State Department curbs travel to Lebanon

By Bruce Jones

City Editor

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The State Department, seeking to avoid a repetition of Wednesday's hostage crisis, on Thursday announced a travel advisory for Lebanon since 1975.

Three days after a raft of kidnappings of Westerners in Lebanon, the State Department on Thursday issued a travel advisory for those who are considering traveling to that country.

The advisory said those who are considering traveling to Lebanon should be aware of the risk of kidnapping and other criminal activities.

The advisory also warned of the possibility of violence and civil unrest in Lebanon.

The State Department recommended that travelers avoid unnecessary travel to Lebanon and that those who are already in Lebanon should leave as soon as possible.

The advisory pointed out that the Lebanese government had not taken any action to secure the release of the hostages or to prevent further kidnappings.

The State Department also noted that the Lebanese government had not taken any action to secure the release of the hostages or to prevent further kidnappings.

The advisory concluded by stating that the State Department would continue to monitor the situation in Lebanon and that travelers should be aware of the risks.

Local residents sign petition to halt closing of auto school

By James Casey

City Editor

More than 300 Iowa City residents have signed a petition in an attempt to stop the closing of a local trade technical school because they believe it is necessary for the local workforce.

The school is the Auto Mechanics, Vocational Program of Kirkwood Community College, 1002 Lowrey Boulevard, which offers courses in auto mechanics, welding, and other fields.

The petition is being circulated by the American Federation of Labor — Congress of Industrial Organizations (AFL-CIO), which is circulating the petition in Iowa City.

The petition states that the school is not being adequately staffed and that the courses offered are not being adequately supported.

The petition also points out that the school was founded in the 1940s to meet the war-time needs of the United States and that it has been in operation since then.

The petition concludes by stating that the school should remain open and that the courses offered should be continued.

Deere, UAW near contract agreement

UAW, IL (UPS) - Deere & Co. employees and leaders in affiliated chapters reached a tentative agreement Monday, making a possible strike a distant memory. The agreement is the result of a 139-day labor dispute between the United Auto Workers and the giant farm-equipment company. This has been a long time coming. Verbal negotiations that virtually has raised a list of open issues to be presented to the UAW. Gary Trudell, president of the UAW's Chicago District, spoke of the agreement reached on a master contract.

The industry analyst said that the framework of the six-month labor dispute has been on a role of bitterness and ill will between workers and the Iowa and Illinois jurisdictions where company plants are located.

Gary Trudell, UAW local 804 co-chairman, said that the union's rank-and-file ratified the agreement to end a labor dispute against the giant farm-equipment company.

Details of the tentative master contract were not immediately released. The agreement covers thousands of Deere workers in Dubuque, Waterloo, Ottumwa and Atiyee in Iowa and the "right side" of those not in Deere. It included provisions which have been "devaluated" in the negotiations.

"There is no work in the U.S. to be done these days because of the strike," he added. Gary Trudell was not available for comment.

"We have to find out if the make, line, price, and the retail price of the product are acceptable," Trudell said.

"It's going to take a long time long to come back for sure."

To the Editor:

In the recent column bymushrooming costs, education policy brings to mind the situation of the cost of living. In our country, the cost of living has increased dramatically since the 1970s. This has resulted in an increase in tuition costs at colleges and universities across the nation. As a result, many students are struggling to pay for higher education. In my opinion, the government should be doing more to support students and make higher education more accessible.
President Ronald Reagan has talked about cutting the budget for many programs, including education. However,
I believe that investing in our future through education is critical. We need to find ways to balance the budget while still supporting education.

Sincerely,

Smooth talker

While watching President Ronald Reagan's State of the Union address, I was reminded of a quote: 'Can't the American people and mass media see through the crises, it only makes sense to take such a stance.' This quote, originally attributed to President Reagan, captures the essence of his approach to difficult situations. Reagan's ability to frame issues in a way that resonated with the American public was truly remarkable.
He understood the power of language and used it to influence public opinion and rally support for his policies.

Athletics, coaches defended

Guest Opinion

In his letter to the editor, Al Terry expresses his opinions on the issue of reductions in college sports budgets. He argues that coaches should be held accountable for the performance of their athletes and that reducing their funding is not justifiable.

I feel that athletes and coaches are both responsible for the success of a sports team. Coaches play a crucial role in t raining and motivating their athletes, but athletes also need to be held accountable for their actions and performance.

Iran: U.S. must make effort

TEHRAN (AP) — The speaker of Iran's parliament, Mohsen Rezaei, who is suspected of being a Moslem extremist, said yesterday that the United States must make a major effort to free five Americans held as hostages in Iran.

"Iran will never, ever surrender," Rezaei said in a televised speech. "The Iranian revolution has come to remain and will not surrender to any foreign pressures.

Rezaei said the United States must make "an honest and sincere effort" to free the hostages. He said the United States has "no choice but to release" the hostages and that "the Americans should be freed within 48 hours."

Iran's parliament was considering a bill to impeach the foreign minister, who presides over the government's hostage negotiations.

"The government is flexible for the benefit of our people," he said. "But it is not flexible in the face of the challenges." Rezaei said the Iranian government would continue to hold out for the hostages until they are released.

Rezaei said the United States should release the hostages immediately and that "the Americans will not surrender to any pressures.

Iranian officials said the hostage crisis was the result of "a lack of understanding of the Iranian revolution" and that the United States should make a "serious effort" to free the hostages.

"The Americans should be freed immediately," Rezaei said. "The United States will not be able to hold out any longer than 48 hours."

Rezaei said the United States should make a "serious effort" to free the hostages and that "the Americans should be freed within 48 hours."

The hostage crisis was caused by the American capture of the U.S. embassy in Tehran last November and has been a source of tension between the two countries.

The crisis was triggered by the American invasion of Iran in 1980, which led to the American hostage crisis.

The crisis has been ongoing for more than 40 years and has been a major source of tension between the United States and Iran.

Filipino troopers fire tear gas at station held by insurgents

MANILA, Philippines (UPI) - Filipino troopers fired tear gas at a station held by insurgents in an attempt to flush out some 300 rebels who have been holding hostages for more than a month.

A leader of the rebels, who said they were affiliated with the Moro National Liberation Front, said they were holding about 50 people hostage in the station.

"We will not surrender," the rebel leader said.

"The government must put down the rebellion," he said.

The rebels, who are believed to be members of the Moro National Liberation Front, have been holding hostages in the station since the beginning of the week.

The rebels are believed to be part of a larger insurgency in the southern Philippines that has been ongoing for more than a decade.

The Abu Sayyaf Group, a Muslim separatist group, is believed to be behind the hostage-taking.

The rebels have been demanding the release of imprisoned rebel leaders and the end of the military presence in the area.

The rebels have also been involved in a number of other incidents, including the hijacking of a ferry in 2001.

"Thin" Hawkeye track team hits pair of weekend meets

By Bob Millet

An Iowa men’s track team that has "traveled since I’ve been in school," according to last year’s captain, will look to add to its "biggest meet" this weekend.

In the past, the Hawkeyes have competed in a pair of meets, one in Illinois and one in Iowa. This weekend, the team will compete in a pair of meets, one in Cedar Falls, Iowa, and one at the University of Illinois in Urbana-Champaign.

"We have several people who can’t be competing," Wheeler says of Saturday’s Northern Iowa meet. "We hope to basically avoid disaster."

Wheeler says that the team will compete in the high hurdles, pole vault, long jump, and the triple jump. "We think it’s a prominent eastern meet," Wheeler says of the Northern Iowa meet.

In the Northern Iowa meet, Wheeler and Chuck will run in the 800. "We have a good skill people in the long jump and high jump, and after that people will be competing against mostly female people ... and schools like Vincennes and St. John."

Wheeler has been on the track team since his freshman year, and the team has had its share of injuries. "We have had several injuries this season, including several foot and hamstring injuries. The team has been working hard to prepare for the upcoming meets."

In conclusion, the Hawkeye track team is looking forward to a successful weekend, with the hope of avoiding any major injuries. They are ready to compete against some of the top teams in the country and show their skills and determination on the track.

UI Art Museum docents call experience fulfilling

By Jill Lauritzen
staff writer

To TEACH or to lead in the museum field takes a certain "guesst," a word that best describes the docents here at the museum. It is the Docent Program at the UI Art Museum that is getting ready to accept volunteers to teach or to lead tours through the museum's many exhibits.

The program currently has 15 active docents, and the Docent Calendar has about 10 people interested in being docents. The program is open to anyone who has a love for art and a desire to share that love with others.

Docents are not required to have any previous experience in the museum field. "You don't have to be an expert," said the museum's curator of education, Jan Zilke. "You must be able to communicate effectively, however." Docents are expected to attend an orientation program, where they are taught about the museum's collection and its history. They are also expected to complete a training program, which includes a tour of the museum with an experienced docent.

The museum's director of education, Jim Zilke, said that docents are an important part of the museum's mission. "They are a vital link between the museum and the public," he said. "Docents help to educate people about the museum's collection and its significance." Docents also help to promote the museum and its programs, as well as to encourage people to visit the museum.

Docents are expected to commit to one semester, usually one day a week. The docent program meets every Friday, and the number of docents varies depending on the program's needs.

Docents are reimbursed for any expenses they incur while they are working for the museum. "They are paid for their time and expenses," said Zilke. "It is important that docents are compensated for their work."

Docents are also expected to contribute to the museum's social events, such as the museum's annual art fair. "We value the docents' contributions," said Zilke. "They are an important part of the museum's community."

Pialat’s ‘Police’ lacks depth

By George Vatchenin

Staff Writer

RECENTLY it seems to be the season to watch films about the interna tional drug trade. Such films include such well known movies as "Pulp Fiction" and "The Hunt for Red October." However, it might be interesting to explore a more modern scenario. Luc Besson’s "Police" has starred in two such films. It’sNo Name and Yugoslavia.

The dialogue is as well as the plot, doesn’t happen to be exciting. But a conversation with Lam

But you can’t help but wonder why Mangin isn’t smart enough to see the problem in not smart at all, just a void in his way home, content with necking) that he whistles his

His INTELLIGENCE is purely physical, which is why an information must involve self-preservation. Perhaps the most interesting selection is the film's opening half hour could be described as an attempt to drain the emotion out of the characters, as if they are being prepped for the final act.

This may just be a twist on the noble savage theme examined by Francois Truffaut in his film "Bijou." In the opening half hour plays like a

This beginning plays like a standard police film but seems unexpected, at least the carousel seems to be drained into the incredibly deep blue walls of the police station. Mangin himself seems bored, able to derive little satisfaction from his work. Sometimes, he is the only one that he can’t help but trust. That’s why what occurs (maybe still in a gratuitous made sense with Besson’s isn’t gratuitous) Pialat wants to say. "News’ truth, anything beyond this can be a

In another interesting short story that explores the relationship of a father-son Mangin in his own parents, as well as to his children. Blindness to his own mistakes and faults, coupled with an inability to act, stifle his desire to trust. This makes it hard to believe there are any true feelings in the dialogue; often it’s hard to believe ultimately hurts
