dollar falls to new low against yen

TOKYO (UPI) - The dollar plunged to a new low against the yen Friday, sliding to 180.80 yen. The previous low was set last Friday when the central bank of Japan intervened to support the yen.

The dollar closed at 180.30 in New York before sliding to 180.80 in Tokyo. The currency was last at 181.28 on April 6.

Analysts said the dollar's weakness was due to a softer dollar market, more dollar spot sales by the Bank of Japan to support the yen, and a general softening in the currency.

The dollar lost ground after the Bank of Japan intervened to support the yen.

Sterns to win trial, professors predict

By Monica Serling Editor

Several UI College of Law professors and students predicted Monday that a trial of Baby M will most likely be held in the child's native country, William and Elizabeth Sterns, in the final pre-trial proceedings.

The ruling is expected to determine whether a custody dispute with the parents of Baby M will be resolved.

THIRD YEAR law student Paul Heizer said that because the child is younger, the attorneys will have to consider the interests of the child.

Organizations will help raise public's disability awareness

By Annette Struck

An attempt to educate both disabled and non-disabled students about disabilities through UI organizations — UI Student Affairs, the Student Disability Services and the Office of Services to Students with Disabilities — is simply increasing awareness about the topic.

"Awareness Days primarily focus on disability awareness," said Kathy See, coordinator of disability services.

"It is just an attempt to raise awareness and to help enhance awareness."
A step too far

The U.S. Supreme Court expanded the scope of affirmative action on Wednesday, a ruling that embryos psychologists may sometimes hire women and minorities even better qualified and experienced workers. The ruling, which the president himself appointed, has been criticized for its impact on the workforce and public interest. The Court's decision was widely condemned by Republicans, who argued that "it's not that we don't value women or minorities, but the court's decision simply asks us to make a choice between the best candidate and one who is less qualified." The Court was criticized for "overstepping the boundaries of what is constitutional," and for "ignoring the voice of the majority of Americans who believe in meritocracy and opportunity for all." The decision is likely to be challenged in the future by those who believe that the Court's interpretation of the Equal Protection Clause is too narrow.

To the Editor:

I'm a woman of words, who appreciates any opportunity to speak up to the subject matter. As the Head of the women's department, I'm always looking for ways to address the stereotyping and discrimination that women face. I've been thinking about ways to make a difference, and I think that starting a newsletter is a great way to do that. I've always been interested in women's issues, and I think that this newsletter will be a great resource for women who want to learn more about their rights and how to make a difference. I think that by starting this newsletter, we can make a real difference in the world. I look forward to hearing from you soon.

Ugly truths about secular humanists

By Scott Rees

A few of us at an ardent weekly's Center for Religious and Ideological Studies, a group of students with more ideological orientations than the Ku Klux Klan, who have been identified as "secular humanists", recently published an essay titled "The Ugly Truth About Secular Humanism". The article criticizes the secular humanist movement for its embrace of relativism and its rejection of objective moral standards.

"Secular humanism," the article argues, "is not about being good. It's about being right. And the only thing that's right is what's right in the world at the moment. So if we say something that's right, it doesn't matter how many people disagree with us. It's true because it's right." The article goes on to argue that secular humanism is "truly the religion of the 21st century" and that it is "a religion of relativism and relativism is the death of all moral values."

The article concludes by calling for a return to traditional values and a rejection of the "ugly truths" of secular humanism. The author of the article, Scott Rees, is a senior at the University of Iowa and is widely regarded as one of the leading voices in the anti-secular humanist movement.

TRUMP RETURN TO THE CONCERT STAGE: THE PRESIDENT'S NAZI RECITAL

Declarators of Independence and the proposed creation of a "white society" by the Warren Supreme Court's Brown v. Board of Education decision, which has clearly been a commendable effort to demonstrate that all races are equal.

Regardless of one's personal beliefs, there is no question that the Court's decision was a victory for the American people. It has been long overdue and the Court's decision has been widely praised as a landmark decision.

But now, as a nation where racism and inequality still persist, there is more work to be done. The Court's decision is a step in the right direction, but it is not the end of the battle. It is important to remember that the fight against racism and inequality is far from over. We must continue to work towards a more just and equitable society.

High court agrees to hear Flynt case

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Supreme Court agreed Monday to decide whether Hustler magazine publisher Larry Flynt has failed to pay the fees he promised to pay to the Justice Department to prevent him from publishing a false and defamatory article about the woman who accused him of rape.

Hustler magazine is accused of revealing the name of the woman who accused Flynt of raping her. The magazine published the story after Flynt had agreed to pay the Justice Department $25,000 to prevent publication.

Flynt's lawyers argue that he did not have the funds to pay the fine and that Hustler magazine was not a minor participant in the scheme to defame Flynt.

The Supreme Court's decision is expected to be announced in the next few weeks.

The case involves a dispute between the Justice Department and Hustler magazine over a 1983 ad parody of an ad for Campari liqueur.

In the Hustler parody, the ad was changed to include a sexual reference that was not present in the original Campari ad.

The case has been appealed to the Supreme Court, which is expected to rule on whether Hustler magazine was liable for the copyright infringement.

Flynt, who has been under investigation for tax evasion, has been facing charges of witness tampering and obstruction of justice.

The case is expected to be decided in the next few months.
Embellishment' may free 4 hostages

MOSCOW (UPI) — British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher struck an unpredictable note in her meeting with Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev Monday, saying the release of four hostages could be conditioned by "an embarrassing situation." The British leader repeated this warning after an exhausting weekend of talks with Gorbachev in the Kremlin, in which the prime minister reportedly threatened to boycott the summit if the Soviet Union did not make concessions she believed were long overdue in Europe.

"Wealthy gold raised by Thatcher, Gorbachev give an opening option for the United States to force or even to replace them with some more advanced weapons systems," she said.

The gulf between Thatcher and Gorbachev also was apparent on human rights.

Thatcher, while praising the liberalization under the Gorbachev regime, urged Gorbachev to show his commitment to genuine democracy by releasing "prisoners of conscience" and allowing free elections.

Thatcher, while praising the liberalization under the Gorbachev regime, urged Gorbachev to show his commitment to genuine democracy by releasing "prisoners of conscience" and allowing free elections.

"THERE IS WHY the govern- ments which I lead will not abandon the security provided for our country and for the NATO alliance by nuclear weapons," Thatcher said.

"Without greater trust and confidence between East and West than exists at present, a world without nuclear weapons would be too unstable and too dangerous for all of us," Thatcher, in Moscow for the first Soviet-British summit in 12 years, said.

"FERRAPS NATO is once again looking for a quick fix, a way to camouflage its intransigence in arms control," he said. "Without far greater trust and confidence between East and West than exists at present, a world without nuclear weapons would be too unstable and too dangerous for all of us,"

"THE council has for years been looking for a way to achieve this in one leap. Yet countries were in a clear state of Gorbachev's seeming proposal to cut the world's nuclear weapons.

"And we know that similar work is being undertaken in the Soviet Union," Thatcher told the Kremlin banquet hosted by Gorbachev, ignoring previous satellite demands. Gorbachev, acting as he said he would, "brutally and clearly started a new dialogue with Western governments to decrease our arsenals" in an attempt to show when- ever possible he was trying to block arms control negotiations.

"IF WE Simply means that I find it impossible to respect in any case our ideals, Gorbachev uttering calls for aban- don the values of Western soci-

North Korea banned in Olympic soccer

North Korea has kicked out the 1980 Summer Olympic soccer team as a challenge to FIFA's decision to ban the country from the Olympic soccer qualifying tournament.

The International Olympic Committee has authorized a fourth meeting between North and South Korean Olympic officials, but Friday's meeting seems to assure that the North Koreans still plan to attend the Olympics.

The FIFA ban has been imposed because North Korea failed to show up for qualifying matches against Malaysia and Thailand. The organization's Executive Committee rejected Pyongyang's plea for automatic entry to the 1988 Olympics.

Sailing club wins first regatta

BY MANO REITZ

While the basketball and wrestling seasons are over at the University of Illinois, the sailing team, led by David Hodge and Phil McDonald, shows it still has team spirit to give. The Illinois sailing team recently competed successfully in the 16th annual Harmo Regatta on Lake Michigan.

"This event all hours at the North Shore Yacht Club in Libertyville. We finished a close second with 137 points, two points ahead of seventh place, Ohio State," said Hodge, a sophomore. "We had a hail in the win with Tricia Snapp."

The club had not held the regatta this long since the end of the regular season competition last May. It was the final day of competition as routine was put aside with close racing in the wind and with a number of the club's members in the field of play by scoring 50 points, while Notre Dame took 51 and Ohio State 54.

"THEY BOTH SAILED really consistently at both days," Hodge said. "They could do anything at any time."

Hodge said the team trained hard in the winter months and developed and tried to improve on the new style Parrish management and keep my management and keep my management and keep my.......

Spring is pretty much a fact of all American life. The sun comes up and it's warmer than it was the day before, and you can tell that we're just a few weeks away from the start of the season. Spring training is the perfect opportunity to see action and to start preparing for the upcoming season.

Iowa City, Iowa — Max, an entertainment journalist, seldom misses a chance to change the public perception of Irish music from something bland to the vibrant, soulful, and authentic Irish music that he helped to pioneer in the late '40s, early '50s as a member of the internationally renowned Irish group, the Chieftains. The group's tour coincides with the release of their new album, "The Chieftains: The Collection," featuring some of their most beloved songs.

"Irish eyes are smiling in Iowa City," said Max. "We're thrilled to be back in the state where we first began our journey as musicians. Our goal has always been to share the richness and passion of Irish music with the world, and we're looking forward to performing for our dedicated fans in Iowa City at the time of this tour."
Van Gogh sale sets $36 million record

LONDON (UPI) — A masterpiece once belonging to one of the world's former prime ministers, Vincent Van Gogh's "Tulips" and "Sunflowers," sold for nearly $36 million, a world record for a Dutch artist, at a public auction.

The 30-inch tall work of art, which marks the 130th anniversary of Van Gogh's birth, set a record after five minutes of bidding that in London homegrowing at Christie's auction house. The painting is almost triple that of the previous record, paid in April 1983 for an earlier "Sunflowers," by Kim Kassim. "The paintings are no, even say what country of origin, but they are now owned by someone from the U.S.," he said.

Christie's said the winning bid was placed in telephone by one of the auction house's former clients, who admired Van Gogh's flower paintings. "The previous highest price ever paid for one of Van Gogh's "Sunflowers," was $10.8 million in New York in 1983 by a German
Mark Morris troupe slated to dance at Hancher tonight

Mark Morris, one of the hottest young forces in modern dance, will bring his Mark Morris Dance Company to Iowa City for the first time.

The work on the program, all created by Morris, are Cenral Park in the Rain, Painted Desert and Belly Dance à la Mode. The company will also perform Hotel Blues, commissioned by the 20th Century Women's chorus as a memorial to that group.

Morris danced with the Martha Graham Dance Company and the American Repertory Ballet before starting his own company. He was a guest artist with the National Dance Theater and the Alvin Ailey American Dance Theater, and has been commissioned by the Seattle Men's Ensemble, a striptease, washing machine, and nighttime cleaning. DJ Cecile and biscuits will also perform. An enhanced program, set to Thai and Italian Greetings, will bring his music by Eric Whitacre to life.
