for the event, which to attend costs $2, or $1 if you dress in traditional German costumes. Klindera said men should wear lederhosen, which are knickers with suspenders, and women should wear dirndls, a peasant blouse with a big skirt.

A POLKA BAND, The Brass Notes, will play polkas and waltzes all evening. Some members of the German House will perform folk dances, and everyone can join in for the polkas. Klindera said they will teach people the dances.

"We'll be singing traditional beer-drinking songs — what they sing in the beer halls in Munich," Klindera said.

"It's really an evening of Bavarian culture, not German culture," Klindera said, comparing the difference in cultures to the difference between Texas and the entire United States.

Last year 500 people attended the event, and Klindera said they're expecting anywhere from 400 to 500 people this year.

"It's a blast, it's just a lot of fun," said Petra Frizell, a German major who has attended the event for the past two years. "There's such a warm friendly atmosphere there that it doesn't make any difference if you know German or not."

Dawn Upshaw

Renowned soprano to perform at Clapp

By Therese Teasdale
Staff Writer

Music

SOPRANO Dawn Upshaw will perform in Clapp Recital Hall tonight at 8 as part of Hancher Auditorium's Young Concert Artists Series. She and pianist Robert Merfeld will perform works by Purcell, Mozart, Schubert, Debussy, Harbison, Weill and Schoenberg.

Because of her success in international auditions held in 1983, Upshaw is under the management of Young Concert Artists, Inc. The organization "represents a stable of young classical artists," according to Winston Barclay, acting director of UI Arts Center Relations. "It's quite a coup to be accepted to their roster."

Artists accepted, sign a three-year contract with the group, which arranges New York and Kennedy Center concerts as well as solo and recital appearances elsewhere. Hancher brings in four Young Concert Artists each season for three-day residencies, which include instructing master classes and culminate with a Clapp Hall concert.

UPSHAW ENJOYS teaching master classes, which she sees as an exchange of ideas between herself and the students. "They have as much to offer me as I have to offer them... I learn a lot." She does not see herself as a "master" of music or singing and hopes that the students get as much out of the sessions as she does.

Upshaw entered college hoping to make a career singing in commercials but became more interested in classical music. "Opera is very exciting because there's so much going on with the costumes, scenery, music and the other singers," Upshaw said.

She has sung with the Metropolitan Opera of New York City and will sing five roles there between January and April. Upshaw sang the role of Echo on a recording of Strauss' opera Ariadne auf Naxos, recorded in Vienna.

Upshaw sings mostly in German, French, Italian and English. Her soon-to-be-released recital album also includes a selection in Russian. She receives coaching in languages and in specific roles at the Met through the Young Concert Artists program.

In addition to her work with Young Concert Artists, Inc., Upshaw has also signed with Columbia Artists. Her first solo recording is due to be released this spring on the Musical Heritage label. The opportunity to make this album of recital selections was a prize for winning the Naumburg Vocal Competition in 1985.

Badger contest no test for Iowa

By Dan Millea
Assistant Sports Editor

It's not too difficult to predict the outcome of this week's Iowa-Wisconsin game.

The Badgers seem an extension of Hayden Fry's non-conference schedule. They lost to Nevada-Las Vegas, Hawaii and Wyoming, and they had a tough time with Northern Illinois. To put it bluntly, the Badgers are pitiful.

They're so low, they couldn't even get their own fans to shut up during a 34-17 (it wasn't nearly as close as the score indicates) loss to Michigan last weekend. The referees informed the Wisconsin defense that if the crowd didn't quiet down and let Wolverine quarterback Jim Harbaugh call his signals, the Badgers would lose timeouts.

But when the Wisconsin players called for quiet, the fans yelled louder. The Badgers obviously get no respect.

Wisconsin tied Iowa 10-10 two years ago in Kinnick Stadium and played the Hawkeyes close for much of last season's meeting in Madison. But don't expect a win, tie or even a reasonably respectable showing from the Badgers this time around.

Iowa has superior coaching, better athletes, better fans (they don't throw eggs and pour schnapps on the opposition) and a better program in all facets.

MIXING THE RUN and the pass, the Hawkeyes will march almost at will on an ineffective Badger defense. David Hudson, Richard Bass, Kevin Harmon and Rick Bayless will have a field day, seeing non-conference-sized holes they thought had become extinct after the Michigan State game.

Vlasic, Poholsky, Hartlieb, McGwire, or anyone else Fry cares to throw in at quarterback, will toy with the Wisconsin secondary, which will be alternately burned deep and fooled short by Robert Smith and Jim Mauro, among others.

Look for one of Iowa's runners to leave the field with more than 100 yards and Vlasic or Poholsky to throw for double that.

The Badger offense will quickly learn there is another tough defense in the Big Ten besides Bo's boys in Ann Arbor. If Wisconsin breaks the goal-line plane, it will probably be a safety for Iowa.

Running back Larry Emery ate Iowa for lunch last year in Madison when he topped the 100-yard mark, but he'll have no such luck this time around.

MIKE HOWARD AND Bud Keyes have been battling for the Wisconsin quarterback job, but by the end of this game both will be begging to play back-up. Jeff Drost and company have that effect on people.

Wisconsin has tremendous talent. Sixteen of 22 starters return from last year's team, which went 5-6 and beat Ohio State in Columbus. Maybe Dave McClain, who died of a heart attack last summer, had a talent for getting the best out of his players that current Coach Jim Hilles lacks. Or maybe McClain's death had a prolonged effect.

Whatever the reason, Wisconsin is not the club it was supposed to be this year. The Badgers should be entering Kinnick Stadium with a 4-1 record; instead they're 1-4. When they leave, they'll be a humiliated 1-5.

Final score: Iowa 41, Wisconsin 10

Herky the Hawkeye's legend lives on with Iowa fraternity

By Robert Mann
Staff Writer

One legend has it that around 1960 a bunch of crazy Delta Tau Delta fraternity brothers decided to get together and bring to life a cartoon character named Herky the Hawk.

These guys, as the story goes, gathered in the dungeons of their fraternity house and built from scratch, put together piece by piece, the uniform for the Hawkeye mascot that Iowa fans everywhere have come to love.

But there is also evidence that Herky existed sporadically in live mascot form as early as 1951. A photograph appeared in The Daily Iowan of Herky greeting students at a Union event.

In 1946 the Tailfeathers, as the pep band was then called, threw together a hawk costume, according to newspaper accounts at the time. In 1948, after a cartoon character named Herky the Hawk was born, the band re-designed their hawk, only to lose the head to thieves later that year.

The Herky mascot surfaced again at a few events in the early 1950s. In 1956 a live hawk was given to the UI Athletic Department to serve as Herky, so Iowa had two mascots for awhile.

THE NOV. 21, 1959, Notre Dame-Iowa game program states that the Herky mascot had just recently been born. This Herky wore a "football uniform topped with a large hawk's head of black leather and gold felt feathers."

The mascot that year was indeed a Delta Tau Delta member, as was the mascot the following few years when Doug Stone wore the costume.

Reports during that time say the UI Office of Student Affairs chose Herky, and there is no mention of whether or not all Herks were Deltas during the '60s, although this is commonly believed to be the case.

The mascot originated on paper in 1948, when Richard Spencer III, a UI journalism instructor, drew the hawk as a cartoon and won an Athletic Department contest.

Herky was named by John Franklin of Belle Plain, Iowa, in another contest later that year. The cartoon character has appeared on many Iowa advertisements and was even on the insignia of the 124th fighting squadron during the Korean War.

TODAY THE HERKY costume is in the proud care of the Delta Tau Delta fraternity, and its members are kept busy representing Iowa at many different events.

"There are four guys on the Herky Committee, and there are two alternates," Herky alternate Mark Ingebritson said. "Those guys do the events with national exposure."

Ingebritson explained that another 10 to 15 Deltas are apprentice Herkys and appear at events other than basketball and football games.

Besides the sports events Herky attends, he also travels to elementary schools, hospitals, parades and other places where a mascot is needed.

This past week was possibly the busiest of the year for Herky, Ingebritson said, because of Homecoming activities.

"During Homecoming Week it's really busy," he said. "There are usually one or two events a day for Herky."

Two Herky uniforms, one for basketball and one for football, currently exist. Every few years the outfits go through a sort of re-designing and repairing, Ingebritson said.

Badgers' mascot represents years of grid tradition

By Brad Zimaneck
Sports Editor

Nov. 6, 1948, may not seem a day that will live in infamy, but it is definitely a day that lives on in the minds of Wisconsin fans. It happens to be their mascot's birthday.

Buckingham U. Badger was born that Saturday afternoon when Wisconsin lost a Homecoming contest to Northwestern, 16-7, at Camp Randall Stadium.

Buckingham was conceived by Wisconsin Athletic Director Arthur Lentz after a vicious live badger became too difficult to control on the sidelines at Wisconsin games.

The live badger was given to the Madison Zoo, and Wisconsin student Connie Conrad was given the opportunity to decide what "Bucky" should look like. She constructed a papier maché head that was to be worn by Wisconsin gymnast Bill Sagall.

It was decided that the name Buckingham U. Badger was too formal, and the Delta Gamma and Delta Zeta sororities came up with Bucky in a university-sponsored contest.

BUCKY'S OUTFIT CONSISTS of a cardinal sweater with a large white "W." Bucky also has at times worn boxing gloves with the outfit to suggest his belligerence.

Some of Bucky's antics during a Wisconsin game include running across the field, capturing one of the opposing team's cheerleaders and bringing her home to his lair.

Current Wisconsin Athletic Director Elroy "Crazy Legs" Hirsch changed the Bucky logo a few years ago. He toned down the vicious-looking Badger to one that still retains its "look" but is encompassed in a large "W." This campaign has been quite successful in its intention of promoting the University of Wisconsin through its mascot image in the state.

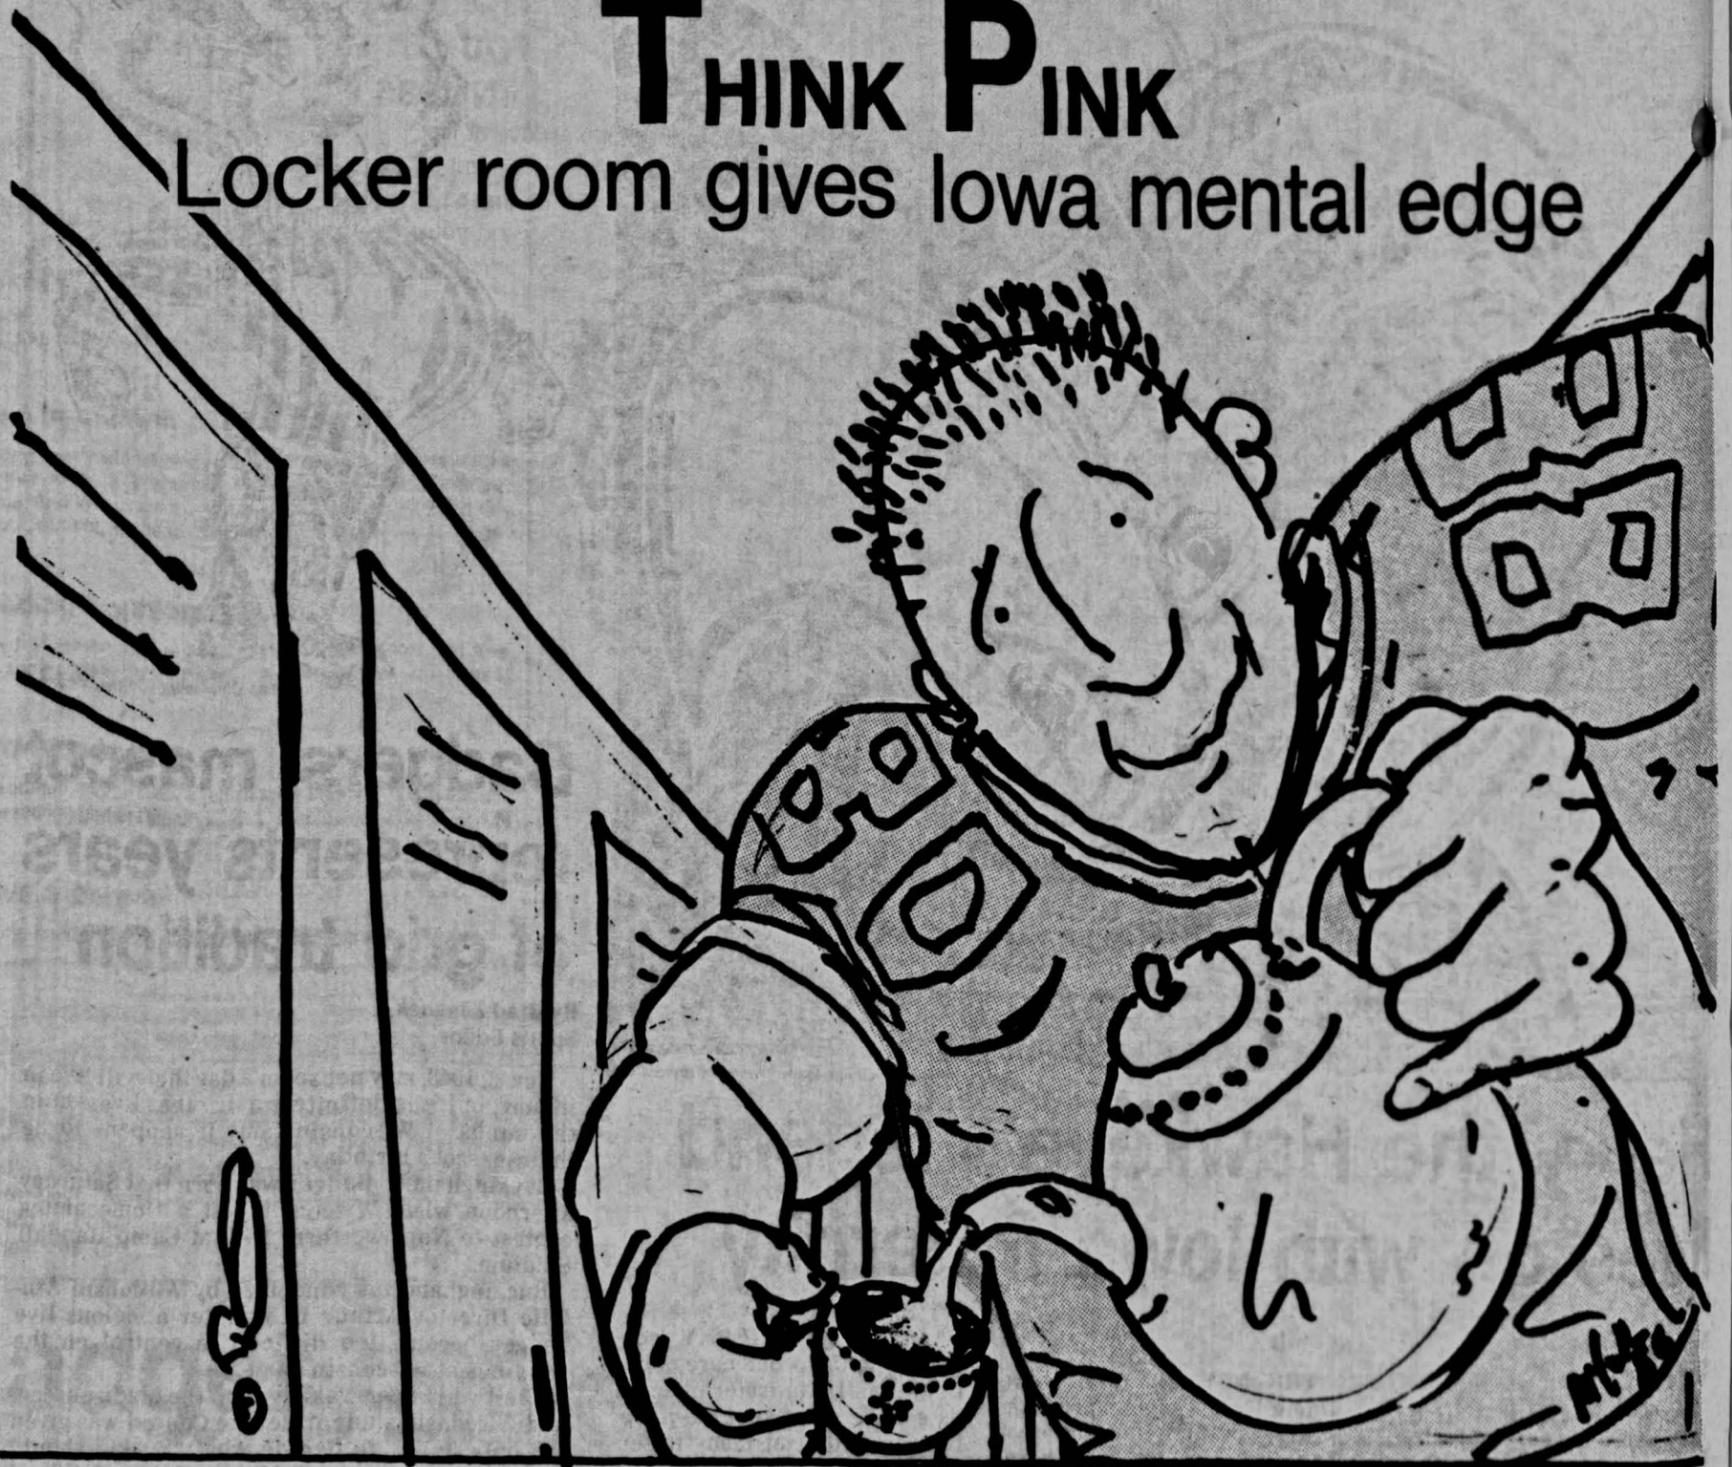

The Wisconsin mascot is also immortalized for Badger faithful in a song written by Julius Amel Olson in 1919.

"If you want to be a Badger, just come along with me. By the bright shining light, by the light of the moon. If you want to be a badger just come along with me by the bright shining light of the moon."

THINK PINK

Locker room gives Iowa mental edge

By Marc Bona
Staff Writer

The NCAA doesn't keep statistics on team colors, but it's a good bet that no college chooses to sport pink.

If that's true, then why are the visiting locker rooms in Kinnick Stadium and Carver-Hawkeye Arena painted pink?

Hayden Fry, in his infinite football wisdom, had the visitor's locker room in Kinnick painted pink in 1984. He based his color scheme on the theory that pink subdues aggression.

Fry is no stranger to psychological tactics. He received his bachelor of arts degree in the subject from Baylor University in 1951.

"I think pink's a beautiful color," he said. "I think all teams should treat their visitors well."

Fry did admit, however, that the pink locker rooms are a tactical move. "When they're so worried about things like that, I know we got a victory," Fry said.

Fry noted the "various color and work schemes" that pink evokes. "By experience, the workers are not as productive. They don't turn out as much" when affected by the color, Fry said.

"It's all psychological," Fry added. "It's strictly mental."

In Deborah Sharpe's 1974 book, The Psychology of Color and Design, the color pink is associated with words such as "friendly," "caring," "nice," "kind" and "tender."

IN THE 1972 Volume of Personality Assessment, Max Luscher presented a theory that claims people should experience increases in "negative" or "positive" feelings in accordance with various colors.

According to Luscher, "negative" feelings of tension and anxiety should increase when a person contemplates the color red. Yellow should cause an increase in a person's "positive" feelings, such as happiness.

UI junior Kristin Spensley, an interior design major, has studied various color coordinations through her coursework. She said the burn center at UI Hospitals had its interior painted in "cool colors — blues and greens" in an attempt to guide the patients toward this frame of mind.

But most recent tests have shown that burn patients actually lose body heat, which makes them cool rather than hot, so the walls were painted again, this time in a "pale orange and pale yellow," according to Spensley.

She said the hospital didn't want anything "real bright, nothing real intense."

A nurse in the UI Hospitals burn unit, who wishes to remain anonymous, said the walls were painted in "light tones" on purpose.

Spensley said she believes Fry's decorating tactics are "rude." She said: "If it works, OK. But the real game is on the field."

THE LOCKER ROOM for visitors at Carver-Hawkeye Arena was painted pink last year, according to student equipment manager Greg Winter.

Fry said Ohio State's Earle Bruce was the first opposing coach to say something to him about the locker room's unusual conditions. According to Fry, Bruce said, "You so-and-so, I know about the color pink. I know what you're trying to do."

John Teicher, who broadcasts Texas-El Paso football and basketball games for the El Paso radio station KHEY, found the locker room so intriguing that he mentioned it on the air during the Texas-El Paso-Iowa football game. He told his listeners that the Texas-El Paso team was leaving the field and "heading for their pink locker room."

Fry said some teams, such as Michigan, cover the walls of visitors' locker rooms with "white butcher paper" or packing paper. "There's been a few things said" about it, he said. Mike White of Illinois and Bo Schembechler of Michigan have been particularly vocal, Fry said.

Some might wonder, after Iowa's fiasco against UCLA last year, if the visitors' locker room at the Rose Bowl is painted pink. That's not the case, said Rose Bowl Coordinator Connie Borg.

"They're painted a real light yellow, almost off-white, with blueish carpeting," she said.

Too bad. No excuses, Hayden.

PLAYERS

Chuck Hartlieb

By Steve Williams
Staff Writer

Lou and Dee Hartlieb have a tough decision to make this weekend when they come to Kinnick Stadium to watch Iowa battle the Wisconsin Badgers. They have to decide who to root for.

The Hartliebs are in the unique situation of having two boys playing Big Ten football. While their son Chuck waits in the wings as back-up quarterback for the Hawkeyes, younger brother Andy is a hopeful at the fullback position for the Badgers.

So, once a year, the Hartliebs have to make up their minds which team will receive family backing for this Big Ten showdown.

"I don't like to get in trouble with either school, so I cheer for the team who has the best chance to win the Big Ten championship," Lou Hartlieb said. "However, I also love to root for the underdog, so I'll just leave it at that."

Many times when two brothers square off in competition, the rivalry becomes so strong that the desire to win overcomes familial

Hartliebs torn between Big Ten sons in annual Iowa-Wisconsin matchup

"I'm proud of all my kids, and I know they will do well in the future," says Lou Hartlieb.

love. But in the Hartlieb family's case, this statement has absolutely no merit.

CHUCK AND ANDY competed together throughout their high school careers, and in 1983 the two combined to help Marion Central Catholic High School win the Illinois Class AA title.

Chuck Hartlieb said his senior year, when his brother was in the same back field, "was probably the best athletic year I've ever had. The chemistry between us was fantastic, and it was just the perfect climax to my high school career."

Andy had the opportunity to follow in his older brother's footsteps and become a fellow Hawkeye. But Andy chose to pursue a career of his own and made his way to Madison, Wis.

"There really was no decision as far as I was concerned," Andy Hartlieb said. "I just wasn't being heavily recruited by Iowa, and I knew Wisconsin was the place to go."

"ANDY HAD A lot of rough luck his senior year due to injuries, so he wasn't as highly recruited as he should have been," Chuck Hartlieb said. "At that time, Iowa had only one fullback scholarship, so I tried to tell him what to look for, and Wisconsin was an obvious choice."

The two are separated now, but their feelings for each other remain strong. Both players have found themselves filling reserve roles in their programs, but they have taken everything in stride and know where they are headed.

"Being in the same situation as Andy, I feel as though we can help each other out and pass our experiences on from one to another," Chuck Hartlieb said. "We both know that our time will come, and we just have to keep plugging away."

"Both Chuck and Andy realize that Big Ten football is a passing thing, and soon they will be in the professional world," Lou Hartlieb said. "I'm just glad they have the capabilities and were able to take advantage of them. I'm proud of all my kids, and I know they will do well in the future."

Lou's pride may grow as the remainder of his family leaves high school.

Andy Hartlieb

Jim Hartlieb is a junior at Marion Central and, like Chuck, he is a quarterback with a bright future. So far he has led his team to a 4-1 record and a No. 5 state ranking, and all family members agree that the line of college athletes from the Hartlieb family could very well continue when Jim is graduated in 1988.

"JIM LED THE team to the state finals last year, and he's gotten off to a great start this year as well," Chuck Hartlieb said. "He loves the game, and I just hope to give him the benefit of my experience when the time comes."

"Jim has the potential to make it at a major college," Andy Hartlieb said, "as does John."

Wait a minute, ... John? Yes, Lou Hartlieb has a fourth son, and while Jim is following Chuck in career pursuits, John has chosen Andy as a role model.

But the question remains: Who will Jim and Dee Hartlieb be rooting for come Saturday?

"The best team, I guess," Jim says.

Badger plays double role

By Laura Palmer
Staff Writer

Being a student-athlete is demanding enough on a player's time, but Badger fullback Joe Armentrout has added commitments: a wife and two sons.

"You really have to discipline yourself," Armentrout said. "Family is the most important. It's just knowing what you have to do — its not that bad."

Armentrout said one of the hardest aspects of his multiple role is road trips with the team.

"It's hard on me and my wife and my family, especially when I was in Hawaii and Las Vegas," Armentrout said. "You miss your family."

Armentrout damaged nerves in his neck this season during Wisconsin's loss to Wyoming, only the second game during his college career that he sat out because of injury.

"WE NEED JOE in there," Coach Jim Hilles said, because the team is more enthusiastic when Armentrout is on the field.

"We're going to practice him all week but try to protect him some and just hope we can get a good performance out of Joe again," Hilles said of the co-captain.

The Badgers are still adjusting to Hilles, who took over after Coach Dave McClain died of a heart attack last spring. The incident greatly affected the team, Armentrout said.

"It was a big shock," Armentrout said. "You don't realize how much you love a man and his importance in your life until you lose a man."

Armentrout said Hilles, former assistant coach for the Badgers, is "much more intense and demanding. He wants things done now and done right."

"We're more mentally and physically tough. Our record doesn't reflect it, but we think it will come out in the Big Ten season," he said.

Wisconsin posts a 1-4 record after last weekend's loss to Michigan. The Badgers' only win came against Northern Illinois.

WISCONSIN RETURNS 11 defensive starters, 10 of whom are seniors. Four seniors return to the offense.

"The leadership's there, but our record is poor right now. We're obviously embarrassed after UNLV," the game Wisconsin lost 17-7 to University of Nevada-Las Vegas, Armentrout said. "We were confident going into the games, but any time a Big Ten team goes West they have problems, and that was the case with us."

Armentrout said problems occur mainly in the team's offense.

"The offense has real talented linemen, but every play one person breaks down and messes up," he said.

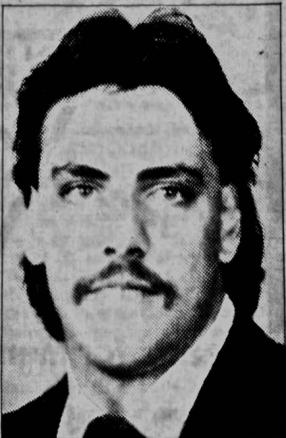

The senior from Elgin, Ill., started playing football after he watched his older brother Mike play.

"WHEN YOU'RE YOUNGER you always want to be like your older brother," Armentrout said.

Mike Armentrout went on to play football at Southwest Missouri State and was later drafted by the Kansas City Chiefs. He was released after a year.

Joe said that he has considered a professional football career.

"If I had the opportunity, I'd try it, but I'm not banking on it," Armentrout said.

Joe Armentrout

out said. "My brother came out of college and was drafted by the Kansas City Chiefs but didn't make it."

He said if his sons, Zachery, 20 months, and Jordan, 8 months, wanted to pursue football, he would offer his support.

"But I won't force them — if they choose some other hobby, it's OK," he said.

HAWKEYES

Poholsky ready to take control

By Robert Mann
Staff Writer

The battle for the No. 2 quarterback spot may be the closest since Iowa Coach Hayden Fry took over the Hawkeye program in 1979.

And after last Saturday, when sophomore Tom Poholsky led the Hawkeyes over Michigan State by completing 18 of 29 passes for 240 yards, the picture of who is No. 2 is even less clear.

Junior Chuck Hartlieb, Poholsky and freshman Dan McGwire are in the running for the second-string position behind fifth-year senior Mark Vlasic, who has been sidelined with an injury, according to Fry.

In the first game of the season, Hartlieb replaced Vlasic when the starter came out of the game. Since then, however, Hartlieb has been hurt, and McGwire has been first off the bench.

Poholsky held on place kicks in Hartlieb's spot until last Saturday when Fry let Poholsky start in Vlasic's place.

Does the situation sound confusing? It is. And it changes from week to week.

"I'M ENJOYING HOLDING for (place kicker) Rob (Houghtlin) on extra points and field goals, because I've never done that before," Poholsky said last week before the Michigan State game. "It's a chance to get out and play a little bit." Following the Michigan State game, however, Poholsky had changed his tune, especially because he will probably start against Wisconsin.

"After being here for two years, I feel really confident with the offense and can pretty much run everything without being worried," Poholsky said. "It's a great feeling getting a chance like this."

But even with the changing roles and close race for the back-up job, the quarterbacks realize that Vlasic, when completely healthy, will probably hold onto the No. 1 spot.

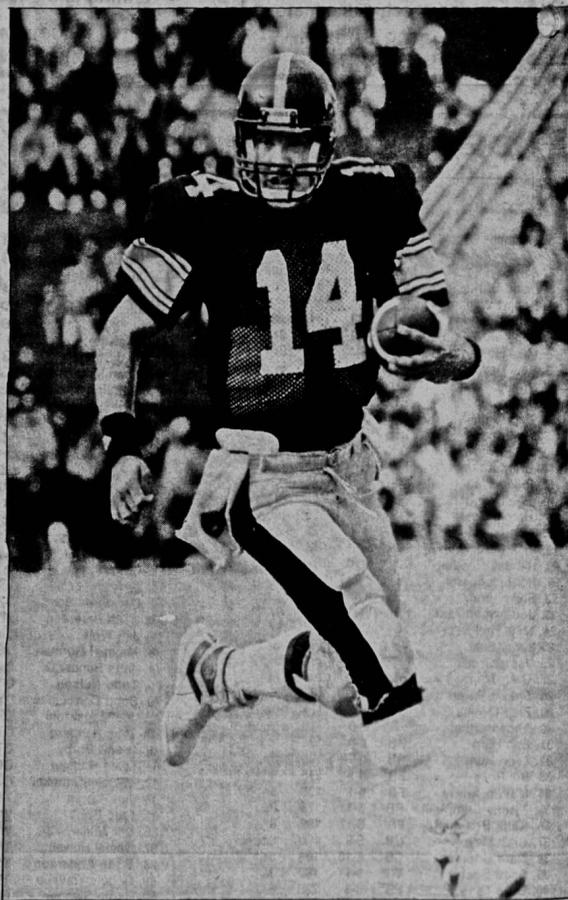

"You have to realize everybody has their spot on the team. You just have to keep working and know that you're contributing," Poholsky said.

After he injured a finger on his right hand, Hartlieb grew concerned about where he fit in.

Hartlieb said he "felt real good" about his place on the team before his injury. "The last couple of weeks have been really frustrating. Right now I don't know where I stand because my playing abilities have been limited."

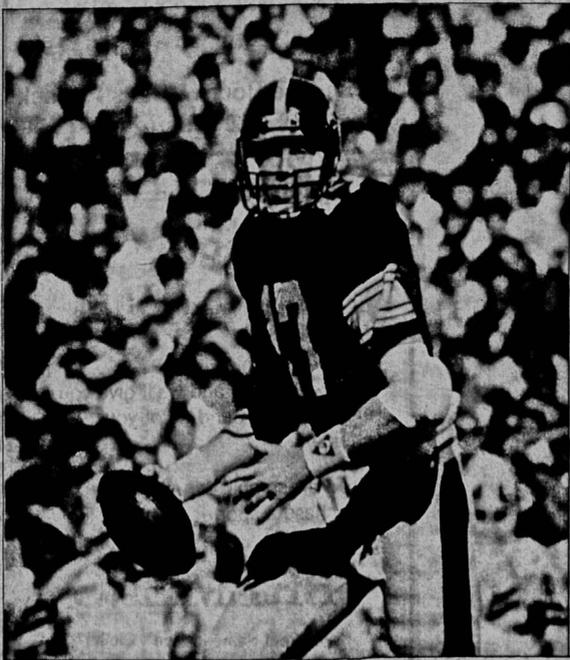

"I've been trying to stay in shape, mentally and physically. I was on the headsets both games (Northern Illinois and Texas-El Paso) coordinating the receivers and quarterbacks for Coach Fry."

MCGWIRE, WHO WAS one of the nation's top prospects when he came out of high school, is surprised at his swift progress with the

Dan McGwire, one of the nation's top prospects out of high school, looks for a receiver down field during the Hawkeyes' win over Texas-El Paso. McGwire is .500 in completions so far this season with 33 out of 55 attempts for 127 yards.

Hawkeyes.

"When I came in here this fall, I was at the bottom of the totum poll," McGwire said. "My goal was to be back-up quarterback. All three of us are still battling for the back-up quarterback spot."

"I didn't know if I was going to be red-shirted or not when I came here. Just to not be red-shirted amazed me, because I thought they wanted to red-shirt me. I'm working extra hard to win out that No. 2 spot."

The three are satisfied with their current positions on the squad, but that will not last forever.

"I'm going to be hopefully fighting for the No. 1 spot on down the line," Poholsky said. "Mark's going to be gone after this year, and it's going to be Mack, Charlie and me."

"I take it one day at a time," Hartlieb said. "I do the best job I can. In spring Mark will be gone, and I'll do the best I can do to get the starting job. I can't ask any more of myself than doing the best."

"I think all three quarterbacks want that No. 1 spot," McGwire said. "I'll work my hardest."

BUT THE COMPETITION between the back-ups has not — and will not — change the way they work together, they said.

"We're all real good friends," Poholsky said. "The competition is real good, and you can't let the competition come between the friendships and let there be any controversy or anything between the guys. You have to realize coming in that there's going to be competition."

"It keeps pushing us farther," Hartlieb said. "As long as I've been here, and Mark would probably agree, this is probably the best group of quarterbacks that has ever been here as far as talent goes."

"We work really well together," McGwire agreed. "Each of us helps each other out. When I need help or have a problem, Mark, Tommy or Chuck will help me out."

ATTENTION
SCIENCE AND ENGINEERING MAJORS!

The Air Force has openings for young men and women majoring in selected science and engineering fields. Like Aeronautical, Aerospace, General and Electrical Engineering, Mathematics, Physics and Computer Technology.

To help prepare for one of these, Air Force ROTC offers two and four-year programs of study which will defray some of your college costs.

After completion of the AFROTC requirement, and upon your graduation, you'll be commissioned an officer in the Air Force. Then comes responsibility, experience in your speciality with some of the best people and facilities in the world, and a mission with a purpose. You'll get excellent starting salary, medical and dental care, 30 days vacation with pay beginning your first year, and more.

Look into the Air Force ROTC program right away. See what's in it for you. See how you can serve your country in return.

To apply, contact Captain Art Belair, Room 7, Field House Armory, (353-3937).

Seniors - Call TSGT Smith, 351-2076.

A great way of life.

TRADITION

Trophies enhance team rivalries

The Illinois-Purdue trophy tradition began in 1905 when a group of Purdue students took a cannon, origin unknown, to Champaign in anticipation of firing it to celebrate a Boilermaker victory.

Purdue did win the game, 29-0, but Illini supporters discovered the cannon in a culvert near the old Illinois field and confiscated it.

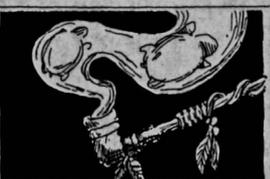

One of the fans was Quincy A. Hall, a member of Delta Upsilon fraternity. He and his fraternity brothers took the cannon to the fraternity house, where it remained for years.

Later, Hall removed the cannon to his farmhouse near Milford, Ill., until Hall suggested it be used as a trophy between the two schools.

In 1943, after a 12-year lapse, the cannon became a trophy.

Purdue has held possession of the cannon 21 times and Illinois 16 since that time. Two games ended in ties.

The cannon is currently in the Boilermakers' possession after a 30-24 victory over the Illini last year.

The Illibuck, a turtle, began traveling between Illinois and Ohio State in 1925, but the wear and tear of moving back and forth between the two schools was too much. "Illibuck" died in spring 1927 but was succeeded by a wooden replica.

Members from two junior honorary societies, Bucket and Dipper of Ohio State and Schem of Illinois, meet annually at halftime of the football game between the schools to smoke the peace pipe and make obeisance to "Illibuck."

An old brass spittoon, a little brown jug, a cannon and Paul Bunyan's ax sound like items out of an old Western movie.

They are, in fact, game trophies passed between college football teams.

Whether established by politicians or students, these trophies have lively histories and offer some insight into the colleges they are passed between.

The oldest and most visible trophy is the Little Brown Jug presented to the winner of the Michigan-Minnesota football game.

"It's one of the highly visible trophies in the nation," said Tom Greenhoe, Minnesota Sports Information assistant.

"In 1903, Michigan left the jug at Minnesota, and when (Coach Fielding H. Yost) asked them to return it, they said, 'Come and win it.'"

The two teams did not meet again until 1909. Michigan won.

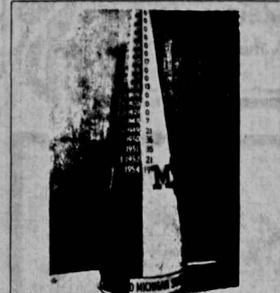

Paul Bunyan's Ax is presented to the winner of the Minnesota-Wisconsin game.

In 1948, Wisconsin's National "W" Club chose legendary Paul Bunyan's ax to symbolize the rivalry between the two schools.

The ax went to the Gophers after Minnesota's 6-0 victory in the 1948 game.

According to Tom Greenhoe of Minnesota Sports Information, the ax is "not one of the most important trophies of all."

The megaphone trophy, which is presented to the winner of the Michigan State-Notre Dame game, began in 1949.

It was sponsored jointly by the Michigan State and Notre Dame alumni clubs of Detroit.

The large megaphone, one half blue with a gold ND monogram and the other half with a green MSC, is inscribed with the results of previous games.

In 1935, Minnesota Gov. Floyd B. Olson and Iowa Gov. Clyde Herring decided to present a trophy to the winner of the football game between the two state's universities to "take the focus away from the game," said Tom Greenhoe of Minnesota Sports Information.

Greenhoe said a tremendous rivalry existed between the two schools, and great uprisings would occur when the teams met.

The governors wanted to "help quiet down the riotous of the rivals — more in the stands than on the field," Greenhoe said.

After Iowa lost the game, Herring presented Olson with Floyd of Rosedale, a full-blooded champion pig, the brother of Blue Boy in Will Roger's movie State Fair.

Olson commissioned sculptor Charles Brioscho to make a bronze statue of Floyd.

Floyd is currently in Iowa City after the Hawkeyes trounced Minnesota last season, 31-9.

Today, Greenhoe calls Floyd "the wildest (trophy) of all."

Paul Bunyan is also the subject of the trophy passed between intra-state rivals Michigan State and Michigan.

The Paul Bunyan-Governor of Michigan Trophy was presented for the first time in 1953 by Michigan Gov. G. Mennen Williams.

The Spartans took initial possession of the trophy with a 14-6 victory over the Wolverines. But since 1969, when Coach Bo Schembechler took the helm at Michigan, the Spartans have only won three games in the series.

The trophy is a 4-foot wooden statue of the legendary figure of the north woods astride an ax, mounted on a majestic 5-foot stand. An "S" flag is on one side and an "M" on the other.

The Old Brass Spittoon goes to the winner of the Michigan State-Indiana game.

The trophy was initiated in 1950 by the junior and senior classes and the student council at Michigan State and accepted by Indiana's student senate.

The spittoon came from one of Michigan's earliest trading posts and is believed to be more than 100 years old. It was the students' belief that the spittoon was around when both institutions were founded (Indiana in 1820 and Michigan State in 1855).

Michigan State has claimed the spittoon 26 times since 1950.

Michigan won.

In 1935, Minnesota Gov. Floyd B. Olson and Iowa Gov. Clyde Herring decided to present a trophy to the winner of the football game between the two state's universities to "take the focus away from the game," said Tom Greenhoe of Minnesota Sports Information.

Greenhoe said a tremendous rivalry existed between the two schools, and great uprisings would occur when the teams met.

The governors wanted to "help quiet down the riotness of the rivals — more in the stands than on the field," Greenhoe said.

After Iowa lost the game, Herring presented Olson with Floyd of Rosedale, a full-blooded champion pig, the brother of Blue Boy in Will Roger's movie State Fair.

Olson commissioned sculptor Charles Brioscho to make a bronze statue of Floyd.

Floyd is currently in Iowa City after the Hawkeyes trounced Minnesota last season, 31-9.

Today, Greenhoe calls Floyd "the wildest (trophy) of all."

The Old Brass Spittoon goes to the winner of the Michigan State-Indiana game.

The trophy was initiated in 1950 by the junior and senior classes and the student council at Michigan State and accepted by Indiana's student senate.

The spittoon came from one of Michigan's earliest trading posts and is believed to be more than 100 years old. It was the students' belief that the spittoon was around when both institutions were founded (Indiana in 1820 and Michigan State in 1855).

Michigan State has claimed the spittoon 26 times since 1950.

OFF THE FIELD

Hawks' Alumni band makes yearly reunion

By Scott Reifert
Staff Writer

The cadence in its step isn't quite as precise, and its music may need a little polish, but what the UI Alumni Band lacks in precision, it more than makes up for with enthusiasm.

"The Alumni Band lasts for less than 24 hours each year," Director Tom Davis said. "We form at 5 p.m. on Friday and disband after the game. A lot of people think we're really a full-time band."

In reality, the Alumni Band is just a group of ex-Hawkeyes who get together once a year. And for the past 14 years Davis has helped organize former Hawkeye Marching Band members into the short-lived alumni band. The band performs in the Homecoming Parade, at the pregame concert and during the pre- and post-game shows.

The band had 60 members when it began in 1974, but now the UI Alumni Association has had to limit the number marching at the football game to 200.

"WE DON'T CARE how many members march in Friday's parade," said Jane Dunlap Carver, assistant director of the Alumni Association. But seating for football games limits the band's numbers, she said.

Tom Brown, director of the Alumni Association, said the band gives former marchers the chance to get together during Homecoming weekend.

"During college, the band spends a lot of time together and puts a lot of effort and practice into their performances. They become very close and get to know each other," Brown said. "We wanted to give them the opportunity to come back to campus for a reunion."

"These are people who have been marching since time began," Carver said. "They performed as a band, and this is their chance to be part of a band again."

Davis said the Alumni Band gets together only an hour before the parade.

"I use that hour to try and get everyone together and line them up into a rank and file, so it looks like an organized group," he said.

The marching comes naturally, Davis said. Every band member knows the traditional Hawkeye band step.

Last year some of the alumni who marched in the Rose Bowls of the 1950s remembered the marching cadence and yelled it as they marched, Brown said.

MUSIC IS THE other thing Davis doesn't have to worry about.

"We just play the three core songs," he said. "The 'Iowa Fight Song,' 'On Iowa' and 'Roll Along Iowa,' and the band members all know them by heart."

After Friday night's parade some of the band members break up into groups and play in the local bars "hoping to get free beer," Davis said.

The band owes its existence largely to Davis, a UI percussion professor.

He spends Saturday morning organizing the band for its on-field show.

"We don't have any practice time, so we run through the program once," Davis said. "Then we have a catered lunch provided by the Alumni Association before we play the pregame concert in the Field House."

After the concert the band heads for Kinnick Stadium.

"All I know is that I give up a very good seat to do this," Davis said. "They put the band down next to the field, and you just can't see a thing."

Davis said after the game, Alumni Band members "head back to wherever they came from. The weekend happens so quickly that sometimes I don't get a chance to see everyone."

Alumni marching band members return from all over the nation for Homecoming.

"This year we even received one letter from an alumnus who is coming from Belgium," Dunlap Carver said.

DAVIS, WHO VOLUNTEERED to work with the Alumni Band after he stopped directing the Hawkeye Marching Band, has acquired a couple of strange nicknames over the past 14 years.

He's known as "Uncle Tom" and "Mom" to all his band members.

"The 'Uncle Tom' came from the book," Davis said, "but had nothing to do with any racist issue. A marching band director is on a more informal basis than a concert band director. It's a lot like an athlete and his coach. So at practice I'd say something like, 'Old Uncle Tom wants to be proud of you on Saturday.'"

His nickname "Mom" originated in the late 1960s.

"Our rehearsal was on Monday nights," Davis said, "and so were the meetings for all the sororities and fraternities. I told my band members that since they had to be at band practice, I'd be their substitute housemother."

Davis also recalled the time he took a group to an away game at Northwestern.

"Some of the guys had printed up some buttons, and as we would stop at the toll booths in Chicago, these guys would jump out and try to sell them to motorists who were flying by our bus at 70 miles per hour," he said with a grimace.

Card section is back in business

By Julie Deardorff
Staff Writer

Iowa's Jeff Drost has just sacked Northern Illinois quarterback Marshall Taylor for a 15-yard loss. Section 22 in Kinnick Stadium's west stands comes to life.

The word "Splat!" with a big green shoe and a red sock appears first. The cards come down and then go back up, spelling "Iowa" until play resumes.

After a shaky first year, the Black and Gold Club card section is back in business. Traditions build slowly, but despite the loss of 140 members since last year, members are encouraged. Things are already looking up, they say.

"Every time we turn around people are telling us how organized we are," Black and Gold Club President Mark Meye said.

The club consists almost entirely of freshmen; only about six of the 160 members are upperclassmen. This is because the group wanted to rebuild into something that students want to join, not a means of obtaining football tickets, Meye said. "We wanted people without preconceived notions and wanted to start over completely," he said. "We wanted to bring in the positive aspects from last year, not the negative."

THOSE IN CHARGE of the section hope to make it as popular as it was in the 1950s. The group died in the 1960s and was originally started up again as a Homecoming event in 1984. Because of the time commitment involved, it branched off into a separate group in 1985.

This year the members practice only immediately before the game. The stunts are made up on a computer, and card holders are given numbers that correspond to the card they hold.

The group performs 20 to 30 stunts per game. These include "Hawk Power," "Fry 'Em," "Touchdown" and a picture of keys or Herchy the Hawk.

"If you can hold a card below your nose and at a 45-degree angle, then you won't have any trouble" participating, said Black and Gold Club

Vice President Annette Ridenour. "It's really, really easy. I have a great time."

Card club members are guaranteed seats in the west stands, but they still must buy a season ticket for the games. The section is located next to the band, which makes the cards visible to those in the south stand and high up on the north stands but hard for the students to see.

"It's for the general public and not for the students, per se," Meyes said. "We want to portray a more positive image, which sometimes students don't do."

"OUR BIGGEST PROBLEM is getting known. The athletic department doesn't want us cutting into the people with two- to three-year seat priority before we prove ourselves," he said.

Patterning themselves after the Illinois and UCLA, the card club hopes to grow to 1,000 members in the future.

"Illinois has real good seats, which is a great motivator," Meye said.

UI student Beth Shepherd is one of the more enthusiastic freshmen who works on the stunt committee.

"I love it, I'm getting to meet all kinds of people," she said.

Members of the card section also want to stress positive spirit and cut down on the profanity that can be heard from the stands.

"When the students start swearing ... the club just sits," said Holly Hollibaugh, the group's adviser. "As a group they represent the university, so they can't do it. Most of them believe it's in bad taste."

"I HOPE IT helps the spirit," Shepherd said. "People sometimes make it hard. I hope we improve it in a better way."

Slowly but surely, this year's group is making an impact.

"The difference from last year is like day and night," Meye said. "We're not making the same mistakes, and we're much more organized than last year. The executive officers are providing leadership."

"The stuff they do just blows my mind," Hollibaugh said. "What I hope to see in the spring is carry over from the freshman class and not just be an excuse to get a seat. I'd like to see it grow into a tradition."
