Chomsky: Public opinion creates scandals

By Shelly Plank
Staff Writer

Noam Chomsky, called "one of the most articulate, insightful spokesmen of the American Left," said the current Iran arms-Contra aid deal has been labeled a scandal because the public is against such operations.

"The current scandals are the result of nothing but popular action," he said. "It would be no scandal if the Reagan administration hadn't been driven underground."

He added, "They go underground. Why? Because they're afraid of you."

Chomsky's comments came Monday night when he spoke to about 200 people in Macbride Auditorium on "U.S. International and Security Policy: The 'Right Turn' in Historical Perspective."

CHOMSKY, author of a number of books dealing with American policy and its influence around the world, is also an internationally known linguist. He is institute professor of Linguistics and Philosophy at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. He is presenting two lectures at the UI as an Ida Beam visiting professor.

Chomsky said the United States was openly selling arms to Iran through Israel in 1982 before any hostages were taken in Lebanon. But the fact is covered up by press, though articles appeared on the front page of the New York Times detailing the sales five years ago, he said.

The 1982 arms sales were made to Iranian "moderates" who could establish a coup against the Ayatollah Khomeini regime, he said.

The "right turn" has taken place in the United States because of three policies of the administration of President Ronald Reagan, Chomsky said.

THE FIRST, transferring resources from the poor to the rich, has been accomplished, he said. The second, he said, is a vast increase in power by the state and a decline in the rights of people. The final policy, he added, is what the administration calls an "activist foreign policy," but what Chomsky called "international terrorism" and "gangsterism."

But he added policies like this aren't new under the Reagan administration. Current policies, he said, have their roots in the administration of former President Jimmy Carter.

Chomsky said the dismantling of the welfare system began under Carter. He also said Reagan's defense budget falls closely in line with projections from the Carter administration.

The Reagan administration has carried its terrorism into Mozambique, Angola, the Middle East and Nicaragua, he said.

Chomsky spoke for two hours, sometimes quoting three-year-old newspaper articles from memory.

UI Global Studies Chair Jim McCue, who introduced Chomsky as "one of the most articulate, insightful spokesmen of the American Left," said, "He seems to have read everything and forgotten nothing."

Gates asks Reagan to recall name

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Ronald Reagan, striving for a fresh start from the Iran arms scandal, agreed Monday to withdraw the nomination of Robert Gates as director of the CIA and was seeking another nominee to head the spy agency.

Gates, now acting director of the CIA, was faced with growing Senate opposition to his confirmation because of his — and the agency's — role in the Iran arms-Contra aid scandal that has rocked the administration.

Reagan said in a statement that Gates "would easily have been confirmed without delay" under normal circumstances, but "it is clear that at this point confirmation proceedings would not be in the interest of the CIA or the nation."

Reagan said he hoped Gates would return to his post as deputy CIA director, a position he held until he took over temporary control of the agency in December when then-Director William Casey underwent brain cancer surgery.

IN A STATEMENT, Gates said he would remain at the CIA as deputy director and stressed the president "never wavered in his support" for him, but he felt it was "imperative that the nation get on with its business."

Gates, in an earlier letter to Reagan, cited "strong sentiment" in the Senate for delaying a vote on his nomination until after a select committee completes its investigation into the Iran affair.

"I believe a prolonged period of uncertainty would be harmful to the Central Intelligence Agency, the intelligence community and, potentially, to our national security," Gates wrote in asking that he no longer be considered for CIA director.

Robert Gates

The announcement of Gates's withdrawal, part of a White House drive to recover from the harsh criticism of the administration by the Tower Commission last week, was made by new White House chief of staff Howard Baker in an appearance before reporters.

BAKER ACKNOWLEDGED he had hoped to announce the Gates withdrawal and the selection of a new nominee at the same time. There was no immediate indication of whether Reagan had encountered a snag in his search for a successor.

Possible successors include Brent Scowcroft, former national security adviser and member of the Tower Commission, former Sen. John Tower, R-Texas, chairman of the Tower Commission, and former Deputy CIA Director John McMahon.

Another former Casey deputy, Bobby Inman, told United Press International he would not accept the job even if it were offered to him.

Committee will seek Ellis replacement

By Scott Hauser
Staff Writer

UI President James O. Freedman announced Monday the formation of a search committee to select candidates for UI Vice President for Finance position.

UI Vice President for Finance Dorsey D. Ellis announced last month he will be stepping down from the position June 30 to become Dean of the College of Law at Washington University in St. Louis.

In his charge to the search committee, Freedman asked the seven-member group to work quickly and to look especially hard for women and members of minority groups as candidates.

Donald Heistad, UI professor of internal medicine and chairman of the committee, said he assumes the panel will conduct an extensive nationwide search to narrow the number of candidates to a few and expects Freedman to make the final decision.

ELLIS SAID the position has three main roles: chief fiscal officer of the UI, manager of the non-academic side of the UI, and member of the president's cabinet.

When appointed to the position in September 1983, Ellis did not plan to stay more than three to five years. Three and one-half years later, he is anxious to return to work in the legal profession.

Heistad said the committee has not met, but thinks members will get together next week.

Other committee members include: Gregory H. Williams, UI associate dean and professor of law; Valdean C. Lembke, UI professor of accounting; Belinda L. Marner, UI student services administrative associate; Jo L. Jones, administrative assistant in the UI Museum of Art; Douglas M. Young, UI comptroller and secretary; and Joe Hansen, UI Student Senate president.

UI Vice President for Academic Affairs Richard Remington will serve as ex officio member of the committee.

Massive New Zealand quake leaves thousands homeless than 100 aftershocks late Monday — the largest measuring 4.5 on the Richter scale.

THE HIGHEST-EVER Richter recording was 8.9, recorded in a quake off Ecuador in 1906 and again in one off Japan in 1933. Quakes measuring between 6 and 7 cause severe damage.

Ewan Smith, head of the New Zealand Seismological Institute, predicted "small earthquakes will continue for weeks."

"I recommend people sit tight through some very unpleasant shaking," Smith said.

Smith said the quake struck at 2:15 p.m. with its epicenter 35 miles offshore. Within two hours three helicopters filled with staff and supplies arrived at the devastated town of Whakatane, which was rocked by more than one hour of aftershocks.

Officials evacuated the Whakatane Hospital, declaring the structure dangerous and moving the occupants to a senior citizens home. Hundreds of residents living below Mahatina Dam were evacuated after the structure cracked and water gushed out.

NEWSMAN GRAHAM Coleman flew over several towns in the Bay of Plenty area, and reported seeing buildings and bridges toppled, railroads buckled, roads divided by large cracks and trucks overturned.

The quake jolted bridges from their foundations, severed railroad lines, and uprooted telephone and electrical lines, causing massive telephone and power outages. Shopping centers were strewn with glass.

Wait a minute — Monday the weatherman said today's high would hit 50. Now he's changed his mind and predicts temperatures in the mid-40s. We've been cheated! The forecast for Wednesday calls for sun and a high of 50. And he expects us to believe that same old story.

All-night parties mark return of 'Fat Monday'

NEW ORLEANS (UPI) — Dozens of Carnival revelers awoke Monday in the spots where they dropped after a weekend of drinking and merry madness in the streets, and the city revived another tradition to keep the frenzy alive until Mardi Gras.

In order to maintain the level of celebrations that normally slack off on the Monday preceding Mardi Gras, or Fat Tuesday, the city revived the tradition of Lundi Gras — Fat Monday — after a 70-year absence.

Police, taking vitamin B-12 shots to deal with their own exhaustion, ignored the relative handful of people sleeping it off in the streets of the French Quarter Monday morning.

"There's not much you can do," police spokesman John Marie said of the street sleepers. "There's a lot of people who have come into town who are looking to party."

A city judge last year threw out an ordinance prohibiting sleeping on sidewalks. This year the mayor's office has been trying to find places for displaced revelers to sleep off their hangovers.

Ideal, spring-like weather apparently contributed to one of the biggest and mellowest crowds ever to hit the streets at Carnival. Police reported 461 Mardi Gras-related arrests since Friday, most for minor violations.

Correction

The Daily Iowan will correct unfair or inaccurate stories or headlines. If a report is wrong or misleading, call the DI at 335-5965. A correction or clarification will be published in this column.

In the "police" column (DI, March 2), it was incorrectly reported that Nancy West was arrested and charged with operating a motor vehicle while intoxicated and failure to yield while making a left turn.

Actually, Heidi Goodspeed, 26, of 1293 Dolen Place, was charged with OWI and failure to yield.

A passenger in Goodspeed's car, Michael Priebe, was arrested for public intoxication. Priebe was not a passenger in West's car, as was reported.

The DI regrets the errors.

Board, SEATS negotiate pay increase

By James Cahoy
Staff Writer

Johnson County SEATS employees may find out today whether they get a pay raise.

Special Elderly and handicapped Transportation System workers, who help provide transportation for elderly and handicapped people in Johnson County, have been negotiating with the county since November concerning their wages.

The Johnson County Board of Supervisors will decide today whether to accept a fact-finder's report on the wage increase, but the report will not be public until after the union representing SEATS employees and supervisors discuss it.

The 22 employees who make up the SEATS program have been under a two-year contract with the county since July 1986. The wages are being negotiated as part of a special clause in the contract that provides for yearly wage negotiations.

Supervisor Dick Myers said the board will discuss the fact-finder's report in executive session.

"I'M NOT SURE what our decision is going to be," Myers said. "We'll look at the fact-finder's report, and from there we may accept the fact-finder's proposals or we may decide to reject the proposals and take the issue to arbitration."

Myers said the fact-finder's report offered two wage alternatives.

"I don't want to say anything because I'm not sure I have the authority to," Myers said. "But basically, I think we are pretty close on the issues. I'm optimistic we won't have to go to arbitration."

But Jo Southard, a union steward with SEATS, said she did not think the two sides were close to an agreement.

"We're certainly quite closer than we were when we started, but we're still not in agreement," Southard said. "I think the fact that we had to go to a fact-finder shows something."

Southard said that the negotiations have been time consuming and difficult, and she is not convinced they are over yet.

"We do favor one of the fact-finder's alternatives, but it's hard to say what the board will do," Southard said. "I would see arbitration as a definite possibility in this case, but it depends on how the board votes."

A woman who was arrested for helping another woman take $950 from an Iowa City convenience store made her initial appearance Saturday in Johnson County District Court.

Mary Etta Meadows, 35, Mount Pleasant, Iowa, was charged with second-degree theft after the Feb. 19 incident at Kum & Go, 1100 S. Gilbert St.

Driggers later obtained a job at Kum & Go with the false recommendation.

Meadows told Iowa City police she helped Driggers commit the theft in Iowa City and turned over $400 in cash that she had in her possession from the theft.

UI ROTC wins at skill meetBy John Bartenhagen
Special to The Daily Iowan

The UI chapter of ROTC won the regional Ranger Challenge competition at Camp Dodge, Iowa, on Saturday and will advance to finals competition April 4 at Fort Lewis, Washington.

The UI participated in the six-event test of military skill and physical fitness against squads from Iowa State University, the University of Northern Iowa, Drake University, Creighton University, the University of Nebraska, the University of South Dakota and Kearney State University.

The UI team placed first in rifle marksmanship, weapons assembly and rope bridge events and placed second in the 10-kilometer rucksack run.

UI SENIOR Melanie Pinter, one of 10 UI team members, is the first female to take part in the three-year history of the competition.

Lt. Col. Steven Fredericks, UI Military Science professor, said Pinter, a participant in five of the events, has been a valuable asset to the team.

"Some people might consider it a disadvantage, but she's holding her own and that has helped morale," he said.

Pinter's teammate, UI junior Dave Ashton, a civil engineering major, said initially no one expected Pinter to make the squad.

"Everyone thought that she'd be done in a few weeks," Ashton said. "She's a tough girl, though, and we couldn't have won this weekend without her."

ASHTON ADDED Pinter's presence motivates competing squads.

"Other teams were yelling at each other, 'Look, you're going to get beat by a girl,' — and they did."

Team member Orville Gardner said Pinter was readily accepted because of her enthusiasm and ability.

Last year's team earned a wild-card spot at the regional competition and placed fourth in the finals.

participate in Star Wars research as evidence of the growing connection between the two countries.

"WHETHER YOU AGREE with it (Star Wars) or not, it makes a significant statement," he said.

Blitzer said Israel's involvement with Star Wars is important because it offers the country potential for immediate political, military and economic gain.

Reagan's recent announcement of Israel's new status as a major non-NATO ally has also aided the relationship between the two countries, Blitzer said.

"That was a political statement in and of itself," he said. "This has some very practical benefits for Israel, politically speaking."

Blitzer said major benefits of Israel's new status include the allowance of Israel to purchase military equipment from the United States at NATO prices and Israeli companies' automatic eligibility to win many U.S. defense contracts.

THE IRAN ARMS-CONTRA aid scandal shows how the U.S.-Israel relationship has been "perhaps too close," Blitzer said.

"Israel was very intimately involved with the U.S. from the very beginning of what turned out to be a very horrible policy," Blitzer said.

He said the major problem Israel faces today is security.

"Israel lives in a rough neighborhood," he said, adding there is the possibility for a full-scale war with Syria.

In a question and answer period following Blitzer's talk,

Iowa City resident Gary Sanders expressed concern that Israel's involvement in some U.S. operations — such as military training in Latin America — may prove detrimental.

"Progressives in this country see Israel as a lackey to do things for the U.S. as a right-wing force," Sanders said.

But Blitzer said Israel sees such involvement as pragmatic.

"Israel's attitude is that they are not going to be holier than everyone else," he said.

Libyans seek political asylum in Egypt

CAIRO, Egypt — A Libyan military transport plane landed at an airport in southern Egypt Monday, and its six passengers and crew asked for political asylum, sources and news reports said.

The Libyan C-130 transport plane landed at Abu Simbel airport after the crew told the control tower the plane was running low on fuel, the sources said.

The state-run Middle East News Agency said authorities were studying their request but did not identify the Libyans.

Sources said the plane first approached the airport and was denied permission to land, but when told by the crew that the plane was running low on fuel, permission was granted.

The incident was certain to further aggravate relations between Egypt and Libya, which have soured over Egypt's peace treaty with Israel.

Shultz meets with 5 Chinese leaders

BEIJING — Chinese leaders assured Secretary of State George Shultz Monday that Beijing's independent foreign policy and economic reforms will be unaffected by a mounting campaign against capitalist trends.

China's acting Communist Party leader Zhao Zhiyang told Shultz China would continue its reforms of "opening the country to the rest of the world" and at the same time fight capitalist tendencies.

Shultz, who held hours of talks with Chinese officials, said the meetings "reinforced my confidence in the durability of our relations..."

But he criticized Beijing for expelling two foreign correspondents since July, and Chinese and U.S. officials described the talks as "candid" — meaning there were disputes.

Shultz is scheduled to meet with senior leader Deng Xiaoping today.

Administration favors arms proposal

WASHINGTON — The White House welcomed a new Soviet arms proposal Monday as "a positive development" that could contain the kind of "fine print" needed to work out an agreement on reductions in medium-range nuclear missiles.

White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said the proposal offered in Geneva, which disengages medium-range missiles from the deadlock over strategic defense, was "an apparent Soviet agreement to move forward" in the so-called Euromissile talks.

The Soviet proposal would limit the United States and Soviet Union to 100 warheads apiece on medium-range missiles. Those weapons, now targeted on Europe and portions of Asia, would be confined under the agreement to Asia and the U.S. mainland.

In addition, U.S. officials said Gorbachev's offer may reflect movement on the sticking points of verification and short-range systems.

Rebels reject Aquino's amnesty offer

MANILA, Philippines — Communist rebels Monday rejected President Corazon Aquino's amnesty offer, dismissing it as the government's "naked sword of war."

Aquino on Saturday offered rebels who lay down their arms within six months a full amnesty. The program offered cash, farm land and job training in a swap for firearms.

"The government and military will use this period to purchase new helicopter gunships and other killing machines," communist spokesman Antonio Zumel said.

Zumel said the government's counterinsurgency buildup will be financed by "$100 million in U.S. foreign military sales credit" and will use "right-wing death squads and terrorist groups" against the rebels.

Mental patient bludgeons 2 roommates

NEW YORK — A 78-year-old mental patient beat his two sleeping roommates to death with a fire extinguisher Monday then calmly left the geriatric ward with a nurse who rushed to the scene when she "heard the thuds," police said.

Stanley Daisak of Astoria, N.Y., a patient at Creedmoor State Psychiatric Center, was charged with two counts of second degree murder and one count of possession of a dangerous weapon, police said.

Daisak was accused of bludgeoning Joseph Guttari and Salvatore Inzerilla, both 75.

The elderly man crept to the laundry room and pulled a fire extinguisher from the wall. He hauled it back to the dormitory, raised it above the heads of the two snoozing men and bashed them repeatedly, Konefal said.

Mutiny threat forces Berri back to Beirut

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) — Amal militia boss Nabih Berri rushed back to Beirut from Damascus Monday to try to defuse a mutiny threatening his leadership of the pro-Syrian Shi'ite Moslem force.

Berri, who has been living in Damascus for the last four months, returned with an escort of Syrian soldiers one day after Hassan Hashem, former head of Amal's executive committee, led a revolt in southern Lebanon against Berri's militia.

Sporadic clashes broke out again Monday between Hashem's forces and followers of Mahmoud Fakih, Amal's Sidon area commander. At least seven people were killed and 15 wounded in fighting Sunday around the Hashem stronghold of Zefta, 9 miles southeast of the southern port of Sidon.

Militia sources said followers of Daoud Daoud, Amal commander in the port of Tyre, apparently had joined Hashem's mutiny. Hashem has been accused by Amal officers loyal to Berri of recently forging links with Palestine Liberation Organization Chairman Yasser Arafat.

FAKIH, HOWEVER, stressed that militiamen had refused to join "the movements that oppose the principles of Amal" — founded in 1975.

As leader of Syria's strongest militia ally in Lebanon, Berri is essential to Syria's campaign to bring peace to West Beirut and Moslem areas, including the south, and to any drive to end the war.

Syria sent 7,000 troops into the city Feb. 22 to halt bloody fighting between Amal and a coalition of leftist Moslem militias.

The mutiny, which security sources said was backed by members of the pro-Iranian Hezbollah, or Party of God, and Lebanese Communist Party militias, was the most serious since radical Hussein Musawi broke away and formed his Islamic Amal in eastern Lebanon's Bekaa Valley.

BERRI WAS AMONG the Moslem leaders who, with Syrian mediation, agreed in Damascus on what Sunni Moslem Prime Minister Rashid Karami said Sunday was a blueprint of political reforms aimed at ending the 12-year-old civil war.

In Christian East Beirut, President Amin Gemayel waited for the arrival of his envoy to Damascus, Hani Salam, to brief him on the Moslem proposals.

Hashem said Salam would bring "an official working paper" on the Moslem proposals back from Damascus in the next 48 hours.

Moslem ministers refused to give details of the proposed package of reforms, saying the Christian president first had to examine it.

The An Nahar newspaper said it centered on giving the ministers greater power and reducing the power of the president, a Christian Maronite since independence in 1943.

THE NEWSPAPER SAID the changes also included new procedures to elect the prime minister — traditionally a Sunni Moslem appointed by the president.

The talks were positive and very open," said a government source, adding that Salam would brief Gemayel on the proposals and his response would then be passed to the Moslem ministers and Syria.

In January 1985, Gemayel and other Christian leaders rejected a set of Syrian-backed reforms aimed at ending the Christian political dominance. The question of power-sharing is a central cause of the war that started in 1975.

Weak links

For people who just want the truth to come out, President Ronald Reagan's aides sure have strange ways of proving it. First, National Security Council personnel Lt. Col. Oliver North and Vice Adm. John Poindexter say they want the truth to come out, but keep seeking protection under the Fifth Amendment. Then, North sends his lawyer to court to try to argue that the special prosecutor is unconstitutional, thus sending the prosecution back to the Justice Department.

First, Micheal Deaver, former White House deputy chief of staff and close personal friend of the Reagans, says he wants a special prosecutor to prove his innocence. Then, when the special prosecutor tells the judge that he is going to ask for an indictment on four counts of perjury, Deaver sends his lawyer to court to argue that the special prosecutor is unconstitutional.

Meanwhile, another former aide, Lynn Nofzinger, is also being investigated by a special prosecutor. Dozens of other administration members have also resigned to face charges or plead guilty to charges of one kind of corruption or another. And former Secretary of Labor Ray Donovan is on trial for corruption, and the charge at least link his firm to organized crime.

The fact is the Reagan administration could give dishonesty a bad name. It has been permeated with a kind of greedy, cynical corruption and presided over by a president with a "laid back" sense of morality.

It is unfortunate but true that the old jokes weren't true. Reagan wasn't a bad actor. He was a good actor, and the American people bought his acting. He is an amiable, lazy man with weak morals, a sentimental streak and an ability to fool himself as thoroughly as he fools others. And he has surrounded himself with men who took advantage of those weaknesses.

Democrats face pitfalls, opportunities

By James W. McCormick

Does anyone remember the radical political context of the "Great Nuclear Debate" of the early 1980s? The Democratic Party apparently doesn't. For the party that in large measure appeared to embrace the apocalyptic politics of anti-nuclearism, has now become the steadfast champion of nuclear deterrence.

The "nuclear freeze," of course, was the battle standard of a grass roots anti-nuclear campaign that reached its zenith during the early 1980s. At that time, sentiment for a freeze was animated by a belief that the dangers of nuclear war were unprecedented. Public confidence in the arcane abstractions of deterrence had reached a nadir. Thus, the slogan of the freeze movement: "The Freeze: because nobody wants nuclear war."

Implicit in the anti-nuclear movement was a profound disillusionment with, and even rejection of, nuclear deterrence as the basis of American national security policy.

"Respectable" criticism of our nuclear strategy took a two-track approach. It sought to circumscribe Western reliance on nuclear deterrence, without jettisoning the military doctrines that had "kept the peace" between the United States and Soviet Union. Deterrence, therefore, was to be augmented by realistic and prudent arms control.

RADICAL CRITICS rejected deterrence altogether and demanded the outright abolition of nuclear arms. Thus E.P. Thompson, leader of the European extinctionist school of nuclear eschatology, lambasted deterrence as an unprovable "astrology." Advocates of deterrence strategy were diagnosed as suffering from "nuclearism," a psychotic worship of nuclear weapons. And Jonathan Schell's apocalyptic vision of the future conveyed the defeatist and illiberal message that democratic values, like freedom, must be subordinated to the goal of saving humankind from nuclear extinction. Schell's rather vacuous prescriptions for viable alternatives to deterrence predictably emphasized peace through total disarmament and world government.

Clearly, not all Democrats ritually genuflected before the altar of anti-nuclear utopianism. Nevertheless, the nuclear freeze did become an ideological litmus test for candidates during the 1984 Democratic presidential primary campaign. Fairly or unfairly, in 1984 the Democrats remained stigmatized as the party of national weakness — too accommodationist and wildly ineactious to be trusted on the vital issues of national defense.

LATELY, HOWEVER, the Democrats have been turning over a new leaf. Now the party is striving, and rather successfully so, to be seen as a defender of our traditional nuclear strategy. Preservation of strategic deterrence is in, and utopian prescriptions for "the abolition" are out.

For example, the recent report of the Democratic Policy Commission formed by national chairman Paul Kirk strikes an obviously centrist stance on defense policy. Among other things, the report favors nuclear modernization in the context of strategic "build-down," as well as research on the Strategic Defense Initiative.

In this regard, Democrats have also reaped significant political dividends from the political fallout after last year's failed Reykjavik mini-summit. President Ronald Reagan's dream of transcending deterrence with the help of a "nuclear astrodome" was always somewhat susceptible to charges of loony idealism. But the radical administration proposals at Reykjavik, contemplating the virtual elimination of two-thirds of the strategic triad, allowed many Democrats to successfully portray Reagan as the irresponsible utopian. Thus, former Defense Secretary James Schlesinger has indicted Reagan for having done more to weaken deterrence than did the U.S. Catholic Bishops in their 1983 pastoral letter.

SINCE REYKJAVIK, Democratic Sens. Albert Gore Jr. of Tennessee and Sam Nunn of Georgia have become increasingly powerful Congressional voices for an arms control policy that does not vitiate nuclear deterrence. Even the "zero option" proposal to eliminate all intermediate nuclear forces from Europe, into which Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev has suddenly breathed new life, is now viewed by many on Capitol Hill as potentially destabilizing.

Notwithstanding the political amnesia of these Democrats, the party's newfound pragmatism on foreign and defense policy is a welcome development. After all, during the halcyon days of the freeze, the party appeared ready to veer into the neutralism and isolationism that have recently characterized the British Labor Party.

Democrats should be wary, however, of making extreme caution on arms control policy the order of the day. Especially in the context of Euromissile reductions, too many Democratic leaders appear to forget that it is the Soviet Bloc which is crippled by a dead ideology and an endemic socio-economic system — not the West.

Tasteless editorial

To the Editor:

In her editorial of Feb. 27, Daily Iowan Editorial Assistant Suzanne McBride offers her advice for the conduct of future protests. She recommends a "tasteful" show of feeling and Gandhian "non-violent" methods. She does not say whether she agrees with the goals of the anti-CIA protest. If she does not, why is she giving us advice on how to be more effective? If she does, she should realize that it is not militant protesters, but editorialists like herself who divert attention from the real issue.

It is not the blood spilt by the CIA, an organization of terror and counter-revolution committed to denying other people the right to determine what kind of society they want to live in, that excites her indignation. Instead, she focuses her readers' attention on the "tasteless" application of spray paint (actually, it was chalk), and then accuses the protesters of drawing "attention away from the issue at hand."

As for Mohandas Gandhi, it is simply not true that he succeeded in India using peaceful means. Gandhi's tactics did not prevent a bloodbath costing hundreds of thousands of lives and India today remains a society of massive poverty and violence. His tasteful advice on how to stop the Holocaust — "The Jews should have offered themselves to the butcher's knife. They should have thrown themselves into the sea from the cliffs ... it would have aroused the world" — should be enough to tell us that he had nothing useful to say about resisting oppression.

Freedom of choice

To the Editor:

It's interesting to note that for the four years I've been at the UI, C.I.A. Off-Campus has pulled the same lame stunts each year. Last year the administrators installed cameras with hopes that this group would see themselves and realize how ludicrous their actions are.

The one saving grace of their action is that they are a small group not representative of the student body on this campus. They are lucky to be in a democracy where they have the right to be heard, but without being so destructive or obnoxious that forcible removal is necessary.

The CIA has a much right to recruit employees as NASA, Ford or any other business. Should NASA not be allowed to recruit because seven astronauts died last year in the Challenger explosion? Should allegations that Ford cars have been responsible for death to owners stop Ford from recruiting? If that were the case, then students would certainly have a bleaker future ahead of them job-wise.

It's time for CIA Off-Campus to grow up and realize that it's not glamorous to tell a prospective employer that their picture was in the newspaper because of being arrested while protesting a legitimate action by the university to place graduates. A job is a job and the possibility of obtaining one shouldn't be more difficult than it already is.

I may not totally agree with what the CIA stands for, but it's wrong to stand in the way of possible employment opportunities for anyone seeking a job now or in the future...

My advice for CIA Off-Campus is not to interview with the CIA if they don't want to; after all, that is "Freedom of Choice."

Memorable events

To the Editor:

On Feb. 24 President Ronald Reagan, while addressing a group of reporters, inquired as to whether they could recall their actions on Aug. 8, 1985. In response to his request, with a few moments of contemplation, we were able to develop a fairly clear picture of the events that transpired on this day in both of our lives. We hereby provide the following brief summary:

I, Ellen, worked throughout the morning and into the afternoon. Following work I spoke on the phone with my best friend and made plans for that night. She arrived after dinner and we spent the remainder of the evening swimming in our pool.

I, Jennifer, slept late and spent a leisurely morning with an Agatha Christie novel. After speaking with my boyfriend on the phone I played tennis the remainder of the afternoon. I then made plans with my best friend and went swimming after dinner.

Considering the ease with which we were able to recall such trivial activities, we fail to understand Reagan's inability to do the same regarding something as serious and controversial as arms sales to a terrorist country.

Some bastion

To the Editor:

Amy Potts and Denise Bourquin recently suggested that critics of U.S. foreign policy should go live in some "socialist paradise" (letter to the editor, The Daily Iowan Feb. 26). Their underlying idea is "America: Love it or leave it."

I have had a chance to visit another kind of paradise, a place President Ronald Reagan referred to as a "bastion of democracy." During a year in Taiwan, I learned that his idea of democracy includes one spy for every 50 citizens and post-publication censorship (I found articles literally cut out of the International Herald Tribune).

The ruling party owned and operated every newspaper and virtually all of the electronic media. I met a number of political prisoners, some of whom had been tortured, all of whom had spent the past 10 years in jail. I also learned this bastion of democracy was under martial law and had been for the past 39 years.

While living in this paradise, I met many Americans like Potts and Bourquin. Americans who could see nothing wrong with a system totally devoted to making money. Americans who cared nothing about the misery of the suffering masses.

... It saddens me that so many Americans fail to realize we have the right to dissent to prevent atrocities from occurring. We have the right to dissent so our society can get better. I'm glad we have people like New Wave members Bruce Nestor and Anne Johnston who are helping us all learn that lesson.

John H. Riley

Victims need voice
To the Editor:
It's interesting to hear the rightists calling for students to decide for themselves in relation to CIA recruitment on campus. Skulking behind the cynical cloak of "freedom," they conveniently sidestep the issue at hand: the CIA is a criminal organization and consequently does not have some ethereal "right" to recruit.

Perhaps one might ask what this country would be like if the CIA were free to do in this country what they do in others, for example El Salvador and Afghanistan...

I can't speak for the New Leftovers, but student protests are in solidarity with the victims of the CIA, justice demanding that the CIA be tried by its countless victims.

It can only be through ignorance that the rightists argue that to stop recruitment violates the CIA's First Amendment rights. Upon reading it is clear that the First Amendment concerns itself with the state against its citizenry. The rightists' claims of victimization (like Jeane Kirkpatrick) is nothing more than an attempt to straightjacket political opposition through the use of "freedom" and "democracy."

There is a fundamental distinction between the ideologues and the war criminals. However notorious the CIA's world view is, it is its deeds that justifies protests.

Drive CIA war criminals off campus!

Reagan ineptitude revealed in report

By Scott Raab

The Tower Commission report returns us to the days when President Ronald Reagan governed California, to a joke that people told about a fire in the governor's mansion.

"They kept it from spreading," it went, "but they couldn't save the library. Both books were destroyed ... and Reagan hadn't even finished coloring one yet."

If we're lucky enough to survive it, maybe history will look back at the Reagan presidency and only laugh. It is some joke: This man whose life is an ode to make-believe, whose tinsel brain and un-talent had been on display for decades, was twice elected president of the United States. Why not make Marcus Welby Surgeon General, too?

Yet Reagan is perfect for our time, a chief exec in name only: a talking head, a pitchman, a hood ornament. Who could be more representative of a time and place where love of country is defined by car and beer commercials? Our TV patriotism feels so right as we sit and listen to "the heartbeat of America."

The world isn't really a Chevy commercial, however. No matter how well Reagan reads scripts, or how good we feel when he smiles and tells us about the greatness of America, his administration is a feeble charade of openness and democracy.

Soon he'll embark on the damage control tour, patching the Teflon. "Sorry," he'll say, "but I really don't recall giving the OK to any arms deal. I don't know a darn thing about the money. Don't blame me — I was poorly advised, but I'm on top of things now. It's over, so let's pardon the colossal blunder, and put it all behind us. Let's rejoice again in all our American greatness."

THE TRUTH IS THAT Reagan's presidency will remain an American cesspool. You and I may be better off than we were in 1980, but only if you and I are white men from suburbia who define the good life as owning a VCR and driving "today's Chevrolet." If those are the things that make America great, then I'm George Will.

National greatness isn't a matter of deficit economics, sloganizing, or mindless materialism, any more than the plot to fund United States terrorism in Nicaragua by dealing arms to Iran can be passed off as a "colossal blunder."

It's no blunder when this administration slashes human services, or when it invests in and instigates war, racism, oppression and torture all over the world.

It's no blunder when this administration systematically seeks to weaken and destroy minority and women's rights, or when it threatens millions of citizens with lie-detector and urine tests to prove their innocence.

It's no blunder that this administration continues to fund the killing of hundreds and thousands of people — United States citizens and others — in the name of a democracy it subverts when it pleases.

The only colossal blunder is to mistake Reagan for anything more than a shill for these policies. If the Tower report does nothing else, it shows that Reagan is not even a tiny part of policy-making or execution. Think of him as Michael Landon or Ed Asner or any of those greedy weasels who pitch insurance policies designed to separate frightened dumb people from their money. Michael or Ed or Lorne would never actually steal money from folks, and Grampa Dutch will never, ever negotiate with terrorists, or let the homeless freeze, or send Americans to fight and die for nothing resembling democracy.

The Tower Commission discovered precisely what Reagan was doing on Aug. 8, 1985 — he was crayoning away, just like he always does as the world burns.

City rental market levels off

By Carol Monaghan
Staff Writer

While local apartment rent and vacancy rates have remained fairly steady within the past two years, UI students will still have to dig deeper into their pockets and search harder for an apartment close to campus, according to an Iowa City rental survey.

But, overall, apartment seekers have more choices than just four years ago, Mary Nugent, an Iowa City Associate Planner said, referring to the survey released Feb. 18.

"There are better choices and more apartments to choose from for the renter," Nugent said. "The survey suggests an equalization of the landlord/renter market. Before 1982, there were higher rents and less choices."

IN 1986, THE vacancy rate for apartments within 1 mile of the Pentacrest was 2.2 percent, the survey states. Apartments located within Iowa City, but more than 1 mile from the Pentacrest and downtown business area, averaged a vacancy rate of 4.8 percent, while a 11.5 percent vacancy rate was reported for Coralville.

In 1982, vacancy rates less than 1 mile from the Pentacrest were 0.8 percent, while vacancy rates were 2.2 percent more than 1 mile from the Pentacrest and 3.2 percent in Coralville.

But vacancy and rent rates seem to have stabilized since 1984, Nugent said.

"There was quite a bit of difference between vacancy rates and rents between 1982 and 1984," Nugent said. "The purpose of the survey was to see if things had stabilized."

Iowa City experienced a building boom between 1982 and 1984 that opened up the market for the apartment seeker. Between those two years, Iowa City issued 1,492 building permits for rental units. In comparison, only 336 building permits were issued between 1984 and 1986.

WHILE UI ENROLLMENT has seen a slight decrease since 1982, the change has probably not been significant enough to affect apartment trends.

In 1982, the total UI enrollment was 28,140, compared to 29,712 in 1984 and 29,504 in 1986, UI Administrative Assistant Jean Lawrence said.

"Enrollment started down slightly in the fall of 1985," Lawrence said, "but the change has been very slight."

The UI Registrar's Office estimated 16,870 or 57.5 percent of UI students live off campus in Iowa City or Coralville.

While Iowa City rents show little change between April 1984 and April 1986, the U.S. Consumer Price Index for rental housing costs increased by 13 percent during that period, the rental housing survey reported.

"From the survey, one could conclude the cost of rental housing in Iowa City has not kept up with national trends," Nugent said. "But the cost of housing has always been high and it may be that things are just leveling off."

THE AMERICAN CHAMBER of Commerce Researchers Association reports Iowa City housing costs are nearly 34 percent higher than the national average.

A cost of living index shows Iowa City's housing index at 134.4, while the national average is 100.

"Things aren't that bad for the landlords," Nugent said. "Driving around town, you see vacancy signs, but that is normal."

The higher vacancy rates in recent years may force landlords to pay more attention to apartment upkeep, said Gary Watts, member of the Iowa City Housing Commission and a realtor with Ambrose, Watts and Associates Realtors, 805 Gilbert St.

Branstad lobbies for lower limit to gift law

DES MOINES (UPI) — Elected officials should be permitted to receive gifts from lobbyists worth only half as much as the $50 daily limit approved by the Iowa Legislature, Gov. Terry Branstad said Monday.

Explaining his veto of the legislature's proposed gift law, Branstad also said lobbyists should be prohibited from pooling their money to finance parties for lawmakers, such as the Mingo, Iowa, bachelor party in April 1986.

Branstad said in his veto message Friday, the legislature's proposal "effectively legalizes past indiscretions." Asked to explain what he meant by indiscretions, he said, "Mingo."

Sen. Al Sturgeon, D-1st District, pleaded guilty to a charge of disorderly conduct as a result of the April 17 party, which allegedly included a sex act between a lawmaker and a dancer.

Rep. Ed Parker, D-Mingo, and Northwestern Bell lobbyist Jim Pribyl were accused of violating the old gift law, but those charges were dropped after a judge declared the law was unconstitutional enacted in 1980.

Hawkeyes fly to No. 6 in UPI poll

NEW YORK (UPI) — Nevada-Las Vegas secured the No. 1 ranking in voting Monday by United Press International's Board of Coaches and Notre Dame capitalized on a week of upsets to make its first appearance this season in the basketball top 20.

The Runnin' Rebels, 30-1, earned 29 first-place votes and 598 points to capture the top spot for the fifth consecutive week. UNLV held off a strong bid by No. 2 North Carolina, which received 12 No. 1 votes and 578 points in moving up a notch. Forty-one of the 42 coaches voted.

Eleven ranked teams suffered losses last week, while three — then No. 2 Indiana, No. 16 Kansas and No. 17 Florida — dropped two games each. Oklahoma, ranked 14th last week, lost three times.

PURDUE, WHICH defeated Indiana, Illinois and Ohio State to take over the lead in the Big Ten Conference, surged three positions to No. 3. The Boilermakers were followed by the No. 4 Hoosiers, who also lost to Illinois, No. 5 DePaul, No. 6 Iowa, which jumped two spots, No. 7 Georgetown, No. 8 Temple, which tumbled four notches after losing to West Virginia, No. 9 Alabama and No. 10 Pittsburgh.

The remainder of the top 20 included: No. 11 Syracuse, No. 12 Illinois, No. 13 Texas Christian, No. 14 Clemson, No. 15 Duke, No. 16 UCLA, No. 17 Oklahoma, No. 18 Notre Dame and co-No. 19 Kansas and New Orleans, which was ranked for the first time ever two weeks ago before falling out last week.

The Boilermakers of Purdue, 23-3 overall and 14-2 in the conference, can wrap up the Big Ten title this week and probably a No. 1 regional seed in the NCAA tourney.

"WE ARE PLAYING our best basketball of the season right now," Purdue Coach Gene Keady said. "Last week in beating Illinois on the road and Indiana and Ohio State at home, that may have been the greatest week of basketball in Purdue history."

"Our first concern is to win the Big Ten championship. If we do that, I feel certain we'll be a top-seeded team somewhere in the NCAA tournament," Keady said.

Florida, which lost Southeastern Conference games to Vanderbilt and Alabama, and Texas-El Paso dropped from the top 20. The Miners, ironnically, won both their games last week. Oklahoma's one-point upset of UNLV earlier this season still carries weight with the Board as the Sooners, who have lost five of their last seven games, slipped just three places.

The Fighting Irish, 19-7, earned their third upset of a ranked team at their Athletic and Convocation Center this season when they defeated No. 5 DePaul, 73-62.

Crime is rampant in rough Big Ten

There's a crime taking place in Big Ten basketball, a crime so grotesque and horrifying that it causes screams, catcalls and a general feeling of frustration by all it offends.

But what's worse is that this incidious crime has gone unpunished for several years and seems to have no immediate cure, leaving those on the outside with a feeling of helplessness as they struggle in vain to right a terrible wrong.

The crime is officiating. The problem ... it stinks!

Here's an example of a recent gem turned in by three illustrious Big Ten officials.

Steve Williams

Examples taken from Saturday's Iowa-Michigan contest:

1:25, first half — Roy Marble posts up underneath his own basket, and when a pass is delivered high and wide, Marble gets tripped by a Michigan defender, sending Marble to the floor as the ball goes out of bounds.

The call ... none, and the ball belongs to Michigan.

1:45, first half — B.J. Armstrong is running directly in front of an official trying to catch up with Jeff Moe on a fast break when he is grabbed from behind by Jack Kramer and intentionally slowed down while Kramer uses Armstrong's momentum to move ahead of him. Evidence of the crime is Armstrong's shirt-tail, which has been ripped out of his shorts.

Again, no call.

3:28, second half — Gary Grant gives Armstrong a lesson in defensive coverage, and in doing so brushes his arm while attempting to keep Armstrong from getting the ball.

Foul!
1:31, second half — Garde Thompson defends Marble as he splits defenders and inadvertently grazes his arm as he moves toward the basket.

Foul!

I could go on, but you get the idea.

It's so sick that it's almost funny. But this is definitely no laughing matter ... it's disgusting!

You can call the Big Ten the roughest conference in the nation, but I prefer to think of that term as idiotic.

I'm not against the rough style of play the Big Ten has to offer, in fact, I rather enjoy the phrase of "letting them play."

At the same time, I'm not against officials calling a close game either.

What really gets me is consistency, and the fact that it is non-existent in Big Ten officiating.

For 30 minutes of a game, fouls, flagrant fouls, will go unnoticed by these eagle-eyed officials who have themselves positioned around the court so as not to miss a single thing.

HOWEVER, WHENEVER the game gets tight, so do the officials.

Now, not only are the obvious fouls called, but even the touch fouls are considered criminal by these simpletons who must have never played the game. Thus, the entire flow of the game is disrupted.

Close or rough, it makes no difference to me. But please call them one way or another and don't change it during the late stages of the game when consistency is vital.

I know that officials have one of the toughest jobs in the world and I would never want to take their place, but they could make life a whole lot easier on themselves if they would just try to do things one way.

Woodard, White set for Arena 'trot' tilt

By Eric J. Hess
Assistant Sports Editor

December 1986 was a special month for Jackie White because it's when she officially became the Harlem Globetrotters' second female player behind former Kansas standout Lynette Woodard.

White and the rest of comedy basketball magicians will be at Carver-Hawkeye Arena tonight, part of its 60th anniversary tour of the United States. Game time is scheduled for 7:35.

Now, people who are second to achieve something aren't usually the most popular. But White isn't bothered by it.

"I don't think I thought about it until I was contacted (the second time)," White said. "I really felt I had done my best."

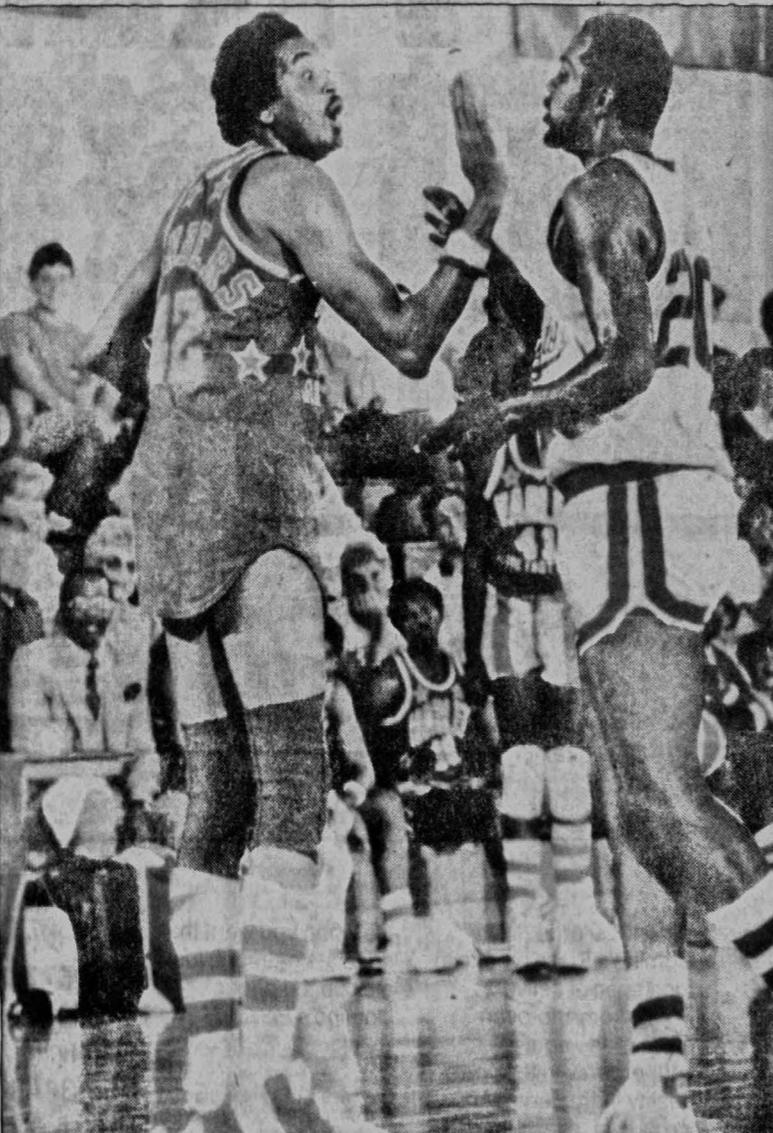

WHITE, WHO finished her collegiate career at Long Beach State (Calif.), was one of 10 finalists from a group of 40 who tried out to be the first female Globetrotter.

She went on to participate in the team's preseason training camp in Los Angeles last season and later at the Globetrotter rookie camp in Colorado Springs, Colo., in August 1986.

Now, as a full-fledged member of "America's Team," the 5-foot-10 guard said the Globetrotters are like one happy family.

"Most of the guys call Lynette and I their baby sisters," White joked.

She admitted that some of the players do get tired of each other during the September to April tour. But she, personally, gets along with her fellow teammates quite well.

Celebrating the team's 60th year, James "Twiggy" Sanders, left, loses his shorts during a one of the Harlem Globetrotters' comedy routines.

"I have a good working relationship with every player," she said.

BUT AN OBVIOUSLY unique relationship is the one she has with Woodard.

"She was there to say 'Hey, lift your head up and have fun,'" White said of Woodard.

White said the encouragement Woodard has given her since joining the team has been quite helpful, like not worrying about having a bad game but rather to enjoy playing the game.

Even though it is only her first season with the Globetrotters, White is thinking down the road about having a family.

Yet while she is single, it's an inspiration to see the kids in the audience. That's the one thing she claims is the best about playing for the Globetrotters — the kids.

"The parents bring them to see the Globetrotters because they grew up with the Globetrotters," she said. "It gives you a really good feeling."

Tickets are still available for the game for the Globetrotters' first ever appearance at the Arena. Tickets are $9 for adults and $7 for university faculty, staff and all students. The tickets can be bought at the Five Seasons Center, Union and at Carver-Hawkeye Arena starting at 9 a.m. up to game time.

Ice Hawks slip in title series

By Marc Bona
Staff Writer

WATERLOO — It was "do-or-die time" for the Ice Hawks' black squad Saturday in McElroy Arena when they took the ice against Palmer in game two of the Midwest Collegiate Hockey Association Championship series.

Palmer defeated the Ice Hawks Thursday in game one 5-2 and then put on a near-repeat performance on Saturday by winning 5-3 to clinch the best-of-three series.

"We are pretty happy," Palmer's Yves Sévigny said. "We're French-Canadian, and we played well. And it wasn't just one guy but all the team."

"It was a fantastic series for Iowa," Ice Hawks' center Adam Shell said. "When we started the season we didn't expect much. But we played them better than they expected."

IT WAS CLASSIC playoff hockey. They took advantage of our penalties. They're more of a skating, free-wheeling club; we play more of a slow-down style," Shell, a native of Clifton, N.J., added.

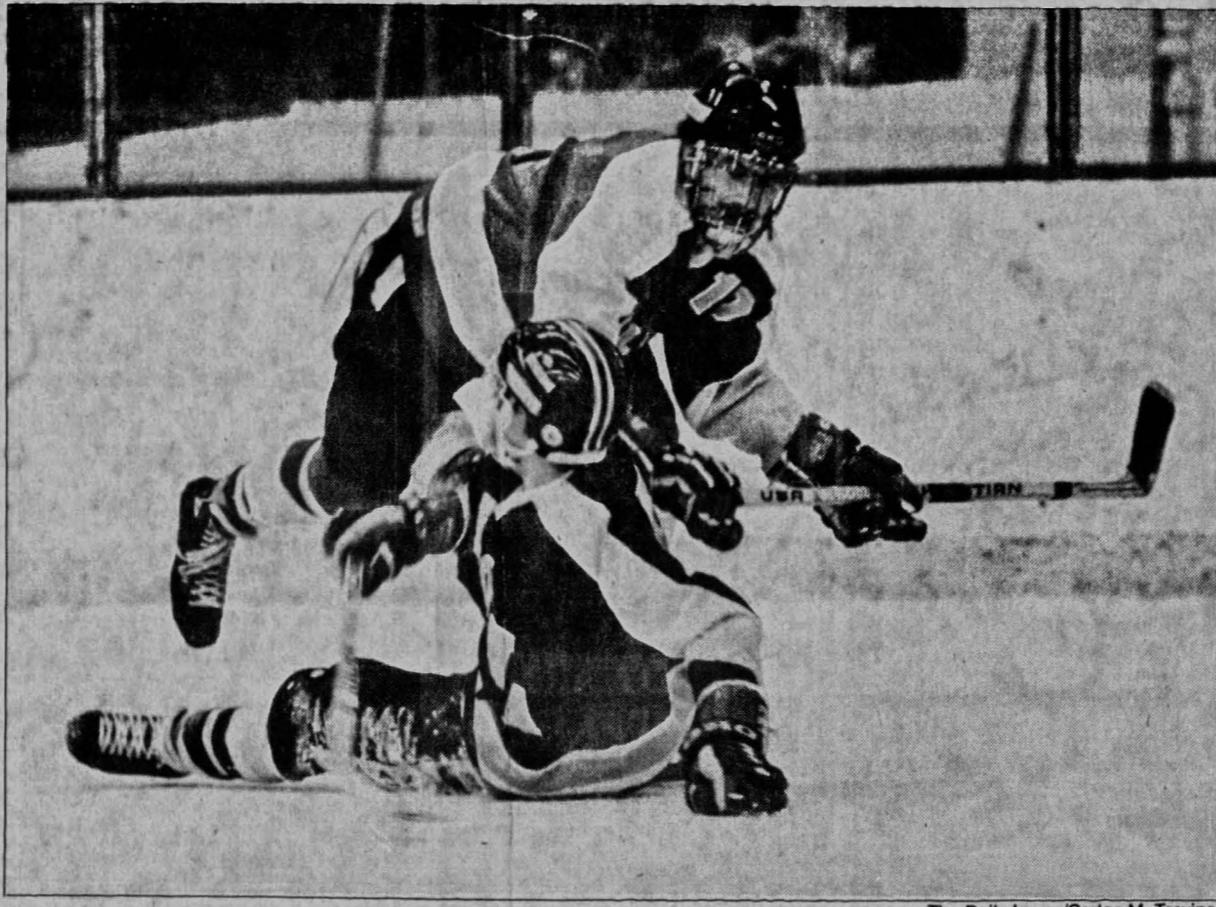

It was Ice Hawks' forward F.J. Frazier who, relaxing on the bus to the game, casually answered a fan as to why he wasn't getting pumped to play.

"Hey, it's do-or-die time for us. We just have to go out there and take it to them," Frazier said as he stretched out over two seats.

But "them" referred to a certain bunch of French-Canadian chiropractic students who hadn't lost a game throughout regular season play, and they weren't about to start losing now.

Palmer kept the puck in the Ice Hawks' zone throughout the first period, outshooting the Ice Hawks 21-13.

THE ICE HAWKS' goals came from John Brandt, Frazier and Andy Nilles. Shell registered two assists while Billy Vigor and Dan Seliger added one apiece.

The Ice Hawks' Andy Nilles, a native of Elmhurst, Ill., falls to the ice during a 5-3 loss to Palmer in the Midwest Collegiate Hockey Association Championships. Nilles scored one goal in the defeat.

It was a shoot-fest from the start as both teams pummeled each other's net with a variety of shots. When the buzzer sounded, Palmer had riddled Ice Hawks' goaltender Brian Gandy with 67 shots — the most against any Ice Hawk goalstopper this season.

"It was a rough game," Gandy said. "I thought we could have pulled it out. Both games we had a lead, and both games we lost it in the third period. I'm just really disappointed."

But Palmer, who finished the regular season 14-0 before winning four straight postseason games, paid its respect to the Ice Hawks.

"THE COMPETITION was good against (the Ice Hawks) only," Sévigny said. "But the rest of the field was too easy. Iowa was the only team who can compete consistently in this league."

• The Iowa Sailing Club, which traveled south to compete in the Rolsch Regatta in New Orleans, finished eighth in the 10-school regatta. Navy, ranked second in the nation by Sailing World Coaches' Poll, took top honors by leading the field with 53 points.

"We know we're pretty good," Iowa Coach Bob Woodward said. "We're optimistic that we're not far off from being in the top 20."

Nevada must hold off on NCAA bets

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (UPI) — The Nevada Gaming Control Board Sunday ordered Nevada's legal race and sports books to remove future odds and not to accept bets on the winner of the NCAA basketball tournament.

Several race and sports books posted odds last month listing North Carolina as a 5-2 favorite in the upcoming 64-team postseason tournament.

The posted odds did not include No. 1 Nevada-Las Vegas since wagering on UNLV is illegal.

State Gaming Control Board member Michael Rumbolz said Sunday that leaving the Runnin' Rebels off of the future line was not good enough.

"It became abundantly aware to us that UNLV is going to be a participant (in the tournament) and that a future bet on another team is a bet against UNLV," Rumbolz, a UNLV graduate, said.

"So until or if UNLV is eliminated, it would be inappropriate for betting as far as future bets are concerned," Rumbolz said.

Rumbolz explained that once the 64-team field is announced next weekend, bets on individual games that do not include UNLV will be accepted. But, he said, until the Rebels are eliminated, no bets on the eventual NCAA champion will be allowed.

Herzog seeks healthy squad

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. (UPI) — St. Louis Manager Whitey Herzog conceded the National League East pennant to the Mets after only 60 games last season.

He proved a better prophet than manager. The 1985 National League champions suffered injuries and shocking lack of offense in finishing 28½ games behind New York with a 79-82 mark.

Despite the trade of Joaquin Andujar, Herzog's pitching staff held up admirably and Cardinals' fielders made the fewest errors in the league, but St. Louis hit just 58 home runs and scored a league-low 601 runs.

"If we stay healthy, we've got a pretty good club," Herzog said referring to pitchers Danny Cox, Jeff Lahti and Ken Dayley, who joined the team's most dangerous two hitters — Jack Clark and 1985 MVP Willie McGee — on the sidelines.

Spring Training

Clark tore ligaments in his right hand and McGee is still recuperating from arthroscopic surgery on his left knee.

"I rushed myself last year and I hurt myself further," McGee says. "I've got to make sure I'm 100 percent this time around."

Strengths — Rookie of the Year Todd Worrell led the National League with 36 saves; strong starting rotation of John Tudor, Cox, Greg Mathews and Bob Forsch, supplemented by Dave LaPoint and rookie Joe Magrane; the near-peerless defense of shortstop Ozzie Smith and second baseman Tommy Herr; outstanding team speed.

Weaknesses — Third baseman Terry Pendleton is regressing as a hitter; little protection for Clark in batting order, although Herzog plans to try McGee in the fifth spot; no consistency at catcher.

New faces — Magrane is a tall, overpowering left-hander who could give Cardinals three southpaws in starting rotation; infielder Jim Lindeman, the club's No. 1 pick in the 1983 draft, is challenging Pendleton for third base job; LaPoint, a bust in San Francisco and Detroit, won 33 games for Cardinals before leaving St. Louis two years ago.

Outlook — Asking McGee, Clark and Herr to return to '85 form represents great expectations. The Mets can pitch with the Cardinals and New York bats averaged more than a run per game better than St. Louis. With breaks, Cards could move up to second.

The Cardinals open their spring training baseball season March 7 versus the New York Mets.

Western star Scott dies in California

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (UPI) — Actor Randolph Scott, who appeared in dozens of Westerns during a 30-year span as the strong silent hero sitting tall in the saddle, died at his home Monday morning. He was 84.

An attendant to the aged actor said Scott's wife Patricia, daughter Sandra and son Christopher were with him when he died at 6 a.m.

His nurse said he died of "natural causes" after being ill for several years. The family said services will be private.

Scott dominated Western movies for 30 years as the strong and silent hero. He was most recognizable as a tall and erect figure who was slow to anger.

The lanky, handsome film star was also a multimillionaire real estate investor with holdings principally in California's San Fernando Valley.

HE RETIRED from acting in 1962 after he made the classic Ride the High Country, in which he played an aging gunfighter.

Although Scott preferred rugged outdoor roles in Westerns and other adventure films, he was in private life considered one of Hollywood's best dressed men.

The actor, who was known as Hollywood's gentleman from Virginia, was born at his parents' country home near Orange, Va., on Jan. 23, 1903, the son of George G. and Lucy Crane Scott. His father was a wealthy administrative engineer and a member of a prominent Virginia family.

Scott was educated at private schools, then attended Georgia Tech where he played football for a year. His gridiron days were cut short by injuries, and he then transferred to the University of North Carolina where he studied engineering.

AFTER LEAVING college, he traveled in Europe for a year before returning home to work with his father in engineering and then deciding he preferred acting.

After his arrival in Hollywood, Scott, a good golfer, found himself in a game with Howard Hughes, who asked him if he was interested in becoming an actor. Scott said he was but he didn't know how to get past the studio gates.

Scott was advised to get some acting experience, whereupon he worked with the Pasadena Playhouse for two years. He made his professional debut as an actor in the juvenile lead of a play called Under a Virginia Moon at a Hollywood theater. A screen test soon followed and he was signed to a contract by Paramount Studios.

He was given a featured role in his first film, Sky Bride. He was cast as the leading man in his second film, The Island of Lost Souls, and stardom followed.

ALTHOUGH HE appeared in Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm and a few other non-Western films, he concentrated primarily on Westerns, shunning the use of doubles in dangerous scenes.

His many films included Heritage of the Desert, The Last Roundup, The Thundering Herd, The Last of the Mohicans, High, Wide and Handsome, Jesse James, Sugarfoot, Santa Fe, Man Behind the Gun, Bounty Hunter and Ride Lone- particular moment," she said. "Photography often works that way."

Morrow's success was slower in coming. He entered his winning "Simplicity" shot last year in an 8-by-10 format without much reaction. Morrow, who has been working with photography since 1979, decided to re-enter the photo this year at about three times the original size.

"Big art is in right now," he said.

The staff show is Loes' first exhibit and, not knowing what other entries looked like, she said she was almost afraid to put her work up. Now, Loes said, she is eager to participate in other exhibits.

IN ADDITION TO formal judging, done this year by Margaret Stratton and Jim Snitzer from the UI Art School, there is a "People's Choice" award. Mary Schnoes, nursing, won this year's award for her "Italian Sunset" photo.

Ballot boxes are located in the lobby areas, which are open 24 hours a day, and anyone passing through the hospital is qualified to vote, Kurimski said.

Anyone working at the hospital is invited to enter up to two pieces, and Renee Kurimski, Project Art visual arts director, said 80 to 90 prints are displayed each year.

Although vacations are a source for a majority of the photos, Kurimski said Project Art likes to maintain an artistic perspective.

"We try to encourage a creative approach," she said, "a manipulation of the photo through setting or processing."

Loewenberg, however, felt her winning photo came about partially due to luck.

Hospital employees display art talents

INDIVIDUALS suffering from art museum fatigue should rush to UI Hospitals for a dose of the Ninth Annual Staff Art Show, featuring the artistic talents of hospital employees.

The exhibit, sponsored by UI Hospitals Project Art, is running through March 31 in UI Hospitals Main and Boyd Tower lobbies.

"This show is such an equalizer among a wide range of occupations," Joyce Summerwill, Project Art director, said.

REGINALD T. MORROW, surgery, won "Best of Show" with his photo titled "Simplicity"; Jean Ludwig-Loes, Med/CCU, won "Best Black and White" photo with "All's Quiet on the Riviera" and Ina Loewenberg, financial management, took "Best Color" with "Fishin'" — Southwest Harbor, Maine." Six black and white and six color photographs received honorable mention awards.

Anyone working at the hospital is invited to enter up to two pieces, and Renee Kurimski, Project Art visual arts director, said 80 to 90 prints are displayed each year.

Movie industry makes record billions in 1986

The movie business is getting a big boost from the home video, folks. Total revenue of the U.S. motion picture distributors (studio and independents) increased 19 percent in 1986 to a record $7.3 billion, according to estimates in Motion Picture Investor, an industry newsletter published by Paul Kagan Associates, Inc.

APPROXIMATELY 150 people gathered at the 620 Inc. club, 620 S. Madison St., Thursday night to witness a fashion show organized by local clothing makers Chris Scholtz and Sabrina Freund.

The clothes shown were not traditional "high fashion" outfits — they were handmade and most of the pieces were hand dyed as well. For the most part, the garments were layered and the fabric used was highly textured. Designers Scholtz and Freund like to work with unusual materials, such as tapestries, chenilles and recycled pajama-designed flannels.

MANY VARIETIES of clothing were shown, from a man's skirt, done in a black watch-patterned tartan, to an exquisite skirt and jacket set that featured a border trimmed with shells.

Some pieces, such as the pajama-inspired outfits, were playful, while others — such as the "little dress with a bustle" — were definitely more for dressing up.

WHAT UNITED all of the clothes was a sense of the unique — the textures and the colors went far beyond what is normally offered to consumers.

Scholtz and Freund design

The prices, in the $50 to $100 range, seemed to be the garments' main disadvantage. Yet the prices are fairly reasonable, considering the time put into the clothing. Similar "art wear," purchased at a boutique, usually runs into hundreds of dollars.

Tie one on.
