Hasenfus goes on trial in Managua

NEW YORK (UPI) — Eugene Hasenfus, a U.S. citizen captured by Nicaraguan troops, said in an interview broadcast Sunday that "I'm not a freedom fighter... I don't believe it's America's war" to be fighting against the leftist Sandinista government.

Hasenfus, interviewed by CBS News' "60 Minutes" at a prison yard in Managua, Nicaragua, said his smuggling of weapons and supplies to the Contra rebels from El Salvador was only "a job" that paid him about $3,000 a month.

"This is not my war and I don't believe it's America's war," said Hasenfus. "I am down here as a job. I'm not a freedom fighter," he said, echoing President Ronald Reagan's term for the Contras.

Hasenfus, 45, of Marinette, Wis., has been held at a Managua State Security facility since his capture Oct. 6, one day after he parachuted from a U.S.-made C-123 plane that was shot down. Two American pilots and a third unidentified Hispanic man were killed in the crash.

THE PLANE WAS loaded with weapons and boots, which Hasenfus said were intended for the Contras who have been fighting to oust the leftist Sandinista government.

Hasenfus is expected to go on trial Monday before a three-member People's Tribunal. The charges against him have yet to be made public.

Nicaraguan President Daniel Ortega, also interviewed by CBS News, said "anything is possible" regarding Hasenfus's future, even if he is found guilty. Ortega left open the possibility Hasenfus may be back in the United States soon, saying, "We wish that he could be in the company of his wife and children."

Former Attorney General Griffin Bell offered to defend Hasenfus, but the Nicaraguan government rejected a request by the U.S. Embassy, acting on behalf of Bell, to delay the trial for two weeks so he could have time to prepare a case.

Government officials also said Bell could participate only as unofficial adviser to Hasenfus' Nicaraguan lawyer, Enrique Sotelo Borgen, because Bell was not a member of the Nicaraguan bar. Bell said he will fly to Nicaragua Thursday.

HASENFUS TOLD reporters soon after his capture that the flight was one of many supply missions for the rebels run out of a Salvadoran military base by two Cuban Americans with CIA connections.

Evidence revealed since his capture have substantiated some of Hasenfus's allegations, but the White House, the CIA and the State Department have denied any official government involvement with gun-running to the rebels.

Republican campaign tactics come under Democratic fire

By Bruce Japsen
City Editor

AMES — Influential Democrats chastised Republican politicians this weekend for negative campaigning.

"They do it to avoid the real issues of the campaign," said Rep. Richard Gephardt, D-Missouri, who addressed the 2,000 Democrats attending Saturday night's Jefferson-Jackson Day Dinner.

"I think Iowans expect more from their governor," said Gephardt. "Why would any Iowan seriously consider voting Republican this year?"

Gephardt was accompanied to the Iowa Democrats' 48th annual fund-raising dinner by several key members of Congress including Democratic Reps. Tony Coelho, Calif.; Jim Cooper, Tenn.; Richard Durbin, Ill.; Ronnie Flippo, Ala.; Bart Gordon, Tenn.; Buddy McKay, Fla.; Dave McCurdy, Okla.; Ike Skeleton, Mo., and Mike Synar, Okla. The congressmen and more than 130 Missourians followed Gephardt to the dinner to support his possible 1988 presidential bid.

THE MISSOURI politician was joined by many Iowa Democrats in his criticism of Republican campaigning.

Branstad and other Republicans are afraid to campaign on their records, said Democratic gubernatorial candidate Lowell Junkins of Montrose, Iowa.

"It is wrong that the governor gives lip service to economic development, but the truth is that he vetoed the lottery bill twice and is now trying to take credit for the many Democratic initiatives which he opposed," Junkins said. "With such a miserable record it is easy to explain why the incumbent would resort to a campaign of fear and deceit."

The former Iowa Senate majority leader said Branstad has been running negative television commercials that attack Democrats.

THE GOVERNOR is trying to buy what he couldn't earn — another term in office," Junkins said. "Iowa is in 48th place in new jobs and business opportunities. This is Terry Branstad's record — a record of failures. The human suffering of these cold facts represent what is unacceptable."

Democrat Don Avenson, speaker of the Iowa House of Representatives, said voters who remember Branstad's promises in the 1982 gubernatorial campaign should vote against him Nov. 4, the date of the general elections.

"He promised 180,000 jobs and we have 50,000 fewer people in this state," Avenson said.

Republican policies coming out of Des Moines and Washington, D.C., have hurt Iowa's farm economy and education programs, Gephardt said.

"THEY'VE KNOCKED the stuffing out of student loans," Gephardt said. "They think opportunity is for the privileged few who can afford higher education."

Gephardt said Iowa voters should vote Democratic and send a message across the United States.

"By doing that you're going to tell America you want a change in policies and a change in Washington," Gephardt said.

Iowa Democratic Party Chairman Arthur Davis said Democrats seeking election in November should be optimistic for change because the Iowa Republicans are disinterested.

He said Republican state party leaders canceled their annual Lincoln Day fundraiser because of a lack of interest by party members.

"THE REASON for canceling is because they only sold 600 tickets," Davis said. "We sold 2,000 tickets to our event. Don't tell me the momentum is in favor of the Republicans."

But Christy Cobb, director of communications for the Iowa Republican Party, said the Lincoln Day event scheduled for Oct. 10 had to be canceled because of the lengthened legislative session.

"Practically our entire head table wouldn't have been able to be there," Cobb said.

Blackmun talks at UI dedication

By Joseph Levy
Staff Writer

UI President James O. Freedman officially dedicated the new UI College of Law Building Saturday morning, while more than 400 looked on, at a ceremony on the front lawn of the new complex.

Freedman said the new building would promote increased emphasis in legal education at the UI, after state Board of Regents President John C. McDonald presented the building to Freedman and the UI.

"This university has a special obligation, as it continues a distinguished tradition in legal education, to recommit itself to the teaching of law as an essential branch of humane learning," Freedman said.

Highlighting the morning was a brief greeting speech from U.S. Supreme Court Justice Harry A. Blackmun.

"It's a personal privilege for Mrs. Blackmun and me to be in Iowa City for something other than a football game," he mused.

BUT ON A MORE serious note, Blackmun told the audience that the new building would be a great educational asset, while pointing out that the UI law school is the oldest continuing law school west of the Mississippi River.

"Bricks and mortar do not make lawyers or law teachers or leaders in the legal profession," he said. "But a good place to study enables a student to concentrate on what is essential."

Blackmun also emphasized that a good facility is likely to attract better students and improve the reputation of the law school.

Presiding over the ceremony, UI College of Law Dean N. William Hines, who called the beautiful weather conditions Saturday morning "symbolic," explained the significance of the building's round shape.

"The circle is the purest geometric form," he said. "It cannot be compromised."

UI International Center to use old law building

By Shawn Plank
Special to The Daily Iowan

Although the old UI College of Law building was vacated last spring for a move to a new facility, UI officials announced this week that the building will undergo extensive renovation so it may house the UI International Center.

The International Center, now located in the Jefferson Building, will gradually move into the old law building, perhaps by the end of the spring semester, UI Center for Asian and Pacific Studies Professor Robert W. Leutner said.

"We have to integrate the center into the life of the campus," Leutner said.

The state Board of Regents this past Wednesday approved $4.3 million to remodel the old law building, which has been vacant since May.

THE OFFICE of International Education and Services and the Center for International and Comparative Studies will make the move to the new center. The Division of Continuing Education, currently housed in Seashore Hall, will also be moved to the building.

Leutner said many plans were being made to attract students and the public to the new center, including increasing international lectures and for the profession of law, since it expresses perfection, clarity and geometric purity," he added.

Iowa Gov. Terry Branstad, who recommended the bond providing funding for the project, said the building represents excellence in the state of Iowa.

"It's part of the ongoing commitment that we have in the great state of Iowa to justice for all under rule of law," he said.

Iowa Supreme Court Chief Justice W. Ward Reynolds said the new building's library — the 10th largest law college library in the nation — will make its resources available to professional lawyers as well as students and faculty.

"Those books collect the wisdom and experience and the mistakes and failures of thousands of courts and legal scholars," he said. "We draw on that wisdom and learn from those mistakes in protecting and shaping the course of the law."

Reynolds added that the facility should help improve the UI law school. "This outstanding facility can only enhance this Iowa school's ability to develop lawyers capable of tackling challenging and complex legal problems," he said.

On Nov. 20 the UI will officially name the building the Boyd Law Building after former UI President Willard L. Boyd.

continuing the well-received luncheon seminars at the center.

The new center is also seeking a kitchen facility or a cafe for the use of students, faculty and staff.

Without such a facility, people would be forced to bring food from the east side of the river, Leutner said.

UI Center for International and Comparative Studies Director Michael L. McNulty said lack of space in the Jefferson Building was one of the key reasons for the move.

"WE HAD REGULARLY requested space for foreign scholars and faculty because there was not sufficient space to house them," he said.

Office space was also a problem for the new Center for Asian and Pacific Studies, created in May. Leutner said the center needs three or four rooms but currently shares office space with another international group.

There are also tentative plans to include a library with computers and video to aid students in international studies.

Several UI faculty members said Sunday that UI President James O. Freedman's influence has been enormous in developing international studies programs and helping devise the plan for the new center.

Nominees sought for local awards

The Iowa City Human Rights Commission is seeking nominations for its annual Human Rights Awards, which honor significant contributions by a resident of Iowa City to the cause of human and civil rights.

The award recognizes contributions in three areas: by an individual working in a service organization, an individual in the community at large and by an area business.

The award will be presented at a breakfast ceremony on Thursday, Oct. 30, at the Iowa City Holiday Inn.

Nominations for this year's Human Rights Awards should be sent to AWARDS, c/o Civil Rights Division, 410 E. Washington Street, Iowa City, Iowa 52240. A short supporting statement should be included with the names of any of the nominees. Deadline for nominations is Oct. 24.

Optimists sponsor Halloween parade

The Noon Optimist Club of Coralville will sponsor a free Halloween parade and party on Thursday, Oct. 30. The parade will begin at 6:30 p.m. at Morrison Park Swimming Pool Parking Lot in Coralville.

The parade will proceed up 14th Avenue to the Coralville Recreation Center. Story telling, cartoons and costume judging will take place at the center, with prizes awarded in several categories.

For more information call Dale Bildstein at 351-6200 or contact the Coralville Recreation Center.

Construction partially closes bridge

Work begins today on the removal and replacement of the south approach pavement slabs adjacent to the Gilbert Street bridge spanning Ralston Creek.

Because of the move, traffic will be reduced from four lanes to two — one in each direction — on the bridge.

According to the City Engineers office, construction will be completed in two to three weeks, weather permitting.

Correction

The Daily Iowan will correct unfair or inaccurate stories or headlines. If a report is wrong or misleading, call the DI at 353-6210. A correction or clarification will be published in this column.

In a story called "Band mixes '80s, punk music" (DI, Oct. 17), the opening band performing Friday at Gabe's Oasis was incorrectly identified. The band's name is Weird Summer. Also, the recording label of The Outnumbered was incorrectly identified. The name of the label is Homestead Records.

The DI regrets the errors.

Congressional candidates debate in Iowa City tonight

By Bruce Japsen
City Editor

Local political observers hope tonight's debate between 3rd District congressional candidates creates more interest in the Nov. 4 general election.

Republican John McIntee and Democrat Dave Nagle will appear at 7 p.m. in the Phillips Hall Auditorium, for the only scheduled debate between the two held in Iowa City before the election.

"We're sponsoring this kind of thing so people can come and listen in person, so they can hear for themselves what kind of answers candidates will give to different questions," Naomi Novick, Johnson County League of Women Voters president, said.

"We want people to be able to choose a candidate and then go out and vote," Novick said. "Participation is the bottom line. We want people to take an interest in this election."

RAYLEEN COZINE, chairwoman of the Johnson County Republican Party, said it is important for UI students to attend the debate.

"Students should be very concerned with their futures and these candidates could affect them," Cozine said. "It's important for people of both parties."

Those who attend the debate will also get a glance at the differences between the two candidates, according to Nagle's campaign manager Tim Raftis.

"People will be able to learn a lot when they see both candidates in action," Raftis said. "They'll get a glimpse of Nagle's and McIntee's personal qualities as well."

Raftis said the debate is at an opportune time for undecided voters with about two weeks left in the campaign.

"It's just about the time undecided voters begin to focus in on the election," Raftis said.

UNDECIDED VOTERS who attend the debate will hear each candidates' views on a wide variety of questions from different local panel members, Novick said.

McIntee and Nagle will answer questions from David Cronin, Iowa City Schools Superintendent; Stephen Licina, Legislative Director for the Johnson County Farm Bureau; Jerry Meis, president of Iowa City Chamber of Commerce; and Novick.

"Each panelist will be guaranteed to ask at least two questions," Novick said.

She said the candidates will be strictly timed on their answers to the questions.

"The debate will not last more than an hour and everything will be absolutely equal," Novick said.

Two Iowa City men were assaulted in unrelated incidents early Sunday, according to Iowa City police reports.

Kenneth Goetz, 18, of 4517 Burge Residence Hall, reportedly sustained lacerations to his right hand and neck after he was struck by an individual identified as a white male at about 2 a.m. in the 100 block of E. College Street.

Goetz was treated and released at Mercy Hospital.

Brad Davick, no age listed, 363 N. Riverside Drive, was reportedly assaulted at about 4 a.m. Sunday in the parking lot of 702 N. Dubuque St.

A man identified as a white male wearing a gray sweater vest reportedly came out from behind a car and started hitting Davick, according to witnesses.

VANDALISM REPORT: Loren Ellarson, 3153 E. Washington St., told Iowa City police officers Sunday that vandals damaged several trees and a mailbox in his front yard. Damage was estimated at $750.

THEFT REPORT: A windshield worth about $200 was stolen early Saturday from a van owned by Herb Johnson, 2435 Lakeside Drive, Iowa City police reports stated.

THEFT REPORT: A Clarion brand AM-FM cassette stereo, valued at $260, was stolen Saturday from a boat belonging to George Wilmet, 62 Regal Lane, Iowa City police reports state.

A UI student who was arrested for removing a barricade from a construction area made his initial appearance Friday in Johnson County District Court.

Jeffrey Dean Johnson, 19, of 2205 Quadrangle Residence Hall was charged with interfering with an official traffic control device Thursday at the construction area near Grand Avenue and Byington Road.

Court records state that a UI Security guard observed Johnson and several others remove a marked red and white-striped barricade from the area. The barricade was one of several placed across the north Byington Road entrance to advise of construction and a dead end street.

Johnson had the barricade in his possession and told the guard he had picked it up, court records state. He was later released on his own recognizance.

Johnson's preliminary hearing is scheduled for Nov. 4.

New facility could propel UI to forefront of laser research

By John M. McClintock
Special to The Daily Iowan

UI officials said Sunday they hope the construction of a new laser facility will make the UI a national leader in laser sciences.

A proposal by the UI administration to construct a new laser facility was well received by the state Board of Regents Wednesday when it approved $25.1 million in funding for the project.

UI Vice President for Educational Development and Research Duane Spietersbach said Sunday that a new facility would boost the Iowa economy.

"It would be a major economic shot in the arm of the state," he said. "Lasers are everywhere, this is the age of laser light."

UI Chemistry Professor William Swalley said the UI has already spent $1.6 million for laser equipment and plans to spend another $1.0 million for additional equipment.

UI Professor Dwight Nicholson, chairman of the Department of Physics and Astronomy, said he was pleased with the efforts made by UI

"IT'S VERY IMPORTANT."

New Target store will bring jobs to Iowa City, Coralville

By Patrick Lammer
Staff Writer

Corporate expansion will bring a new department store to the area, officials said Sunday.

A Target department store will open next fall in a building which formerly housed a TG&Y store in the Lantern Park Shopping Center in Coralville.

The new store, scheduled to open in October of 1987, is part of a $5 billion expansion plan by Target's parent company, Dayton Hudson Corp., to build 78 new stores across the country in five years, according to Bob Hibbs, president of the Hawkeye Real Estate Investment Co.

Hibbs also said Target indicated that the new store will create between 200 and 250 new jobs for the Iowa City-Coralville area.

Right now, Hibbs said Dayton Hudson Corp. has agreed verbally to come to Coralville.

"The only thing that is subject to is the attorneys coming up with the words in the lease," Hibbs said. "It's all been agreed upon, but it hasn't been officially put together in a single document yet."

HIBBS SAID he expects the agreement to be finalized in two to four weeks.

"I suspect some of the work will begin in the next month to six weeks, but most of it won't be done until the weather breaks in the spring," Hibbs said. "Right now we have to get the architectural and engineering planning done."

Hibbs said he believes the store will be good for the economy.

"It gives the consumer a new choice in the market, both in terms of selection and price," he said.

ANY TIME A MAJOR national retailer decides to put a store in a location, they believe it's going to be a good thing for them," Hibbs said. "I think the consumer can look forward to it."

There are currently 241 Targets nationwide, according to Gary Olson, operations manager of a Cedar Rapids Target store. The Coralville store will be the 16th Target store in the state of Iowa.

Representatives from Target's headquarters in Minneapolis could not be reached for comment.

COORDINATED STATEWIDE student rural crisis network could be another product of the conference. Representatives from the three state university groups plan to meet in Des Moines to work out the details for a statewide rural crisis network, he said.

"The response to the conference was really tremendous," Pollock said. "The possibility of coordinating the activities of the student groups statewide was explored and it really looks promising."

Barry said planning for a second university rural conference began this weekend. The second conference is tentatively scheduled to take place in February or March at the University of Nebraska at Lincoln, he said.

"THE UL-HOSTED NATIONAL UNIVERSITY RURAL CRISIS CONFERENCE closed Saturday and organizers said it will generate a better-coordinated network of student groups participating in the campaign for a farm crisis solution."

The conference, the first of its kind to be held at the university level, drew representatives from 10 universities in eight states.

Joe Barry, co-chairman of the University Rural Crisis Group, said the conference played a major role in plans for the creation of rural crisis student groups at Iowa State University and the University of Northern Iowa.

Judgment call

Friday morning The Daily Iowan printed two pictures of a car-bicycle collision. The first shot was of the car driver reacting to the accident; the other was of the bicyclist being treated by local ambulance personnel. The driver, an 18-year-old woman, appears to be crying in the first picture as the bicyclist, shown in the second shot, lies on the pavement.

While many professional photographers and news critics would label these two shots "creative" and "ingenious," several local residents think otherwise. More than a half dozen readers had called or written the newspaper about the photographs by Friday night, and many more will undoubtedly contact the newsroom in future days. Such comments as "The DI must really be hurting for news to put something like this in the paper" and "These innocent people have been thrust into the public light just because they happened to be in an accident" are circulating around Iowa City.

These comments have been made with good reason — each person has a right to individual privacy. Regular students and citizens do not wish to be the media's top news story on any given day, nor do they want their friends and family to make the front page headlines.

However, if printing such a picture could possibly prevent another life-threatening collision from occurring, the few days embarrassment and pain might be worth helping save someone else from a similar fate. By no means should each and every picture that captures vivid human emotions in the midst of tragedy be run. But in some cases such shots should be printed to increase public awareness and concern about a certain issue or problem.

In this particular situation, the accident occurred one block away from the Pentacrest, the heart of the UI campus. With thousands of students and faculty rushing to and from class via cars, bicycles and legs every hour of the day, it is surprising that similar accidents do not occur more often. Printing the photographs serves as a striking reminder to all of us that alertness and awareness to our surroundings are vitally important.

Fortunately, the bicyclist and driver were not injured seriously, and much of the physical and emotional trauma they experienced is hopefully behind them. The attention the two photographs drew to the importance of defensive traveling, however, should be with us for quite some time. Although we might never know how many lives will be saved or how much additional vehicle damage will be prevented, printing the two pictures is a chance worth taking.

Triple error

In the aftermath of the Iceland summit, it is difficult to know whose failure was the greatest and the most damaging: the public, the press or the president.

Press coverage — with the exception of an initial ABC news report — was sloppy and inept. It used weighted terms, saying President Ronald Reagan wouldn't "give in," instead of the neutral "negotiate" or "compromise." And it allowed Reagan to claim all the arms control proposals as his own when many were offered by the Soviets.

It allowed the use of the term "peace shield" as though the Strategic Defense Initiative were really a protective force field instead of a laboratory research program that might (or might not) be able to shoot down some Soviet missiles.

And the press did not explain the Soviet fear that Star Wars is an attempt to develop new offensive weapons.

It did not clearly explain, at first, that the agreement was a 100 percent elimination of Russian and American intermediate range missiles from Europe, and only 100 in Asia. In addition, a 50 percent reduction in long-range strategic weapons in five years with an option for 100 percent elimination in another five was discussed. In return, Star Wars research would continue, but be confined to the laboratory for 10 years.

But those failures would be inconsequential if the public had not failed miserably in informing itself on the issues of the day, particularly this issue. The fact is that most people have behaved irresponsibly.

They are ready to lap up the good things offered by this country but they are not willing to be "good" Americans and spend time understanding the issues so that they can make wise judgments on important matters of public policy. If they won't spend a few hours a week reading for their country, they surely will be forced to die for it.

And it is clear that Reagan failed. Star Wars is so real to him that he doesn't understand it is still just a possibility being explored in laboratories. He traded away the real opportunity to virtually eliminate offensive nuclear missiles so he could keep a program that might someday be able to destroy some missiles.

The fact is that he traded a bird in the hand for a bird in the bush. And there is no guarantee that he can catch the one in the bush.

Zero hour nears in elections

By Mary Boone

During the course of the past week, surveyors phoned more than 1,000 registered voters in Iowa City, Coralville and North Liberty, Iowa, trying to get a sense of the area's political leanings. Our discovery? You're not as much leaning as you are lying down.

With just half the surveys counted, an alarming 22.8 percent of those polled say they are "undecided" about their choice for governor. And it gets worse.

Nearly 40 percent of you say you haven't decided which of the three candidates to support in the lieutenant governor race. In the secretary of state race, 47 percent of you indicate no candidate preference.

REP. NEAL SMITH, D-4th District, told Democrats attending the annual Jefferson-Jackson Dinner in Ames Saturday night that the two weeks before the election are most crucial to the election's outcome. He's right.

"Two years ago the election was, for all practical purposes, over on Labor Day," Smith said. "This year — with just 16 days left — it's wide open."

The Des Moines attorney knows he's got his work cut out for him as he challenges Republican Sen. Chuck Grassley, but he also acknowledges that with "only 360 hours left there are a lot of undecided, uncommitted voters out there."

Sen. Joe Biden, D-Delaware, has visited Iowa a handful of times during the past six months, both campaigning for fellow Democrats and testing the waters for a possible presidential bid. Biden criticized Iowa voters for their lack of interest in the Nov. 4 election.

"I hear how fed up Iowans are with their state's economy and educational system and business climate, but I don't hear them talking about a change of state leadership," Biden said.

"When I'm in Iowa, I hear more about the 1988 presidential election than the 1986 election," he said. "You all have an incredible preoccupation with presidential policies."

With scores of presidential hopefuls already stumping the state, who can be blamed for thinking ahead to 1988? Who can help but take interest in the Richard Gephardt, Mauro Cuomos, Bruce Babbitts and Jack Kamps who offer new ideas and hope for this country?

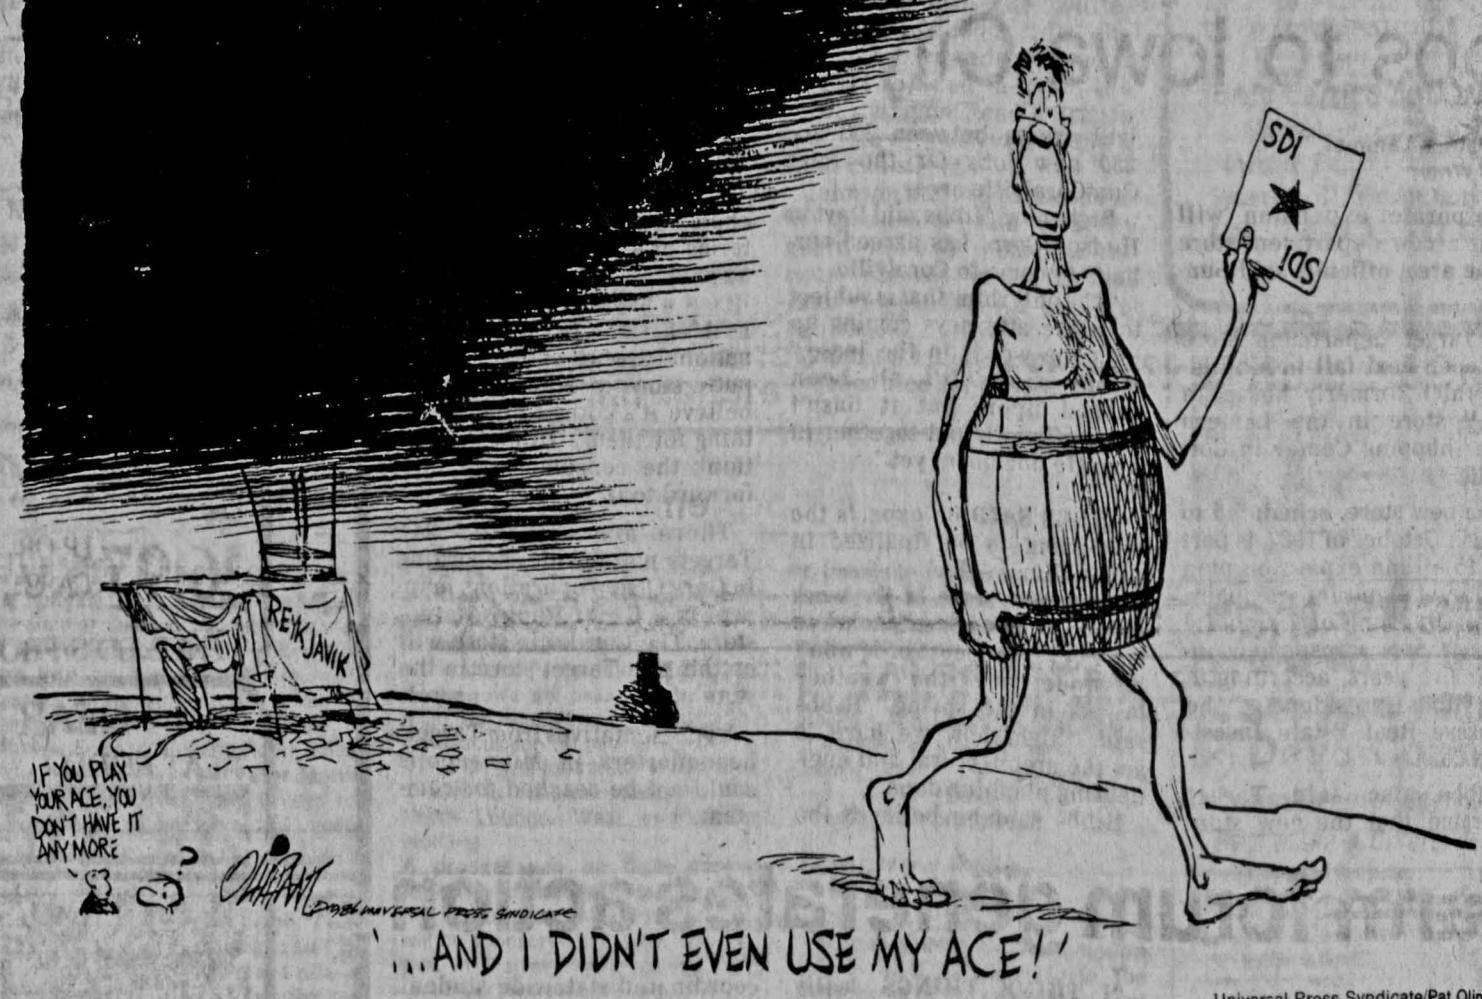

White House politics are attractive and they have a place, but not in Iowa, yet.

During the 360 hours before the statewide elections, Iowans need to focus on Iowa.

News organizations are devoting hours of airtime and vats of ink to the coverage of state politics. Candidates are making appearances throughout the state, speaking to students, farmers, nurses and teachers. They're debating economic development, education, defense spending and taxes.

The opportunities to learn about the candidates and their stands are readily available. The countdown is on. Now, it's up to voters to read, to listen, to ask questions and to decide — before we reach the zero hour.

Reykjavik: not a total failure

By James W. McCormick

IN THE AFTERMATH of the two days of meetings between President Ronald Reagan and Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev in Reykjavik, Iceland, much of the instant "expert" analysis has been sharply critical of the United States.

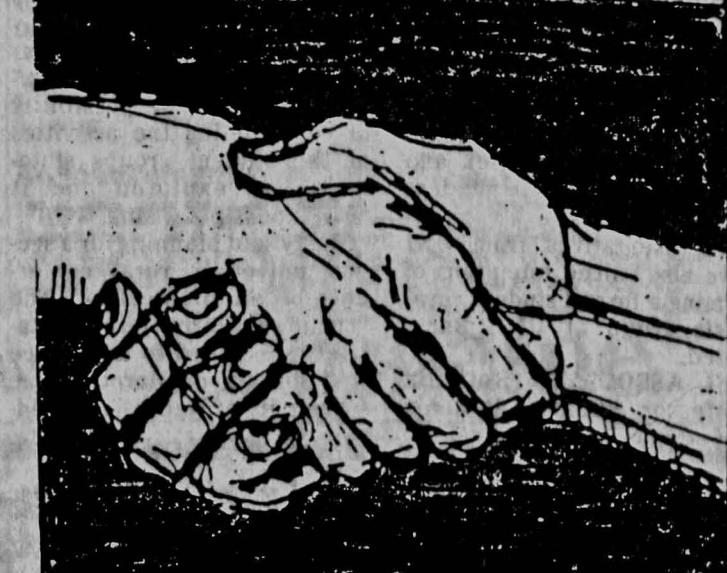

Liberals, in particular, squarely blamed the Reagan administration for the superpowers' inability to reach a historic breakthrough in strategic arms control.

In this context, the failure to reach a final accord at Reykjavik has been termed "a debacle" and "an unmitigated disaster of historic proportions." Reagan, his critics argue, sacrificed an opportunity to deliver humanity from the specter of nuclear armageddon because of his naive faith in the false promise of Strategic Defense Initiative.

Yet this thesis, though defensible, is flawed on at least two grounds. First, the liberal critique fails to recognize that, on the critical issue of strategic space defense, neither power was willing to trust the motives of the other.

Secondly, while the United States and the Soviet Union discovered their mutual self-interest converged to an unprecedented degree, different perceptions of the national interest on space defense prevented — at least for the time being — a consummation of potential achievements.

THIS BREAKDOWN IN the negotiations occurred over how to reconcile the positions of the two delegations on the Anti-Ballistic Missile treaty and space-based defense. The Soviets had made the tentative understandings on Intermediate-range Nuclear Forces, nuclear testing, and reductions in strategic offensive weapons contingent upon continued adherence to the ABM treaty. Among its other provisions, the 1972 treaty bans deployment of new types of missile defenses.

In response, Reagan proposed that some defenses would be needed in future years in case of Soviet noncompliance, accidents, or nuclear attacks by third countries. Further, Reagan contended there could be no first strike if all Inter-Continental Ballistic Missiles had been eliminated.

In part, the dispute over SDI reflects the deep mistrust — and often hatred — that has divided the United States and Soviet Union since the onset of the Cold War. Yet liberal criticism of the administration utterly fails to take this mutual suspicion into account.

IF ALL OFFENSIVE strategic weapons were verifiably eliminated a full 10 years before any initial deployment of SDI, it is difficult to comprehend how the Soviets could objectively fear a first strike. On the other hand, with comprehensive verification, one wonders why the United States continues to fear Soviet cheating.

To criticize Reagan exclusively for having the same habitual fears and suspicions as his Soviet counterpart — and to expect this historically deep distrust be dispelled in the course of two days of intensive negotiations — is an absurd and emotional reaction to the disappointments of the moment.

Similarly, it should not be unexpected that the United States and the Soviet Union would have viewed SDI differently in terms of strategic self-interest. Gorbachev sought to curtail SDI research to the laboratory because, despite some Soviet progression on Star Wars-type research, they remain significantly behind the United States in exotic space technologies.

A 10-year restriction of SDI research to the laboratory would allow Moscow time to broaden its technological base without falling significantly behind the United States. On the other hand, the president was plainly unwilling to forego exploiting American strategic advantages in new technologies.

Iceland was indeed a watershed in the history of strategic arms control, if not in the disparaging sense in which the liberals conceive it. Both sides remain committed, perhaps more so, to the dialogue of arms reductions. Gorbachev has staked his entire foreign policy on it. And, most significantly, the evidence is strong that a compromise on SDI research — and hence a comprehensive agreement — is in fact possible.

More Soviet troops leave Afghanistan

KABUL, Afghanistan (UPI) — With Afghan officials throwing flowers at their feet, a Soviet anti-aircraft regiment of 550 soldiers marched toward the home Sunday through the dusty streets of Kabul amid tight security.

The latest withdrawal was part of a 8,000-troop, six-regiment pullout promised by the Soviets before the end of the month as a peace gesture.

The United States has dismissed the gesture, saying it has no military significance because about 110,000 Soviet troops remain in Afghanistan.

Sunday's withdrawal, coupled with earlier regiment pullouts shown to Western journalists in western and northern Afghanistan, means the movement is mostly complete. Unlike troops withdrawn earlier, Sunday's soldiers were from the large Soviet military base at the edge of the capital.

They first paraded past a reviewing stand of Afghan officials and later — despite Soviet denials of involvement in heavy fighting — past a hospital where scores of wounded comrades stood waving in blue hospital uniforms.

"Kabul, the heart of the revolution in Afghanistan," Afghan leader Najibullah said at the reviewing stand, the Bala Hisar fortress behind him. British troops fled Bala Hisar in 1842, marking Britain's worst defeat in the nation with only a handful of the 16,500 fortress dwellers reaching safety in Pakistan.

AFGHAN PRESIDENT

Babruk Karmal, who was ousted from the top post by Najibullah in May and placed in the figurehead presidency, made his first appearance at a withdrawal ceremony. Najibullah spoke at all three.

Unlike Najibullah, who was surrounded only by officials and reporters when he spoke with the Soviet soldiers, Karmal was mobbed by well-wishers. Men and women clutched at him, some crying.

The parade route through the poor, dusty capital was lined with people — mostly schoolchildren given time off — and soldiers.

A cross section of the population stood waving and holding signs in Russian and English in a show of support apparently orchestrated for Western reporters invited by the Soviet government.

Soviet troops sealed off all side roads onto the route hours in advance and Afghan troops were stationed along the road. A few soldiers could be seen on the tops of buildings.

The presence of a large number of Soviet troops in Kabul had not been noted earlier in a weeklong visit of foreign press but foreign diplomats said Soviet soldiers routinely secure routes through the capital before their convoys enter.

The Soviet withdrawal of 8,000 soldiers includes one armored regiment, two motorized rifle regiments and three anti-aircraft regiments.

Pilot drug test may not be complete

PITTSBURGH — The physical exam required for airline pilots does not include tests to detect drug and alcohol abuse, leaving doctors "at the mercy of pilots to be truthful," The Pittsburgh Press reported Sunday.

In a copyright story, the newspaper said many doctors certified by the Federal Aviation Administration to give the physicals were critical of the required medical exams for pilots because they lacked blood or urine tests for drugs or alcohol.

The doctors said unless a pilot came to their office drunk or admitted having a drug or alcohol problem, a physician had virtually no chance of detecting the problem with the standard FAA physicals.

But FAA official William Hark, manager of AME standards, told the Press the tests were not intended to be "totally comprehensive."

Socialists lose ground in Greek election

ATHENS, Greece — Opposition conservatives and Communists made strong gains at the expense of the ruling socialists in local election run-offs Sunday, indicating dissatisfaction with tough government austerity measures.

The New Democracy opposition unseated Socialist mayors in Athens and the leftist strongholds of Salonica and Piraeus. Members of the Communist Party, refusing to support the Socialist mayor in Athens, helped New Democracy challenger Miltiades Evert.

The socialists lost at least a quarter of their party's strength to the conservatives and Communists on Oct. 12 in elections for mayors and local council members nationwide. Greeks voted Sunday in run-off elections for mayors in 215 cities.

Aquino resumes talks with Communists

MANILA, Philippines — Negotiators for President Corazon Aquino and communist rebels have resumed the peace talks stalled three weeks ago following the arrest of a top insurgent commander, a spokeswoman for the government panel said Sunday.

The spokeswoman for Chairman Jose Diokno of the Presidential Commission on Human Rights confirmed a story published in Sunday's Manila Bulletin that emissaries of both sides met for two hours and 45 minutes Saturday at an undisclosed place in the capital.

It was the emissaries' first meeting since the arrest Sept. 29 of Rodolfo Salas, described by the military as the former or current head of the outlawed Communist Party of the Philippines and commander of its 17,000-member New People's Army.

Mount St. Helens shows new activity

VANCOUVER, Wash. — The lava dome in the gaping crater of Mount St. Helens is likely to grow rapidly in the next two to 10 days, and will be accompanied by ash plumes and small explosions, a U.S. Forest Service official said Sunday.

"Seismic levels remain moderate," Tom Corcoran of the Vancouver volcano center said of the volcano's current state.

Corcoran said since increased seismic activity began Thursday, there has been some deformation of the volcano's lava dome, particularly on the west side. But he said bad weather has prevented detailed observations of the dome.

Corcoran said the restricted zone around the volcano remains closed for the time being.

The last dome-building episode at Mount St. Helens occurred in early May, but Corcoran said such activity has remained relatively constant in recent years.

Confederate soldier reburied in South

LOUISVILLE, Ky. — The exhumed remains of Confederate soldier Cyrus Graham Clark, his pine coffin covered with the Stars and Bars, were borne home to Tennessee for reburial after lying in a Kentucky graveyard for 123 years.

The remains of Clark, who died at age 36 in a Union prison during the Civil War, were exhumed Saturday in the Cave Hill Cemetery and taken back to Gainesboro, Tenn., in a hearse for reburial next Saturday.

Family members had last heard from Clark — a member of Gen. John Hunt Morgan's cavalry — in March 1863, when he wrote a letter to his wife. But it was not until 1972 that the family learned of his fate from a friend who had happened upon his grave in Cave Hill Cemetery.

This year they decided to bring back his remains and bury them by the side of his wife, who never remarried.

Shultz emphasizes summit's progress

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Reykjavik summit left "a lot to build on," Secretary of State George Shultz said Sunday, citing nuclear testing limits and medium-range missile cuts as the best prospects for progress in arms control.

Shultz, continuing an administration media blitz to accentuate the positive from the two-day meeting of President Ronald Reagan and Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev, also said a "vigorous" U.S. Star Wars anti-missile research program is responsible for much of the movement in the talks.

Interviewed on NBC's "Meet the Press," Shultz gave some weight to a report Sunday in The New York Times that the Soviets have softened their insistence that work on the Strategic Defense Initiative, the official name for Star Wars, be limited strictly to the laboratory.

The talks in Reykjavik generated a sweeping arms deal melding sharp strategic weapons cuts, an elimination of intermediate-range missiles from Europe and progress on curbing nuclear tests, but foundered when Reagan rejected Gorbachev's demand that SDI work be laboratory-only.

THE TIMES CITED U.S. "officials" as saying the Kremlin indicated a willingness after the summit to allow tests outside the laboratory of ground-based SDI components.

Later Sunday, when White House spokesman Larry Speakes was asked about the Times report, he said, "We just don't know the answer as to whether we've received private signals. We're anxious to clarify it."

When questioned about the Soviet stand on Star Wars, Shultz said:

"In Reykjavik, it seemed to us (the Soviet demand was) an effort to cripple the program. If they have further ideas, and there have been suggestions that they may, there is a good place for them to put them down on the table — in Geneva."

In addition to continuing the Geneva arms talks, Shultz said he probably will meet in Vienna next month with Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze, with whom he reached agreement for the Oct. 11-12 summit in Iceland.

ASKED WHAT WOULD happen next, Shultz said, "Well, there are two things we didn't really finish, although we seemed to come to closure on them in Reykjavik. . . . One has to do with nuclear testing, and the other with intermediate-range missiles in Europe and Asia."

"So those are things we'll be working on in Geneva and they are agreed upon and to try to narrow where differences continue to exist, and they did not take issue with me on that."

Rejecting objections from former Secretary of State Henry Kissinger and others that the 36-hour marathon Reykjavik talks were too precipitous, Shultz said such intensive negotiations are "the only way to do it."

He said Reagan "took advantage of an opening," and the long bargaining session "allowed us to consolidate ground" close to positions the United States has been advocating in recent years.

Study notes change in smoking habits

NEW YORK (UPI) — Seven percent fewer adult Americans smoke now than in 1976, leaving what the American Cancer Society calls a "hard-core" 30 percent who refuse to give up the habit.

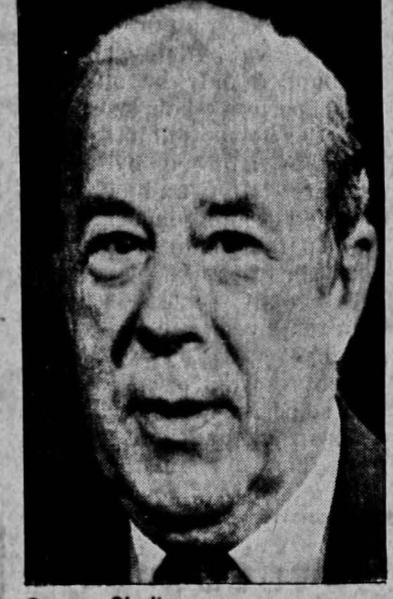

A 10-year report on smoking released by the society shows the number of adult smokers in America declined from 37 percent in 1976 to 30 percent this year.

The percentages of men and women who smoke declined, but the actual number of American women who smoke has increased, the report said. In men, the percentages and overall numbers decreased.

"There have been vast social, cultural changes in smoking habits and attitudes over the past decade," said society spokesman Irving Rimer. "I think the challenge to us today is that we're down to the hard-core smokers."

"We are also concerned about women smokers since lung cancer has now surpassed breast cancer as a leading cause of death in women, a fact that can be directly attributed to smoking," he said.

In 1976, 42 percent of American men and 32 percent of women over age 20 were smokers. By 1985, the percentage for men had dropped to 33 percent while the percentage of women smokers dipped to 28 percent.

George Shultz

may get some attention (in Vienna)."

He added the American side also will "keep pushing on this issue of human rights," which got little public attention in Iceland amid the feverish expectations of a sweeping arms control accord.

Shultz said it would be "a fair appraisal" to say agreement on limiting nuclear tests — a prime Soviet objective — is close, but noted the U.S. side insists on new verification standards and would link a comprehensive test ban to a parallel decline in nuclear arsenals.

ASSESSING THE status of arms talks after Reykjavik, Shultz said, "We've made a tremendous amount of progress, not only on intermediate-range missiles and strategic arms and missiles, but also in the space defense area. So, there's a lot to build on and we're ready to do it."

Max Kampelman, the chief U.S. negotiator in Geneva, echoed Shultz's positive assessment, saying recent contacts with the Soviets have been marked by "a mild atmosphere and not an aggressive atmosphere."

Appearing in ABC's "This Week with David Brinkley," Kampelman said he had tried to make clear to his Soviet counterparts that "our objective is to build on what was agreed upon and to try to narrow where differences continue to exist, and they did not take issue with me on that."

Rejecting objections from former Secretary of State Henry Kissinger and others that the 36-hour marathon Reykjavik talks were too precipitous, Shultz said such intensive negotiations are "the only way to do it."

He said Reagan "took advantage of an opening," and the long bargaining session "allowed us to consolidate ground" close to positions the United States has been advocating in recent years.

"It is a shame young women are falling into a trap as part of their goal toward equality with boys," Rimer said.

The report also shows the number of women smokers consuming more than 25 cigarettes a day increased from 19 percent to 24 percent between 1976 and 1980. The rate also increased for male smokers by 3 percent.

College-educated men are less likely to smoke than blue-collar workers with low income, while women who work are more likely to smoke than those who stay at home, the report said.

"Demographics show (hardcore smokers) are less educated, blue collar and minorities, a tougher segment for us to influence to quit," Rimer said.

The report also indicates the public is increasingly dissatisfied with smoking. A 1985 survey showed 75 percent of Americans felt smokers should not light up in the presence of others, compared to 69 percent who felt the same way in a 1983 survey.

NASA specialist speaks to local students

By Darin E. Baker
Staff Writer

Students at Southeast Junior High School learned Friday that there's more to the National Aeronautics and Space Administration than space travel.

"NASA does more than space," NASA Aerospace Education Specialist Will Robertson told more than 200 seventh and eighth grade students.

"That's what your future is about," Robertson said, using colorful photos and models to explain current NASA projects.

Students expressed interest in NASA programs, particularly the space shuttle program.

"When is the next space shuttle going up?" student Melanie Dick asked.

Robertson said the shuttle has been limited to the use of expendable rockets to continue space exploration since it was grounded after the Challenger incident in January.

BUT ROBERTSON said the Space Shuttle Atlantis is scheduled for launch in March of 1988.

Atlantis is one of three shuttles in NASA's fleet that includes Columbia and Discovery.

Robertson said NASA plans to build a fourth shuttle to replace the Challenger, but officials have not determined how funding for the $3 billion project will be provided.

Student Seth Zimmerman questioned Robertson about the possibility of a space station.

Robertson said the space shuttle will operate as a workhorse for the first space station, scheduled to open in the mid-1990s.

"You can do things in space that you can't do on earth," Robertson noted.

He said the station will house six crew members and will be used for research into new medicines, metals and computer chips. Robertson said it is designed to lift off like a helicopter, but engines rotate forward to pull the plane in a forward motion once it is air-

ROBERTSON SHOWED a model of the 'bottleneck' plane, one of three developmental aircraft currently used at NASA. He explained that the plane is tapered in the middle to provide a 'piggyback' service for space shut-bore.

The third of these developmental aircraft will allow travelers to fly from New York to Los Angeles in about 48 minutes.

"I hope you have a better understanding of what space is all about," Robertson said.

Robertson said NASA's other projects will allow astronomers to "see into the past."

He said the Edwin P. Hubble Space Telescope will allow them to study astronomical events more closely.

'Lackadaisical' contact care can lead to eye infections

By Tom Hunter
Staff Writer

Contact lenses are a simple solution to bad eyesight for 25 million Americans who wear them, but these tiny plastic saucers may mean disaster for those who wear them carelessly.

"I got a terrible, terrible eye infection," UI freshman Tina Finer said. "It was gross. My eye was red and swollen and shut all the time with mucus in it."

Her problem came when she switched from daily-wear contact lenses, which must be taken out while sleeping, to extended-wear contacts, which can be worn on the eye continuously for 30 days, she said.

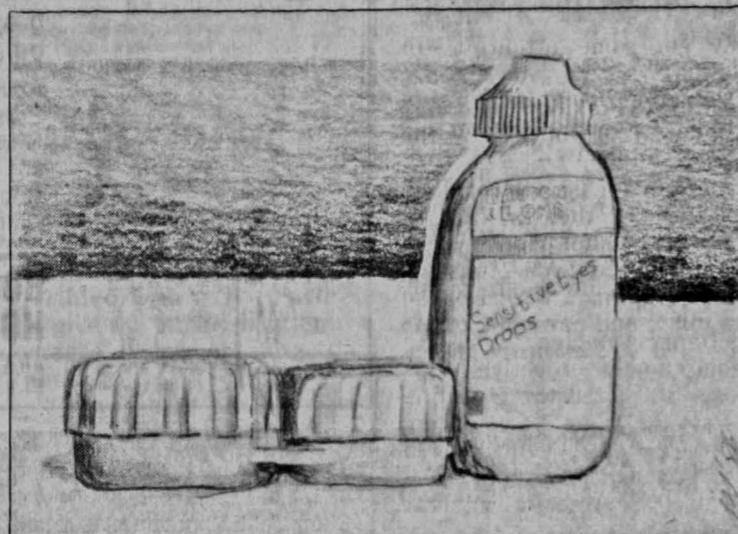

"I thought: 'Great, I can wear 'em 30 days without taking them out,' but my doctor said I should probably take them out every two weeks," Finer said.

FINER HAD LEFT her extended-wear contacts on her eyes for five weeks straight when the infection occurred, she said.

A dangerous new eye infection, Acanthamoeba keratitis, that affects extended and daily-wear contact users alike, has ophthalmologists worried, because present bactericidal fighting drugs are ineffective.

"It's very difficult to stop; you can totally lose your eyes," said Merle Kjonaas, a doctor with Eye Associates of Iowa City, 1060 William St.

Kjonaas said the U.S. Food and Drug Administration had approved extended-wear contacts for up to a month in the eye, but very few ophthalmologists are willing to let their patients go that duration. Kjonaas said such lengthy use is "scary."

The Daily Iowan/Jeffrey Sedam

I THINK EVERY individual should be judged separately, but most people shouldn't wear them more than a week," Kjonaas said.

Wearers who mix their own saline wetting solution rather than buying premade over-the-counter solutions are candidates for the infection, he said. But wearers with generally poor habits of lens cleanliness make up an equal share of those infected.

"The common thing seems to be a lackadaisical attitude toward contacts," Kjonaas said, "not following the care instructions."

The problem is wearers tend to view their contacts as a cosmetic rather than a medical device, he said.

"These things are so subtle, you don't realize you are compromising your eyes," he said.

UI FELLOW in Cornea and External Disease Robert Weisenthal said it is important to respond to any pain or redness by taking the contacts out immediately rather than a few days later.

If eyes become infected, treatment is very intensive, but a newer treatment using a variety of antibiotics reduces the chance of eye removal, he said.

"In the past it was horrible, just killing the bug and saving the eye," Weisenthal said.

UI Junior Mark Henderson said he had a similar problem when he neglected to clean his contacts with a special enzymatic cleaner that removed calcium deposits his eyes placed on them.

Libel suit filed by Jepsen aide

DES MOINES (UPI) — A retired Marine colonel who served on the staff of former Sen. Roger Jepsen, R-Iowa, has filed libel suit against Sen. Tom Harkin, members of Harkin's 1984 campaign staff and five news organizations.

James Secrist's suit, filed Oct. 10 of this year in U.S. District Court in Des Moines, alleges Harkin and his campaign staff libeled him in an Oct. 11, 1984 press release. The release accused Secrist of soliciting campaign contributions for Jepsen from defense contractors.

Secrist also alleges United Press International, the Des Moines Register, The Burlington Hawkeye, The Washington Evening Journal and The Omaha World Herald libeled him by publishing news articles based on the press release.

The suit, which was filed one day before the two-year deadline to file civil suits, alleges the press release exposed Secrist to public ridicule and contempt and damaged his reputation.

The suit seeks $600,000 in actual damages from each of the defendants and $4 million in punitive damages.

Harkin's aides last week said the suits without merit. Representatives of the newspapers and news organizations named in the suit declined comment.

Harkin handily defeated Jepsen, an incumbent from Davenport, in the 1984 election with 56 percent of the vote. The hard-fought race received national attention and was characterized by personal attacks and negative campaigning.

3 apprehended in Wailing Wall attack

JERUSALEM (UPI) — Police announced the arrests Sunday of three Palestinian suspects in a grenade attack near the Wailing Wall in Jerusalem last week that killed one person and wounded 69.

The three young Arabs are thought to have been recruited through Jordan by Fatah, the main branch of Yassir Arafat's Palestine Liberation Organization, police spokesman Rafi Levy said.

"Our investigation was very thorough," Levy said. "We are confident that these are the ones who committed the act."

A government statement later said that "in the course of our investigation, weapons and combat materials in the squad's possession were handed over to the authorities." It did not elaborate on what kind of weapons were involved.

The names of the suspects, said to be in their early 20s, were not immediately released.

The three Palestinians live in Silwan and Abu Tor, predominantly Arab neighborhoods of Jerusalem, Levy said.

HE SAID THE suspects claimed they belong to Islamic Jihad, a code name used by Shiite Moslem extremists who have seized American and French hostages in Lebanon and attacked Western targets in a campaign purportedly backed by Iran.

The Arab suspects were accused of hurling three Soviet-made hand grenades into a crowd of Israeli soldiers and their families last Wednesday night after the troops attended a traditional swearing-in ceremony at the Wailing Wall, Judaism's holiest site.

The father of an 18-year-old soldier was killed and 69 people, including 42 soldiers, were wounded in the attack — the worst in Jerusalem in nearly three years.

The attack, just outside the Dung Gate of Jerusalem's walled Old City, was followed Thursday by an apparent reprisal raid by Israeli warplanes on guerrilla targets in Miye-Miye, a Palestinian refugee camp on the outskirts of the southern Lebanese port of Sidon.

AT LEAST FOUR people were killed and 20 wounded in the raid.

A U.S.-made Israeli warplane was lost in the air raid — reportedly shot down by a shoulder-fired SAM-7 missile. Its two crewmen bailed out of the plane and parachuted into an olive grove near Miye-Miye.

Diplomats kicked out by Soviets

MOSCOW (UPI) — The Soviet Union Sunday expelled five U.S. diplomats for "unlawful activities," an action expected since the United States expelled 25 members of the Soviets' United Nations delegation.

The five Americans — four of them stationed at the U.S. Embassy in Moscow and one at the U.S. consulate in Leningrad — were declared "persona non grata" by the Soviets and thrown out of the country.

In Washington, spokesmen for the State Department and White House had no immediate comment, saying they learned of the expulsion from the news media.

The U.S. Embassy in Moscow also declined comment.

"A statement was made to the U.S. Embassy in Moscow today on the impermissibility of the activities of a number of workers of American diplomatic mission in the Soviet Union," the official Soviet news agency Tass said.

THE STATEMENT NAMED W. Norville, C. Ehrenfreid, G. Lonkvist, D. Harris of the U.S. Embassy in Moscow and D. Roberts of the U.S. consulate in Leningrad.

"A firm protest was lodged with the U.S. Embassy in this connection," Tass said. "For the actions which are incompatible with their official status the above mentioned workers of the embassy and the consulate general were declared to be persona non gratae and were asked to leave the U.S.S.R."

"The attention of the U.S. Embassy was again drawn to facts of the continuing use of American diplomatic missions in the U.S.S.R. for illegal activities against the Soviet Union, and the demand was made that appropriate measures be taken for stopping them," the news agency said.

The wording of Sunday's statement indicated the five U.S. diplomats were expelled for engaging in espionage. The ouster had been anticipated since the United States ordered 25 Soviet diplomats from the United Nations delegation out of the country last month. The last of the 25 left Wednesday, officials said.

THE LAST AMERICAN diplomat to be expelled was defense attache Erik Sites in May for "intelligence activities incompatible with his official status." He was declared persona non grata for espionage.

Michael Sellers, a second secretary, was expelled in March after Tass charged he was caught in "flagrant delicto" in an act of espionage. Paul Stombaugh, also a second secretary, was kicked out in June 1985 after he was "caught red-handed" while spying.

Gillette's last-second kick tops Iowa

By Todd Zimanek
Sports Editor

ANN ARBOR, Mich. — Michigan's Mike Gillette kicked a 34-yard field goal with five seconds remaining to give the Wolverines a "lightning striking" 20-17 victory over Iowa Saturday at Michigan Stadium.

On October 22, 1983, the last time before Saturday which Iowa played at Michigan Stadium, the Wolverines defeated the Hawkeyes in a remarkably similar fashion when Bob Bergeron kicked a 45-yard field goal with 12 seconds remaining to win the game 16-13.

Gillette, wearing No. 19, the same number Bergeron wore three years earlier, ended the game after a 34-yard, 10-play drive by the Wolverines in the final two minutes. This was also the second consecutive Iowa-Michigan game won on the final play after Rob Houghtlin kicked a 29-yard field goal to give Iowa a 12-10 victory at Kinnick Stadium in 1985.

BEFORE THE LAST-DITCH Michigan drive Iowa appeared to be headed toward a game-winning field goal attempt of its own. The Hawkeyes had a third and one situation on the Michigan 43-yard line when quarterback Mark Vlasic pitched to fullback Richard Bass on an option play.

Bass never gained control of the ball, and it was recovered by Wolverine linebacker Andy Moeller one yard from going out of bounds on the 49 with 1:57 remaining.

"Everything we use we work on," Vlasic said of the option. "We're not going to go out and use something that we have not worked on. If anything went wrong I don't know if I pitched it out far enough to him."

IN 1983 FORMER Iowa running back Owen Gill suffered the same fate as Bass. Gill fumbled with 1:30 remaining to give the Michigan offense a chance to set up Bergeron's heroics.

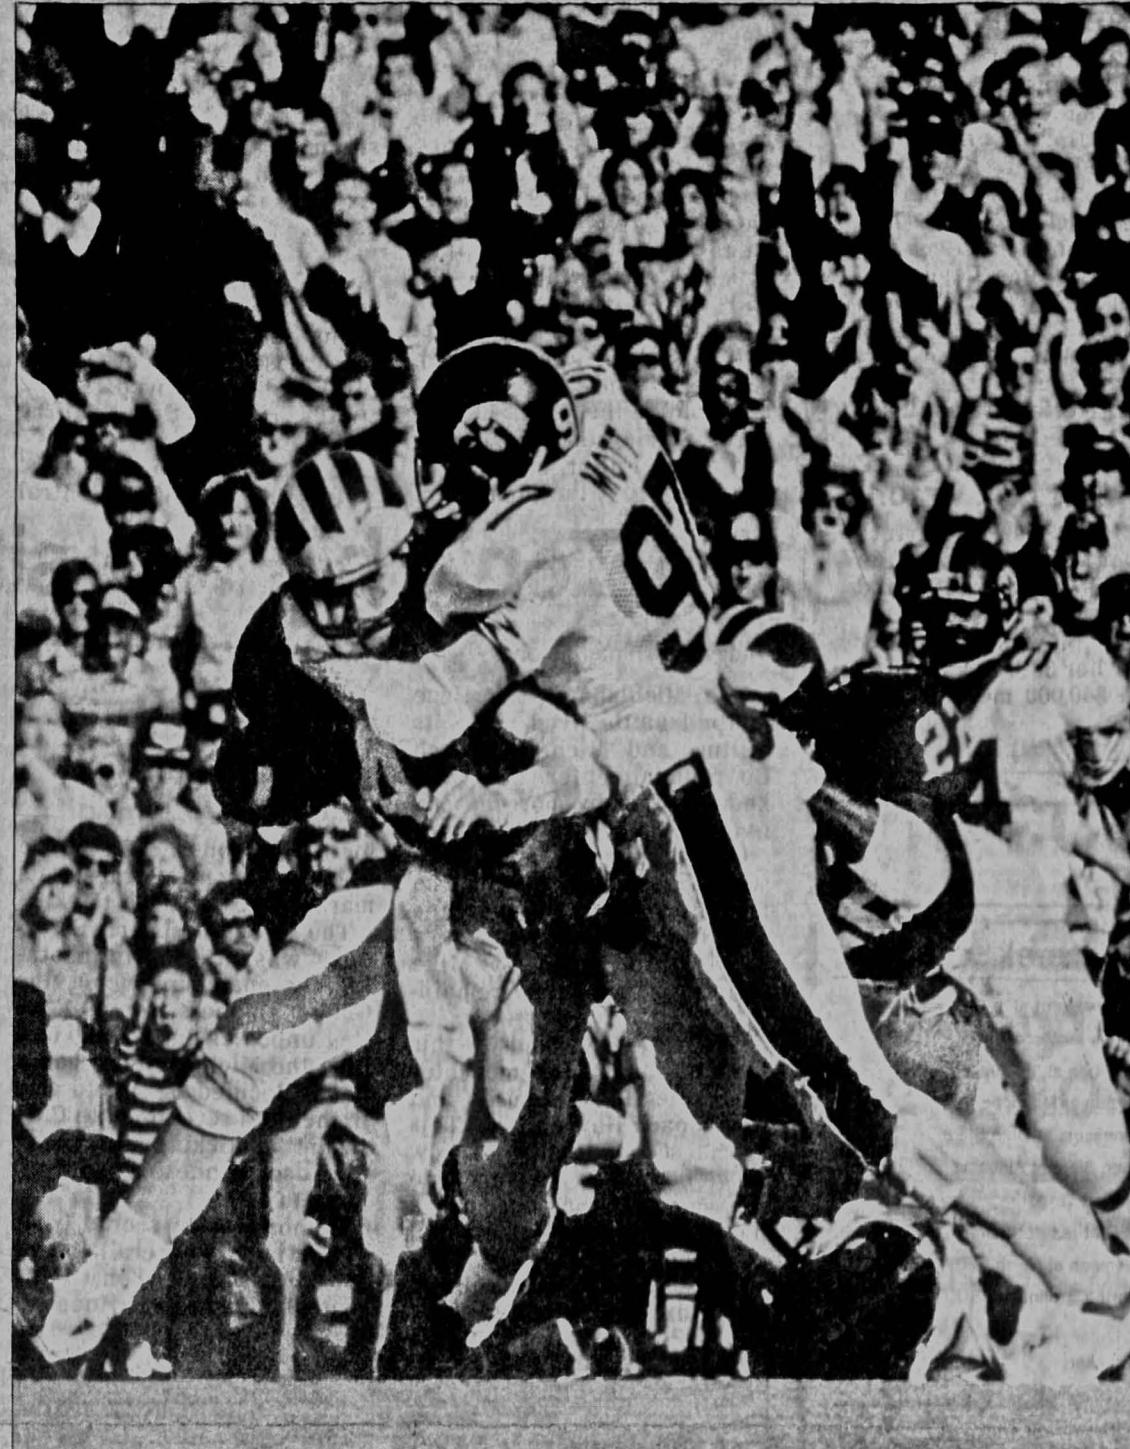

"It was very similar — no question about it," Iowa Coach Hayden Fry said about his last trip to Ann Arbor. "It was also very similar to what we did to Michigan last year at our place. Like Bo said (Michigan Coach Schembechler) we're even now.

"That is four games out of six now that have been decided by a field goal right near the end of the game. That's a ball game we should have never lost."

"It's a great win, but I wouldn't know if it was revenge," Schembechler said. "I'm glad we won and, I would've felt really bad if we lost. I would've felt bad if we tied because we were down there a couple of times. It was not one of our best games, but I was proud of this team."

BEFORE GILLETTE'S kick Michigan had another opportunity in the fourth quarter to take the lead when the

Hawks post key win over Wildcats

By Julie Deardorff
Staff Writer

The Iowa field hockey team gave Coach Judith Davidson a slight reminder of the thrill of coaching with a critical 4-2 victory over highly-touted Northwestern Saturday at Kinnick Stadium.

"It was our best game of the season by far. We knew Northwestern is so good, we'd really have to play hard," Davidson said after the win. "I just can't say enough about my freshmen. They're such terrific group to work with, they're so good and so much fun and so eager to play. It just makes coaching a dream."

The win gives the Hawkeyes a 12-1-1 record, 7-0 in Big Ten play and almost clinches the Big Ten title. Northwestern is in second place at 10-2-2 and 4-1-2 in the Big Ten, with three conference games remaining.

"WE WERE HOPING for a tie at least," Davidson said. "I didn't expect to be ahead 3-0 at one point. One thing about this group is that they're explosive, and we have a new people that can score." Anna Salcido scored the first goal of the game and her tenth of the season by being in the right place at the right time. With 17:49 left in the first half, the ball rebounded off Northwestern goalie Robin Clarke's pads, and Salcido slapped it into the goal.

Liz Tchou scored the second goal for Iowa minutes later on a beautiful fake to give Iowa a 2-0 lead. Tchou pretended to pass the ball but pushed it ahead to herself

Patti Wanner scored the eventual winning goal on one of the best plays of the game. With 7:47 left in the first half the ball was inbounded from a penalty corner to the 30-yard line. Wanner stopped the ball and lofted it all the way to the goal.

"We score off that a lot," Davidson said. "We felt like it would work because Robin (Clarke) is pretty short."

THE WILDCATS GOT on the scoreboard with 3:06 to play in the first half on a goal by Jennifer Averill, who was injured in the second half and had to leave the game.

Tchou notched her second tally of the game off a penalty corner in the second half assisted by Deb Robertson and Michelle Murgatroyd.

"You have to give Salcido and Robertson a lot of credit," Davidson said.

"RosAnna moved the ball very well, Karen Napolitano played well. Frederique (Kock) did a super job in center-midfield. I think this was the strongest game of the year so far for her."

Boston baffles Mets; takes 2-0 Series lead

NEW YORK (UPI) — Dwight Evans and Dave Henderson homered to power an 18-hit attack and turn an expected pitching duel into a Boston tea party Sunday night, giving the Red Sox a 9-3 victory over the New York Mets and a two games to none lead in the World Series.

The Red Sox, who have not won a World Series in 68 years, assaulted five New York pitchers and became only the 11th team in World Series history to win the first two games on the road. Of the 10 previous clubs to do so, only last year's St. Louis Cardinals lost the Series.

After a travel day Monday, the best-of-seven Series resumes at Fenway Park Tuesday night with Dennis "Oil Can" Boyd pitching for the Red Sox and Bob Ojeda, a former Red Sox player, going for the Mets.

SUNDAY NIGHT'S game had been billed as a classic matchup between baseball's premier power pitchers — New York's Dwight Gooden and Boston's Roger Clemens. But that never materialized as neither pitcher made it into the sixth inning.

Instead it was a classic demonstration of Boston batting tips. The 18 hits were a team record for the Red Sox in a World Series game. They fell two short of the record, set by the New York Giants in 1921 and tied by the St. Louis Cardinals in 1946.

The Red Sox rapped Gooden for eight hits and six runs in five innings in tagging him with the loss. Henderson and Evans each hit 400-foot home runs, with Evans' clout coming with a man aboard in the fifth.

WADE BOGGS, the major league's batting champion this season who has been fighting a postseason slump, also contributed two run-scoring doubles, including one in the

World Series

Houston. I'm very proud of this club."

In addition, Boggs, not known for his fielding, turned in an excellent game at third base, making several sparkling plays to help pull Boston out of trouble.

"I come out 20 minutes early each day and work on that aspect of my game," Boggs said of his fielding. "I have to work harder on that. It's a great feeling to go back with a 2-0 lead. This team has never given up all year."

Clemens, the major league's top winner this season with a 24-4 record, normally would have prospered from such support. But the hard-throwing right-hander was working on only three days rest for the third consecutive start and did not have control of his fastball.

CLEMENS COULD not make it through the fifth inning and fell two outs short of being credited with the victory.

Steve Crawford bailed Clemens out of a fifth-inning jam and was the winner. Bob Stanley hurled the final three innings for the save.

The Mets, who entered the game batting .184 in the post-season, managed eight hits but only two over the last four innings.

"We're not embarrassed at all," Mets catcher Gary Carter said. "We came out of our most pressurized series against Boggs lined an 0-2 pitch down the left-field line to double in Owen. Marty Barrett followed with a single to right to score Clemens. Gimp-leg Bill Buckner slashed a single past Hernandez to bring in Boggs for the third run.

The Mets bounced back with two runs in their half of the third and might have had more if not for Boggs.

Santana led off with an infield hit and Gooden bunted for a single. After Len Dykstra sacrificed, Wally Backman singled to center to score Santana. Hernandez hit a shot off Clemens' glove that Boggs fielded and threw for the out at first as Gooden scored. Boggs saved a run with a diving stop of Carter's smash that he turned into an out at first.

Floyd captures Walt Disney golf crown

LAKE BUENA VISTA, Fla. (UPI) — U.S. Open champion Ray Floyd sank a 6-foot putt for par on the first playoff hole Sunday to defeat Mike Sullivan and Lon Hinkle for the championship of the $500,000 Walt Disney Classic.

Floyd, who sank a 20-foot birdie putt at the 18th green to reach 13-under, had lost his last three playoffs and took a 48 career playoff record to the 203-yard, par-3 15th at the Magnolia course.

Sullivan, who also used a 20-foot birdie at 18 to earn a playoff spot, took a bogey-4 on the first playoff hole. Floyd dropped in his 6-footer for par and then picked up the $80,000 winner's check as Hinkle missed from three feet out for bogey.

Becker dumps Lendl in Australian finals

SYDNEY, Australia (UPI) — Two-time Wimbledon champion Boris Becker lost the first set but fought back with a devastating service attack that produced 17 aces to defeat world No. 1 Ivan Lendl in the final Sunday of the $350,000 Australian indoor championships.

The 18-year-old West German, who defeated Lendl in this year's Wimbledon final, swept to victory, 3-6, 7-6 (7-2), 6-2, 6-0, in a 2 hour, 27-minute match to collect the winner's paycheck of $50,000. The last time Lendl was blanked in a set was in 1984 when Jimmy Connors beat him in a semifinal in a tournament in Tokyo.

Becker added another $10,000 when he teamed with Australian John Fitzgerald to win the doubles final against the Australian pair of Peter McNamara and Paul McNamee, 6-4, 7-6 (8-6).

Navratilova cruises to Grand Prix victory

FILDERSTADT, West Germany (UPI) — Martina Navratilova cruised to a 6-3, 6-2 victory over Hana Mandlikova in 66 minutes Sunday to win the $175,000 Filderstadt Grand Prix tournament.

Navratilova, the world's top woman player, notched her 1,004th career victory the day after her 30th birthday. As part of her prize, she received a $40,000 metallic gray Porsche 911.

On The Line

So, you cocky people thought the On The Line contest was easy did you? Well then, how come no one (and I mean no one) got a perfect ballot this week?

You all thought you were so smart, but maybe this week will teach you a valuable lesson that you just can't sit back and relax just because you got off to a pretty good start.

The same can be said for our staff of DI prognosticators, who saw a change in leaders, and a overall tightening of the season's totals. Sports Editor Brad Zimanek, who was getting a little cocky himself due to his early season success, got served a dish of humility this week, going 5-5 in his picks.

That enabled Assistant Sports Editor Dan Millea to vault into the lead with a 7-3 week, and Millea had plenty to say about his new found success. "I want to thank my Mom for allowing me to be here today and my son for helping me with the picks and ..." Hey, save it Millea, the season is not over yet.

But the real story this week came from Staff Writer Steve Williams, who has been plugging along each week. Well, his consistency has finally paid off as he turned in an 8-2 performance and is now only two games out of first place. Millea stands at 46-14, Zimanek is 45-15 and Williams is third at 44-16. It's going down to the wire folks.

As for our guest picker Chris "the Swammy" Berman. Well, the Swammy did stay above Zimanek (as that was a tough task) but that's about it. Berman went 6-4 and has probably decided to stay with his pro picks where he is so successful.

But let's get back to our winner. Because of his ability to pick all ten games correctly (even though he did miss the tiebreaker), we award Bruce Thein our weekly prize. Yes up on when you least expect it.

Kramer, Vikings upset Bears

United Press International

The Minnesota Vikings evened a two-week old score with the Chicago Bears and put themselves into contention for the NFC Central title Sunday.

Tommy Kramer passed for two touchdowns and ran for another to spark the Minnesota Vikings to a 23-7 upset of the previously unbeaten Bears, snapping the defending Super Bowl champions' 12-game winning streak.

The Vikings also made the NFC Central a two-team race for the first time since early in the 1985 season. The Bears won the division by seven games last year when they finished the regular season 15-1.

The Bears beat Minnesota 23-0 two weeks ago at Chicago, sacking Kramer seven times and holding the Vikings to 159 yards. Sunday, the Vikings sacked Steve Fuller, starting for the injured Jim McMahon.

It also was Chicago's first defeat by an NFC Central seven times. Chicago quarterbacks had only been sacked six times in the Bears' first six games.

CHICAGO, 6-1, lost for only the second time in its last 26 games and for the first time since last Dec. 2 at Miami. Minnesota improved to 5-2 under rookie Coach Jerry Burns.

It also was Chicago's first team since Dec. 9, 1984, against Green Bay, and first loss on the road against a division rival since Dec. 4, 1983, also against the Packers.

Kramer completed 12 of 18 passes for 239 yards to pierce a Bears defense that had allowed just three touchdowns in the last five games.

WASHINGTON AND Cincinnati snapped ties to take sole possession of first place in their divisions, and Atlanta held onto first in the AFC West with a 10-10 tie against San Francisco. The Redskins' 28-21 victory over St. Louis, coupled with Seattle's 17-12 victory over the New York Giants put Washington, 6-1, one game ahead of the Giants, 5-2, in the NFC East. Cincinnati's 31-28 victory over Houston moved the Bengals, 4-2, one game ahead of Cleveland, 1-14, in the AFC Central.

Green Bay's Randy Wright

threaded a 47-yard touchdown pass to Phillip Epps with 1:21 remaining in the third quarter to cap a 14-point third quarter and help the Packers win their first game of the season. Green Bay improved to 1-6 following the worst start in the team's 68-year history.

In other games the Los Angeles Raiders downed Miami 30-28, Dallas edged Philadelphia 17-14, the Los Angeles Rams defeated Detroit 14-10, Buffalo stopped Indianapolis 24-13, New England blanked Pittsburgh 34-0, Kansas City outlasted San Diego 42-41 and New Orleans routed Tampa Bay 38-37.

Big Ten's big two sitting in familiar spot

United Press International

The Michigan-Iowa college football battle lived up to its billing, and Michigan Coach Bo Schembechler does not know how many more he can live through.

Getting revenge for a last-second loss last season, the fourth-rated Wolverines defeated Iowa 20-17 on a 34-yard field goal by Mike Gillette with no time remaining.

"We're both too old for this kind of game," Schembechler said, referring to himself and Iowa Coach Hayden Fry. "This is the second time in a row we've both been 5-0 going into the game. If that becomes a habit, this is going to be a real good game."

Iowa, which was ranked eighth in the nation, fell to 5-1 for the season and 2-1 in the Big Ten. Michigan raised its marks to 6-0 and 3-0.

The second-best game Saturday was the Minnesota-Indiana matchup, which the Golden Gophers won 19-17 to stay unbeaten in the Big Ten. Like the Michigan-Iowa game, it was decided by a field goal in the final seconds, with Chip Lohmiller kicking a 21-yarder to raise Minnesota's overall mark to 4-2.

Damon Sweary scored twice for Indiana, 4-2 overall and 1-2 in the Big Ten. The previously-ranked Hoosiers had a 17-10 lead but Lohmiller, who had four field goals, kicked three of them after Indiana's final touchdown to help Minnesota win.

Michigan State finally worked its way into the win list in the Big Ten with a 29-22 victory over Illinois. The Illini had a 14-7 lead in the second quarter, but the Spartans got a field goal and three straight touchdowns to take a 29-14 lead midway through the fourth quarter.

"We needed to get in the win column in the Big Ten. We needed it very badly," said Michigan State coach George Perles, whose club is 3-3 overall and 1-2 in the conference.

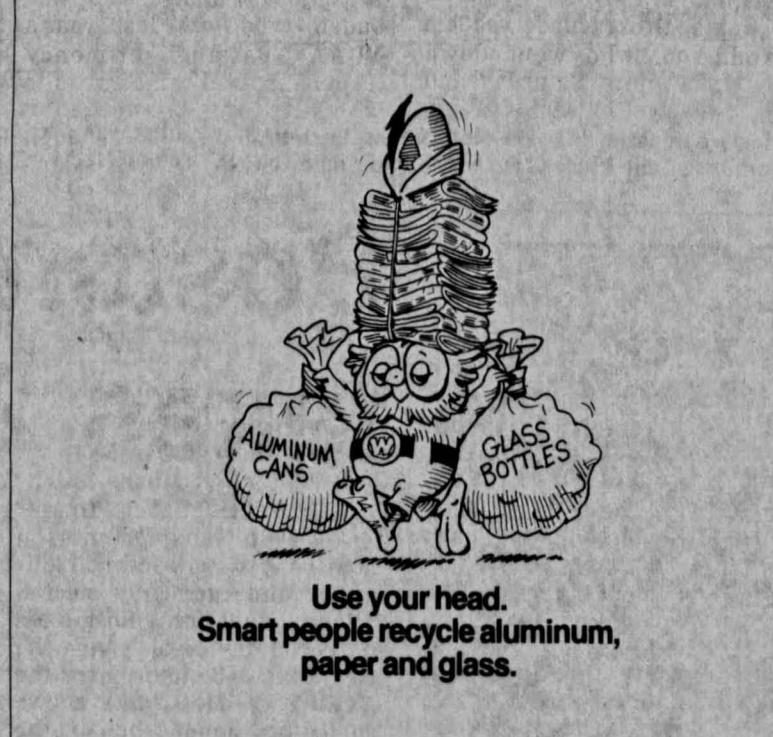

Wisconsin and Northwestern, battling to get out of the Big Ten basement, put on an offensive show before the Badgers came away with a 35-27 victory. Wisconsin quarterback Bud Keyes threw two touchdowns and ran for another. And the Badger defense stopped a key two-point conversion try by Northwestern to avoid a possible tie.

Stanley Davenport scored twice for the Wildcats, who dropped to 0-3 in the Big Ten and 2-4 overall. Wisconsin is 1-2 in the conference and 2-5 overall.

Ohio State also is tied with Michigan and Minnesota for the Big Ten lead at 3-0 after beating Purdue 39-11. Matthew Frantz kicked four field goals and Jim Karsatos threw two touchdown passes for the Badgers, who are 5-2 overall.

Purdue, 0-3 and 1-5, played without heralded freshman quarterback Jeff George.

Coach captures Hospice title

By Julie Deardorff
Staff Writer

Simpson College track coach Keith Ellingson couldn't have set a better example for his team on Sunday as he breezed to a first place finish in the half marathon category of the 10th annual Iowa City Road Races.

Over 2,000 runners, including national and local celebrities, filled the streets in an attempt to help raise money for the Iowa City Hospice and the 35 other agencies under the United Way.

Seventy-four year-old Marvin Thostenson not only ran the half marathon, but raised the most money, a total of $1,213 for the Hospice. Sharon Miller collected the second largest amount, $943 for Legal Services.

ELLINGSON FINISHED the longest race of the day with a time of 1:02:21.

"I really wanted to break 1:10," the 29-year-old said. "I wasn't really sure where I was at the 10-mile mark so I figured I'd better push a little harder."

Muriel Naumann finished first for the women with a time of 1:22:07. Naumann is a 31-year-old runner from Iowa City.

Among the celebrities competing was Jeff Galloway, a member of the 1972 Olympic Team and author of the current best selling book "Galloway's Book on Running."

"I've never been to Iowa City,

Kris Westphal of Iowa City, foreground, gets a massage from Ralph R. Stephens after finishing the half marathon in the tenth annual Iowa City Hospice Road Races held Sunday morning.

but it's really a wonderful town," Galloway said. "You've got a little gold mine here in this town. It's a grass roots type of race and very family oriented. That's what running is all about."

Dallas Robertson of Iowa City took first place in the men's division of the 10,000 meters with a time of 30:26.36. Robertson wasn't even sure if he would make it to the race.

"IT WAS A PRETTY tough day for me. I've got a sinus infection," he said. "I wasn't going to run, but I'd hate myself if I didn't. I didn't push myself, I wasn't in the right frame of mind."

To nobody's surprise, Connie Prince, another featured celebrity runner, finished first for the women with a time of 33:14.99. The 29-year old Sioux City native has already run four marathons this year and will be traveling to Rome to compete. "I felt really comfortable today," she said. "If you can run a good 10,000 meters, you can run a strong marathon. They both tie in together."

In the 5,000 meters race, Brian Smith of Bayard and former Iowa cross country runner Nan Doak posted first place finishes with times of 14:53.53 and 16:41.26, respectively.

SMITH IS A GRADUATE student at Iowa State while Doak is currently training in Maine for the 1988 Olympics. "You get to a level where you don't race as much and train more," Doak said. "This race was pretty rare for me. I'm sort of playing it low and hibernating now."

The shortest race of the day was the one-mile Fun Run, with Chris Walsh finishing in first place for the men with a time of 5:08.13. Twelve-year old Jody Goss of Burlington was the top female finishing in 7:21.77.

The Iowa doubles team of Michele Conlon and Penny Wohlford made it into the final eight before losing in the Intercollegiate Tennis Coach's Association regional tournament in Madison, Wis., this weekend.

The pair won its first two matches before running into the tournament's top-seeded team of Katrina Adams-Diane Donnelly from Northwestern. Conlon-Wohlford lost to Adams-Donnelly, the nation's No. 3 team, 6-2, 6-3.

"They (Conlon-Wohlford) played their best doubles of this year in the second set against Adams-Donnelly," Iowa Coach Charley Darley said. "They brought the second set up to three games all before losing it 6-3."

Tennis

DARLEY SAID HE was impressed with the play of Conlon and Wohlford. "There were streaks during the tournament where they just dominated the other two players," he said.

In singles action, only Conlon managed to win two matches in the ITCA, a national qualifying tournament.

Conlon beat two Big Ten opponents before losing to Wisconsin's Chris Gilles 6-0, 6-2 in the third round.

The other five Hawkeyes, Pat Leary, Wohlford, Madeleine Willard, and Patti DeSimone, all lost their opening round matches.

"We didn't have much luck," Darley said.

"Willard and Leary just were not sharp," he added. "They played well at times but couldn't sustain it for any length of time."

LEARY HAD BEEN ill, and Willard was injured earlier in the year, Darley said.

"Madeleine hasn't played long enough (this fall) to solidify her game," he said. "She's playing hard, but she isn't hitting her ground strokes like she can."

But Darley said that both Wohlford and DeSimone played well despite their losses.

After losing her first set to Kelly Craig of Purdue, DeSimone bounced back to take the second set. "But she tried to hurry up the third set," Darley said. And that led to her defeat."

The Iowa men's cross country team tied for 15th place out of 16 schools at the Central Collegiate Championships at Normal, Illinois.

The top five schools finished within 19 points of each other. Michigan won the five-mile event with 93 points, edging second place Eastern Michigan by three. Bowling Green finished third with 108.

Northwestern came in fourth with 110 while Illinois finished in fifth with 112 points. Point totals then opened up, with host school Illinois State finishing in sixth place with 141 points. Ohio University came in seventh with 164 while Minnesota finished eighth with 195.

THE RACE'S TOP two finishers were from the winning school, Michigan. Chris Brewster came in first with a time of 23 minutes, 39 seconds while teammate John Scherer finished second with a time of 23:52.

Paul Gisselquist, from Minnesota, finished third with a time of 23:55.

Iowa's best performance was turned in by Louis English, who finished 79th out of the field of 130 runners with a time of 25:50. Other Hawkeyes' places and times: Brian Nichols, 81st, (25:53); Sean Corrigan, 88th, (26:00); David Brown, 95th, (26:10); Chris Novak, 112th, (26:54) and Rodney Chambers, 145th, (27:03). Nichols and Chambers have been plagued by recent injuries.

Iowa Open win near perfect; Hawkeyes down Illini, Drake

By Marc Bona
Staff Writer

Led by sophomore Renee Doyle, the Iowa women's cross country team finished in a pack ahead of Illinois and Drake at the 5,000 meter Iowa Open Saturday at Finkbine Golf Course.

Iowa's 16 points were close to a perfect 15, according to Coach Jerry Hassard. Illinois finished second with 43 points while Drake received 76.

The Hawkeyes, coming off a win a week ago against four other schools at Purdue, are 10th ranked nationally.

Iowa easily won the three-school event, as the top four finishers were all Hawkeyes. Doyle's winning time of 17 minutes, 12 seconds, was two seconds off her previous best at Finkbine, set earlier this year in the season opener.

"It was a strategic race today," Doyle said. "I didn't run like I usually do. It was more team-oriented than individualistic."

JANETH SALAZAR CAME in second at 17:25 while fellow Hawkeye Kim Schneckloth rounded out the top three finishers with a time of 17:31.

Kristen Watters, also from Iowa, came in fourth at 17:37. Illinois' Melissa Straza finished fifth with a time of 17:45. The rest of the top ten finishers and their times: Michelle Giampapa, Iowa (18:09); Sherri Suppela, Iowa (18:18); Donna Russell, Illinois (18:26); Sharon Locascio, Illinois (18:38); Carol Bruene, Illinois (18:40).

The Daily Iowan/Doug Smith
Renee Doyle

Cross Country

Schneckloth bettered her last race time at Finkbine by 48 seconds. Salazar improved by 34 seconds while Watters quickened her pace by eight.

The pack of Hawkeyes led early and never relinquished their lead, something that pleased Hassard. "I'm feeling pretty good about it," Hassard said. "One of our goals was trying to pack as many runners as we could at the front end of the race.

"At different meets we do different things, depending on who we're running. Our training is coming along well, and we're starting to refine things in our running. Today they demonstrated what they could do for themselves. It showed a desirable quality in themselves."

HASSARD'S FEELING going into the Big Ten Championships is optimistic. "I'm encouraged," he said. He also stated that Rachelle Roberts, who was nursing a sore Achilles tendon and did not run Saturday "will help us at (the Big Ten Championships)."

"I'm very happy," Salazar said. "It was an incredible pack. Doyle hung back to bring us together. It's unusual. I don't think we've done that all season."

"This race I used to prepare for Big Ten's. I used it to experiment, to start out faster."

The Big Ten Championships will be held at Ohio State Nov. 1. Regionals will be held two weeks later at Illinois State.

Illinois Assistant Coach Malcolm Coomer foresaw Iowa's strong performance. "I guess when we were coming here we were in for a tough race ... We had no idea what to expect from Drake. (Our goal) was for some of our people to key on some Iowa people. Hopefully we've learned something."

Drake's top finisher, junior Kellie Cole from Madison, Wis., finished 12th with a time of 18:45.

Iowa posts weekend sweep

By Steve Williams
Staff Writer

Ellen Mullarkey and Cheryl Zemaitis had 57 kills in two matches as the Iowa women's volleyball team dumped both Michigan and Michigan State 3-1 on the road this weekend.

The Hawkeyes, who raised their record to 17-3 overall and 6-1 in the conference, maintained a firm grasp on the runner-up spot in the Big Ten by defeating two teams that have a combined record of 1-13 in conference action. But even with their poor record, Iowa Coach Sandy Stewart said the two Michigan schools gave her Hawkeyes a little more than they bargained for.

"These two games were good confidence builders for the rest of the season, but I think that both Michigan and Michigan State are much better than their records indicate," Stewart said. "We had some long rallies and both teams fought hard, and I'm glad we have them behind us for now."

IOWA TRAVELED TO Ann Arbor, Mich., for its first game of the weekend with the Wolverines, and after losing the first game 15-7, Stewart's club was forced to regroup and make a rousing comeback.

Led by Zemaitis who had 19 kills on Friday, the Hawkeyes rolled in the next two games,

Volleyball

"We weren't mentally ready coming into the Michigan match," Sandy Stewart says of the Iowa volleyball squad. "But I was glad to see the team bounce back the way they did."

scoring victories of 15-7 and 15-9. Zemaitis then sealed the match for Iowa in the fourth game when she delivered service aces on the final three points to give her squad a 15-8 win.

"We weren't mentally ready coming into the Michigan match," Stewart said. "But I was glad to see the team bounce back the way they did. Zemaitis had an outstanding night, and those three aces on the last three points really brought that point home."

After disposing of the Wolverines, Iowa moved on to East Lansing, Mich., where it promptly set down the women in green.

After taking the first game 15-7 however, the Hawkeyes ran into some serving difficulty. In one game, Iowa recorded 10 service errors, which was more than enough to let the Spartans roll 15-5.

"WE HAD A REAL mental letdown in the second game," Stewart said, "but I was pleased with our overall performance. I didn't say anything to the team even though I was upset, because I knew that we were going to dominate the match."

The Hawkeyes did just that and went on to beat the Spartans in the next two games 15-4 and 15-7, behind a solid performance by co-captain Mullarkey who had 18 kills, 10 digs and four service aces, including a .500 hitting percentage. Lana Kuiper also made a major contribution to the team with 10 kills, 11 digs and one ace of her own.

Meanwhile, Michigan State's top performer Shantelle Schmidt was held relatively in check allowing only 12 kills and a .098 hitting percentage.

"After this week, I think we are much more comfortable with our offense," Stewart said. "Kathy Griesheim got a lot of work with the different combinations, and I think we are ready to make a run at the Big Ten championship."

Hawks place 11th at Lady Cat

By Dan Millea
Assistant Sports Editor

Despite Iowa's 11th-place finish in the Lady Cat Invitational golf tournament in Lexington, Ky., this weekend, Coach Diane Thomason said she was satisfied with the Hawkeyes' final outing of the fall season.

Iowa was in 15th place after Thursday's round, the first in the three-day, 54-hole meet, won by host Kentucky with 912 strokes. But the Hawkeyes' play improved considerably Friday and Saturday.

Iowa shot a round of 342 Thursday, but came back with scores of 326 Friday and 324 Saturday.

"I was pretty pleased, really," Thomason said. "There was a group of nine or 10 schools that was definitely out of our league, but we were right up there at the top of the rest of the field."

THOMASON SAID only one of the teams she felt Iowa could compete with, Central Florida, managed to outscore the Hawkeyes. Central Florida finished with 979 strokes, 13 ahead of Iowa's 962.

Diane Thomason

Golf

Tracy Chapman of Kentucky won the tournament with a 222-stroke effort. Amy Butzer paced the Hawkeyes with a score of 240, including a final round one-over-par 75.

"Butzer played a nearly flawless round of golf," Thomason said of Butzer's showing Saturday. "She turned at par and was one-over on the other side.

"She's had parts of her game where she was really strong, and then other parts where at times she has problems. But she really put it together Saturday."

BUTZER SHOT A three-round series of 82-83-75 for her 240. Kristi Heatherly placed second among five Hawkeyes with an 84-85-82-251. Justine Harsh shot an 88-80-84-252, followed by Jeannine Gibson's 88-82-83-253 and Kelley Brooke's 90-81-90-261.

"We always seemed to play a little better on the front side," Thomason said, noting that the back nine was somewhat more difficult. "Part of it was the course, but I think part of it is their youth."

Final standings in the meet were: Kentucky 912, Indiana 916, South Florida 934, Alabama 941, Western Kentucky 946, North Carolina 949, Missouri 962, Southern Illinois 982, Michigan State 966, Central Florida 979, Iowa 992, Memphis State 997, Alabama-Birmingham 999, Mississippi State 1,009, Illinois State 1,017, Michigan 1,020 and Vanderbilt 1,184.

The Hypothesis of the Stolen Painting

Chilean Raoul Ruiz, internationally acclaimed director, has created an ingenious pseudo-documentary in which a philosophical collector leads viewers through a series of tableaux vivants which recreate the paintings of a nineteenth-century French painter. In the course of the critic's discussion, the paintings begin to reveal a mysterious religious cult.

Conference explores Latin American cinema

By B. Gordon
Staff Writer

IN THE United States, the distinctions between art and politics often seem quite clear.

Art is politically protected by the First Amendment, which means it is entirely free from intervention by anyone other than the artist. Although this freedom is essential, it sometimes tends to isolate the artist in an ivory tower. The artist no longer has any objective need to communicate or agree with anyone at all.

But in less liberal countries, art is a rare forum for public debate. If art is not allowed to criticize governmental policy, pure entertainment is considered a copout.

This is one question that was discussed at last week's conference on New Latin American Cinema, sponsored by the UI's departments of Spanish and Portuguese and Communication Studies, as well as the Latin American Student Association and ADELA Cine Club.

ACCORDING TO the organizers of the conference, the hope is that New Latin American Cinema in Iowa II will make a seminal contribution to the promotion of understanding and goodwill throughout the local and regional communities.

"There's a great deal of interest surfacing in the developed world about cultures in the undeveloped world," said Julianne Burton, a professor of literature at the University of California in Santa Cruz and a prolific writer on Latin American cinema. "It's a way of looking outward to solve inward problems."

"What has happened this week is very, very fruitful," said Michael Chanhan, an independent British filmmaker with an interest in Cuban cinema. "We have shown the diversity of Latin American cinema."

ONE CONCERN at the conference was whether or not this new movement was reaching its intended audience.

"Where is the culture to which they are speaking?" asked Dudley Andrew, a UI professor in broadcasting and film. "Maybe this will be like writing poetry, where there will always be a small audience of interested people, but basically it is kept alive with conferences."

Five Star

Five Star's efforts shine

By Jill Lauritzen
Staff Writer

CURRENTLY listed at number seven on Billboard's Top 20 soul chart is "Can't Wait Another Minute" by the new British rhythm and blues group Five Star.

The song is the title track off the group's new album Silk & Steel, released in the United States just recently.

Five brothers and sisters of the Pearson family, ranging in ages from 16 to 21, make up Five Star. The Pearson siblings' work is produced by their father, music veteran Buster Pearson, who used to play guitar for soul singer Wilson Pickett in the '60s.

Silk & Steel is the second album released in the United States by Five Star. The group's debut album, Luxury of Life, was warmly welcomed, landing three singles in the top 20.

FIVE STAR'S NEW album will most likely prove to be just as successful. It's filled with songs just begging the listener to get up and dance. "Can't Wait Another Minute" is easily the best single on the LP, but it's backed by song after song of excellent dance mixes.

Each song is bouncy and energetic and the simple lyrics are catchy. They're backed by plenty of synthesizer and percussion, creating some really electric rhythms.

Singing lead on all but two songs on Silk & Steel, in her wide-ranging, clear voice, is 17-year-old Deniece Pearson. In addition to her fantastic singing, she plays the guitar and keyboards, writes songs and co-produces them.

But the song on the album written by Deniece, "Stay Out of My Life," is actually mediocre. Instead of reaching high and low points throughout the music and lyrics, the song remains stagnant.

HER SISTER, DORIS, 19, has had a hand in the songwriting department. She wrote "Don't You Know I Love It" on the LP with robotic-type lyrics and beat.

Brother Delroy, 16, who sings lead on the one ballad of Silk & Steel titled "Please Don't Say Goodnight," needs a little development with his singing voice; his words really aren't clear and tend to run together.

Stedman, 21, and Lorraine, 18, are the group's other two members. Both are dancers and backup singers.

Probably the second best song on the album is "The Slightest Touch." Its locomotive-like rhythm and flowing lyrics will probably make this the group's second hit off the album.

Silk & Steel is a fun, constantly moving package of well-written dance mixes. Five Star sings in fabulous harmony. While performing, as on their recently released video of "Can't Wait Another Minute," Five Star proves to be just as electric as their album.

Five Star plans to make an appearance in the United States sometime in December, but as yet a Silk & Steel tour has not been scheduled.

LP displays Kottke's talent

By Alex Wilding-White
Staff Writer

IN EVERY field of music, certain individuals always arise to help redefine the way music is made.

In his own modest, unassuming way, guitarist Leo Kottke has been such an individual. Just about everyone who plays, owns, or at least has tried to play an acoustic guitar will invariably either revere Kottke's ability as the level they ultimately wish to attain — or cite him as the reason they give up. His status for acoustic players is the same that Jimi Hendrix has held for electric players for the last 15 years.

One may listen to any of his dozen or so records and easily see why Kottke is held in such high regard. A disciple of the ground-breaking guitar stylings of John Fahey, Kottke has developed a means of articulation and definition that Fahey, for all his imagination, lacked in many of his recordings. Kottke also differs from Fahey in a rhythmic sense. He keeps a myriad of percussive bass runs and counterpointing melodies within a rock-solid tempo, in contrast to Fahey's more elastic rhythms.

KOTTKE'S LATEST release, A Shout Toward Noon, his first for the Private Music label, is — with some variations — more of what his devout followers have come to expect from him. Digitally recorded and mastered, it is easily the best recording of his music, clearly displaying nuances of touch, dynamics and melodic development. Kottke's ability to play up to three separate parts simultaneously is still cause for amazement on songs like "Little Beaver" and "Air Proofing Two." This ability enables him to sound like a small folk dance group.

Still present from previous efforts is Kottke's range and versatility. "Piece 17" retains a strikingly Spanish quality; "A Virtuoso Is His Own Reward" mixes country and western inflections with some earthy Delta blues overtones to produce a "twang" of its own; and the title track sounds akin to a folk waltz. Glistening string harmonies dance over delicate arpeggio figures on "Echoeing Gilewitz," and on "The Ice Field," Kottke skillfully works his way through one of his most highly structured compositions.

WITH ALL PLAYING and no singing being the rule here, this would be, at first glance, a Kottke fan's delight. But the various synthesizer and cello parts that are added to some of the tracks are curious — they do not add anything substantial. In the past, when Kottke has recorded with other musicians, it was always to add additional voices to the music. A synth pop on an accent or a cello line doubling the bass is nothing more than unnecessary ornamentation.

Still, this record is further evidence as to how much one musician can do with one instrument. For that, it is encouraging to know that people like Kottke are still playing away.

Simon's record speaks on apartheid

By James Cahoy
Staff Writer

It is by Althom in long com-

NE OF THE greatest tragedies which the system of apartheid has imposed on South Africa is the stifling of that nation's cultural talent, both black and white.

This has occurred not only because of the repression within South Africa itself, but also because of the cultural boycotts of the country by various nations, which have left much of its wealth of talent unheard by western ears.

Singer Paul Simon has gone a long way toward rectifying this situation with his brilliant new album, Graceland.

In the past, Simon has borrowed from elements of black musical styles, ranging from gospel in "Mother and Child

Record

Reunion" to doo-wop in "Hearts and Bones". This time he does the same with the native music of South Africa, utilizing the talents of native musicians on the album.

What makes Graceland such a fascinating album is the variety of musical styles Simon utilizes, ranging from the dance groove funk of "You Can Call Me Al" to the slower country and western lilt of the title track.

THE MUSICAL centerpiece of the album is the combination of "Under African Skies" and "Homeless" on the flip side. Both songs use traditional Zulu rhythms and melodies to produce the most beautiful tracks on the album, a triumph of gorgeous harmonies and brilliant lyrics, half of which are in Zulu.

There are other highlights on the album as well, such as the doo-wop-like chant that opens "Diamonds on the Soles of Her Shoes," or the vocals of the all-female South African group the Gaza Sisters on "I Know What I Know." The album is surprisingly consistent, with almost every track a standout.

Simon also branches out from native South African music in the two songs that close the album. "That Was Your Mother" employs the cajun melodies of Louisiana in a tale of wandering. The Mexican-American band Los Lobos lends a hand to the final track, "All Around the World," giving it a tinge of salsa.

THROUGHOUT THE album, Simon's power as a lyricist is undeniable. "Graceland", a tale of a pilgrimage to the home of Elvis Presley, may be the best song he has ever written. In several of the songs ("The Boy in the Bubble," "Homeless") he makes subtle references to the repression of apartheid as well.

If there is one complaint that must be made about Graceland, it is that criticism of apartheid in the album is not more overt. Perhaps Simon feared that he would endanger the artists that contributed to the album, many of whom still live in South Africa, by harsh statements about the South African system.

Still, to criticize the album for its politics, or lack of them, is nitpicking. Graceland is a brilliant album, one of the best in Simon's long career, and certainly one of the best 1986 has yet produced.

GLITTER, glamour, and a touch of Broadway transformed a crisp autumn evening into a gala event when the Old Gold Singers performed their season debut Oct. 17 in Clapp Recital Hall.

The well-paced performance was marked by imaginative choreography, a variety of song styles and an energetic esprit de corps.

Director Bob Demaree explained that "the Old Gold Singers are the only choir of their kind in the state combining both popular song with dance." The dance numbers, choreographed by singers within the group, were performed with an energy and precision of professional quality.

Musicians provided a fine accompaniment from the orchestra pit. On stage, however, the position of the piano made it difficult for the pianist to see and follow the conductor.

THE EVENING'S PROGRAM was highlighted by a number of talented soloists, especially baritone Mark Mangold and soprano Michelle Bernard, who not only proved to be excellent singers, but fine actors as well.

Selections on the program included songs from Broadway musicals, melancholy ballads and tunes that tickled the funny bone, including a Hawaiian love song sung by baritone Greg Jackson complete with two hula dancers.

Other songs with less staging, such as the touching performance of "My Funny Valentine."

were very convincing as the motionless ensemble created a more controlled choral sound.

The second half of the program included a charming rendition of "The Telephone Hour" complete with pink and blue telephones as the singers related the traumas of the high school prom.

Overall, this dramatic production would have been enhanced by more volume from the choir. This became apparent during upbeat numbers when the brass players in the pit covered the singers' voices on stage. In addition, there was a soft but persistent squeal from the sound equipment.

However, in general, the Old Gold Singers' concert made for an enjoyable evening and was well worth attending.

The Old Gold Singers will perform more song and dance at their next concert of holiday music Dec. 6 and 7.
