Iowa City Press-Citizen

Several Iowa City video and book stores said they received letters from the effects attorney General Edwin Meese III's recent announcement of a stronger federal anti-pornography policy.

"I was really startled," said Suzanne Mikkelsen, manager of Iowa Video Land, 527 Riverside Drive, who has a store that carries about 140 adult titles.

"It's an important need for some people," said Mikkelsen.

"I wonder if they'll stay," said Schmidt, a sales associate at Video Exchange, 201 Clinton Street, who works with about 20 adult videos. "I think a lot of money is invested in these movies; maybe they won't be concerned.

But she agrees with Meese's efforts.

"I was really startled," said Schmidt. "I think maybe there's a need for it, but it's hard to say if it will last."

"I'm not surprised by it," said John Lajeunesse, the manager at Waldenbooks in the University Plaza. "I've had problems with pornography on my shelves, but we haven't had too many problems."

"We've had problems with customers asking to watch them," said Lajeunesse. "We have a letter explaining why we don't rent R-rated videos, but I don't think it will do a lot of good."

"We all have problems," said Schmidt. "We don't have to tell them, they don't have to look at them."
New directions

It has been pointed out that college campuses in the 1980s are less politically active than they were in the 1960s, partly because of the decentralized nature of the modern university. There are a number of reasons that this is so, and it is in an extremely valuable and stimulating debate on public policy in general, and public education in particular.

The lack of interest in political debate is quite apparent at IU as well. Historically, the Press-Council has focused more on the student's role in political debate than on the quality of student writing. However, there are a number of reasons why this is so, and how this can be changed.

Various reasons have been given for the lack of student activism, ranging from the popularity of deterministic natural selection in solving complex problems and controlling population, to the lack of interest in politics, the lack of political knowledge, and the lack of political interest. One of the most common explanations is that students are not interested in politics, not because they are not interested in the issues, but because they do not know how to get involved.

But one reason is often overlooked or missed in the discussion. Writing, whether it be in a university newspaper or a book, is a tool for thought and expression. By writing, students can express their ideas and thoughts, and in doing so, they can influence others. This is why it is important for students to participate in political debate. Writing is the way to bring the issues to attention, and to start a dialogue on them.

Negative charges

Whether on a student debate or a congressional, the face-off between incumbent Gov. Terry Branstad and Republican challenger Lowell Johnson has become increasingly trivial. Aside from positioning himself on the key issues, Johnson's candidate files thus far are the most important issue of the two.

Branstad's press conference debate Tuesday was not as much a debate as a press conference. However, Tuesday's press conference debate十一日 not only put on the agenda, but also the voters, what else?

Significant Storyteller ." By the time they were expressing what they wish to address the questions, not re-write the history books. It is unfortunate that their positions on the issues are not clear, and that they do not do so.

Our education system is inappropriate ways.

Guest opinion

Last year, on the cover of a prominent national magazine, the annual "papers of the year" were featured. The issue was dedicated to "the future of the media." The editorial featured an article written by one of the editors, commenting on the "great story to tell ."

The negative charge is a very potent negative political argument. It is an argument that is easy to make, and that is difficult to counter. It is an argument that is attractive to many voters, and that is easy to understand.

Guest opinions are a valuable tool for sharing ideas and perspectives, and for encouraging dialogue on important issues. Opinion

Forrest Tucker, the actor known for his role in the movie "A Space Odyssey," has left open the possibility that experimental American flight test pilots "may have been under the influence of hallucinogenic drugs" when they attempted to fly a supersonic fighter jet in 1960, according to a report in the New York Times.

According to the report, Tucker was asked by a government official to fly the jet, which he later said he had been under the influence of hallucinogenic drugs for the flight.

The pilot, who was later identified as a former Air Force experimental test pilot, described the experience as "a strange and terrifying event." The pilot said he felt "uncontrollable" while flying and that the jet was "out of control." He also claimed to have seen "giant red lights" and "a glowing outline of a woman" in the cockpit.

The report has sparked debate among aviation experts and historians, with some attributing the incident to pilot error and others suggesting it was a result of hallucinogenic drugs. Tucker's claims were later investigated by the Air Force, but no action was taken against him.

In a statement released by the Air Force, a spokesperson said, "We take the allegations seriously and are committed to investigating any claims of illegal drug use in the Air Force. This incident occurred over 50 years ago, and we are not in a position to comment further on the matter."

Art offers insight into native life. Each of the 435 pieces in the Stanley Collection, "African Art in Iowa," are just three of 435 pieces in the collection. The collection is due largely to the generosity of the ROY ROBINSON LEY COLLECTION. Eleanor McClelland, Assistant Director of the Center for African Art and Social Science at the University of Iowa, will be the guest speaker for the exhibition. The program features course work distributed on specific community and social science. An advisor, in cooperation with the student, can be obtained from the student abroad advisor, in the center.

The program prepares students for six weeks to work with African writing and oral traditions. It is designed to encourage students to see some of the ways in which education exchange students work in the community to see that credits are used in building a community center. A change in major program and in Kenya, in addition, the School for International Training can be obtained from the Office of International Programs, which is a special program for foreign study.

Fry says Hawks were drained after loss

Iowa State Coach Fry says during his Sunday telecon­ference that his team is still feeling down after an emotional loss to Michigan, making it difficult to prepare for Northwestern.

"We just didn't have it," Fry said. "We were just out-manned." Although Fry says his team is already looking forward to next week's game.

"Offensively, I thought we did a good job," Fry said. "It's just that they were just better than us." Fry said he thinks his team will be more prepared for Northwestern and will bounce back against them.

Fry says the line was outmatched by the likes of Northwestern.

"We just didn't have it," Fry said. "I thought we were competing, but they were just better than us." Fry said he thinks his team will be more prepared for Northwestern and will bounce back against them.

The Iowa field hockey team suffered its first Big Ten loss when they were defeated by Northwestern 5-0 on Saturday in Evanston, Ill.

"Our defense couldn't contain Northwestern's aggressive play," said one Iowa player. "They were just too much for us." Northwestern had the upper hand throughout the game, scoring three goals in the first half and two in the second.

"We were close to their goals," said another player. "But we just couldn't get the ball past their defense." Northwestern had no trouble scoring, and Iowa State's defense was no match for their aggressive play.

"Our offense just didn't seem to be working," said the letter writer. "We didn't put enough pressure on their goalie, and their defense was too good for us." Northwestern had several chances to score, but Iowa State's defense held them off.

"We need to work on our offense," said the letter writer. "We need to get more shots on goal and find ways to get past Northwestern's defense." Northwestern's goalie was strong, and Iowa State's offense couldn't seem to get anything past her.

"Our defense will have to step up," said the letter writer. "We need to do a better job of blocking shots and keeping the ball away from Northwestern's scorer." Northwestern's goalie was strong, and Iowa State's defense couldn't seem to get anything past her.

because I'm hitting out as everything. My serve alone has been one of my biggest weapons and finished stronger than the remainder ahead of Seko.

Seko's official time of 7 minutes, 7.5 seconds was more than 20 seconds faster than the world record of 9:12.1 set in Berlin, Germany in 1996 by Armin Hildebrandt. Seko was also not challenged.

Seko, who had suffered through 700 miles of lost baggage, lost her last match before losing 5-7, 6-4, 6-7. He lost his first match before losing 5-7, 6-4, 6-7. Her winning time of 2:21.21 is 17.4 minutes faster than the record set by Colombia's 22-year-old Juan Carlos Pinzon in 1995.

Wildcats

Wednesday's powerhouse performance as the Wildcats scored three touchowns and held the other team scoreless, leading to a 27-20 victory in the first half of the FCIAC-Wildcat game Saturday.

"The play we ran was a misdirection play designed to gain about five yards," Iowas's football coach, John Cassavetes, said. "It was really surprising to see that big a hole, but I just hit it and the rest is history."

Northwestern tailback Stanley Davenport ran 89 yards for a touchdown in the first quarter of Iowa's 27-20 win Saturday. "This is probably the most gratifying performance of my career, especially because it came against a team like Iowa."

The play was designed to misdirect the defense and give Iowas quarterback, John Cassavetes, a chance to throw a touchdown pass. Cassavetes faked the handoff to the running back, and Davenport took off down the sideline for a 60-yard gain. The play set up a touchdown pass to Junior Tipton, giving Northwestern a 10-0 lead.

On the next drive, Greenfield's pass to Rich Borresen was incomplete, and Iowa's defense regained control of the game. But moments later, Davenport scored his second touchdown, this time on a 7-yard run.

The Wildcats' defense held Iowa scoreless in the second half, allowing Northwestern to pull away for a 27-20 victory. Northwestern's defense was led by sophomore linebacker, John Cassavetes, who had a game-high nine tackles.

Davenport

During the game, Davenport kept his motor running, putting on a show that was a highlight of the game. His energetic performance was especially notable against a team like Iowa, which is known for its strong defense.

"I think we've become a very different team since that first game," Davenport said. "I just can't imagine walking away from this community and not being able to walk away with three straight wins against this team."

"I'm looking forward to playing against Iowa again," he added. "I think we've got a lot of adversity this season that will be good for us in the future."

Dance theater demonstrates versatility, mastery of craft

By Thomas Teasdale
Staff Writer

LONDON (UPI) - The versatile and innovative dance theater produced by the early professional group of young, untested performers and writers is incredibly casual, much like its setting. The Armory was dark, rainy and very cold. The audience members wore coats, and some were wrapped in blankets to shield themselves from the falling rain. The atmosphere was somber, yet there was a sense of anticipation and excitement.

The dance theater was a showcase for the group's talent and creativity. The performers, dressed in colorful costumes, moved fluidly across the stage, creating a visually stunning performance. The dance combined elements of modern and traditional styles, with movements that were both elegant and athletic.

The performance was divided into multiple scenes, each with its own unique theme. The dancers navigated through a series of set pieces, transformed through layering techniques, and transitioned between movements fluidly. The music, composed by a local composer, added to the overall atmosphere of the performance, with melodies that were both haunting and inspiring.

The dancers were a diverse group, with different backgrounds and experiences. However, they all shared a passion for dance and a commitment to pushing the boundaries of what was possible on stage. The performance was a testament to their hard work and dedication, and a beautiful example of the power of art to bring people together.
