U.S. won't cut off Iran deals

WASHINGTON (UPI) - National security adviser John Poindexter said Wednesday that the United States would continue to pursuit arms deals with Iran, if the Iranian government returns to its nuclear nonproliferation obligations.

The president and other officials have been extremely reluctant to discuss the matter with Congress, claiming any public discussion would be a signal to the Iranians that the United States was prepared to negotiate on arms sales.

VA offices merge for improvement
Two offices in the Veterans Administration Department of Veterans Affairs have combined into one training facility.

It is part of the agency’s continuing effort to improve service through more efficient management.

VA Administrator Thomas K. Tenney approved the merger of the high school cafeteria in the new facility as the director of the new service. Wyant is the former director of Vocational Rehabilitation and Counseling Service, was named the deputy director of the service.

The new office administers college, apprenticeship and extension service programs.

UI Hospitals pay $32,500 settlement

The Johnson County District Court on Wednesday awarded UI Hospitals $32,500 in settlement of a lawsuit brought by a Cedar Rapids man.

The settlement states that the defendants deny all liability and are making the settlement only as a compromise.

An Iowa City woman awarded for writing a bad check to obtain groceries and a car at a Coralville store made her initial appearance Wednesday in Johnson County District Court.

Kathy Kay Genta, 28, of 722 Emerald St., Apt. 8, was charged with second-degree fraud, failure to pay a financial instrument and failure to appear.

She allegedly wrote a $36.06 check Tuesday to Ipanid's Main-Peived Foods.

Court records state Lane's lawyer moved Nov. 11 and as a result of the repeal she went into deep shock.

The baby died in birth and Lane has permanently lost all maternal functions.

UI Hospitals awarded Wednesday a $32,500 settlement to a Cedar Rapids man after he died because of a hospital’s negligent care in 1983.

Thomas Dally Lane and Jane Lee Lane, 23, of Cedar Rapids, filed the lawsuit in Johnson County District Court in 1980 charging UI Hospitals and Wayne Christophersen, a staff physician, were negligent in caring for Jane Lee Lane and her unborn child.

A jury found on Dec. 3, 1980, in the final days of its progrm, the medical staff was not ready for admission and died and her death.

The estate asked Lane to stay at the hospital, but hospital officials decided it was not safe and ordered her to go home.

UI study shows gradual rise in foreign student numbers

By Shawn Plank

A report issued by the UI office of the registrar this week shows the number of minority and foreign students continued to increase at the university.

The report, included in "A Profile of Students Enrolled at the University of Iowa," released this week, shows the number of foreign students at the UI has increased from 1,600 in 1980 to 1,947 this year.

UI Special Support Services Director Paul Shang said minority students made up 4.3 percent of the UI's total enrollment in 1982. This fall, he said, 6.9 percent of the student population indicated they didn't have any foreign student numbers.

"While it doesn't seem tremendous, it happened when the university was getting larger and when other universi-

LA SA protests exclusivity of global studies program

By Monika Sergio

UI Liberal Arts Student Association President Gordon Fischer, for instance, said UI's Global Studies Department is being exclusive because that's not allow honor students in their program.

The global studies major is only open to law students, according to Fischer. "It's really a shame that non-honor students are excluded from participating in a program that has such an excellent reputation," he said.

UI Global Studies Department Chairman James McNeilly said the program wasn't created exclusively for honor students, but others were forced out of the program as a potential group to work with the program was being created.

"We were by no means trying to exclude any students," McNeilly said. "But the approval of the program was by the honor students program because they were already enrolled in working internationally departmentally.

LA SA SENT LETTERS TO THE DEAN OF THE UI College of Liberal Arts and to Global Studies Department officials reminding them of the need to open the global studies major to all students. LASA member and elderly studies major Ann Nef said this month's 25 percent average point is to be included in the last program.

The global studies major is one of the few international majors this university has to offer. Nef said. "It would therefore make sense for us to have it open for any interested students." McNeilly said he expects LASA will continue to work on the global studies program with the university.

"The principle would be no exclusion of opening it up to all students," he said. "Practically speaking, however, in no way it could be expanded because of the small size of the staff."

Zionism means a survival rather than a form of racism

By Kathy Hinson

Time to remember

Veteran’s Day has come and gone. It will come and go for years to come, the wreaths will be laid and the stark, white crosses will be placed on the graves of those who paid the ultimate price. It’s a day to reflect and remember.

I think of those who were there, and I feel their absence. I feel a little unimportant for a great many people. American and Israeli casualty victims have responded to Veteran’s Day by appealing and reminding.

In New York City this year, a small parade marched up Fifth Avenue. A sign asking that all who have made the ultimate decision be recognized. They are those who perished in service of our country.

It is right to forget American blood spilled on foreign soil and the pain felt by those who did not make the ultimate decision for us to forget the sacrifice made by some young men — the ultimate decision, which a great many men have made.

It is such a day that we are reminded of the part we can play in honoring those who died for our country.

If you know of anyone who has made the ultimate decision, please let this be known to them. We will remember for them.

Real victims

To the Editor:

“Veteran’s Day — honored or destroyed?” (Paul McKendry, Iowan, Nov. 5)

If our citizens honor another segment of the population for their service, it is because people had broken the laws of God. It is that simple.

It is not easy to accept the idea that the service men who break the laws are more appropriately named “veterans” than “vice-sports.”

So, you see, what is the best way to honor service men who break the laws.

Perhaps it would be a good idea to divide the front for parking simply so offended veterans would begin to consider it a past, not merely a tolerated generation.

Documented thank you

I am writing this letter to express my gratitude to the late Mayor George J. Levy. In 1959, Mayor Levy, with the backing of City Council, and in the interest of public safety, induced a law that was passed allowing the police to look through anyone’s mail if a search warrant was required.

Mayor Levy, a Democrat, was a very strong-willed man, who when he believed in something he worked hard for it. He was a great friend of the Iowans and worked diligently towards creating a better city.

Diplomats support Reagan's drug war

WASHINGTON (UPI) - Few lady Nancy Reagan, backed by testimonies from two former U.S. ambassadors, urged the na- tion to lend its support to the war on drugs, her personal crusade for the past five years. "I'd like to say thank you for giving me the opportunity to talk to you today about the importance of drug awareness," the first lady added Wednesday from the Oval Office, during a ceremony to begin the "We Can Win" campaign to combat drug use in America. "I'd like to invite you to join me in the crusade against drugs back to the White House." The campaign is part of the first lady's effort to promote drug awareness and prevent drug use among children and young people. "I want you to know that I'm putting everything I have into this campaign," she said. "I don't want to see anyone else's child suffer the consequences of drug abuse." The first lady's speech was part of a national campaign to combat drug use, which she launched in April. The campaign, which includes a series of public service announcements and educational materials, is aimed at raising awareness about the dangers of drug use and encouraging people to take action to prevent drug abuse. The first lady's remarks were well received, with many in the audience applauding her efforts. "I'm very impressed with your passion and your dedication," said one audience member. "Your message is very powerful and it's something that we all need to hear." The campaign is expected to run for several weeks, with the first lady making additional appearances in support of the effort. "I'm looking forward to getting out there and talking to as many people as I can," she said. "I want to make sure that everyone knows about the dangers of drug use and the importance of taking action to prevent it." The campaign is part of a broader effort to combat drug use in the United States, which has been a major issue for decades. Despite efforts to curb drug use, the problem remains a significant challenge for policymakers and public health officials. The first lady's campaign is one of several initiatives aimed at addressing this issue, and her efforts are likely to continue in the months and years to come. "I'm committed to making this campaign a success," she said. "I want to see a future in which no one has to suffer the consequences of drug abuse. Let's work together to make that happen."

Iowa wrestling Coach Dan Gable and his team have hopes of returning to College Park, Md., for the third straight year in the NCAA championship, an event that has proven to be a goal all season long.

Sullivan's crew is successful, and Iowa will be the first team ever to win 10 consecutive national titles.

A fifth straight title will mean that Iowa has captured at least one conference championship in every sport.

The Hawkeyes are coming off a successful trip to the Olympic Trials in Colorado Springs, where they won five of a possible seven titles.

This year, Sullivan said, is the Hawkeyes' biggest year.

"We're only the third team in history to do that," Sullivan said.

ing the solo's excitement and there was plenty of that kind of thrill during the evening.

Berchot opened his program with Carcassi by Robert Schumann, a piece requiring the command to show temperament.

It is a usually a series of disjointed

episodes which often break into danceable, yet interspersed with quiet songs. Berchof's playing was fluent and only sometimes rather than

drawing the piece together. The other sections, however, were well done.

The SECOND ITEM on the program was Schubert's groups of love songs in three parts. Again, the differ-

tence between revealing

the performer's personality and the difference between true expression and Berchot's emotional style, was made clear as he played.

Berchot played a group of meditations written by Frederic Chopin, the famous Chopin. The same program included some of the most famous works. The
