New fellowship attracts topnotch students

By Joe A. McClintock
Staff Writer

A new UI Graduate College Fellowship will attract more topnotch students and strengthen UI Doctoral programs, UI officials said last week.

"We're getting first-rank students who would not have come here otherwise," professor John Raeburn, chairman of the UI English department, said. "It's a fine initiative, it's one of the best things that's happened around here."

The new five-year program, which started this fall, offers the four-year fellow tuition payments and stipends totaling as much as $55,836 per student, UI Dean of Academic Studies Rudolph Schulz said. Raeburn said the new fellow program pulls in highly qualified students and improves the classroom atmosphere.

"THEY WILL GENERATE a class," Raeburn said. "You get a bunch of deadheads in there and they don't talk."

UI professor Donald Marshall of the UI Honors Program said it is important to give the fellowships because it will attract a wide range of outstanding students who want to save money on their education.

"The better they are, the better the classes are," Marshall said. "Some of the best students go somewhere else, they think they're going to have to borrow money."

UI Dean of Academic Studies Rudolph Schulz said the new program is designed to make the UI more competitive with other universities in attracting qualified faculty as well as students.

"The two go hand-in-hand," Schulz said. "With outstanding students you'll have outstanding faculty."

At an Oct. 14 faculty council meeting, UI Vice President for Academic Affairs Richard Remington said the UI program will give 20 doctorate degrees per year.

Schulz said admittance criteria for the program requires at least a 3.5 undergraduate grade point average and a combined verbal and quantitative score of at least 1,400 (out of a possible total of 1,600) on the Graduate Record Examination.

"IT'S BUILT ON a program that has been successful," Schulz said, "Competition for the best people."

Marshall said getting outstanding students to stay at the UI is the biggest problem due to lack of funds. Students qualified for the fellows programs go elsewhere due to lack of support.

Raeburn said the new fellows program will not only build a strong graduate program but said undergraduates will benefit extensively.

"These people will be very good teachers," he said. "Undergraduates will profit from this."

Although the new fellowships will greatly strengthen UI academic programs, Raeburn said the UI will remain behind Ivy League universities in academic standards.

But Raeburn said the UI doesn't strive to have similar academic programs with Ivy League universities.

"It's a state university and it serves a very different purpose," he said.

Firefighters work Friday night to control a blaze that destroyed a barn owned by John Dane, owner of Dane's Drive In Dairy. The barn was owned by John Dane, owner of Dane's Drive In Dairy. Fire guts Dane's dairy barn

By Bruce Japsen
City Editor

Faulty electrical equipment ignited about 3,000 bales of hay, destroying a barn owned by the proprietors of Dane's Drive In Dairy operation, fire officials reported Sunday.

Eight fire engines from several towns were called to the blaze that began shortly before 9:30 p.m. Friday just south of the Iowa City airport on U.S. Highway 1 West, according to reports.

"I'd be afraid to estimate the total loss, but we were more worried with it spreading to other buildings," Coralville Fire Chief Gary Kinsinger said. "It's still under investigation, but we think it started in the vicinity where the power comes into the building."

Officials with the Johnson County Sheriff's Office said firefighters were still battling the blaze Sunday afternoon as hay and other debris surrounding the building owned by John Dane continued to burn.

THE BARN was owned by Dane and his wife, Allie. The couple's ice cream parlor, Dane's Drive In Dairy, sits across Highway 1 at 1360 Willow Creek Drive and was not involved in the fire.

"There was no damage to the dairy parlor or any other buildings," Kinsinger said, adding, "There were no animals lost."

Officials said bulldozers were used Saturday and Sunday to spread some of the charred debris around the area in an effort to prevent further flare ups.

"It's considered to be one of the larger fires we've had around," Kinsinger said.

"The big thing is, is that it's out there where you don't have any water," Kinsinger said.

FIREFIGHTERS FROM Iowa City, Hills, Tiffin, North Liberty and Coralville were called to the blaze.

Kinsinger said calling in other fire departments was necessary because there are no fire hydrants near the barn.

"All the water had to be hauled in," Kinsinger said. "That's why we set up this mutual aid system. It's pretty convenient for all of us."

The Danes could not be reached for comment Sunday night about the fire, which was reported by a man driving on U.S. Highway 1.

Kinsinger said the glow from the fire could be seen while driving along Mormon Trek near Hawkeye Apartments.

FBI inquiry cites illegal Contra aid

WASHINGTON (UPI)—American mercenaries say they have told the FBI they led raids into Nicaragua that were planned and organized by a conservative Alabama activist and two other Americans described as liaisons to the U.S. government.

An FBI investigation of the operations organized by Thomas Posey of Decatur, Ala., could lead to indictments by early next year for violations of the Neutrality Act, a spokeswoman for the U.S. attorney's office in Miami has disclosed.

The Neutrality Act bars private citizens from launching combat operations against governments with which the United States is not officially at war.

Ana Barnett, an official with the U.S. attorney's office, said the inquiry has focused on Posey, founder of Civilian Material Assistance.

She would not confirm whether Robert Owen and John Hull, two other Americans, are also under investigation.

OWEN, A FORMER Republican congressional aide, was described as the White House liaison to Nicaragua's Contra rebels in a recent report by Sen. John Kerry, D-Mass. Hull, an American rancher in Costa Rica, was characterized as the CIA's liaison to the rebels by five witnesses in Costa Rican court testimony.

The FBI inquiry, initiated early this year, marks the first by the Justice Department into possible criminal violations stemming from the privately-funded military campaign against Nicaragua by Contra rebels the past two years.

Jack Terrell, former commander of 15 American mercenaries in Honduras and Costa Rica, and Joe Adams, who commanded one raid that included eight Americans, said in telephone interviews they told the FBI Posey recruited their men.

Posey denied all allegations of illegal activity in interviews with the FBI.

Posey said he recruited Americans for service in Central America but said most of them served as trainers of Contra fighters.

Hull has denied any involvement in combat operations. Owen, staff director of the Institute on Terrorism and Sub-National Conflicts in Washington, did not respond to a request for comment.

Grassley outpaces Roehrick in lopsided Senate contest

Johnson County voters may help propel Republican Sen. Chuck Grassley to his largest margin of victory ever, according to a Daily Iowan poll.

Grassley, a first-term senator and former U.S. representative, holds a 20 percentage point lead over Democratic challenger John Roehrick in Johnson County.

If the election were held today, 50 percent of those polled would support Grassley, 30 percent would support Roehrick and 16 percent are undecided. Independent candidate John Masters earned the support of 4 percent of those surveyed.

The Oct. 12-16 poll interviewed 1,564 registered voters in Iowa City, Coralville and North Liberty, Iowa. The poll has a maximum possible sampling error of 4 percentage points.

Election '86

Gubernatorial and lieutenant governor winners of The Daily Iowan political poll will be unveiled Tuesday.

PARTY CROSS-OVER is rampant in this Senate race. Grassley — a party-line Republican — garnered the support of 25 percent of the Democrats polled. Roehrick, a Des Moines attorney, was supported by only 3 percent of the Republicans responding.

Grassley also earned votes from 90 percent of the Republicans polled. Roehrick was supported by 60 percent of the Democrats questioned.

Among the all-important independent voters, Grassley earned a 37 percentage point lead. The New Hartford, Iowa, Republican received 51 percent of the independent votes; Roehrick was supported by 14 percent of these voters. Twenty-seven percent of those with no party affiliation are undecided and 8 percent support Masters.

Roehrick's campaign got a slap in the face last spring when Iowa Democratic Sen. Tom Harkin tried to recruit a woman to run for the Senate. His campaign finance chest is reportedly one-tenth that of the incumbent senator.

Those surveyed were asked the following question: "If the Nov. 4 election were held today, for whom would you vote — Democrat John Roehrick, Republican Charles Grassley, independent John Masters or Undecided?"

The Daily Iowan poll is based on interviews with 1,564 registered voters in Iowa City, Coralville and North Liberty, Iowa. Households contacted through the survey were randomly selected by a computer to eliminate interviewers' biases.

Percentages based upon the poll sample are subject to a maximum margin of error of 4 percentage points. Reproduction of this poll without credit to The Daily Iowan is prohibited.

Poll: Nagle's lead may end GOP reign

By Mary Boone

Third District Congressional candidate Dave Nagle has a 21 percentage point lead over Republican John McIntee in a Johnson County poll conducted by The Daily Iowan.

If Nagle is able to maintain his lead, he will be the first Democrat to serve the 3rd District since 1934.

Despite the presence of two state universities, the 16-county 3rd District is dominated by rural areas and devotion to the Republican party. Republican Rep. Cooper Evans has held the seat since 1980 and Sen. Chuck Grassley, R-Iowa, held the position before him.

The DI survey, conducted Oct. 12-16, polled 1,564 registered voters in Iowa City, Coralville and North Liberty, Iowa. The poll has a maximum sampling error of 4.5 percentage points.

THE POLL SHOWS if the

Election '86

election were held today, 48 percent of those questioned would vote for Nagle and 27 percent for McIntee. One-quarter of the voters polled said they were undecided in the congressional race.

Both Nagle and McIntee are Waterloo attorneys. But Nagle's prominence in the Democratic party and his fight to maintain Iowa's "first in the nation" caucus status have bolstered his name recognition. Nagle served as chairman of the Iowa Democratic party from 1982-85.

Democrats polled overwhelmingly supported Nagle by a margin of 78 percent to 5 percent over McIntee. Seventeen percent of the Democrats

Kennedy skips Iowa City appearance

U.S. Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., will not stop in Iowa City while campaigning in Iowa for Democratic gubernatorial candidate Lowell Junkins, officials with the Junkins campaign said Sunday.

However, Kennedy will make two other appearances Wednesday in the state.

"Unfortunately, due to prior commitments, his visit to Iowa has been shortened and he will not be making an appearance in Iowa City," officials said. "Sen. Kennedy hopes that while he is campaigning for Lowell Junkins he will be able to rally all of the Democrats in the state to send a message to Washington on Nov. 4."

Kennedy will appear at 10:30 a.m. Wednesday in Bettendorf at the home of Louie and Sharon DeFrieze.

Later in the day, he will visit elderly patients and hold a news conference at Mercy Hospital in Des Moines. A 12:30 p.m. luncheon at the Hotel Savory in Des Moines will follow.

For further information call 351-2621.

Corps of Engineers warns area hunters

Officials with the Army Corps of Engineers at Coralville Lake say area sportsmen need to be conscious of regulations that may affect their use of government lands and water during the hunting and trapping season.

Federal regulations prohibit the construction or permanent placement of any structure on project lands. All permanent blinds are unlawful and will be disassembled upon discovery, officials said.

The operation of any motor vehicle off maintained roads, around barricades or beyond restrictive signs is prohibited. In addition to authorized parking areas, parking for hunters will be permitted on road shoulders, unless signed otherwise, officials said.

Vehicles should be parked to allow access to fields by farm machinery. During this temporary period of high water, the Corps urges boaters to exercise caution because of submerged hazards and floating debris.

Recreational parade set for Thursday

The annual Iowa City Recreation Division Halloween parade will start at 6 p.m. Thursday.

The parade is scheduled to begin on College Street, and will proceed east to the Robert A. Lee Community Recreation Center, where activities will include films, fun booths, apple-bobbing, and a haunted house.

Events at the center will continue until 7:30 p.m. As children leave the center they will be presented with a free candy-and-gift bag provided by Iowa City retailers and service clubs.

In addition, the UI Scottish Highlanders will give a brief performance before the beginning of the parade.

Tax group endorses Ketchmark

Mike Ketchmark, Republican candidate for the Iowa's 46th District State representative seat, was endorsed this week by Taxpayers United.

The endorsement was announced Tuesday by Democrat Cloyd Robinson of Cedar Rapids and Republican Keith Vetter of Washington, Iowa. Both are former Iowa state legislators and are co-chairmen of Taxpayers United.

The two men think "Mike Ketchmark is the taxpayer's candidate, working hard to control government spending and stop raising your taxes."

Robinson and Vetter said Ketchmark has strongly supported the Taxpayers' Rights Amendment to the Iowa Constitution, an effort to limit the growth of state and local taxes and spending.

"Ketchmark is actively working for the Balanced Budget Amendment to the U.S. Constitution," they said. "It is urgently needed to stop deficit spending, revive Iowa's economy, and create jobs for Iowans."

Cutback possibilities to be discussed

Several Iowa City community leaders will discuss public service cutbacks at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday in Meeting Room A of the Iowa City Public Library.

Panel members for the program titled "Alternatives to Cutbacks: Preserving Public Services in the '80s" include Laurie Clemens of the UI Labor Center; Lois Cox, Iowa City Library Board of Trustees; Iowa 45th District State Rep. Minnette Doderer, D-Iowa City; Peter Fisher, UI Department of Urban and Regional Planning; and John Watson, Goodwill Industries of Southeast Iowa.

Correction

The Daily Iowan will correct unfair or inaccurate stories or headlines. If a report is wrong or misleading, call the DI at 353-6210. A correction or clarification will be published in this column.

In a story called "Women raise funds to make abortions safe in Nicaragua" (DI, Oct. 24), the address of the Emma Goldman Clinic for Women was incorrectly reported. The clinic is located at 227 N. Dubuque St.

Also, the headline "Inmate hits UI facility with $10.5 million suit," (DI, Oct. 24) was incorrect. The suit filed names the Iowa Medical Classifications Center at Oakdale, Iowa, which is not a UI facility.

The DI regrets the errors.

OWI arrests rise in spite of stiffer drunken driving fines

By Patrick Lammer
Staff Writer

Although penalties for drunken driving are becoming stiffer, local law enforcement officials say people continue to break the law.

In July, the Iowa Legislature made 30 major revisions in state drunken driving laws, but officials say the crack-down hasn't curtailed those who take the risk of being arrested.

"I've seen the number of arrests go up significantly," said Assistant Johnson County District Attorney David Tiffany.

Tiffany said 450 people in Johnson County alone were arrested for operating a motor vehicle while intoxicated from June 1985 through May 1986. He said that number represents a 100-arrest increase from the previous year.

The rise in OWI arrests appears to have come about because the standard of legal blood alcohol content was lowered from .13 to 0.1. Tiffany said, making it easier to prove guilt in an OWI charge.

THOSE CHARGED WITH OWI may face a minimum penalty of two days in jail and a $500 fine for a first offense, if convicted.

Second offenders face a minimum charge of seven days in jail and a $750 fine, while third offenders could face at least 30 days in jail or 30 days in an alcohol treatment facility and a $750 fine.

Iowa has some of the toughest drunken driving laws in the nation, according to Sharon Robinson, director of the Iowa House of Representatives Democratic Caucus staff in Des Moines.

The Iowa Legislature adopted 15 of 19 measures developed by the National Commission Against Drunk Driving, Robinson said. Maine was the only other state to adopt as many of the commission's standards designed to stop those who drink and drive.

BUT LOCAL OFFICIALS say people are still drinking and driving in alarming numbers.

Through September of this year, 48 percent of all traffic fatalities on Iowa roads have been alcohol-related, resulting in 159 deaths, according to the Office of Driver Services in Des Moines.

"There is a societal attitude that drinking is OK," Tiffany said. "We all do it."

Iowa City Police Chief Harvey Miller agreed with Tiffany.

"I have no idea why people do it," Miller said, "but I don't think penalties make a difference."

Iowa City police officers arrested 29 people for drunken driving from Oct. 1 through Oct. 20 of this month. Miller said those statistics are not high.

"It's only a fraction of what is going on," Miller said. "Nothing else is causing as much harm in Iowa City right now as alcoholic beverages. We average about 30-35 OWI arrests a month."

An Iowa City man who was found guilty Friday of attempted murder could face up to 25 years in prison.

A Johnson County jury found Richard Blue Krehbiel, 37, of 324 N. Gilbert St., guilty of stabbing William Branch, 36, on July 24.

Krehbiel is scheduled to be sentenced Nov. 25 in Johnson County District Court. He was being held Sunday in the Johnson County Jail without bail.

Court records state that Krehbiel stabbed Branch in the back with a knife outside an apartment at 432 S. Dubuque St. during an argument. Iowa City police officers later found Branch near a street intersection.

Krehbiel was arrested at his residence July 27 after a 6-hour police stakeout, court records state.

A local man arrested for attempting to injure police officers during a high speed chase made his initial appearance on several charges Friday in Johnson County District Court.

Robert Steven Palmer, 23, Coralville, was charged Friday with assault with intent to cause serious injury, second-degree theft, attempting to elude officers and possession of amphetamines.

Palmer was being held Sunday in the Johnson County Jail in lieu of a $5,000 bond.

During the chase, court records state that Palmer swerved at a Coralville police officer's squad car and nearly forced it into a ditch. Palmer was apprehended when his vehicle crashed.

Officers then discovered that the 1979 Dodge pickup truck Palmer was driving had been stolen earlier from a Coralville residence.

Court records state that officers were pursuing Palmer on U.S. Highway 1 about 15 miles south of Iowa City after he allegedly committed several traffic violations. Palmer reportedly drove his truck at speeds in excess of 80 miles per hour.

After being arrested for other charges, officers discovered several small pills in his possession. The pills were later tested positive for amphetamines.

His preliminary hearing is scheduled for Nov. 3.

A proposal to toughen admissions standards for entering freshmen will help so departments focus more on teaching advanced courses rather than on first classes, UI officials Wednesday say.

The proposal, announced last week by UI Vice President Academic Affairs Richard Remington, calls for privileging UI students to take years of foreign language courses in high school after their first year at the UI.

UI French and Italian Department Chair Steven R. and UI German Department Chair Richard M. Runge said the plan will help reduce overcrowding in departments.

Several Iowa City video book dealers say they're worried about the effects Attorney General Edwin Meese's announcement of a struggle against pornography have on their businesses.

"Of course I'm worried," said Tom Mikkelsen, manager and owner of the Exchange, 20 S. Clinton, whose store carries adult videos.

"I've got a lot of money invested in these movies," Mikkelsen said. "They're up about 20 percent of titles we rent. I'd be sorry not to be concerned."

Mikkelsen said he hasn't pulled any titles off shelves so far, but he is concerned he may have to do so in the future.

"What the people who crack down on pornography don't understand is that it's an important need for people," Mikkelsen said. "It's wrong just to arbitrate a ban on it."

"WE CARRY THESE titles for the customers," Mikkelsen said. "For some of the probably makes up half of what they rent. They should have the right to rent what they want."

Frank Schmidt, manager of That's Entertainment, 227 Washington St., also thinks it's wrong to prosecute pornography offenses.

"I think it's all a matter of what people want," Schmidt said. "It violates people's rights to tell them what they can and cannot watch."

Schmidt, whose store has more than 70 adult videos, said he will not pull any titles regardless of the Meese decision.

But not all video store owners appear to think the same. Dinah Hodapp, the manager and owner of Video USA, 527 S. Riverside Dr.

The event was sponsored by the Central America Solidarity Committee, the University Rural Crisis Group, the Liberal Arts Student Association and the UI Network for Progressive Faculty.

LASA member Suzanne Janssen said she was pleased with the response the march received from the crowd and the route.

"It was more of a demonstration than a fund raiser," she said.

UI may toughen admissions

Incoming freshmen could need more high school courses

By Shawn Plank
Staff Writer

A proposal to toughen admissions standards for entering UI freshmen will help some UI departments focus more on teaching advanced courses rather than on first-year classes, UI officials said Wednesday.

The proposal, announced last week by UI Vice President for Academic Affairs Richard Remington, calls for prospective UI students to take two years of foreign language courses in high school and one year at the UI.

UI French and Italian Department Chair Steven R. Ungar and UI German Department Chair Richard M. Runge both said the plan will help eliminate overcrowding in their departments.

"We've had to raise the number of students and have been pressed for T.A.s and faculty members," Ungar said. "If the requirements were implemented we could cut down on our first year program, a very big end of our operation."

RUNGE SAID that if the proposal were in effect, the German Department would be able to stop hiring teaching assistants from outside the department to teach first-year classes.

But Runge wasn't sure if high schools will be effective in preparing students for college-level foreign language courses.

"Ideally, I'd like to see this work, but I'm not convinced," he said. "People with three years of high school foreign language typically wind up in first semester classes. It's a penalty for students."

The quality of high school training needs to be improved before the admissions proposal can work, he added.

High schools, he said, have to make "a lot more serious efforts as far as grammar goes, at the expense of making bulletin boards and cooking bratwurst."

THE PROPOSAL ALSO requires incoming freshmen to take high school courses in basic subjects, including four years of English, three to four years of mathematics, three years of social science or humanities and three years of science, including either chemistry or physics.

Some UI officials said the new standards are necessary because many freshmen are unprepared for the academic challenges that await them at the UI.

"In general, most of the requirements are offered in most high schools. But not all students take them all," UI Associate Vice President for Academic Affairs Kenneth Moll said. "Students have to be advised to take them."

UI Undergraduate Academic Advising Center Director Juliet Kaufmann said students often do poorly at the UI because they haven't received proper training in high school.

"We often find freshmen who have never had to write an essay test or a paper," she said. "You put them in an anthropology course and they don't do well."

The standards, if adopted, would not take effect at least until high school freshmen had a chance to complete the tougher requirements, Kaufmann said.

The proposal would have to be approved by the UI administration and the state Board of Regents before it could go into effect.

Fight against porn worries businesses

Several Iowa City video and book dealers say they're worried about the effects Attorney General Edwin Meese's recent announcement of a stronger fight against pornography will have on their businesses.

"Of course I'm worried about it," said Tom Mikkelsen, manager and owner of the Video Exchange, 20 S. Clinton St., whose store carries about 140 adult videos.

"I've got a lot of money invested in these movies," Mikkelsen said. "They make up about 20 percent of the titles we rent. I'd be stupid not to be concerned."

Mikkelsen said he hasn't had to pull any titles off his shelves so far, but he is concerned he may have to do so in the future.

"What the people who want to crack down on pornography don't understand is that it fills an important need for some people," Mikkelsen said. "It is wrong just to arbitrarily enforce a ban on it."

"WE CARRY THESE titles for the customers," Mikkelsen said. "For some of them it probably makes up half of what they rent. They should have the right to rent what they want."

Frank Schmidt, manager of That's Rentertainment, 218 E. Washington St., also thinks it's wrong to prosecute pornography offenses.

"I think it's all a matter of what people want," Schmidt said. "It violates people's rights to tell them what they can and cannot watch."

Schmidt, whose store stocks more than 70 adult videos, said he will not pull any titles, regardless of the Meese crackdown.

But not all video store owners appear to think the same way. Dinah Hodapp, the manager and owner of Video Land USA, 527 S. Riverside Drive,

"I've got a lot of money invested in these movies," says video rental store owner Tom Mikkelsen. "I'd be stupid not to be concerned."

said she agrees with Meese's efforts.

"I guess I'm family oriented, but yes, I'm happy to see them try to get rid of it," Hodapp said. "I really don't think a lot of the stuff they have out is necessary."

HODAPP SAID her store does not stock adult videos, although it does rent R-rated movies.

"I would never consider renting adult films," she said.

Video stores are not the only ones affected by the recent anti-porn hysteria, according to Rosemary Ostrem, an assistant manager at Waldenbooks in Sycamore Mall.

She said her company has issued a letter explaining why the store carries Playboy, Penthouse and Playgirl magazines.

"We show the letter to anyone inquiring about our selling them," Ostrem said. "The letter basically says the store cannot act as a censor and it would encroach on a person's First Amendment rights if we stopped carrying them."

"We had problems with magazines being ripped up by people and put back on the shelves, but we haven't had too many problems the past couple of months," Ostrem said. "We still sell a lot of copies of those magazines."

"I think that people have the right to buy the magazines," Ostrem said. "If people don't like them they don't have to look at them."

Walk-a-thon aids Iowa, Nicaragua

More than 75 people marched 10 kilometers through Iowa City Sunday to raise money for the "Harvest of Hope" campaign aiding farmers in Iowa and needy people in Nicaragua.

Central America Solidarity Committee member Suzanne Janssen, who helped organize the walk-a-thon, said the marchers raised more than $3,000 through pledges and donations.

The event was sponsored by the Central America Solidarity Committee, the University Rural Crisis Group, the UI Liberal Arts Student Association and the UI Network of Progressive Faculty.

LASA member Suzanne Murray said she was pleased with the response the marchers received from the crowd along the route.

"It was more of a demonstration than a fund raiser," she said.

New directions

It has been pointed out that college campuses in the 1980s are less politically active than they were in the 1960s and early 1970s. Dissent, as it was known in years gone by, is noticeably lacking and stimulating debate on public issues is even rarer.

The lack of interest in political debate is quite apparent at the UI as well. Rallies on the Pentacrest have drawn significantly smaller crowds this year, leaving campus activists to bemoan the apathy among their fellow students.

Various reasons have been given for the lack of student activism, ranging from the popularity of conservative national leaders to relative prosperity and contentment.

But one reason is often overlooked or phrased in inappropriate ways. Perhaps the cause of students' indifference is that they are unimpressed by student leaders. Perhaps students no longer feel they can take the claims of their peers seriously due to the inflammatory language and tactics they often employ.

Certainly, nothing is more damaging to a leader — any leader — than a loss of credibility. If student leaders are not believable, if they destroy the trust of their fellow students by making outrageous statements or suggesting irrational courses of action, then they do not deserve any sort of a following.

Negative charges

Whether on a televised debate or a commercial, the face-off between incumbent Gov. Terry Branstad and Democratic challenger Lowell Junkins has become increasingly trivial. Aside from positioning himself on the key state issues, each candidate tries to claim he is the more issues-oriented of the two.

"I'm an issues person!" shouts Branstad on a televised debate last Sunday. It's not only how you stand on the issues, but standing for the issues per se that counts.

But that's only half of an interesting dialectic that is becoming more and more evident in national politics. As opposed to being issues-oriented, a candidate can be negative. "Sad to see this New York style of campaigning," mumbles Junkins, pointing to a TV airing a Branstad commercial. One can presume here that "New York" means negative.

The negative charge is a very potent negative political weapon, because in American culture — from Norman Vincent Peale to smiley faces to all manner of seminars, forums and workshops — a positive attitude is considered correct. We don't like negative people, even if they have good reasons to be negative — like the loss of the family farm, being laid off from a job or the declining quality of one's university education.

Our politicians, their Big Apple promoters and even the news media have helped to feed this silly debate about issues campaigns versus negative campaigns, thereby distracting voters from — what else? — the issues.

Tall tales

While campaigning for Republican candidates in the Midwest this past week, President Ronald Reagan said Republicans have "a great story to tell."

It was quite a story indeed. Reagan claimed the "liberal Democrats will march us back to the grim days of the '70s" if they gain control of the Senate after the Nov. 4 elections.

Like any loyal political party member, Reagan has a responsibility to his fellow Republicans. But he fails to fulfill his responsibility to his fellow Americans when he attempts to dig up non-existent skeletons.

Granted, the 1970s weren't banner years for Democrats, but let us not overlook who set the tone for the decade. Can we forget the corruption of Nixon's Watergate scandal and the uninspiring Ford administration?

The Democrats and Republicans have both made significant contributions toward the betterment of America in the 1980s, but they can also share the blame for the hardships that now endure.

So when competing for public office, candidates should address the issues, not re-write the history books.

Reagan has made his mark on America as the "Great Communicator," but when he makes unfounded claims about the past he sounds more like the "Great Storyteller."

Grenada proves U.S. has its own way

By Douglas Midgett

LAST YEAR, ON the second anniversary of the U.S. invasion of Grenada, I sat in a guest house in Antigua, one of the collaborating eastern Caribbean states in that invasion, watching an acrimonious debate broadcast by satellite link on Cable News Network's "Crossfire."

The subject was Grenada and "what we have learned" in retrospect. The principals were so ideologically opposed there could be no agreement, even on the terms of the argument. The program was interrupted for Jim Nabors' record specials and appeals to join the National Rifle Association.

While it may not have occurred to the "Crossfire" protagonists, it crossed my mind that along with the military invasion, the penetration of versions of the American way had proceeded in profound and society-shaping fashion.

But how do we address the question, "What has been learned as a result of Grenada?" It is useful first to ask that question of the eastern Caribbean governments. For them, the answers and lessons have been difficult. The prom-

... Grenada has provided the pretext for an acceleration of American hegemonic control in the Caribbean region to intimidate and, if necessary, crush indigenous dissident movements.

The answer, then, for those willing to recognize the situation, is that Grenada has provided the pretext for an acceleration of American hegemonic control in the Caribbean region, a process which has advanced to the point where Cuba is isolated and left-oriented progressive movements are defensive and quiescent.

How do we answer the question from the perspective of the U.S. government? The answer is simple; the lesson of Grenada is that you can get away with it. In violation of numerous international treaties and accords, the United States invaded a small country, misled American people about the reasons for and course of the invasion, ignored overwhelming international disapproval and made a clean getaway.

IN GRENADA TODAY, the murderous cabal that executed Maurice Bishop and his colleagues is on trial, but unemployment has risen to pre-revolutionary proportions and the promised dollars of American investors have failed to materialize. In addition, the U.S. crafted and approved Grenadian government, elected in December, 1984, is creaking from the stresses directly attributable to the invasion and its aftermath. The neocolonialization of Grenada is the price they have paid for their "salvation."

All of the nonsense propounded by the State Department and the White House to justify the invasion is completely beside the point. The salient point is that we did it and our leaders were able to mesmerize us at home and ignore foreign criticism.

These lessons have not been lost on the U.S. administration. The bombing of Libya followed the same script of quick strike and disinformation. In the past three years, the pressure and terror unleashed against Nicaragua has accelerated to where a similar undertaking there should surprise no one.

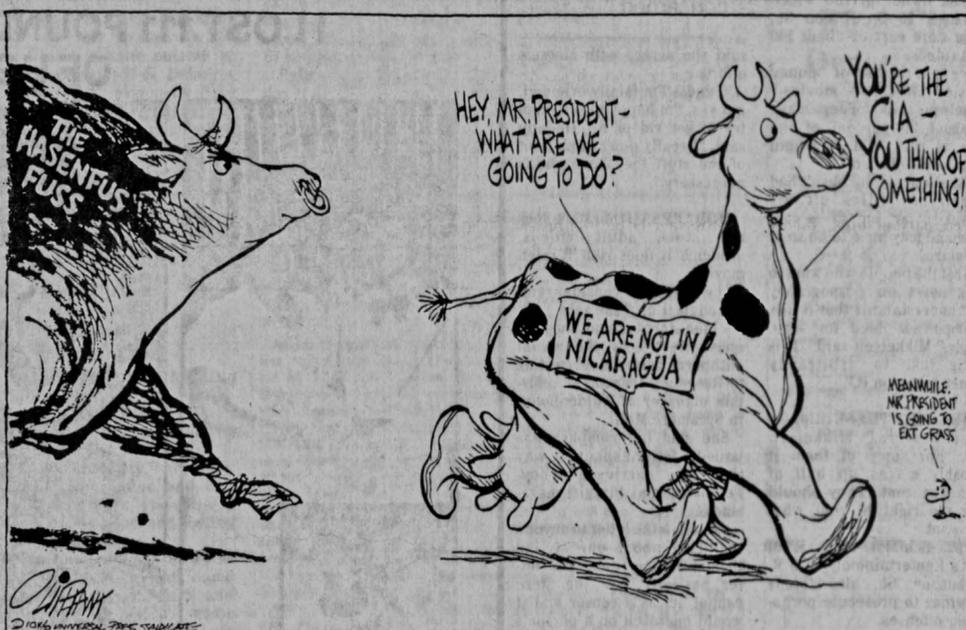

So, what have we learned? By now we should have learned that these events are not aberrations, that this government is willing to go to extraordinary lengths to shape a world in its peculiar image, and that if we continue to permit this by our acquiescence, it will be done in our name.

UI is correct in taping campus protests

By Robert Mann

ON THURSDAY, Oct. 9, the UI's protesters were present once again. This time they were expressing dissatisfaction with the UI for allowing the CIA, a government agency, to recruit on campus.

After the protest, some of the demonstrators complained about the UI video cameras present at the rally. And action by UI Liberal Arts Student Association to condemn the filming was narrowly defeated.

Apparently the CIA Off Campus coalition does not care for the UI's video cameras, although news cameras and newspaper photographers are always welcome. These people need to realize that the UI or any other person or institution has as much right to record the public demonstration as the demonstrators have to be there.

THE ENTIRE RALLY was a media event. Campus activist Bruce Nestor read from a carefully worded script and some of the protesters held a die-in at Jessup Hall. Of the 100 or so people who showed up to protest CIA recruitment, two wore Reagan masks and held plastic rifles. All this for whom? Not for UI President James O. Freedman, but for the press.

Two weeks ago, Nestor was arrested after chaining himself to a chair in Jessup Hall.

Apparently the CIA Off Campus coalition does not care for the UI's video cameras, although news cameras and newspaper photographers are always welcome.

By Robert Mann

Digressions

After being warned to leave, Nestor turned to other protesters and told them to call the TV stations. Again, to the protesters it seems TV film is better than other types of film.

At the anti-CIA rally, Nestor, who is an active member of CIA Off Campus, Central American Solidarity Committee and New Wave, declared future CIA employees would be taking careers in rape, torture and murder. He further compared the UI with German universities during the Nazi era.

DID HE SAY THESE things to raise peoples' consciousness or to be quoted in The Daily Iowan?

Some protesters apparently feel they should have the "right" to choose who can and cannot film their public demonstrations, which is odd because U.S. courts have repeatedly ruled that people who choose to put themselves in the spotlight are open to such coverage.

If the demonstrators have their way, maybe we can eliminate all those other cameras that infringe on people's rights to freedom of expression, like those cameras in banks. In their argument, such cameras would prevent people from expressing their right to free speech. No one would argue with the teller about an overdrawn account. Forget about deterring robberies.

I am certainly not advocating Big Brother cameras and microphones on street corners and in people's homes. But in tense circumstances, where film can accurately record the events that take place, it is in the best interest of everyone involved if the cameras are rolling.

Digressions are comments from Daily Iowan staff members. Robert Mann is a UI staff writer.

3 candidates vie for chance to fill state agriculture post

By Joshua Barkan
Special to The Daily Iowan

In these trying times for Iowa farmers, three candidates are vying to become Secretary of Agriculture in the Nov. 4 election.

Democrat Dale Cochran, Republican Thatcher Johnson and independent candidate Delbert Banowitz are fighting to replace Robert H. Lounsbury, who is leaving the post after 14 years.

The object of the Department of Agriculture, headed by the Secretary of Agriculture, is to encourage, promote and advance the interests of agriculture and related industries in the state.

Cochran, a Vincent, Iowa, farmer for 31 years, is trying to break a 20-year string of Republican agricultural secretaries.

As a District 14 Iowa House representative for 22 years, Cochran has served as Speaker of the House, Minority floor leader, and Chairman of the House Agriculture Committee, as well as Chairman of the National Council of State Legislatures.

COCHRAN SAID HE is running for Secretary of Agriculture because "it is not being used to advocate agricultural improvement," but rather to carry out legislated tasks.

He said the Secretary of Agriculture should lobby for

Election '86

Iowans in Washington, D.C., and instigate plans in the Iowa Legislature to further agricultural development.

Citing overproduction and low crop prices as the most important problems facing Iowa farmers, Cochran said Iowa needs to encourage biotechnology research to change surplus agricultural produce into more sought after commercial goods.

If elected, he plans to expand on current biotechnology research at Iowa State University to create a research quadrangle between the three state universities and Drake University.

Cochran said the research quadrangle would allow more farmers to stay in business and would diversify Iowa's economy away from raw agricultural produce.

COCHRAN WAS BORN and raised in Fort Dodge, Iowa. He graduated in 1950 with a bachelor's degree from Iowa State University. Cochran and wife Jeannene have three daughters.

Johnson, a farmer from Madrid, Iowa, has been the Deputy of Agriculture since 1973. He said as Deputy of Agriculture he "was not given attention," so he would like to be Secretary of Agriculture in order to put his neglected ideas to work.

Johnson said putting soybean and corn production "back into line" and lowering loan interest rates to cattle producers would be his top priorities if elected.

JOHNSON SAID farmers should continue to take cropland out of production voluntarily under the National Conservation Reserve to eliminate surplus produce and to raise crop prices.

However, he said the state should not mandate acreage reductions. Forcing farmers to reduce their cropland would "put agriculture in a strait-jacket," he said.

Comparing himself to Cochran, Johnson said he was "more in tune with the farmer" and his work as Deputy of Agriculture has better prepared him for the duties of Secretary of Agriculture.

Cochran, however, said the problems in Iowa's farm economy reflect poorly on Johnson's work as Deputy of Agriculture and that it is time for new leadership.

Banowitz, a Democrat, is running as an independent because he was late in placing himself on the Democratic primary ballot. He started his campaign six months after his opponents and is not expected to be a major contender.

UI organizations plan new grant for Iowa farm students

Sheryl L. Cohen
Special to The Daily Iowan

In response to ongoing Iowa farm problems, the UI Foundation is organizing a new scholarship fund available next fall for incoming Iowa resident freshmen whose parents own farms.

The Iowa Farm Scholarship, though organized by the Foundation, is actually being funded by several student groups.

According to Rich Wretman, director of special projects at the UI Foundation, the scholarship fund was started by former Hawkeye basketball player Bobby Hansen. Hansen organized and played in a benefit basketball game featuring 26 other former Iowa players.

Proceeds from the game formed the $65,000 base of the scholarship fund, according to Wretman.

Hansen organized the game, which was attended by about 13,000 people, in response to all of the problems he noticed after a cross-state tour earlier in the year, Wretman said.

"BOBBY HANSEN SAW the state economy and decided that he wanted to do something to help. He came up with the idea for the game," Wretman said.

A number of UI student organizations are working together to raise additional funds for the scholarship. Student senate and the Panhellenic and Interfraternity Councils are working to support the fund.

According to student senate Greek Seat Rep. Ruth Gallagher, the decision to take part in the formation of the scholarship stems from the strong effect of the farm crisis on UI students.

"Agriculture is such a big part of the University of Iowa," Gallagher said.

The Panhellenic and Interfraternity Councils are working on a number of ways to raise money for the scholarship fund, according to Mary Aherne, Panhellenic executive board member.

EACH FRATERNITY and sorority has agreed to donate a portion of the proceeds from individual chapter philanthropies to the fund, she said. In addition, all money raised from the all-greek Twister philanthropy, held earlier this year, will be deposited into the Iowa Farm Scholarship account.

The one-year, full tuition scholarship will be offered to as many incoming freshmen as possible, according to Gallagher.

"If 10 or 20 people can stay in school it will be worth it," she said.

ALTHOUGH THE scholarship is only for one year's tuition, all of the groups involved would like to see the fund continue.

"Student senate has set up an ad hoc committee," Gallagher said. "It's hard to say what will happen. It depends on the next student senate administration. Now, in the executive eyes, we would like to see it continue."

Panhellenic and Interfraternity Councils also hope to continue involvement in the program.

"Again, it depends on the next executive boards," Aherne said. "Hopefully, even if the entire greek system (as a whole) is not involved, individual chapters will pick it up as their main philanthropy."

According to Wretman, the future depends entirely on funding.

"THE FIRST ONES (scholarships) will be offered next fall," he said. "The money will be put into an endowment fund."

While student groups are busy raising funds for the scholarship, the UI Foundation has been at work setting criteria for eligibility.

"We have some guidelines, but they are not concrete yet," Wretman said.

Although the money will be channeled through the Foundation, the actual distribution of the scholarships will be done by the Financial Aid Office, he said.

Baxter, Roberts seek election to secretary of state position

By Debbie Gluba
Special to The Daily Iowan

Democrat Elaine Baxter and Republican Dawn Roberts are each seeking to fill the Secretary of State vacancy created by the retirement of Republican Mary Jane O'Dell.

The Secretary of State is in charge of handling voting procedures and is principal filing officer for 65,000 corporations, limited partnerships, family farm corporations and trademarks.

As state election commissioner, the Secretary of State mails ballots and tabulates votes for all Iowa elections.

The Secretary also serves on numerous state commissions and cosigns with the governor on many official documents.

Roberts has held numerous volunteer and governor-appointed positions, including ongoing positions with the Iowa Board of Dental Examiners, the Iowa Foundation for the Arts in Iowa, the Iowa Federation of Republican Women and the Iowa Republican Farm Council.

Roberts also served as chairperson for the Polk County Republican Central Committee in 1985.

"IN POLK COUNTY, Dawn has acquired a grass-roots knowledge of voting and working on a limited budget," said Beth

Election '86

Cross, Roberts' office manager and spokesperson while Roberts is on the campaign trail.

Cross said the position of Secretary of State doesn't involve making policy decisions or dealing with issues.

If elected, Roberts plans to continue running the office like O'Dell. She would also like to start a task force to see why election turnout in Iowa is so low.

Roberts, 45, lives in Des Moines with her lawyer husband, Stephen, and three children. She graduated from the University of Michigan with a bachelor's degree in education and taught in Venezuela for a year.

Democratic candidate Elaine Baxter has served three terms as a representative in the Iowa Legislature. She is a former member of the Burlington City Council and has worked in the Office of Legislative and Congressional Relations at the Department of Housing and Urban Development in Washington, D.C. She has also worked as an Economic Development Consultant.

"I AM THE ONLY candidate with a track record of serving people of Iowa and wise management," Baxter said. "I am the only candidate with an employment record."

As a state representative, Baxter served as chair of the Appropriations Subcommittee, responsible for a $251 million yearly budget.

"Over four years, the Appropriations Committee reduced spending by $11.4 million," Baxter said.

Baxter also said she was a leader in developing Iowa export legislation and received national recognition for her low trade promotion work.

Baxter, 53, is a member of numerous organizations including the Foundation for Iowa Children, the Women's Equity Action League and the Burlington Arts Council.

Baxter and her husband, Harry, live in Burlington and have three children.

Baxter has a master's degree in Urban Planning from the UI, and a bachelor's international degree from the University of Illinois.

Both candidates plan campaign stops in the Iowa City area this week. Roberts will be in Cedar Rapids Tuesday, and Baxter will be on campus Wednesday.

House

polled were undecided. McIntee, who was born and raised in the Waterloo area, has served two terms in the Iowa legislature. He enjoys favor among party loyalists, earning the support of 73 percent of the Republicans polled; Nagle has the support of 9 percent of the Republican voters and 18 percent are undecided.

VOTERS CLAIMING no party affiliation gave Nagle the edge in the county-wide survey. If the election were held today, 37 percent of the independent voters would support Nagle, 22 percent would support McIntee and 41 percent are undecided.

Iowa's senior senator is a farmer from the 3rd Congressional District. He currently serves on the Senate Budget and Finance Committees.

Grassley won his most recent Senate race by defeating Democrat John Culver in 1980 by 7 percent. In that race, Grassley outspent Culver nearly two-to-one.

Although Grassley has yet to sponsor any major legislation, he has gained wide-spread recognition for his efforts to fight exorbitant Pentagon spending. Roehrick counters that Grassley's attempts to cut defense spending have been nullified by his support of the MX missile and StarWars.

Those surveyed were asked the following question: "If the Nov. 4 election were held today, for whom would you vote — Democrat Dave Nagle, Republican John McIntee or Undecided?"

The Daily Iowan poll is based on interviews with 1,564 registered voters in Iowa City, Coralville and North Liberty, Iowa. Households contacted through the survey were randomly selected by a computer to eliminate interviewers' biases.

Percentages based upon the poll sample are subject to a margin of error of 4.5 percentage points.

Republication of this poll without credit to The Daily Iowan is prohibited.

Survey gives Sarney edge in Brazil

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil — Opinion polls showed Sunday the 18-month-old civilian government of President Jose Sarney heading for a massive victory in local elections Nov. 15.

Pro-Sarney candidates were leading governorship races in all 23 states, according to a poll of 30,200 voters conducted by the O Gobo newspaper.

Sarney took office in March 1985 as the first civilian president after 21 years of military rule and the elections are the first test of Sarney's popularity.

Initially observers said Sarney, a former supporter of the military regime, might have little popular support. But the 56-year-old poet and former senator has won considerable public backing with a series of programs favoring the poor.

According to the latest poll, the Democratic Movement party can expect to pick up at least 19 governorships, including the key states of Rio de Janeiro and Sao Paulo.

Contraceptive concept hits Indonesia

JAKARTA, Indonesia — The first condom manufacturing plant in Indonesia started its trial run witnessed by head of the National Family Planning Coordinating Board, said Haryono Suyono of the Indonesia national news agency Antara.

Suyono said Sunday the purpose of the trial run was to test the capability of the $22 million plant and its machinery prior to its inauguration by President Suharto next December.

In addition to domestic consumption, the contraceptive will also be exported to several developing countries, Suyono said.

Meanwhile, a campaign to familiarize the public with the use of condoms was begun Thursday in Jakarta.

Indonesia, the world's fifth most populous country with a population of about 167 million people, reported a 2.2 percent annual birth rate in 1984. The government aims to reduce the rate to 1.9 percent by 1989, the end of the fourth five-year development plan.

F Troop's Tucker dies of natural causes

HOLLYWOOD — Forrest Tucker, the actor known for his portrayal of crusty characters and rugged leading men, died of natural causes, a hospital spokeswoman said Sunday.

Tucker, 67, made his biggest mark as Sgt. Morgan O'Rourke in the 1960s television series "F Troop," a military farce featuring the gallant incompetents at Fort Courage.

Tucker was born in Plainfield, Ind., on Feb. 12, 1919. He performed his screen debut in "The Westerner" with Gary Cooper in 1940.

Tucker acted in more than 100 movies, including "Never Say Goodbye," "The Yearling," "Hellfire" and "Sands of Iwo Jima."

Custer's shirt takes $32,000 last stand

WETHERSFIELD, Conn. — A shirt worn by Gen. George Armstrong Custer sold for $32,000 at an auction along with other Little Bighorn artifacts that included arrows taken from bodies of soldiers at the famous battle, a gallery spokesman said Sunday.

The price paid for a wool shirt found in Custer's supplies after his famous Last Stand on the Little Bighorn River in eastern Montana was considered a bargain, said Alexander Acevedo, owner of Alexander's Gallery in New York City, who purchased the shirt at the auction Saturday.

The shirt, in good condition except for souvenir clippings from the tails, was appraised at $40,000 to $60,000 by the Riba-Mobley Gallery of Glastonbury, sponsors of the auction.

At least 300 people spent more than $100,000 for items from the Battle of the Little Bighorn, the largest Riba-Mobley auction to date, said Noel Tomas, spokesman for the gallery.

Iowa mental patient commits suicide

CHEROKEE, Iowa — An Eldora, Iowa, woman who was being transported to a state mental institution this weekend apparently slashed her throat and was dead by the time her unsuspecting driver arrived at the facility.

Darlene Kruger, 50, was being transported in a Hardin County patrol car to the Cherokee Mental Health Institute Friday night where she was to undergo a psychiatric evaluation. Cherokee police said somewhere along the 100-mile trip Kruger pulled a picture frame from her purse and used a piece of it to slash her throat.

The unidentified driver, a Hardin County deputy, did not realize Kruger was dead until he arrived at the facility and attempted to help her from the car.

"I guess I'm family oriented, but yes, I'm happy to see them try to get rid of it."

Hasenfus may get Nicaraguan pardon

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (UPI) — President Daniel Ortega has left open the possibility that captured American flier Eugene Hasenfus could be pardoned if he is convicted by a People's Tribunal of running guns to U.S.-backed rebels.

Ortega hinted at a pardon while answering reporters' questions Saturday night after a speech to workers at a Coca-Cola plant.

"Justice will be applied by the tribunal," he said. "On the other hand, the Sandinista revolution has characterized itself as generous and flexible. Pardons have been given, even to former members of (deposed dictator Anastasio) Somoza's national guard."

Hasenfus could receive a maximum penalty of 30 years in prison if convicted on charges of terrorism, criminal association and violation of public security laws.

THE PEOPLE'S Tribunal, a special court created to try the rebel Contras and their accused accomplices, has a conviction rate of higher than 90 percent.

After the 1979 victory of the Sandinista-led Nicaraguan revolution, some 2,000 pro-Somoza national guardsmen were imprisoned, but a few hundred were later pardoned and released.

There has been speculation the Nicaraguan government would eventually release Hasenfus as a propaganda measure. But some Sandinista officials say a pardon is unlikely because Hasenfus has come to symbolize what Nicaraguan officials see as U.S. aggression toward its government.

Trial proceedings for Hasenfus, 45, of Marinette, Wis., began Oct. 20 and resume today. Both the prosecution and defense present evidence in written form and the trial is expected to last between eight and 12 days.

HASENFUS WAS captured Oct. 6, a day after he parachuted from a C-123 cargo plane carrying guns to the U.S.-backed Contras and shot down by Sandinista troops.

The flight formed part of a El Salvador-based supply net-

"He knew what he was unloading into Nicaragua was not beans and rice but guns, mines and munitions," says Nicaraguan President Daniel Ortega of American flier Eugene Hasenfus.

Reagan hails GOP on Senate campaign trail

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Ronald Reagan promised to "keep the good times rolling" this weekend and warned voters against a "return . . . to those bad old days" of high inflation and high interest rates.

In his weekly radio address from the Oval Office, Reagan sounded the same chord he has been striking in two-day campaign appearances for Republican Senate candidates.

In Florida, Reagan blasted former President Jimmy Carter's economic policies. In Oklahoma that same day, Reagan said his task upon taking office was "like the job Noah had after the animals left the ark."

While in Oklahoma, Reagan was presented a sweatshirt by Sen. Don Nickles, R-Okla. The sweatshirt, pictured above, was in support of another Reagan administration — this one headed by Nancy Reagan.

Enrile presses campaign in Philippines

MANILA, Philippines (UPI)— Defense Minister Juan Ponce Enrile vowed Sunday to press his anti-communist campaign and said President Corazon Aquino's government must be "beyond suspicion" of corruption to successfully battle communist insurgents.

Before a wild crowd of 20,000 chanting "Enrile, Enrile, Rambo, Rambo," the defense chief warned of communist bombings in the capital. Enrile's campaign has put him at odds with Aquino and drawn criticism from members of her 8-month-old government.

"In the coming days you might be hearing loud explosions in the city of Manila but I want to tell you, if you will join us ... you can rest assured that our Philippines will not become a communist country," Enrile said.

Juan Ponce Enrile

The protest outside the downtown post office was the second anti-communist rally Enrile addressed over the weekend. It was attended mostly by supporters of ousted ruler Ferdinand Marcos who shouted "Marcos-Enrile" and "Down with Cory, Down with Cory."

AQUINO SPOKE BEFORE an architects' convention Sunday and defended her administration. She made no reference to Enrile, but stressed the importance of unity.

"We must pull together ... in unison and in the same direction, each of us giving our share of the strength that is needed to move our country forward," Aquino said.

Enrile outlined eight points he said are necessary to "eradicate communism," including a progressive economic system, a disciplined military, a responsive police force and a "clean, honest and efficient" judiciary.

"First," he told the wildly cheering crowd, "we must have a stable, honest and clean government — a government beyond suspicion, a government that is not affected by corruption."

A senior Enrile aide said the weekend speeches are the beginning of a campaign to expose corruption at the top levels of government.

"They are ambushing our soldiers, killing civilians, extorting from the people, terrorizing the people," he said of the 17,000-member communist New People's Army.

Enrile's persistent warnings about the communist threat and his questioning of the legitimacy of Aquino's government have produced a serious rift within the Cabinet and prompted several Cabinet ministers to suggest the Harvard-trained defense minister resign.

British diplomats ready to leave Syria

DAMASCUS, Syria (UPI) — British diplomats lowered the Union Jack at their closed embassy Sunday and prepared to leave in accordance with the diplomatic break over what Britain called a Syrian-backed terrorist attempt to blow up an Israeli airliner.

The U.S. and Canadian ambassadors left Syria Sunday on orders from their governments as gestures of solidarity with Britain after it severed diplomatic relations with Damascus.

Syria repeated its denials of any connection with Nezar Hindawi, a Jordanian convicted in London of trying to blow up an El Al jumbo jet on a flight from London to Tel Aviv, Israel.

Hindawi, who tried to dupe his pregnant Irish girlfriend into smuggling a bomb aboard the plane, was sentenced to 45 years in jail and, within hours, Britain broke off diplomatic relations with Syria, citing "conclusive evidence of offi-

"We challenge any foreign intelligence to prove that Syria has any link with whatsoever with what happened in London," says Syrian Foreign Minister Farouk al Shara'a.

cial Syrian involvement."

SYRIA RETALIATED by ordering British envoys out, and each country gave the other seven days to withdraw its diplomats.

U.S. Ambassador William Eagleton left for Washington after being withdrawn in a gesture of solidarity with Britain.

Asked at Damascus airport if he would ever return, Eagleton said he was "going to ask the same question to my superiors in Washington." U.S. officials say they want to isolate Syria.

Canadian Ambassador

Jacques Noiseux also left. He was recalled for consultations after severing relations and withdrawing an ambassador.

Syrian Foreign Minister Farouk al Shara'a, interviewed in Damascus by CBS News Sunday, said Syria had nothing to do with what happened at Heathrow. He said Hindawi had "never been linked to any Syrian motives."

SHARA'A INSISTED Britain has no evidence of a Hindawi-Syrian link, saying the British "have taken a dissident for political objectives."

Shara'a also rejected British contentions that Hindawi received assistance from the Syrian Embassy in London after the Heathrow incident. He said Hindawi was "expelled immediately" from the embassy when he arrived there.

"If Syria had any link with what Hindawi did, then they would have offered protection and assistance to him," Shara'a said. "We challenge any foreign intelligence to prove that Syria has any link with whatsoever with what happened in London."

Shara'a downplayed recent Syrian statements that Britain would pay for its diplomatic action.

"We are not threatening," he said. "We are just saying that the British government, by ... linking the name of Syria with terrorism, will pay a political price inside Britain ... when the British people know the facts that Syria had nothing to do with what happened at Heathrow."

Mother tosses kids to safety

MINNEAPOLIS (UPI) — Authorities remained puzzled Sunday about the cause of a fire that raced through a two-story house, killing eight people and injuring seven others, including a woman who tossed her four children out a window.

Abigail Patton, 23, who lived on the second floor, escaped the fire by throwing her children, aged 11 months to 6 years, to LaMont Chatman and another neighbor and leaping 20 feet to safety.

"I just thank God that I woke up in time to save myself and those four kids," she said. "It was almost too late."

"My right wrist is fractured and my hip is dislocated," Patton said. "I'm pretty much OK. I was OK once I knew my babies were safe. They're all safe."

Two of her children suffered wrist fractures. Doctors said the Pattons were expected to be released from the hospital early this week.

CHATMAN CAUGHT three of Patton's children. "I heard screaming. I got dressed. They were hanging out of the window. I told her to drop them. She was dropping them so fast, I just had to catch them as they came," he said.

The eight who died all lived on the first floor. Five of those killed were children.

Authorities identified the victims as Joyce Ruff, 22; her two children, Keven Ruff, 1, and Bryant Ruff, 4; her three nephews, James Ruff, 7, Sean Ruff, 5, Dwane Ruff, 3; her brother, Homer T. Ruff, 26; and Judy Westfall, 23.

The nephews were staying at Joyce Ruff's home while her sister, Cheryl Ruff, visited their grandmother in Illinois. Cheryl Ruff returned to the fire scene late Saturday and had to be hospitalized for shock.

Cheryl and Joyce Ruff both moved to Minneapolis from Illinois in 1979.

AUTHORITIES SAID Joyce Ruff got out of the burning building but was trapped when she went back after her children.

Firefighters were called to the scene at 1:21 a.m. Saturday and put out the blaze in less than an hour. Fire investigator Bob Peterson called the blaze "one of the worst fires in several years."

District Fire Chief Norman D. Hage said the fire started on the first floor, but said investigators could not tell whether it started on the front porch or in the front room.

A determination on what caused the fire will not be available until today when laboratory test results on debris taken from the house become available, Hage said.

Authorities said the fire caused $60,000 damage to the building by burning the front third of the structure, from the porch through the attic roof.

Lamont Chatman stands in front of a Minneapolis home where eight people died in an early morning fire Saturday. Chatman saved three children who were thrown from the second floor by their mother.

Chicago incinerator burns toxic waste

CHICAGO (UPI) — The way may have been paved for shipments of toxic wastes from across the country now that a toxic waste incinerator on Chicago's southeast side is burning Superfund chemical wastes.

The $20 million SCA Chemical Services Inc. incinerator, operated by Waste Management Inc., the nation's largest waste disposal firm, is burning Superfund chemical wastes under an agreement with the federal government, the Chicago Tribune reported Saturday.

The incinerator is in an area where residents have bitterly opposed any expansion of waste-disposal operations. The incinerator has received shipments from two Superfund sites since late September, the last one arriving Friday from Gray, Maine, Waste Management officials said.

SHIPMENT OF Superfund wastes from other states could ignite a long-standing controversy over waste-disposal operations in the Lake Calumet region, which has an estimated 31 waste dumps.

"We've already got enough garbage on the southeast side," said Marianne O'Neill, vice president of the United Neighborhood Organization. "We don't need to be taking in more from other states." The incinerator was authorized by the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency in mid-July to burn Superfund wastes, making it one of a handful authorized to do so.

The Chicago firm became eligible to burn Superfund wastes after tests showed no wastes from the facility's routine operations were leaking from two wastewater holding ponds, said William Muno, an EPA official in Chicago.

UNDER A NEW Superfund program signed into law by President Ronald Reagan Oct. 17, the EPA is mandated to use new technology, including incineration, to destroy toxic wastes when possible instead of burying them.

The incinerator, a high-temperature furnace known as a rotary kiln, destroys up to 99.9999 percent of toxic chemicals fed into it. City and state officials said the incinerator is operating according to rigid specifications and has not been cited for air-pollution violations.

Citizens for a Better Environment, a Chicago ecology group, said it does not oppose Superfund waste incineration. "Incineration is preferred over land burial," said Kevin Greene, a spokesman for the environmental group.

Convicted murderer, rapist escapes guards in Indiana

INDIANAPOLIS (UPI) — Authorities pressed their search Sunday for a convicted murderer and rapist who fled from two guards on his way back to prison from a hospital, but officials said they had no clear idea where he might be.

"We just don't have a good lead right now" on the whereabouts of fugitive David Roberts, who was serving six life sentences for murder, kidnapping and rape, said Clold Shuler, deputy commissioner at the Indiana Department of Correction.

Over the weekend the search focused on Indiana, where Roberts was described in an all-points bulletin as armed and extremely dangerous.

Roberts, 42, of Indianapolis, overpowered his two guards Friday, pulling a hidden two-shot .38-caliber derringer when they loosened restraints to allow him to eat a sandwich near Valparaiso, Ind.

ROBERTS USED THE handcuffs to shackle the guards while he drove from Valparaiso to Hammond, Ind.

Warrants were issued Saturday charging Roberts with escape and confinement.

Shuler said investigators were trying to determine when Roberts obtained the handgun he used to escape.

The guards, Dale Frazier and Mario Rodriguez, have been suspended without pay pending an investigation of the escape.

"We have strong policies and procedures," Shuler said. "If they were properly followed, this would not have happened."

He said the prisoner was strip-searched before he left the prison to go to Indianapolis, where he was examined for a respiratory problem at a hospital. Officials said they believe he obtained the gun while in the hospital.

"We definitely believe that the escape was planned," Shuler said. He said the guards also reported Roberts had a list of names and telephone numbers and stopped several times to make calls while traveling to Hammond.

"At this point, we need to backtrack and see what broke down," he said.

Roberts was convicted in 1975 of arson and murder in a fire that killed three people in New Whiteland, Ind., officials said. He also was convicted in 1975 of murder, rape and two counts of kidnapping in a separate incident in Marion County, in which he raped a woman in a car and left her baby outside during the attack.

Senator saves man's life

CHICAGO (UPI) — Illinois Republican state Sen. Walter W. Dudyecz became a hero over the weekend when he saved the life of a man who suffered a massive heart attack in Chicago.

Dudyecz was campaigning with Gov. James R. Thompson when he stepped into a hotdog stand. There he found Robert Kunel, in his 70s, lying on the floor.

The Chicago politician first extracted a hot dog from Kunel's throat then began giving him mouth-to-mouth resuscitation. Kunel was taken to Northwest Hospital where he was listed in critical condition in the intensive care unit.

Dudyecz is not up for reelection.

UI student art collection offers insight into native

By John Robinson

The UI African Studies program and the Stanley Collection of African art students with opportunities about Africa leaving Iowa.

A bronze statue of a man from Mali; a wood from Burkina Faso; trumpet from Zaire are just three of 435 in the Stanley Collection of African art.

"It's one of the finest collections of African art in the world," said Christopher Roy, UI associate professor of history and curator of the Stanley Collection.

Max and Betty Stanley, UI alumni who began collecting African art in 1958 on a business trip to Africa, loaned the collection to the UI Museum of Art with the intention that it be used for a program in African art studies.

ROY, THE ONLY professional African art historian in Iowa since 1960, arrived in Iowa to organize and catalogue the collection.

Part of the collection exhibited in 1979, the entire Stanley Collection never exhibited all at once.

Max Stanley headed Engineering, a consulting firm, and Hon Industries, America's largest professional office furniture. He also founded the Stanley Foundation, a world peace organization that publishes the World Review. When he died, Stanley left the collection to the UI.

"MAX STANLEY ran Roy Carver as one of his important benefactors at the University," Roy said.

Roy's book, Art and Africa, is available in the museum and contains graphs and descriptions of each of the 120 pieces recently selected for exhibition.

In addition to being the Stanley Collection coordinator, the UI African Studies Program, which complements an undergraduate departmental major, provides students with a disciplinary certificate.

UI students discover Africa

Art collection offers insight into native life

By John Robinson
Freelance Writer

The UI African Studies Program and the Stanley Collection of African art provide students with opportunities to learn about Africa without leaving Iowa.

A bronze statue of a warrior from Mali; a wooden mask from Burkina Faso; an ivory trumpet from Zaire — these are just three of 435 pieces in the Stanley Collection at the UI Museum of Art.

"It's one of the finest collections of African art in the world," said Christopher Roy, UI associate professor of art history and curator of the Stanley Collection.

Max and Betty Stanley, both UI alumni who began collecting African art in 1960 while on a business trip to West Africa, loaned the collection to the UI Museum of Art with the intention that it become a center for a program of African art studies.

ROY, THE ONLY professor of African art history at the UI since 1960, arrived in 1978 to organize and catalog the collection.

Part of the collection was first exhibited in 1979, but the entire Stanley Collection is never exhibited all at once.

Max Stanley headed Stanley Engineering, a consultant firm, and Hon Industries, America's largest producer of office furniture. He also established the Stanley Foundation, a world peace organization that publishes the World Press Review. When he died in 1984, Stanley left the collection to the UI.

"MAX STANLEY ranks with Roy Carver as one of the most important benefactors of this university," Roy said.

Roy's book, Art and Life in Africa, is available at the museum and contains photographs and descriptions of each of the 120 pieces currently selected for exhibition.

In addition to being curator of the Stanley Collection, Roy coordinates the UI African Studies Program, which, as a compliment to an undergraduate departmental major, provides students with an interdisciplinary certificate program. The program features course work distributed between art, literature, history and social science.

THE UI AFRICAN Studies Program is unique, Roy said, because while many programs emphasize social science or history, the UI program includes a study of literature and art as well.

"A greater emphasis on the humanities within the program is due largely to the existence and influence of the Stanley Collection," Roy said.

Roy, who teaches courses on the history of West African art, Central African art and African crafts at the UI, lived in Upper Volta (now known as Burkina Faso) from 1970 to 1972 while in the Peace Corps.

ROY RETURNED to the area again in 1976 and spent a year conducting dissertation research on the art of the Mossi, the country's largest ethnic group, and returned three times, from 1983 to 1985, to conduct additional research while on a UI faculty scholarship.

Additional information on the UI African Studies Program can be obtained from the Center for International and Comparative Studies in the Jefferson Building.

The Stanley Collection can be viewed at the UI Museum of Art during regular hours, 10 a.m. to 5 p.m., Tuesday through Saturday, and noon to 5 p.m. on Sundays.

Study abroad encourages understanding

By John Robinson
Freelance Writer

Studying abroad in Africa may not be for everyone, but UI students with a desire to learn about the Dark Continent through firsthand experience may be surprised at the summer, semester and yearlong opportunities available.

Operation Crossroads Africa, the 25-year-old, non-profit organization that influenced the development of the Peace Corps, provides participants with a brief but intense immersion into African culture. After a week of orientation, a team of Americans joins an equal number of African specialists and African students for six weeks to work on specific community projects, such as the construction of schools or medical clinics.

"CROSSROADS AFRICA is an excellent learning experience," Joel Barkan, chairman of the UI Department of Political Science, said. "And it's the only summer program of its type."

Barkan's first trip to Africa in 1962, as a student on a Crossroads Africa program in Kenya, developed his lifelong interest in Africa. Barkan, an author whose books include An African Dilemma and Politics and Public Policy in Kenya and Tanzania, returned to Kenya last July to conduct additional research.

Judith Westhoff, a UI senior majoring in anthropology, participated in a Crossroads Africa program in Botswana from late June to mid-August. She worked with a group of eight Americans and eight villagers molding cement blocks to be used in building a community center.

"IT WAS AN excellent experience," Westhoff said. "The program gave me an opportunity to see some of the diversity in Africa."

While Crossroads Africa provides summer experiences, Friends World College and the School for International Training offer four-year, undergraduate degree programs with opportunities for students to attend different training centers around the world, including centers in Kenya. In addition, the School for International Training confers master's degrees in international studies, intercultural management and the teaching of language. Both programs offer semester abroad programs to students attending other universities, such as the UI.

MIKE ZMOLEK, a UI junior majoring in linguistics, studied Swahili while enrolled in a semester abroad at the Friends World College center in Nairobi, Kenya from February through May 1986. The program requires the completion of an individual project, which participants may want to plan in advance.

"I recommend the program to students who know exactly what (type of project) they want to do before they go," Zmolek said.

Another possibility for study in Africa is the International Student Exchange Program. Students in the program pay normal tuition and fees at home while spending a year abroad at a participating university. The program requires that universities exchange students on a one-for-one basis.

AT PRESENT, African universities on the Ivory Coast and in Kenya, Tanzania and Togo participate in the program. Fluency in French is a prerequisite for enrollment in the programs on the Ivory Coast and in Togo, but not for Kenya and Tanzania where instruction is in English. The Kenyan program tends to be more popular than the Tanzanian program and consequently more competitive.

Victor Arango, a UI junior majoring in political science and French, someday hopes to work for an international agency such as the United Nations and will spend his junior year abroad at the National University of the Ivory Coast in Abidjan. He will attend regular classes conducted in French rather than a special program for foreigners.

"I will do everything on my own," Arango said. "I pick my own classes and it's up to me to see that credits are transferred back to the University of Iowa."

Detailed information on student abroad programs in Africa or other countries can be obtained from Maria Hope, a student abroad advisor, in the Office of International Education and Services in the Jefferson Building.

Q — Sunday's Game 7 of the 1986 World Series between Boston and New York was rained out. When was the last World Series game before yesterday to be rained out? Find the answer in the bottom of the Scoreboard on page 26.

Iowa slips by startling Northwestern

By Laura Palmer
Staff Writer

A predicted Iowa blowout turned into a close game with missed opportunities, but in one of its toughest games this season, the Hawkeyes pulled off a 27-20 victory over Northwestern Saturday in Kinnick Stadium.

Saturday's battle is the closest scoring game in the series since 1976 when Iowa squeaked by Northwestern 13-10.

"In a way we had an advantage coming into this game," Northwestern Coach Francis Peay said. "Iowa wasn't going to make any major changes for us and we, on the other hand, could change some things to take advantage of what we saw."

Iowa quarterback Mark Vlasic was back in the starting line-up Saturday, and although Coach Hayden Fry said he was disappointed in Vlasic's play, Vlasic hit a 93-yard touchdown pass to Quinn Early, the longest touchdown pass in Iowa history, boosting Iowa's lead in the second quarter 17-0.

"I HAVE TO GIVE that one to Quinn. He did a heck of a job just running by the guy and running with the ball after he got it," Vlasic said. It was Early's first game of the season after he suffered a separated shoulder in the Hawkeyes' last scrimmage before their season opener with Iowa State.

Unlike other years, the Wildcats fought back, and within seven minutes of the third quarter, Northwestern scored on a 34-yard touchdown pass from quarterback Mike Greenfield to Claudell Robertson to tie the score 17-17.

"We knew we were going to get a very inspired football team. That's exactly what we got," Fry said. "I really can't put into words how much I want to compliment Northwestern and their coaches. I just think they did a fantastic job today. And if we hadn't played real fine football 85

THE HAWKEYES, who hadn't scored since early in the second quarter regained momentum, and after the two teams exchanged the ball four times, the turning point of the game occurred.

With the ball on the Northwestern nine-yard line, Greenfield was driven back into the end zone and as his arm went back to pass, Iowa's Myron Kappy deflected the ball enabling teammate Mike Burke to catch it for an Iowa touchdown. Houghtlin's kick moved Iowa ahead, 24-17 with 5:51 remaining.

Northwestern's next attempt to score was again destroyed when Iowa's Kyle Crowe intercepted a pass intended for Curtis Duncan. The Hawkeyes were penalized 15 yards for face mask holding to place the ball on the Iowa 48-yard line.

It took Iowa seven plays to reach the 29-yard line, and after two unsuccessful pass attempts to Robert Smith, Houghtlin kicked a 46-yard field goal to raise the score, 27-17, in the final minute of the third quarter.

Northwestern has been known to give up in the fourth quarter, but Saturday the Wildcats were able to score on a field

Wildcat back has big day despite loss

By Steve Williams
Staff Writer

While losing is never the ambition of any team, the Northwestern Wildcats should be consoled in the fact that they gave the No. 12 Iowa Hawkeyes a real battle before bowing 27-20 at Kinnick Stadium Saturday.

And along the way, they discovered that they have a very fine running back to work with in Stanley Davenport.

Davenport's 155-yard effort represented the first time this season that anyone has rushed for over 100 yards on the stingy Hawkeye defense. And by doing so, Davenport was able to keep the Wildcats in a game that most people, including Northwestern Coach Francis Peay, didn't feel would be a contest at all.

DURING A PRESS conference earlier in the week, Peay begged Coach Hayden Fry for mercy, but thanks to Davenport, Peay was able to maintain a choke hold on the Iowa skipper until the waning moments.

"One thing we've been lacking this year has been the ability to come up with the big play," Peay said, "but Stanley gave us that today. He's a good strong runner. His performance today was exceptional."

"We needed someone to help us in our running game, and Stanley came in and did a good job for us," Northwestern quarterback Mike Greenfield said. "He had a hell of a game for us, and with that kind of performance, we will have a more balanced attack in the future."

Davenport's stellar performance represents only the second contest he has taken part in this season, due to a knee

Hawks riding high after wins

By Marc Bona
Staff Writer

The Iowa volleyball team entered this weekend's matches riding the crest of a 6-1 Big Ten record, and after victories over Indiana and Ohio State, it proved that a march toward an NCAA tournament berth is on.

It was the Ellen Mullarkey show at Carver-Hawkeye Arena Friday against the Hoosiers and Saturday against the Buckeyes, which lifted Iowa's record to 19-3 overall and 8-1 in Big Ten. The junior from Oak Park, Ill., continued playing at the level of excellence which helped her to be named last week's Big Ten Player of the Week.

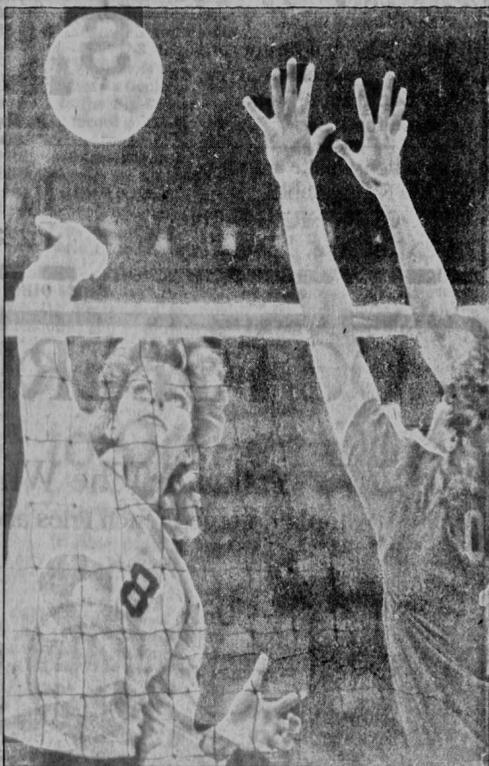

The Hawkeyes dominated a young Indiana team in three straight games, 15-5, 15-4 and 15-6. Mullarkey led both teams in kills (10), service aces (4) and digs (15).

WITH THE HAWKEYES leading 14-5 late in the first game, Mullarkey blasted a service ace through the Indiana lines to give Iowa the win. She achieved an astounding .800 hitting percentage in the game.

Iowa scored the last seven points in the second game to win by its biggest margin of the weekend, 15-4.

Losing 4-1 in the third game, Coach Sandy Stewart called a timeout to break Indiana's momentum. Her players responded by rattling off four straight points to take a 5-4 lead. The Hawkeyes never looked back as they crushed the Hoosiers to gain the sweep.

"That's the best match we played in a long time. We served so well. Serving was probably the key in that match," Stewart said. "Everybody hit well, blocking was good and a lot of our success here has been on the intimidation factor and being really aggressive.

"THIS TEAM IS SO close and so much together. That's why we win. The excitement and the enthusiasm builds up. Especially Ellen (Mullarkey) gets really fired up, and people kind of go from her."

Stephanie Smith, who was shuffled in and out of games by Stewart, responded well off the bench with four kills on seven attempts.

"She's doing real well. We're trying to give her as much experience as we can, both in the middle hitting position and left-side position," Stewart said.

MULLARKEY FELT as equally enthusiastic about the match as her coach but thought the Hoosiers would be more of a challenge than they showed Friday night.

"I thought they'd be a lot tougher. I don't know if it was how we played or they just had a down night, but that's the way it goes," Mullarkey said.

Mullarkey started Saturday's match against Ohio State in similar form as Friday's contest by hitting a towering smash to tie the score at 1-1. After a long volley, Toni Zehr nailed a shot home to tie the score at four. From there the game burst from Ohio State's grasp as the Hawkeyes opened up on the Buckeyes, winning 15-5.

THE MATCH WENT four games (15-5, 15-17, 21-19 and 15-10), but Iowa pulled out impressive victories, defeating the No. 3 team in the conference.

"Block by (Kari) Hamel and Mullarkey" became the cry of public address announcer Tammy Frank during the third game, which saw the lead change hands several times before it took 40 points to win the game. The game broke the Buckeyes' spirit, according to Stewart.

"Whoever won the third game was going to win the match. They came back a little bit, but we were strong enough to hold them off," Stewart said.

Stewart said she felt "great" about the Hawkeyes' first victory over Ohio State during her coaching tenure at Iowa. She added Iowa's chances at a bid for the NCAA tournament (first round Dec. 4-6) were increased with the wins.

Rain delay may let Hurst pitch Game 7

NEW YORK (UPI) — Rain, which fell intermittently throughout the day, caused postponement of Sunday night's decisive seventh game of the World Series between the Boston Red Sox and New York Mets until tonight.

Baseball Commissioner Peter Ueberroth made his decision at approximately 4 p.m. Sunday, nearly 3½ hours before game time, citing wet field conditions and a forecast of continued rain. Ueberroth and NBC-TV rescheduled the game for 7:10 p.m.

The game will conflict directly with ABC-TV's Monday night football game between the Washington Redskins and the New York Giants from nearby East Rutherford, N.J.

Today's weather forecast called for a 40 percent chance of showers in the day with fair conditions and temperatures in the 50s at night.

WITH THE RAINOUT, the Red Sox had the opportunity to switch to left-hander Bruce Hurst for the deciding game when they renew their bid for their first world championship in 68 years. If the game had been played Sunday, they would have started with flamboyant right-hander Dennis "Oil Can" Boyd.

Hurst allowed the Mets only two runs in 17 innings while winning two games during the Series while Boyd was the losing pitcher in Game 3 although he pitched effectively after a rocky first inning. The Mets are expected to counter with right-hander Ron Darling to bring home their first championship in 17 years. Darling is 1-1 in the Series but has allowed only one unearned run in 14 innings.

The Mets were hoping Sunday night's game would be played since they were still in a state of euphoria following Saturday night's improbable 6-5, 10-inning victory.

THE METS TRAILED by two runs entering the bottom of the 10th and had two outs and nobody on base when they rallied for three runs, scoring the decisive one on a grounder hit by Mookie Wilson that went through the legs of first baseman Bill Buckner.

It marked the first time in World Series history that a team came back from a two-run deficit in extra innings to win in that inning.

"Whatever it is, mirrors, magic wands, whatever, we won the ball game," said Wilson.

The Red Sox, who have a long history of failing under pressure, were still in a state of shock.

"It was as close as you could come to winning a ball game," Boston Manager John McNamara said. "We needed just one out and didn't get it. I guess I can compare it to what happened in California."

The Red Sox pulled out a similar victory against the Angels in Game 5 of their best-of-seven American League playoffs.

Sportsbrief

Fry says Hawks were drained after loss

Iowa Coach Hayden Fry said during his Sunday teleconference that his Hawkeyes were definitely down after an emotional loss to Michigan, making it difficult to prepare for Northwestern.

"There's no question we were down," Fry said. "We fought it all week. Our kids can read too. Mentally, it was just a very, very hard game to prepare for."

But Fry said the fact that Iowa is 6-1 and could easily be 7-0 if not for a 20-17 loss to Michigan can't be ignored. "I feel very fortunate to be just three points away from a perfect season this late in the year," Fry said. "I told (the players) this morning how wonderful it is what great progress we've made in our program here. I told them that not too many years ago people would have been dancing in the streets of Iowa City all night long after a win like that."

On The Line

It was another tough week for the readers in On The Line.

Only one person correctly predicted the outcome of all 11 games, and only two other people hit every game but the tiebreaker.

Bruce A. Thein, last week's winner, made a valiant effort to claim an unprecedented second consecutive keg, and for a while, Sunday, it appeared he would pull it off.

As we counted the ballots Sunday afternoon, one of Thein's five entries came to the fore and looked to be the only ballot with all 10 regular games correctly predicted. Thein missed only the tiebreaker.

But then Laurie Leach's ballot entered the fray, wrestled Thein's entry to the ground and put it in a deadly choke hold. But Thein's ballot fought back, pointing out that Leach had also missed the tiebreaker game, and that his total points were closer to the actual total.

The Leach ballot, realizing all was lost, breathed a final gasp of life, then wilted into the huge pile of equally dead entries.

Thein's ballot then began strutting around the newsroom, spitting on the still uncounted ballots, daring them to challenge his supremacy.

"Come on ya pansies," Thein's ballot roared. "I'll take on any six of ya and not even break a sweat."

All seemed lost for the poor defenseless ballots, as Thein's entry spouted out threat after menacing threat.

"I'm king of the ballots," it screamed, foam squirting from its grotesque lips. "No one can stop me now. I'm invincible."

The rest of the ballots huddled together in one corner of the newsroom, begging for mercy. But then, from the center of the whimpering horde, little Stacey Schall's ballot stepped out and said, "Don't worry everybody, I'm not afraid. I'll stand up to that bully and save the day."

The rest of the ballots gasped. Surely little Stacey's ballot was no match for the Thein monstrosity.

"No, don't go," screamed one ballot. "You'll be massacred," bellowed another.

But the Schall ballot could not be stopped. "Take a good look Thein," it said. "I'm perfect."

A roar rose up from the huddled ballots. "She's perfect," one screamed. "We're saved," yelled another. "All hail Stacey Schall," they said in unison.

Thein's entry fell dead on the spot, and the remaining ballots gathered around, lifted the now powerless ballot and carried it to the dead pile.

Indeed, Schall's ballot was perfect, and she nearly hit the

Hawks experience first Big Ten defeat

By Scott Reifert
Staff Writer

The Iowa field hockey team suffered its first Big Ten loss of the season as Northwestern defeated the Hawkeyes, 1-0, Saturday in Evanston, Ill.

The meeting between the two Big Ten powerhouses came just one week after Iowa defeated the Wildcats 4-2 in Iowa City.

But despite the loss, Iowa Coach Judith Davidson wasn't too worried.

"I don't feel too bad because we didn't have our No. 1 goalie playing for us," Davidson said. Iowa had freshman Susan Brooks in goal in place of veteran goalie Karen Napolitano.

"I think the goal they scored was because of inexperience in our goal," Davidson said of the Wildcat goal that came with about 20 minutes left in the game.

"SUSAN PLAYED stupendously," Davidson said. "She was the only real bright spot out there. She just made some excellent saves. She saved some that probably should have been goals and let the one she should have had go through. But we were proud of her. She had a real trial by fire."

But while Brooks was staving off the Wildcat attack, Iowa's offense was sputtering.

"The offense just couldn't get on track," Davidson said. "I don't know what's wrong. We made some adjustments in our line-up and that took a little bit away from our offense, but I don't think that was a major reason. All season long our forwards have been quick and aggressive. Saturday we just seemed a little flat."

Iowa's offense managed only five shots at goal during the game — three in the first half and two in the second — but Northwestern had only seven total shots themselves.

Davidson said the main change in the Iowa offense was moving Frederique Kock back to sweeper in order "to get her sure stick back to protect Brooks."

Northwestern's game-winner came on a shot Brooks and Davidson both said Brooks probably should have stopped.

Judith Davidson

Field Hockey

"I FELT I DID a fairly decent job throughout the game," Brooks said. Brooks added about the winning goal, "I was set for a shot on goal. An experienced player would have squeezed her pads together to block the shot, but I was busy thinking about what I was going to do with the shot, and it was already by me."

"Our offense couldn't get on track," Brooks said. "The game was really played between the thirties."

Northwestern's win makes next weekend's games instrumental in deciding the Big Ten champion. But if the Hawkeyes can win both games or even win one and tie one, they will walk away with the conference championship. Either way the two teams will not meet again until the regionals.

"Northwestern is a great team," Davidson said. "I don't know if we can beat them three times in a season, but I hope we can do it when it counts most — in the regionals."

Iowa's record fell to 7-1 in the conference while Northwestern raised its record to 5-1-2. The Hawkeyes head to Michigan State and Ohio State for their final two games next weekend.

tie breaker score square on the noggin as well. Alfred knocked off Cortland State 34-9. Schall predicted a 31-10 final.

The three DI prognosticators, Sports Editor Brad Zimaneck, Assistant Sports Editor Dan Millea and Staff Writer Steve Williams, were much less accurate, however.

Millea maintained his one game lead over Zimaneck as both went 6-4. Williams went 7-3 to pick up one game on Millea and moved into a tie with Zimaneck. Guest picker Brent Musburger's picks were identical to those of Williams (but of course, Williams didn't copy Musburger — right Steve), and he also went 7-3.

Millea now leads with a seven-week total of 52-18, while Zimaneck and Williams are at 51-19. There are four weeks remaining in the contest.

By the way, the other results Saturday were: Iowa 27, Northwestern 20; Wisconsin 15, Illinois 9; Michigan 38, Indiana 14; Michigan State 37, Purdue 3; Ohio State 33, Minnesota 0; Penn State 23, Alabama 3; Texas 27, Southern Methodist 24; Southern California 10, Stanford 0; North Carolina State 27, Clemson 3; Louisiana State 30, North Carolina 3.

And with that out of the way, it's time to enter this week's epic contest — if you and your ballots have the guts.

For the winner this week is a delicious keg full of foaming, frothing, bubbly beer from the Sports Column, 12 S. Dubuque St., where many characters like Beowulf would certainly have hung out if they had been involved in an epic such as the one described above.

We'd also like to thank The College Street Club, 121 E. College St., for sponsoring last week's contest. Thanks to them, Stacey Schall and her heroic ballot will have plenty of beer to celebrate the big win.

Denver drops Seattle in classic AFC battle

United Press International

In two Western showdowns Sunday, the Denver Broncos extended their lead in the AFC West while the Atlanta Falcons lost first place in the NFC West.

Denver's 20-13 victory over the Seattle Seahawks put them two games ahead of Seattle, the Los Angeles Raiders and Kansas City Chiefs midway through the season. The Los Angeles Rams' 14-7 victory over Atlanta moved them into first by one-half game over the Falcons and San Francisco 49ers in the NFC West.

John Elway passed for 321 yards and a 34-yard touchdown to Vance Johnson with 10:34 left to lift the Broncos. Elway completed 18 of 32 passes, and his TD strike to Johnson gave Denver a 20-6 lead.

Sammy Winder scored on a 1-yard run and Rich Karlis added field goals of 22 and 47 yards for the Broncos.

ERIC DICKERSON rushed for 170 yards and threw a 15-yard touchdown pass to David Hill to pace the Rams. Los Angeles, which had five turnovers, improved to 6-2 to set up a meeting with the Chicago Bears in Chicago next Monday night.

Dickerson has rushed for 1,030 yards this season, his fourth consecutive year above the 1,000-yard mark.

In other games Sunday, Chicago defeated Detroit 13-7, the New York Jets held off New Orleans 28-23, the Raiders dropped Houston 28-17, Dallas belted St. Louis 37-6, San Francisco beat Green Bay 31-17, Pittsburgh downed Cincinnati 30-9, Cleveland edged Minnesota 23-20, Kansas City shaded Tampa Bay 27-20, New England stopped Buffalo 23-3, Philadelphia topped San Diego 23-7 and Miami nicked Indianapolis 17-13.

On Monday night Washington plays at the New York Giants.

CHICAGO LINEBACKER Wilber Marshall recovered a fumble and returned it 12 yards for a touchdown and Kevin Butler kicked two field goals to lift the Bears. Chicago, 7-1, extended its home victory string at Soldier Field to 14.

Al Toon snared three touchdown passes, including a dazzling 62-yarder in which he broke four tackles, to carry the Jets past the Saints. Toon caught TD passes of 16, 62 and 6 yards from Ken O'Brien.

Marc Wilson threw four touchdown passes, three to Todd Christensen, as the Raiders won their fifth straight. Wilson completed 16 of 34 passes for 230 yards and one interception.

He threw TD passes of 14, 32 and 4 yards to Christensen, and a 2-yarder to Andy Parker as the Raiders improved to 5-3.

HERSCHEL WALKER rushed for 120 yards and scored two touchdowns to lead the Cowboys. Dallas won its ninth straight against NFC East opponents and improved to 6-2. St. Louis fell to 1-7.

Backup quarterback Mike Moroski threw for one touchdown and ran for another, and Ronnie Lott and Tory Nixon scored on interception returns to rally the 49ers.

Mark Malone threw for two touchdowns and Earnest Jackson and Walter Abercrombie each ran for more than 100 yards to lead the Steelers.

Browns safety Felix Wright recovered a blocked punt for a touchdown and picked up a fumble to set up Matt Bahr's winning 22-yard field goal with 1:46 remaining.

MIKE PRUITT scored the 50th rushing touchdown of his career and Jeff Smith added a 32-yard scoring run to carry the Chiefs past Tampa Bay.

Craig James and Robert Weathers ran for touchdowns and New England sacked Jim Kelly five times to lift the Patriots.

Ron Jaworski threw for one touchdown and Paul McFadden kicked three field goals to lead the Eagles past the Chargers.

Dan Marino threw for 243 yards and a touchdown and Miami linebacker John Offerdahl tackled Owen Gill short of a first down with 17 seconds left to preserve the Dolphins victory over Indianapolis.

Buckeyes, Wolverines lead Big Ten with perfect marks

United Press International

Only a football coach could find a negative aspect to Northwestern's surprising showing against Iowa in the Big Ten's most unexpected outcome this weekend.

The 12th-rated Hawkeyes won the game 27-20, but the one-touchdown difference is remarkable. In the last five years, the Hawkeyes have beaten the lowly Wildcats by an average margin of 50-8.

The Wildcats' strong performance, coming after interim coach Francis Peay declared himself uninterested in the permanent coaching job under Northwestern's current structure, proved they can play as equals against the best in the Big Ten.

"I THINK HAYDEN (Iowa coach Fry) must be thanking God today," said Northwestern defensive tackle Bob Dirkes. "We came after them. I wish we could have won, but I have to say we gave it our best shot."

Rather than dwell on the brilliance of the effort, however, Peay looked at the game as a lost opportunity.

"We thought coming into the game that if we could keep Iowa from making the big play and keep away from making turnovers ourselves, we had a good chance," Peay said. "We just didn't do that. No question about it, this was a tough loss."

Big Ten Roundup

"WE MET A fired-up football team in Northwestern," said Fry. "They did a fantastic job. They are a fine team. The NU athletic department is making a mistake by letting Francis Peay and his staff leave."

In other Big Ten games, Ohio State defeated Minnesota 33-0, Michigan pounded Indiana 38-14, Michigan State clobbered Purdue 37-3 and Wisconsin edged Illinois 15-9.

The Minnesota Gophers, pretenders to the Big Ten crown with a 3-0 record going into the weekend, were held to 189 yards in total offense by the Buckeyes, who are all the way back from their 0-2 start.

"This is our team's finest hour to this point," Ohio State coach Earle Bruce said. "Our confidence is back."

OHIO STATE freshman tailback Jim Bryant ran for two touchdowns and wide receiver

Cris Carter caught two touchdown passes for the Buckeyes, who raised their Big Ten mark to 4-0 and their overall record to 6-2. Minnesota dropped to 4-3 overall.

Ohio State and Michigan are now the only 4-0 teams in the conference. Fourth-rated Michigan got two touchdowns from fullback Bob Perryman, and Jim Harbaugh threw for 300 yards and one touchdown as the Wolverines clobbered the Hoosiers.

Indiana has lost three games in a row after winning its first four and getting ranked. The same thing happened last year, when the Hoosiers were ranked 20th after going 4-0 but lost their next seven.

Michigan State tailback Lorenzo White returned from a two-game layoff and rushed for two touchdowns and 79 yards to help the Spartans even their Big Ten record at 2-2. Michigan State is 4-3 overall.

Purdue fell to 0-4 in the Big Ten and 1-6 overall.

Wisconsin's only touchdown came on an interception by linebacker Rick Graf and the Badger defense picked up six Illinois turnovers as the Badgers raised their Big Ten mark to 2-2. Wisconsin is 3-5 overall while Illinois fell to 1-3 in the Big Ten and 2-5.

Bosworth, Oklahoma begin countdown to Orange Bowl

AMES (UPI) — Three down, four to go.

That's the way Oklahoma's Brian Bosworth sees the Big Eight schedule as the sixth-ranked Sooners systematically eliminate their opponents in search of a New Year's Day trip to the Orange Bowl.

Oklahoma romped past Iowa State Saturday, 38-0, and with the help of Colorado's upset of Nebraska, the Sooners appear to be in a prime position to capture another Big Eight title.

Bosworth, the Sooners' all-American linebacker who has become famous for his comments off the field as well as his intense style of play on the field, wore a headband Saturday which read "Mission Three."

"We wanted to come up here and take care of business and do what was expected of us. It's mission three in the Big Eight," Bosworth said after the game.

"(Iowa State quarterback Alex) Espinoza showed us two years ago he can make the big plays. It came down to our ability versus their ability," he said.

ESPINOZA, the Big Eight's leading passer, completed only 5 of 19 passes for 40 yards and was sacked five times as Oklahoma showed why its defense leads the nation.

The Sooners piled up 492 yards in total offense while holding Iowa State to 67 yards on 53 offensive plays, 27 yards rushing and 40 yards passing. The Cyclones also failed to convert a third down in 15 attempts.

"Our defense is playing well every week. That's been the key for us," Oklahoma Coach Barry Switzer said. He said Bosworth, who had six tackles and a sack, is the driving force on that defense.

"He is an outstanding player — maybe one of the best ever to play his position," Switzer said.

AS FAR AS THE Cyclones are concerned, Switzer expects them to make a run at a first-division finish in the Big Eight. Iowa State currently is 4-3, 1-2 in the league.

"I think they will win a couple games down the line. I really do," Switzer said.

Keith Jackson caught a 69-yard scoring pass from Jamelle Holieway, and Lydell Carr set up another touchdown with a 61-yard run to help Oklahoma keep its league record perfect, 3-0, 6-1 overall.

The Cyclones have not defeated Oklahoma since 1961.

"It's hard to get up for a game like this," Switzer said. "It's really difficult when you are such a big favorite on the road. We will be a big favorite next week (at Kansas) and the week after that (against Missouri)."

Iowa nets two titles at Invite

By Scott Reifert
Staff Writer

CEDAR RAPIDS — The Iowa women's tennis team celebrated its last meet of the fall by winning two of four singles flights in the Iowa Invitational Flighted Tournament this weekend in Cedar Rapids.

Pennie Wohlford won the No. 1 singles flight by default over teammate Michele Conlon. Wohlford defeated Minnesota's Catherina Bengtsson 6-3, 6-2 to advance into the finals opposite Conlon, who was bothered by tendinitis in her elbow and dropped out after winning her first two singles matches.

Freshman Patti DeSimone was Iowa's other winner. She defeated Minnesota's Jenny Huston 6-4, 6-7, 7-6 to win the fourth flight championship.

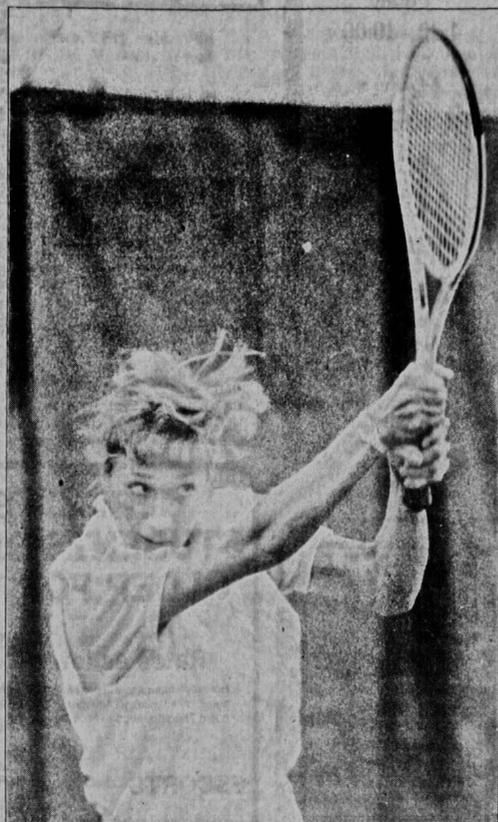

"AGAIN I WAS very pleased with our singles play, not so thrilled with our doubles play," Coach Charley Darley said. "But we're learning and getting better. Overall, I'm really, really pleased. Yesterday (Saturday), we beat Minnesota's top three singles players."

Conlon, Wohlford, and Liz Canzoneri all came up with victories over Minnesota's top players in the tournament at the Westfield Tennis Courts.

Darley said he was pleased with DeSimone's performance in winning the fourth flight.

"She plays hard and really puts everything into every point," Darley said. "That's one of the things that frustrates me. When someone goes hard on one point, but not on another. But she puts everything into every point."

"TODAY I PLAYED aggressively," DeSimone said. "I moved well and hit the ball solidly. I have a lot more confidence in my strokes because I'm hitting out on everything. My serve has been one of my biggest weapons because it really opens up the court for my game."

In other Hawkeye action, Liz Canzoneri lost in the championship match of the second flight to Karen Eneberg of Minnesota. Robin Gerstein bounced back from losing her first match and won her next three matches to win the consolation championship in the second flight.

Pat Leary also came back from a first-round loss to win the consolation championship in the third flight of singles play. In the same flight, Madeleine Willard finished fourth by beating Lisa Schuito of Southern Illinois at Edwardsville 6-2, 7-5.

WHILE DeSIMONE won the fourth flight, freshmen Colleen Nichols finished third after losing to DeSimone in the semifinals. Susan Evans lost her first-round match before winning two straight. She then lost in the flight's consolation championship.

In doubles play, Nichols replaced Conlon and teamed with Wohlford to form Iowa's No. 1 pair. They won their first match before losing to the flight's eventual champions. The pair then beat Elling-Williams of Southwest Missouri State to finish third in the flight.

The team of DeSimone-Leary lost its first two matches in the tournament before winning its final match.

In the second doubles flight, Canzoneri-Evans lost its first match and then stormed back to win its next three and take the consolation championship.

Gerstein-Willard won its first match before losing in the semifinals to finish fourth. Senior Kim Martin also had her first taste of action this fall. Martin, who was injured much of the semester, teamed with a Southern Illinois at Edwardsville player, Michelle Wreen. The pair lost its first match, won the next and then lost in the consolation finals to Canzoneri-Evans.

Seko runs to America's Marathon title

CHICAGO (UPI) — Toshihiko Seko of Japan moved away from Ahmed Saleh of Djibouti at 22 1/2 miles and increased his lead all the way to the victory line to win the 10th annual America's Marathon Sunday.

Ingrid Kristiansen of Norway, running without competition from the first step, won the women's competition but failed in her attempt to set a world record or break the magic 2 hour, 20-minute mark. The winning athletes collected $40,000.

As many as a dozen men battled for the lead early in the race, and John Bura of Tanzania was in charge of the pack. Saleh, 30, and Seko broke away from the pack at the 15 1/2 mile mark and together ran the fastest mile of the race, 4:47, on the 17th mile.

Seko, 29, who also won the London Marathon this year, broke open a 30-yard lead at 22 1/2 miles, increased his lead to 20 seconds after 23 1/2 miles and finished more than one minute ahead of Saleh.

SEKO'S OFFICIAL time of two hours, eight minutes and 27 seconds was well off the world record of 2:07.12 set by Carlos Lopes of Portugal in Rotterdam last year. The year-old course record of 2:07.13 by Steve Jones of England was also not challenged.

Saleh, who had suffered from a cold his first two days in Chicago last week, finished with a time of 2:09.57. Charlie Spedding of Great Britain finished third at 2:10.13.

Speaking through an interpreter, Seko said he knew of Saleh's weakened condition and challenged him at 22 1/2 miles.

"The pace was very slow in the beginning, and I was worried about it," Seko said. "I planned the last part of the race. At 22 miles, I was aware of Saleh's condition and pushed the last part."

SPEDDING WAS IN a second pack of runners from the start. Then he slowly caught up to those runners from the first group who fell back.

"Between 19 and 22 miles, we (Spedding and Michael Musyoki of Kenya, who finished fourth) started catching people. At 23 miles, we were third and fourth. It was just a matter of going hard the last two miles.

"But I saw Saleh for the first time at 25 miles. The first group obviously pulled far away from the start."

Herbert Steffy of West Germany finished fifth. The first American finisher was Bill Rodgers of Boston, who took 11th.

The women's race was over as soon as Kristiansen stepped to the line. Her winning time of 2:27.08 was more than six minutes off her world record of 2:21.06 set in London in 1985. The time was also well off the course record of 2:21.21 set by Joan Benoit Samuelson last year.

KRISTIENSEN SAID she might have gone faster if Samuelson had been in the race. Samuelson is still recovering from heel surgery.

"I feel I lost a little concentration at 10K (kilometers), so that is it," Kristiansen said. "Maybe it is better to have her here."

"I am disappointed because I was seven or eight minutes slower than I wanted to, but I won the race and I am happy with that," she said.

Maria Letul of France finished second at 2:29.51, almost three minutes behind Kristiansen. Priscilla Welch of Great Britain finished third in 2:31.14.

The first American female finisher was Debbie Raunig of Missoula, Mont., who finished fourth.

Wildcats

goal, closing the gap, 27-20, for the final score.

"We caught Iowa at just the right time, coming off a tough game at Michigan and perhaps looking ahead to another tough game against Ohio State," Peay said.

IN THE FIRST HALF, the Wildcats gave up three opportunities to score. Northwestern gave up its first chance to score on a field goal attempt after Greenfield's pass to Curtis Duncan was incomplete. John Duvic's 46-yard field goal attempt was interrupted when Keppy blocked the kick. The ball was then recovered by Iowa's Ken Sims.

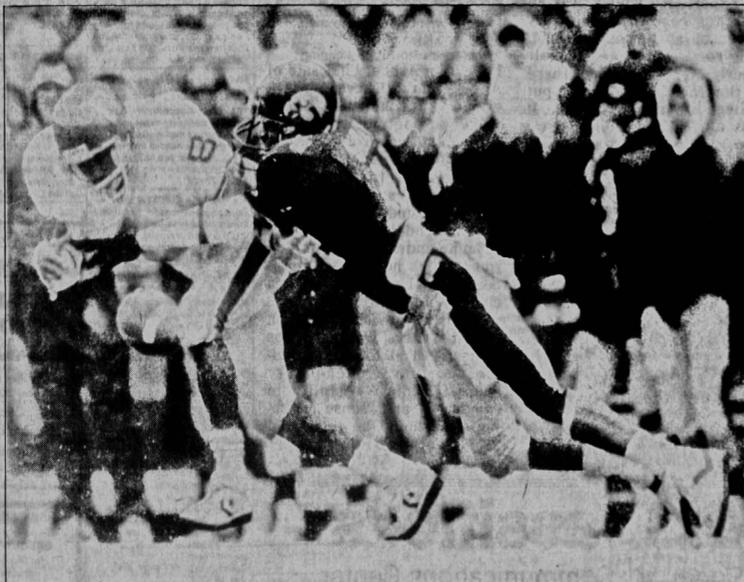

"We had to block it from my side, and I just so happened to get through and made the play," Keppy said.

Iowa took possession of the ball and six plays later put the ball within distance of a field goal. Rob Houghlin's 44-yard attempt was good, putting Iowa's first three points on the board.

Northwestern again drove the ball into Iowa territory but with a second chance to score, from the 30-yard line, Greenfield's pass to Rich Borresen was deflected by Iowa's Keaton Smiley. On his next pass attempt, Greenfield was thrown for a loss of nine yards.

IOWA GAINED possession for four quick downs before Northwestern took control only to fumble the ball on its own 46-yard line, enabling Iowa to fight back.

George Davis recovered on the Iowa 47-yard line. Two plays later David Hudson scored on a 50-yard touchdown run, boosting Iowa's lead, 10-0.

Iowa's Keaton Smiley, a sophomore from Duncanville, Texas, breaks up a pass intended for Northwestern's Marcus Lang during a rain-soaked first half of the Hawkeye-Wildcat game Saturday.

But after Vlasic's 93-yard touchdown pass to Early, the Wildcats began to retaliate.

On the next drive Greenfield's back-up, Greg Bradshaw, stepped in and could not connect with George Jones on a third and 10 from the Iowa 15-yard line. Duvic came in and kicked a 32-yard field goal, putting Northwestern on the board 17-3.

The Northwestern drive did not let up. After Iowa could not score on five plays, Wildcat Stanley Davenport ran up the field for a 89-yard touchdown run.

NEITHER TEAM could score in the remaining six minutes of the first half, letting the score stand at 17-10.

"When we fouled up, we fouled up royally. But our guys did what they had to do in order to win, and I'm extremely proud of our football team," Fry said. "Most of our players played an exceptional ball game. Even though the score, you think Northwestern's not supposed to be that close — that's not true." Fry was not very pleased with Vlasic's play. The Iowa quarterback threw for 201 yards and completed 13 of 25 passes.

"He played an acceptable game, but he can play better," Fry said. "He made some mistakes and hopefully he won't do that in the future. Sometimes it looked like he was throwing the ball up for grabs."

"I didn't think I played well at all," Vlasic said. "I made some bad decisions out there today, and at times it cost us. And I think that had a lot to do with how the offense played."

Davenport

injury which kept him inactive throughout the early part of the year.

BUT THE WILDCAT back made the most of the shot he was given on Saturday, crippling the Hawkeye defenders with an 89-yard touchdown run and bringing balance to an often one-sided attack.

"Davenport really surprised me with his performance today," Iowa defensive back Henny Sims said. "Running for 155 yards against us was outstanding ... even (Michigan State's) Lorenzo White couldn't do that."

"After a performance like this, I think I've become a much more solid part of my team," Davenport said. "I just made the most of the opportunities I had, and I was glad our team was able to walk away with a little respect against a very fine football team."

DAVENPORT ALSO took advantage of Iowa from the air by taking a Greenfield pass and rambling for 34 yards, setting up the Wildcats' final score.

But his biggest contribution came in the second period when he squirted through a hole on the left side of Iowa's defense and waltzed 89 yards for a touchdown.

In all, the 200-pound junior from Decatur, Ga., amassed 195 total yards and gave the Wildcats an inkling of what could be a very bright future.

"The play we ran was a misdirection play designed to gain about five yards. I was really surprised to see that big a hole, but I just hit it and the rest is history," Northwestern tailback Stanley Davenport says of his 89-yard touchdown run in the first quarter of Iowa's 27-20 win Saturday.

"This is probably the most gratifying performance of my career, especially because it came against a team like Iowa."

rection play designed to gain about five yards," Davenport said. "I was really surprised to see that big a hole, but I just hit it and the rest is history."

"This is probably the most gratifying performance of my career, especially because it came against a team like Iowa. However, I know that I still have a lot to learn and that I have to keep that willingness to learn inside of me in order to improve."

"Stanley has had to go through a lot of adversity this season with a knee injury during the spring game and a liver infection that kept him out of fall training," Peay said. "We talked about the mental battle he would have to go through, but he's fought it out, and he looks to be completely healthy. In time I think he will only get better."

Poet Angel to read from noted works

By Jeff Likes
Special to The Daily Iowan

RALPH ANGEL, whose first major collection of poetry, Anxious Latitudes, was published last summer by Wesleyan University Press, will read from his work at 8 tonight in Van Allen Hall Lecture Room II.

Ralph Angel

Angel, 35, grew up in Seattle and is currently an associate professor of English at the University of Redlands in Redlands, Calif., where he teaches courses in poetry, literature and screenwriting. He received his bachelor's degree from the University of Washington in Seattle, and, in 1977, a masters of fine arts at the University of California, Irvine.

Europe and North Africa and spent a year in South America before moving to California.

While an undergraduate, he also worked as a brakeman for the Union Pacific Railroad — an experience which "was an essential contrast to the ivory tower of academe," he said. "There were times I felt utterly dispossessed out there on the tracks, but it helped put college life into perspective. It was a rich experience." Two poems in Anxious Latitudes — "History" and "Between Two Tracks" — are derived from his stint with the railroad.

and what's important is always ours I mean I want to dedicate my life to those who keep going

Just to see how it isn't ending Poet John Ashbery has said of Angel's work: "There is a two-edged approach in Ralph Angel's poetry: a nimble directness which leaves one unprepared for and therefore receptive to the subtleties behind the surface. It's as though he had begun by making the reader feel very much at home and then left him in a room which he gradually perceives to be crammed with curious objects."

ANGEL'S POETRY rises from mundane, urban experiences to celebrate day-to-day human survival. In "Man in a Window" he writes:

Luckily friends rally to my spiritual defense

I think they're reminding me

I mean it's important to me it's important to me so I leave my fate to fate and come back I come back home We need so much less always

Singer-actor adds photography to list

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — To the list of singer-actor Kenny Rogers' artistic accomplishments you can add photography.

Rogers has produced a book of his photographs with text titled Kenny Rogers' America, a collection of black and whites, mostly rural, that capture the beauty, mystery and grandeur of his native land.

Rogers trained his lenses on mountains, deserts, prairies, churches, barns, streams, lakes, cowboys, farmers, waterfalls, monuments and national parks with an unerring eye for black and white contrasts and captivating compositions.

This is no run-of-the-mill celebrity pumping his ego with a bunch of snapshots. Rogers devoted almost two years of concentrated study to photography with John Sexton, an associate of the late Ansel Adams.

"I shot only black and white because I was still learning to use the camera," Rogers said. "I was taught the zone system which gives each light zone a value of from zero to 10. It's fascinating."

"I DEVELOPED and printed all my photographs. Sometimes on the road I'd develop the film in hotel bathrooms," he said.

Rogers said he would arrive in a city for a concert late in the afternoon and scout around the countryside looking for prospective subjects. The following morning he'd return ready to shoot.

Like many other performers, Rogers believes that each individual has creative juices flowing in a variety of disciplines.

"Some people are born with a need to create," he said. "But once something like writing or singing becomes a profession it loses some of its spontaneity. Sure, you grow in your craft, but we all enjoy things we don't have to do more than the things we feel we must do."

"YOU WANT TO GO beyond the average to succeed, so you set higher goals for yourself," he said. "That's how I felt when I began seriously to work at photography. I really took a crash course, working at it eight hours a day for more than a year and a half."

Rogers has found a new fulfillment behind the camera. "I'm very happy with photography," he said. "My growth has been quick and rewarding but I also truly know my limitations. Newcomers like me gravitate to safe subjects. The more knowledgeable I get, the more chances I take with an understanding of what can be done to enhance a picture in the developing or printing."

Dance theater demonstrates versatility, mastery of craft

By Therese Teasdale
Staff Writer

THE NORTH Carolina Dance Theater demonstrated the reason for its success Friday night in Hancher Auditorium. The performers exhibited a mastery of many dance styles and provided something likable for every taste.

Salvatore Aiello's Clowns and Others replaced the scheduled opening ballet Allegro Brillante. The dance combined traditional ballet with a more contemporary style to create a very playful mood.

The dancers wore white play suits and resembled mischievous children pretending to be toy soldiers or circus performers. At times they moved stiffly, marching like wooden dolls, and later became as graceful as the ballet dancers they are.

In one scene demonstrating a clever use of props, a clown attempted to walk a tightrope of elastic stretched across the stage. Through pantomime, he created an illusion of falling off.

Props also helped the performers depict childish jealousy. One woman skipped onstage carrying a huge lollipop which she licked and stuck to the face of a boy who was teasing her. Another entered with a balloon, which the rest of the group tried to snatch. Failing in their endeavor, they ganged up and stuck her balloon with a pin.

SATTO, or Wind Dance, also

choreographed by Aiello, showed a marked departure from the style of the first piece. The wind-like, somewhat eerie music performed on reed flute and drum differed from the light, playful piano tune used in Clowns and Others.

The dance was sensual and fluid. A bright rectangular patch of light on the darkened stage and the simple costumes added to the feeling of naturalism and earthiness.

The male dancer wore a simple loincloth like that of a Japanese sumo wrestler. The woman resembled a snake as she wriggled into the light wearing a green body suit.

Satto provided a showcase for the dancers' strength and controlled movements. At one point, the male lay on his back with one leg perpendicular to the floor. His partner balanced on his raised foot as though on an invisible bench.

Les Noces, the work of former UI student Lar Lubovitch, depicted a Russian peasant wedding. The traditional Russian music and peasant costumes emphasized the ritual nature of the marriage ceremony.

IGOR STRAVINSKY'S music provided an appropriate backdrop for the dance. The music's rhythms did not dictate the actions of the dance, but rather added to the emotional content of the piece.

The bride and groom had their marriage arranged by their families and hardly knew one another. The piece attempts to show the evolution of their relationship.

The two initially run from each other, only to be dragged back by their parents. They perform ritual dances together, and by the end of the piece are a married couple. Exaggerated pelvic thrusts and a tender embrace in the final scene symbolize their sexual and emotional union.

The final piece, Vicente Nebrada's Pentimento, was a neoclassical ballet for the full company.

Both the music and costuming developed throughout the work's 14 scenes. Initially simple, both became increasingly ornate and decorative.

The dancers first appeared onstage wearing sleek pastel leotards, but by the piece's conclusion, they wore elaborate costumes which even included masks and wigs. The music followed a similar pattern, evolving from a simple unadorned melody to a more ornamented baroque style.

The costume transformation was accomplished through a layering technique. With each scene, the dancers added to their attire. Filmy scarves, brightly-patterned tights, velvet bodices, ruffled sleeves, cloth shawls and masks added richness of color and texture to the costumes.

The Bach suites added ornamentation in the same way, layering embellishments such as trills or turns onto a simple melodic theme.

Actors perform casual skits

By Beth Lucht
Staff Writer

IT WAS DARK, rainy and very cold. Several people stood in the bed of a truck, illuminated by the headlight of an old motorcycle. Huddled in raincoats and under umbrellas stood dedicated followers, applauding the announcement of "Hard Liquor and Handgun Night."

Was it a gathering of an underground political group? No, just a performance of No Shame Theater, a loosely organized performance of scenes by local Iowa City theater loonies, led by playwright Todd Ristau.

RISTAU FOUNDED No Shame, which performs in the parking lot of E.C. Mabie Theatre, and explains that they will "keep doing it until it's too cold to stand in the snow." No Shame is incredibly casual, much like its predecessor, Midnight Madness, which provided cheap fun and wild entertainment back in the days before the Old Armory was flattened.

But there are some differences. No Shame is even more off-the-wall and less structured than Madness. Five minutes before the show began, a call for any additional pieces went out. Actors didn't show up for scenes, and without blinking, other actors filled their spots. This is what "Saturday Night Live" should have been.

The pieces varied between fairly serious monologues and hysterically funny skits. The opener was a skit dealing with art ("Art with a capital 'A' — Art") which was punctuated with the protestations of the frustrated Iowan ("I don't understand. But then again, I'm from Iowa").

ANOTHER HIGHLIGHT was "Dada is my Dada," which turned into an argued-over story about a woodcutter — no, a prince, no — a duke named Harvey who married a frog — no, a princess named Harvey and lived happily ever after, but then died.

On the more serious side was Ristau's piece about a young girl's encounter with a hermit and a canary. It became an extended metaphor for overcoming hurt and "learning to fly again" but did so without being overwrought.

Another advantage of informal performances like No Shame Theater is that it provides opportunity to act without investing usual time necessary to participate in organized theater. Though organized theater is certainly essential to any actor's training, it is nice that young, untested performers and writers can have exposure to audiences in this way.

Next week, according to a No Shame organizer, the Messiah will appear just in time for Halloween.
