Small group of UI students commemorates King's birth

By Shawn Plank
Staff Writer

Martin Luther King Jr.'s birthday was celebrated Monday night by about 35 people who gathered in Danforth Chapel to remember the impact the civil rights leader had on their lives.

Monday was the second annual federal holiday marking the birthday of the leader who won the 1964 Nobel Peace Prize and was key in lobbying for the 1964 Civil Rights Act.

The Rev. Marvin Crawford, of the African Methodist Episcopal Church of Iowa City, said he was disappointed the holiday wasn't celebrated more widely in Iowa City.

"The holiday is one I feel is long overdue," he said. Crawford remembered King for his non-violent protests and his willingness to go to prison more than 20 times to support his cause.

"HE BELIEVED WITH ALL his might that the pursuit of violence was ethically and morally wrong," he said.

Crawford said King would be happy to see a somewhat integrated campus at the UI, with black professors, black law students and a 5 percent black student enrollment.

But he added King would be saddened by events like one this past weekend when the Ku Klux Klan disrupted marchers in Georgia celebrating King's birthday.

The local commemoration was sponsored by the Black Student Union, Alpha Phi Alpha fraternity and Sigma Gamma Rho sorority.

Members of the audience were invited to tell their memories of King. UI Special Support Services Director Paul Shang said that as a minority growing up in the South, King meant a lot to him. He said he tries to continue what the civil rights leader began.

"WHEN PEOPLE ASK WHAT the Special Support Services do, I'm frequently tempted to say we follow in the footsteps of a great man," he said. "A lot would not have happened if one man had not spoken out and literally sacrificed himself."

UI graduate student Bruce King, no relation to the civil rights leader, remembered where he was when he heard of King's death.

"I was 5 years old. My family was taking a car trip on the expressway and I remember vividly the radio anchor saying Dr. King had died," he said. "We pulled to the shoulder and for 10 minutes my parents started bawling. We asked, 'What's wrong?' And my mother said, 'You'll understand when you're older.'"

Kevin Burton, a third-year UI medical student, said he modeled his life around King's. Like King, he lived near Atlanta, attended Morehead State University and is a member of the Alpha Phi Alpha fraternity.

"Through these experiences, I do get the feeling of love and care of the people," he said.

UI Hospitals employee Patricia Bowens was on hand in 1963 for King's March on Washington and his "I Have a Dream" speech. She told the predominantly black crowd that his message still needs to spread.

"We can't let his dream die," she said.

Jury selection begins in Slager case

By James Cahoy
Staff Writer

After an eight-day delay, jury selection will begin today in Marengo, Iowa, for the trial of Ramon Joseph DeSantiago II, the man charged with shooting John Slager in downtown Iowa City last summer.

Johnson County District Attorney J. Patrick White said the delay was needed to give the prosecution more time to prepare its case.

"We needed more time," White said. "We weren't quite ready to start the case."

White, who will be in Marengo for the trial, said he expects jury selection to last a short while.

"I WOULD THINK it will take about a day or a day and a half," White said. "I would estimate the trial in total will take about a week and a half."

DeSantiago, a resident of Council Bluffs, is accused of shooting Slager near the Old Capitol Center on Aug. 3 after Slager saw DeSantiago and two other men tampering with his motorcycle.

Slager, 650 S. Dodge St., was critically injured after being shot in the head and was taken to UI Hospitals. He was released Sept. 15 from the hospital and is currently residing as a patient at the Schoitz Rehabilitation Center in Waterloo.

The two other men involved in the shooting, Ralph Peterson and Steven Brickey, both of Council Bluffs, are currently serving two-year prison sentences as accessories after the shooting. Court records state Peterson drove himself, DeSantiago and Brickey back to Council Bluffs after the shooting.

A CHANGE IN venue was granted in DeSantiago's case because DeSantiago's lawyer Marsha Bergen claimed there was extensive pre-trial publicity, which made it impossible to find an impartial jury in Iowa City.

Bergen was not available Monday for comment on the trial.

In addition to the change in venue, District Court Judge August Honsell also approved the appointment of private investigator George Ackerman to aid DeSantiago in his case.

Court records state DeSantiago will claim intoxication as part of his defense.

MEANWHILE, Slager's mother, Marcia Slager, said Monday her son is recovering well from the incident.

'Rebuffed' panel ready for Reagan

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The White House disputed a report Monday that President Ronald Reagan is ducking a meeting with the special panel he named to investigate the National Security Council, the agency that played midwife to the Iran-Contra controversy.

Assistant White House press secretary Roman Popadiuk said Reagan will meet with the panel headed by former Sen. John Tower, R-Texas, and a request from the board to meet with Reagan is pending.

Reagan named the panel to review operations by the NSC, where officials directed the covert operation to sell arms to Iran and coordinated efforts to aid the U.S.-backed Nicaraguan rebels.

In setting up the special review board, Reagan pledged "full cooperation," but The Washington Post, citing an anonymous source, said Monday the panel's requests in the past 10 days to question Reagan had been "rebuffed."

POPADIUK SAID Reagan had offered to meet with the board in mid-December but the group told him it wasn't ready for such a session at that time.

Asked if the president was stalling, Popadiuk said, "Absolutely not."

Besides Tower, the board includes Edmund Muskie, a former secretary of state and senator from Maine, and retired Air Force Gen. Brent Scowcroft, national security adviser to President Gerald

Ronald Reagan

John Tower

Ford.

The panel's inquiry is scheduled to finish its work at the month's end and issue a report by the end of February, but Popadiuk said he expected the expiration date will be extended.

Tower has said his group is not investigating the scandal, but is assessing how to assure the NSC fulfills its role of advising the president.

FRANK CARLUCCI, who replaced Vice Adm. John Poindexter as national security adviser, has cleaned house at the NSC and issued orders that it not get involved in covert operations.

In a related development, The New York Times published a partial text of a draft report of the Senate Intelligence Committee's investigation of the scandal.

The draft report has not been released, but parts have been leaked to the press. The section published by the Times said Reagan could have avoided the scandal by informing Congress at the outset of his overture to Iran, rather than cloaking the operation in secrecy.

It also said the administration was repeatedly warned that sending arms to Iran, in part to win freedom for American hostages in Lebanon, was based on faulty intelligence, depended on unreliable middlemen, and likely to fall far short of its goals.

The draft said the committee found "no specific evidence" Reagan knew of the Contra cash connection.

Branstad: Laser unit may assist Star Wars

DES MOINES (UPI) — Iowans must accept the fact that a proposed $25.1 million laser facility at the UI may be used to further the nation's Star Wars defense system, Gov. Terry Branstad said Monday.

Branstad said during his weekly news conference at the statehouse he opposes proposals to ban certain types of military research at the laser research center because such a policy would cost the state federal money.

"I don't think the state of Iowa can be an island," he said.

He said he is aware that most of the nation's great research centers, including the research triangle in North Carolina and centers based in Massachusetts, rely heavily on federal defense contracts.

"We cannot blanketly rule out certain types of research. No state has been successful that has blanketly said they will not accept any research for defense purposes," Branstad said.

"IF YOU RULE out all defense, basically you say you are not going to accept any federal dollars or any research from the federal government. I don't think that we need to do that," he said.

Last week the Senate approved a $25.1 million bonding plan to finance the construction of the facility at the UI. Senators rejected an amendment that would have prohibited classified defense research.

Branstad said he supports a policy that would require all research at the laser center to be made public.

He said he is not aware of any defense contracts pending for the proposed center, but added he "wouldn't be surprised if there were that kind."

"Let's remember that's not the purpose of this facility. My understanding is this facility would work primarily in the area of medicine," he said.

ON ANOTHER topic, Branstad said Monday it is too late to repeal a state law that will dissolve Iowa's 51-year-old liquor monopoly in March.

Rep. Rod Halvorson, D-Fort Dodge, planned to outline such a plan at a news conference late Monday, but Branstad said he considers the issue a moot point.

"I believe it is too late to change. It's time to move on to the more important issues of the session. You can't recreate something unless you want to go back and reverse the retail sale of wine we approved several years ago," Branstad said.

West Branch downtown needs artists

The Cedar County community of West Branch, Iowa, is soliciting proposals from Iowa artists interested in designing, constructing and installing artwork in the West Branch central business district.

West Branch, home of the Herbert Hoover Presidential Library, is among seven Iowa communities benefitting from a new tourism and arts program authorized earlier this year by the Iowa Legislature. A general fund appropriation makes up to $35,000 available to West Branch to commission artwork that will attract tourists to the community.

A 12-member committee, which includes two local artists and a representative of the Iowa Arts Council, is asking artists to submit proposals for durable, outdoor projects that reflect West Branch history. The committee has identified three possible sites in downtown West Branch for the artwork to be commissioned.

"The final site will be determined by the artists' work," said Judy Kaeser, chairwoman of the West Branch Artist Selection Committee.

"The designation of our downtown area as a national historic district was recently approved by a state committee," Kaeser said. "This National Register of Historic Places nomination is based on the concept that the existing downtown buildings are representative of the prosperity that occurred at the turn of the century during what historians call 'The Golden Era of American Agriculture.' The committee feels this theme could be reflected in the artwork we commission."

Artists have been asked to submit sketches or designs of their proposed work by April 15. Selection is scheduled for May 30, with installation expected by May 1988.

Kaeser said any Iowa artists interested in submitting proposals can request a "project prospectus" that includes plans and specifications by calling her at 319-643-5327 or by writing to the West Branch Artist Selection Committee, P.O. Box 696, West Branch, Iowa 52358.

Center offers modern language grants

Three fellowships will be awarded to graduate students interested in studying modern language, the Center for International and Comparative Studies announced this week.

The fellowships, funded by a UI grant from the U.S. Department of Education, are designed for graduate students interested in pursuing international careers while studying an interdisciplinary or a professional studies program.

The term of the fellowships is one year, from August 1987 to August 1988.

The fellowship offers $5,000 plus part or full in-state tuition to support a minimum of one advanced course per semester in foreign language study during the school year.

In addition, the fellowship includes a $1,250 stipend for intensive summer language in the U.S. or abroad.

Application forms are available from the offices of collegiate deans and are due by Feb. 9.

For further information, contact Prof. Steven Ungar, Department of French and Italian, 31 Shaeffer Hall.

Senate begins spring agenda tonight

The UI Student Senate will hold its first meeting of the spring semester at 6 tonight in the Union Triangle Dining Room.

Senate President Joe Hansen said the highlight of the meeting will be an update and general discussion on federal financial aid.

Hansen said goals of the senate's recently adopted affirmative action policy will also be discussed.

The senate meeting is open to the public.

Two local companies gain $225,000

The Iowa Product Development Corporation invested $225,000 in two Iowa City companies in 1986, according to figures released by the organization.

Worldview, Inc., which markets translations of foreign television, received $150,000 from the IPDC. A-Jem Co. Inc., which has developed new attachments for computer systems, received $75,000.

The two local based companies were part of a total of 10 Iowa companies which received $1.4 million dollars from the IPDC.

Coalition protests proposed budget

By Carol Monaghan
Staff Writer

Iowa City Manager Stephen Atkins is taking his recently released 1987-88 Iowa City budget proposal on the road.

Within the next several weeks, Atkins will meet with a variety of civic organizations and citizens' groups in an effort to educate Iowa City residents on budget issues.

"Policy debate needs to occur, but first, people need to understand the budget process," Atkins said. "The budget is really a process of negotiation between the city's elected officials and various constituent groups."

Atkins is scheduled to present his budget proposal to the Johnson County/Iowa City League of Women Voters, the Sertoma Club, the Iowa City Chamber of Commerce Board of Directors, and the Board of Realtors, among other civic and private organizations.

ATKINS' FIRST presentation to a newly formed citizen's group last Saturday at the Iowa City Public Library sparked debate and many questions from the audience.

The group of about 30 was especially concerned with cutbacks in Iowa City's transit service, public library hours, and social service organizations.

"The people of Iowa City aren't really prepared for cutbacks in library hours and transit," Jim Cox, an audience member, told Atkins. "If the council puts these reductions through, they would be acting rashly."

The group, the Progressive Coalition of Iowa City, is a liberal Democratic group of people who came together over mutual concerns with budget issues, said Gary Sanders, chairman of the group. Sanders said the group has 150 members.

"Transit cutbacks are a big concern, as well as the amount of money available for social agencies," Sanders said.

COX SAID IT was easy to believe that no policy making was involved in the budget process. "(Atkins definitely did a good job proposing the budget and its issues," Cox said. "But he is putting out a lot of information with the notion that it is impartial, that there is no policy making involved."

Councilor Larry Baker, who attended the meeting, stressed that Atkins should not be held personally responsible for the city's budget problems.

"Steve Atkins takes a lot of flak personally for the budget and its problems," Baker said. "But it is the city council that ultimately decides."

Baker urged any resident with complaints or suggestions about the city budget to contact their councilor.

Branstad promotes 'affordable' gas tax

DES MOINES (UPI) — Gov. Terry Branstad said today it is the wrong time to raise taxes, but Iowans can afford his plan to increase motor fuel taxes 4 cents per gallon because of lower prices at gas pumps.

He also said he has run into much resistance to the plan to raise $60 million for Iowa roads, but he anticipated the roadblocks and still expects the House and Senate to approve the proposal before the end of the legislative session.

Branstad's call for a gas tax hike of 4 cents over the next 18 months marked a departure from his previous stand that Iowans cannot afford tax increases during times of economic hardship.

"I agree this is the wrong time to be raising taxes. The question is whether to invest part of the savings we've had the past year — because of the drop in fuel prices — into this state's future," Branstad said.

"I'm one that is very cautious about wanting to raise any taxes... But if you look at what's happening today, No. 1, vehicles we drive today are a lot more fuel efficient than the ones a decade ago. We've also seen some reduction in the cost of fuel," he said.

Branstad, who touts his plan as a "user fee" instead of a tax increase, said gas prices are 38 cents a gallon lower than they were last January.

Senate Majority Leader Bill Hutchins, D-Audubon, has said he does not expect the measure to pass the Senate, and House Leader Don Aven-son, D-Oelwein, said he will wait for members of Branstad's own Republican Party to lead the charge. So far, Republicans have been cool to the idea.

Nearly $1,000 was taken from an Iowa City bar early Sunday morning, according to the establishment's owner.

Jim Burr, 722 Kirkwood Ave., the owner of Coaches Corner Lounge, 1220 W. U.S. Highway 6, said the suspects entered through the bar's east door and took money from vending machines sometime between the bar's closing Saturday night and 8:30 a.m. Sunday.

"The exact amount taken is unknown at this time," Burr said, but he estimates the losses to be between $800 and $1,000 after the receipts are figured with his vendors.

"They tried jimmying the door open but couldn't, so they broke the glass and then opened the door," Burr said.

No liquor was missing Monday afternoon.

"The suspects intended to get cash," Burr said. "They broke in to get money and that is all they took."

The cash register was not broken into and according to Coaches Corner bartender Vola Kindon, "there was money in the register that night."

The incident was under investigation Monday evening by the Iowa City Police Department.

Arrest Report: An Iowa City man was charged Sunday with possession of a concealed weapon at a local convenience store, according to Iowa City police reports.

Douglas E. Boyle, 727 Michael St., was also charged by Iowa City police officers with possessing an open container of beer, consuming beer in an unlicensed area and public intoxication.

The arrest came after police received a citizen's report of a possible intoxicated man at AM-PM Mini Mart, 2303 Muscatine Ave.

Education plan gets UI praise

By Phil Thomas
Staff Writer

Gov. Terry Branstad's plan to enhance the state education budget is getting rave reviews in the UI community. Branstad last week strongly urged members of the Iowa Legislature to approve a $150 million program designated for state education interests that includes hikes in faculty salaries at elementary and secondary schools as well as grants for programs at the three state universities.

UI Student Senate President Joe Hansen, who has been critical of many of Branstad's policies in past months, lauded Branstad's efforts to include the three state universities on his list of improvements.

"Very often when the legislature speaks about education they only speak about K through 12," Hansen said. "This time he spoke about higher education and elementary and secondary education in the same breath."

HANSEN SAID student tuition grants proposed by Branstad will be needed because of proposed Pell Grant cuts by the federal government.

The governor said three goals of the program are to attract more people to the teaching profession, to keep developing the teachers in the state and to enhance the quality and effectiveness of state schools.

The plan also calls for an increase in the number of faculty members at the University of Northern Iowa.

Collegiate Associations Council President Mike Reck said the state will eventually profit from the education improvements.

"I'm encouraged by a lot of what (Branstad) said," Reck said. "I think Gov. Branstad is starting to realize that the key to economic development is education."

UI students face long lines in new-semester scramble

By Monica Seigel
Staff Writer

Waiting was the norm Monday as UI students began the spring semester in a rush to pick up financial aid checks, drop and add classes, buy books and take care of other last-minute business.

"I guess it's all part of going to a school this size," UI graduate student Laura Chadima said. "But it seems like I spend an awful lot of time just standing in line, and it's really frustrating."

Calvin Hall housed one of the longer lines as the UI Office of Student Financial Aid disbursed financial aid checks.

UI Student Financial Aid Associate Director Mark Warner said although the financial aid office is having to deal with more students this semester than in previous spring semesters, there haven't been any major problems.

"THIS IS THE first year we've had multiple disbursement of the Guaranteed Student Loan," Warner said. "We used to be more rushed in the fall because students could receive their whole loan then. Now we have the same number of students coming through each semester."

Warner said the length of a line of people waiting to receive checks can be deceiving.

"I think the longest anyone has really had to wait is about 15 minutes, and that's during the rush period in between classes," he said. "I'm not a good one for waiting in line myself, but all in all I'd have to say things are going pretty smoothly here, especially when you consider that we have some 5,000 people to deal with in a relatively short period of time."

Students also swarmed to Calvin Hall to make changes in their registrations and get copies of their schedules.

"I REALIZED just this morning that I had no idea where my schedule was," Chadima said. "I thought I could just run over to the registration center and get a quick print-out, but I had to wait in line with all the people who had to drop and add classes. It's extremely hard to be patient in situations like these."

UI Registrar's Office Service Supervisor Jane Omann said changes in registration are being processed quickly since course instructors' signatures are required on drop and add slips.

Omann added that when there is a long line of students waiting to get into the registration center, it is usually a fast-moving one.

UI senior George Watson said the worst lines he encountered were the ones in the IMU Bookstore.

"I WENT TO buy some of my books in the morning and it didn't take long at all, but when I went back in the afternoon the lines went clear to the back wall and there were people everywhere," Watson said. "It's a pain to have to wait, but everybody is in the same boat so no one should complain too much."

Watson added that his sympathies lie with UI employees who have to deal with the lines.

"The bookstore cashiers are the ones who should be complaining," he said. "They have to deal with loads of impatient people, but they are still very helpful and polite. That makes standing in line not quite so bad."

"Let us take this step for educational excellence in Iowa and show the world that even during difficult times, we Iowans have not lost sight of our priorities, not forgotten our strengths and not ignored our future," Gov. Terry Branstad said last Friday.

Branstad opened his second four-year term with this plea to the Iowa Legislature for a $151 million spending increase in school funding. One hundred million dollars of this money is targeted solely for teacher salaries.

By making public education the focal point of his inaugural address, Branstad is to be commended: He has shown Iowans that his campaign promise to improve state education is being actively pursued.

Pay increases for only higher elementary and secondary teachers, however, is not the solution to the financial woes that have plagued state education in recent years. Nor should this one-time commitment be viewed by Iowans as an assurance that the state's standing in national education rankings will rise to the top and remain there.

The funding is a welcome sign to educators, but many other important segments of public education are in need of additional money.

For example, the formation of a task force last year to study mandatory consolidation among the state's 436 school districts serves to remind educators that many smaller school districts cannot teach all the courses students need. The fact that such an extreme move is being considered only emphasizes that higher salaries are only a cure for part of the problem.

College teachers also need an increase in pay, yet the plan leaves only $13.8 million for merit-based pay increases at the three state universities. More money is also needed so that additional sections of required business and liberal arts courses may be offered. The proposed cuts in federal funding for work-study is another area of education that could use funding.

Last week's proposal is a sign that education is becoming a priority for both Branstad and the legislature. But raising teacher pay for the elementary and secondary instructors should not give Iowans the smug feeling that state education will move to the top, or stay there for good.

Double trouble

Iowa is a member of the "Filthy 15." According to a study done by Citizens for Tax Justice, the Iowa tax system is one of the 15 most flagrantly unfair in the nation.

In Iowa, the poorest 20 percent of taxpayers, with incomes averaging only $7,411 in 1985 paid 11 percent of their income in state and local taxes. Middle-income families, with an average income of $25,126, paid 8.9 percent of their income in taxes. But the richest Iowans, with incomes averaging $460,724, paid only 5.4 percent of their income in state and local taxes.

It is obscenely unfair that the poorest should pay taxes at more than twice the rate of the wealthiest. And one reason for that unfair burden is that the Iowa sales tax, despite exemptions for food and medicine, is very regressive. It takes more than four times as much from a poor family's income than from a wealthy family's income.

There can be no justification in asking the most from those who have the least. The Iowa Legislature must not let this session end without addressing this inequity.

That means the legislature must reject Gov. Terry Branstad's proposal to double the gasoline tax. Instead, the legislature must consider politically difficult but more fair alternatives: steep sales taxes only on luxury goods, such as cars, houses, jewelry and furs above a certain price; and a more progressive, and higher income tax.

It is unfair to cut services for the the working poor, expect them to manage on low-paying, service sector jobs and then to tax them at a higher rate than the wealthy. Remedying that wrong should be one of the legislature's first considerations, and failure to act should be remembered at the next election.

Bad example

The United States is two trillion dollars in debt and domestic programs are being cut to save money, but some members of Congress are advocating a pay raise for themselves, members of the cabinet and the vice president. Apparently free stationery and mailing privileges are not enough anymore.

Members of Congress now earn $87,000 a year. In some cases this is four to five times more than their constituents' salaries, yet the proposed pay increase for members of Congress would be $12,500 a year. What kind of a message does this send to Americans who are experiencing economic hardship?

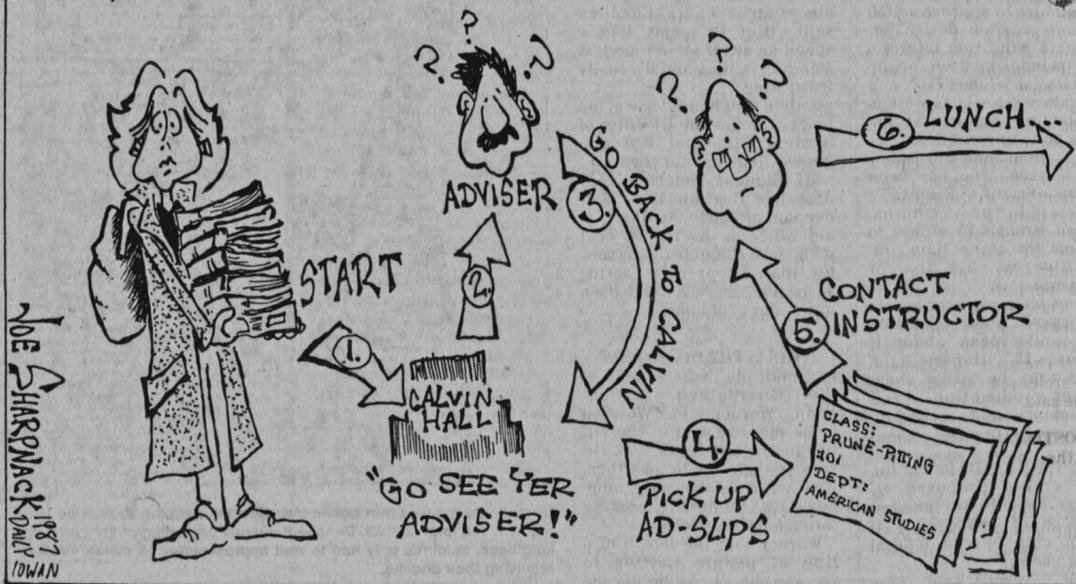

Congressional representatives should set an example. If they want to reduce government spending, pay increases are not logical.

During the Depression of the 1930s President Herbert Hoover refused his salary and members of Congress voted for a 10 percent pay cut to reduce government spending.

Granted, the nation is not in the grips of a depression, but with a huge national debt, pay increases make no sense.

Problem: choosing a leader

By Jody Powell

For political junkies, odd-numbered years are not quite real; they lack standing in their own right. As we move into 1987 our thoughts turn, with a will of their own, to 1988. Thus, it is quite as easy to strike up a conversation in Washington these days about whether Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., will run for president as it is to start a discussion on whether former national security aide Col. Oliver North will testify and what he will say if he does.

There are, to be sure, a number of things wrong with this hastening of the political season; all of which, save one, we will set aside for the moment. That one is the fact that our attention in these early days, and through most later days too if the truth be known, is directed toward speculation about who will run and who will end up working for or supporting whom, and the effect of this or that change in the rules on the fortunes of this or that candidate.

WHAT WE GENERALLY do

By Dan McMillan

As described by the radio news announcer, the scene in Cummings, Ga., Saturday was a haunting reminder of the past — or at least of what we wish were the past. A brief report on National Public Radio's afternoon news program, "All Things Considered," explained how several hundred whites had attacked about 50 civil rights activists with stones, glass bottles and dirt clods as the marchers paraded in all-white Forsyth County in northern Georgia.

The episode should have been shocking. As another symbol of resurging racism in America, it should have set off not do, early or late, is think or talk much about that process by which tens of millions of individuals make an individual decision about whom to vote for.

The failure is not malicious. The truth is that most political pundits have as hard a time articulating what they look for in a candidate as other Americans. Ask one to tell you how he or she makes up his mind and you will get a jumble of cliches and generalities interspersed with ers and ahs. Or, if the commentator has already made a choice, you may well get a set of criteria designed to force a particular conclusion.

This writer is as guilty as any other. He is much more comfortable explaining why he thinks a particular candidate will win than in explaining the reasons behind his vote.

Lord knows there are plenty of decent excuses for the problem:

Is experience important? Well, of course; but what kind are we looking for this year? Do we want experience in Washington, or in foreign policy, or as an executive?

OF COURSE, we want a president who is honest and who shares our views on major issues. But that begs the question of what our views really are or will be three or four years hence, not to mention what issues will be "major" in 1991. And it raises the question of whether a candidate who seems to agree with us on everything is telling us the truth.

Though it has fallen from favor in recent years, party identification is and ought to be a factor, but hardly the only one.

What we search for, or at least what this observer/voter has sought, is some rule of thumb that will help us organize our thoughts and impressions. Some reasonably brief description of what we ought to be looking for in a president. Nothing I'd ever heard seemed to come close to summing it all up until last week. Congressman Morris Udall of Arizona, who has seen a half-dozen presidents of both parties up close and made a credible run for the office himself, offered a thought that cut right to the heart of the matter.

ANY PRESIDENT, Udall said, will make a few, perhaps three or four, major decisions that will profoundly affect our lives and those of our children and grandchildren. The question is: "Which candidate would you feel best about having that responsibility?"

Just so.

Of course, the Udall rule doesn't make the decision easy or automatic. Nor does it guarantee that we will ever have enough information to be absolutely sure of our choice. Still for this writer at least, it brings it all together and provides something to look for — and it does it better than anything else I've ever heard.

The 12 months between now and the first primaries and caucuses and the 21 or so until election day 1988 will be increasingly filled with speculation on who's up and who's down, whose strategy is working and which candidates are about to run out of money. Scattered through all of that will be occasional glimpses of how these people really are, how they think and make decisions.

As this chaotic, confusing and grand political process begins again, Udall's thought is offered in the hope that it will make it just a little bit easier to make sense of it all. Perhaps it will even encourage those who are covering the race to provide a little more information to help us decide who we want to handle those three or four profoundly important decisions.

Civil rights struggle continues

By Dan McMillan

As described by the radio news announcer, the scene in Cummings, Ga., Saturday was a haunting reminder of the past — or at least of what we wish were the past. A brief report on National Public Radio's afternoon news program, "All Things Considered," explained how several hundred whites had attacked about 50 civil rights activists with stones, glass bottles and dirt clods as the marchers paraded in all-white Forsyth County in northern Georgia.

The episode should have been shocking. As another symbol of resurging racism in America, it should have set off alarms and created a deep sense of concern about national attitudes. It should have, but it didn't.

Perhaps the highly-publicized incident in Howard Beach, N.Y., Dec. 20, in which a gang of whites attacked three black men, conditioned us to the lingering reality of racism in the United States and somehow lessened the significance of the Georgia crime.

AT ANY RATE, warning signals of the problem were in place. For instance, the National Urban League's report "The State of Black America," released Jan. 14, warned of "the resurgence of raw racism, persistent economic depression and the continued erosion of past gains." According to the report, Reagan administration policies have exacerbated this already bad situation.

Certainly, another sign of the backward trend in American civil rights is the slow, steady decline of the Civil Rights Commission under the Reagan administration. The commission, once a vigilant watchdog against civil rights abuses, has been emasculated in recent years by Reagan appointees who subscribe to the belief that civil rights gains are irreversible and thus need not be guarded.

IF THE APPALLING examples of Cummings, Ga., and Howard Beach, N.Y., are insufficient evidence to dispel the myth that violent racism does yet persist, perhaps the records of the New York City police department showing that incidents of racial bias have skyrocketed by 150 percent in the past month will make the point. However, such events and statistics represent only a fraction of the destruction caused by racism. The true misery of racist attitudes is understood only in the context of human relations — when people are barred from developing their potential because of their skin color or their ethnic background or when families are torn apart because of blind racial bias.

The commemoration of the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr.'s birthday yesterday offered the nation an opportunity to reflect on the condition of civil rights in the United States. Judging from recent events, the struggle to fulfill the words of our founding fathers — "We hold these truths to be self-evident; that all men are created equal" — is far from finished.

Rise in arrests lets crime pay for UI student bail bondsman

By Renee E. Stewart
Special to The Daily Iowan

UI senior Travis Rothmeyer would be out of a job if crime didn't pay. He doesn't steal jewelry, rob banks, but he provides bail for those who do work the wrong side of the law.

The journalism student has been in the business 24 hours a day for more than two years. Rothmeyer said he gets at least one call requesting bail money each day.

"It doesn't interfere with classes," he said. "I tell the clients to wait right there. They're not going anywhere."

Barb Bigelow, deputy clerk of court for Johnson County, explained that before an accused person appears in front of a magistrate they have two options, unless charged with a class A felony such as murder. "They can post bond and be released or stay in jail," she said.

BY POSTING a defendant's bond, the bail bondsman ensures the accused will appear in court on the appointed day. When the defendant appears, the bond is returned to the bail bondsman, plus a 10 percent fee paid by the defendant, Rothmeyer said.

"I can't lose," he said. "Even if they jump bail, I have collateral on the bail money."

Rothmeyer serves as the defendant's jailor until his or her day in court.

Travis Rothmeyer

"I have the authority to arrest the defendant if he fails to appear in court or violates other terms of our agreement," he said, "but I've only had two people jump bail."

Rothmeyer arrested one of them, and the threat of arrest persuaded the other to return.

ROTHMEYER SAID his most unusual case involved a University of Illinois student who was on the roof of a sorority house trying to conduct a panty raid when the police interrupted.

"He got flustered and tripped and fell off the roof into a (garbage) dumpster," Rothmeyer said. The student was later charged with public intoxication and attempting to elude an officer.

"Some people call me a bounty hunter, but I prefer to be called a fugitive investigator," he said. "My business allows me to pay my bills, pay tuition and still have money left over."

Although he said he has never been in danger, Rothmeyer has permission to own a gun to protect himself from potentially dangerous bail jumpers.

"Well over 80 percent of the bonds are alcohol-related," Rothmeyer said, "and domestic violence arrests are rising."

BIGELOW SAID the rise in domestic arrests is due to a recent state law requiring police to make an arrest if abuse is apparent in a domestic situation.

Theft and false use of financial instruments are also common violations, Rothmeyer said, but added he refuses cases involving child abuse or molestation.

"Kids just wouldn't make up a story like that and I wouldn't want to risk the safety of other children" by getting the accused out on bail, he said.

To be a bondsman, Rothmeyer had to pass an exam issued by the State Insurance Commissioner and get financial backing from a surety bonding insurance company.

"I love my job," Rothmeyer said. "Other than having a full-ride athletic scholarship, I have the best job a college student could have."

City Council debates budget, sets up citizens' committee

By Carol Monaghan
Staff Writer

The Iowa City Council discussed for the first time various 1987-88 budget issues Monday night at the Highlander Inn and agreed to establish a citizen's committee to review budget options.

Mayor William Ambrisco invited council members and any interested Iowa City residents to submit names of people who would like to sit on the proposed committee.

"I want to invite every cross section of the community to serve on this committee," Ambrisco said. "It is not the intention of the council to ramrod additional taxes or anything else they don't want down the citizens' throats."

AT THE INFORMAL council meeting, City Manager Stephen Atkins presented to the council some key budget issues.

Several councilors objected to a 40 percent across-the-board cutback in the proposed budget for social service agencies now funded by the city. The city's budget proposal reserves $113,706 for the various agencies, a figure that is $75,798 less than last year's figures.

"Of all things to be cutting, this is the one thing we can least afford," Councilor Ernie Zuber said. "I don't like everyone cut by 40 percent. I don't want everyone treated equally because I believe some agencies are more equal than others."

Some agencies would be harder hit by the cutbacks because other funding sources are now required to match city funding levels. A reduction in city funding would be doubled by an equal cutback from other funding sources.

"THE QUESTION IS if we cut here, what happens somewhere else?" Councilor John McDonald said. "I think if we feel the agency is deserving, we should at least maintain the same level of funding."

Various agencies partially funded by city dollars include the Big Brother/Big Sister Program, the Crisis Intervention Program, the Domestic Violence Project, HACAP and the Rape Victim Advocacy Program.

Councilors also gave a general consensus of approval to the use of special reserve funds totaling $90,000 to be used for the maintenance and improvement of park equipment. But councilors stressed the use of reserve funds for the Parkland Acquisition Fund would be for this fiscal budget only.

Atkins said the special reserve fund reflects dollars available to the city traditionally unused by the council, and the money would be paid back over a period of five years.

"THE SPECIAL reserve fund reflects a major asset in the form of cash that we weren't putting to productive use," Atkins said.

During a short formal meeting that preceded the budget discussion, Ambrisco read a proclamation that declared the third Monday in January "Martin Luther King Recognition Day" in Iowa City.

Councilor George Strait said there are still problems with racial harmony in the nation, citing recent incidents in Howard Beach, New York, and Forsyth County, Ga., as examples.

UI department pays its way

By Joseph Levy
Staff Writer

Development drugs to fight diseases such as cancer and AIDS has helped the pharmaceutical division of the UI College of Pharmacy do what few UI departments have been able to do: support itself financially.

Grants dating back to 1974 from the National Cancer Institute provide the division with a total of $2.2 million for research and development of anti-cancer and other drugs.

"The money we make goes to buy new equipment," UI Associate Professor of Pharmacology Ting-Fong Chin said. That equipment, in turn, will be used for research that can generate more money for the division.

"They're looking for some kind of university that can do this kind of work," Chin said. "No other university has this kind of facility."

THE UI LAB is approved by the U.S. Food and Drug Administration, setting it apart from any other university facility. The facility's interior closely resembles a small industrial plant.

According to UI College of Pharmacy Associate Dean John Lach, the FDA-approved UI facility contains a specially outfitted lab for producing experimental drugs.

"There are no more than 12 such facilities in the nation and ours is the only one associated with a university," Lach said.

Lach explained the role of UI pharmacy labs: "Our job is to perform all chemical tests required by the FDA, determine the best dosage form ... and manufacture the drug in that form," he said in a press release.

CHIN SAID chemical tests include verifying the drug's chemical make-up, determining the purity of the substance, charting its chemical and physical properties and setting its acidity rating.

The tests are considered to be the development stage in the creation of a new drug.

In addition to the division's anti-cancer research, a $506,000 NCI grant has enabled the department to develop as many as five drugs per year over the next three years that the NCI determines to be possible antidotes for the effects of AIDS.

Chin said the NCI grants have changed the complexion of his division since 1974.

"BEFORE WE were doing things for (UI) hospital use," Chin said. "Now we are more research oriented."

In addition to NCI research, the pharmaceutical division now develops drug compounds for companies and other countries, such as Italy and France, that wish to market new drugs in the United States.

"If they do it by themselves, it may cost a great deal more," Chin said.

All the work has started to pile up, though, and Chin said the division is now limited in the amount of work it can take on, but the busy atmosphere keeps him optimistic. "The future is really very bright," he said.

Controllers vent anger at incident

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Air traffic controllers reacted angrily to news of a near-in-flight collision between an Air Cal plane being 737 and three A-7 Navy fighter jets, blaming the incident on chaos in the world's busiest skies.

The pilot of the Air Cal plane, carrying 40 passengers to San Francisco, told the Federal Aviation Administration the near miss occurred about 2:15 p.m. Friday, about 20 miles west of Los Angeles International Airport, an FAA spokesman said.

Air Cal spokesman Fred von Husen said the jet was climbing from the airport and had reached 12,300 feet when the pilot was directed by regional air traffic controllers in Palmdale to return to 12,000 feet.

AS THE PILOT leveled off at the lower altitude, he spotted the Navy jets about 1,000 feet above him, proceeding across his flight path, von Husen said.

Several controllers said Sunday that initial information on the near miss points toward controller error, but added that the incident also shows systemic problems with the way planes are directed over Los Angeles.

"The Defense Department controllers at Point Mugu were handling the Navy jets, which were being handed over to Los Angeles control," said one controller, who asked not to be identified. "They should have been stopped under the Air Cal jet."

"They were aimed at each other, and it was a mistake," the controller said.

Controller Anthony Skirlick said, "These mistakes have been increasing at an alarming rate. There have been five errors since Jan. 1, a vast increase over last year."

SKIRLICK and other controllers blamed the increase in near misses on crowded skies, too few controllers, outdated equipment and a splintered, confusing air control system.

In the Los Angeles basin, near collisions increased from 33 in 1981 to 94 in 1985, according to FAA statistics.

Navy officials were not immediately available for comment on Friday's near miss. The FAA investigation is continuing.

The Orange County Register reported Sunday that more than 140 planes were put in potentially dangerous flight paths last year over Southern California — the world's most congested airspace — by controllers who were not paying proper attention or issued wrong instructions.

CIA denies aiding Contra drug trade

WASHINGTON (UPI) — CIA and federal drug officials deny reported claims by two men accused of drug-running that the agencies helped the Nicaraguan Contras smuggle cocaine into the United States to finance the purchase of weapons.

The report, released Sunday by Newsweek and carried in the magazine's Jan. 26 issue, cited two men interviewed in a Miami federal prison who claimed Contra leaders justified the lucrative drug smuggling because Congress had halted military aid to them — and then kept the profits.

Newsweek did not describe what help the two claimed the Drug Enforcement Administration or the CIA provided to the alleged operation, or when it occurred.

A DEA spokesman in Washington Sunday labeled the Newsweek report "absurd."

"THERE IS NO truth to it at all," spokesman Lawrence Gallina said.

CIA spokeswoman Kathy Pherson added, "The CIA does not violate U.S. law and drug smuggling is against U.S. law."

"I smuggled my share of illegal substance, but I also smuggled my share of weapons in exchange with the full knowledge and assistance of the DEA and the CIA," accused drug-runner Gary Betzner said.

"The Contras in the field were screwed," George Morales, a Colombian emigre with an aircraft charter business, told Newsweek. "They didn't have enough beans to eat." Morales is also accused of drug-running.

The CIA-backed Contras have been fighting to overthrow the Sandinista government in Nicaragua with military and other aid from the United States.

The report noted the two men face the prospect of long prison terms and are hoping prosecutors will accept their allegations against the Contras and the two federal agencies in exchange for immunity.

Newsweek noted that a third man in Miami, who made similar accusations and passed an FBI lie-detector test, was granted immunity for any involvement in what he claims was a cocaine-smuggling operation that used a former CIA-owned airline to fly cocaine from Barranquilla, Colombia.

Texas prisons reopen, accept more inmates

HUNTSVILLE, Texas (UPI) — The weekend release of 214 prisoners, dropping the prison population below its 95 percent legal limit, cleared the way for the Texas prison system on Monday to reopen its doors to new inmates.

"We will go ahead and open the doors. We are accepting new admissions today," Charles Brown, spokesman for the Texas Department of Corrections, said.

Spokesman David Nunnelee said the estimated count for Monday, based on Sunday's count, was 38,214 inmates or 94.6 percent.

TDC Director O.L. McCotter closed the nation's second largest prison system to new admissions Friday when its population hit 38,414, or 35 prisoners more than the 95 percent limit.

The state Corrections Board, concerned about violating Texas law or risking fines from a federal judge, a week ago ordered the TDC to shut down when it reached 95 percent of capacity.

STATE LAW orders an acceleration of the parole process when inmate population reaches 95 percent. That law was passed in 1983 to control overcrowding in the face of a long-running inmate lawsuit and extensive prison reforms ordered by U.S. District Judge William Wayne Justice of Tyler. During the weekend, the state Board of Pardons and Paroles staff and TDC officials released 214 inmates already approved for dismissal or parole, dropping the population under the 95 percent figure.

Monday normally is a slow day for the 27-prison system, with fewer than 100 transfers from county jails expected, Brown said. Tuesday, however, is one of the heaviest days of the week for new arrivals.

"We'll just have to monitor it closely and see where we are," Brown said of the chance the prisons could again be closed.

GOV. MARK WHITE on Monday in Austin asked the Texas Legislature to transfer funds and make other budget adjustments to build new facilities, modernize, increase the availability of halfway house beds for certain non-violent prisoners and make TDC operations constitutional.

Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby said a supplemental appropriations bill cannot be passed and certified by the comptroller with the existing $1 billion budget deficit. "It's a major problem," Hobby said.

Justice has threatened to fine the state $24 million a month if plans to carry out reforms from a 1985 settlement of the suit are not filed with his court by April 1. The state is appealing Justice's ruling.

Iowa dumps Purdue minus Marble

Hawkeyes stay perfect with 17th straight win

By Brad Zimaneck
Sports Editor

WEST LAFAYETTE, Ind. — The Iowa basketball team rose to the challenge of one top national ranking by knocking off fifth-ranked Purdue 70-67 Monday in front of a boisterous Mackey Arena crowd.

The Hawkeyes, in tying an Iowa record for 17 consecutive wins, fought off an eight-point second-half deficit and the loss of star forward Roy Marble, who left the game in the first half with a scratched cornea.

"I don't really know how good we are," Iowa Coach Tom Davis said. "I have been telling the players that we are not really No. 1, but what do I say now? I just give the players credit. We got so many things that we can improve on, but maybe that is just so typical of coaches. I have to keep driving these guys forward instead of letting these guys rest on where they are."

DAVIS CONTINUED: "Some people can't ever say they were No. 1. We held it for a few hours and now we can say we are No. 1 for a whole day."

"Tom must think the Big Ten is pretty easy," Purdue Coach Gene Keady joked about Iowa's 5-0 Big Ten record, including three straight road wins.

Iowa was behind 48-40 with 17:45 remaining when the Hawkeyes caught fire largely due to guard Kevin Gamble who filled Marble's leading scorer shoes quite nicely.

"He had to step into the forefront more than anyone when Marble went out. Gamble had to play a lot more minutes," Davis said.

"I'm pretty comfortable in the shooting guard and the small forward," Gamble said. "I cut the lead to two, and then Troy Lewis dropped a three-pointer to again give the Boilermakers the lead and arouse the Mackey Arena crowd of 14,123.

Gamble, a Springfield, Ill., native answered with a drive to again put the Hawkeyes in the lead. Gamble wasn't through. He saved more heroics for later.

WITH THE SCORE again tied at 65 Gamble came through again with 4:02 left to give Iowa the lead — a lead the Hawkeyes would not relinquish.

With Iowa still leading 67-65 and less than a minute remaining Purdue guard Doug Lee fired up a three-point attempt which would have given the Boilermakers the lead.

Gamble wrestled for the rebound and then spun and found Iowa center Ed Horton racing downcourt. Horton took the pass and slam dunked the ball over Everette Stephens.

Horton added a free throw to put Iowa up by five with just 27 seconds remaining.

Iowa's double-road victory over Illinois at Champaign and Purdue at West Lafayette marked the first time the Hawkeyes turned the trick since 1979.

Davis' team still No. 2 in UPI poll

NEW YORK (UPI) — North Carolina regained the No. 1 spot in UPI's college basketball ratings Monday as a result of the first loss this season by Nevada-Las Vegas.

By losing 89-88 to Oklahoma Saturday, UNLV dropped to 15-1 and fell to No. 3 in voting by the United Press International Board of Coaches. The Runnin' Rebels held the top spot for six weeks.

North Carolina, with two victories last week to improve to 15-1, reclaimed the No. 1 spot it held after the first week. Iowa, 16-0, moved up one notch to No. 2.

North Carolina received 30 first-place ballots for 590 points while Iowa, a 91-88 winner over Illinois in its only game last week, gained 10 first-place ballots and 567 points. UNLV, the No. 1 choice of 29 coaches a week ago, was awarded only one first-place vote and 491 points.

IN THE LOSS AT Oklahoma, Nevada-Las Vegas claimed a shot by Gary Graham at the buzzer ending the first half should have been a three-pointer. At the finish, the disputed point proved the difference.

Oklahoma, which won three games last week to boost its record to 12-3, climbed seven places to No. 9. UNLV barely held No. 3, finishing four points over Indiana, 14-1. The Hoosiers won three Big Ten games last week by a total of 91 points to remain No. 4. Purdue, 14-1, retained No. 5 with 456 points.

DePaul, at 14-0 one of only three unbeaten teams among the Top 20, moved up one spot to No. 6.

Reeves carries on business as usual

NEWPORT BEACH, Calif. (UPI) — Denver Broncos Coach Dan Reeves says his team will treat the days leading to the Super Bowl like any other week of the season.

The Broncos, playing in the NFL championship game for the second time, plan to devote as little as possible from their routine.

"With the exception of the press conferences, which are scheduled by the league, we'll try to keep it as much like a regular week as we can," Reeves said.

The Broncos flew to California Monday. They resume practice today at the campus of California-Irvine for Sunday's game against the New York Giants at the Rose Bowl in Pasadena.

Reeves said the Broncos are bracing for the hoopla, which is almost as much a part of the festivities as the game itself.

"I WILL DO everything I can to make sure our players are ready to handle the carnival type of atmosphere of the Super Bowl," he said.

Reeves and a few of the Broncos veterans, who were a part of Denver's 1977 Super Bowl team, spent last week warning their teammates about the distractions. "We wanted to get the guys to realize what they are in for, to rid them of the distractions we can't have if we expect to win," Reeves said. "But you never know what the impact will be until you get there."

Reeves said he wants the players to have a good time — within limits.

"I feel they should enjoy it. They earned the right to be in the Super Bowl," he said. "But they've got to have a lot of common sense. When it's time to work, it's time to work."

QUARTERBACK JOHN Elway, who has encountered cameras and microphones at every turn, said he is looking forward to the week in California, where the league will limit his exposure to interviews.

"He just wants to focus in on one thing, winning the game," Reeves said. "John's never been the kind of guy who sought the limelight. He knows this is the opportunity of a lifetime. And he knows a lot of people are depending on him."

Even receiver Vance Johnson, not one to shun attention, is cautious.

Frustration now over for Giants' 'survivors'

COSTA MESA, Calif. (UPI) — The New York Giants' players who survived the years of frustration say they always believed they would finally see better days.

"I've played in a lot of Super Bowls, driving back and forth to work," quarterback Phil Simms, whose leadership has led the Giants to Sunday's NFL championship game against the Denver Broncos, said. "I always thought that I'd get a chance to play in a game like this. I think all athletes are dreamers."

"I always knew if I stayed around long enough, something good like this would happen," 11-year veteran linebacker Harry Carson said.

Carson, defensive end George Martin and offensive tackle Brad Benson were part of "The Fumble" game of 1978 that symbolized the franchise's frustration from 1963 until 1981. Simms joined the Giants as a first-round draft choice in 1979 and suffered through four losing seasons in his first five years.

THOSE GIANTS, particularly Simms, have heard boos loud and often. They noticed a big difference Sunday when they arrived in their Super Bowl headquarters and were mobbed by Giants' fans.

But most of the current Giants have known mostly winning seasons. They made the playoffs as a 9-7 wild-card team under Coach Ray Perkins in 1981 and, after a 3-12-1 season in Bill Parcells' first year as head coach, have made the playoffs the past three years.

Next year might be right time for Cubs fans

By Mike Trilk
Staff Writer

"Wait until next year" has been a favorite phrase of Chicago Cubs fans for a long time.

Closing off a 1986 campaign that ended with a 70-90 record has Cub fans muttering those same famous words, "Wait until next year." But this really may be the year. At least this may be the year that the Cubs make some strides at becoming a winning ballclub.

One reason for optimism is Cub manager Gene Michael. Michael, who is entering his first full year as Chicago's manager after taking over for Jim Frey midway through last season, has plans to give the Cubs a shaking up, something that is well overdue in the theory. Last year the young guys played as well as the veterans did. I'd like to see us do some things (as far as trades go). But it's not too late. Things will pop in the spring. The last three weeks of spring training a lot of things are going to happen."

"I'M NOT GOING to be shy," Michael said at the Chicago Cubs' Winter Caravan stop at the Highlander Inn Monday night. "If you finish 35 games back and you don't make trades then you have to go with your young people. We can't stay the same."

For once the Cubs seem to be leaning towards keeping their young talent and building on it instead of trading it away like they have in the past, but Michael warned that nobody's job is a sure thing.

"I wouldn't be afraid of playing all young kids if I had too," Michael added. "If we don't make some trades and we have to do it with the same people, we'll have to change our him. I think he is more of an American League-type player. I tell you, though, he can hit the ball, and I like him with the bat in his hand."

Another deal that could be in the making would send Keith Moreland to St. Louis for Andy Van Slyke and Terry Pendleton.

"I know the Cubs have talked about it," Michael added. But the deal seems unlikely since the Cubs have told Moreland that he will be their third baseman this year.

"I'M HAPPY IN Chicago. My wife is happy in Chicago. And my kids like Chicago. So as far as I'm concerned I'm a Cub until someone comes up to me and tells me different," Moreland said. "I've played over 300 games at five different positions in the big leagues. I'm just happy to play everywhere wherever it might be on the field."

Despite the 70-90 finish the Cubs did have some rather impressive statistics last year. Chicago led the league in home runs for the second year in a row, and it was third in batting. So offense doesn't seem to be a problem for the club. Overall on defense the Cubs didn't fare too badly either as they led the league in that category, and Lee Smith became the first National League pitcher to save 30 or more games in three straight seasons.

THE PROBLEM WAS in the starting rotation. Last year the Cubs earned run average was last in the league and was well over 4.00. As far as Michael is concerned that's where the Cubs need help.

"Times change in a hurry, and we need to shore up the pitching," Michael added. "In 1984 the starters had a good season and since then none of them has done any good. I think they can come back. But if they don't by mid-season, then I have to think that they are no good."

At any rate the team seems to be optimistic heading into spring training.

"If we can win some games early and establish winning again we'll be all right," Moreland said. "Winning is the most contagious thing in sports. All you people have to do is look at the Iowa basketball team to find that out."

World Series MVP talks with Orioles

BALTIMORE (UPI) — Free agent third baseman Ray Knight, the Most Valuable Player in the 1986 World Series, talked with Baltimore Orioles officials Monday in hopes of signing with the club, the team announced.

Knight, voted the 1986 National League Comeback Player of the Year by United Press International, batted .298 with 11 home runs and 76 RBI in 137 games last season for the New York Mets.

Hank Peters, the executive vice president and general manager of the Orioles, said no agreement was reached but added that contract negotiations were continuing.

The Mets offered Knight $800,000 for one year but Knight was seeking a two-year pact. Knight said he would only sign a one-year deal for $1 million.

In other news, the Orioles announced that outfielder Mike Young signed a one-year pact with the club. Financial terms of the contract were not announced.

Young, 26, batted .252 with 9 home runs and 42 RBI in 117 games with the Orioles in 1986.

Giants urged to change team name

PASSAIC, N.J. (UPI) — A New Jersey newspaper group asked readers Monday to join a campaign to pressure the Super Bowl-bound New York Giants into changing the team name to reflect its actual home state.

The newspapers put coupons into Monday's editions, asking readers in front page stories to sign and return the coupons to show they believe the team should be called the "Jersey Giants."

The papers will present the coupons and readers' petitions to the team when the Giants return from Super Bowl XXI next week, said Roy E. Bode, editor and vice president of the Passaic Herald-News and the Paterson News.

"The Giants are as New Jersey as Bruce Springsteen," Bode said. "It's time to call them what they are, the Jersey Giants."

Also involved in the campaign are the Union City Dispatch, the Elizabeth Journal and the North Jersey Advance in Roxbury. All five papers are owned by North Jersey Newspapers Inc., a company jointly owned by three individuals and Media General Corp.

Bode said the campaign is a response to comments from readers critical of New York Mayor Ed Koch, who said several weeks ago he would not spend taxpayer money on a ticker tape parade for the Giants.

Harrah: last active Senator retires

ARLINGTON, Texas (UPI) — Toby Harrah, the last member of the old Washington Senators active in the major leagues, retired Monday and accepted a job as manager of the Texas Rangers' rookie league club in Charlotte, Fla.

The 16-year veteran will manage the Gulf Coast Rangers in the Gulf Coast League, handle other farm system duties for the Rangers and work as an infield instructor in the Florida Instructional League.

"Toby Harrah will be a strong asset to our farm system," Rangers executive Marty Scott said.

Harrah finished his major league career with a .264 batting average and 195 homers in 2,060 games with the Washington Senators, the Rangers, Cleveland and the New York Yankees.

He was the last member of the old Senators active in the major leagues. The Washington franchise moved to Texas in 1972.

In eight seasons with the Rangers, Harrah had a .259 batting average and holds club records with 579 runs, 122 homers, 546 RBI and 668 walks.

He became a free agent at the end of the 1986 season, and the Rangers did not pick up the option on his contract for 1987.

Ice Hawks hurt by loss of top players

By Marc Bona
Staff Writer

The 4-1 Ice Hawks' black squad will have its work cut out when it faces the Galesburg men's club Saturday and Sunday at Peoria, Ill.

The Ice Hawks, tied for the league lead with Palmer College, lost three players during break and are in the process of "regrouping," according to club captain F.J. Frazier.

Leading scorer Pete Dey graduated; Bob Stensby tore ligaments in his left knee while tobogganing; and Tom Stewart transferred to Denver College.

"We're looking to regroup and get our lines down. We have to see who's going to work well together. We also have to find out who's in shape and who's been partying over break. From there we'll make our decision, and hopefully we'll be able to come out of Peoria with a victory.

"WE HAVE TO TAKE it one game at a time and see how many players we have healthy. We have to circle our wagons. We're definitely a team with respect in the league, and I just hope we can keep it up. There's no reason we shouldn't win the Midwest Collegiate Hockey Association title," Frazier said.

Frazier said the Hawks have to "stay in our game plan" to win. We can't retaliate after their cheap shots."

Iowa goalie Brian Gandy said he "tended to agree" with Frazier's assessment of Galesburg's play. "We're going to go in and treat them as if they were Palmer."

The club will practice Wednesday at Waterloo. The bus will leave the Union at 6:30 p.m. Interested hockey players are welcome to join practice.

Also in weekend action is the Gold Squad, who will play Ripon College Friday at 8 p.m. and Saturday at 3 p.m.

The Cross Country Ski Club will be having an informational meeting Thursday, Jan. 22 at 7 p.m. in the Field House Room E220. A representative from Active Endeavors will speak on ski clothing. A 30-minute sports massage demonstration will also be included in the program.

Slugger Aaron lobbies for baseball minorities

NEW YORK (UPI) — Home run king Hank Aaron said Monday Commissioner Peter Ueberroth has discussed with him an intensified lobbying effort to bring more minorities into baseball's front office.

The Hall of Fame slugger said he detects little progress toward hiring blacks and Hispanics for significant baseball posts but added he is heartened by the commissioner's attitude.

"He does have a plan where he's gonna start talking to all the clubs, telling them what they need to do," Aaron said in an interview with United Press International on Martin Luther King Day.

Aaron said the range of jobs would include managers, general managers, public relations representatives and secretaries.

A spokeswoman at the commissioner's office said Ueberroth was unavailable for communication because of the holiday.

Aaron was in New York to be honored by Arby's as baseball's all-time RBI leader. Cleveland's Joe Carter and Philadelphia's Mike Schmidt also received awards for leading their leagues in RBI last season.

IN THE 40 YEARS since Jackie Robinson broke baseball's race barrier, only three blacks have managed in the big leagues — Frank Robinson, Maury Wills and Larry Doby. Now, none of the major leagues' managers or general managers is black. As the Atlanta Braves' farm director, Aaron holds one of the few front office jobs ever made available to a black.

Ueberroth said at December's winter meetings he hopes baseball will honor Robinson's memory by offering increased opportunity to blacks.

Conner earns chance at Cup

FREMANTLE, Australia (UPI) — Dennis Conner's Stars & Stripes recovered from a shredded sail Monday, crushing New Zealand by a fatal 89 seconds for the honor of challenging for the America's Cup.

"We can't lose sight of the real goal — the America's Cup," Stars & Stripes skipper Dennis Conner says. "The Australians are not going to let go easily."

Conner closed the best-of-seven challenger round in five races, earning the right to compete for the trophy he lost in 1983. Raising a clinched fist in victory as he crossed the finish line, Conner hugged and shook hands with his crew, many of whom shared in that agonizing defeat four years ago.

Conner, winner of the Louis Vuitton Cup as the top challenger, battles the Australian defender in the final best-of-seven series beginning Jan. 31.

In the competition to select a defender, skipper Iain Murray steered Kookaburra III to a 1:13 triumph over Alan Bond's Australia IV, one victory away from wrapping up the honor of defending the Cup Bond won in 1983.

BOTH BOATS CHARGED — Violations of right-of-way rules and unfurled red protest flags, sending the result to the international jury. If the result stands, Kookaburra III will own a 4-0 lead in the best-of-nine series.

The day, however, belonged to the new challenger — Conner.

"We can't lose sight of the real goal — the America's Cup," Conner said after a champagne dousing from his crew. "The Australians are not going to let go easily. We have to redouble our efforts and work our fannies off in the next 10 days."

Conner toppled the Kiwi dream of bringing the trophy to Auckland, N.Z., and bolstered his hopes of returning the Cup to the United States.

"Thirteen years of experience beat 13 months," Kiwi helmsman Chris Dickson, who first stepped aboard a 12-Meter one year ago, said. "Stars & Stripes sailed better than we did. We played every card and every trick. The better boat won."

CROWDS ABOARD — A 150-spectator craft cheered the triumphant crew back to the dock with toasts and the blast of boat horns.

"We'll have to keep those champagne bottles in the refrigerator a little longer — three years in fact," grim New Zealand syndicate chief Michael Fay, watching his $10 million campaign end on the Indian Ocean course, said.

Conner's victory came despite a damaged sail. The 27-knot winds churning up seven-foot seas destroyed the 60-foot genoa on the second windward leg.

Conner stayed at the wheel with tactician Tom Whidden while the other nine crewmen dragged down the remnants of the $10,000 sail and cut them loose.

AS STARS & STRIPES flourished with only a mainsail and the Kiwis closed in, the crew hurriedly hoisted a new one in an incredibly fast three minutes to remain 14 seconds ahead at the third mark.

Even the unveiling of a surprise Kiwi gennaker sail — half spinnaker and half genoa — failed to power the fiberglass boat ahead on the reach.

Conner's basic strategy of maintaining straight-line speed and keeping the fiberglass boat behind proved to be the coup de grace.

Conner, 44, is the world's most experienced 12-Meter skipper, in Cup competition since 1974. He survived 3½ months of grueling competition among an original field of 13 competitors. The San Diego Yacht Club skipper emerged as America's sole hope of winning back the trophy.

Ditka leaves town amid speculation

Ditka, who has one year left on a contract he signed right before the 1984 NFC championship game, will spend the week in California, a team spokesman said.

Ditka is to appear on "The Tonight Show" Tuesday night but has no other public appearances. Team officials said Ditka is not expected to attend the Super Bowl between the New York Giants and the Denver Broncos even though he is a close friend of Denver Coach Dan Reeves.

Speculation has surfaced that Ditka, who coached Chicago to a championship a year ago, will either quit after the 1987 season or work out a settlement with team President Michael McCaskey and leave before the college draft in April.

Sunday, the Bears said McCaskey denied a story in the Boston Globe in which Ditka said he would not return after next year.

"FIRST, HE DENIES any report Ditka has given his resignation," Bears' public relations' director Ken Valdiserri said. "And secondly, he says Ditka hasn't told him he wouldn't coach the Bears beyond 1987."

Ditka's status has been uncertain since McCaskey fired General Manager Jerry Vainisi last Thursday. Ditka and Vainisi are close friends and business associates in a Chicago restaurant and nightclub.

The Globe quoted Ditka as saying to McCaskey: "This season is my last. Don't even bother to ask me about signing an extension of my contract because I won't do it."

The Globe also said Ditka told his assistant coaches they were free to explore other job opportunities.

McCaskey has repeatedly voiced optimism Ditka would return. Ditka guided Chicago to a 14-2 regular-season mark this year before the Bears lost to Washington in the NFC semi-finals.

WHAT IS A DILL BURGER?

Terry Hanson can testify that the question he is asked most often is, "What is a dill burger?" His answer is, "It is a 5 oz. of fresh lean ground beef that we top with special seasoning as we cook it." He emphasizes that the beef is seasoned lightly as the spices are meant to enhance the flavor, not overpower it.

Notice how Terry stresses the word fresh? That's because all the beef used at The Famous Dill Burger is locally purchased fresh, never frozen. Terry definitely feels some of the natural flavor of the beef is taken away if it has been frozen. All burgers are weighed at 5 oz. before cooking. Terry and his employees realize that hamburger does shrink during cooking and they want to make sure you do get a full quarter pound of beef when they serve you.

Burgers are not cooked in advance and held under heat lamps. Each customer is asked which condiments he prefers, so each sandwich is prepared to his special tastes and expectations.

Specialty burgers are also prepared from lean USDA ground beef. Specialty burgers often requested include the "Mushroom Burger" topped with butter-sauteed fresh mushrooms in a gravy sauce. The "HAM-Burger" is topped with melted Swiss cheese and tender ham slices.

Side orders are delicious with your burger. Try Curly-Q's, freshly spiral-cut potatoes french fried to a golden brown. The onion rings and crisp french fries also bring raves. People often return to Terry's counter to tell him how much they enjoyed the food and that they will be back. They feel they get their money's worth as prices are very reasonable.

Any time is "Burger Time." Perfect complements are the creamy dairy malts and shakes prepared at The Famous Dill Burger.

Stop in soon. If you're in a hurry, call 351-0628 and Terry's specialties will be ready for carry out. Or take a break and relax at 121 Iowa Ave., where there is lots of comfortable seating.

Troupe will stage 'Aida' in Verdi's original setting

CAIRO, Egypt (UPI) — An Italian opera troupe will stage the first production of Giuseppe Verdi's Aida in its "natural habitat," the 4,000-year-old temple of Karnak in the southern city of Luxor, organizers said Sunday.

The chief promoter of the $7 million production, Vienna-based Egyptian businessman Fawzi Metwalli, told a Cairo news conference he hopes the May 2-12 performance by the Opera Verona troupe will attract 30,000 tourists, mainly from Europe.

"After 116 years, the opera will be shown in its natural habitat — the city of Luxor," he said.

The first performance of Aida, which celebrates the fortunes of an Ethiopian slave girl in the courts of the Pharaohs, was planned for 1869 as part of festivities marking the opening of the Suez Canal.

BUT THE OPERA, written by composer Verdi and based in the Luxor area, was not completed in time. Its first performance was not until 1871 elsewhere in Egypt.

Organizers said an amphitheater to seat 5,000 will be built outside the sprawling Karnak temple along the Nile, described in ancient texts as "the secret dwelling of the lord of the gods."

A spokesman for EgyptAir, the national carrier, said the airline already has received thousands of bookings for that period — as well as several requests for extra flights from Britain, Italy, Spain, Austria, Switzerland, Greece and Denmark.

Fuad Soltan, the Egyptian minister of tourism, announced the May undertaking at a news conference Sunday and said it "will combine culture with tourism."

HE SAID ARTISTS and technicians from several nations, including Britain, Austria, Italy, West Germany and Egypt, will participate. He said the government is not underwriting the project.

Soltan said a rival plan to stage the same opera at the foot of the Great Pyramid near Cairo has been postponed "and will not take place before the end of the year."

The Karnak amphitheater site lies in front of the great pylon of Ramses II, who ruled Egypt between 1301 and 1235 B.C., and was once adorned by two granite obelisks.

One of them was removed to the Place de la Concorde in Paris in 1836. The other obelisk, of Queen Hatshepsut, who ruled Egypt between 1504 and 1483 B.C., remains. One of the organizers raised the possibility that a second obelisk may be built to replace the one that was taken to France.

Metwalli said that although the theater will have 5,000 seats, he does not expect more than 3,000 tickets will be sold for each night.

"No ticket will be sold without a bed guarantee in Luxor," he said, explaining that the city's hotels have a maximum 3,000 beds.

"But on nights when floating hotels arrive in Luxor, with more bed capacity, I expect that tickets in excess of the 3,000 figure will be sold," said Metwalli, who owns oil and tourism companies in Austria.

'Song of South' retains zip despite period oversights

By Hoyt Olsen
Staff Writer

ZIPPITY DOO DAH. After several months in re-release in the rest of the Western World, Walt Disney Studio's Song of the South has finally reached Iowa City.
 Made in 1946, Song of the South is distinguished primarily by its pioneering mixture of animation and live actors. When the cartoon figures are dancing and singing around the human characters, the film is truly magical.
 As for the separate cartoon and live sequences — well, as the theme song states, "everything is satisfactory," but satisfactory is about as good as it gets.
 The plot is based on the Uncle Remus stories by Joel Chandler Harris. In the movie, Remus befriends a white boy named Johnny whose parents have separated briefly. The father is a newsman involved in some controversy back in Atlanta (the nature of which is never specified), and Johnny's mother has come home to live on the plantation with her mother until things blow over. Since this allows Mom to boss around a legion of servants while never doing a lick of work herself, additional motives may be suspected.
 To help Johnny adapt to his new surroundings and his father's absence, Remus tells a series of Br'er Rabbit stories that apply to Johnny's particular difficulties. When Johnny tries to run away, so does Br'er Rabbit; Br'er Rabbit learns that home is better than the day of the road, and Johnny learns by example.

 There is a one-note quality to these animated tales that does not do complete justice to Harris' originals. In each tale Br'er Rabbit is captured by the malevolent Br'er Fox and the dense Br'er Bear, but uses his wits to escape. "Please, Br'er Fox, you can cook me or hang me, please jes' don't fling me into dat briar patch." Fortunately these episodes are brief and infrequent enough that they cannot descend to the mind-numbing quality of Road Runner vs. Coyote fare.
 The story of Johnny receives more screen time. Johnny's biggest problem is Mom, who decides that even the slightest misbehavior is somehow traceable to Uncle Remus' innocuous tales. She tries to keep Johnny and Remus apart — but this is Disney, and one need never doubt a satisfactory resolution.
Song of the South has been criticized for its dated quality. Its post-Civil War plantation is unrealistically idyllic, and its black characters reflect stereotypes common to films of the period. But the warmth of the film compensates for its period oversights, and the loving relationship between Remus and Johnny offers audiences both young and old a suitable example of the meaning of brotherhood.

Reagan meeting focus on 'Irangate'

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The White House acknowledged a turnabout Tuesday that President Ronald Reagan has met with two top advisers to reconstruct events in the Iran arms scandal and prepare to field questions on the foreign policy gambit.
 Deputy press secretary Alb Brashers said Reagan held a meeting on the affair with chief of staff Donald Regan and White House legal counsel Peter Wallison since the first of the year.
 "You can assume there had been some discussion and recollection of events," Brashers said.
 In addition, Brashers said Reagan held an extensive discussion of the matter with the president in late November and could have held similar sessions since that time.

THE DISCLOSURE was contrast to Brashers' comment Friday that he had knowledge of any effort to aides to question Reagan about recollections that might help clear up contradictions among his present and former advisers.
 The White House also retracted an earlier statement that the three-member Tower Commission, reviewing operations of the National Security Council staff, had not formally sought a date to question Reagan about the Iran arms sale, the diversion of sales profits to Nicaraguan rebels and other matters.
 Brashers said the commission, headed by former Sen. John Tower, R-Texas, sent the White House on Monday two possible dates, and discussions on a specific time and set of ground rules were continuing.
 Officials indicated the session would be held after Reagan delivers his State of the Union address next Tuesday.

1987 American College Theatre Festival

Iowa City

by Larry Shue

Wednesday, January 21 at 4 and 8 p.m. Mabie Theatre

This nutty farce takes place in a back country Georgia lodge, where the refusal of a shy Britisher to admit he speaks or understands English sets in motion countless complications. He overhears all manner of skulduggery, but the villains are thwarted, the Klan is turned back, and everybody good lives happily ever after in this sunny comedy.

NIJINSKY

by Glenn Blumstein

Tuesday, January 20 at 8 p.m.
 Thursday, January 22 SOLDOUT
 Friday, January 23 at 8 p.m. Theatre "A"

In its October showing, all 10 performances sold out. If you missed it before, you can see it now! Iowa playwright Glenn Blumstein's play is a dramatization of the greatest male dancer in history. Nijinsky's breathtaking performances and choreography for the Ballet Russe in the 1909-13 seasons took Europe by storm, while his troubled, steamy private life made society's tongues wag.

presented by The University of Iowa

The Normal Heart

by Larry Kramer

Friday, January 23 at 4 and 8 p.m. Mabie Theatre

This searching drama portrays the anguish of a gay relationship dealing with the stress of AIDS during the first years of the disease's discovery 1981-84. The couple must come to terms with the disease while the epidemic grows in velocity—unchecked and unobserved by the media, politicians, and society at large. Kramer's play is highly political, but his passionate message reduces the crisis to the common bond of human love, suffering, and mortality.

presented by Webster University (St. Louis)

Chekhov in Yalta

by John Driver and Jeffrey Haddow

Saturday, January 24 at 4 and 8 p.m. Mabie Theatre

Imagine a play by Chekhov, at once comic and bittersweet, set in picturesque Yalta of 1900. Add a brilliant cast of historical figures including the playwrights Chekhov and Gorky, the stage director Stanislavsky, and the entire Moscow Art Theatre. The result is a very special evening of theatre. Don't miss this unusual creation.
