Poll gives Junkins local lead

Democratic challenger Lowell Junkins has a 10 percentage point lead over incumbent Gov. Terry Branstad in a Johnson County poll conducted by The Daily Iowan.

The Republican Party's 18-year grip on the statehouse — 14 years under Gov. Robert D. Ray — could be loosened if the local poll is any indication of the state's political mood.

The DI survey, conducted Oct. 12-16, polled 1,576 most-likely voters in Iowa City, Coralville and North Liberty, Iowa. The poll has a maximum possible sampling error of 4 percentage points.

Junkins, who resigned his position as Iowa Senate majority leader last year to campaign for governor, has a 44 percent to 34 percent lead over Branstad. Twenty-two percent of those polled said they are still undecided in their support for the state's top political office.

Branstad, who narrowly defeated Democrat Roxanne Conlin in the 1982 general election, garnered the support of 84 percent of the Republicans polled. Five percent of the Republicans questioned said they support Junkins and 11 percent are undecided.

Three-quarters of the Democrats surveyed said if the elections were held today, they would support their party's nominee. Branstad earned the support of 10 percent of the Democrats polled and 15 percent said they are still undecided.

Among voters claiming no political affiliation, Junkins edged Branstad 33 percentage points to 28 percentage points. Thirty-eight percent of the independent voters polled are undecided.

The majority of Johnson County voters have yet to decide which lieutenant governor candidate they support. Thirty-six percent of those polled said they are undecided in the race for Iowa's No. 2 political seat.

Democrat JoAnn Zimmerman, who was first elected to the Iowa House in 1982, holds a 10 percentage point lead over Republican Joan Lipsky. Thirty-five percent of the voters polled said they would support Zimmerman if the elections were held today; 25 percent supported Lipsky, 4 percent supported independent Dean Arbuckle and 36

Negative effects surround tax act

By James Cahoy
Staff Writer

UI employees and students do not figure to benefit from the Tax Reform Act of 1986, UI Law Professor Larry Ward said Monday night.

Ward spoke at a seminar designed to explain the reform act before about 100 people at the downtown Iowa City Holiday Inn.

"It will affect them in some negative ways," Ward said, referring to UI employees. "It's going to eliminate the deductions on some of their retirement planning and it also will eliminate a lot of deductions for business expenses."

A UI Hospitals employee, who declined to be identified, said she sees no advantages for UI employees under the act that was signed into law by President Ronald Reagan last week.

"It hits us harder than the old tax laws," she said.

Ward said the current tax code has 15 different tax brackets, ranging from 11 percent to 50 percent, but the 1986 version is simpler.

"The new tax reform act has only two, 15 percent and 28 percent," Ward said. "It's a defeat for progressivity. A single person who makes $18,000 a year is going to be taxed the same percentage of their income as Sam Walton, who is worth $4.3 billion."

Ward said 6.5 million low-income taxpayers will no longer have to pay taxes under the new law.

While this may appear to be fair to low-income taxpayers, Ward said the new tax plan might have some negative effects on many UI students.

"IT'S PROBABLY going to diminish charitable contributions to the university, which obviously will hurt the university financially," Ward said. "It's also going to eliminate some deductions on scholarships and interest on educational loans."

But low-income students may be helped by the new law.

"It will take off the tax rolls a lot of low-income students," Ward said. "It's hard to say how it's going to affect the individual student exactly."

Ward said he has mixed feelings about the new tax law. "I think in terms of equity it is a more fair, but I don't think it will be more simple," Ward said. "In the short run, it could cause a lot of economic dislocation."

Ward advised the audience that they would save money in deductions by buying items such as cars, real estate and other major purchases now, rather than waiting until the new laws go into effect.

Money losses force dealers to end gas war, raise prices

By James Cahoy
Staff Writer

A "gas war" among competing Iowa City service stations appears to be over as the average price of regular gas jumped from 69 cents to 83 cents a gallon last week.

Jerry Hanson, owner of Jerry's Standard Service on U.S. Highway 6 in Coralville, called the 14-cent price increase necessary.

"Sixty-nine cents was below our costs," Hanson said. "I had to raise the price if I wanted to stay in business. Eighty-three cents was what the other stations were going to."

Larry Dombrowski, an economic analyst with the energy bureau of the Iowa Department of Resources in Des Moines, said the rapid price increase in Iowa City was no surprise.

"It wasn't too hard to predict since Iowa City was in a gas war situation and dealers were selling at below costs before," Dombrowski said. "They were due to substantially increase prices. It's very frustrating for some people to see this kind of increase, but it is not unusual."

SERVICE STATION employ-

The Daily Iowan/Gregory McCallum

ees said they had no other choice but to raise prices.

"I think the owners of the area gas stations just got tired of losing money, so they jacked the price up," said an employee of Bob Bell's Standard, 2315 Muscatine Ave.

Steve Strauss, president of Capitol Propane Gas and Oil, 729 S. Capitol St., a distributor of Mobil Oil products, said that prices were due to rise.

"They were selling way under cost," he said. But Strauss added that gas dealers were not hurting nearly as much as they claimed during the gas wars.

"Gas is definitely a loss leader," Strauss said. "For a lot of owners, it's a way to attract people to the store to buy overpriced candy and other items. Gas stations' prices are more of a marketing tool than anything."

STRAUSS SAID the price increase was just temporary for many stations.

"Prices started sliding the day after the increases came out," he said. "Some stations right now are charging 82 cents a gallon. Iowa City is in a constant gas war."

Dombrowski said most station managers raise prices because of actions of other stations.

"What generally happens is one station raises their prices and the others either follow them or ignore it," Dombrowski said. "In this case everybody came up."

But Dombrowski said he expects gas prices to be stable for a while in Iowa City.

"I don't see any major price changes on the horizon," Dombrowski said. "Once you have a major price war like last week, you usually don't have another one for quite a while."

Californian arrested on spy charge

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — A former Air Force missile technician who "wanted to burn the government" because he was forced out of the military was arrested Monday on charges of trying to pass defense secrets to the Soviet Union.

Alan John Davies, 33, was arrested at his job with Ford Aerospace and Communications Corp. in Palo Alto, Calif., where he had worked as a laboratory technician since October 1984, U.S. Attorney Joseph Russoniello said.

U.S. Magistrate Frederick J. Woelflen ordered Davies jailed pending a hearing Thursday on a government request that he be held without bail.

He was charged with one count of trying to deliver national defense information to a foreign government and faces a maximum sentence of life imprisonment if convicted.

Davies, born in Eastleigh, England, allegedly met undercover FBI agent Richard M. Dyer on Sept. 22, 1986.

Dyer, posing as a Soviet contact, called himself "Ivan" and was allegedly given detailed oral information about Air Force reconnaissance efforts based on Davies' first-hand experience while serving in the Air Force during 1983 and 1984.

"THE MOTIVE FOR passing the information is one of the most difficult to guard against. That is spite," Russoniello said.

Davies, a naturalized U.S. citizen, served in the Air Force for 10 years but was involuntarily discharged June 11, 1984, due to "poor job performance," Russoniello said.

In a tape recording made during a meeting with the undercover FBI agent, Davies explained that he waited two years to provide the information "just to make sure they couldn't link me with it if I

The arrest of former Air Force missile technician Alan John Davies for attempting to deliver defense information to a foreign government is the latest in a series of espionage incidents that have hit the United States in 1986. Others arrested for espionage or related crimes include:

- Bruce D. Ott, an airman assigned to Beale Air Force Base, Calif., was sentenced Aug. 7 to 25 years in prison for trying to sell information about secret spy plane to FBI agents posing as Soviets.

- Jonathan Jay Pollard, former U.S. Navy intelligence analyst, pleaded guilty June 4 to selling classified code information to Israel. His wife, Anne, pleaded guilty to lesser charges. They await sentencing.

- Edward Lee Howard, the first CIA agent known to have defected to Soviet Union, was fired from the CIA in 1983, disappeared in 1985 and surfaced in Moscow Aug. 7, 1986.

- FBI arrested Gennadi Zakharov, a Soviet citizen working for United Nations, Aug. 23. A week later, the KGB arrested U.S. reporter Nicholas Daniloff on similar charges. Despite insistence the two cases were not linked, U.S. and Soviet officials allowed both men to return to their native countries.

told anybody, just sort of ... hide my trail."

The government said Davies tried to make contact with the Soviets by telephoning the San Francisco Soviet consulate. Russoniello said there is no indication the Soviets were even aware of his effort and declined to discuss how the FBI learned of the attempt.

Generators caused UI Hospital alarms

Smoke billowing from UI Hospitals Carver Pavilion Monday afternoon was the result of a diesel generator — not a fire — Iowa City fire officials said Monday.

According to Iowa City Fire Department Battalion Chief Ray Wombacher, the generators automatically turned on to offset an electrical power loss at UI Hospitals. Exhaust from the generators caused fire officials to send three engines to the scene.

"There wasn't any danger at any time," Wombacher said. Fire officials only had to make sure the smoke came from the generators and not another source, he said.

Relief sought for earthquake victims

In response to an Oct. 10 earthquake in El Salvador, the Iowa City Central America Solidarity Committee announced plans to collect money for the earthquake victims.

Committee members said the organization will work with Medical Aid to El Salvador, a non-profit relief agency that sends medical supplies to El Salvador's rural poor.

Donors are asked to send their tax-deductible contributions to: Medical Aid to El Salvador, P.O. Box 328, Iowa City, Iowa 52244.

In addition to the fund-raising drive, the Iowa City group plans to sponsor a rice-and-beans supper and information night sometime in early November.

For more information contact the Central America Solidarity Committee office at 353-7018.

Public library offers reference courses

The Iowa City Public Library is providing a three-part course in November to help residents make the best use of the facility.

The course, titled "Getting to Know the Library" will include a tour of the library and an introduction to the computer card catalog, reference books, magazines, pamphlets and audiovisual resources.

The course will be offered on three consecutive Monday nights beginning Nov. 10 and ending Nov. 24. Courses last from 7 to 9 p.m. and will be taught by Iowa City Public Library Information Librarian John Hiett.

The course is co-sponsored by the library and Kirkwood Community College, Cedar Rapids. Advanced registration may be made by telephone through Kirkwood at 1-800-332-8833.

The fee for the course is $4.

UI medical care symposium scheduled

The UI will hold the Eighth Annual Executive Symposium, "Future Directions in Medical Care: The Changing Role of the Physician," Oct. 31-Nov 1 at the Iowa City Holiday Inn.

The symposium will feature lectures by health care administrators and educators in business administration, and a panel discussion on primary trends in health care will be held.

Iowa tax program surpasses $4 million

Iowa's Tax Amnesty program, entering its final week, collected more than $4 million, including $346,000 in back corporate income taxes from a Massachusetts firm, revenue officials said Monday.

Delinquent taxpayers have until midnight Friday to participate in the program, which allows payment of the back taxes at half the normal penalty rate and without fear of criminal prosecution.

Gerald Bair, director of the Iowa Department of Revenue and Finance, said he expects the final week to produce the biggest results.

"The $4 million is a significant sum for eight weeks, but there's still a lot more out there yet to come in," Bair said.

"Besides receiving exemption from criminal prosecution and penalties, delinquent taxpayers will also save on interest payments," he said. "But only a few days remain for them to claim this 'last chance' to clear up their obligations before incurring greater consequences."

Bair said 30 enforcement positions will be added to the department next year and penalties will increase 50 percent beginning Jan. 1.

Correction

The Daily Iowan will correct unfair or inaccurate stories or headlines. If a report is wrong or misleading, call the DI at 353-6210. A correction or clarification will be published in this column.

In a story called "UI students express distress about foreign TAs' English" (DI, Oct. 15), the name of a UI graduate student was incorrectly reported. Her name is Yue-Chan Ho. Also, in a story called "Absentee votes raise trouble" (DI, Oct. 24), Mike Ketchmark, a Republican candidate for the 46th District state representative seat, was misquoted. Ketchmark told students they would have ballots two weeks before the election.

The DI regrets the errors.

City weighs housing needs

By Carlos M. Trevino

Low-income homeowners would benefit the most from Community Development Block Grants if the Iowa City Council approves recommendations made by the Committee on Community Needs.

Committee members are asking the council to maintain a housing rehabilitation program that offers low-interest and forgivable loans for low-income homeowners to improve their properties.

The committee is recommending the council use $200,000 of the program's projected $700,000 in funds. The project would assist about 40 homeowners in areas east of the downtown business district to First Avenue, according to Marianne Milkman, CDBG program coordinator.

"One of the main objectives we have is to maintain the housing stock and to improve the conditions of the lower-income houses," Milkman said. "People can then have their homes weatherized or painted, in general, improved."

IN ORDER TO make those repairs with CDBG funds, homeowners must apply for an outright grant or a low-income loan to the city's Housing Rehabilitation Department.

But this may be the last year to apply.

Agencies depend on grants, future funding in jeopardy

By Carlos M. Trevino
Staff Writer

Although 11 local agencies currently benefit from Community Development Block Grants, this may be the final year they receive these funds from the city.

Agencies receiving the most funding include the Elderly Services Agency, the Johnson County Big Brother/Big Sister program and the Mayor's Youth Employment Program. All programs are receiving about what they did last year.

"If we lost those funds, it would be pretty devastating," said Jim Swaim, director of United Action for Youth, an agency that gets 25 percent of its funds from CDBGs.

"If we lost that funding, we'd have to completely regroup our budget," Swaim said. "It should have an even bigger impact because we'd lose other federal matching funds if we had to use (CDBG) funds to pay for other things."

Milkman said federal CDBG funds "are always in jeopardy."

Funding was cut by 14 percent a year ago, while this year's

BUT NEXT YEAR Swaim and his organization will receive $40,000 if the city council approves recommendations made by the Committee on Community Needs.

"We've been receiving the same amount for the past four years," Swaim said. "It makes up the core of our budget."

Although the Rape Victim Advocacy Program is not as dependent on CDBG funds, Program Director Karla Miller said "it definitely helps."

The advocacy program is funded by several organizations, but the $10,350 granted by the committee is one of the largest amounts. That sum, however, represents one of the committee's lowest awards.

"What wouldn't seem like a lot of money to some people is a lot to others," Miller said. "A few hundred dollars makes a big difference around here. We get the most out of it."

funds will reflect a 10 percent cut.

In fact, the $700,000 figure predicted by the city is the amount city expects to receive.

"It's a conservative estimate," Milkman said. "We're pretty sure we're going to get that much."

Mayor William Ambrisco said he is also concerned about future funding.

"This could be the last year we get funds," Ambrisco said. "This could be it. So we want to be sure to get the most out of this money that we can."

THE MAYOR said getting the most out of CDBG funds is what the committee may have accomplished.

"I like the directions they're showing us," he said. "I want to get the views of the other councilors before approving anything, but the committee's three top priorities are to do with housing."

"Those are the people who need it the most," Ambrisco said. "These are programs that are helping people most directly."

Councilor Kate Dickson, who called the committee "a hard-working group of people," said she liked the committee's recommendations, but wanted to review projects.

"I think it looks very fair," Dickson said.

The council is expected to review recommendations with committee chairwoman Karen Kubby during a Nov. 3 informal council meeting. A final public hearing will be conducted Nov. 4, according to city records.

A man found guilty of sexually abusing an Iowa City woman was sentenced Monday in Johnson County District Court to serve 10 years in the custody of the Iowa Department of Corrections.

Thomas Michael Rubert, 36, of West Branch, Iowa, was charged May 7 with third-degree sexual abuse. Court records state that Rubert forced the woman to have sex with him while visiting her apartment.

A jury found Rubert guilty of the charge on July 23.

Rupert filed a notice Monday stating he will appeal the case to the Iowa Supreme Court.

In a motion for a new trial filed Oct. 17, Rubert contended the evidence presented at his trial was insufficient and that his counsel for the trial was ineffective. Rubert also wanted to be present at every stage of the trial.

Johnson County District Court Judge Lynne E. Brady overruled all three counts Oct. 22, stating the evidence presented at the trial supported the charge.

An Iowa City man charged with sexually abusing a woman last summer made his initial appearance Saturday in Johnson County District Court.

Phillip Sylvester Bolanos, 34, RR 1, was arrested Friday for forcing a woman to have sex with him at a rural Johnson County residence in August.

Bolanos was being held Monday in lieu of $5,000 in the Johnson County Jail. His preliminary hearing is scheduled for Nov. 3.

A man arrested for hitting another man with a club made his initial appearance Saturday in Johnson County District Court.

Tommy R. Birge Jr., 21, East Moline, Ill., was arrested Friday for carrying a dangerous weapon in the Veterans Administration Hospital parking lot, U.S. Highway 6 West.

Birge was released Friday from the Johnson County Jail on $1,000 bond. His preliminary hearing will be Nov. 3.

The telephone company reached out and touched UI students last Friday as Northwestern Bell long-distance phone bills arrived in mailboxes across campus for the second time this fall.

Although most students admitted the bill-opening process was slow and painful, they were not ready to break their phone habits.

"My eyes popped open in disbelief," UI sophomore Scott Trotter said about his $62 phone bill. "It doesn't seem like it could be that much for just a month."

"I wish it wasn't such a rip-off," he said, adding that he doesn't appreciate having to make calls late at night to benefit from lower rates.

THE RATES ARE slightly less expensive for a call to the Chicago area.

But "great late rates" haven't stopped most UI students from running up large phone bills.

UI freshman Kim Daywitt was probably happy to be a "long distance" from home when she opened her $55 phone bill.

"My parents were highly pissed," she said. "The calls weren't to them and they think I'm wasting my money."

"I'll just have to cut someplace else," she said.

UI graduate student Mike Mauren said getting his phone bill is a rising experience.

"It goes up every time I get it," he said.

Mauren explained that most of his calls are to friends no longer at the UI.

ALTHOUGH MAUREN paid $100 for his conversations, he took it in stride.

"It's a lot cheaper calling on the phone than it is to fly or drive," he said.

Making calls to Japan at least once a month has numbed UI sophomore Morris Kimura's reaction to his phone bill.

Kimura said he can expect calls to Japan, where his parents live, to cost him at least $40 a month. Combined with other calls within the United States, Kimura said he has faced monthly phone bills of more than $200.

"I just get carried away," he said.

But Kimura said that even a $200 bill didn't phase him.

"Considering the phone calls I make, it's pretty cheap."

Local high schools ready if UI toughens entrance policy

By Shawn Plank
Staff Writer

Guidance counselors from several Iowa high schools said Monday their schools are ready if the UI implements tougher admission standards as proposed last week.

The recommended tougher standards, announced last Thursday by UI Vice President for Academic Affairs Richard Remington, calls for prospective UI students to take two years of a foreign language in high school and one year at the UI.

The plan also would require incoming freshmen to take basic subjects in high school, including four years of English, three to four years of mathematics, three years of social sciences or humanities and three years of science, including either physics or chemistry.

While counselors agreed the requirements would help prepare students for college, Jim Boland, guidance counselor at North Scott High School in Eldridge, Iowa, said students who follow the regimented list of classes may lose out on getting a liberal education.

"MANY TIMES IN HIGH SCHOOL a student is busy getting ready for college and didn't have the chance to explore in high school," he said.

The tougher admission standards, he added, are part of a "back to basics" movement happening nationwide.

Five years ago students at North Scott had more freedom because they had an open campus and were able to make more decisions about their education, Boland said.

"Now they have to have parent permission to add and drop (classes) and the campus is totally closed," he said.

Counselors contacted by The Daily Iowan said although their schools don't require students to study foreign languages, they encourage enrollment in the courses.

"We've preached that because of the population of Hispanic people," Wapello High School guidance counselor Ed Dooley, said.

WAPELLO, A HIGH SCHOOL of about 200 students in southeast Iowa, offers four years of Spanish, but Dooley said most students choose to enroll for just two years.

Boland, however, said the popularity of foreign language programs at North Scott is growing.

"We have seen a tremendous increase in the last two years," he said.

According to Boland, the programs are enjoying new popularity because they concentrate less on memorization and more on historical and cultural aspects of the languages studied.

Although counselors said their current graduation requirements fall just short of the UI's proposed tougher standards, they recommend college-bound students carry more demanding class loads. Some schools even offer an additional diploma for college-bound students.

UI Student Senate officials announced Monday that UI phone directory sales have reached record levels this year.

About 10,000 directories have already been sold, generating more than $29,000 in revenue. The sales mean extra money to the senate, which annually organizes the sale and distribution of the directories.

Senate President Joe Hansen said that because legal services cost the senate $20,000 annually, the remainder of the profits will pad the senate's supplemental income budget, which helps fund student services and organizations.

Hansen said receipts may total $35,000 — roughly $15,000 more than has ever been raised through directory sales — if the books sell well in residence halls.

SENATE VICE PRESIDENT Staci Rhine said the senate is working in cooperation with the UI Associated Residence Halls to get more of the books in the hands of students.

"We expect to sell quite a few more," she said.

Rhine said she believes this will increase student awareness that the book is available.

"A lot of students don't know about them," she said.

"Everybody wants one,"

"Everybody wants one," says UI Student Senate President Joe Hansen of the new UI phone directories, which have sold in record numbers this year.

Hansen said of the books, which are sold for $2.50 at the IMU Bookstore, the Collegiate Associations Council Book Co-op and Iowa Book and Supply, 8 S. Clinton St.

"That's a big boost in the arm for our student organizations," Hansen said, estimating that an additional $10,000 will be available for student organizations because of the sales.

A streamlined sales system, aided by the use of a computer and good organization by those involved led to the record sales, Hansen said, adding that he hopes future fund-raising projects can be equally successful.

"We have increased the money we have for ourselves," he said. "It's a good way for student senate to increase the amount of money for student organizations."

Survey asks parents how students cope

By Monica Seigel
Special to The Daily Iowan

Homesickness and roommate quarrels are the most common problems UI freshmen cope with, UI officials said Monday following a three-week study conducted this month.

For the ninth consecutive year, the UI Parents Association and UI Student Services have worked together in an annual program to contact parents of UI freshmen.

UI Vice President for Student Services Philip Hubbard said the Parent Calling Project serves a two-fold purpose.

"It helps us to develop relations with the parents, and it helps the UI find out what kind of services students need," Hubbard said.

UI Parents Association Secretary Mary New said a ten-student staff worked to contact the parents of every UI freshman and transfer student.

USING A STANDARD script, the callers simply asked parents how they felt things were going for their child.

The 1977 UI study pointed out that prospective students and their parents perceived the UI as a "large, impersonal institution where there was less concern for students than at other institutions."

The Parent Calling Project was viewed as a means of reinforcing the concept of the UI's caring attitude toward parents with neutral or negative feelings about the UI.

About 80 percent of the parents replied that everything is fine, New said, but some said their children were dealing with homesickness, roommate problems and similar situations.

If a problem was indicated, the information was sent to the office of Student Services.

UI SOPHOMORE Molly Sillman, who worked on the project for one week, said a lot of parents indicated little concern toward their sons and daughters.

"A lot of the parents were indifferent," Sillman said. "Maybe one or two out of 10 parents I called even seemed to be glad that somebody was asking about their kids."

Sillman said that some of the parents hadn't yet heard from their children, so they didn't have much to say. Others who knew of problems their child encountered wanted advice from the callers, who were to refrain from advising.

"That part of it was very frustrating," Sillman said.

Sillman also said many freshmen probably don't tell their parents about problems they might have.

This year's project won a gold medal from the Council for Advancement and Support of Education, New said. She added that the UI is the only school conducting such a project, but noted she has received many requests for information on the project from other schools interested in doing the same thing.

Offensive behavior

When is a textbook not a textbook? When it is a tool for indoctrinating schoolchildren with the views of secular humanism, pacifism, supernaturalism and sex role reversal.

At least that's how seven Greenville, Tenn., families saw the texts used in the local school system, and they went to court to protect their children.

The parents protested mainly the use of a Holt, Rinehart & Winston basic reading series that they claim offended their fundamentalist Christian beliefs. Federal District Judge Thomas Hull agreed, and suggested the children in question be allowed to skip reading classes and learn those skills at home.

The lawyers for the Greenville school board have pledged to appeal the decision to the Supreme Court if necessary. In view of the questionable lower court ruling, their doing so would be a public service.

The basis of the parents' complaint is that the texts promote "secular humanism" — which they define as a human-centered rather than God-centered view of the world — and thereby offend their religious beliefs. They may well do that, but the beliefs of these parents are so extreme that virtually no textbook or subject matter would be inoffensive to them.

For instance, the plaintiffs found books such as The Diary of Anne Frank offensive because they promote tolerance of all religious viewpoints. That freedom of religious belief is one of the foundations upon which this country's system of government was founded does not bother these people — as far as anyone knows, it may offend them even more. That freedom of religious belief is the concept that made their suit possible apparently has not occurred to them.

The plaintiffs also found the depiction of women in roles such as doctor or engineer rather than homemaker offensive because it promotes male-female role reversal. Never mind that 51.8 percent of American women over 16 work for a wage rather than stay at home and tend the kids. Reality, apparently, also offends the fundamentalists.

Not only are some of the "offensive" views cited by the plaintiffs questionable, the decision reached by the judge is a threat to the public school system. Hull tried to limit the range of his decision by saying it applies only to the plaintiffs and subject in question. However, the plaintiffs' chief attorney views the decision as permission for parents to "opt" their children out of any offensive course or activity — such as sex education or the singing of non-religious holiday songs.

Such latitude would either mean a new cafeteria-style school system, with students opting in and out of classes in a hit-or-miss fashion, or a new low in the quality of curricula. As Timothy Dyk, an attorney for the Greenville school board said, "... what you'll have is the formation of lowest common denominator education, that which is not objectionable to anyone."

What is objectionable here is both the basis and the result of the Greenville suit. The school board and its lawyers should be supported in their determination to fight this latest assault on the public schools.

Stay the course

Philippine Defense Minister Juan Ponce Enrile is waging a war of dissent against his superiors. Urging a tougher approach in his nation's battle with communist rebels, Enrile has been publicly criticizing what he perceives as Philippine President Corazon Aquino's weakness and inability to control the insurgency.

On Sunday, Enrile took a further step of defiance, addressing supporters of former Philippine President Ferdinand Marcos in a Manila park. To the approving chants of the crowd, Enrile suggested he may "do a Rambo" if decisive action is not taken against the rebels.

There is merit in what Enrile is saying. If a government is to function effectively, it cannot be burdened with a divisive civil war. Strong measures must be taken — preferably economic and social reforms, but military action if necessary — to end the war.

Thus, while Enrile's impatience is understandable on one level — he has been Defense Minister throughout much of the guerilla war with the rebels — he has apparently forgotten some of the most basic principles upon which the overthrow of Marcos was based.

When Aquino assumed the presidency in February, she did so with the overwhelming support of a population seeking reconciliation and healing. The Philippines had been badly wounded by 20 years of corruption under Marcos — corruption largely responsible for the communist rebellion.

More than anything else, Filipinos wanted a leader capable of returning decency and honesty to government. Aquino has begun to do just that and she deserves the support of people in her government as well as those in foreign governments.

HOW POLLS ACTUALLY WORK

Nicaragua strains under U.S. pressure

By Gordy Vernon

I RECENTLY FINISHED a two-week group tour of Nicaragua. We talked to government officials, church leaders in Managua, representatives of the opposition parties and campesinos. We went to the war zone to help with the coffee harvest. The trip left strong impressions on me. This is one of them.

We were sitting in a dilapidated wood building. The door was low and enough planks were missing from the sides to give it an open air feeling. A few church leaders from the village sat on hard wooden benches. They were middle-aged women, some wore sandals cut from old truck tires, many were missing teeth. The men had been in the fields since daybreak.

We sat in metal folding chairs, talking pigeon Spanish softly with the women, using our hands for verbs — trading banter across the circle in the strong nasal twang of Americans. The priest came in and sat in the back.

A SMALL MAN in a white shirt stepped inside. He moved gingerly around the circle, taking a seat on the bench beside me. I smiled. He grinned. His eyes danced behind the tinted lenses. His name was Ramon Alexie. His job was to run the radio transmitter which rebroadcast the transmissions coming from Ocotol. He apologized for being late. Contra destruction of the radio station in Ocotol four months before was still causing problems. The rebuilt transmitter did not always function.

"I want to tell you news today," Alexie spoke, pausing for our translator. "Mr. Reagan asks for another $30 million for the Contras." We looked nervously at each other.

A child toddled to his mother from where he had been playing at the priest's feet. She hoisted him to her lap. We turned our questions to the women, asking about religious freedom and the role of the church in the revolution. The chasm between the cardinals in Managua and the people struggling in the streets grew more pronounced as they spoke.

"Religious persecution?" the translator relayed the words of the matron after the others had spoke. "The government is the people. The church is the people. The government is persecuting the Church? That does not make sense," his tone dropped, indicating he was having to bridge some Spanish phrase, "It would be like, like torturing yourself."

ONLY ONCE DID THE priest interrupt to speak. He spoke hesitantly at first, then his words flowed quickly. His gestures stopped and he sat down. The sun baked the hard dirt floor. Alexie sat quietly through the explanations. After nearly an hour of questions the leader of our group moved to close. It was then that Alexie spoke out.

"You have been to our country," he said. His body was perched on the bench like a tight spring. "Maybe you have seen that we are not a rich people. But we have something that we did not have in the time of Somoza." The translator picked up speed to convey his words.

"Maybe you have seen our children in the streets. There are not many years between when they lay down their sticks and balls and take up AK-47s. My daughter, she can go to school now, and I teach her how to clean her gun." The interpreter rushed to keep up.

"My brothers, they eat now and if I fall sick I can get medicines." He looked at us as though we understood, though most of us clung to the clipped and broken translation. "This we did not have before the triumph." The American to my left buried her face in her hands.

"YOU ASK OF OUR revolution," he continued. "You see it in the streets. When grenades land on our roof at night, this is part of the revolution we must bear." He was pausing only for breath now. "At the daycare center when we teach the little ones to cover their heads in the bomb shelter, these are teachings of the revolution." The housewife to my left was quietly weeping.

"When my father, who is 55, comes home from the fields at night and goes to school to learn to read, this is the joy of the revolution." His gaze shifted from the barefooted mothers to us. "And we will pay the price."

"The Yankees pay in dollars," the translator paused. "We pay in blood." Alexie stared over our heads, like a blind man listening for the call of a returning bird.

"When you go home you will talk to people," the words came rapidfire and wrung of expression. "Tell them what you see here." The translator's eyes riveted on the little man. Mothers stood mute behind the circle of chairs, cradling children to their hips.

My mind reeled that they still held faith in the American people. And then I realized faith was all they had.

The translator was straining, translating bits and pieces of words that flowed by in torrents. Words poured from Alexie, words that were lost on us. Nervous American heads looked at their watches and then to the floor.

I remembered Alexie coming into the meeting with the news that Reagan had asked for another $30 million for the Contras. He sat there on a dirty wooden bench, speaking words that none of us absorbed.

The translator held up his palms. He could not keep up. And when we rose to leave he was still speaking, gesturing dramatically, eyes on fire behind the tinted lenses.

It was only later that I learned Alexie was wrong. It was $100 million President Ronald Reagan had asked for the Contras.

Important election

To the Editor:

We have discovered that many of our friends and colleagues in the UI community do not appreciate the importance of the Johnson County Board of Supervisors election next week. People seem to have the idea that this election is relevant only to people in rural areas. Nothing could be further from the truth.

The supervisors are responsible for decisions that affect every one of us — most notably, decisions on social programs. Therefore, it is important that you know the records of the candidates so you can vote for the ones most likely to make wise decisions.

We hope you will pay special attention to the record of Bob Burns because he could be an extremely positive force on the board. His record of service in the state legislature as well as on the board makes clear that he will work hard and effectively for the interests of staff members, faculty and students in this university.

Real honors

To the Editor:

It was interesting to see the report that women have been a small majority of the UI Honors Program students in the last few years (The Daily Iowan, Oct. 21).

But I was dismayed by the suggestion made in that article that women may enter the honors program at a greater rate than men because women's parents see it as a "safe shelter," an interpretation that discounts women's real academic accomplishments. In this context it is important to point out that over the course of the past 10 years (and perhaps longer) women have also tended to form a majority of the members of Phi Beta Kappa, both at the UI and nationally.

Clarification

To the Editor:

There are ... things I would like to ... clarify about the news story "UI students express distress about foreign TAs' English" (The Daily Iowan Oct. 15).

My opinion, when asked on the phone, was that foreign TAs should accept some training for their speaking and teaching skills rather than taking a test, because a test could not really measure TAs' ability. For example, some people get nervous while taking a test, thus they might perform much better in the classroom situation than they would on the test. If, after being trained, the TA still could not be understood, then they should be replaced.

Proposals

To the Editor:

Concerning The Daily Iowan's representation of the birth control issue in the Associated Residence Halls meeting on Oct. 20:

The proposal discussed was not a plan to dispense birth control devices to residence hall students, but a proposal to set guidelines to research the possibilities of education programs and possibly making birth control easier to obtain, not necessarily in the halls proper, and raising student awareness.

Secondly, the policy was not brought upon by the "Burge Controversy." The topic of installing condom machines was brought up in the Oct. 6 meeting of ARH.

Residence Hall Life Committee was given the task to research the issue and present a proposal of action at a later date. The proposal of guidelines for ARH to follow was drafted after the Oct. 13 meeting and what the DI reporter heard on Oct. 20 was the discussion and amending of the proposal.

The policy is:

- ARH, the recognized body that represents the views and interests of the residence hall students, wishes to promote a safer and healthier environment for residence hall students.

- ARH has recognized the existence of sexual activity in the residence halls.
- ARH wishes to encourage responsible sex if individuals choose to engage in such activity. This includes prevention of unwanted pregnancies and prevention of the spread of communicable disease.
- ARH will concentrate on information acquisition to aid individuals in making an informed decision.

ARH's goal will include any, or all, but not limited to the following: student awareness, educational programming, availability of birth control.

ARH representative

ACLU seeks elimination of homosexual marriage ban

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The American Civil Liberties Union, under a new formal policy statement, is seeking elimination of legal barriers to homosexual and lesbian marriages, officials of the group said Monday.

"This new statement extends the general anti-discrimination principle of existing policy and specifies ACLU support for changing laws of marriage," said Nan D. Hunter, director of the ACLU Lesbian and Gay Rights Project.

The ACLU long has been on record opposing discrimination based on sexual orientation and against any laws prohibiting homosexual conduct.

"As far as I know, the ACLU is the first mainstream civil rights group to take this stand," Hunter said. "I hope others follow suit."

ACCORDING to the new policy statement, recognition of homosexual and lesbian marriages and recognition of economic benefits for "life partners" similar to those enjoyed by a spouse in a heterosexual marriage is "imperative for the complete legal equality of lesbians and gay men."

The benefits covered by the policy include employee fringe benefits, insurance coverage, income tax benefits and visitation and next-of-kin rights.

Hunter said the ACLU has been litigating benefits cases involving homosexuals for a number of years and is currently active in several cases, including that of a bisexual man denied certification as an adoptive parent and that of a homosexual "life partner" seeking a lease to stay in the apartment he shared with his lover.

It also is involved in a Massachusetts foster care case that challenges the state's policy of giving preference to "traditional" married couples in placing children in foster care homes.

Election

percent are undecided.

Lipsky, a Cedar Rapids attorney and former Iowa representative, earned votes from 72 percent of the Republicans and 7 percent of the Democrats polled.

Sixty-five percent of the Democrats surveyed backed Zimmerman. She also garnered the support of 3 percent of the Republican voters.

The all-important, no-party voters remain largely undecided in the lieutenant governor's race. Nineteen percent of the independent voters said they would support Zimmerman if the elections were held today, 13 percent would support Lipsky and 7 percent would support Arbuckle.

Sixty-one percent of the no-party voters are still undecided in this race.

Iowa gubernatorial race — Democrat Lowell Junkins, Republican Terry Branstad or Undecided? and "Who would you vote for as lieutenant governor — Democrat JoAnn Zimmerman, Republican Joan Lipsky, independent Dean Arbuckle or Undecided?"

The Daily Iowan poll is based upon interviews with 1,576 registered voters in Iowa City, Coralville and North Liberty, Iowa. Households contacted through the survey were randomly selected by computer to eliminate interviewers' biases.

Percentages based upon the poll sample are subject to a margin of error of 4.5 percentage points.

Replication of this poll without credit to The Daily Iowan is prohibited.

Take A Shortcut To Work—With AppleWorks.

We'd like to suggest a shortcut for anyone who has ever had to balance the books, polish a speech, or update a mailing list: AppleWorks™, the best-selling Apple® II software program that runs on every member of the Apple II family.

And it's no wonder it can save you time. AppleWorks is one complete program that integrates the three most popular applications—word processing, spreadsheet and data base—all on one single disk. So you can say so long to swapping disks.

Take word processing, for example. AppleWorks lets you instantly create, edit and re-arrange your documents all without scissors, tape, or part-time help.

The spreadsheet application helps you juggle your investments, financial statements, or household budgets, without ever having to touch a calculator.

And the data base capability helps you organize, save, and retrieve your mailing lists, addresses, or list of valuables—in whatever form you want.

Then use AppleWorks' built-in mail merge feature to combine word processing files with lists created in your data base to personalize all your correspondence.

Sound easy? It is—when you have AppleWorks. Stop in and see for yourself.

Mounted missiles could aid deployment

WASHINGTON — The commander of the Strategic Air Command suggests mounting MX nuclear missiles on trains so they could be deployed throughout the United States during tense times, it was reported Monday.

Air Force Gen. John Chain also urged the United States to double its MX force to 100 in an interview with The New York Times at SAC headquarters in Omaha, Neb.

"I do need more missiles to do what I've been asked to do, and that is to hold the Soviet target base at risk," Chain said.

Chain noted that the Soviet Union moves its new SS-24 long-ranged missiles by rail and its SS-25 missiles by road.

The U.S. Air Force general said the 71-foot, 195,000-pound MX missile, with its 10 warheads, would easily fit on a rail car.

He said he already had spoken to officials of the Union Pacific Railroad who told him such a program could be undertaken.

Under Chain's plan, the missiles, perhaps two to a train, would be kept at military bases. "At times of increased tension, and on orders from the national command authority," Chain said, "I can taxi my train out."

Ethiopian foreign minister resigns post

UNITED NATIONS — Ethiopian Foreign Minister Goshu Wolde announced Monday he quit his post in protest of his government's policies, charging they have led his people into "misery and destruction."

Wolde, who led his country's delegation to the 41st session of the U.N. General Assembly, said he has informed Ethiopian leader Haile Mariam Mengistu of his resignation.

"I have recently watched, with helplessness, as my country slipped further and further into authoritarianism and absolute dictatorship, with the inevitable consequences of intolerance and repression," Wolde said in a statement.

Wolde, 39, accused the Marxist Ethiopian government of losing touch with reality, going against the "genuine aspirations" and being "insensitive to the plight" of Ethiopians.

Davis criticizes snub by Branstad

DES MOINES — Gov. Terry Branstad is "trying to have his cake and eat it too" by accepting $10,000 from Vice President George Bush's political action committee but refusing to appear with the vice president during his appearance in Iowa, Democratic Party Chairman Arthur Davis charged Monday.

"Terry Branstad is a two-faced politician," Davis said. "He is willing to accept the financial help of George Bush, but he does not have the courage to stand up in public with a member of the Reagan-Bush duo."

Branstad has said he will not accompany Bush on his visit to Cedar Rapids today because of a previously scheduled fundraiser in Ida Grove, Iowa.

"Terry Branstad should either cancel his event in Ida Grove to appear with the second-highest ranking leader of his party, or he should tell George Bush 'no thanks' the next time the vice president tries to pass a contribution off to him," Davis said.

Former Iowa tax collector sentenced

DES MOINES — A former state tax collector accused of embezzling more than $70,000 in state sales tax receipts was sentenced Monday to five years in prison.

Robert Schreiber, 56, was sentenced in Polk County District Court and ordered to make restitution totaling more than $42,000.

A state audit released last week accused Schreiber of pocketing at least $70,000 since 1979, but the report said the total could have been in excess of $200,000.

Schreiber pleaded guilty to taking about $1,700. He asked for probation, but District Judge Jack Levin said the former state revenue agent violated the public's trust. He was being held Monday in the Polk County Jail.

Playboy names new managing editor

CHICAGO — Jonathan Black, a former Gentlemen's Quarterly editor, Monday was named managing editor of Playboy Magazine.

Black, 43, has also worked for United Magazine, New Times, TV-Cable Week, Village Voice, The New Yorker, Oui, Saturday Review, Mademoiselle and the Sunday New York Times Magazine.

As managing editor, Black will coordinate editorial and feature copy as well as handle writing and assignment responsibilities, said Arthur Kretschmer, Playboy's editorial director and associate publisher.

FAA stiffens rules for private planes

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Federal Aviation Administration, in a drive to halt the threat of midair collisions, said Monday it will seek to improve safety and air traffic flow around the nation's 23 busiest airports by requiring private planes to carry more sophisticated electronic equipment.

FAA Administrator Donald Engen said at a news conference he approved wide-ranging recommendations made by a government task force during an investigation into terminal-controlled areas. The areas are tightly controlled blocks of airspace around major metropolitan regions.

Engen said the FAA will propose that all aircraft operating in these busy airspaces be equipped with altitude-encoding transponders. Under the current system, the altitude transponder is required in only nine of the busiest terminal-controlled areas.

"The recommendations are designed to standardize and simplify both the boundaries and procedures used within the terminal-controlled areas," Engen said. "These changes, in turn, will increase safety by allowing an improved air traffic environment."

The task force recommendations include a minimum 60-day license suspension for any pilot violating terminal-controlled area boundaries.

The FAA also will embark on an intensive educational campaign to acquaint all pilots with the rules and equipment requirements.

The terminal-controlled areas are at the following airports: Atlanta; Boston; Chicago; Dallas; Los Angeles; Miami; New York; San Francisco; Washington; Cleveland; Denver; Detroit; Honolulu; Houston; Kansas City, Mo.; Las Vegas, Nev.; Minneapolis; New Orleans; Philadelphia; Pittsburgh; Seattle; St. Louis and San Diego.

Military training for Contras set in U.S.

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The administration, faced with refusals by four Central American countries to train Nicaraguan rebels, is planning to teach military tactics to Contras in the United States, officials said Monday.

Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger said he knew nothing about the plan, but the officials said planning for U.S. training of Contras has been under way since early summer.

No specific American military installations have been chosen as training sites, said the officials, who indicated the training would be confined to unit commanders.

"A lot of planning has been done and, obviously, training is part of it," said an administration official. "People don't sit on their hands." Training in the United States is an option and "very likely," another official said.

The officials, who spoke only on condition they not be identified, declined to go into details about where the Contras may be trained, but said it was "logical" to assume that training would be part of the $100 million aid package for the Contras.

"The administration acknowledged that training will be part of the aid," one official said. "Logically, of course, there was planning of how you were going to do this. And so there has been planning."

Costa Rica, El Salvador, Honduras and Panama have said publicly they will not agree to train the Contras, some out of fear Nicaragua would retaliate militarily. All but Panama border Nicaragua.

Weinberger, in a brief interview, said he had no knowledge of a decision to train Contras in the United States. But he said any move in that direction should not come as a surprise since the U.S. military has trained Salvadoran, Honduran and other troops at bases on U.S. soil at the request of their countries.

NASA confident about new booster design

HUNTSVILLE, Ala. (UPI) — NASA has settled on a new design for the shuttle's faulty booster fuel joints, and an agency official said Monday he is "quite confident" tests will clear the way for the first post-Challenger launch in February 1988.

But to be on the safe side, the space agency may elect to conduct two additional full-scale test firings of the 14-story boosters.

John Thomas, manager of the fuel-segment, joint-redesign project at the Marshall Space Flight Center, said results of tests so far make him optimistic about making the Feb. 18, 1988, target date for resuming shuttle flights.

"Of course, no one knows what the test program might produce," he said, "although we're quite confident . . . that the design we have right now is, in fact, the design we're going to fly."

Frozen-embryo birth reported successful

WALNUT CREEK, Calif. (UPI) — The birth of the nation's second baby from the frozen-embryo technique, 6-pound, 15-ounce, Travis Cody McCullar, means the method soon may become common across the country.

A similar birth is expected soon in Louisiana. Worldwide, a new frozen-embryo delivery now occurs about every month, according to Arnold Jacobson, founder of the in-vitro fertilization program at John Muir Hospital in Walnut Creek.

Travis was born Sunday to Bill and Tami McCullar of Tracy, Calif., after 10 hours of labor. Glenn Zorn, the embryologist who cared for the embryo in the laboratory, said, "It was a remarkably normal birth."

Sixteen eggs were collected from Tami McCullar in a laparoscopy operation, costing $5,500. The eggs were placed in plastic dishes and fertilized with the husband's sperm.

The success rate of standard implantations is 22 percent. With the frozen-embryo method, the success rate is thought to be 40 percent.

Zorn said the problem with freezing human embryos is that they contain mostly water that freezes into destructive ice crystals.

The procedure involves removal of the water, its replacement with an antifreeze such as glycerol, flash freezing to minus 320 degrees Fahrenheit, thawing at a later date in warm water and slow and careful withdrawal of the antifreeze.

Embryos from 10 couples are now in the freezer at John Muir Hospital. Jacobson predicted embryo banks will soon become as popular as sperm banks for couples unable to conceive.

UNITED NATIONS (UPI) — The United States told Secretary-General Perez de Cuellar Monday it will pay $100 million more than half its normal contribution to the world organization's budget for 1986, spokesman said.

U.S. Ambassador Vernon Riffe handed Perez de Cuellar a letter from Secretary of State George Shultz informing the U.N. chief executive that payment will be made in full, spokesman Francois G.

Religious peace

ASSISI, Italy (UPI) — John Paul II prayed for peace with more than 150 religious leaders from around the world Monday, but some guerrillas in many areas ignored the pontiff's call for a 24-hour universal truce.

The pope called for a warfare, insurgency and terrorism to coincide with unprecedented meetings of 150 religious leaders invited to the medieval town of Assisi — where St. Francis preached 700 years ago — nine hours of prayer for peace.

The interdenominational prayer was urged by the pope to meet "the dramatic challenge of our age: true peace or catastrophic war."

The religious leaders, including Mother Teresa of Calcutta, the Dalai Lama, and Pretty-Boy, a Crow from Montana who calls himself "the spirit of the war," were invited to watch over the pope's prayers.

President Ronald Reagan of some 60 leaders sent messages to the pope, saying, "I extend to you heartfelt support and my personal commitment to the cause of peace."

The pope told the media, "We hope that arms have been laid silent, that attacks have ceased. This would be a significant result of the prayer's efficacy."

United States cuts U.N. payment in half

UNITED NATIONS (UPI) — The United States told U.N. Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar Monday it will pay $100 million — less than half its normal assessment — to the world organization's budget for 1986, a U.N. spokesman said.

U.S. Ambassador Vernon Walters handed Perez de Cuellar a letter from Secretary of State George Shultz informing the U.N. chief executive the payment will be made Nov. 15, spokesman Francois Giuliani said. Giuliani said the letter pledged the U.S. administration will ask Congress for additional funds but mentioned no specific sum.

The United Nations assessed the United States $210 million toward its 1986 budget of just more than $800 million. The U.S. assessment represents 25 percent of the U.N. administrative budget and is the largest single contribution by any of the 159 member states.

THERE WAS NO immediate comment by U.N. officials on what is clearly bad news for the financially strapped United Nations. Giuliani said Shultz's letter was under study.

Congress lowered the United States' 25 percent share to the U.N. budget to 20 percent as of last Oct. 1. The U.S. contribution has been further reduced by the Gramm-Rudman Balanced Budget Law.

The argument behind Congress's reduction was that the United Nations should institute budgetary weighted voting on budgetary matters, giving the 25 states that contribute most of the U.N. budget a bigger say.

U.N. officials said the proposal would require the unlikely revision of the organization's charter and its main principle of establishing equality among member states by granting each member one vote.

de Cuellar called the money crisis "of such magnitude as to have profound implications for the viability of the organization."

Anticipating the U.S. reduction and adjusting to late payments by several countries, Perez de Cuellar has put austerity measures into effect. They include a freeze on salary raises and hiring new personnel, drastic cuts in overtime, travel and conferences, and a ban on outside consultants.

In addition, on the initiative of Japan, a committee of 18 governmental experts developed recommendations to make the United Nations more efficient and less costly.

The main recommendation was cutting 15 percent of the U.N. Secretariat staff of nearly 7,000 in New York. The 18 "wise men," as they became known, urged that 25 percent of the 55 undersecretaries-general and assistant secretaries-general be fired.

Religious leaders' peace plea ignored

ASSISI, Italy (UPI) — Pope John Paul II prayed for world peace with more than 150 religious leaders from around the world Monday, but soldiers and guerrillas in many countries ignored the pontiff's plea for a 24-hour universal truce.

The pope called for a halt to warfare, insurgency and terrorism to coincide with an unprecedented meeting with 150 religious leaders he invited to the medieval town of Assisi — where St. Francis preached 700 years ago — for nine hours of prayer for world peace.

The interdenominational convocation was urged by the pope to meet "the dramatic challenge of our age: true peace or catastrophic war."

The religious leaders from a dozen faiths ranged from Mother Teresa of Calcutta, to the Dalai Lama, to John Prety-On-Top, a Crow Indian from Montana who called on spirits to watch over participants.

President Ronald Reagan, one of some 60 leaders sending messages to the pope, said in a telegram, "I extend to you my heartfelt support and reiterate my personal commitment to the cause of peace."

EEC vetos censure of Syria

LUXEMBOURG (UPI) — Britain ran into strong opposition Monday from some European Economic Community partners over its proposal for a joint condemnation of Syria for alleged involvement in terrorism.

British Foreign Secretary Sir Geoffrey Howe produced documents allegedly showing Syrian diplomats were involved in a planned bomb attack on an Israeli El Al jumbo jet in London earlier this year, officials said.

A British spokesman said Howe told his colleagues: "The time for words is now over. We are looking for substance, a collective signal" to Syria of European Community condemnation.

But Theodoros Pangalos, Greek deputy foreign minister for European affairs, told his colleagues Greece cannot accept a blanket condemnation of Syria.

"We cannot accept that the whole of the Syrian government is engaged in terrorism. We should not blame the whole of Syria for what a couple of individuals may have done," he said.

Other delegations, while supporting a strong stand against terrorism, argued it would be a mistake to blow up all bridges with Syria.

"Syria holds a key position in the Middle East," Belgian Foreign Minister Leo Tindemans said.

The fighting occurred at refugee camps in the south, and there was sporadic shooting across Beirut's Green Line that divides the Christian and Moslem sectors.

Elsewhere in the Middle East, Iran and Iraq, which have been at war for six years, ignored the truce call. Iraqi planes flew over Iran, and Iran claimed it shot one of them down.

Treasurer candidates cite their merits

By Steve Reed
Special to The Daily Iowan

Republican Jack Nystrom is challenging Democratic incumbent Michael Fitzgerald for the Iowa state treasurer seat Nov. 4.

Iowa's state treasurer serves a four-year term and is a member of the State Appeal Board, Peace Officer's Retirement Board, Records Management Commission, Iowa Family Farm Development Authority Board, the Iowa Centennial Memorial Foundation and the State Executive Council.

The treasurer is responsible for all receipts and disbursements of state funds and is in charge of the investment and custody of Iowa's idle funds, averaging $350 million daily.

Monthly, the treasurer helps set interest rates to be paid on public funds held in depositories and helps set guidelines and rates for the debt obligation of public bodies in Iowa.

FITZGERALD has served as treasurer since 1982. During that term he created the

Election '86

Great Iowa Treasure Hunt program to help Iowans recover lost or forgotten assets. Fitzgerald also began a program that allows financial institutions to compete for state deposits.

According to Fitzgerald, safety of funds is the top priority of the treasurer and although 20 Iowa banks have been forced to shut down during his term, not one cent has been lost.

If re-elected, Fitzgerald said some of his goals are to create a treasure hunt program for the federal government to release some of the estimated $5 billion of citizens' money being held, and to employ the accounting principles currently used in counties at a state level.

Fitzgerald was born in Marshalltown, Iowa, in 1951. He graduated from the UI in 1974 with a bachelor's degree in business administration.

FITZGERALD WORKED eight years as a marketing analyst for the Massey Ferguson Co. in Des Moines before being elected treasurer.

Fitzgerald said he has made improvements in the state treasury since taking office. "It is a professional office and I think we have really improved it by bringing in CPAs and computerizing the state treasury," he said.

Nystrom was first elected to the Iowa House of Representatives in 1970 and he was elected to the Iowa Senate two years later. He is serving his fourth term.

Nystrom is the ranking member of the Senate State Government Committee and Senate Education Appropriations Subcommittee.

"I supplied the vote that provided for the University of Iowa's new law school," he said. NYSTROM HAS ALSO been the chairman for the Iowa Public Employers' Retirement System and for 12 years has written for the system.

Aside from his senatorial duties, Nystrom is a member of the Iowa Department of Economic Development, which he said tries to attract new businesses to Iowa as well as enhance conditions for businesses already in Iowa.

Nystrom, nominated to run for treasurer at the June Republican convention, said his primary goal is to make the treasurer's office more active in Iowa's economic development.

Nystrom was born in Boone, Iowa, in 1933. He attended Boone High School and graduated from Boone Junior College in 1953.

After graduating, Nystrom began his association with the Republican Party by serving as a district Young Republican Chairman. He later served as a member of the Republican State Central Committee.

Neuhauser, Ketchmark offer alternatives

By Christian Peters
Freelance Writer

Candidates for state representative from the 46th District, Democrat Mary Neuhauser and Republican Mike Ketchmark, offer distinct alternatives to voters. The pair will debate tonight at 8 in the Currier Residence Hall South Dining Room.

Neuhauser, 52, an attorney and 23-year resident of Iowa City, has nine years of service on the Iowa City Council, including four years as Iowa City mayor and a long record of involvement in community organizations.

Ketchmark, 21, is a UI senior who has had experience in a number of UI student organizations. Ketchmark was UI Student Senate treasurer and chairman of the Mandatory Student Fee Committee in particular. Ketchmark said he is an active student who has recently had to endure the financial struggle of putting himself through school.

KETCHMARK, while pointing out that he is not a single-issue candidate and that he is particularly interested in issues such as tort liability reform and the undue influence of political action committees on government, stressed that he sees his primary role, if elects, as an advocate for higher education in Iowa.

"One thing I noticed working in student government was that there is really no sympathetic ear to student needs on the state level. I want to work to change their attitude toward higher education," Ketchmark said.

Some specific proposals Ketchmark makes include establishing a "friends of higher education" organization that would "bring together members of government, the business community and representatives of the state universities to specifically address and lobby for the needs of higher education."

He also plans to form a parents' lobbying network to advocate a tuition freeze and to generate more revenue for education on all levels through the establishment of a state luxury tax on certain purchases that are more than $100 and the exclusive designation of Iowa Lottery revenues for education appropriations.

IF ELECTED, Neuhauser said her first actions would be to work to see that state support for emergency services, such as those for child abuse investigation, remain adequate.

"There have actually been cuts in some of these services over the past few years. I think that before you balance the budget you have to see that those essential services are provided," she said.

Neuhauser is also especially interested in education reform. On the primary and secondary levels, she advocates the pooling of resources, the merging of smaller school districts and the involvement of teachers in establishing and maintaining higher teaching standards, as well as the provision of higher salaries and the establishment of career ladders to reward teachers.

In regard to higher education, Neuhauser, though opposed to such measures as a tuition freeze, said she feels that greater appropriations should be made to improve faculty salaries, as well as to support university libraries and research. She also emphasizes her commitment to maintain reasonable tuition rates.

"I strongly believe that the main purpose of state universities is to provide an education for anyone who is qualified," Neuhauser said.

WHILE KETCHMARK acknowledges that he cannot compete with Neuhauser in terms of specific accomplishments or length of experience in government, he asserts that the contest should not be based on a comparison of resumes.

"What's really important is who's going to have the tenacity and determination, who's going to work the hardest to get the job done. I've been out working 10 hours a day. I've been knocking on doors and talking to individual people. I don't know that my opponent's been doing anything like that," he said.

Ketchmark said his age (21 is the minimum age to be eligible to serve in the House) is merely an indication that he is more in touch with the current needs of the student community.

Neuhauser agrees that age in itself is not important, but said experience matters a lot.

"I think showing that you can actually get things done is very important," she said, pointing to her role in rebuilding downtown Iowa City, establishing the Senior Center and providing low-income housing and housing for the elderly.

Mets rally for World Series crown

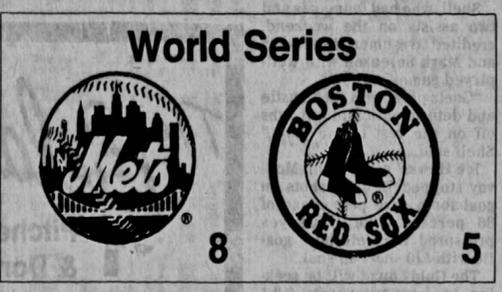

NEW YORK (UPI)—The New York Mets, completing an October of fabulous comebacks, rallied behind Ray Knight's tie-breaking homer in the seventh inning Monday night for an 8-5 victory over the Boston Red Sox and their first World Series title in 17 years.

In winning the World Series four games to three, the Mets celebrated their silver anniversary season by solidifying their place as one of the great teams in baseball history.

The victory was the 116th for the Mets this year. Only the 1906 Chicago Cubs, who won 118, won more — and they did not win the World Series that year.

The Mets' final victory typified a season in which they rallied from behind 39 times to win, but they had to prove their mettle as never before in October.

NEW YORK SURGED back to win the National League championship in 16 innings against Houston. They then overcame Boston leads of two games to none and three games to two to capture the World Series.

With two out and two strikes on Marty Barrett, a smoke bomb was tossed on the Shea Stadium field. But a contingent of mounted police prevented further interference.

After Barrett struck out to end they drank champagne and led the crowd in a chorus of cheers.

TRAILING BY THREE runs Monday night and held to only one hit by nemesis Bruce Hurst, the Mets scored three times in the sixth to tie the score. They took a 6-3 lead in the seventh with another three-run bulge against losing reliever Calvin Schiraldi.

The Red Sox, however, did not go quietly. Led by Dwight Evans, who set a Boston Series record with nine RBI, the Red Sox stormed back with two runs in the eighth and it took a masterful relief effort by Jesse Orosco to protect the victory.

Orosco retired three batters in a row with the tying run on second base in the eighth to save the victory for Roger McDowell. Orosco even contributed with his bat, collecting an RBI single as the Mets scored two more runs in the eighth to wrap up their first championship since 1969.

Boston's Dwight Evans drills a home run in the second inning of Game 7. The Mets defeated the Red Sox 8-5 to win the World Championship.

Horton anxious for Iowa season

By Mike Trilk
 Staff Writer

No longer does the Iowa basketball program rely on a twin-tower tandem.

When Lute Olson coached the Hawkeyes, Steve Waite and Steve Krafcsin were playing the post. Then the Michael Payne and the Greg Stokes years followed. Now, under Coach Tom Davis who is about to begin his inaugural season with Iowa, Brad Lohaus and Gerry Wright patrol the middle of the Hawkeye basketball attack. But the duo of Wright and Lohaus isn't really a twin-tower type of tandem as Wright is more suited to a faster pace game.

Even so, Wright and Lohaus are both seniors and don't think that the Hawkeyes' stable will be empty at the end of the 1987 campaign. Ed Horton, a 6-foot-8 sophomore, is more than ready to do battle with anyone the Big Ten can throw at him.

"I KNOW THAT Gary and Brad only have one year left to prove that they are among the best in the country, and I know that they are going to have the first chance to go out and get the job done. But I'm always going to be there if one of them gets in trouble," Horton said. "The Big Ten is always a tough conference, and you have to be ready to go out and give it your all because that's what determines who's going to win ball games."

Iowa forward Ed Horton tosses a free throw during the Press Day activities that were held at Carver-Hawkeye Arena Oct. 14. Horton could challenge for a starting spot this season.

Davis agrees that Horton has the capabilities to become a dominating force in the Big Ten but also feels it's still down the road.

"Down the road Eddie has the potential to become one of the dominating power men in the Big Ten," Davis said. "Not right away. He has a lot of work to do yet, but he's a willing worker. And he has great quickness for a man his size. He can put the ball down and really come at you."

good forward someday as well as a good post player. His outside game is where he would have to do some work. But our big concern is that he averaged a foul every four minutes last year and that adds up to only half the ball game. If he is going to become the power man he is capable of becoming, he is going to stay out of foul trouble," Davis added.

So how does Horton feel about playing for a new coach?

"HE COULD REALLY be a

Michigan nips Lions for No. 2

NEW YORK (UPI) — Penn State, coming off a rout of then-No. 2 Alabama, was edged by one point by Michigan for the No. 2 ranking in the nation Monday in voting by the UPI Coaches Board.

Michigan, which earned one first-place vote and 668 points, jumped from No. 4 to No. 2. Penn State, a 23-3 victor over Alabama, received two No. 1 votes and also climbed two spots to reach No. 3 with 667 points.

Both teams remained well behind Miami, which held on to the No. 1 ranking for the fourth straight week. The Hurricanes, 7-0 after an off week, received 47 of 50 first-place votes to earn 745 of a possible 750 points.

Oklahoma and Auburn both moved up two spots to No. 4 and No. 5, respectively, as losses by Alabama and then-No. 3 Nebraska altered the look of the top five.

The rest of the top 10 is Washington at No. 6, Arizona State at No. 7, Alabama at No. 8, Nebraska at No. 9 and Texas A&M at No. 10.

THE CRIMSON TIDE and Cornhuskers each fell six positions. Colorado stunned the Cornhuskers 20-10.

The remainder of the Top 20 was: No. 11 Louisiana State, No. 12 Iowa, No. 13 Arkansas, No. 14 Arizona, No. 15 UCLA, No. 16 North Carolina State, co-Nos. 17 Ohio State and Baylor and co-Nos. 19 Southern California and Florida State.

The Nittany Lions, 7-0, proved they were contenders and not pretenders with a soft schedule by handing Alabama its worst defeat in a decade and holding the Southeastern Conference's leading running attack to 44 yards.

"I really thought we were better than Alabama coming down here," Penn State Coach Joe Paterno said. "I felt we might be a little bit stronger and probably just as quick in a lot of key spots. We have been looking forward to this game for a long time."

WITH THE ROUT, the Nittany Lions earned the respect of both the Board of Coaches and the Crimson Tide.

"Penn State has toyed around with everybody they've played, just like they toyed with us," Alabama offensive line Coach Jimmy Fuller said. "That's a much better Penn State team than we've played the last couple of years."

Miami faces its last tough test against Florida State Saturday before the Jan. 1 bowl games. The Seminoles were last ranked on Sept. 22.

"Of course, it's nice to be back in the top 20 but when you're playing the No. 1 team in the country, you can't be too concerned about rankings," Seminole Coach Bobby Bowden said. "We could find ourselves back out of there real quick"

Gambling is fact of life at UI

When most people think of a bookie, the image of a shady character who hangs out in sleazy bars, wears a trench coat and is flanked by bodyguards on either side is conjured up. But a person fitting this description would stick out like a sore thumb on a college campus.

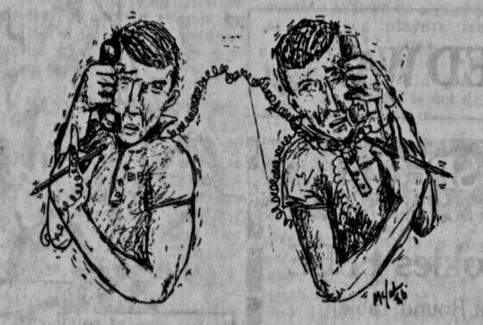

Bookies are ordinary, run-of-the-mill students.

Al, an Iowa junior who did not want to be identified, retired from bookmaking because of the stress involved.

"I got out of it. Nerves, time ... it took me two hours a night, setting up a schedule, charts ... the phone would ring ... the hook, 11:30 a.m. to 1 p.m. on Saturdays and Sundays. I think my roommates were a little pissed. I can't blame them," Al said.

AL GOT STARTED in bookmaking for the obvious reason — money.

"You know how much money is involved?" Al questioned. He said he was dealing with

This is the first of a three-part series on the causes and effects of gambling in Iowa City and around the United States.

He has a strong opinion about the status of sports today. "Bookies, betting services are all tied together with the underground. I do believe sports are fixed when players call timeout with seven seconds to go, up by eight, then score a touchdown or foul with two seconds left."

Al says if he were still running the book and he knew a big-time athlete, he would not hesitate to contact him.

WHY DID AL become a bookie and not just someone who places bets? "Bettors never win. The bookie, whoever's the house, wins ... The only position I'm in is to win," Al said.

Al started slowly. "I kept it to a family, let's say, a group of friends ... It was very small. The guys around me, 10, 15 (of them) here and there."

These "guys" that hung around him soon became his clients. They included various members of Iowa sports teams: two tennis players, two golfers, two baseball players, along with four men in fraternities other than his own. As Al's business grew, he began to use a bookie in Chicago to back him financially.

Sometimes, when a person loses a bet, he refuses to pay. Again, the classic scene of a bookie is conjured up, and it may not be far from the consequences that happen on a college campus, even in Iowa City.

"I was screwed last year for a $100. I do have friends, for a small fee, who will throw a brick through a window. I did it once last year," Al said.

RICK IS NOT a bookie. He's a gambler. The Minnesota senior used to play sports.

Ex-Hawkeye Banks will join CBA team

By Steve Williams
 Staff Writer

Former Iowa basketball player Andre Banks said he plans to play in the Continental Basketball Association this year in an effort to make his way back to the NBA.

Banks, a 6-foot-4 guard from Chicago, said he will report to training camp next month with the Rockford (Ill.) Lightning.

The Lightning are in the process of acquiring the rights to Banks from a CBA team in Pensacola, Fla., and according to Rockford General Manager Doug Logan, a deal seems to be on the horizon.

"If we had the rights to Andre, we'd sign him tomorrow," Logan said. "I saw him play in high school, and I've admired his skills for a long time."

BANKS WAS DRAFTED in the fifth round by the NBA's Houston Rockets in June but failed to make the team. He was Iowa's most valuable player a year ago with a scoring average of 10.3 points per game.

But while Banks didn't have what the Rockets were looking for, Logan is confident that his style will be an asset to the Lightning, a team which has just joined the CBA.

"We are still a long ways from having a complete team as training camp doesn't start until November 20," Logan said. "We'll be bringing 25 people in and we'll cut that down to 10."

"Andre's a good big guard, and even though he struggled during the early part of his career at Iowa, he has developed a good shot and is a good floor leader. He also plays tenacious defense and he is the kind of player that our Coach Norm Van Lier is looking for."

Fry has no news after routine practice

Iowa Coach Hayden Fry had very little to report from the practice field after Iowa's 27-20 win over Northwestern last weekend, saying it was just a routine Monday practice.

"We worked on correcting mistakes, and correcting mistakes over and over again," Fry said. "It was a typical Monday practice and a hard workout."

There is nothing new regarding injured players except for the fact that they don't seem to be decreasing in number. Quinn Early did provide a bright spot as he returned Saturday to play in his first game this season and caught a 93-yard touchdown pass from Mark Vlasic to set a new Iowa record.

Running back Rick Bayless also had an outstanding day. "He'd have to be hit over the head with a sledgehammer (to drop the ball)," Fry said after the game.

On The Line

This week the Iowa Hawkeyes host the Ohio State Buckeyes, a pivotal game for both teams. And probably a key game in this week's On The Line contest.

This week's game focus around the Big Ten, the Big Eight and the Pac Ten. It's only because Assistant Sports Editor Dan Millea felt he couldn't pick those tough ACC games. But that's OK, Dan, we understand. You just wanted to let fellow pickers Sports Editor Brad Zimanek and Staff Writer Steve Williams back into the contest.

The terrible trio possess a keen ability to pick games. Yet none of the three have had perfect weeks unlike a few of the ballots this contest is blessed with every week. It's not that the quartet minus one is stupid or something. It's just that they have been paying too much attention to baseball and the World Series.

But enough about those three who say they can't wait for spring training in April to roll around again. Now let's make a few comparisons about the two coaches who will meet each other at Kinnick Stadium Saturday — Ohio State's Earle Bruce and Iowa's Hayden Fry.

- Fry has a psychology degree and is probably pretty influential. Bruce is a fat slob and a former Cyclone Coach. Yeh!
- Fry has built a strong program at Iowa and has been to a bowl five years running. Bruce probably can't see his shoes, though he does have a knack of winning football games. The Buckeyes have finished 9-3 six straight seasons.
- Fry works well with his assistant coaches and has sev-

Iowa takes third in Nebraska Regatta

By Marc Bona
Staff Writer

Iowa sportsclubs competed on water and ice this weekend with mixed results.

The Iowa crew took third out of 12 clubs at Nebraska's Fall Regatta.

The women's open eight took top honors in its division to win the Gaylord Knapp Trophy, the first award for the club. The men's lightweight eight took second place, as did the women's open four. The men's open eight came in third.

"This is the best we've ever done. We've never gotten a trophy before," Club President Laura Kochevar said. "It's a great way to end the season. To end on a high note like this is great for us."

THE ICE HAWKS' Gold squad managed only a loss and a tie with the Galesburg Men's Club in weekend action at Peoria, Ill.

A two-goal effort from Adam Shell was lost in the shuffle as the Ice Hawks went down to defeat 7-3 Friday night. Both of Shell's goals were assisted by Dan Seliger. John Haraldsen had the other Hawkeye goal.

Galesburg scored three late goals to settle for a 5-5 tie Saturday, downing hopes for the Gold squad's first win of the season.

Ron Silverman opened the scoring for the Gold squad when he shot from inside the Galesburg zone on an assist from Shell and Mike Pugliesie. Galesburg tied the score, but Shell flipped in a wrist shot from the left face-off circle to put the Hawkeyes up 2-1. With the score tied 2-2 in the third period, the Hawkeyes scored three consecutive goals. Andy Nilles took a pass from Shell to break the tie, and Shell added a goal off a pass from

The Iowa men's tennis team came away from Madison, Wis., after having earned a victory over the Badgers in the last match of the day.

With the score tied at 4-4 in matches, it was up to the No. 1 doubles team of Martin Aguirre and Bryan Stokstad to pull out the Iowa victory over Kim Madden and Jim Schneider of Wisconsin.

The two teams were even after the first two sets, with Aguirre-Stokstad winning the first set 7-6 but losing the second 7-5. Aguirre and Stokstad were finally able to win the third and deciding set, 7-5, to give Iowa its first victory indoors at Madison since 1968.

Last year Wisconsin had the third best record in the Big Ten and defeated Iowa twice, which contributed to Iowa Coach Steve Houghton's pleasure in defeating the Badgers this year.

"THIS IS A GOOD year for us," Houghton said. "Overall it was a great team effort. Everybody contributed by winning either one or two matches."
"Aguirre, (Dave) Novak and (Jay) Maltby are all new. So we have a real young team,"

Dan Seliger to open the lead. Brad Hatley added an insurance goal when he hit the upper right mesh to give the Hawkeyes' an apparent 5-2 victory.

But Galesburg fought back as it rattled off three straight goals, the final coming with 51 seconds remaining.

Shell, who had four goals and two assists on the weekend, credited freshmen Jim Goetz and Mark Sorenson with well-played games.

"Goetz plays with such hustle and determination that it rubs off on the rest of the team," Shell said.

Ice Hawks' goalie John McEvoy stopped 72 of 84 shots on goal for a save percentage of 86 percent. The Hawkeyes pressured the Galesburg goalie with 110 shots on goal.

The Gold squad will be seeking to improve on its 0-2-1 record when they take on Loras Friday at Waterloo.

Houghton said. "They all did well for their first Big Ten competition."

Although Aguirre was on the winning side of the doubles match, he lost his No. 1 single's match to Madden 6-4, 7-5.

In No. 2 singles, Iowa's Rudy Foo defeated Mark Schwartz 3-6, 6-4, 6-2. John Zerwek from Wisconsin topped Stokstad at the No. 3 single's 4-6, 7-5, 7-6.

Jim Schneider from Wisconsin beat Novak 6-3, 2-6, 6-0 at the No. 4 single's play, while Jim Burkeholder from Iowa defeated Ryan Cooley 6-3, 6-3, at No. 5. At No. 6 singles Maltby beat Dave Mairsberger 6-2, 7-6.

Wisconsin won the No. 2 doubles match, with Zerwek and Schneider beating Foo and Burkeholder 2-6, 6-3, 7-6. Novak teamed with Scott Schafer to defeat Cooley and Mairsberger at the No. 3 double's position.

The seventh and eighth seed players Scott Shafer and John Albright also recorded wins. The men's tennis team next travels to Indianapolis where it will participate in an individual tournament Nov. 6-9.

Giants, Morris trip Redskins in crucial NFC East matchup

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (UPI)—Joe Morris ran for 181 yards and scored twice, including a 13-yard touchdown run with 1:38 left Monday night, to give the New York Giants a 27-20 victory over the Washington Redskins.

The Giants' victory created a three-way tie between New York, Washington and Dallas in the NFC East at the midway point of the season. All three teams are scheduled to play each other again in the next two weeks.

Washington's Max Zendejas kicked a 29-yard field goal with 4:06 left to tie the game at 20 after Raul Allegre missed from 29 yards out with 11:09 left for the Giants.

But the Giants came back to go 81 yards. The game-winner by Morris came on a third-and-1 from the 13. Morris carried 31 times and caught five passes for 59 yards. Morris' rushing total was the second best of his career and fourth best in Giants' history. He gained 202 yards in the last game against Pittsburgh last season.

MORRIS' 11-YARD touchdown gave the Giants a 10-0 lead early in the second quarter, and a 30-yard pass from Phil Simms to Bobby Johnson put New York ahead 20-3 early in the third. Allegre's 37-yard field goal on the Giants' first possession gave New York the early lead.

The Redskins roared back from their 17-point deficit with two third-quarter touchdowns. George Rogers scored from 1 yard out and a 42-yard touchdown pass from Jay Schroeder to Gary Clark with 4:12 left in the third quarter made it 20-17. Zendejas, who kicked a 23-yarder in the second quarter, then tied it after a 74-yard drive.

Schroeder completed 22 of 40 for 420 yards and was intercepted twice. Clark caught 11 passes for a team record 241 yards. Simms was 20 of 30 for 219 yards.

THE REDSKINS moved into Giants' territory in the final seconds but were stopped when Schroeder's pass, intended for Clark, fell incomplete on fourth-and-8 from the 35.

Clark was open on the play but slipped and fell as the ball arrived.

Rogers has rushed for a touchdown in his last 11 games, tying him with Lenny Moore for second on the all-time NFL list and moving him two behind John Riggins' record of 13.

Perry Williams' interception and 15-yard return set up Johnson's touchdown, his first since catching two in the opener against Dallas. On second down, Johnson beat Vernon Dean on a fly pattern to take Simms' strike in the end zone.

Washington got back in the game with its two third-quarter touchdowns, then Schroeder guided them 74 yards in eight plays to Zendejas' tying field goal. He hit Art Monk for 47 yards to the 34, then found Clark for 16 to the 18. After Lawrence Taylor sacked Schroeder for a 15-yard loss, Schroeder hit Clark for 21 yards to the 12 on third-and-25.

He said the amount wagered would usually be more than $100. "It varied. In football I would go from $100 up. My biggest game was $800," Rick added.

Andy said he bets "for the excitement, for the interest in the game." He added he tends to pick the underdog. "It's fun. It can get you in trouble. It's great when you're winning. It's bull shit when you're losing. It's exciting," Rick said.

MICHAEL, a junior at Iowa, said he became interested in gambling through his father. "I just knew a lot about it, had season tickets as a kid," he said. "My father gambles a shitload at home — $1,000 a game."

He said his gambling is "nothing major — $100 to $150 a night, sometimes $300 or $400."

The NCAA, however, must believe gambling is a problem since it created a task force on the subject. The head of this designated body is David Cawood, an assistant director at NCAA headquarters in Mission, Kan.

"The purpose is to monitor the gambling lines that are established and to stay abreast (of the situation)," Cawood said.

IOWA SPORTS Information Director George Wine said he talks to the sports teams at Iowa "about once a year, at the beginning of every season." Should he come across a player who informed him of being approached by a suspicious individual, Wine said he would turn the case over to the FBI.

"The NCAA is trying to do as much as it can," Wine said. He also said the College Sports Information Directors of America has tried in the past to curb gambling efforts.

"About 10 years ago COSIDA had a very vigorous gambling awareness campaign. What we were trying to do is make people aware of how dangerous gambling can be. The organization, nationally, is trying to bring it to their attention," Wine said.

The gambling campaign Wine referred to is an attempt by COSIDA to not allow publications who print point spreads into press boxes.

MANY NEWSPAPERS publish point spreads, and those who try to stop printing them usually meet with a fair amount of adversity. In the Nov. 15, 1982, issue of the NCAA News, an editorial claimed the attempt by COSIDA to "discontinue cooperation with publications relying on 'tip sheet and tout sheet' (betting services) advertising failed because coaches and administrators would not sacrifice exposure for principle." Cawood said the reason why COSIDA's efforts failed is because "the U.S. Constitution permits media agencies to publish (this type of advertising)."

However, in the 1976 report by the Commission on the Review of the National Policy Toward Gambling, one of many studies showed that a clear majority of football and basketball coaches believe publication of point spreads should be prohibited by federal law. The studies, conducted through a series of questionnaires, were sent to coaches and athletic directors in each division of NCAA competition.

The studies showed also a clear majority of athletic directors were in favor of prohibiting the publication of point spreads by federal law.

"IT'S SOCIALLY accepted. It's in the paper all the time... It's put in every major paper," Scott, a former Iowa student who ran a parlay while in Iowa City, said.

Wine believes the coach is an instrumental factor in curbing gambling effects in the NCAA. "I think coaches have to really keep an ear in tune. He's the one who would be suspicious first. But I think the coach could do an educational job by informing them as freshmen."

Wine added he believes the coaches at Iowa do a good job at isolating players from gamblers and bookies.

But former Iowa linebacker Larry Station said getting access to athletes is not difficult.

"Oh yeah, it is so easy to approach athletes... especially Saturday nights downtown. You could meet anyone there," Station said.

Wine said the Sports Information Office at Iowa does receive calls from individuals who inquire about injuries to improve their betting chances. The callers are not given information, according to Wine.

Horton

"I'm looking forward to working with Coach Davis," Horton said. "I'm really anxious to get things going and learning the new system."

Even though Horton is going to be playing for his second coach in as many years, he still feels that having one year of college basketball experience is an advantage.

"I'M A MORE experienced ball player," Horton said. "I've adjusted to the college basketball system. I'm ready to come out and play some basketball. I've got a year under my belt, and I learned a lot more things during the summer. I feel I'm just a more experienced player."

If coming back to one of the nation's elite conferences with a new coach wasn't enough of a burden, Horton and the Hawkeyes have a rather lofty national ranking staring them in the face.

"I don't really get into ratings," Horton said. "It really ain't nothing more than somebody writing something up. It's just something that we are going to want to live up to. We know we are capable. So ranking us in the top 10 is just like we weren't ranked at all. We just have to go out and prove to ourselves that we are a good basketball team."

Iowa's Mullarkey, Stewart ready for non-conference confrontation

By Steve Williams
Staff Writer

Coming off of an unexpectedly easy weekend against Big Ten competition, the Iowa women's volleyball team will look to fatten up on some non-conference opponents before getting back into conference action.

The 19-3 Hawkeyes will travel to DeKalb, Ill., today to take on the Northern Illinois Huskies, a team that has had its share of problems, struggling to a meager 8-15 season, the worst in Coach Herb Summers five-year career.

While Summers noted that 10 of his team's losses have come against Top Twenty competition, he still feels that the Huskies are one step away from obtaining national recognition.

"We've lost some key people from our line-up this season, and as a result, we have lost several matches we could just have easily won," Summers said. "Playing a team like Iowa will only raise our level of play a notch and give us a further taste of where we want to be in the future."

THE HUSKIES have lost to such

"We are really starting to get our game completely together," Iowa Coach Sandy Stewart says. "And we feel we can get a real psychological advantage over our opponents if we keep that up."

"We are really starting to get our game completely together, and we need to have a solid match to keep rolling," Stewart said. "We need to get our offense running more consistently. But our blocking is outstanding, and we feel we can get a real psychological advantage over our opponents if we keep that up."

Stewart cited the play of co-captains Ellen Mullarkey and Kathy Griesheim as being mainly responsible for her team's success so far this season. But Stewart also noted that the team as a whole is performing unbelievably well in running to its best season ever.

"Kathy has been running a very balanced attack this season," Stewart said, "and has been able to keep everyone involved in the action. Mullarkey is playing solid volleyball so far this season. She leads the conference in aces and did an exceptional job at the net against Indiana and Ohio State."

Stewart was also impressed with the play of Stephanie Smith off the bench. "She's our ace in the hole, and she has really done a great job in crucial situations," Stewart said.

Volleyball

teams as Ohio State, Iowa State and Purdue, teams which Iowa has beaten quite handily. And with the Hawkeyes playing perhaps their best volleyball of the season, Coach Sandy Stewart expects her team to have a rather easy time with Summer's squad.

Bruce ready for Hawkeye attack

COLUMBUS, Ohio (UPI) — Ohio State Coach Earle Bruce said Monday his players can forget Saturday's 33-0 Big Ten win over Minnesota, which he feels was the Buckeyes' best overall effort of the year.

Bruce now has his sights set on this week's "big game" at Iowa. Ohio State now is 6-2 overall after its sixth win in a row and tied with Michigan for first place in the Big Ten at 4-0.

"It's a big game for both Ohio State and Iowa," Bruce said at his weekly press luncheon. "We're going to approach it with all the motivational forces that we can possibly use this week so our football team is ready to play in a tough situation."

Bruce refused to elaborate on what those "motivational forces" are.

"WE HAVE NOT used anything this season to get our team ready to play. Obviously, this week is a very big football game for our football team," Bruce said.

One thing Bruce did do differently this week, however, was close practices and do away with all player interviews. Ohio State has beaten Iowa nine of the past 10 times the two teams have met, including a 22-13 win over the Hawkeyes last year when they came to Columbus ranked No. 1 in the nation.

Earle Bruce

"I think every year is different," Bruce said. "I don't ever look back and judge what's going to happen this year with what happened in the past. This is this year. The game is on Saturday. You can only prepare your team to play as well as you can and hope no mistakes take over to turn the game around. "Last year doesn't mean anything to us or the year before. You can't live in the past. After today, the Minnesota game is out, forgotten, ancient history."

TURNING BRIEFLY to the win over Minnesota, which brought a 3-0 conference mark to Columbus, Bruce said he was somewhat surprised by his team's performance.

"If you had said a week ago Ohio State would shut out Minnesota, I don't think I could have believed that," Bruce said.

But the Buckeye coach rattled off the names of 10 of his 11 defensive starters for having "winning performances" against the Gophers, including defensive players of the game Chris Spielman, Scott Leach and David Brown.

The offense also had its share of outstanding performers, particularly quarterback Jim Karsatos, split end Chris Carter and tailback James Bryant.

"Jim Karsatos had a big day," Bruce said of his quarterback, who passed for 205 yards and two touchdowns. Both of the scoring tosses were to Carter covering 27 yards.

A block by Carter also ensured a 33-yard touchdown run by Bryant, who carried 25 times for 99 yards. Ohio State lost the services of junior offensive tackle Larry Kotterman for the rest of the season due to a knee injury suffered against Minnesota. Kotterman underwent surgery Sunday.

Bruce said safety William White (ankle) and inside linebacker Mike Key (hamstring) are questionable for the trip to Iowa. Both missed the Minnesota contest.

Rozelle's drug tests ruled unfair

WASHINGTON (UPI) — An arbitrator Monday blocked NFL Commissioner Pete Rozelle's plan to randomly test NFL players for illegal drugs, saying the program violates the players' contract with management.

Arbitrator Richard Kasher, responding to a grievance filed against the plan by the NFL Players Association, ruled Rozelle lacks the power to implement such a program without going through the usual bargaining process with the union.

"The NFLPA is pleased that the collective bargaining agreement has been reaffirmed through the decision of arbitrator Richard Kasher that there will be no random drug testing of NFL players," Gene Upshaw, the union's executive director, said through a spokesman.

The union called an afternoon news conference in Washington to discuss the ruling.

ROZELLE CALLED the decision a partial victory.

"I'm gratified that the arbitrator has upheld this office's authority to institute an augmented drug program of education, treatment and discipline," Rozelle said in a statement.

"I'm disappointed, however, that he has ruled against unscheduled drug testing. I am convinced that minimal, unscheduled testing is a necessary part of any fully effective, league-wide anti-drug program."

Jack Donlan, executive director of the NFL Management Council, agreed with Rozelle.

"Kasher reaffirmed, completely reaffirmed, the commissioner's inherent powers and authority in this area," he said in a telephone interview. "He found the program that the commissioner wanted to institute to be reasonable both in substance and in its timing."

Pete Rozelle

"HE FELT THAT part of it, dealing with the unscheduled testing, was in conflict" with the 1982 Collective Bargaining Agreement.

"The program is multifaceted," Donlan added. "He found that in all the other areas it wasn't specifically limited. And, therefore, he could do it."

"I'm not trying to minimize unscheduled testing. But it was (only) one part of the program."

The Collective Bargaining Agreement, which expires after this season, allows teams to test players for drugs during the preseason physicals and during the regular season only when a team doctor rules there is "reasonable cause" to suspect drug use.

DONLAN SAID the impact of the decision is diminished because it comes in the final year of the Collective Bargaining Agreement.

"I've said from the very beginning we're going to be in negotiations over this issue no matter what the award is. I'm sure the union is not going to like certain parts of the

"I'm gratified that the arbitrator has upheld this office's authority to institute a drug program," NFL Commissioner Pete Rozelle says. "I'm disappointed, however, that he has ruled against unscheduled drug testing."

award. Obviously, we don't like certain parts," he said.

Rozelle said: "I again ask the Players Association and Management Council to work out drug testing measures as soon as possible so that this critical issue does not become entangled in next year's collective bargaining session."

On July 7, less than two weeks after the cocaine-induced death of Cleveland Browns defensive back Don Rogers, Rozelle announced a plan to make the NFL the first professional sports league in the nation to randomly test players for illegal drugs.

UNDER ROZELLE'S PLAN, all NFL players would be subjected to two surprise urinalysis during the regular season in addition to the mandatory preseason urinalysis.

However, the NFL Players Association sued for a court order to stop the plan's implementation. Both sides later agreed to have the case decided by an impartial arbitrator.

Finger-snapping jazz rocks Hancher

By Anne Leners
Special to The Daily Iowan

THE PRESERVATION Hall Jazz Band performed Sunday afternoon for an enthusiastic crowd at Hancher Auditorium.

The concert, part of the Sunday at Three series, started slowly, but gradually the audience loosened up and the band warmed up to their own interpretations of classics.

According to the program notes, there was no listing of the numbers to be played because the musicians create as they go along. The program depends on the audience's and musicians' moods; the blend creates a singular rendition of the music.

One of the purposes of the Sunday at Three series is to give entire families a chance to attend Hancher together and to educate a new generation of patrons. One young man got into the spirit of things during the first number by snapping his fingers, then banging his seat, in time with the music.

THROUGHOUT the rest of the afternoon, others joined in with head nodding, hand clapping and toe tapping. By the end of the two-hour program, the audience had enjoyed 14 numbers.

There was an occasional bad note, but always good-humored laughing about it among the band members and the audience. Considering that several of the musicians were born in the first decades of this century, the exuberance of the music and the style of presentation was sparkling.

The group derives its name from Preservation Hall, an old, beat-up building on St. Peter Street in New Orleans that presents some of the best music on Bourbon Street.

Under the auspices of the title "Preservation Hall Jazz Band," many musicians and bands perform in New Orleans and have toured throughout the country.

SUNDAY'S performance was by The Kid Thomas Band. One change from the printed program was the substitution of George "Kid Sheik" Cola for trumpet player Wendell Brunious. Other members included Worthia "Showboy" Thomas on the trombone, Alonzo Stewart on drums, Frank Fields on bass, Mannie Crusto on clarinet and the younger musicians (under 50) John Royen on piano and Neil Unterseher on banjo.

The two-hour show ended with, of course, "When The Saints Go Marching In." Unterseher and Crusto led the way around the orchestra section of the auditorium, picking up enthusiastic marchers along the way. More than 50 people, including one small child led by Crusto, joined in the march, helping end the performance with a flourish.

Bush to Iowans remain hopeful

By Robyn Griggs
Distractions Editor

CEDAR RAPIDS — Vice President George Bush offered Iowans a message of hope Tuesday during his first visit through Iowa to please Republicans.

Bush told Republicans that the party has risen from a "gloomy" image and instead "a vision of a growing America."

"It's been a long, tough road, but I think that we're right track so that we can give the kids of this country the young people of the future a better future. There is hope," he said. "And you've gotta have hope in the nuclear age."

BUSH CITED the Reagan administration's progress in the nuclear arms race.

"There was dramatic progress in Iceland," Bush said, "and General Secretary Gorbachev were not about controlling weapons... but what we want to see is the elimination of nuclear weapons." Bush said that Reagan's belief that the Soviet Union is integral to U.S. security is not to defend the "Nobody can be hurt."

With the 1988 presidential election still two years away, Iowans are quick to add their names to the list of would-be candidates.

An Oct. 12-16 Daily Iowan poll of 1,564 registered voters in Iowa City, Coralville, North Liberty, Iowa, found that one-third of those polled already have an inclination they'll vote for in 1988.

Twenty percent of those polled — the largest bloc — would vote for "any" President Ronald Reagan.

Among voters with a date preference, Reagan's former Sen. Gary Hart topped the survey. He earned the support of 10 percent of those surveyed, because of the presidential limit set by the 22nd Amendment to the Constitution, is not eligible for reelection in 1988. Hart campaigned in 1984, losing the De-
