WARWICK, R.I. (UPI) — The principal of a Rhode Island high school said the Battle Hymn of the Republic was played for the first time Wednesday night, in the face of protest, after the song was banned for 36 years.

The song, banned for being too political, was played at a graduation ceremony Wednesday night, in defiance of the school's administration.

The principal of Warwick High School, where the song was banned, said the decision to play it was made after consultation with the school board.

Tower panel plans to reveal Iran scan discoveries today

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Nuclear Non-Proliferation Treaty (NPT) is reaching its 30th anniversary, and the United States is preparing to celebrate it.

The U.S. government plans to announce the results of a secret scan of Iran's nuclear facilities today.

The scan, conducted by the Department of Energy, will be revealed by a high-level delegation from the U.S. government.

The delegation will be led by a senior official from the Energy Department.

The results of the scan are expected to be a major milestone in the NPT's 30-year history.

ORLANDO, Fla. (UPI) — A man searching for a green alligator in the sewers of Orlando has found a green 8-foot gator.

The gator, a street-smart reptile, was last seen near a local waterway.

The man, who was searching for the gator, said he was surprised to find a gator in the sewers.

Court OKs affirmative action plan

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The U.S. Department of Justice has approved an affirmative action plan for the University of Iowa, setting a precedent for other universities.

The plan, which includes a 5% minority enrollment goal, has been met by Iowa's rival, the University of Michigan, in its affirmative action plan.

The University of Michigan's affirmative action plan was approved in 1978.
Panel predicts 2-cent gas tax hike

Iowa's Department of Natural Resources, in a study completed last week, predicted a 2-cent per gallon tax hike if the state does not raise the gas tax.

Koengs said after the committee's meeting Wednesday he decided to halt drawing down any new money, but that he would continue to work on projects that are already underway.

Koengs said said that the committee had decided that the governor's plan was too ambitious and that it would be more feasible to phase in the increase over several years.

Koengs said that the committee had also decided that the state needed to do more to prepare for the increase, including developing a plan for how to use the new revenue.

The committee also discussed the possibility of using the new revenue to help fund transportation projects, but decided that this would be too complex and would require more research.

Koengs said that the committee would continue to work on the tax increase, and that he hoped to have a final plan in place by the end of the year.

The program, which began in the fall of 1986, is a partnership between the University of Iowa, the University of London, and the American Institute for Foreign Study. Through this program, students of participating universities can earn credits toward their degree requirements while studying in London. The right of an Iowa university student to attend the program is based on academic merit and is subject to recommendations from the university's LASA committee. The program is under the direction of Professor Margaret Gridley, chairwoman of the LASA committee.

According to Paul Carlie, director of International Education Services, the program is designed to provide Iowa students with an opportunity to study at one of the world's leading universities while earning credits toward their degree requirements. The program is open to Iowa undergraduates who are in their junior or senior year of study and have a minimum GPA of 3.0. Students must apply for the program and be approved by the LASA committee. The program lasts for one semester and includes coursework in a variety of fields.

Students are required to live in residence halls on the University of London campus and participate in cultural activities. The program also offers opportunities for students to travel to other European countries and the United States. Participants are expected to participate in a variety of social and cultural activities to enhance their understanding of the local culture.

“The program is a unique opportunity for students to gain valuable international experience while earning credits toward their degree requirements,” said Paul Carlie.

For more information about the program, contact Paul Carlie, director of International Education Services, at 319-335-1208.

Students adjust to less aid, higher tuition

By John Bumgarner

Special to The Daily Iowan

For many UI students, recent tuition hikes and financial aid reductions have made college life more challenging. However, there are steps students can take in addition to attending school to make ends meet.

According to Cindy Timmer- man, the UI Office of Student Employment assistant director of Student Employment, the UI provided 15,400 positions to students and more than 15,000 jobs were held at the UI during the 2002-03 academic year.

President Ronald Reagan's proposed $34 billion in federal student loans and grants and the UI's current efforts toward the college Work-Study program.

UI office smooths transition to U.S.

Special to The Daily Iowan

For foreign students entering the U.S. from their home countries, adjusting to the American educational system is a must. The office of international student services is always looking to make this new experience as easy as possible.

Unlike many foreign institutions, the UI stresses a well-rounded, academic experience that requires students to take courses outside their major.

Thomas Gafni-Soumman, a foreign student adviser at the UI, says some students have problems adjusting to this.

"Some international students are used to having major examinations at the end of each year," Gafni-Soumman said.

Simeon Gikamuni, a pre-engineering major from Nigeria, observed well-roundedness.

"That system forces you to study all the time and cover all the materials," Gikamuni said.

"Back at home, I could just master some parts of the syllabus and pass my exams. Here you have to understand everything you were taught to get a passing grade," says Nigerian Simeon Gikamuni about the differences between the UI and his schools in India.

"I have to do without a lot of things—especially time," the UI student said. "I work 20 hours a week, have 15 hours of classes and still have to manage everything in my life."

UI students were recently interviewed about their experience at UI. Here are some comments from UI students who adjusted well to the American education system:

"I'm engaged, each of which busting their asses just so they can make it," UI's Chris Bold said. There are several positive changes that UI has made to help foreign students, but claims that UI should continue to invest in this area so that a greater number of students can enjoy the UI experience.

"I was amazed by the UI students' effort," UI professor Althen said. "They are all working students but feel that they are allowed to work hard and continue with their studies."

Bolton added that financial aid programs are similar to students from middle-class families.

"There's no way you could make enough money without it," she said. "Our parents are still the ones who just pay tuition."

Althen said that the UI Office of International Education is looking to improve its services to help foreign students adjust better to the American education system.

"We need to make the UI office more accessible to foreign students," UI professor Althen said.

"The UI should invest in more student organizations that can help them find housing and financial aid," UI student Bold said.

"Everyone needs to work on this issue," UI professor Gikamuni said.
House Subcommittee subpoenas Poindexter

WASHINGTON — A House subcommittee subpoenas former national security adviser John Poindexter and aide Wednesday for their role in trying to delay going to government computer secrets.

Poindexter, who resigned last December, is a central figure in that scandal. He refused to testify before the House Government Operations subcommittee on Monday.

The panel did not vote to subpoena Poindexter, who is now consulting chairman, for the record.

In a voice vote, the panel decided to subpoena Poindexter, a former Pentagon advisor, Kenneth DeGraf, to appear before the subcommittee.

DeGraf declined to appear because, he declared, his appearance would be "destabilizing" the panel. The panel is expected to hold a subcommittee vote Thursday.

The hearing was on a bill that would take some control over government computer security. The government is under renewed scrutiny because Poindexter's computer has been broken into and stolen.

DeGraf said the computer contained :classified information. The computer was stolen.

Shultz departs for China to analyze U.S. relations

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Secretary of State George Shultz leaves today for a trip to China, the same day the Tower Commission issues its report on the sale of arms to Iran.

Shultz has raised numerous questions about the arms sale to Iran and no knowledge at all about the possible diversion of the profits to the Contra forces in Nicaragua.

Shultz was scheduled to depart on the overseas flight as soon as he received the Tower Commission report. State Department spokesman Charles Redman said the department will "do what we can to get it to him."

A senior official said the trip.

Judge halts aide indictment

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A federal judge temporarily blocked the perjury indictment of an aide to former White House chief of staff James Baker Wednesday, citing "substantial questions" as to the constitutionality of the independent counsel law.

Acting on a lawsuit Deaver filed last week to delay his perjury trial, U.S. District Judge Thomas Walsh said, "I am deeply sorry that the Government thought it appropriate to bring a perjury trial against an employee to respond to a criminal investigation."

Walsh said, "Whatever the merits of the cause of some parking difficulties."

Walsh also granted a plea bargain to another Deaver aide indictment.

Warrants issued in Vatican Bank case

ROME (UPI) — Judicial sources and Wednesday an arrest warrant was issued for Archbishop Paul Marcinkus in the 1982 bank scandal, but the U.S.-born prelate was not notified of the warrant because Italian police may not enter the Vatican, a sovereign state, in order to serve it.

Investigating magistrates Antonio Zeni and Renato Brilli issued an arrest warrant against Marcinkus, 81, president of the defunct Banco Ambrosiano, which is now defunct, judicial sources in Rome said.

The sources said the warrant alleged complicity in bank fraud, bankruptcy in connection with Italy’s biggest postwar corruption case and embezzlement.

Marcinkus has been accused of involvement in financial operations with shady affiliates in Luxembourg and Malta.

He was never formally charged with any infringement of Vatican law and faced no Vatican-based prosecution.

Marcinkus has consistently denied any wrongdoing in connection with Vatican Bank, the now defunct Insti­ tute for Religious Works, because he was entangled in the scandal by his tenure and that of previous directors.

Besides Marcinkus, warrants were issued or are being prepared for other former Banco Ambrosiano officials, including Agostino Casolaro, a former Vatican Bank director, and Pellegrino De Stroebel, a former Banco Ambrosiano executive.

The sources said the warrants issued or are being prepared against as many as 26 other people in the bank case, but the sources said the sources could not comment on the possible targets.

For Iowa basketball fans, last season was like watching the Big Ten title playoff games in a movie theater. When the Spartans start the Big Ten Tournament next week, the championship will be in the hands of the teams that finish first and second in the final two weeks. These two teams will then travel to the New Orleans Superdome to play for the NCAA Tournament berth.

In addition to the NCAA tournament, the Big Ten also has its own championship. The tournament begins next week in Philadelphia and culminates with the final two weeks.

The Spartans have already clinched a spot in the NCAA tournament. They have won 11 straight games and have a record of 18-15.

Hawks sight revenge in weekend matches

By Robert Mann

Revenge is the key word for the Iowa men's tennis team as the squad looks to get even for two defeats earlier this season from Aiken and the University of Texas. The Hawkeyes, 4-3 last year, will open the season Friday at 7 p.m. at Estevan Adelmann Fieldhouse against Northern Illinois University and Southern Illinois University Sunday at 12:30 at the Cajon-Rapids. This is the start of a home weekend for Iowa, since the Hawkeyes will host five home matches before their October road trip.

Contenders in the women's tennis league this season are the University of Illinois and Northwestern, with both teams posting a 7-1 record. The Hawkeyes also host their first home match Saturday against Northwestern at 12:30 in the Cajon-Rapids. This match will count for four additional years of eligibility for junior Mary Meyer, who was last year's state singles champion.

I F ONE artist's name can be seen all over Iowa City, it's Barbara West-Caudill.

The award-winning artist holds exhibitions in a number of different restaurants, UI Hospital and beaches. Her designs are even on greeting cards. A current West-Caudill exhibition is at Great Midwest's for Cafe, 48 High Falls Dr.

Watercolor paintings on display there until Feb. 28, four of which have already been sold.

She started getting involved with art back in 1972 when she didn't sell anything until 1978.

"It was then she decided to go back to college to receive her bachelor's degree in fine arts from the UI School of Art.

West-Caudill said people originally saw her work at the Thresher's Market sponsored through the Iowa Arts Council and things snowballed.

"People started picking up my work and selling it, and others started selling other people's art. Then came the exhibitions," she said.

West-Caudill has seven of her designs on greeting cards published by Pomegranate.

"I collected note cards and thought why not put them together and sell them, and I thought, 'Why can't I do that? After that, I started painting. I sent them out to different stores and galleries which mass they wanted to publish," she added.

ONE OF THE SEVEN published designs, called "Catacumpa Fower" was made into a意思是 nine styles. The cards have no messages inside. The cards can be bought in Iowa City at Prairie Lights, 52 City High School, 300 Main St.
STEINBECK CLASSIC Brought to UI STAGE

SYRACUSE STAGE and the student theater each stage productions of John Steinbeck's "East of Eden" and "Mice and Men" that mark the 50th anniversary of Steinbeck's Classic in Iowa City.

The Friday night performance of "East of Eden," starring student actors, will be accompanied by the nylon stringed instrument known as the "conch." This ancient instrument has been used in drama productions since the Renaissance and is known to have been used in Steinbeck's day. The performance will also feature live music by student musicians, providing an authentic recreation of the setting and atmosphere of the play.

The Saturday night performance of "Mice and Men" will feature the actors from the Friday night performance, augmented by additional student actors. The play will be directed by Mr. Kimball, the theater arts professor at the university, who is known for his innovative and engaging approach to directing.

Both performances will be held in the newly renovated theater, which features state-of-the-art lighting and sound equipment. The theater has been extensively remodeled to provide a realistic and immersive experience for the audience.

The performances are open to the public and will be held on Friday, February 13 and Saturday, February 14 at 7:30 p.m. in the newly renovated theater. Tickets are available at the box office or online through the university's website.

This is a unique opportunity to experience the works of one of America's greatest authors in a setting that authentically recreates the period and setting of his stories.

New book studies U.S. Constitution

By Harold Ober

The Constitution of the United States is a unique document, both in its form and in its content. It is a living document, constantly evolving to meet the challenges of a changing world.

The Constitution was written in 1787 during a time of great political and social upheaval. The Founding Fathers, who drafted the Constitution, were faced with the task of creating a government that would be strong enough to protect the interests of the nation and weak enough to prevent the concentration of power in the hands of a few.

The Constitution is divided into seven articles, each addressing a different aspect of government. The first article establishes Congress and the executive and judicial branches of government. The second article establishes the presidency and the vice presidency. The third article establishes the federal court system. The fourth article establishes the framework for state governments.

The Constitution is a living document, constantly evolving to meet the challenges of a changing world. It is a document that has been interpreted and reinterpreted by the courts over the years, and it continues to be an important source of inspiration for people around the world.

"THAT'S WHAT'S SPECIAL about poetry," Tate says. "It's that "That's successful in a poem when we're trying something almost beyond saying, or we're trying to discover what we don't know." Tate said that he had to read a poem, "to keep the exercise of trying," and that the question of what he was trying to discover was the question of his art. He said that he was trying to write poetry that was "more exciting to the young person than it was to the reader." "Reading with a new kind of excitement, a kind of" -- Tate turned the page and described what he was trying to discover with his own excitement. He described the excitement of writing poetry as a "search for" a way to "express" himself. Tate's reading tonight, Tate said, "isn't the way I wanted to spend my whole life." He continued: "I STARTED AT THE AGE of 18 and I don't write poetry until I was 18 that I was 18," he said. "I wasn't "worthwhile to be." "As a student" in college, Tate said, "it was anything he would be to tell the student community about." He continued: "I was a student" and didn't have any problem with the question. "I'd like to get to know him," Tate continued, "I'd like to know him." Tate looked back from his interview, he said. "Well, I'm kinda one."
