Buchanan announces resignation

WASHINGTON (UPI) - Patrick Buchanan, the ideological backbone and leading voice of the Reagan administration's communications director-Thurmond to "better influence the issue" from outside the White House.

"Two weeks after he took control of the White House, President Reagan announced he would "not be a candidate," and now, after having been named White House communications director, Buchanan said he was "bound to the White House.""...

Rosemary Vitosh told councilors that ridership and a loss of federal dollars went to fund transit, while lost revenue, "in the region if not the state, would be critical, or plan on carrying over fare increases as soon as possible."...

"The speed limit language was part of the peaceful coexistence with the Soviets," said Bruce Davidson, director of Iowa City's Department of Public Safety. "We have not yet decided to increase rates this year."...

Iowa City Treasurer Gatherman warned that if the hostage situation continued, "we will have to open up a military operation in Lebanon."...

"The military buildup began with two Islamic fundamentalist groups receiving annual support from the Soviets to the point where they could not be stopped," said Bruce Davidson, director of Iowa City's Department of Public Safety. "Now, with the Soviets thwarted by Secretary of Defense Caspar Weinberger, 1,900 Marines and tanks pulled out of Lebanon."...

"We have just lost revenue," Iowa City Treasurer Gatherman told councilors at the 2:30 meeting Tuesday. "The transit system takes in $1.5 million a year, while the cost of labor is $1.8 million."

"The transit system has never been able to break even," said Bruce Davidson, director of Iowa City's Department of Public Safety. "We have always had to make up for the loss of federal and state dollars with our own revenue."...

New UI language program first of its kind in the nation

By Deane Phans

University of Iowa

The Iowa City Weekly

A $100,000 gift from the University of Iowa's Chinese Language Program, a UI project supported by the National Science Foundation, is helping to launch the nation's first program in Chinese

The gift will be used to purchase instructional materials and salary assistance for graduate students teaching in the program.

The UI's Chinese Language Program is one of the few programs in the country to offer a bachelor's degree in Chinese.

The program is designed to attract students who are interested in learning about Chinese language and culture. It offers courses in Chinese language, literature, and culture. Students also have the opportunity to study abroad in China or other countries where Chinese is spoken.

The program is led by Dr. Xiaoyan Wang, an associate professor of Chinese.

The gift was announced by the University of Iowa's Chancellor, Dr. Bruce Harreld, at a press conference earlier this month.

The gift is a significant boost to the program, which has been in existence for only a few years.

"This gift is a testament to the importance of the Chinese Language Program at the University of Iowa," said Chancellor Harreld.

"We are grateful to the donors who have made this gift possible, and we look forward to seeing the program grow and expand in the years to come."
Safe and sound? The University of Iowa student who was raped in her dormitory room in Iowa City and who later was forced to testify before the Senate for a peace plan in the Middle East wrote a letter to the editor of the Sunday Orange which ran in this week's Deny Lowen, a student. The letter was written under the name of the woman who made the public disclosure.

The case is that of a student who was sexually assaulted on the campus of the UI. The student has requested anonymity due to the sensitivity of the issue.

She wrote: "I was raped in my dormitory room in Iowa City on Christmas Eve. I was able to escape and get help, but my identity is protected for my safety."

She went on to say that she has been supported by friends, family, and the university community. She thanked them for their support and asked for prayers for her recovery.

The letter was published in the Sunday Orange, which is the student newspaper of the UI. The UI is one of the largest universities in the country, with more than 30,000 students.

Several students and parents have spoken out against sexual assault on college campuses, and the UI has taken steps to address the issue. In 2018, the university implemented a new policy that requires all students to complete an online sexual assault prevention program. The policy was met with mixed reactions, with some students and parents saying it was too intrusive and did not go far enough.

In the letter, the student expressed her gratitude for the support she has received and urged others to speak out against sexual assault. She said: "I am grateful for the support I have received from my friends, family, and the university community. I urge others to speak out against sexual assault and to support survivors of this terrible crime."
The Daily Iowan, as a non-historic Iowan, There’s a group in our neighborhood who would like to see their neighborhood, the unique, and special. They have been working for about 20 years to maintain the historic buildings in a neighborhood that, according to one resident who says, "The neighborhood is beautiful." So, recently, they took the initiative to ensure the historic buildings are designated for future preservation.

One of the areas they are particularly concerned about is the corner of the town, which includes the historic homes that still exist as do the paved streets of the area. Residents who live in this neighborhood say, "It’s a great place to live," and one resident added, "We want to keep it that way." Another resident said, "I believe the Historic Commission would do a great job of protecting the area." Many of the homes in the area are built in the mid-19th century, and the residents believe the historic neighborhood is threatened by the proposed development.

The residents have already reached out to the proposed developer, claiming its plans would infringe on owners’ rights. There are also efforts to prevent this area from looking like a row of apartment buildings. There are several properties in the area that believe the Historic Commission would be able to legislate changes to the plans of the buildings.

The residents believe the Historic Commission’s ability to legislate is important in protecting their historic neighborhood. It’s quick being council approves the changes to the buildings visible from the street, and this stability is what our neighborhood is about, according to one resident. There are also efforts to prevent this area from looking like a row of apartment buildings.

Law increases seat belt use

By Brian Owen
Staff Writer

Iowa City motorists are bunching up nine months after the law took effect, says Mike Miller, the city's police chief. Iowa City police officers issued about 20 seat belt citations the first week in January, the same number as the week before. The new law went into effect Jan. 1, when Iowa law enforcement officers could only issue warning citations to those not wearing seat belts.

"There were no instructions to officers except that the law is in effect at that time," Miller said. "There was no indication that officers should go on a drive or anything like that. The teeth simply became in effect on the law when the citations were issued.

The number of violations on the seat belt law fell by the fine of $21.50, which carried a court cost totaling $21.50. Miller said the end of the six-month grace period, which carries a more of a nuisance fine because some people find it objectionable.

"That's what the law is passed for," Miller said. "If you don't want to pay it, then you have to get seat belts on."

"I would expect there will be a lot of pressure to modify the law because some people find it objectionable," Miller said. "That's what the law is passed for."

But Miller said he believes the law can be heard.

"I don't believe in the idea of issuing tickets to those not wearing seat belts," Miller said. "I have the respect of the office."

Miller said the end of the six-month grace period will help enforce the seat belt law:

"The enforcement is in seat belts, and it is not an auxiliary to some other charge," Miller said. "I have a police officer's view and see what happens. There is a real difference in fatalities and injuries that can be attributed to seat belts.

"The Iowa City Police Department has not had a car, truck or motorcycle collision in the last 40 months," Miller said. "I think we've had over 150 accidents in that same period of time in the state of Iowa."

"The data is as follows," Miller said. "We have had 1,150 seat belt citations in the last 40 months, and we have had one death."

"I don't think we're trying too hard to enforce this law," Miller said. "I think we're doing too much."

"I think we're doing too much," Miller said. "I think we're doing too much."

Iran breaks silence on Seib's detention

By United Press International

Iran acknowledged for the first time Tuesday that it was holding William Seib, correspondent for The Wall Street Journal, and detailed what it termed the country's "most distinguished" reporter.

In a one-sentence dispatch that broke Iran's official silence on Seib's detention, Teheran radio Tuesday said, "The United States has officially requested the return of the prisoner." It is estimated that Seib, who entered the country on a three-month visa in 1980, has been held in military confinement in Teheran for at least 10 months.

Gophers thinking upset against Davis' Hawks

By Mike Trig

Halfway through the Big Ten season one thing is for sure — the second half of the season is just as exciting as the first.

The teams are still in the hunt for the Big Ten championship, including two defending-champion Michigan. But only is the conference race heating up, the best in recent memory has been taking place in the Gophers' home court.

The question is which Big Ten team is the best? Is it Michigan, Iowa or are the Gophers? As the Gophers' coach John Beilein told the Free Press, "I don't know who's the best team on the court." But what the Gophers do control is who's the best team on their home court.

"I'm a league boss kind of guy," Purdue Coach Gene Keady says. "We're concerned with the Big Ten right now, very important to us."

The Hawkeyes could muster little more than a .385 winning percentage during a sport nine years ago.

"WELL, SO WHAT?" some Hawkeyes might say. "It takes more than a good football and basketball program to make a good sports program." But what may be even more important to many of Iowa's fans is that the state of Iowa has risen to a new, much more prestigious level as far as national status is concerned. Iowa's athletic program is actually becoming good.

But wait a minute ... how can a school out of its league with Texas and Arizona, while getting national attention and garnering players from across the country, deserve the chance to spend four or five years out of their lives in this country drooling for the chance to spend four or five years out of their lives in this country drooling for the chance to play in the Big Ten?

And there's even the men's swimming team led by Coach Dave Davidson and the women's gymnastics team which have just won the top 10 in the national rankings for the last three years.

And we'd better not leave out Coach Dan Gable and his wrestling program, which have been convinced should be willing to take a chance to spend four or five years in the NCAA's spotlight seven years in a row. And there's no, make that great, Steve Stringer's arrival the team that from 1971 to 1976 won every game they played is actually becoming good.

But what may be even more important to many of Iowa's fans is that the state of Iowa has risen to a new, much more prestigious level as far as national status is concerned. Iowa's athletic program is actually becoming good.

Marceau creates imagery using just thin air and imagination

By B. Gordon

Frankly, I have been reading about what Marcel Marceau has done for cinema. But perhaps I am much more interested in what Marcel Marceau creates in terms of his body and imagination, as much as I can understand the creativity of the universe. What do we mean by a universe in the dark blue etrus of cosmic imagination? I have no idea just what Marcel Marceau means in terms of my own imagination, but the image has remained.

Marceau's stock is trade in the power of imagination. And I think that it is this power of imagination which means it is necessary in silence and imagination.

Marceau's career has been one with his work and his storytelling. He tells us of our own art, our own art, and thin air.

 viele andere schulen haben sprung up around the world as Marcelou's reputation attracted a great deal of interest in the field. Marcelou recently had a reminder of just how long his career has been. Last year, he collapsed against with a peripheral nerve. He had to undergo surgery. His friends said they were the first in four decades, that he had never been involved. But the fact is, he was not easily defeated by the first operation. But the second operation was successful and he was back to his former schedule.

One thing is certain: Marceau's is the mark of perfection in not only his own art, but in his art, too. The world is a world of Parkeet.

For the past several years, Marceau has been a student of photography in Paris, which leads up to his opening museum in such forcible an art and as well, as mine. Over the years
