Inmate hits UI facility with $10.5 million suit

By Ann Szemplinski
Staff Writer

An inmate at a local correctional facility filed a $10.5 million lawsuit Thursday against 28 of the institution's staff members, including one doctor who scoffed at the suit.

Christopher O. Myers Jr., an inmate at the Iowa Medical Classifications Center, Oakdale, Iowa, states in his suit filed in Johnson County District Court that he suffered extreme mental and physical torture because he gave legal assistance to another inmate.

Myers states in his handwritten petition that he was a "jail-house lawyer" and that he filed litigation with the Johnson County Mental Health Court on behalf of inmate Willie Harris.

Myers claims that several center officials filed "bogus" reports about his behavior as a result of his legal advice to Harris. He contends these reports will deprive him of an early parole.

"They provoked these incidents by inflicting cruel and unusual punishment, anguish, despair and human degradation of dignity and sexual morality," Myers wrote.

IN HIS PETITION, Myers states he was put in an air-conditioned "strip-cell" for more than 24 hours, nude and without a mattress or blanket, because of the reports.

Myers states two female guards were allowed to touch and manhandle him while putting leather restraints on him.

"I cannot begin to say how sexually degrading this was to have my naked body be put on exhibit for any female staff member who wanted to come and look," Myers states in his petition. "This is worse than your typical brothel."

Myers specifically charges one of the center's doctors, Paul Loeffelholz, with mental health care malpractice, perjury, embezzlement of state funds and tampering with medication.

But Loeffelholz scoffed at the allegations by Myers.

"THE ABSURDITY will be resolved in time," Loeffelholz said. "Myers produces reams of paper."

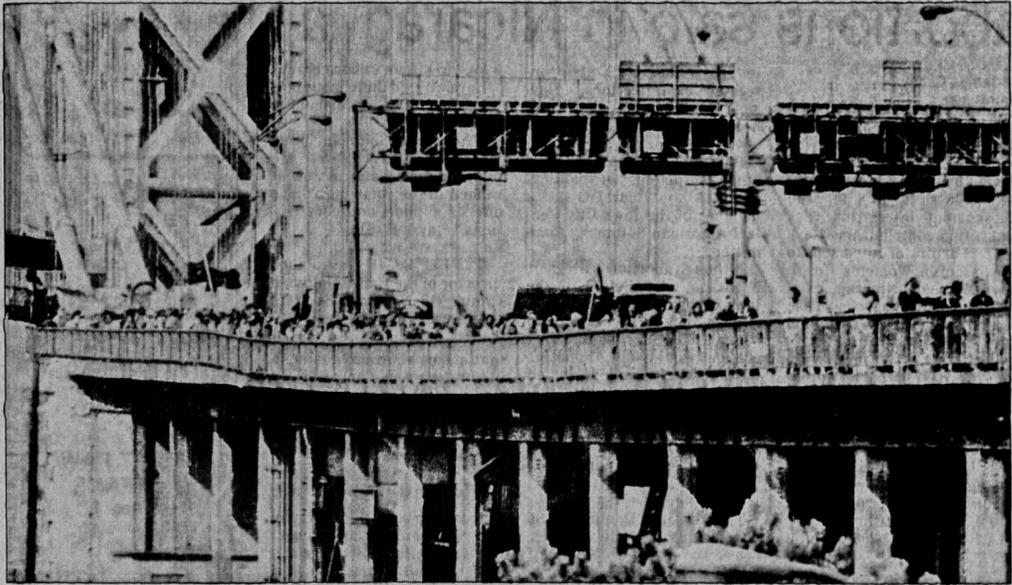

Myers was denied a request Thursday for a court-appointed attorney by Johnson County Judge L. Vern Robinson.

Loeffelholz would not comment further on the suit.

Myers also charges that Classifications Center officials committed perjury when they testified prior to the filing of the suit that an inmate is not forced to lay or sleep on the floor, but given a mattress and blanket, when placed in a strip cell.

The petition also states Myers has a letter from Sen. Charles Grassley, R-Iowa, claiming that the Republican is concerned.

Absentee votes raise trouble

By Bruce Japsen
City Editor

Officials with the Johnson County Auditor's Office said Thursday more than 1,000 absentee voter requests brought to their office this week are causing problems.

Mike Ketchmark, a UI student and Republican candidate for the 46th District state representative seat, said he brought the requests to the Johnson County Auditor's Office Monday in an effort to help students who can't make it to the polls Nov. 4.

"Some students have a full class load and can't make it to the polls or they're unable to get there because it's too far," Ketchmark said. "We told students they would have the ballots two days before election day."

But Johnson County Deputy Auditor Jeff McCullough said Ketchmark should have brought the ballot requests to the office earlier.

"THE THING THAT really hurts the voter and the duties of our office is that most of these absentee requests were filled out in September," McCullough said. "It puts increased pressure on voters to get them back to us. Voters might be disenfranchised by this."

Ketchmark said he turned the ballot requests in Monday in hopes that officials with the auditor's office would mail them to students Tuesday.

"State law requires that they turn around and mail them out in 24 hours," Ketchmark said.

McCullough said employees in his office will have to work overtime in order to process ballots in time for the Nov. 4 election. He said voters must return the ballots to the auditor's office postmarked no later than Nov. 3.

Ketchmark said he didn't want to turn the ballots in before Monday because candidates would not be known by students who got their ballots as early as September. "The students understood that or we wouldn't have done it," he said.

LOCAL DEMOCRATS said they don't understand why Ketchmark or members of his campaign circulated the requests in the first place.

"Maybe they have news of a coming flu or something," said Ketchmark's Democratic opponent Mary Neuhauser.

According to the Iowa Code, voters must have an illness or a physical disability in order to request an absentee ballot.

The code also states that voters who are absent from their precinct when the polls are open may vote absentee.

"The code does require that people have a reason for requesting a ballot," said Sandy Steinbach, director of elections with the Iowa Secretary of State's Office in Des Moines.

"If you don't vote at the polls just because you think it's a hassle, then you shouldn't request an absentee ballot," Steinbach said.

KETCHMARK SAID he understands the guidelines provided by the code.

"The code, as interpreted for me, says that anyone who leaves their precinct at least one time on election day can vote absentee," Ketchmark said.

Meanwhile, McCullough said his office will be working hard to mail out all the requests.

"Things like this are what really throw a monkey wrench into the whole process," McCullough said. "I would encourage those who didn't get their ballots to vote at the polls."

Those who requested the absentee ballots and have not registered may not have time because the registration deadline is 5 p.m. Saturday.

Big Ten cities enforce varied marijuana possession laws

By Joseph Levy
Staff Writer

Avid marijuana users at the UI might regret not having gone to school elsewhere.

In university cities such as Ann Arbor and East Lansing, Mich., city ordinances have set penalties as low as $5 for possession of small amounts of marijuana.

"It seems like they are more or less decriminalizing marijuana," UI Security Chief Don Hogan said, adding that Iowa City follows state laws to determine its marijuana possession penalties.

UI STUDENT SENATE President Joe Hansen said the state penalty for marijuana possession is impractical because the drug is highly used.

"That, I find to be ridiculous," Hansen said, explaining that a penalty that high is excessive.

But the law in some other Big Ten towns is even stiffer than Iowa City's.

Students at Purdue University in West Lafayette, Ind., could receive one year in jail and/or a $5,000 fine for possessing the popular drug. This law is also in effect at Indiana University in Bloomington, Ind.

POT SMOKERS at the University of Minnesota in Minneapolis don't have it much easier. They could look forward to as much as a $700 fine and/or 90 days in jail.

But users at Michigan State and Michigan aren't the only ones who smoke marijuana in a near-legal environment. Marijuana possession at the University of Wisconsin in Madison, Wis., can result in a fine as low as $25.

Student leaders in some of these towns say liberal attitudes within the cities lead to the lenient ordinances.

"Ann Arbor is such a liberal campus, in every sense of the word," University of Michigan

Letters Sciences and Arts Student Government President Michelle Tear, said.

She added that high use of the drug at the University of Michigan may have led to the Ann Arbor city ordinance.

BUT MICHIGAN STATE Student Legal Services Director Evan Anderson-Smith said the ordinances were created when social attitudes were different, and the laws have never changed.

Anderson-Smith said East Lansing's ordinance took effect in 1972.

"Because of the marijuana craze, they brought (the penalty) down," he said. "They just never felt the need to bring it back up."

Anderson-Smith added that the MSU Department of Public Safety enforces Michigan law, not East Lansing law, and that offenders on campus would be subject to as much as 90 days in jail and/or a $500 fine.

Democrats look strong in 'DI' poll

By Mary Boone

Democrats have a strong lead over their Republican opponents in Johnson County, according to a poll conducted by The Daily Iowan.

The poll of registered voters shows if the election were held today, Democratic candidates for secretary of state, state auditor, state treasurer, secretary of agriculture and attorney general would prevail locally.

The Oct. 12-16 poll, which surveyed 1,564 registered voters in Iowa City, Coralville and North Liberty, Iowa, also shows overwhelming support for local Democrats seeking seats in the Iowa Legislature.

The survey, which has a maximum possible sampling error of 4.9 percentage points, gives Democrat Jean Lloyd-Jones a clear lead over Republican challenger Michael McDonald in their race for the 23rd District Senate seat.

THE CAMPAIGN HAS been a cakewalk for Lloyd-Jones. The Iowa City Democrat has served four terms in the Iowa House of Representatives, representing the 46th District. She has also been active in the League of Women Voters and the National Organization for Women and enjoys wide name recognition.

Lloyd-Jones is 24 percentage points ahead of McDonald, a virtual unknown in political circles. Half the voters polled indicated they would vote for Lloyd-Jones if the election were today, 26 percent would support McDonald and 24 percent are undecided.

Former Iowa City Mayor Mary Neuhauser enjoys an equally comfortable lead over Republican challenger Mike Ketchmark in the 46th District House race.

Neuhauser, who served nine years on the Iowa City Council, is 19 percentage points ahead of Ketchmark, a former UI Student Senate treasurer.

Election '86

Rep. Rich Varn, D-54th District, is sailing through his race for the 27th District Senate seat. Varn, a UI law student, garnered support from 50 percent of the voters polled. Eighteen percent of those surveyed said they would vote for Republican Peggy Pinder, and 32 percent were undecided.

Rep. Minnette Doderer, D-45th District, and Democrat Robert Dvorsky are unchallenged in their bids for the Iowa House. Regardless, a large number of voters in both districts say they have not decided if they will support Democratic candidates in the races. Doderer received the support of 66 percent of the voters polled in her district; 38 percent of those polled in the 54th District supported Dvorsky.

IN STATEWIDE RACES, Democratic incumbent Attorney General Tom Miller enjoys the largest margin of support, 32 percentage points ahead of Republican challenger James Davis. Miller, who drew wide-based support from Democrats, Republicans and independent voters, received the support of 51 percent of those polled. Thirty-two percent said they supported Davis, 4 percent supported independent Eddie Collins and 26 percent were undecided.

Democrat Dale Cochran outpaced Republican Thatcher Johnson and independent candidate Delbert Banowitz in the race to be Iowa secretary of agriculture.

The DI poll placed Cochran 17 percentage points ahead of Johnson. They received 37 percent and 20 percent of the votes, respectively. Banowitz garnered 4 percent of the

Van Allen: President botched summit talks

DES MOINES (UPI) — UI space pioneer James Van Allen Thursday said President Ronald Reagan botched the Iceland summit talks with Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev.

Van Allen, a retired physics and astronomy professor, told a group of high school students attending the annual United Nations Day Conference in Des Moines that Reagan missed a chance to improve prospects for peace by not abandoning his proposed Strategic Defense Initiative or Star Wars defense program.

"Only 10 days ago in Reykjavik, President Reagan snatched defeat from the jaws of victory in arms negotiations with Secretary General Gorbachev by insisting on proceeding with the Strategic Defense Initiative," Van Allen said.

HE SAID HE would like to see the United States and Soviet Union cooperate in researching peaceful uses of space, but said that is unlikely as long as the U.S. space program is devoted to military research.

"My own judgment of the situation is that such cooperation must follow rather than lead the political solution of our profound differences," Van Allen said.

Once again, dreary weather will be the norm, as cloudy skies and intermittent drizzle continue to plague the Iowa City area. U.S. Senate Majority Leader Robert Dole, R-Kan., will appear Tuesday, Oct. 28 on behalf of Republican Joan Lipsky, a candidate for Iowa lieutenant governor.

The Kansas Republican will speak at a noon luncheon in the grand ballroom of the Stouffer's Five Seasons Hotel. Reservations for the event cost $8 and will not be accepted after Saturday, Oct. 25.

Conservation group supports Nagle

The Sierra Club, the nation's oldest conservation and environmental organization, endorsed Democrat Dave Nagle's candidacy for the 3rd District congressional seat. Sierra Club officials said this week that Nagle has demonstrated a commitment to environmental protection and they are confident that he would support strong environmental legislation in the 100th Congress.

The endorsement process included a review of Nagle's and his Republican opponent John McIntee's past records on environmental and conservation issues. Officials said a questionnaire was also given to each candidate.

"Mr. Nagle's answers showed a commitment to strong environmental legislation and adequate funding for maintaining a quality environment," officials said. "Nagle's opponent did not return the questionnaire."

Nagle is a former member and president of the Black Hawk County Conservation Board and director of the Izaak Walton League of Black Hawk County.

More than 388,000 people belong to the Sierra Club in the United States and Canada. More than 2,500 members are from Iowa and more than 900 are from the 3rd District.

The Sierra Club has also endorsed Rep. Jim Leach, a Davenport Republican who is seeking re-election from Iowa's 1st District.

UI professor studies career families

By 1990, dual-career families are expected to increase to 80 percent of all families. In answer to this increase, day care centers are becoming the trend of the century.

A recent study by UI Professor Alice Atkinson, assistant professor of home economics, indicates that parents generally feel their current day care services meet the needs of their children and themselves. Childcare providers perceive a lower level of satisfaction in mothers.

"Mothers evaluated the day care services higher than the providers, because mothers were comparing their current day care situations to past, less pleasant experiences," Atkinson said.

Atkinson conducted a second study to determine how fathers evaluated their current day care services and to what degree they participated in child care.

Fathers reported a high level of participation in 80 percent of the child care activities that indicated a desire to increase their involvement in the future.

"It seems that many mothers still are making a variety of the career sacrifices for child care, and fathers are the main economic providers," she said.

Atkinson explained that some children receive care in their own homes, but a growing number of families choose family daycare homes or daycare centers for childcare services.

"However, parents may be in a transitional period between the traditional separate roles of child care-giver and economic provider and moving toward more equally shared roles of provider and care-giver," Atkinson said.

Official date slated for trick or treat

The annual Halloween parade is scheduled for the evening of Thursday, Oct. 30.

Scientists have plan to remove radium

Environmental Protection Agency figures show that 56 Iowa towns have water supplies that exceed the EPA limit in radium levels.

UI researchers believe they have found a simple solution to the problem of removing radium from groundwater.

UI researcher Richard Valentine, assistant professor of civil and environmental engineering, is considering a sand filter that removes radium from groundwater.

Valentine estimated that the filter is capable of removing from 80 to 90 percent of the radium and completes this process at a less expensive rate than any other available technologies.

Testing of the new filter last spring at the Oxord Water Treatment Plant so far has been successful.

Supervisors OK resolution on building's parking policy

By James Cahoy
Staff Writer

After one month of debate, Johnson County Board of Supervisors unanimously approved a parking policy Thursday for the Johnson County Administration Building.

By a vote of 4-1, the supervisors approved creating separate areas for employee and public parking and designated parking areas for employees who want it.

"We spent more time arguing this resolution than we did building the parking lot," said board member Harold Donnelly.

Johnson County employees who want a designated parking space must pay a $5 fee.

He said the resolution was what county employees wanted.

"Two-thirds of them said they wanted designated parking spaces," Donnelly said. "If they leave for lunch they will still have their parking spaces when they get back. This also gives them a choice."

BOARD CHAIRMAN Dick Myers said he was happy with the content of the resolution.

"If you consider the length of this resolution and the amount of time we've spent horsing around with it, it's actually pretty good," Myers said. "Given all the circumstances, I think this is the best possible solution."

However, Donnelly questioned why the resolution could not have been approved earlier.

"I don't see why they just didn't do this in the first place," Donnelly said. "There was no reason we had to spend a month on it."

Myers agreed.

"Entirely too much time was spent on this issue and I have no idea why," he said.

The board's decision was well received by county employees who work at the building.

"I THINK IT'S good the board is giving people a choice," said County Recorder John O'Neil. "It was the best way to address the problem."

County Administrative Coordinator Riley Grimes said he thought the decision was the best solution.

"I think it's only fair to charge people for designated parking space," Grimes said.

He also said he thought the board spent too much time on the issue.

"I just worry about what will happen if they put a bicycle rack up," Grimes said.

Woman raises funds to make abortions safe in Nicaragua

By James Cahoy
Staff Writer

An Iowa City woman is trying to raise $2,000 to send a device to Nicaragua that will help women have safe abortions.

Rose Hayslett, 718 N. Johnson St., sent out letters this week requesting contributions for a vacuum aspirator to be sent to the Calderon Women's Hospital in Managua, Nicaragua.

"Because Nicaragua must use its limited resources to defend itself against the U.S.-sponsored war, it simply cannot afford this basic equipment," Hayslett states in her letter. "So, please sponsor this project generously."

In addition to the mail appeal, Hayslett will hold a fund-raising continental breakfast in support of the project from 7 to 11 a.m. Saturday at Simmy's Restaurant, 208 N. Linn St.

HAYSLETT SAID the aspirator will help many suffering Nicaraguan women.

"One-third of the beds in the Calderon Hospital are occupied by women with abortion-related complications," Hayslett said. "This device will help ensure that women are able to obtain safe abortions."

Hayslett has organized several other shipments of medical supplies to Nicaragua as a member of the Iowa City Central American Solidarity Committee.

Although abortion is illegal in Nicaragua, Hayslett said the law will change.

"The Sandinistas are very progressive," she said. "This change would be promoting reproductive freedom in an area of the world where this freedom has usually been denied to women."

BUT SEVERAL members of the community disapproved of Hayslett's idea.

The Rev. Jack Denning, of St. Wenceslaus Catholic Church, 618 E. Davenport St., said Hayslett's stance is contradictory.

"If she is opposed to killing by war and yet supports killing by abortion, it seems to me that she is both for life and against it," Denning said. "It is always wrong to kill an unborn child."

Hayslett said there is support from the Iowa City community for her efforts.

"The Emma Goldman Clinic for Women has offered me total support, and a lot of women in the community have offered support and contributions," Hayslett said.

GAYLE SAND, associate director of the Emma Goldman Clinic, 715 N. Dodge St., said the clinic is supportive.

"We are backers of any effort that makes abortions easier to obtain for women anywhere in the world," Sand said. "We obviously support this effort."

But Sue Hickenbottom, a UI student senator and member of National Right to Life, disagreed with the clinic's stance.

"What she's saying means that if a Contra kills a pregnant woman's child, it is wrong and horrible, but if it is killed by abortion, that's all right," Hickenbottom said. "I think the whole idea is ludicrous. I'm certainly not going to contribute."

Engineering, writing classes attract UI Chinese students

By Shawn Plank
Staff Writer

UI College of Engineering graduate student Jack Gao left his home in China a year ago for the UI to help upgrade his country's science and technology fields.

"I want to try to do something more for China," he said.

Gao, 27, like many his age, are coming to study in the United States in increasing numbers.

UI officials reported this month that the number of Chinese students coming to the UI has more than doubled in the past two years.

In 1984-85, 64 Chinese students attended the UI. In 1985-86, the number jumped to 96 and this fall 149 students from China are enrolled in the UI.

UI COLLEGE of Liberal Arts Dean Gerhard Loewenberg, who will travel to China with four other UI officials in March, said Chinese students come to the UI because of its engineering and writing programs.

"It's the fame of the programs that attract Chinese students to the UI," he said.

UI Office of International Education and Services Foreign Student Program Director

Gary Althen said Chinese students are involved in many fields at the UI, including speech pathology, computer science, microbiology and Spanish.

But most students from China come to the UI to study engineering and mathematics, he said.

WHILE STILL in China a year ago, Gao met UI Professor of Civil Engineering Han-Chin Wu, who prompted him to come to the UI to earn his doctoral degree in engineering. Gao earned his master's degree from the Harbin Institute of Technology, one of China's major universities, he said.

Gao receives financial support from the Chinese government to attend the UI and plans to eventually return to his native country.

UI Department of Mathematics Chair William A. Kirk said his department attracts many students from China through a UI grapevine in China. Chinese students who have attended the UI tell their friends about the department, when they return home, he said.

CHINESE AND other foreign students and teaching assistants in the math department "add a lot of vitality" to the program, Kirk said.

"You hear a lot of comments about language problems with foreign TAs," he said. "But some of our most popular TAs are foreign TAs."

UI Center for Asian and Pacific Studies Director Robert W. Leutner said special international programs also draw Chinese students.

"Iowa has a reputation in China due to the International Writing Program," he said.

Professor Hualing Nieh Engle of the UI International Writing Program, a best-selling fiction writer in China, said some students come to the UI to be closer to her.

"I DON'T WANT to sound pompous, but my name is well-known there," she said.

Even some students in the sciences followed Engle to the UI, she said.

"You ask them 'Why are you going to Iowa?' And they say 'I'm going to where Hualing is,'" she said.

Engle, a native of China, left the country after her father was killed by the Red Army in 1949 during the Communist takeover.

Magazine publisher defends rights of smokers, advertisers

By Ann Szemplenski
Staff Writer

A ban on tobacco advertising and no smoking laws violate the rights of smokers, the publisher of a pro-smoking magazine said Thursday.

Guy Smith, publisher of Phillip Morris Magazine, discussed the effects of the proposed ban and an essay contest designed to promote smokers' rights at a meeting of the Iowa City chapter of the Public Relations Society of America.

"Once the government bans tobacco advertisement, who's next?" Smith said. "Once they start segregating people who smoke by government regulation, what's to stop them from doing the same thing to other groups?"

SMITH SAID he disagrees with recent laws banning smoking in public buildings.

"Yes, smoke annoys some people, but there is absolutely no scientific data to support that cigarette smoke is harmful to others," he said. "The smoking controversy only needs basic human communication. People will work to accommodate each other."

But Iowa 46th District state Rep. Jean Lloyd-Jones, D-Iowa City, said communication will not solve the controversy.

The Daily Iowan/Jeffrey Sedam

"I don't mind if people want to destroy their own lungs, but I wish they would leave the rest of us alone," Lloyd-Jones said.

Current Iowa law requires that smoking be banned in all public buildings except in designated areas, according to Iowa 45th District state Rep. Minnette Doderer, D-Iowa City.

A recent bill that will be considered by the Iowa Legislature may increase anti-smoking regulations in other areas, including restaurants, Doderer said.

BUT SMITH wants Iowans who smoke to stand up for their rights.

During his only stop in Iowa, Smith said Phillip Morris Magazine is sponsoring a nationwide essay contest.

Smith said his magazine wants anyone interested to write an essay "that specifically questions the ramifications of a tobacco advertising ban on the future of free expression in a free market economy."

The Iowan who writes the best essay will be awarded a $1,000 prize.

Smith said the main purpose of the contest is to raise the public's level of awareness.

"WE'RE ASKING people to rise to defend their constitutional rights," he said.

Smith said a ban on tobacco advertising would not deter people from smoking.

"We're not trying to get people to smoke, we're just trying to get them to switch to our brand," Smith said. Phillip Morris is one of the leading manufacturers of cigarettes in the U.S.

"The government doesn't give Americans enough credit," Smith said. "Personally, I'm offended that they think someone else could make my decisions for me."

Grassley, Roehrick face off in Senate race

Incumbent defends political voting record

Sen. Chuck Grassley

Could you explain your rationale for voting in favor of aid to the Contras?

Yes. The United States helped, in 1979, through leading the way in the Organization of American States, for the de-recognition of Somoza. And the broad-based revolution that was then in place — by broad-based, I mean there were Marxists in it, like the Sandinistas, but also democrats, the church was in support of it, business was in support of it, the unions were in support of it — and it had democratic forces in it. So, recognizing the broad-base for what it was, being much better for Central America than the Somoza dictatorship, we led that de-recognition and then the recognition of the Sandinista revolution.

Now we've seen that revolution slip away. As the democratic forces have pulled out — the church no longer supports the revolution, the labor unions are not free and the free press is shut down now with La Prensa being shut-down, the Catholic radio station off the air, the democratic forces moving out of the revolution.

We want a return of the revolution, the broad-based political revolution that it was, with a mixed economy, mixed political participation, freedom of religion, freedom of the press. And we see that coming about through political and diplomatic accomplishments hopefully.

But seeing how (Nicaraguan President Daniel) Ortega has fended to not negotiate except when there has been outside pressure to bear, either through the Contadora group or through military pressure, we see the help from the United States as one way of bringing about the diplomatic and political solutions so that we get back to the revolution that the people were promised.

So, that's why I supported, and I think most people supported, aid as one way of bringing pressure to bear for bi-lateral negotiations or multi-lateral negotiations through the Contadora process.

What do you see as the future of federal financial aid and do you see any way of stabilizing the program?

I think through our efforts in this budget, where we increased on the floor of the Senate, and I voted for, a $500 million increase for the education function of the budget, of which guaranteed student loans is a part, that we probably have stabilized it.

It's one of the few programs that received an increase on the floor of the Senate over what we voted out of the Senate budget committee.

When you see a time when defense is way down, to a point where it's even below entitlements and non-discretionary funding is down, the budget as a whole has an increase of only six-tenths of one percent in 1987. . . . I would say that we have stabilized it and I think students can count on it.

The reason they can count on it is because generally, education aid is not just for low-income people, it's a middle-income class aid, as well, and there is broad-based public support for it, not coming only through the Democratic party but also coming through the Republican party.

What do you see as the main difference between you and your opponent, John Roehrick?

Well, I thought maybe our first debate would bring out more of what he stood for or didn't stand for, but it didn't bring out much more than his criticism of some of the things that I've done that he disagreed with. He has stated one or two positions, like helping agriculture, another thing for economic development. Beyond that, he hasn't stated a lot of positions other than taking exception to positions I've had.

So, I'm not sure that I really know where he stands. But I guess I would have to perceive . . . that he takes a very traditional, New Deal, liberal Democratic approach to government's involvement in the economy, of taxing more and spending more and continuing those programs that got us started in the 1960s on a downward slide to where we are today in the sense of fighting massive budget deficits.

I suppose my opposition to that is demonstrated by my leadership in freezing the defense budget with my amendment in 1985 where we took $17 billion of real growth out of the defense budget . . .

I see my effort as leveling off the influence of the federal government in our economy, whereas he would tend to have that influence continue to grow.

What do you view as Iowa's most pressing problem and what is your role as a senator in helping solve it?

The most pressing problem is the economic problem. When I say economic problem, most everybody will think we just have a problem in agriculture, but we don't have a problem just in agriculture. We tend to talk about helping agriculture when we want to help the economic

Challenger takes aim on U.S. Senate seat

John Roehrick

What is your stand on Central American policy? How should the United States be involved in Central America?

I'm opposed to intervention and involvement in Central America in the method in which we're doing it. If we're going to be involved it ought to be through the Contadora process, through peace negotiations, through a re-establishment of the Alliance for Progress, where we essentially say, 'How can we help you to better the standard of living of your people?'

We don't have the right to intervene wherever we wish because we happen to disagree with them. It's very difficult to say, 'I'm opposed to (Nicaraguan President Daniel) Ortega, but we'll go along with (Augusto) back down the road.

Where will the money come from?

We're going to have to take cuts in other departments. If we could turn this agriculture problem around, we would have somewhere around $10 to $20 billion a year to devote. If we got rid of just some of the nuclear weapons and channeled back a portion of that into education, we could do it.

What is the biggest difference between you and your opponent, Sen. Chuck Grassley?

The biggest area in which we disagree is defense. I happen to believe very strongly that we need arms control limitations . . . I think we have to not just freeze the defense budget, but we have to cut the defense budget and channel part of that money over into the domestic sector to revitalize our economy.

problem because agriculture is so basic to the Iowa economy — seven out of 10 are related to agriculture . . . but it's above and beyond just helping the farmer.

My role in it would be . . . to bring profitability to agriculture. That isn't just the farm bill, although the farm bill is a very important part of it because it is the safety net for the agricultural economy . . .

Even more important than the farm bill is what we do with the federal deficit and in turn how that impacts on the interest rates that farmers and small businesspeople pay and upon the value of the dollar. I suppose there are no two things which will bring profitability to agriculture and the economy of Iowa anymore than keeping interest rates down and getting the value of dollar down because we're such a capital intensive industry and we're so dependent upon exports.

Beyond that, the trade policy of the federal government because the industrial as well as the agricultural economy of Iowa is very dependent upon agriculture. And lastly, the tax bill . . . the extent to which this recent tax bill has shut down agriculture as a gigantic tax shelter, then I see that, in the long-term, . . . enhancing the position of the family farm.

That's one area that I'm very directly involved as a legislator — helping the budget climate, the farm bill climate, the tax climate, the trade climate for Iowa industry and the Iowa economy.

But beyond that I . . . would work toward the diversification of the economy. Number one, I would try to get more government contracts for Iowa industry; number two, I would try to encourage export of our agricultural products and an example of that would be the trade commission that I recently had in which I brought 31 ambassadors from foreign countries to Iowa to view the Iowa economy, our industry, what we have to offer . . .

Thirdly, what I did, for instance, in the case of the Fortune 500-type seminar for Iowa leaders to meet with about 145 representatives corporations.

Sen. Chuck Grassley, a Republican from New Hartford, Iowa, was elected to the U.S. Senate in 1980. He was a farmer, a member of the Iowa House of Representatives and member of the U.S. House of Representatives before joining the Senate. Grassley serves on the Budget and Finance Committees.

Pinochet in Chile. . . . People have the right to choose their own form of government, then once they've chosen that form of government, let's work with that.

What steps would you take to implement your views on Central America?

First of all, you vote against the appropriations for continuing Contra aid . . . carefully watching the votes and working with the Democratic caucus in the Senate to shape a policy is what needs to be done. I'm not sure as a single senator, I could introduce any type of legislation that would necessarily change the policy, but as a senator within the Democratic caucus, we could change the policy and give some direction to it.

What can be done to stabilize the federal financial aid programs?

We propose . . . first that the federal government shift some of its emphasis from direct loans to the private sector and virtually guaranteeing interest write-downs for students, so the students are really only paying 3 or 4 percent and the federal government is picking up the rest.

Secondly, we have to go to "targeted loans," and what I mean by that is target professions where we need them. And those students who go into that and borrow money to complete their education would be forgiven part of that debt over a period of years. Also, if they stayed within the state in which they got their education and got a job, they would be forgiven part of that debt over a period of years.

Right now, the way the loan structure is set up, we're virtually mortgaging students into having to seek occupations that have high salaries because of the payback. Therefore, we're losing students in areas in which we need assistance.

. . . we've got to treat education not only as a matter of opportunity, but of equality and say that those students who can't afford an education are allowed to have grants to complete their education . . . we need to have a commitment in this country to providing the best possible higher education opportunities we can regardless of income guidelines.

What importance does education have in the federal budget? How much money should be directed toward education?

. . . If the defense department can have inflation adjustment factors, so should education. We're going to have to funnel some money into education, prime the pump. We'll get it farmers through farmer-elected, farmer-controlled commodity boards. If we could get that proposal through, or one similar to it, that would de-politicize agriculture and make sure that we're not arguing every three or four years among senators and congressmen over what our prices are going to be, while allowing the grain companies to literally rape the world market and start destroying other economies. If we could get some stability in agriculture, that would be the greatest achievement.

The second one is our other proposal — the federal economic development bank, where a public investment bank would be created to provide a large amount of capital for target industries.

What is your plan for deficit reduction? If elected to the Senate, would you be inclined to follow the guidelines set down by Gramm-Rudman?

No. First of all, I would do everything I could to get rid of Gramm-Rudman.

Most people say, the deficit is caused by too much spending. I look at from the other way around and I tie it all back to the 1981 budget bill which unleashed the military spending and the 1981 tax bill which took corporations off the tax rolls.

When we did that, the dollar started to rise. The real deficit has come about because of our trade imbalance and our strong dollar. We need to look at the trade imbalance as part of the cause of the deficit.

. . . How do you turn that around? . . . You create a national trade council which has the authority and power to develop, enforce and implement trade policies on an international level. In working with the trade council, we start targeting industries where we start revitalizing, such as steel . . . That means that people make $10 per hour instead of $5 and they pay more taxes. If they pay more taxes you start reducing the deficit.

Along with that you add a fair tax system, which we may have now. The third thing is you reduce the military spending and use part of that money.

Do you support the Solomon Amendment? . . . No, that's just a neat little way of saying, 'If you want money, you have to be registered.'

Education threats

To the Editor: I am writing in response to the article written by John M. McClintock (The Daily Iowan Oct. 13). I think there is a misconception about the Guaranteed Student Loan program, especially now that the reauthorization bill has passed through Congress and has been signed by President Ronald Reagan. Because Congress is trying to reconcile our national deficit, it has chosen to cut $400 million from the GSL program alone over the next three years. With the new regulations, thousands of students will find they are no longer eligible for loans. As tuition increases, those students from middle-income families who cannot receive aid may find it impossible to attend college. Here are just a few of the new federal regulations that are effective immediately.

- All students applying for any financial aid — including GSL's will have to fill out the Financial Aid Form (FAF). This includes both graduate and undergraduate students.
- Independency status for the 1986-87 academic year will only be given to students who are 24-years-old or more. Exceptions will be made for married students, graduate students, students with dependent children, and students whose parents are deceased. Parents' taxes and student resources for the current year and the previous two years will be checked. These regulations will apply to those students who are currently considered independent by the financial aid office and any new applicants.

Because the FAF uses both family income and assets in determining financial need, overall GSL eligibility will be considerably lower than the need determined from adjusted gross income. Consequently, many students may not be eligible for financial aid.

The people this will hurt the most are farmers, who have a great deal of assets, and other middle-income families. Unfortunately, it looks like the only people who will be able to get an education in the future are the very rich and the very poor.

Freedom of choice

Attorney General Edwin Meese is back in the news again.

Since the release of the multi-volumed report issued by the Attorney General's Commission on Pornography in July, Meese has been virtually silent in his crusade to combat pornography and obscenity.

But Wednesday he vowed to prosecute an "explosion of obscenity with a vengeance" and "crackdown" on the pornography industry. Meese's decision to crackdown on the pornography industry also cracks down on an individual's freedom of choice by determining what is and what is not obscene.

Meese has vowed to prosecute an "explosion of obscenity," but what is obscenity? The American Heritage Dictionary defines obscenity as: "1) The state or quality of being obscene. 2) Indecency, lewdness or offensiveness in behavior, expression or appearance. 3) Something such as a word or act that is obscene."

So, what is indecent, lewd or offensive behavior? There is no clear-cut definition or example of what is obscene. Obviously, what may be considered obscene by one person may not be considered obscene by another. The attorney general has taken the liberty of determining for the nation what is obscene and what is not, in effect restricting the freedom of choice.

The American public is perfectly capable of determining its own standards. Through freedom of choice the nation's consumers can either purchase pornographic materials or choose to ignore what the pornography industry has to offer. Those who oppose pornography have neither the right to restrain the freedom of those who wish to purchase pornographic material, nor the right to define obscenity.

The judgement of what is and is not obscene must be left to the individual, not a group with a certain ideological belief or an attorney general who thinks he knows what is best for a nation.

'Burbies' rebut

To the Editor:
I'd like to comment on the poor taste shown in the article "In-state students at UI view 'burbies' with mixed feelings," (The Daily Iowan Oct. 21). This article was slanted, close-minded and often untrue.

It focused only on the negative aspects of Illinois students and failed to include the positive points, such as the significant addition of money for the UI, the diversity added to student life, and simply many good, caring people (We are not all snobby). Does anyone who doesn't like "burbies" remember where Chuck Long was from?

The article was also close-minded in stereotyping the 'burbies' as people who are all alike. Isn't that as bad as thinking all Iowans are farmers? The article took a few students' opinions and presented them as the norm for 30,000 students.

And lastly, the article was partially untrue in assuming most people came here because they failed to get into the University of Illinois. Some of us 'burbies' simply didn't want to go there. In fact, most of my friends and I didn't even apply there (I have little doubt I could have been accepted).

So maybe a few UI students wish the 'burbies' to go home, but they might want to look at a few of the positive points first. I just plain like Iowa. And I'm putting in four good years here. So next time you care to write an article about the 'burbies,' put in a good word for me and many others who aren't here to hurt the school and who might even enhance the UI.

Unfair stereotypes

To the Editor:
This is a rebuttal to an article "In-state students view 'burbies' with mixed feelings," (The Daily Iowan Oct. 21). The stereotype voiced against Illinois suburbs' crop of college students is not deserving. I am from Wheaton, Ill., located 30 miles west of the "Windy City," and live within shouting distance of two large corn fields. Speaking for many of my 'burbie' peers, we do not view Iowa as one big corn field.

What makes the UI only an Iowans' school? I never felt as though the University of Illinois were my school. And how can the enrollment of 4,600 Illinois suburbanians "take over" the UI when over 20,000 Iowans are registered students. I chose the UI because it attracted me with its many advantages. Many 'burbies' apply to the UI because of its convenient location, its outstanding reputation for excellence in academics, and its wide variety of programs offered to students, not to mention the pleasant town and beautiful campus. The UI was the only college I applied to, and not because I was afraid of the University of Illinois' application review board.

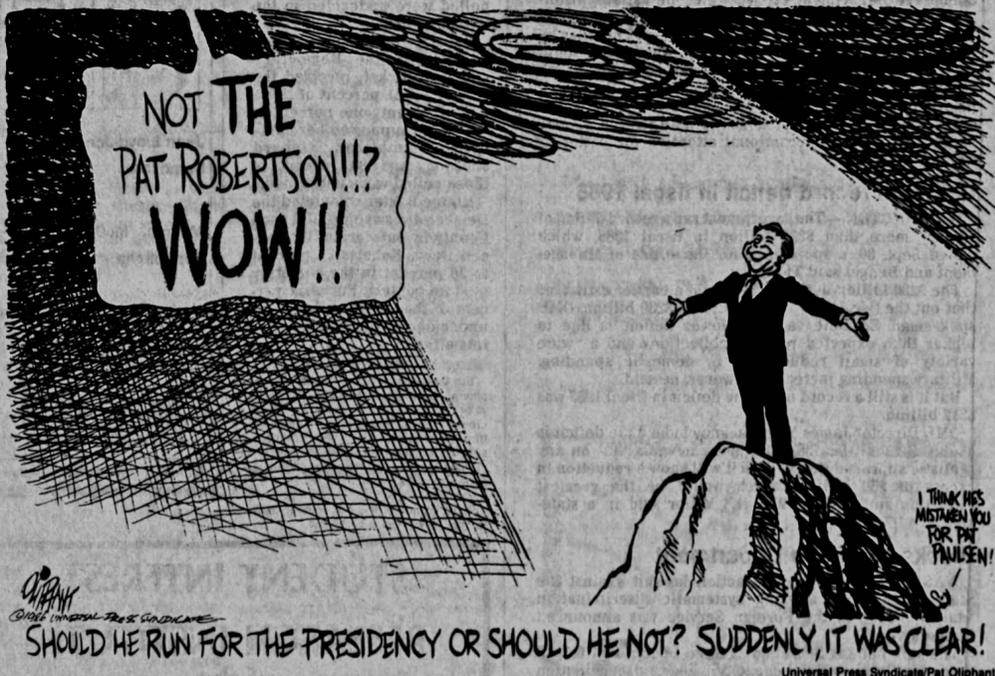

If Iowa students don't want to be stereotyped as farmers, then stop stereotyping Illinois suburbanians as young yuppies! Perhaps some of you "bigots" have forgotten that we are here for the same reason you are — the education. As for the so-called "aura of superiority" one Iowan said we 'burbies' have, people act how they are viewed.

Harmful decision

To the Editor:
Obviously there was nothing newsworthy happening in the state, nation, or the world on Friday, Oct. 17. Otherwise, I'm sure you would never have stooped so low as to print your charming picture "Crash Course" (delightfully clever caption), where it engulfed one-fourth of the front page. I'm sure Erin Robinson appreciates having a very traumatic experience recorded for posterity. I'm also sure everyone involved will file it away carefully in their scrapbooks and bless you for it. However, just a friendly suggestion — any future accidents such as this should have a small paragraph published preferably on the second page, minus the enchanting photograph.

Iowa, Nicaragua join forces

By Suzanne Janssen

THE SAME administration, legislators and multinational corporations that are eliminating U.S. family farms are waging a war of starvation and terror against the people of Nicaragua. These two issues are integrally linked and part of an overall policy designed to widen the gap between the rich and poor in this country as well as to continue the domination of the U.S. government throughout the world.

We have seen these groups promote farm legislation that provides greater surplus in the United States, driving commodity prices even further below production costs to $1 a bushel. Iowa grain is rotting on the ground while much of the world goes hungry. Then, while cutting the budget for conservation, food-stamps and other important programs for farm families in rural communities, they spend an astonishing $10 billion a year to make war on the people of Central America, according to Joel Rogers, Massachusetts Institute of Technology political science professor.

Guest Opinion

SUBSIDIES TO increase U.S. agricultural exports result in payments of over $1 million dollars a year to individual corporate cotton and rice growers, while family farmers are being forced off their land at rates of 2,000 per week, according to Prairie Fire Rural Action, Inc.

In addition to the destruction of U.S. rural life, these policymakers and multinationals are funding a cruel war against the Republic of Nicaragua, where the government has given land to tens of thousands of poor and landless peasants. Our government has vetoed international development loans and imposed a complete trade embargo, even recently inhibiting an Oxfam shipment of farm implements. Rather than pursuing such constructive avenues to assist Nicaraguans, President Ronald Reagan arms and trains contra terrorist bands who have systematically targeted farm families, health workers and teachers in the countryside.

IN THE LAST four years, according to a 1985 Center for the Study of Americas Strategic Report, 12,000 civilians have been slain by these so-called "freedom fighters," 1,000 farms and cooperatives have been burned to the ground, and 50,000 farmers have been forced to flee for their lives.

The Harvest of Hope, a coalition of groups at the UI, has been formed to help reverse this situation. Instead of sending bullets and mercenaries to the people of Nicaragua, we will be sending a shipment of donated, surplus Iowa-grown corn and other humanitarian assistance to help the rural peasants who are fighting to maintain their land and families in the face of brutal contra attacks.

We will also be raising money to aid Iowa farmers in their struggle against corporate takeover. The aid will be channeled through two groups, the Iowa Farm Unity Coalition and the Nicaraguan Union of Farmers and Ranchers (UNAG).

To keep families on their farms, the farm coalition has successfully lobbied for a variety of reforms, such as a foreclosure moratorium and forced credit mediation. UNAG, recognized by the International Labor Organization as representing the private sector in Nicaraguan agriculture, is one of the most significant democratic mass organizations in that country.

It has been a major force in designing and implementing the agrarian reform. These two groups represent the highest values of grassroots democracy and social and economic justice. Their problems are caused by the same forces. They both merit the most energetic support the people of Iowa can give.

In order to provide this much needed assistance, Harvest of Hope is sponsoring a walk-a-thon Sunday, Oct. 26, at 12:30 p.m. beginning in City Park. Join us for peace and justice in both Iowa and Nicaragua.

How the real lobbyists do it

By Michael Humes

I was in bed a few nights ago watching the new Joan Rivers' show and venting a few drams of spleen by throwing a rubber ball at the screen whenever the hostess — late night television's answer to the howler monkey — showed her face. My aim was true often as not, but one errant shot caromed off the contrast button and shot under my hide-a-bed. I got down on my hands and knees and felt around until I recovered my missile of righteousness and was about to rise when a strangely familiar voice boomed "Michael Humes!"

Whenever someone calls my name and puts an exclamation mark at the end of it, I know they mean business. I glanced around the room only to discover I was alone in the darkness. I shot a glance at my cat Buford to make sure he wasn't talking in his sleep again, but he was making not a stir. I was about to write it off as an hallucination, when the voice repeated, "Michael Humes! This is the Lord!"

"Oh," I said. "How do you do? And just which lord would you be, then?"

"THE Lord!" he thundered. "God, the Supreme Being, Creator Of Heaven and Earth, the Man Upstairs, the Big Guy, Numero Uno..."

"OK, OK, I get the picture," I said. "What can I do for you?"

"Michael Humes, I want you to run!"

"Oh, sure, NOW you say that," I huffed. "Then what was the big idea with the flat feet? That was your gig, not mine. By the way, did anyone ever tell you that you sound just like the Skipper on Gilligan's Island?"

"Would you let me finish, little bud... I mean, my son?" he said, as thunder crashed in the heavens. "I want you to run for president. Now, I know that involves a lot of standing when you're making speeches, but I'm sure with good shoes the proper arch supports..."

"WHOA, HOLD THE phone

there for a second," I said. "First of all, I don't want to be president. The hours are lousy, you live in a big house most of which you can't even use and which must be murder to heat, and you have to go to places like Reykjavik in the middle of October. No way, Yaweh. Besides, I thought you wanted Pat Robertson to run."

"Is that guy still saying its my will that he runs?" he snorted. "The last time I talked to that turkey it was only to tell him I didn't really give a hoot about the balanced budget amendment and he should stop saying I'm for it. If I really wanted someone to be president, he'd BE president faster than you could say 'Bob's your uncle'. I just plain don't do endorsements. I was about to rain toads on that so and so and so send a plague of locusts up his nose, but then I decided I'd just tell lots of people I want them to run for president and take a little of the wind out of his sails. You, Vladimir Horowitz and Charo are all scheduled to announce your intentions tomorrow. Sure you're not interested?"

"I'll just go back to throwing things at Joan Rivers." "Yeah, isn't she a pain?" he said. "Believe me, her getting a show had nothing to do with my will, either. Want me to improve your aim or anything?" "I seem to be doing well enough by myself," I said. And with that, I sensed I was alone. Just as I was drawing a bead on Rivers' mouth, I heard another voice in a gentle tone, "Greetings. I am the Compassionate Buddha, and I wish you to run for pres..." "Look," I interrupted, "I think you guys should get a little coordination going. First of all, no dice. Second, God has already asked Charo, so maybe you should try her. I'm sure she'd say yes."

"Oh, all right, good idea," he said. "Sorry to interrupt you. By the way, if you put a little more spin on the ball, you'll put that annoying harpy's lights out."

"Thanks for the tip," I said. "Cootchie, cootchie," said the Compassionate Buddha.

S. Africa protests economic report

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa — The government Thursday protested a U.S. report that said South Africa is saddled with a chronic debt, a repressive regime and "is closer to becoming just another African state."

In Pretoria, Foreign Minister Roelof Botha summoned U.S. Charge d'Affaires Richard Barkley to protest the Commerce Department report, which he called "insulting and hostile."

The 50-page report, distributed on request Thursday by the U.S. Information Service in Johannesburg, said South Africa is "a chronic debtor, import-starved, riddled with ethnic diversities, a repressive regime unable to manage its own domestic constituency in any positive way, whose only leverage is its ability to manipulate foreign governments and attract international attention for better or worse."

U.S. runs record deficit in fiscal 1986

WASHINGTON — The government ran a record deficit of slightly more than $220 billion in fiscal 1986, which ended Sept. 30, a spokesman for the Office of Management and Budget said Thursday.

The $220 billion deficit is lower than earlier estimates that put the fiscal 1986 red ink total at $230 billion. OMB spokesman Ed Dale said the lower deficit is due to higher than expected revenue collections and a "wide variety of small reductions" in domestic spending. Military spending increased however, he said.

But it is still a record high. The deficit in fiscal 1985 was $212 billion.

OMB Director James Miller acknowledged the deficit is at an all-time high. "But the good news is that on any realistic appraisal the '87 deficit will show a reduction in excess of $50 billion, which would be the greatest reduction since World War II," Miller said in a statement.

Blacks sue State Department

WASHINGTON — A class action lawsuit against the State Department alleging systematic discrimination against blacks in the Foreign Service was announced Thursday.

The suit, naming Secretary of State George Shultz as a defendant in his official capacity, alleges discrimination "in virtually every aspect of the Foreign Service personnel system, including the selection, evaluation, assignment and termination of black officers," a statement by the lawyers that handled the case said.

The lawsuit, filed by two Foreign Service officers on behalf of more than 257 others, cites the fact that only 6.3 percent of the Foreign Service is black as evidence of racial discrimination and charges the service discriminates against blacks by giving them inferior "hardship" assignments in Third World countries.

Government approves airline purchase

WASHINGTON — The government Thursday tentatively approved Delta Air Lines' purchase of Western Air Lines, a multimillion dollar deal that would create one of the largest air carriers in the nation.

The Transportation Department said the move "is not likely to substantially lessen competition" in the airline industry.

The department invited interested parties to comment on its decision within 15 days.

It denied, however, a request for immediate approval of the Delta-Western merger, arguing that the applicants had not established a need for such swift action and that "a transaction of this significance should be considered under the substantive standards and hearing requirements" of applicable law.

A Delta spokeswoman said the purchase price totals about $860 million based on the Sept. 9 closing price of Delta stocks.

New Swift talks end in stalemate

MARSHALLTOWN, Iowa — Negotiations between Swift Independent Packing Co. and its striking union workers ended in a stalemate Thursday, less than 45 minutes after the two sides returned to the bargaining table for the first time since Oct. 7.

Marshalltown Mayor Stan Brown, who arranged the talks in an effort to end a 23-day strike by the National Brotherhood of Packerhouse and Industrial Workers, said both sides refused to compromise.

"It's fair to say neither side helped the proceedings," Brown said. "We hoped for some progress, but it didn't come about."

Colds sneeze their way to UI

By Tom Hunter
Staff Writer

The waste basket is full of crumpled tissues, the aroma of chicken soup fills the air and the muffled sound of a sneeze comes out from under a mountain of quilts.

This is a common scene on the UI campus as cold season descends on Iowa City, say UI student health officials.

UI junior and Hillcrest Residence resident assistant Lisa Lohring said just about everyone on her floor has had either a cold or sniffles.

"I think everyone has had at least one cold," Lohring said. UI freshman Jay Goeser said he catches colds easily and the one he had caught a few days ago consisted mainly of a sore throat and sinus problems.

"I usually get colds, I'm terrible about it," Goeser said. "I'm always catching 'em."

"The professor got so mad he blew up at us, he thought we were faking," says UI freshman Jay Goeser, recalling an incident when an epidemic of colds caused a chorus of coughing in one of his classes.

GOESER SAID HE knew many people who had colds. In his psychology class a professor had become angry because one person's cough triggered a classwide coughing fit, he said.

"The professor got so mad he blew up at us, he thought we were faking," Goeser said.

In most dorms, colds creep from one room to the next, infecting several people in a row, Lohring said.

UI Student Health Service staff physician Richard Mitchell said the health service had seen an "obvious increase" in the number of students coming in with colds.

"We certainly recognize there is an increase," Mitchell said, but added that the number of colds is not unusual for a university the size of the UI, he said.

"WHEN YOU HAVE 30,000 students in reasonably close contact with each other in classes, you're bound to see more spread of the disease," Mitchell said.

Currier/Stanley Residence Hall Coordinator Lisa Norbury said she has also noticed an unusual outbreak in colds.

"Yes, I have completely noticed an increase from this year to last," Norbury said.

The rapid change from warm weather to cold this year probably caused the outbreak of colds among both her staff and the residents, she said.

Norbury said her staff handles any uncertain medical questions by sending persons with colds to the health center, but occasionally more intensive response is necessary, she said.

"I personally know of three times last week an ambulance came to the dorms," Norbury said.

Walk-a-thon raises money for farmers

By Monica Seigel
Special to The Daily Iowan

Eastern Iowans will walk 10 kilometers through Iowa City Sunday as part of the "Harvest of Hope" campaign to raise money for agricultural interests in both Iowa and Nicaragua.

Money raised through pledges and donations will be evenly divided between the Nicaraguan Union of Farmers and Ranchers and the Iowa Farm Unity Coalition.

The Harvest of Hope campaign was initiated by the UI Central American Solidarity Committee, the University

Rural Crisis Group, the UI Liberal Arts Student Association and the UI Network of Progressive Faculty.

The event should yield a minimum of $3,000, LASA member Suzanne Murray said.

Suzanne Janssen, a member of the Central American Solidarity Committee who helped organize the event, said a goal of the walk-a-thon is to encourage a redistribution of resources between the United States and Central America.

"NICARAGUAN FARMS are being destroyed by the U.S.-supported Contras in Nicaragua," Janssen said. "At the same time, family farmers in Iowa are being driven off their land while the surpluses they produce rot in the ground. This is a tragic contradiction, and it's time for some positive change."

Murray said she was pleased with the interest being shown in the campaign.

"Students take classes in the Liberal Arts College that teach them about world events. It's important for them to realize that there are situations in other countries similar to the one in our own backyard."

The walk begins at 1:30 p.m. at City Park in Iowa City.

FOLLOWING THE walk-a-thon Sunday evening, Dan Easdale, a Missouri farmer, will give a slide show and presentation at the Iowa City Catholic Newman Center of his experiences in Nicaragua.

Daniel Nuñez, UNAG president, will deliver the welcoming address to the walkers on Sunday. Nuñez will also speak on Monday, Oct. 27 at 1 p.m. in the International Center in the Jefferson Building.

Nuñez represents the more than 124,000 Nicaraguan farmers in the leading Nicaraguan agricultural association.

LIBRARY SEEKS NAME FOR ITS NEW COMPUTER SYSTEM

The U of I Library system is seeking the help of students, faculty and staff in naming the massive computerized system that will be installed in the UI libraries over the course of the next six years.

The system will keep records of over five million holdings and allow users to search items by author, title and subject. It will also keep track of when books are checked out and due, list new acquisitions and handle much of the libraries' clerical work.

A name is needed before the system becomes operational. Ideally, it should be distinctive and easy to remember, while reflecting the broad purpose of the system. Some names of similar systems employ acronyms, e.g. CATNYP (for Catalog, New York Public Library). Others use words or phrases, e.g. Socrates, Acorn.

Suggested names should be sent by November 7th via campus mail to Ed Holtum, Health Sciences Library.

THAT'S RENTERTAINMENT'S

audio byline

One of the most requested groups on compact disc is The Moody Blues. We have many different Moody Blues discs, including Every "Good Boy", "A Question of Balance" and of course, "The Other Side of Life." Among the Dylan discs we stock are "John Wesley Harding", "Before the Flood", and Biograph.

Dire Straits is probably the hottest name in audio these days. All of their albums are available on compact disc and we've got them. Another artist with numerous discs to his credit is Billy Joel. We rent everything from "Piano Man" to "The Bridge." "The Bridge," by the way, is showing signs of becoming Billy's biggest seller ever, which is quite an accomplishment.

There are a lot of vintage releases available on CD, also. The Turtles, The Racals, Santana, Marvin Gaye, and Joan Baez all have classics on CD.

One of the biggest CD collections by one artist would have to be David Bowie's. We have many Bowie CD's, including "Scary Monsters", "Changes One," and "Let's Dance." Tom Petty is popular, too. With such releases as "Hard Promises" and "Live."

The audio byline is a continuing feature of THAT'S RENTERTAINMENT.

Nostalgic Reagan slams Democrats

SPRINGFIELD, Mo. (UPI) — President Ronald Reagan, stridently partisan as he raced into the stretch of a "last hurrah" midterm campaign, warned Thursday that if Republicans lose control of the Senate, "the liberal Democrats will march us back to the grim days of the '70s."

Insisting "we've got a great story to tell," Reagan opened a final 13-state campaign blitz by declaring 1986 "a make-or-break election that will determine not only whether America is prosperous, but whether our people will be safe and our nation secure."

"The differences between the parties," he added, "are glaring."

Reagan painted the Democrats as high on tax increases and soft on crime and defense as he campaigned to preserve — or widen — single-digit leads held by Senate GOP hopefuls in Wisconsin and Missouri.

REAGAN CAMPAIGNED for Sen. Robert Kasten in Waukesha, Wis., and former two-term Gov. Christopher Bond in Missouri. The Republicans lead their Democratic rivals, though, by margins considered slim enough to keep Democratic hopes of victory alive.

Missouri gives the GOP its clearest shot at a seat now in Democratic hands.

With Congress in adjournment, Reagan abandoned any pretense of keeping peace with the opposition on Capitol Hill by cranking up his rhetoric. His attack was tempered with nostalgic references to the campaign as his last hurrah — one in which voters can cast ballots for him a final time by keeping the Senate in GOP hands.

"I must tell you that today, all our accomplishments — all that during these 5 1/2 years we've struggled so hard to achieve — is in danger," he said at a Bond campaign rally.

WHITE HOUSE spokesman Larry Speakes said Reagan will tape radio and television commercials for GOP candidates Monday for airing the two days before the election. The GOP congressional committee also is trying to buy network time for two five-minute prime-time broadcasts on those Sunday and Monday evenings.

His appeals had a nostalgic and emotional edge, exhorting his audiences to "win one for the Gipper" — a reference to his role in the movie Knute Rockne, All-American — and vote for him a final time by electing "a Republican Senate that will work with me instead of against me and be around after I'm gone."

But consistent with a White House strategy of bringing the disparate Senate contests into more of "a national context," Reagan also turned combative, painting Democrats as tax increasers whose defense policies would undermine chances for arms control.

"I'LL BE ASKING the American people: 'Do you want to extend and complete economic recovery, or see it stifled through tax increases by the same people who nearly ruined our economy the last time they had the chance?'" Reagan said. "Do you want to move toward a peaceful world of insured defense against nuclear missiles, or remain stuck in the world of permanent nuclear terror?"

In Washington, Christopher Matthews, spokesman for House Speaker Thomas O'Neill, D-Mass., said Reagan's comments were unwarranted and the president should apologize for them.

13 die in Pakistan as plane crashes

LAHORE, Pakistan (UPI) — A Pakistan International Airways plane on a domestic flight crashed Thursday near Peshawar in northwest Pakistan, killing 13 people and injuring 27, an airline spokesman said.

Fourteen people survived the crash unhurt, said PIA officials. Among the dead were the pilot, Reza Zaidi, flight officer Manzar Masood, and flight attendants Chaudhry Amjad and Almas Hameed.

The Fokker-27 plane carrying 54 people was flying from Lahore to Peshawar, 300 miles away, when it crashed less than 5 miles southeast of its destination at 8:45 p.m., the spokesman said. The cause of the crash was not immediately known.

THE SPOKESMAN said 13 people were killed and 27 injured in the crash of the twin-engine propeller plane carrying five crew members and 49 passengers.

The official Associated Press of Pakistan quoted survivor Abdul Qadoos as saying the crew told passengers the runway was not clear when they arrived in Peshawar. Ten minutes later, after a landing announcement, the plane crashed.

A relief team was sent to the crash site and 27 of the injured were hospitalized in Peshawar, about 150 miles west of the Pakistani capital of Islamabad, the spokesman said.

Prime Minister Mohammad Khan Junejo expressed regret at the loss of "many precious lives."

Airlines Chairman Ijral Hyder Zaidi and Managing Director M.A. Daudpota issued a statement expressing "deep sorrow and grief" because of the crash and rushed to the site to supervise relief and emergency services.

U.S. halts 'tit for tat' game with Soviets

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The United States, calling off a diplomatic slugfest with the Soviet Union to make room for "larger issues" like arms control, refrained Thursday from retaliating for the latest expulsion of Americans from Moscow.

After four rounds of tit for tat, the score stood at 10 Americans kicked out of the Soviet Union vs. 80 Soviets expelled from the United States, with another 80 Soviets having to leave before April 1988.

The State Department responded to Wednesday's Soviet order which withdrew some 260 Soviet staff employees from the U.S. Embassy in Moscow and consulate in Leningrad by banning about 10 Americans from working at Soviet missions in the United States. But there was no direct U.S. action countering Moscow's expulsion of five more American diplomats.

"WE HOPE THAT this set of issues can now be put behind us," State Department spokesman Charles Redman said.

"We now have to get on with resolution of the larger issues affecting U.S.-Soviet relationship and build on the progress made in the discussions in Reykjavik," he said, referring to the Oct. 11-12 summit between President Ronald Reagan and Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev in Iceland that came near a sweeping agreement on arms control.

However, Redman said other Soviet restrictions — including limiting the number of temporary visas for visiting personnel and limiting the number of personal guests the ambassador and other U.S. diplomats can have — will be matched by parallel restrictions on Soviet diplomats in the United States.

Under the new operating rules, both countries will have 251 personnel — including diplomats, chauffeurs, code clerks and military attachés.

REDMAN SAID U.S. diplomats in the Soviet Union will have some short-term problems adjusting to life without cooks, janitors and other local help, but the difficulties can be handled.

One U.S. official said, "The first result is that both countries are going to save a lot of money by getting along with smaller staffs."

As the United States called a halt to the expulsion battle, American officials portrayed the campaign as a victory. Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger said the expulsions removed "a very large part of the leadership of the Soviet spy network" in the United States.

Senior U.S. officials told reporters Wednesday the Kremlin diplomats picked for expulsion included senior-level officers of the Soviet KGB and the campaign cleaned out the top ranks of the Soviet military intelligence network in the United States.

States.

THE CYCLE of confrontation began in March when the State Department ordered the Soviet missions to the United Nations to be cut by 40 percent in two years, with the first 25 to leave the country by Oct. 1.

The Soviets at first refused and the State Department specifically named 25 Soviets, who were later described as intelligence agents. The department also warned the Soviets that any retaliation would be met by the U.S. expulsion of 50 Soviet diplomats, plus whatever number of expulsions the Soviets ordered.

When the Soviets went ahead with the expulsion of five Americans, the United States followed through with the promised expulsion of 55 Soviets. On Wednesday, the Soviets booted another five Americans, and ordered on Soviet employees to stop working at the U.S. embassy.

Kohl speaks out for strong defenses

CHICAGO (UPI) — West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl said Thursday cutbacks of nuclear arsenals in Europe must be conditioned on a Warsaw Pact reduction of conventional military forces.

Kohl told an audience at the University of Chicago that the Soviet-U.S. summit in Iceland has created a "real chance" for progress in arms negotiations.

But pointing out that Germany lies at the geographical heart of the East-West military confrontation, Kohl said, "The Red Army has clear conventional superiority in Europe. The mountain of nuclear weapons has helped preserve peace and security. We want to get down off the mountain. But if the nuclear weapons are removed, the war threat will be increased."

Soviet conventional forces along the Iron Curtain are larger and more offensively oriented than NATO forces, Kohl said.

West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl lecturing in Chicago Thursday.

There is a poker game going on."

The European Economic Community has made great strides toward unity in the past 30 years, Kohl said. He insisted West Germany has a right to support the eventual integration of West and East Germany, a goal that will be aided by a strong Europe. "The most essential lesson of the century is that war is not a legitimate political means to an end," Kohl said. "If we want a change, we need the approval of our neighbors. The future of a united Germany must be decided under the roof of a united Europe." Discussing German attitudes toward the U.S. and NATO, Kohl agreed there is a marked difference between young Germans and the generation old enough to remember American aid to Germany after the second world war.

"There has been an enormous effort to disinform the German public about the United States," Kohl said.

Man takes hostages in Mormon Temple

KENSINGTON, Md. (UPI) — A gunman reported to be an excommunicated Mormon took two hostages in a towering Mormon Temple in the suburbs of the nation's capital but surrendered to police Thursday after a 13-hour standoff.

Clarence Leake, 29, of Harrisonburg, Va., pushed his way into the temple Wednesday night after a church member would not admit him because his pass had expired, police said.

Leake was holding the man captive in a seventh-floor worship area when a church security guard came upon them in the Solemn Assembly Room.

Leake captured the guard but released him at about 2:15 a.m. He held the church member hostage until surrendering to police shortly before 9 a.m., Montgomery County police Sgt. Harry Geehreg said.

"AS FAR AS MOTIVE goes, obviously religion would be an underlying factor," Geehreg said. "Not all the members of his family are Mormon. It's apparently been a conflict in the family for quite a while."

Leake's father, Donald, told CBS affiliate WUSA-TV in Washington that his son was recently excommunicated from the Mormon church. Clarence Leake told his father he felt the church had brainwashed him, the station reported.

Police said the younger Leake expressed no emotion during the all-night ordeal, and they were unsure of his reason for storming the church.

"He made no demands. We made no deals but we did persuade him to surrender," Geehreg said.

Leake was charged with false imprisonment, kidnapping and use of a handgun in the commission of a crime, Geehreg said. He was jailed in lieu of $500,000 bond at the county adult detention center.

Realigned team set for Wildcats

By Laura Palmer
Staff Writer

Iowa is still plagued by injuries but it appears the 12th-rated Hawkeyes will be at an overwhelming advantage when they face Northwestern Saturday in Kinnick Stadium.

Iowa Coach Hayden Fry believes the Hawkeyes are still hurting but according to Northwestern Coach Francis Peay, his team is more "bruised and battered" than the Hawkeyes.

"Our numbers are down," Peay said. "Considerably more than Iowa. Iowa is a team that can hurt you in so many ways, then beat you."

IOWA SPORTS A 5-1 record in overall play and is 2-1 in the Big Ten. Northwestern is 2-4 overall and 0-2 in league play. The Hawkeyes hope to stay in contention for the Big Ten title after a 20-17 loss to Michigan last week.

Quarterback Mark Vlasic, who saw some playing time against Michigan after missing two games, will regain the starting position Saturday. Last week versus the Wolverines he completed all five of his passes for 68 yards including a 15-yard touchdown pass to Robert Smith in the fourth quarter which tied the score at 17-17.

DEFENSIVE TACKLE Jeff Drost will not be returning to the line-up this week and will possibly miss the rest of the year according to Fry.

"The doctors say there's no way he'll make it back in the Time and place — 1:05 p.m., Saturday, Kinnick Stadium, Iowa City, Iowa.

Radio — (Originating Iowa Stations): WHO Des Moines, WMT and KXAK Cedar Rapids, KNC and KCUJ Iowa City, KQZX Davenport, KGRN Grinnell, KGLLO Mason City, KFHM Muscatine.

Television — No television

Team Records — Iowa is 5-1 overall and 2-1 in the Big Ten. Northwestern is 2-4 in all games and 0-2 in league play.

Attendance — 67,700 expected (The game is a sellout).

Series — This is the 50th game in the series and Iowa leads 32-14-3. Iowa has won the last twelve games in the series. Northwestern's last win came in 1973 in Evanston (31-15). The last Wildcat win in Iowa City was in 1971 (26-3).

Coaching records — Iowa's Hayden Fry is now 146-120-5 in his career and 57-31-1 in eight seasons at Iowa. He is 41-19-1 in the Big Ten and is 7-0 versus Northwestern. Francis Peay is in his first year at Northwestern. He was an assistant to Coach Dennis Green last year.

Next week — Ohio State is at Iowa (1:05 p.m.) and Purdue visits Northwestern.

Fullback David Hudson returned to the line-up last weekend after being out for three weeks with a thigh injury. Hudson contributed 54 yards on 13 carries against the Wolverines.

Fry said Iowa may also have to change its defensive alignment considering the numerous injuries and the four games the Hawkeyes have left after Saturday's game with the Wildcats.

This season, Northwestern has been a team which has been close to five or six of its opponents going into the fourth quarter of the ball game.

PEAY ATTRIBUTES his team's aggressive play to the new philosophy and playing style the coaching staff adopted this year.

"In previous years we've been a pro-style passing football team and we've attempted to establish a running game a little bit more effectively this year," Peay said. "We also employ the option to some extent. We're certainly not an option football team but we will use it to keep the defense off balance."

The Wildcats have the throwing ability of quarterback Mike Greenfield who completed 14 of 25 passes for 187 yards and one touchdown last week against Wisconsin.

Other starters in the backfield for Northwestern will be Ron Burton at fullback and Stanley Davenport at tailback. Davenport has rushed 62 times for 218 yards this fall.

regular season," Fry said. "However, if anyone could return, it would be Drost."

Myron Keppy, who was fourth-string tackle early in the season, will start against the Wildcats. Tim Anderson, Drost's back-up a week ago, is still injured. Keppy recorded 12 tackles, two for losses, against Michigan after seeing limited action in the Hawkeyes' first five games this season.

JOE SCHUSTER, who has also suffered a variety of injuries, will back-up Keppy at left tackle.

'Mother' Suppelsa provides leadership for Hawk runners

By Laura Palmer
Staff Writer

As the lone senior and the women's cross country captain, Sherri Suppelsa plays "mother" to a sophomore-dominated team.

"I don't like it labeled that way, but it ends up being that way because I have a little bit more experience as far as college-level running," Suppelsa said. "They look to me, I think, for a little reassurance, but for the most part they all know what they're doing. They all have a lot more running experience than me. I haven't been in running that long."

"She's done a really nice job as team captain," Iowa Coach Jerry Hassard said. "Several athletes have come to me and mentioned that she's very helpful and has inspired them in races and practices."

As she encourages her teammates, Suppelsa said that the team also motivates her.

"IN A WAY IT kind of helps me as far as my running," Suppelsa said. "You think, 'I've got all these little guys running behind me. I've got to keep my butt moving.' They push me in a way and at the same time I push them as far as encouragement or motivation, letting them know what we have on the line when we step up at every meet."

"I don't like it labeled that way, but it ends up being that way because I have a little bit more experience as far as college-level running," Iowa women's cross country runner Sherri Suppelsa says of her motherly role.

Cross Country

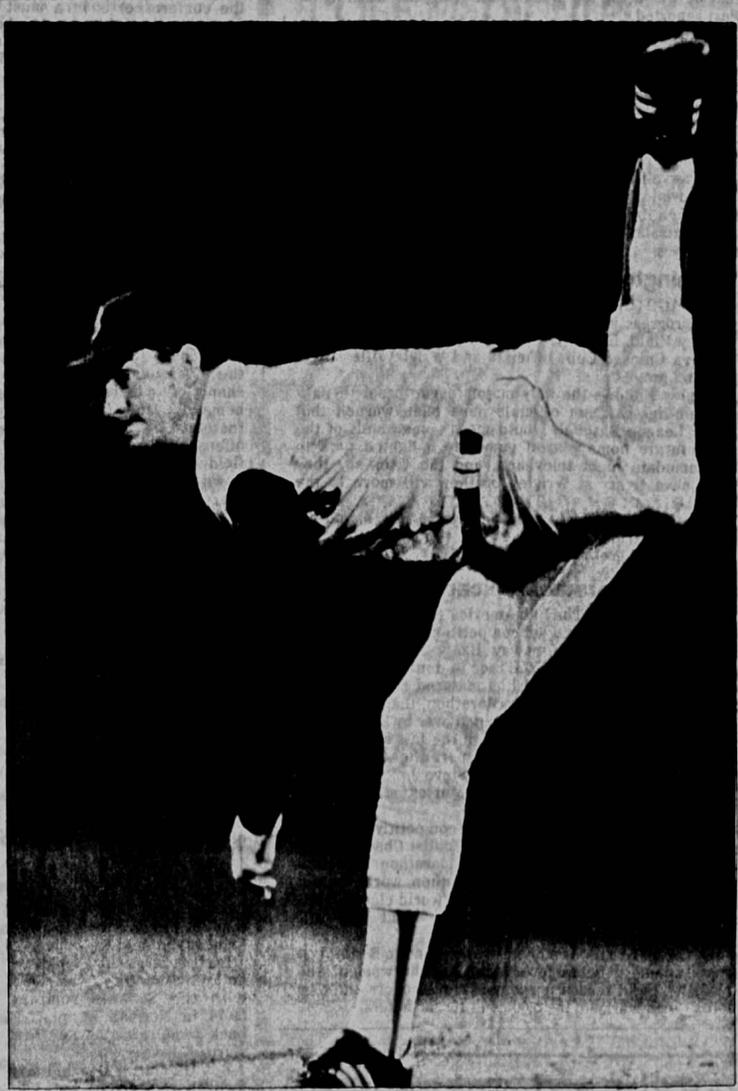

Iowa is a very close-knit team this year, and cohesiveness is greatly stressed. Comparing the teams over the years, Suppelsa commented this team has an advantage by being close, not only from a friendship standpoint but an ability standpoint as well.

"Because we're all so close in ability it's a lot different atmosphere. Before we had Nan Doak, Jenny (Spangler) and everyone was kind of like, 'Wow, look at them.' Now we're all up there, and now it's 'Wow, let's do it!'" Suppelsa said.

"IT'S A POSITIVE thing, and I think it helps all of the individuals. You kind of feed off of each other. One does good and the next one does good because you get pumped when you see the other person do good. Renee's (Doyle) a standout for us this year but I think we're kind of feeding off

Red Sox pitcher Bruce Hurst gives a leg kick in the fifth game of the World Series. Hurst during Boston's 4-2 victory over the Mets Thursday notched his second victory of the fall classic.

Boston trips Gooden, Mets; seek to take Series at Shea

BOSTON (UPI) — Bruce Hurst performed more autumn magic Thursday night by defeating the New York Mets for the second time in six days, leading Boston to a 4-2 victory and moving the Red Sox within one triumph of their first World Series championship in 68 years.

The victory was the first by the home team and gives the Red Sox a 3-2 lead in the best-of-seven Series. Game 6 is scheduled for New York's Shea Stadium Saturday night.

Roger Clemens, baseball's best pitcher in 1986 with a 24-4 record, will get the opportunity to bring the Red Sox their first title since 1918. Clemens, who faces former Boston hurler Bob Ojeda, will be starting with five days rest. He had an 8-0 record this season with five days off between starts.

AFTER PUMMELING Boston pitchers for 25 hits in the previous two games, the Mets were humbled by Hurst for the second time.

The 28-year-old left-hander walked one, struck out five and gave up 10 hits — but only six over the first seven innings. He stretched his scoreless inning streak against the Mets to 15 before Tim Lincecum spoiled his shut-out with a one-out homer in the eighth.

The Mets had the tying run at the plate in the ninth. But Hurst struck out Len Dykstra to end the game.

Hurst became the first Red Sox left-hander to win a Series game in Fenway Park since Babe Ruth in 1918. It was Hurst's third victory without a loss in the post-season, and improved his record to 8-0 since Sept. 1.

THE RED SOX supported Hurst with 12 hits and defeated Dwight Gooden for the second time. Dave Henderson sparked Boston's attack with a triple and a run-scoring double, and Jim Rice went 2 for 3 with a triple.

The Mets had Hurst in trouble three times in the first five innings, but he never gave in. Boston gave its left-hander a 1-0 advantage in the second inning, the first time in the Series the home team had taken the lead.

Henderson hit a shot to the gap and raced to third when right fielder Darryl Strawberry allowed the ball to get by him and Dykstra, the center fielder, slipped near the wall. Henderson scored on Spike Owen's fly to left.

Northwestern looks for revenge against Iowa

By Julie Deardorff
Staff Writer

Only the game location will be different for the Iowa field hockey team this weekend as it travels to Northwestern to play the Wildcats for the second time in a week.

Last Saturday the fourth-ranked Hawkeyes staged an impressive 4-2 victory over the visiting Wildcats to remain on top of the Big Ten Conference with a 7-0 record. Northwestern, ranked ninth in the nation, fell to 4-1-2, but still has a chance at the Big Ten title.

"We've heard that they (Northwestern) aren't very up at the moment," Iowa sophomore Michelle Murgatroyd said. "What they were basically insinuating was that the game will be much tougher this time."

Rosanna Salcido and Patti Wanner each scored goals in last week's victory while Liz Tchou added two.

SALCIDO AND TCHOU lead the Hawkeye scoring with 10 goals apiece while Melissa Sanders, Erica Richards and Murgatroyd have all scored five.

Murgatroyd has three assists. And Frederique Kock has collected two.

"They played very individually last week. They didn't really pass the ball to one another," Murgatroyd said. "If they begin to do that, we may have a problem. But we should win."

The Iowa players were given a few days break from practice and returned to work on Tuesday. "We haven't really started on game preparations yet," Iowa Coach Judith Davidson said Tuesday. "We'll be up for the game, though. The kids know we probably caught them on a bad day."

"OBVIOUSLY WE are going to have to make some changes," Northwestern Coach Nancy Stevens said. "Iowa was beating us to every ball. They were quicker, and we played a lot of defense early."

Northwestern will have the services of Jennifer Averil, the school's career assist leader with 51, who was hit in the jaw with the ball last week.

"She sets up most of our goals, and it didn't help to have her out for the second half," Stevens said. "But her injury had no bearing on the outcome. We were already behind 3-0."

Northwestern will try to take advantage of their home field advantage.

"We play better here than at Iowa," Stevens said. "Because it's such an emotion packed game, it's better to play at home."

Bias' teammates admit to cocaine use

UPPER MARLBORO, Md. (UPI) — Two teammates of Maryland basketball star Len Bias have told authorities that they snorted cocaine with Bias for about three hours on the morning Bias died of "cocaine intoxication," it was reported Thursday.

In addition, Maryland players David Gregg and Terry Long said Bias ignored warnings from Brian Tribble, the man charged with supplying the cocaine that killed him, that he was using too much of the drug, the Washington Post reported.

Gregg and Long related to Prince George's County prosecutors the first eyewitness accounts of the hours leading to the death of Bias on June 19, two days after the Boston Celtics selected him second overall in the NBA draft.

Long and Gregg also said Bias had used cocaine "on several occasions" before June 19, despite reports that Bias had never used cocaine before that day.

The two players said they were asleep in the Washington Hall dormitory suite they shared with Bias in College Park when Bias and Tribble awakened them at 3 a.m. and offered to share cocaine to celebrate Bias' selection by the Celtics.

Washington seeks end of lights dispute

CHICAGO (UPI) — Mayor Harold Washington, hoping to force progress in the persistent argument over lights at Wrigley Field, has called a summit meeting for Nov. 12 between Chicago Cubs officials and Wrigleyville neighborhood groups.

Wrigley Field is the only major league baseball park without lights. Team officials have been warned that Major League Baseball would move some or all of the Cubs' future home playoff games to a lighted park to accommodate night television, and the Cubs say they must have lights at Wrigley or they will move to the suburbs.

A state law bans night games at Wrigley Field, and the Cubs have tried to get the law repealed, with the neighborhood groups fighting them.

Future of Marathon-Chicago in doubt

CHICAGO (UPI) — The 10th America's Marathon-Chicago will be run Sunday with hot competition expected among top men runners, a runaway likely in the women's division and the future of the race in doubt.

The Chicago-based event has matured from the days when it was the Mayor Daley Marathon, thanks in great part to the millions of dollars turned over by Beatrice Co. for prize money and advertising in the last seven years. But Beatrice has pulled out its support after this year.

The absence of 1985 champions Steve Jones and Joan Benoit Samuelson because of injuries affects each division in different ways.

The men's division became highly competitive among a group, including Olympic bronze medalist Charlie Spedding of Great Britain, 1986 London Marathon champion Toshihiko Seko of Japan, half-marathon world record holder Michael Musyoki of Kenya and world-class American marathoners Mark Culp, Thom Hunt and Bill Rodgers.

But Ingrid Kristiansen of Norway, second to Benoit last year, became a heavy favorite among the women. She owns the world record for women marathoners and also holds world marks in the 5,000 and 10,000 meters.

Iowa set for key league foes

Any questions as to a possible Big Ten championship will be answered this weekend when the Iowa women's volleyball team hosts Indiana and Ohio State in Carver-Hawkeye Arena, Friday and Saturday.

Iowa (17-3 overall and 6-1 in the conference) is in a must win situation this weekend against the Hoosiers and Buckeyes who are themselves bidding for a high finish in the conference. Indiana is currently 4-3 in Big Ten play and 10-7 total, while Ohio State checks in right behind Iowa at

Volleyball

11-6 and 5-2. "This is probably the most crucial weekend we've had so far this season," Iowa Coach Sandy Stewart said. "Both of these teams have tremendous potential in the future and with Illinois already beating Purdue this week, we must keep pace with them."

FRIDAY'S MATCH with Indiana will allow Stewart and her team to see one of the up and coming teams in the Big Ten. The Hoosiers go with several freshmen and sophomores in their line-up and stand to be one of the favorites to win the conference in the future.

"Indiana is a very quick team with one of the best setters in the conference in Karen Dunham," Stewart said. "Freshman Julie Goedde is also ranked very high in the hitting department, and we know if we are to control the pace of this game, we must force the action and make them make the mistakes."

MEANWHILE IN Columbus, Ohio, Coach Jim Stone has his

Buckeyes ranked third in Big Ten play, but while Stewart feels they are an up and down team, she admitted that the women in red are capable of beating anybody.

"Ohio State has one of the strongest outside hitting attacks I've ever seen," Stewart said. "Kristi Neuman has a 30-inch vertical leap and can kill the ball from anywhere while Vicky Wright is nearly as good herself."

"If we are to beat the Buckeyes, we must concentrate on hitting the ball into the middle of the court and try to keep them off balance."

Perfection needed for Cyclone upset

AMES, Iowa (UPI) — Iowa State Coach Jim Criner figures the Cyclones have a good chance of upsetting No. 6 Oklahoma, if... they move forward instead of backward on offense, hold the Sooners to field goals instead of touchdowns and play with near perfection.

That sounds like a tall order, especially for a team that hasn't beaten Oklahoma in 25 years.

And it would be easy to count the Cyclones out before the 1 p.m. kickoff if it wasn't for a nationally televised night game two years ago in which the Cyclones gave the second-ranked Oklahoma the scare of its life.

Like this year, Iowa State entered that game at Cyclone Stadium as a four-touchdown underdog, but Oklahoma needed a touchdown late in the fourth quarter to slip out of town with a 12-10 victory.

THE NARROW LOSS to the highly-regarded Sooners did more for Iowa State recruiting than a handful of victories, Criner later said.

Last year was more typical of an Iowa State-Oklahoma game, with the Sooners romping 59-14 in Norman in quarterback Jamelle Holieway's first start.

But Oklahoma Coach Barry Switzer remembers the 1984 game and expects that to keep his squad from overlooking the Cyclones.

"They should get a great lift from their home crowd. I remember two years ago when we barely won. What a factor their fans can be," Switzer said.

"It is not unusual for our opponents to play their best game against us. I certainly look for that this week," he said.

Oklahoma linebacker Brian Bosworth, who Criner calls "a legitimate Heisman Trophy candidate," said it is important for the Sooners to get ahead early.

"THEY'LL BE sky-high for us. It will be our job to not allow them to make a game of it," he said.

"We are going into the game feeling like we're stronger on both sides of the ball than they are. It's our job to prove that is the case," Bosworth said.

Iowa State, 4-2 and 1-1 in the league, lost to Colorado 31-3 last week and dropped its opener to No. 12 Iowa. Sandwiched in between was a string of victories over Indiana State, Wichita State, Wyoming and Kansas.

Jim Criner

Oklahoma, 5-1 and 2-0 in conference play, held off Oklahoma State 19-0 last week. Its only loss was to top-ranked Miami of Florida, 28-16.

CRINER MAKES NO bones about what the Cyclones will have to do to knock off the Sooners.

"We're going to have to have an awfully, awfully good game plan, and our players are going to have to carry it out to perfection in order to give us a chance to even stay in the game," he said.

He said he hopes Iowa State can learn from the way Oklahoma State played the Sooners a week ago.

"Oklahoma will move the football and make yardage. One thing Oklahoma State did last week was make them settle for field goals. We hope to do that and generate some offense to beat them," Criner said.

"Our quarterback can't get sacked. And we have to eliminate going backwards and penalties. We can't lose yardage or have a score that forces us into a passing game... Oklahoma State did a great job being disciplined and running to the football. That's what we've got to do too," he said.

CRINER SAID Oklahoma may have the fastest team in the nation complimented by big, physical linemen.

"They worked us over so badly last year I thought I was on a 'M*A*S*H' set," he said.

of her," Suppelsa said. Suppelsa didn't begin distance running until her senior year in high school. She was a member of the track, volleyball and basketball teams but wanted to pursue a running career.

The senior captain was actually recruited for basketball but wanted to "get away from the sport".

"I LOVED THE game but running was exciting to me senior year. So I wanted to see how far I could go in it," Suppelsa said.

She wanted to attend a Big Ten school, and after checking a few out, Suppelsa decided on Iowa, mainly because of Coach Hassard's attitude towards walk-ons.

"I liked Coach Hassard. He was positive about letting walk-ons come on and have an equal chance to compete," Suppelsa said.

"She has improved steadily since last year in cross country through her commitment in cross country and track. She made a breakthrough last fall," Hassard said. "The big improvement in her performance came late in indoor and outdoor track. She ran a 2:12 split in 4 x 800-meter relay last year."

Suppelsa went on to make the eight person 1,500-meter finals at the outdoor Big Ten Championships which Hassard said is "a very prestigious accomplishment."

"LAST YEAR HELP build her confidence. She worked hard over summer and was ready to run cross country this year. She's a consistent scorer for our team," Hassard said.

Suppelsa has remained a walk-on throughout her running career at Iowa.

"It's been a lot of hard work and people lot of times say, 'How can you stand it, you're not getting anything for it,' but it's kind of irrelevant to me. I wanted to develop as an athlete whether I'm getting paid to do it or not. I think too much emphasis is put on that now with athletes. I know it is a lot of walking, people say, but that's what I have to do to get through. I love running. And this is what I want to do."

Routs may dominate Big Ten

By Steve Williams
Staff Writer

Following a week in the Big Ten in which two games were decided by last second field goals, this week promises to be one in which wide open affairs dominate the conference's matchups.

In Iowa City, Hayden Fry and his Hawkeyes are looking to rebound from a disappointing 20-17 loss in Ann Arbor, Mich. which has sent Iowa looking for a way to get back into the Rose Bowl picture against Northwestern this Saturday.

The Wildcats, on the other hand, are merely looking to survive the remainder of the season following the resignation of Coach Francis Peay.

"I feel that this team will benefit in the long run for me having made this decision," Peay said during Wednesday's teleconference. "This is a very intense football team, but if there is one team that we won't be competitive against late in the game, it will be the Iowa Hawkeyes, so please Hayden take it easy on us this weekend."

Michigan (6-0) at Indiana (4-2)
The Wolverines are coming off a last second win while the Hoosiers are coming off a last second loss, and Michigan Coach Bo Schembechler knows that the Indiana team

Francis Peay

Big Ten Roundup

he is facing this year will not resemble the doormat teams of past years.

"We will definitely have to be on top of our game this weekend if we are going to win," Schembechler said. "I expect this to be a very close football game and our team expects that too, so there can be no letdown and we had better be playing good football if we are to win on the road."

Meanwhile in Indiana, Coach Bill Mallory will be trying to regroup against the Big Ten leaders in order to keep his Hoosiers in the upper division of the conference, but he realizes it will be a difficult task.

"We are facing a very talented football team this weekend, and after last week's loss, we will have to show that we are capable of bouncing back after a tough loss," Mallory said.

Purdue (1-5) at Michigan State (3-3)

Coach George Perles and his Spartans are still trying to regroup after early conference losses to Iowa and Michigan. Following a 29-21 win over Illinois last weekend, the Spartans are on the right track, and look to continue their winning ways in their homecoming matchup with the hapless Boilermakers.

"Purdue has the ability to pass the ball well," Perles said, "and if we're not careful we could be in for a long afternoon."

Illinois (2-4) at Wisconsin (2-5)

Wisconsin Coach Jim Hilles and his Badgers are coming off an early season which has been plagued with injuries and now that his team is relatively healthy, he hopes they can gain some respect with Big Ten foes.

"This week, we will face a team that establishes a strong throwing game and the attitude of our players is now that we've won one game we can go for two and plan on doing something good down the stretch this season," Hilles said.

In Illinois, Coach Mike White is hoping for similar progress with his ball club, noting improvement each week.

"We knew we were a team in transition and we hoped we could improve each week," White said. "We've definitely done that and we are looking forward to the Wisconsin game with the thought that it should be a fantastic football game."

Minnesota (4-2) at Ohio State (5-2)

The Buckeyes are rapidly returning to the powerful figure they have been in years past. After losing two early season games, Coach Earle Bruce has rejuvenated his Buckeyes, running off five straight wins including three in the Big Ten.

Now, Ohio State will host a surprising Minnesota team that is tied for the Big Ten lead after three games and according to Bruce is very experienced all the way around.

Colorado turns year around in Big Eight

United Press International

The Colorado Buffaloes, who saw high preseason hopes vanish in an 0-4 start, have begun to vent their frustrations on the Big Eight Conference.

The Buffaloes host the No. 3 Nebraska Cornhuskers Saturday in a battle of league unbeaten.

Looking at records, the Nebraska-Colorado game appears to be a mismatch. The Cornhuskers are 6-0 and just waiting to jump higher in the ratings. As of three weeks ago, Colorado was winless.

Since then, however, the Buffaloes rediscovered their wishbone offense in victories over Missouri and Iowa State. They have allowed 15 points the past two weeks.

"THEY'VE GOT A great defensive football team and, of course, the wishbone always presents a unique challenge to your defense," Nebraska Coach Tom Osborne said.

"We think they are going to be probably the sternest test that we've had this year."

Big Eight Roundup

In other conference games this weekend: No. 6 Oklahoma plays at Iowa State; Kansas State hosts Missouri, and Kansas goes to Oklahoma State for a night game.

Colorado Coach Bill McCartney isn't about to put his Buffaloes in the same week-to-week class as Nebraska, but he does see a better team wearing Colorado uniforms.

"We expected to be 4-2 or 5-1," McCartney said. "We had visions of another bowl game and things like that."

"Now we're 2-4 and thoughts of a bowl game are removed at best. But the one thing that we had hoped for is that we'd be 2-0 in the conference and we are."

"WHATEVER WE HAVE to shoot for certainly is wrapped up in this game. We're going to prepare super hard and put it all on the line."

Iowa State Coach Jim Criner said his team needs that type of effort against Oklahoma, 5-1 overall and 2-0 in the Big Eight. Iowa State is 4-2 and 1-1.

"We're going to have a fanatical effort to even be in the game with them," Criner said. "Personnel-wise, there's no way we stack up."

Oklahoma is the second consecutive wishbone team the Cyclones will have faced and, while that should help the defense adjustment some, the Iowa State offense will be facing the best defense in the country.

KANSAS STATE, 2-4 overall and 0-2 in the league, hopes the tidal wave of emotion that carried the Wildcats to a victory over Kansas has some effect against Missouri.

Missouri, 0-2 in the league, has lost five straight games. But the Tigers did get some good news in that their No. 1 quarterback — Ronnie Cameron — will be back this week. "Ronnie has the ability to break it all the way. And he's got a great arm," Missouri's Coach Woody Widenhofer said, "and what we're missing right now is a big-play quarterback."

Oklahoma State, 2-4 overall, may be 0-2 in the Big Eight but those losses were at the hands of Nebraska and Oklahoma, and the Cowboys looked pretty good even in losing.

"At this stage of our development, to go out there and have legitimate chances against somebody that good does nothing but really help your confidence," Cowboys Coach Pat Jones said. "We're not pleased we lost either ballgame, but right now we feel better about ourselves than we have at any point in the season."

Kansas, 3-3 overall but 0-2 in the league with losses to Kansas State and Iowa State, doesn't have a good feeling about itself. In fact, Coach Bob Valesente has thrown every starting position on offense up for grabs.

"We have an awfully lot of work to do and a long way to bounce back," he said.

Atlanta hopes to stay in first

United Press International

Many members of the Atlanta Falcons are being introduced to a new kind of football this season.

For the first time a good number of them are playing games that mean something.

Except for the strike-shortened season of 1982 when they went 5-4, the Falcons haven't had a winning record since 1980, and since their creation in 1966, they have appeared in a total of four playoff games. The last two years Atlanta showed identical records of 4-12.

Talk about a turnaround. The Falcons, behind former Iowa State quarterback David Archer, approach the midway point of the 1986 campaign with a single loss and will be attempting to protect their first place lead in the National Conference Western Division Sunday when they travel to Los Angeles to play the runner-up Rams.

AT THIS TIME last year, Atlanta was 1-6 and the defense went on to allow the most points (452) and the most yards (5,850) in the franchise's history. After last Sunday's 10-10 overtime tie with San Francisco — a team that beat them 35-16 and 38-17 in their two 1985 meetings — the Falcons are 5-1-1.

The Rams boast a 5-2 record and can overtake Atlanta with a victory, but that doesn't stop Los Angeles Coach John Robinson from worrying.

"The simple fact is we're failing to get better," Robinson said. "We're 5-2, and obviously the trouble is how we got to be 5-2.

"WE'RE FAILING TO get better in the passing game and the things surrounding it. It's imperative and something we're going to have to do. The horizon does not look bright if we do not make some dramatic improvement."

It is the offense that concerns Robinson. The Rams had 22 net passing yards last week when they defeated the Detroit Lions 14-10. Seven of the points came when Nolan Cromwell returned an interception 80 yards for a score.

Robinson is considering putting high-priced rookie quarterback Jim Everett into a game for the first time in place of Steve Bartkowski.

"I think he's ready to try a few plays if he's nurtured," Robinson said. "If you thrust him in there with things changing, it's not what you want him to do."

ALTHOUGH THE Falcons have defeated the Rams three of the last five times, including a 26-14 victory three weeks ago in Atlanta, Los Angeles was installed as a 3½-point favorite at home.

Another key game Sunday will be at Denver, when the Broncos attempt to hold their first-place lead over Seattle in the American Conference West. Denver is coming off its first loss of the season against the New York Jets Monday night, when its advantage over the Seahawks was cut to one game.

Denver, with the home field advantage, is favored by a touchdown.

The Super Bowl champion Chicago Bears, also coming off their first setback of the year, should rebound against a Detroit team which has posted a 3-4 record.

In other games Sunday, the Jets are 9 over New Orleans, Cincinnati is 4½ over Pittsburgh, Minnesota is 3½ over Cleveland, the Los Angeles Raiders are 6½ over Houston, Miami is 9½ over Indianapolis, New England is 7 over Buffalo, Philadelphia is 4 over San Diego, San Francisco is 10 over Green Bay, Kansas City is 9½ over Tampa Bay and Dallas is 12 over St. Louis.

Book recognizes screenwriters' efforts

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Screenwriters are the most maligned of all Hollywood craftsmen or artists or whatever you want to call them.

When a much-heralded movie fails critically and/or at the box office, almost inevitably the finger is pointed at the terrible script.

It's safe to blame the wretched writer who is almost always anonymous except for the brief flash of credit on the screen preceding the film.

No one is about to say a movie fell on its ear because of Spielberg's direction or De Niro's acting. Any shortcomings in other departments are often explained away by the rotten script.

THE ROLE OF THE screenwriter in movies is entertainingly presented by writer-director-producer Sam Thomas in his new book, Best American Screenplays.

Thomas, an engaging, bearded man with a somewhat pedantic manner, teaches creative writing and cinema at the University of California-Los Angeles and the University of Southern California. He believes screenplays should be considered an important form of literature.

Of course, screenplays are not. Excepting movie buffs, Americans would be hard pressed to recall the name of a single screenwriter, save perhaps Sylvester Stallone, who is better known for other talents.

In his informative book Thomas presents his choice of the dozen best screenplays ever written:

- All Quiet on the Western Front (George Abbott, Maxwell Anderson, Dell Andrews);
- Meet John Doe (Robert Riskin);
- Casablanca (Julius Epstein, Philip Epstein, Howard Koch);
- Miracle on 34th Street (George Seaton);
- Rebel Without a Cause (Stewart Stern);

- Bonnie and Clyde (David Newman, Robert Benton);
- The Graduate (Calder Willingham, Buck Henry);
- Butch Cassidy and the Sundance Kid (William Goldman);
- Sounder (Lonne Elder III);
- On Golden Pond (Ernest Thompson);
- Arthur (Steve Gordon); and
- The Candidate (Jeremy Lerner).

"I selected these screenplays for content and the comment they make on the times they cover," Thomas said.

"They cover a lot of American history from World War I, through the Depression to the innocence of the '50s, through the revolt of the '60s and '70s to the present," he continued.

"THERE ARE MANY considerations in measuring the merits of a screenplay: dialogue, character development, style and most importantly the story structure itself," Thomas said.

"To bring these elements together successfully is a true art form. Unfortunately, few screenwriters become known to the public," he said. "Playwrights are a different matter. People hurry to see a play by a particular author. That's not the case with screenwriters."

Because movies are such a collaborative art involving producers, directors and actors — not to mention special effects, sound, camera and all the rest — the writer is seldom singled out.

The individual most often associated with a hit film and praised for creative accomplishment is the director. The director, however, would be unemployed were it not for the anonymous soul pounding away on the word processor.

"The visibility of directors overshadows writers in the public eye," Thomas said. "The public recognizes the work of directors and will go to the theater to see his pictures. Screenwriters have no such following."

'Phooey!' displays good-humored art

By Jill Lauritzen
Staff Writer

PHOOEY! is the name of probably the most novel art exhibit in Iowa City right now.

It's a cartoon exhibit on display at the Arts Center in the basement of the Jefferson Building, 129 E. Washington St., featuring cartoons, comic strips, animation, air brush art and sculpture.

Kathy Dee, a student at the UI and one of the artists whose work is on display, said Phooey!, which got its name from comic book lingo, was also the name of a group of artists that used to meet and draw cartoons.

"All the artists are original members of the Iowa City Cartoonists' Collective, called Phooey!, which used to meet at The Mill once a week to draw cartoons and exchange ideas," Dee said.

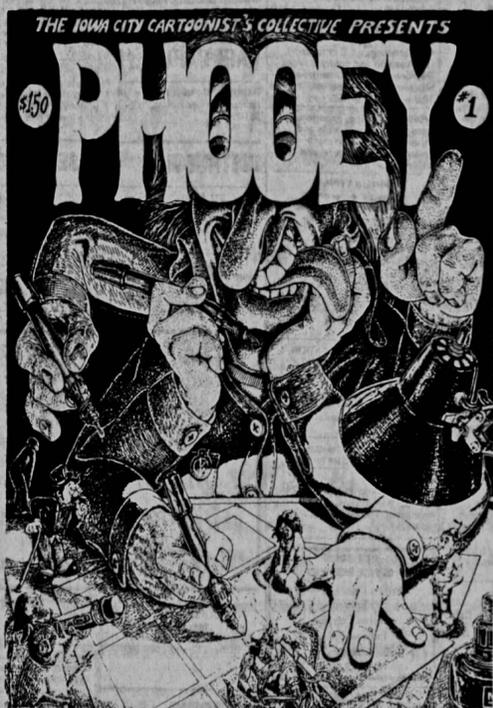

ONE OF THE members of the collective, Deanne Wortman, is the president of the Iowa City/Johnson County Arts Council. The council displays 11 exhibits each year, and so the cartoonists got some work together and made it into one of this year's exhibits.

"It's (the exhibit) kind of unusual and that's why we decided to do it," Wortman said. Wortman also works as an assistant in the Youth Services Department of the Iowa City Public Library.

Represented in the show are seven local artists who draw cartoons or do animated work," Wortman said. "They all have other jobs as well, but this is sort of a hobby for them."

Dewey McGuire, A V coordinator at the Iowa City Public Library and one of the cartoonists, has produced some animated films for cable channel 20. He recently had one of his cartoons published in Parents Ink magazine.

"NOT TOO many people get to see cartoons in their original

Iowa City. He since has published three books, poetry comics, in which he took famous poems, such as Shakespearean works, and made them into to comics.

THE EXHIBIT has room where aspiring artists may draw their own cartoons on paper provided.

"People are invited to draw on the public strip because we want them to participate," Wortman said.

Dee also invited the public to draw. "They can doodle or do graffiti. Cartooning is the people's art. It's very close to folk art."

For sale at the exhibit is a comic book, also entitled Phooey!, which is filled with the cartoons and comic strips the members of the collective have created.

"The comic book was our main product," Dee said. "We made about 1,400 copies and sold about (800) or 900 (at $1.50 per copy) so far. It's neat because it did pay for itself."

Wortman added 25 percent of the book's profits will go to the Arts Council.

ALL THE ARTISTS say the exhibit is very appealing to the public.

"It's unique, lighthearted and entertaining," Dee said. "I think people don't know how to view art. Cartoons are easy to understand and humorous. It's just fun."

"It's (the exhibit) going very well," Wortman said. "It's been very well attended. It gives people exposure to art. This is to show there are local artists in Iowa City and to give people a chance to view those artists."

"All these really talented people came together and then there was the group Phooey!" Dee said. "This (the comic book and the exhibit) is the result of it. It's a phenomena. There is no other word for it."

Phooey! can be seen at the Arts Center until Oct. 28, from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. Monday through Saturday.

"All these really talented people came together and then there was the group Phooey!" says Kathy Dee. "... It's a phenomena. There is no other word for it."

form," McGuire said. "People normally see cartoons when they're published. This exhibit lets people see the cartoons as they are — with the blue pen-oil scratching — which the camera doesn't pick up."

Also on display are works by Will Thomson, Emily Birdsong, Chuck Martin and Steve Campbell.

Others involved with the exhibit who have moved away since the early days of the collective include Stu Mead, who first got the artists together, puppet-maker John Barhiti, craftsman Cary Kann and poet/comic Dave Morice.

Morice, about 10 years back, used to call himself Dr. Alphabet and write poems on the sidewalks in downtown

Mull's comedy series slams 'white America'

NEW YORK (UPI) — With tongue planted firmly in cheek, comedian Martin Mull forges ahead in his exploration of the "manners and mores" of lily-white people in America.

Mull's success with "Cinemax Comedy Experiment: Martin Mull Presents the History of White People in America" has resulted in four new satirical series on the history of white folks that are every bit as good as the original show.

Mull journeys to mainstream America for a comic look at the bizarre world of plain old ordinary whites, told through the eyes of the abnormally average Harrison family.

The first part, on white politics, airs tonight on Cinemax-13.

"If we can make Amos and Andy out of our black brothers, I think it's time to get more specific about whiteness," Mull said. "He's had it too easy."

Taped in Los Angeles, the four new editions profile the lily-white Harrison family of Hawkins Falls, Ohio, as they cope with the routine crises confronting white Americans.

Mansion sets mood for play

By Michelle Tibodeau
Staff Writer

STEPPING into the Brucemore mansion in Cedar Rapids is like stepping into the late 19th century — the perfect surroundings for the Cedar Rapids Community Theatre's The Belle of Amherst.

The play, based on the life of Emily Dickinson, asks audience members to go back in time and observe the only character in the entire play, Emily Dickinson (Katherine Moyers). She speaks directly and intimately with the audience, trying to explain herself and her life.

THE AUDIENCES ARE small — there are only 40 to 60 people. Also, the environment is informal, with people seated on folding chairs and only about 2 feet away from the platform.

"The front row can reach out and touch the actor. It's very intense," said Cindy O'Brien, Cedar Rapids Community Theatre marketing and public relations director.

Following the performance, the audience joins Moyers upstairs for wine, pastries and conversation.

"Emily Dickinson is a very intriguing person and so is the (Brucemore) mansion," O'Brien said.

"It certainly has the ambiance of what Emily Dickinson's house may have been like," Moyers said. Many of the props are from Brucemore; the house's walls, windows and doors are used for the set and the stage is a platform in the front hall.

The Belle of Amherst is the first of three, one-actor shows in the Cedar Rapids Community Theatre's new Showcase Series. The plays will be shown outside of the theater in locations that support the plot, theme and atmosphere of each production.

"WE WANTED to provide an alternative theater experience for people," O'Brien said.

Everything about the production is unique, from the location to the presentation. For example, audience members may roam about the front rooms of the house during intermission, listening to piano music and sipping on complimentary wine.

Having only one actor on stage is also an unusual experience.

"It's terrifying to step onto a stage alone," Moyers said. In a one-actor show, you've only got yourself to rely on, and if the play flops, you can only blame yourself, she said.

"On the other hand, you don't have to worry about others screwing up," she said.

Moyers said the success of a one-actor play is very dependent on the director.

"I have a magnificent director, Candace Pufall," she said. "Without a very strong director it would be impossible to pull it off."

The Belle of Amherst will show tonight and Saturday at 8 p.m. and Sunday at 6 p.m. Tickets, which cost $12.50, cover the cost of the reception, and are available at the Cedar Rapids Community Theatre box office.

PERHAPS the charm of science fiction writer Joe Haldeman's work is his uncanny ability to create futuristic worlds populated by very human humans.

Even though Haldeman's characters zip about the universe, age a century in a week (relatively speaking), battle giant aliens on gravity-dense planets and live on "soya" for months, they still have time to fall in love, nurture old grudges or laugh at themselves.

Haldeman, who will be reading from his works tonight at 8 in the English-Philosophy Building Room 304, has long been recognized — both by critics and followers — as an outstanding writer.

IN 1975, Haldeman received his master's degree of fine arts from the UI Writers' Workshop. While he was in Iowa City, he also founded the Science Fiction League of Iowa Students — an organization that is still going strong.

Haldeman won the Hugo Award for Best Science Fiction Short Story of 1976 for "Tricentennial," the Galaxy Award for "Science Fiction and Spirituality" and the Rhyling Award for best science fiction poem of the year in 1983 for "Saul's Death."

The Forever War, perhaps Haldeman's best-known novel, won the Hugo, Nebula and Ditmar Awards as Best Science Fiction Novel of 1975.

The book deals with the adventures of a reluctant soldier of the future, who — through the effects of the time distortion — finds that Earth is becoming increasingly alien each visit home. While he spends two or three months battling on strange planets, he returns to Earth to discover that hundreds of years have passed.

Haldeman, when writing The Forever War, drew on his Vietnam fighting experiences. The results are starkly realistic, despite the futuristic, alien setting.

His other works include Infinite Dreams, Mid-bridge, All My Sins Remembered and Worlds Apart, as well as Star Trek novels, Planet of Judgement and World Without End.

Concert shows orchestra's versatility

By Therese Teasdale
Staff Writer

THE UI SYMPHONY Orchestra demonstrated its versatility in a concert Wednesday night at Hancher Auditorium. The group performed Mozart's Concerto for Clarinet and Orchestra in A Major and Anton Bruckner's Symphony No. 9 in D Minor.

The two pieces require very different stylistic treatments, and the orchestra succeeded in providing them. The concerto's light, delicate sound contrasted with the greater emotional intensity of the symphony.

MAURITA MURPHY MEAD, an assistant professor in the UI School of Music, performed the clarinet solo with controlled excellence. She seemed to play this difficult piece without effort. Her clear, mellow tone and the evenness with which she attacked the runs were especially good.

The orchestra, conducted by professor James Dixon of the UI School of Music, provided accompaniment which matched Mead's controlled playing style. It also did an effective job of creating a wide range of volume without overpowering the soloist.

The Bruckner symphony exploited the variety of sounds an orchestra can produce. Dixon alternated passages featuring strings alone or the brass section alone with passages played by the entire ensemble.

MAJESTIC BRASS playing and heavy orchestration contributed to the intense, powerful mood of the piece. The orchestra played with more dynamic freedom than they had in the concerto. Their sound often swelled to fill the entire auditorium.

The first movement demonstrated a fullness of sound not heard from the group before this point. The second movement gave the brass and string sections more opportunities for individual playing. This added a dimension of contrast within the movement. Although the third movement's tempo slowed, the intensity continued through the rich texture of the orchestra's sound.

Had Bruckner lived to complete the symphony with a fourth movement, he would have had a difficult time matching the intensity of his first three movements. It is difficult to imagine a final movement with the same quality as the rest of the work. Perhaps this symphony was best left unfinished.

Wildcats catch Iowa at bad time

By Steve Williams
Staff Writer

Last week's game against the Wolverines is now history but don't think the Iowa Hawkeyes have completely put it out of their minds.

Simply put, Northwestern is in for a long day at Kinnick Stadium.

Hayden Fry is still smarting from one very tough loss at the hands of a team rapidly becoming the Hawkeyes' most hated rival. Losing games in the waning moments is something every team has a tough time swallowing, and the Wildcats should feel Iowa's wrath before a capacity crowd this weekend.

As usual, the Wildcats maintain their doormat status in the Big Ten, holding a 0-3 record in the conference's early going, and while they might be a little better than last year's squad, they still have a long way to go.

FRANCIS PEAY IS the new leader of the Wildcats following the departure of Dennis Green, but the interim coach has had little luck generating much more excitement than his predecessor did a year ago.

As a result, Peay will step down as head coach of the Wildcats at the end of the season, much to the chagrine of the Northwestern administrators.

FINAL SCORE
IOWA	56
VISITORS	9
Quarters

Big deal. Whether Wildcats have a coach or not will make little difference. Iowa will simply crush the hapless Wildcats — no matter who Hayden says will start at quarterback.

Rick Bayless. And you thought the preconference games were wipe-outs.

WHILE IOWA'S RUNNING game moves to full gear, quarterback Mark Vlasic will get a good chance to readjust to the scheme of things and prepare the Hawkeyes to get back in the race for the Big Ten — as if they ever fell out of it.

But, while Vlasic carves up the Wildcat defense, his counterpart Mike Greenfield will not be so lucky. Last year the senior passer had a better-than-average day against the Hawkeyes as he completed 21 of 40 for 242 yards and one touchdown.

Last year the Hawkeyes beat the Wolverines and were a little more passive in Evanston (if you call a 49-10 beating passive).

Iowa defenders will be in Greenfield's face the entire afternoon. And while the defensive front hands out its share of punishment, Iowa's secondary should reap the benefits as a hurried Greenfield throws the ball up for grabs time after time.

And if the Wildcats think running the ball is going to solve their problems, they had better think again. Last year Greenfield was Northwestern's leading ground gainer with 18 yards — most likely coming in panic situations — while his teammates combined for an additional 26.

In short, the Wildcats are in a no-win situation this Saturday, but should they pull off what I would consider just short of a miracle, I will be the first one on the field to shake Coach Peay's hand.

Final Score: Iowa 56, Northwestern 9

GLORY DAYS

By Robert Mann
Staff Writer

The Northwestern Wildcats enter the game against Iowa this weekend with a 2-4 overall record and have yet to win a conference game. But there was a time when the Wildcats were good enough for the Rose Bowl.

Shortly after World War II, the Wildcats rose toward the top of the Big Ten. In 1948 they finished league play with a 5-1 record and were 7-2 overall before they defeated California, 20-14, in the Rose Bowl.

It was the only time Northwestern has played in "The Granddaddy of All Bowl Games," and it was also the first time a team that finished No. 2 in the Big Ten was chosen to represent the conference.

Michigan went undefeated that season and was voted the No. 1 team in the nation. Unfortunately for the Wolverines, Big Ten teams were not allowed to play in the Rose Bowl in consecutive years, which enabled the country's No. 7 team, Northwestern, to make the trip instead.

IT WAS BOB Voigts' second year as head coach, and he guided his squad to wins over UCLA, Purdue, Minnesota, Syracuse, Ohio State, Wisconsin, Illinois and finally California. The team's two losses came at the hands of Michigan and Notre Dame, who defeated the Wildcats 12-7.

Alex Sarkisian, an All-Big Ten performer who played on the offensive and defensive lines as the team captain in 1948, said the Wildcats beat some pretty good teams in those years.

"In those days you played Minnesota, Notre Dame, Michigan and Ohio State," Sarkisian said. "Of course, all those games stand out because we had a tough time beating them."

The team's quarterback during that glory year, Don Burson, who also received all-Big Ten honors, said the 1948 Minnesota game stands out in his mind.

"We're down 16-0 before the fans even get into the stands, and I go in, and we have the ball on our 2-yard line," Burson said. "I tell Voigts, 'Are you sure you want me to go in there?' and he says, 'I don't care what the hell you do, just get the ball out of there.' We eventually won the game, 19-16."

Ed Tunnickliff (No. 15) rushes for one of Northwestern's three touchdowns against California in the 1949 Rose Bowl behind Bill Forman's (No. 71) block. The Wildcats won the game, 20-14.

WHEN THE WILDCATS played in the Rose Bowl on Jan. 1, 1949, the attitude toward the game was different than it is today.

"Back then they didn't have Disneyland and those things. You didn't have all those outside interests," Sarkisian said. "Every other night we were allowed to go out at 8 p.m., and we had to be back by 10:30."

Add to this that it was a 40-minute drive to get to downtown Los Angeles, Sarkisian said, and the players had very little free time.

Burson was able to come away from the trip with a couple of distinct memories, though.

"I got sick on the way back. I think it was some bad water," he said. "But I do have a record at the bowl they can't beat. All they can do is tie it. I had the least number of passes completed — none."

He attempted three passes but came up empty. Burson said, however, each running back — Frank Aschenbrenner, Art Murakowski and Ed Tunnickliff — scored a touchdown and more than made up for the zero completions.

NOBODY IS REALLY sure why the Wildcats, who have had many winning seasons in their long history, have never been able to return to the Rose Bowl, even though people toss around theories concerning the college's tough academic requirements.

Burson said one reason Northwestern was strong in the late 1940s, however, could have been the war.

"It was right after the war," Burson said. "We had a lot of guys who started school before the war, and they went to war and came back and finished up. They were probably a little better in those days."

"Every school had the same thing, but Northwestern was just a little better," he said. "Plus the fact that we had more athletes in those days — not 10 or 15 but about 20 or 25. That makes a difference. If you pull one out you didn't lose that much."

Sarkisian, the center, said Burson would keep his teammates loose during a game in much the same way Chicago Bears' quarterback Jim McMahon does.

"We had a lot of guys that I had to help out along the way, and I couldn't make any mistakes," Burson said. "I gave them the ball, because I was smart enough not to carry it myself. I'd hand them the ball, pat them on the butt and say, 'Good luck.' That's it."

Even though Northwestern has fallen on tough times in recent years, both Sarkisian and Burson said they would like nothing better than to see the Wildcats make another trip to the Rose Bowl.

Musburger expects Fry to stay

By Mike Trilk
Staff Writer

The Northwestern Wildcats may not be noted for their football, but the university does turn out some students that end up doing pretty well for themselves.

Brent Musburger, anchor for the CBS television show NFL Today, is a Northwestern alumnus who is no stranger to Hawkeye football under Coach Hayden Fry. Musburger has been the play-by-play man at four Hawkeye football games spanning the last two seasons. All four games have been decided by a touchdown or less, and Musburger sees that as Iowa's turning point toward greatness.

"One thing about Hayden's teams is that they'll never let you down.

They always play you tough," Musburger said after Michigan's 20-17 win over the Hawkeyes last Saturday. "Iowa has an excellent team. They have a great offensive and defensive line, especially that huge offensive line. That's what is enabling the Hawks to rebuild their quarterbacks and running backs."

AT THE MICHIGAN game, Musburger got a chance to talk to Fry about the possibility of his leaving Iowa at the end of the season for a job in his home state with the University of Texas. On television Fry said he would be here "until they run me out," and apparently that was enough to convince Musburger.

"I don't think he'll leave Iowa,"

Musburger said. "Iowa is one of the top three teams in the Big Ten, and it's because of his program. He has great continuity with the coaching staff, just lots of things going for him."

Musburger's job lets him experience a variety of college football towns — an aspect that keeps him going. According to Musburger, the crowds at Kinnick Stadium are some of the most rockin' crowds in college football.

"I like the different atmosphere in each city — you can't beat a football Saturday," Musburger said. "The crowds in Iowa City are certainly one of the most enthusiastic in college football, but any stadium can rock when the home team starts to win."

Mansion sets mood for play

STEPPING into the Brucemore mansion in Cedar Rapids is like stepping into the late 19th century — the perfect surroundings for the Cedar Rapids Community Theatre's The Belle of Amherst.

The play, based on the life of Emily Dickinson, asks audience members to go back in time and observe the only character in the entire play, Emily Dickinson (Katherine Moyers). She speaks directly and intensely, and here

The Belle of Amherst is the first of three, one-actor shows in the Cedar Rapids Community Theatre's new Showcase Series. The plays will be shown outside of the theater in locations that support the plot, theme and atmosphere of each production.

Having only one actor on stage is also an unusual experience.

"It's terrifying to step onto a stage alone," Moyers said. In a one-actor show, you've only got yourself to rely on, and if the play flops, you can only blame yourself, she said.

"On the other hand, you don't have to worry about others screwing up," she said.

Moyers said the success of a one-actor play is very dependent on the director.

"I have a magnificent director, Candace Pufall," she said. "Without a very strong director it would be impossible to pull it off."

HAWKEYES

NFL profits from ex-Iowa stars

By Marc Bona
Staff Writer

When the Bears and the Patriots faced each other last January in Super Bowl XX, former Hawkeyes found themselves facing each other, too.

When the Bears had the ball, offensive linemen Jay Hilgenberg and Mark Bortz tried to protect Jim McMahon from Patriots' linebacker Andre Tippett. All three former Hawkeyes were named to all-Big Ten first teams: Hilgenberg in 1979, Bortz in 1981 and 1982 and Tippett in 1980 and 1981.

The UI is well-represented in the NFL. Since 1924, 90 Iowa players have pursued football careers in the NFL. Of the 90, 11 were selected in first rounds. Currently, 13 former Hawkeyes play for 10 NFL teams.

MIAMI'S PUNTING GAME has been one of the most consistent in the league with Reggie Roby booting for them. Roby earned four letters at Iowa from 1979-82. Besides being tabbed as a consensus all-American in 1981, Roby was an all-Big Ten first team selection in '81 and '82.

Roby's stats rewrote the Iowa record book. In his four years as a Hawkeye, Roby punted 176 times for over 8,000 yards, leaving him with a 45.4 yard average. In 1981 — his best season — Roby punted 44 times, averaging almost 50 yards an attempt. Against Nebraska that year Roby set the school record for highest punting average in one game. His five kicks against the Cornhuskers averaged almost 56 yards a try.

In addition to Roby, the Dolphins have George Little on defense. Playing at Iowa from 1981-84 meant playing in four different bowl games, tasting victory as well as defeat by winning two and losing two.

Along with Roby and Little, six other players on the 1982 team capped the season with a Peach Bowl win and went on to play in the NFL. Offensive lineman John Alt (1980-83) is currently with the Kansas City Chiefs while running back Owen Gill (1981-84) plays for the Indianapolis Colts. Joel Hilgenberg (1980-83), brother of Jay, is with the New Orleans Saints. After being redshirted in 1980, junior college transfer offensive lineman Brett Miller went on to earn two letters ('81 and '82) and now plays for the Atlanta Falcons. Jonathan Hayes (1981-84) plays for the Kansas City Chiefs.

CHUCK LONG AND Larry Station, who finished their college careers with the Hawkeyes last year, also played on the 1982 team. Long was drafted by the Detroit Lions in the first round while Station, a 12th-round pick of the Pittsburgh Steelers, made the team despite a back injury. Recently he was activated from the physically unable to perform list.

Four other players from the 1982 team had tryouts with NFL teams at the beginning of the 1986 season: Bill Happel (Kansas City), Scott Helverson (Pittsburgh), Jay Norvell (Denver) and Hap Petersen (San Diego).

Last year's team was a blessing to the NFL. In addition to the last six players listed, the Hawkeyes also had running back Ronnie Harmon and offensive tackle Mike Haight, both first-round draft choices with the Buffalo Bills and the New York Jets, respectively. Defensive back Devon Mitchell, a fourth-round Detroit Lions pick, earned the starting spot at free safety in pre-season and has picked up in the professional ranks where he left off at Iowa. Already he has recorded an interception for the Lions.

ACCORDING TO NORVELL, now a graduate assistant with the football team, this season's team has a few players with the ability to make it in the pros. He named Jeff Drost and Dave Croston as shoo-ins. "They'll be good pro players," he said.

Norvell also named a couple prospects that might surprise a few people. "Mark Vlasic hasn't played much, but he's got the talent. Chris Gambol's as big as any guy in the pros. He just hasn't had the experience and hasn't played a lot."

According to Norvell, Iowa has been able to feed the NFL so well because of its personnel. "The big thing is we've been able to bring talented football players here since Coach Fry has been here," Norvell added the "most talented high school players in the nation" are attracted to a "strong program" such as Iowa's.

"GREAT COLLEGE PLAYERS go on to be great professional players," he said.

Norvell said players feel some awe when trying out for a professional team. "You go in a locker room and see guys like John Elway. . . . You're right next to 'em, it's a childhood dream."

Norvell, who plans to give the pros another shot, is not bitter about his tryout with the Broncos. "Denver's a class organization. They don't have a lot of time to give you a look," he said. "It's just the way it is, it's a business."

The former Hawkeye defensive back has one main piece of advice for athletes who have a shot with the pros. "Talk to somebody who's been in pro ball. Experience is so important," he said. "There's thousands of guys trying out for teams. Find out about the organization. Some teams want you to be fast, other teams want you to be strong."

NORVELL CURRENTLY WORKS with linebacker coach Barry Alvarez, going over films and working on skills. "It's a perfect situation, me being here helping coach. I can work on things here to improve. Plus I've always wanted to coach."

"Everything's turned out great. I couldn't have written it any better," he said.

Iowa Coach Hayden Fry doesn't believe there is one reason why Iowa has boosted so many players to the pro ranks but does believe in one main factor: talent. "First of all, it's ability. And they've got to have the type of offensive and defensive (skills) to show ability so pro scouts can evaluate them with other players."

Fry said it takes more than football smarts to make it in the NFL. "We normally get very good students, and pro ball is very complex. And we have good players each year."

Fry declined to name any specific professional prospects on this year's team. He did say "any of our graduating seniors" could be considered, "particularly big linemen, because there's not an abundance" in the NFL.

Injuries give Keppy his chance

By Brad Zimaneck
Sports Editor

Iowa defensive lineman Myron Keppy couldn't possibly have expected to see much action this season. It's not that he wasn't talented, but he had to take a look at who was in front of him.

That list includes pre-season all-American candidate Jeff Drost, Jon Vrieze, Bruce Gear, Joe Schuster, Richard Pryor, Dave Haight, Steve Thomas, Joe Mott, Mike Burke and Tim Anderson. It's a long list.

But because of a rash of injuries on the Iowa defensive line, Keppy found himself right in the thick of the action in the Hawkeye's biggest game of the season — the Iowa-Michigan clash played on national television Oct. 19.

Keppy in his first assignment didn't fare too well. With Iowa on top 10-3, the Wolverine offense was faced with a third and one situation from its own 38-yard line.

Michigan fullback Bob Perryman took the handoff from quarterback

Jim Harbaugh and ran past Keppy for 6 yards and a first down.

ON THE NEXT play Keppy got even. The Michigan offense ran to his side again, and this time Keppy wrapped up Wolverine halfback Jamie Morris for a 1-yard loss.

"I knew Drost was down for this game," said Keppy, a 6-foot-3, 255-pound senior. "I knew I would get my chance. I had to be the one who would carry the stick. I was ready, but I didn't think I would play that much. That play helped put me into the action. It gave me a lot of confidence and motivation for the rest of the game."

Keppy totaled five tackles against the Wolverines — an impressive total considering in Iowa's first five games he had only totaled four tackles in limited action.

Keppy was a first-team all-conference and all-region at Ellsworth Junior College in Ellsworth, Iowa, before he transferred to Iowa two years ago.

In the Michigan game, a 20-17 last-second loss for Iowa, Keppy also suffered assorted injuries just as Pryor, Mott, Vrieze and Schuster had before him.

"I tackled a guy head on and hurt my neck. I blacked out for a second," said Keppy, a Durant, Iowa, native.

EVEN WITH THE injuries to which the defensive line has been subjected, Keppy doesn't see any problem with the Hawkeye "men in the trenches" coming back strong and leading Iowa the rest of the way.

"I think there's just a lot of little" injuries, said Keppy, who will start against Northwestern on Saturday after being a fourth-string player earlier in the year. "I don't think anything is going to hold us back. If we are down three or four guys, the three or four guys who take their places will be willing to play their butts off. I'm pretty sure everybody will be back this week."

Keppy added, "We have five more games left, and we are not going to quit."

Greenfield keys Wildcats

By Laura Palmer
Staff Writer

As a freshman two years ago, Mike Greenfield was given the opportunity to prove himself on field. He has been Northwestern's starting quarterback ever since.

Greenfield replaced senior starter Sandy Schwab, who was injured during the Iowa game that year. Greenfield finished the rest of that game and was then designated starter for the remainder of the year. During the last game of the season Schwab came back, but as back-up to Greenfield.

Greenfield said the experience he gained that year was pivotal to his career.

"The best thing for anybody is experience in playing," Greenfield said. "The best thing is to actually experience what is going on."

GREENFIELD BEGAN playing football as a seventh grader with the church league. He had played baseball but because so many of his friends played football, he decided to give it a try. Advice from a friend's father convinced Greenfield to try the quarterback position.

"I had no idea what position to play," Greenfield said. "One of my friend's father had seen me pitch, so he thought I could play quarterback."

The more time he spent at that position, the more Greenfield enjoyed being a quarterback. It wasn't until his high school career that Greenfield knew he wanted to play Big Ten football.

"I just went out there and played and realized that I could play college football," Greenfield said. "Turned out I was good enough to play in the Big Ten. I'm glad it worked out this way."

AS A PREP at Elmwood Park High School, Greenfield was recruited by Michigan, Illinois, Stanford, Vanderbilt and "a lot of Ivy League schools," Greenfield said.

"I went through the process and decided to go here," Greenfield said. "You can't beat Big Ten football. I liked what the coaches had to say. It was a nice campus and close to home."

As a junior, Greenfield holds 14 school records, stands second in the school's history in total offense and sixth in passing yards. He's second in total yardage, with 4,040 yards to Schwab's 5,401 yards.

Greenfield hopes to be given the opportunity to play professional football.

"That's why I want to get better and better," Greenfield said. "I'm a student of the game. I watch it differently than how other people watch football on a Sunday or Monday."

En route to reach his goal of a professional football career, Greenfield hopes his team will begin to win more games.

"During the Indiana game everyone played terrible," Greenfield said. "It was so frustrating. It kind of hurt, because I knew we were a better team."

Being bad is a way of life at Northwestern

By Dan Millea
Assistant Sports Editor

As anyone familiar with the Big Ten knows, the Northwestern Wildcats are bad. They've been bad for a long time and for two key reasons — it's a good bet that they'll continue to be bad far into the future.

According to Wildcat Athletic Director Doug Single, the current problems at Northwestern stem from the school's academic requirements and its dedication to academics over athletics.

"It's pretty obvious that the commitment to athletics made at Northwestern during the mid '70s wasn't what it was at other Big Ten universities," Single said. "And also, our admission standards are higher than the rest of the Big Ten."

The Wildcats last turned in a winning season in 1971, under Coach Alex Agase. Since that time Northwestern's best overall mark has been 4-7 (in 1973), and during a six-season stretch from 1976-1981, the Wildcats won just three times in 66 games.

"SINCE 1980 AND '81, we've come a long way," Single said of the football program. But despite recent gains, the Wildcats are still miles from Big Ten competitiveness, as last season indicates.

Northwestern was 2-1 in non-conference play in 1985 but was customarily battered in the Big Ten: The team lost seven games and beat only Wisconsin.

This season has been much the same under interim Coach Francis Peay, who took over for Dennis Green, now with the San Francisco 49ers. After the Wildcats opened the year with a loss to Duke, they beat Princeton and Army back-to-back, but they have since lost three straight league games.

"We can do well early in the year," Single said, "but by about the middle of the Big Ten season, we just don't have the depth to be successful in the conference."

Single said at least in basketball —

although the Wildcats are having the same problems winning in that sport — the coaches have a good chance to recruit enough quality athletes to put a good team on the floor.

BUT THE HIGH entrance requirements make it very difficult to find and attract enough scholarship athletes to field a Big Ten-caliber football team.

"It's pretty well known that most of our student-athlete (academic) profiles are very high," Single said. "The mean (grade-point-average) is around 3.4 or 3.5, and that's for the major sports like football and basketball. For our other, non-revenue sports, the (GPAs) are more reflective of the average for the whole student body."

Single said the requirements for athletes entering Northwestern are not released publicly, but he admitted they are very high — much higher than at any other Big Ten school and far above the new freshmen eligibility standards established by the NCAA.

Single said the new NCAA rule "won't hurt us. Our standards far exceed those requirements, and obviously we didn't lose anyone this year. Indirectly it will quite possibly help us."

THE NEW RULE may take players away from other teams, but it isn't going to add to the number available to Wildcat recruiters. That lack of a wide range from which to recruit is the heart of the problem, according to Single. But he also pointed out that the athletes who are within that limited range are very responsive to Northwestern's recruiting efforts.

The Northwestern entrance requirements "don't intimidate the recruits we go after," Single said, "because they meet those standards. We don't recruit people who can't do the work here. That limits our pool, but those people we go after we have good success bringing in."
