Survey: Half of UI seniors will leave the state

By John Plank
Staff Writer

Fifty percent of UI seniors plan to leave Iowa upon graduation, while only 28 percent plan to remain in the state to live and work, according to a survey completed by UI Communication Studies students.

The survey, completed by UI Communication Studies Acting Chair John Bowers and his communication research class, also indicates those who remain in Iowa may have emotional reasons for doing so, while those who leave may be looking for a better job.

Of seniors saying they plan to stay in Iowa, 51.5 percent said they will remain because of family and/or romantic associations. Of seniors planning to leave the state, 43.9 percent cited job-related reasons.

"THE MAIN REASON FOR

leaving is job-related more than any other, but that's not true for people who are staying," Bowers said. "If Iowa wants to hold UI graduates it clearly has a job problem."

The survey, conducted in February, surveyed 438 randomly picked seniors, all of whom plan to work after graduation rather than attend graduate or professional school. The survey asked where students plan to live and work after graduation and what reasons they had for their decisions. A total of 22 percent of the seniors weren't sure of their post-graduation destinations.

The survey also found seniors who come from Iowa are more likely to remain in the state rather than out-of-state seniors.

"Some people have a sense of adventure and want to spend some time traveling and working in another location, rather than where they were reared," UI Registrar Jerald Dallam said. "Many of them will return."

nois plan to return to the Land of Lincoln in large numbers. Following graduation, 69 percent of Illinois students plan to return to their home state, compared to 8.5 percent who intend to remain in Iowa.

Dallam said the figure wasn't surprising.

"Probably many return to the Chicago area," he said. "Employment patterns are better in that state."

The survey also found the number of hopeful teachers planning to leave Iowa is not significantly different from all seniors who plan on leaving.

Of 91 seniors planning to teach, 28.5 percent plan to remain in Iowa, 48.4 percent plan to leave and 23.1 percent are uncertain about their destinations.

Hendershot said around 50 percent of students who seek jobs through her office end up in Iowa. However, the office registers master's degree and doctoral candidates along with bachelor's degree candidates.

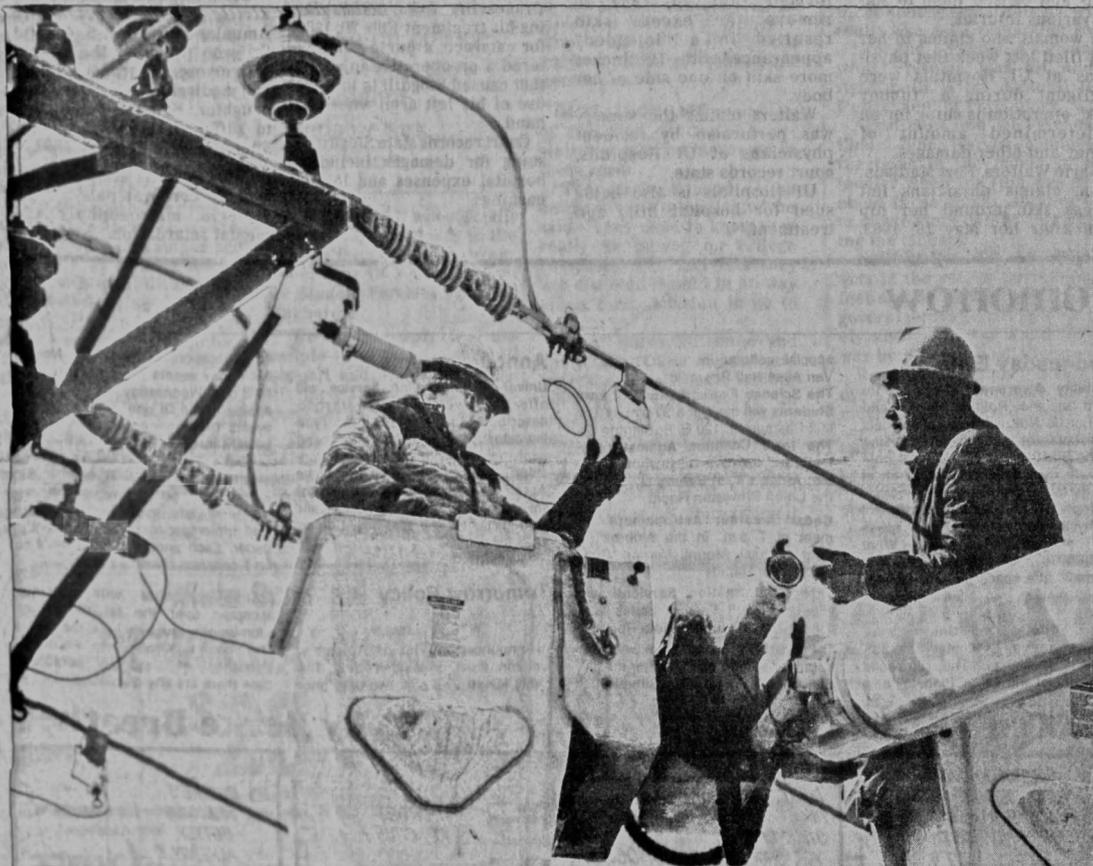

"We'd like to keep the best and brightest in the state," she said. "But some of those people from Illinois want to go back for various reasons and some go to the Sun Belt area because that's where the jobs are."

Hendershot added the current push in the Iowa Legislature to raise starting teacher's salaries to $18,000 will help improve the climate for teaching jobs in Iowa.

"The Iowa Legislature's putting a premium on good teachers makes a difference," she said. "Students will be more interested if the salaries are up like that."

Judge's ruling on Baby M due today

HACKENSACK, N.J. (UPI)—The surrogate mother who has fought for more than a year to reclaim a daughter she agreed to give up at birth probably will not be in court today when the landmark Baby M case is decided, her lawyer said Monday.

Mary Beth Whitehead wants to avoid the crush of reporters and photographers covering the unprecedented court ruling and will probably remain away to learn of the judge's decision in private, lawyer Harold Cassidy said.

Whitehead, 29, is the first of the approximately 600 surrogate mothers in the United States to be taken to trial for trying to break her contract to bear an infant for a childless couple.

Both sides concede today's ruling by Superior Court Judge Harvey Sorkow will not be the end of the Baby M controversy. Whitehead has said she does not expect to win back her child, whom she has named Sara, until the almost inevitable appeal is decided.

ONE-YEAR-OLD Baby M has been in the temporary custody of William and Elizabeth Stern of Tenafly, N.J., since July, when police and private detectives seized the child at the Florida home of Whitehead's parents.

Whitehead, seeking to avoid a judge's order that she turn over the baby to the Sterns, had fled to Florida from her Brick Township, N.J., home in May.

The Sterns testified during a two-month trial that concluded March 12 that they hired Whitehead to bear their child for fear pregnancy would aggravate Elizabeth Stern's relatively mild case of multiple sclerosis.

Whitehead signed a $10,000 contract, agreeing to be artificially impregnated by William Stern, not to form any bond with her baby and to give up the child for adoption by Elizabeth Stern. She has never taken the fee.

WHITEHEAD HAS testified that she originally intended to fulfill her contract, but that maternal instincts overpowered her when the child was born last March 27.

"I had no control," she testified. "At the end, something took over. I guess it was just being a mother."

Sorkow must decide whether the Sterns' contract with Whitehead is valid under New Jersey law, which does not specifically address surrogate parenthood.

Sterns to win trial, professors predict

By Monica Seigel

Several UI College of Law professors and students predicted Monday custody of Baby M will most likely be granted to the child's natural father and adoptive mother, William and Elizabeth Stern, in today's precedent-setting ruling by Superior Court Judge Harvey Sorkow.

The ruling is expected to determine whether a contract between the Sterns and surrogate mother Mary Beth Whitehead is valid.

Law Professor Randall Bezanson, instructor of Children of the New Biology, a course which focuses on issues like surrogate motherhood, said he expects the case to be treated simply as a custody battle.

"One member of each of the two parties hoping for custody are genetic parents," Bezanson said. "Therefore, this can be looked at as a child custody dispute."

Such a ruling would allow the court to avoid deciding whether contracts between surrogate mothers and adoptive parents are enforceable, Bezanson said, adding if he had to make a guess, he would pick the Sterns as the probable winners of custody. "I'm not very good at predictions, though," he said.

THIRD YEAR law student Paul Healey said he also believes the Sterns will be granted permanent custody of the child.

"This will happen one of two ways," Healey, who is also president of the Iowa Student Bar Association, said.

"The court can either uphold the contract and rule that by the contract Baby M is the Sterns' daughter, or they can rule the contract invalid and in spite of that determine the Sterns as better parents. Either way I think they're going to end up with custody."

"This is a really tough one to call, but it's also an issue that's just begging to be settled," Healey added. "Maybe it's a little bit too radical for right now."

Law Professor Eric Andersen said although he can't predict how the judge will rule, he expects the case will be appealed regardless of the ruling.

"Both parties have fought hard up to this point," Andersen said. "In a case like this, one usually appeals."

Dollar falls to new low against yen

TOKYO (UPI)—The dollar plunged to another postwar low against the yen Monday despite massive intervention by the Bank of Japan to support the U.S. currency.

The dollar closed at 146.20 yen, down 2.80 yen from last Friday's close despite intervention by the central bank, which bought at least $1.5 billion, exchange market traders said. The previous postwar low for the dollar was 148.80 yen, set last Tuesday.

Analysts said the dollar's plunge against the yen, encouraged by the United States in a bid to balance the lopsided U.S.-Japanese trade relationship, was accelerated by the Reagan administration's decision Friday to impose trade sanctions on Japan in a dispute over computer chips.

Analysts for Japanese securities firms said the dollar's steep fall appears likely to further encourage Japanese investors to diversify their portfolios.

"JAPANESE investors have been favoring U.S. Treasury securities because they are safe," said Michael Korver, an investment analyst at Nomura Research Institute, but the yen's rise is "encouraging them to seek other markets."

Japanese investors have been taking advantage of the high yen to invest overseas, but some economists have warned they might turn away from U.S. government securities if their return falls too low.

A shortfall in demand for U.S. government securities — which help finance the massive federal budget deficit — could force higher interest rates in the United States and restrain growth.

Takamasa Kowada, an investment analyst with Daiwa Investment Trust and Management Co., said Japanese investors bought 33 percent of the new 30-year Treasury bonds issued in February in the United States, but last week bought only 10 percent of newly issued seven-year Treasury bonds.

OF JAPAN'S $95 billion net capital outflow last year, a major portion went to U.S. securities, particularly U.S. government bonds considered reliable by the nation's conservative investors. At one point last year, Japanese investors held some 60 percent of newly issued Treasury bonds.

But the yen has climbed some 60 percent against the dollar and resulted in huge losses for Japanese trust banks and life insurance firms, the country's principal overseas investors. "Japan's financing of the U.S. deficit is a built-in feature of the U.S. financial market," Kowada said.

'Platoon' chosen as Best Film

LOS ANGELES (UPI)—Oliver Stone's 10-year struggle to film his vision of the Vietnam War paid off big Monday night when he saw Platoon capture the Best Picture award and also earn him a Best Director Oscar.

Platoon beat out Room with a View, Hannah and Her Sisters, The Mission and Children of a Lesser God for the Best Picture award.

Best Actor and Actress honors went to Paul Newman for The Color of Money and to Marlee Matlin for her Children of a Lesser God performance.

Michael Caine and Dianne Wiest took home Best Supporting Actor and Actress awards for their work in Hannah and Her Sisters.

We're talking pretty boring stuff, folks: partly sunny today with a high in the lower to mid-30s. Mostly cloudy Wednesday, with a high in the lower to mid-40s. So when is it going to be spring again?

Metro Briefly

Speaker to discuss Polish issues today

Polish journalist and author Maciej Kozlowski will speak to the Iowa City Foreign Relations Council on social conditions in Poland at noon today in the UI International Center, Jefferson Building Room 202.

Kozlowski, who has written for several Polish newspapers and magazines since 1966, has been jailed by the Czechoslovakian government for transporting political books from Paris to Poland and has been active in the Solidarity movement in that nation.

Kozlowski's speech will be accompanied by a luncheon. The luncheon is $6 for members of the Foreign Relations Council and $7.50 for non-members. For reservations call 335-0335.

Donation aids UI communication program

Children with communication disorders from low-income families will attend the UI's Summer Residential Program with money donated by an Iowa City club.

Several children will have the opportunity to attend the program thanks to a $2,300 donation from the Old Capitol Sertoma Club and the continued support of many local and state organizations and churches.

The program is sponsored by the UI Speech and Hearing Clinic in conjunction with the UI Reading Clinic.

During the six-week program, students receive about 104 hours each of intensive therapy for their communication disorder. During a comparable time period in the regular school year, students with communication disorders typically receive between four and six hours of the same type of intensive therapy.

The Old Capitol Sertoma Club — a service organization — holds two fundraisers each year to benefit speech and hearing programs at the UI. Their commitment to the programs dates back 18 years.

UI professors win national fellowships

Two UI College of Business Administration faculty members have been named 1987-88 Hoover National Fellows.

Russell Cooper and John Kennan, both associate professors of economics, are among 12 economists chosen to spend a year at the Hoover Institute at Stanford University in Palo Alto, Calif.

The National Fellows Program of Hoover Institute recognizes top national scholars in economics, granting each a stipend to conduct research.

Andrew Policano, chair of the UI Department of Economics, said the Hoover Fellowships are both highly competitive and prestigious and go only to the top economists in the United States.

"The fact that out of 12 national scholars chosen, two are from the University of Iowa sends out a very positive message to the economics profession — both about the quality of our department and the university," Policano said.

UI professor wins beef research money

UI College of Pharmacy Assistant Professor Glen Park has been awarded a $2,500 grant from the Iowa Beef Industry Council for the 1986-87 academic year.

Park is the first UI researcher to win one of the annual awards, and one of only eight Iowans honored.

The award supports studies on the role of beef in the diet. Park has applied the money toward his ongoing research into the effect of protein in the diet on the body's elimination of drugs.

Park hopes to continue working with the Beef Industry Council on a further study that would deal more specifically with the effects of beef's protein on kidney function.

Grant lets UI researchers probe strokes

UI Hospitals will be among 16 medical centers in the United States participating in a national study to determine whether a common operation is more effective than aspirin in preventing strokes.

The five-year study, announced last week, will be supported by an $11.6 million grant from the National Institute of Neurological and Communicative Disorders and Strokes.

UI Assistant Professor of Neurology Jose Biller is the principal investigator at the UI of the Asymptomatic Carotid Atherosclerosis Study. Assistant Professor of Neurosurgery John Godersky will head the surgical team.

The project will be limited to 1,500 patients who have a significant atherosclerotic narrowing of the carotid artery that supplies blood to the brain, but who have had no stroke symptoms.

The study is scheduled to begin this fall.

United Way will distribute $473,169

By Carol Monaghan
Staff Writer

The United Way will divide up more than $473,000 among local human service agencies beginning Wednesday.

At a time when state and federal dollars to human service agencies are dwindling, United Way contributions last year were up 5 percent.

Primarily, donations from the industrial sector and from UI personnel accounted for the 5 percent increase in 1987 allocations to the United Way fund, said Mary Ann Volm, Johnson County's United Way program director.

She said rough economic times in Iowa have traditionally elicited more support from donors.

"Historically, people respond more willingly to charitable organizations in hard economic times," Volm said. "No one will argue that Iowa is experiencing some economic difficulties. Conditions in Iowa City and Johnson County are reflective of the state."

LOCAL FUNDING for human service agencies comes from a combination of city, county and United Way funds.

Volm said funding levels needed for human service agencies, such as the Crisis Center Food Bank and Emergency Shelter, reflect the tighter economic times in Johnson County.

"I think we have a pretty good sense of the priority needs of the agencies, and the giving patterns reflect the tighter economy," Volm said.

Ken Kauppi, executive director of the Iowa City Crisis Center, said the agency has seen a substantial increase during the past few years in the number of people using the center. The Crisis Center Food Bank, which provides both emergency and supplemental food to county residents, served 15,731 people in 1984, 17,469 in 1985 and 24,000 in 1986.

"IN THE PAST three to four years, along with an increase in the food bank, financially related concerns on the crisis line related to difficult economic times," Kauppi said, "not just the rural crisis, have risen."

Volm said the annual funding drive for next year's allocations will begin about the first week in September.

"The new tax laws are not going to help charitable organizations," Volm said. "It's ironic that an administration that wants to keep government out of human services makes it more difficult for people to give to charitable organizations."

This year's allocation budget, totaling $473,169, will be distributed to 32 Johnson County human service agencies.

Marge Penney, human service coordinator, said most agencies appreciate the effort of the United Way, the city and the county have given for funding the various agencies.

"The agencies understand the distribution," Penney said. "While it would be wrong to say that most are happy with the level of funding they received, most are really pleased with the effort all — city, county and United Way — have done to give as much money as they did."

'Tummy tuck' operation results in suit

CAC forum highlights presidential hopefuls

By Monica Seigel
University Editor

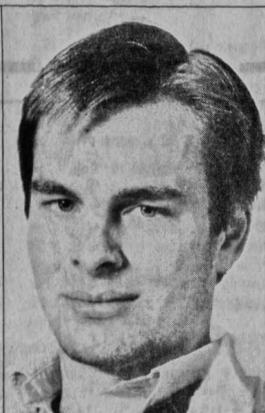

In preparation for next week's in-house vote, candidates in the UI Collegiate Associations Council executive elections participated in a forum Monday night discussing issues they hope to address next year.

CAC President Mike Reck is seeking re-election and is being opposed by CAC Executive Associate Jim Vogl. CAC Administrative Assistant Maureen Edwards is running for vice president of the council, and current CAC Vice President Charles Du Mond will seek re-election, running with Vogl.

Minority recruitment and retention was one of the key issues debated by the candidates, with Reck maintaining

this year's council worked very effectively on minority issues and Vogl challenging

Mike Reck
"more can be done."

Minority Recruitment Committee expanded into an affirmative action committee," Vogl said, adding such a committee could address the broader issues of UI affirmative action policies and practices.

According to Reck, however, efforts by this year's CAC Minority Recruitment Committee "are just beginning to pay off" and should continue next year.

Reck said a research project initiated by the committee on minority recruitment would continue, and that next year's council should work to ensure the implementation of recommendations resulting from the project.

The establishment of an academic affairs committee within the council was also a topic of some contention, with Vogl suggesting and supporting the possibility of such a committee, while Reck said it would duplicate efforts made by the council as a whole and "usurp the rights of the individual collegiate associations represented in the council to address academic policies."

IN THEIR OPENING remarks, both presidential candidates explained their motivation for running, as both candidacies came as somewhat of a surprise to the council.

Reck had been accepted to Harvard Law School for next fall, but after discussion with his family and examination of his goals, decided to defer entrance to law school for a year and continue working with the CAC.

"I've got three years of law school and thirty years of doing the same thing ahead of me," he said. "I'm going to be on the treadmill a long time. I decided I wouldn't mind getting off for a year and work even harder here."

Vogl, admitting the announcement of his candidacy may have been confusing to the council since both he and Du Mond served as CAC executives with Reck, said his decision to run was "definitely not a reaction against anything that happened this year."

"I just came to the point where I saw that there was more that could be done," Vogl said.

The 17 CAC councilors will vote for the executives at next Monday's meeting, said UI Office of Campus Programs and Student Activities Coordinator Peter Reilly.

Organizations will help raise public's disability awareness

By Anjanette Brush
Staff Writer

In an attempt to educate both the disabled and non-disabled about people with disabilities, two UI organizations — Rolling Hawks and Restrict Us Not — will sponsor UI disABILITY Awareness Days today and Wednesday.

According to event organizers, the program will focus on promoting positive public awareness of disabled people.

"The main goal of the program is to simply increase awareness of people on campus and in the city in general toward people with disabilities," said Kirk Gustafson, newly-elected disabled UI Student Senator, adding a more positive outlook toward the disabled person will be promoted.

"Awareness Days is primarily geared to UI faculty, staff and students," said Kathy Seemuth, UI Division of Recreational Services Graduate Assistant. "It is put on by students with disabilities to help enhance awareness."

"The disabled ... need to know they really do belong on college campuses," says UI Student Senator Kirk Gustafson.

THE PROGRAM will officially open at 11:30 a.m. today in the Iowa City Public Library Room A by UI Vice President for Student Services Philip G. Hubbard.

"We want to simply recognize people who have provided support and assistance to the disabled and discuss some of their needs," Hubbard said.

Today's events will feature keynote speaker Brian Johnston, a quadriplegic and wheelchair racer from Pewaukee, Wis. Johnston will speak on sports, recreation and independent living for the disabled.

Also included in the program are films, discussions and demonstrations relevant to the disabled person's lifestyle. Topics covered will include careers, leisure, health and recreation.

GUSTAFSON SAID awareness of disabled students especially needs to be increased in these areas.

"The disabled need to be aware of what is available," he said. "They need to know they really do belong on college campuses. The fact that they are disabled should in no way affect their decision to go to college."

Danny Burns, UI senior and chairman of the event, said individuals and organizations who have contributed to improving the quality of life for people with disabilities will also be recognized.

Wednesday's events include a tour of the Field House and the Division of Recreational Services.

UI study surveys emotions brought out by 'Platoon'

By Joseph Levy
Assistant Metro Editor

The movie Platoon has rendered a harsh impact on non-Vietnam War veterans, giving them vivid realizations on what the war was really like, a UI researcher said Monday.

"For the non-vets, it's given them a taste of what Vietnam was all about," said Gina Agostinelli, a postdoctoral fellow in the UI Department of Psychology.

Agostinelli and UI Psychology Department Chair John Harvey conducted a study on reactions to the movie in a Cedar Rapids theater when the film was first released. For about three weeks, surveys were distributed to moviegoers before entering and after leaving the cinema.

ACCORDING TO AGOSTINELLI, participants in the survey were asked to assess their feelings of depression, anger with the U.S. government, alienation toward American society and confusion about the meaning of the war both before and after seeing the movie.

Results of the study indicate the movie was an eye-opening experience for the majority of moviegoers surveyed, Agostinelli said, claiming responses reveal a relationship between confusion about Vietnam and depression caused by the war.

"We showed that confusion and depression are correlated," she said.

Agostinelli added the success of the movie can be attributed to its ability to evoke strong feelings of confusion and depression.

"It was kind of an empathic situation," she said. "The non-veterans said that seeing the movie had saddened them, increased their anger and their empathy for the veterans."

VIETNAM VETERANS attending Platoon also were affected, she claims.

"They were already having these feelings (of confusion and depression)," Agostinelli said. "It kind of reminded them of traumatic memories of the war."

According to Agostinelli, one survey participant, a veteran who claimed he was involved in the Tet offensive, said the movie reaffirmed his belief that the war was a "government charade."

"Veterans say this is probably one of the most accurate war movies," she said.

In Iowa City, Platoon has shown at the Englert Theatre, 221 E. Washington St., for about six weeks, cinema manager Tom Ramstad said.

He agreed with Agostinelli's findings, saying audiences have been visibly moved by the production.

"They take the movie very seriously," Ramstad said. "As they come out they have very serious looks on their faces."

Ramstad said the movie will probably remain at the Englert for two or three more weeks.

A step too far

The U.S. Supreme Court expanded the scope of affirmative action Wednesday when it ruled that employers may sometimes hire women and minorities over better-qualified men and whites. The ruling, which evoked strong dissent from those fearing reverse discrimination and the elimination of merit-based hiring and promotion, was an attempt to correct "statistical imbalances" in the workforce by encouraging employers to hire minorities in cases where there is only a slight difference in candidates' qualifications.

The Court's decision was most definitely a rebuff to the Reagan administration, which has waged a six-year battle to tightly restrict Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964, the federal antidiscrimination statute. But the defeat for the administration should not necessarily be viewed as a victory for those seeking equality in the workplace and elsewhere.

While the administration's policy on affirmative action — and other equality-related issues — has certainly been deplorable, the Court appears to have made the mistake of going too far in order to remedy an existing evil. Opening the door to women and minorities is an admirable and necessary step, but in Wednesday's case, Johnson vs. Transportation Agency, the Court's majority actually endorses a form of discrimination.

By ruling that a worker's ability is a less important job qualification than his/her sex or racial background, the Court hurts both men and women. Qualified whites and men are hurt by the mere fact that their demographic group makes up a majority of the workforce; women are hurt by the fact that they are portrayed as a weaker sex in need of special protection, rather than equals capable of successfully competing for a job.

In addition, by focusing on "statistical imbalances," the Court misinterprets some very important facts about the workplace, such as the fact that not all jobs are desirable to members of both sexes. As Associate Justice Antonin Scalia wrote in his dissenting opinion, "It is absurd to think that the nationwide failure of road maintenance crews, for example, to achieve the Agency's ambition of 36.4 percent female representation is attributable primarily, if even substantially, to the systematic exclusion of women eager to shoulder pick and shovel." Clearly, statistics do not tell the whole story.

The Court, by handing down five rulings in the past year upholding the legality of affirmative action, has certainly made a commendable effort to demonstrate that the Reagan administration's policy on affirmative action is unacceptable. Unfortunately, its most recent decision crosses the lines of basic fairness and may harm more people than it helps.

Ugly truths about secular humanists

By Scott Raab

A few of us stayed on at last week's Secular Humanist Anti-Prayer Group meeting, sharing one more needle in celebration of Tammy Faye Bakker's drug problems, when Rosenberg burst in with word of Jimmy Swaggart's plan to open a nationwide chain of private schools for fundamentalist Christian children.

The place got so quiet you could hear the planchette scraping across the ouija board.

"He's calling it McChrist's," Rosenberg said, trembling.

It was only a rumor, praise the Devil, but we were upset even so. You think fighting City Hall is tough? Try messing with the throne of God. Whooo-eee! You'd swear the Guy was omnipotent.

We'd thought we were home free in Iowa when we bribed the Legislature to require that all teachers, even parents who teach their children at home, be certified by the state. Maybe you heard that this would insure minimally competent instruction (just like the public schools provide), but that's the cover story. The real aim is to keep students from the truth about religion and American society.

WHAT IF IT LEAKED that Christ founded the United States, wrote the Declaration of Independence and the Constitution and was ordered crucified by the Warren Supreme Court? Boom — there go all the drugs, teen pregnancies, suicides and crime. And then where would we be?

On the trash heap of history, that's where, next to the American Civil Liberties Union and all our other comrades.

No, we secular humanists like things the way they are: ambiguous, uncertain, scary. We don't want folks knowing that the New Testament truly is God's word, that the United States is His land and that all those other "holy" books and "Gods" and countries are bushwah. We're into pluralism, tolerance and every form of kinky sex you can imagine.

We especially want it hidden that our Founding Fathers were all Pentacostals and Southern Baptists who gladly would have mailed their bottom dollar to Jerry Falwell. Our version has George Washington and Thomas Jefferson and James Madison as Episcopalians, the Adamases as Unitarians, for Satan's sake, and Abraham Lincoln belonging to no church at all.

WE ALSO REWROTE history to show that the American colonies weren't really filled with happy Christians who sought and found religious freedom for all. We've done our damndest to portray the original states as battlegrounds of worship, where bigots fought to make adherence to their particular sects a condition for settlement and citizenship.

That's how we brainwash children into believing that the Constitution avoids any mention of religion except for one clause — which makes no reference to Jesus or Christianity — in Article I of the Bill of Rights. We destroyed the original Constitution, which required that all candidates for public office denounce abortion-on-demand and pledge allegiance to "The 700 Club."

Our biggest coup, though, was to depict Jesus Himself as a Jew and a social-political revolutionary executed by the Romans for preaching a new society that fed the hungry, freed the slaves and empowered the meek.

IMAGINE CHILDREN knowing the truth: Jesus loved the powerful and the wealthy (especially those who struck gold by raising money in His name), and He felt capitalism was the only economic and social system that His Father would sanction. Why, they'd all grow up wanting BMWs!

Hell, we've had it our way for so long that I guess we got cocky, let our guard down. And now the truth is out. Just the other day a local zealot wrote that "Satanism (is) an approved religion of the Iowa City schools."

We don't know who flinked, but whoever it was is bound to fry in heaven. Meanwhile, though, we're keeping the faith. How can we lose, with godlessness on our side?

Scott Raab writes a column for the Viewpoints page every other Monday.

The specter of the UI's invisible racism

By Sherry McCabe

RACISM IS an ugly word. Many people here at the UI were angry to see pictures of whites in Georgia protesting the mere presence of blacks in their all-white county, or to read news accounts of whites causing the death of a young black man in New York. Racism and violence seem to be hand-in-hand.

But even more frightening than the Ku Klux Klan, who are visible in their white sheets, is what we call invisible racism: the whites who see black college students as only those who play on athletic teams with no real interest in education; the whites who view blacks as talented musicians, but not as talented scholars; the whites who see black studies programs as relics left over from the activism of the 1960s with no real place in our modern society; the whites who perceive Black History

Guest Opinion

Month as an isolated event forced upon public school children to satisfy a small, unimportant segment of society.

LYNDA BISHOP illustrated a result of possible racism in her letter to the editor (The Daily Iowan, March 17). The UI prides itself in its image as a haven of cultural diversity where students from Iowa farm families can meet people from many cultures and backgrounds. The only academic program here at the UI that provides us, the rural white Iowans, with exposure to the heritage and culture of Afro-Americans is the African-American World Studies Program.

But now, at a time when more and more children of Iowa are being forced by economic pressure to leave Iowa and seek employment in other parts of the country, where they will surely encounter more Afro-Americans than they have here in Iowa, that one door to their understanding blacks is being closed.

How can a white student graduating with a degree in education, counselling, social work, politics, law, medicine, psychology or the humanities use that degree effectively in large urban areas with a high minority population unless that graduate also has had some education on the black experience?

I UNDERSTAND that budget cuts are a fact of life. But the primary purpose of this institution is supposed to be to educate our young people to meet the challenges of the real world. Afro-Americans are 11 percent of our real world. We need to educate our children to help them understand blacks in order for them to work with blacks. That is a much more vital part of the purpose of the UI than many of the other highly visible spending priorities.

We support Bishop in her plea that the state Board of Regents and the UI restore the funding support for the faculty, staff and students in the African-American World Studies Program. We encourage others who agree to write their support to Dean Loewenberg of the College of Liberal Arts, UI President James O. Freedman and the state Board of Regents (6th Floor, Lucas Office Building, Des Moines, Iowa 50319).

These people need to see that blacks are important somewhere besides on the basketball floor.

Sherry McCabe is acting chairwoman of the Friends of the African-American World Studies Program.

Too narrow

To the Editor:

I've heard of perverts who, upon encountering any cylindrical object, manage to change the subject to sex. And I've heard of right wingers who see conspiracies in everything from sailing clubs to the Girl Scouts. But never have I seen anyone so utterly possessed with a one-track (well, make it two-track) mind as Daily Iowan Editorial Writer Linda Schuppener.

Her world view seems to consist entirely of two elements: President Ronald Reagan and fundamentalist Christians. Her talent for seeing these two elements as the beginning, middle and end of everything in the universe is uncanny. Not just any old writer has the ability to turn an editorial about dishonesty in sports and on Wall Street into a slam against "moral majoritarians." Other, less-talented writers have to wait until someone does something horrible — such as insisting on some input into their children's education — before letting the ink loose. But not Schuppener.

Whose job?

To the Editor:

Discounting the eight hours a day that people normally sleep and the eight hours devoted to their personal pursuits, recreation or play for children, there are 2,920 hours each year left from the 8,760 hours per year total.

Baird A. King
208 28th St. Dr. S.E.
Cedar Rapids

The 1,474 hours that children spend in school to gain knowledge in numerous new and difficult subjects is almost equal to the 1,446 extra hours left from that 2,920 hours.

Any family and their church that cannot teach their children one, and only one, subject of religion in that 1,446 hours — nearly four hours a day — is a family and church that has failed, not the public school.

Private/parochial schools teach the same courses that public schools teach, plus religion, which is their only reason to operate. There should be no subsidy, direct or indirect, for them. The near $265.00 per student subsidy they currently receive should be discontinued immediately.

State

Iowa House OKs plan to fight AIDS

DES MOINES (UPI) — The Iowa House approved a plan Monday to fight AIDS through confidential, voluntary blood screening, but one critic said the effort is doomed to fail because of the lifestyles of "gays and other liberals."

The bill, passed to the Senate on an 88-6 vote, calls for a central AIDS registry, counseling for AIDS carriers and victims and state-funded public education about Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome.

The biggest opposition came from Rep. Virgil Corey, R-Morning Sun, who criticized lawmakers for failing to take stronger action against "the most insidious disease ever to hit mankind."

"This bill does absolutely nothing to curb the spread of AIDS," he said.

"THE GAYS AND other liberals who want to continue their lifestyle will continue to block anything that would help stop gays," said Corey, whose son Leroy heads the Iowa-based Midwest Conservative Political Action Committee.

Corey said he supports AIDS testing of school children and return to a previous state law that required blood testing for marriage licenses. He said federal courts erroneously have ruled unconstitutional proposals to randomly test for AIDS.

Rep. Johnnie Hammond, D-Ames, the bill's sponsor, said AIDS is one of the most significant health issues of the century.

"In Iowa, there have been 45 diagnosed cases and 23 deaths. Experts predict there will be 1,000 cases in the next five years. The chances are you will know someone who comes down with AIDS over the next five years," she said.

Virgil Corey

The Iowa Health Department already is conducting voluntary blood testing of "at-risk groups" fearful of having contracted the disease, Hammond said. She said the bill would make sure the tests remain confidential and guarantee they are provided at the request of the individual rather than upon demand.

"THE MOST IMPORTANT thing we can do to address the problem of AIDS is to provide public information about how we get AIDS not through blood screening of low-risk populations," she said.

In a related development, Gov. Terry Branstad said Monday he has moral reservations about the public distribution of condoms as a way to combat AIDS, but said his concerns are not based on his Catholic faith.

He also said the state's role in such matters should be one of assisting local health agencies, then stopped his comments short, saying, "I think I've said enough."

Bakker affair worries clergy

By James Cahoy
Staff Writers

While the saga of former PTL Club head Jim Bakker continues to unfold, local evangelical leaders say they are concerned their own ministries may be harmed by the scandal.

Bakker resigned his post as head of the PTL (Praise The Lord or People That Love) ministry last week after it was revealed he had a sexual encounter with church secretary Jessica Hahn several years ago, then paid blackmail money to cover it up.

"I certainly think it may have a negative effect on all evangelical churches," said Kenneth Polesley, associate pastor of the Parkview Evangelical Free Church in Coralville. "Bakker has to be held accountable. You can't excuse his behavior."

Polesley said he thought the biggest result from the scandal would be a decline in the popularity of television evangelists.

"I think people may start holding them accountable now," Polesley said. "I've never been real impressed by most of them, anyway."

PASTOR HARRY CAMPBELL of the First Assembly of God Church, Cedar Rapids, said he was concerned about the effects of the scandal on his church, which claimed Bakker as a member before the scandal.

"I hope it does not affect our church," Campbell said. "We should be treated like the government — if there's a flaw it is the fault of one person and not the organization as a whole."

"I don't think the scandal will affect the true followers of Christ," Campbell said. "I think those who are against Christianity will have a field day, but they are biased anyway."

Campbell said he thinks Bakker was wrong for what he did, and questions whether Bakker should be allowed to resume an active role within the Assembly of God church.

"I'M SORRY he got involved in the whole situation, but he is now paying for the consequence of his sin," Campbell said. "I want to see the man redeemed, but I'm not sure whether he should come back or not."

But Brad Sherman, pastor of the Maranatha Church in Iowa

City, said he does not think the scandal will affect evangelical ministries or people's opinions of them.

"It's kind of like Jerry Falwell said — sin is nothing new," Sherman said. "You can't stop the power of God. If the scandal shuts down the television preachers, maybe that's for the best."

UI senior Liz Dueland, a member of the Great Commission Bible group which conducts religious activities on the UI campus, also said she is not concerned with the effect of the PTL scandal on UI students.

"I don't think it will affect students' opinions of religion," Dueland said. "If they are honest themselves and believe in God, they will not change their minds."

Youth conference to discuss job needs

DES MOINES (UPI) — The state is doing a poor job of training youths for jobs, especially in rural areas, the sponsors of a rural youth conference said Monday.

The Governor's Rural Youth Initiative Conference, April 13-14 in Des Moines, is designed to draw different state agencies and volunteer groups together in an effort to meet training and employment needs of rural youths.

TOM GLENN, a State Board of Education member, said during a statehouse news conference that too often the state's attention is directed toward urban youths.

"Statistics indicate we are not doing as good a job delivering services to youths as we should... especially in rural areas," he said.

The effort follows the lead of former Gov. Robert Ray, who called for inter-agency cooperation as a way to deal with problems caused by massive layoffs at Massey-Ferguson and Wilson Foods in the early 1980s, Glenn said.

"Through that, we found that agencies working together really can accomplish more than agencies working separately," he said.

GLENN, WHO ALSO works

as the state's labor liaison in concert with the Job Training Partnership Act, said local advocates are being urged to attend the conference in teams, along with workers from Job Service, Education Department, Human Services Department and JTPA programs.

Twila Young, the conference's coordinator, said the two-day meeting is open to anyone interested.

"It is not only formal programs that have an impact on youth. It is also volunteer organizations, churches, parents' organizations — anyone who is interested in the well-being of youths," she said.

THE CONFERENCE features two dozen workshop topics, including "Literacy in Rural Iowa," "Youth Employment and Training Services," "A Menu of Social Services," "Services for At-Risk Youth," "Changing Family Structures," "Job Forecasting Model" and "Labor Management."

The workshop entitled "No Problem is an Island," will discuss the "negative synergy of problems and how coordinated service delivery can bring positive synergy to the situation."

38 go on trial for alleged poisonings

MADRID — Hundreds of people, some crippled and maimed by history's largest mass food poisoning, hurled rocks and chanted "Murderers! Murderers!" outside the courthouse where 38 people went on trial Monday on charges of selling tainted cooking oil.

Forty people, mostly industrial oil importers and cooking oil wholesalers, were indicted. Two who fled Spain are being tried in absentia.

Most of Monday's protesters were victims of the "toxic oil syndrome," which has killed nearly 600 people and affected almost 25,000 others since it erupted in the spring of 1981.

The 38 defendants allegedly sold rapeseed oil laced with aniline dye to mark it for industrial use and unfit for human consumption.

The prosecution is seeking prison sentences of more than 106,000 years for those accused of organizing the scheme. But under Spanish law the maximum time they could spend behind bars is 30 years.

Cooper case may inspire 'reforms'

DES MOINES — The publicity surrounding the case of the five Cooper children removed from a Kellogg, Iowa, foster home against their will has given momentum to a bill that would overhaul Iowa's foster care system, the bill's sponsor said Monday.

Rep. Phil Brammer, D-Cedar Rapids, said his bill would mandate, for the first time in Iowa, that primary consideration be given to the needs of the children and their integration into foster families.

It also would require the courts to hold a special permanency hearing for any child who needs help and who has been in foster care for a year.

The Cooper children lived with Larry and Paula Mick for two years while their mother, Karen Cooper of Cedar Rapids, underwent treatment for mental illness.

After the hearing, the court must rule whether the child be returned home, the child remain in foster care, the parents' rights start to be terminated or that new placement alternatives be considered.

1 dies in helicopter crash off Hawaii

HONOKAA, Hawaii — A tour helicopter with five people aboard lost power and plunged into the ocean off the island of Hawaii, killing one passenger, officials said.

Marvin Magid, 41, of Chicago, was pronounced dead on arrival 4:45 p.m. Sunday at Honokaa Hospital, police said. He apparently drowned after the helicopter hit the water, police said.

The Bell Jet Ranger 206-B ditched 500 feet offshore at about 1:30 p.m., said a spokesman with the Federal Aviation Administration.

The helicopter was carrying two couples and a pilot. They were identified as Magid and his wife, Marie, 34; Stephen Hardy, 31, and Deborah Little, 23, of Plymouth, Mass.; and pilot Billy Soles, 26, Kailua-Kona, Hawaii.

After a tour of Kilauea volcano and the Hamakua coast, the helicopter headed out over the ocean. The craft apparently lost power and plummeted into the sea, officials said.

Soles and the other three passengers swam to shore, police said.

Heiress tries to regain church alms

WORCESTER, Mass. — An heiress trying to get back $7 million she gave to a fundamentalist church made the donations of her own accord and not because she was brainwashed, a lawyer for the church argued Monday.

"No one forced her. No one dragooned her" into contributing to the 18,000-member church, defense lawyer Norman Roy Grutman said of Elizabeth (Betsy) Dayton Dovydenas' donation to The Bible Speaks.

Dovydenas' lawyer, Gordon T. Walker, argued the church's pastor and founder, Carl H. Stevens Jr., systematically manipulated his client into donating part of her fortune.

Dovydenas, 33, heiress to the Minneapolis-based Dayton Hudson Corp., a retail empire founded by her father and uncles, made most of the donations in 1984 and 1985.

She now claims Stevens and other church officials became entwined in her spiritual and personal life after realizing the scope of her wealth — about $19 million before the donations were made.

Study cites Mexico's drinking problem

MEXICO CITY — A health survey released Monday said 20 percent of Mexico's adults drink alcoholic beverages every day and called the figure "excessive."

Hector Cabildo Arellano, president of the Mental Health Society, said alcoholism is one of the problems brought on by the strains of urban living and has caused a serious deterioration in mental health.

Housing problems, economic difficulties, robberies, assault, traffic accidents, noise, pollution and marital problems are causes for high alcoholic consumption, Cabildo said.

However, sociologists and psychologists say strong family ties have helped Mexicans resist the problems of urban stress created by living in cities such as Mexico City, the world's most populated city with 18 million people.

High court agrees to hear Flynt case

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Supreme Court agreed Monday to decide if Hustler Magazine publisher Larry Flynt must pay the Rev. Jerry Falwell $200,000 for emotional distress for running an ad parody that lampooned the television evangelist's sex life.

The court will hear arguments next term in the case brought by Flynt seeking review of a ruling by the 4th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals that allowed the award even though a jury found that the material did not libel Falwell.

Falwell, the founder of the Moral Majority, was recently appointed head of the PTL Club to replace Jim Bakker, who was forced to resign amid charges of a sexual relationship with a former secretary and subsequent charges of the payment of hush money.

The libel case has caused concern among the media and other defenders of the First Amendment's guarantee of freedom of speech and the press because of the appeal panel's finding that a person who was not libeled can nonetheless collect a substantial award for suffering emotional distress.

THE CLAIM OF emotional distress, according to court documents, is being made frequently in libel cases and the fear is that if the award stands, many will collect large sums of money from sympathetic jurors for published material merely because it is upsetting.

Political satire has long been a staple of American commentary and has been given wide protection from libel claims.

"Opinions are often distress-inducing, calculated to provoke and disturb, often in emotionally incendiary language," wrote the publishers of the Richmond, Va., Times-Dispatch, Richmond, Va., News Leader and the Fredericksburg, Va., Free Lance Star newspapers in a petition in support of Flynt.

"But opinions do not forfeit their First Amendment protection merely because they are harsh, indecent, or indecorous. . . . Punishment of speech because it is intended to cause emotional distress threatens the country's long tradition of robust political and social satire," they contended.

THE LIBEL CASE began with the publication in November 1983 of an ad parody of an advertising campaign for Campari Liqueur. In the real advertisements celebrities talk about their "first time." They mean their first encounter with Campari, but there is a double-entendre with a sexual connotation.

In the Hustler parody, the celebrity is Falwell and the fictional encounter is supposed to be his first sexual encounter — it takes place while drunk on Campari in an outhouse with his mother.

Falwell sued for libel, invasion of privacy and intentional infliction of emotional distress.

A federal jury ruled against Falwell on the libel claim because the ad was clearly marked a parody and the court ruled against the invasion of privacy claim.

However, the jury returned an award of $200,000 on the emotional distress claim.

The award was upheld by the appeals court in August 1986.

U.S. Marines removed from Moscow embassy

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Reagan administration ordered all Marine guards withdrawn from the U.S. Embassy in Moscow Monday as a "precautionary" measure prompted by accusations that two Marines allowed Soviet agents into sensitive areas of the building.

At the same time, the lawyer for Sgt. Clayton Lonetree said the second Marine accused but not formally charged in the investigation, Cpl. Arnold Bracy, denied earlier statements that he acted as lookout while Lonetree allowed the agents to "peruse" the embassy for up to four hours about a year ago.

The lawyer, William Kunstler, charged that the case against his client and Bracy was "a monumental fake" intended to show that the administration is tightening security.

ALSO ON MONDAY, the Marines sent Lonetree, 25, of Chicago, from his cell at the Quantico, Va., barracks to Bethesda Naval Hospital for a psychiatric evaluation to determine his ability to stand trial at a court-martial, the Marine Corps said. Lonetree's next hearing is scheduled for April 15.

A Marine spokesman denied rumors that Lonetree had tried to commit suicide.

The array of developments came three days after the Marines filed five additional charges against Lonetree, bringing the total to 24, that for the first time mentioned Bracy as a suspected accomplice. Bracy, arrested last week, has not been charged with a crime. Lonetree was arrested in December.

In a move that sources said was initiated by the State Department, the agency and the Marine Corps said they "have decided to return all Marines stationed in Moscow to the United States" and to replace all 28 of them with leathernecks from other embassies and the Quantico Marine base during April.

"THIS MEASURE IS precautionary in nature and is intended to facilitate an investigation of the security program at the U.S. Embassy," the statement said. "There's no evidence that any of the returning Marines are implicated in any wrongdoing."

In a telephone interview, Kunstler confirmed a report that Lonetree had made conflicting statements to Naval Investigative Service agents and said that Bracy, 21, of New York City, recanted his story March 21 about having cooperated with Lonetree in allowing Soviet operatives into the embassy.

The Marines declined to comment on whether Bracy had changed his story.

WHAT BRACY DENIED was an earlier confession that Kunstler said he had not seen. But the recantation appeared in a document that was classified, he said.

"The CIA didn't want this recantation to get out," Kunstler said. "This is deeper than the Marines."

Among other things, Lonetree is accused of revealing the names, addresses, telephone numbers and photographs of CIA agents in Moscow.

Leaders split on world issues

MOSCOW (UPI) — British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher split fundamentally with Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev Monday, saying the U.S. Star Wars program cannot be stopped and called for the release of dissidents.

Thatcher, in a banquet speech that came after an exhausting seven hours of talks with Gorbachev at the Kremlin, bluntly told her host Britain would never abandon the nuclear deterrent she believes has kept peace in Europe.

The British leader repeated her warning that the Soviet record on human rights would determine whether the West trusts the Soviet Union enough to sign an arms control agreement.

To nearly every point raised by Thatcher, Gorbachev gave an opposing opinion. He dismissed Western concern with individual human rights cases as an attempt to draw attention from oppression in the West and accused NATO of trying to block arms control agreements.

"IT WOULD SIMPLY be unrealistic to expect us ever to forego our ideals," Gorbachev said, terming calls for adopting the values of Western society "just not serious."

Though the two leaders called for better understanding, their evening speeches demonstrated fundamental differences in their positions.

Thatcher, who in 1985 called Gorbachev a man with whom she could "do business," urged step-by-step disarmament, saying, "I do not believe it makes sense to try to achieve this in one leap." Her comments were a clear slight of Gorbachev's sweeping proposal to rid the world of all nuclear weapons by the end of the century.

"Without far greater trust and confidence between East and West than exists at present, a world without nuclear weapons would be less stable and more dangerous for all of us," Thatcher, in Moscow for the first Soviet-British summit in 12 years, said.

"THAT IS WHY the government which I lead will not abandon the security provided for our country and for the NATO alliance by nuclear weapons," Thatcher said.

Thatcher reiterated her support for President Ronald Reagan's missile defense system, popularly known as Star Wars.

"And we know that similar work is being undertaken in the Soviet Union," Thatcher told the Kremlin banquet hosted by Gorbachev, ignoring previous Kremlin denials.

Gorbachev, noting he had "characteristically frank discussions" with Thatcher, countered with charges of Western intransigence in arms control.

"PERHAPS NATO is once again looking for a best possible way to camouflage its intention to retain and increase the number of Pershing and cruise missiles in Europe, or even to replace them with some more advanced weapons systems," he said.

The gulf between Thatcher and Gorbachev also was apparent on human rights.

Thatcher, while praising the liberalization under the current government, called on Gorbachev to show his commitment to changing the Soviet system by releasing "prisoners of conscience" and allowing free emigration.

Haiti constitution opens 'key bridge'

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti (UPI) — The Haitian people's near-unanimous endorsement of a new constitution opened a "key bridge" in the impoverished nation's return to democracy, two prominent political leaders said Monday.

The Information Ministry said returns from 805 of the 1,500 voting places showed 740,699 yes votes and 1,246 no ballots, a 99.8 percent margin in favor of the constitution. A spokesman said 101 ballots were voided from Sunday's balloting.

"We have just crossed a key bridge which opens the road to democracy," said Leslie Manigat, head of the middle-road National Progressive Democratic Party and a major contender for the presidency in November's elections.

ANOTHER MAJOR presidential candidate, Gregoire Eugene of the Social Democratic Party, also hailed the vote as a turning point in the democratic process and said it showed even though eight of 30 Haitians cannot read or write, they are "ready for democracy."

He said it demonstrated "illiteracy does not mean idiocy."

Sunday's vote was calm and orderly throughout the country as large numbers of Haitians turned out in a festive mood to cast white ballots for a "yes" vote. Only a few yellow "no" ballots were cast. In some rural areas voters had to walk two miles to vote.

Observers contacted Monday, both Haitian and foreign, agreed the large turnout and overwhelming endorsement of the constitution provided a clear mandate for the National Governing Council to continue its calendar for restoration of full democratic rule.

THE THREE-MEMBER civilian-military panel took power after President-for-life Jean-Claude "Baby Doc" Duvalier fled into exile in France on Feb. 7, 1986, as popular pressure mounted against his regime.

Duvalier became president in 1971 at age 19, succeeding his late father, Francois "Papa Doc" Duvalier who came to power in 1957.

Sunday's vote was seen as an emphatic rejection of the 29 years of Duvalier tyranny. The constitution was clearly drawn to prevent a return of the Duvalier style of rule.

It weakens the president, who will share power with a prime minister and Parliament, and limits the president to a single five-year term. It puts the army under civilian control and forbids creation of a new armed force such as the Tontons Macoutes, the Duvalier secret police that brutalized and terrorized the populace.

THE CONSTITUTION also details an elaborate framework to protect human rights.

A U.S. team that observed the vote at a number of polling places throughout the country reported Monday it found no irregularities in the voting.

"We were impressed by the calm dignity and discipline among the voters," group spokesman Allan Ebert told a news conference.

'Embarrassment' may free 4 hostages

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) — Shiite Moslem Amal militia leader Nabih Berri said Monday the captors of three American professors and an Indian academic are in an "embarrassing situation" and want to free their hostages.

Speaking at his home in Moslem West Beirut following a meeting with the wives of the four professors, Berri reiterated his offer to free an Israeli soldier captured by his militia

Oct. 16, 1986, in exchange for 400 Arab prisoners detained by Israel.

The Islamic Jihad for the Liberation of Palestine, which claimed responsibility for the Jan. 24 abduction of the four teachers, originally demanded the release of the 400 Arabs in return for their freedom.

Berri charged that "Squad 17," a special unit of bodyguards for Palestine Liberation Organization leader Yasser Arafat, knew the whereabouts of the professors who were kidnapped at gunpoint from the private Beirut University College.

"I BELIEVE THE captors are in an embarrassing situation and they would want to set their hostages free," Berri, who also is justice minister, said. Berri did not explain what he meant by an "embarrassing situation."

Berri made his remarks in response to a statement by Arafat that the four teachers — Alann Steen, 47, professor of communications; Jesse Turner, 39, professor of mathematics; Robert Polhill, 52, a university accountant; and Mithileshwar Singh, 62, an Indian-born U.S. resident — are being held by the Amal militia.

Hoosiers out-'Smart' Syracuse

NEW ORLEANS (UPI) — Keith Smart sank a 15-foot jump shot with four seconds left Monday night to lead the Indiana Hoosiers to their third national title in 11 years, a 74-73 victory over the Syracuse Orangemen in the NCAA championship game.

Smart, who hit 17 of his 21 points in the second half, including six of Indiana's last seven baskets, scored on a driving layup with 32 seconds left to pull the Hoosiers within 73-72.

Indiana's Steve Alford then fouled freshman Derrick Coleman, who missed the front end of a one-and-one with 28 seconds to go. Indiana rebounded the miss and ran the clock down before Smart hit his basket from the corner, ending a thrilling contest that featured 18 lead changes and 10 ties.

THOUGH THERE were four seconds left when Smart hit his basket, Syracuse players failed to get a timeout call from officials until only one second remained.

Syracuse Coach Jim Boeheim argued the timeout should have been declared immediately, but officials would not roll back the clock. Fittingly, it was Smart who intercepted Syracuse's desperate inbound pass as the buzzer sounded.

The 6-foot-1 point guard, a junior college transfer from Garden City College in Lawrence, Kan., was selected the game's MVP.

"To be honest, I didn't know it was going in," Smart said of the game-winning shot. "This is a fairy tale. Maybe I'll wake up next year."

The Hoosiers, who trailed by five points with 8:11 left, brought Coach Bob Knight his third national title, putting him in a select circle with John Wooden of UCLA and Adolph Rupp of Kentucky as the only basketball coaches to win more than two NCAA championships.

ALFORD SCORED 23 points, 21 on three-point baskets, to help Indiana end its season at 30-4. Daryl Thomas added 20 points and junior college transfer Dean Garrett had 10 points and 10 rebounds for the Hoosiers.

Sherman Douglas scored 20 points for the Orangemen who made their first appearance in the championship game and finished the season 31-7. Rony Seikaly added 18 points and Coleman grabbed 19 rebounds.

It was the sixth championship game in the last eight years to be decided by five points or less and the fifth one-point title game to be played. The last one was North Carolina's 63-62 victory over Georgetown five years ago.

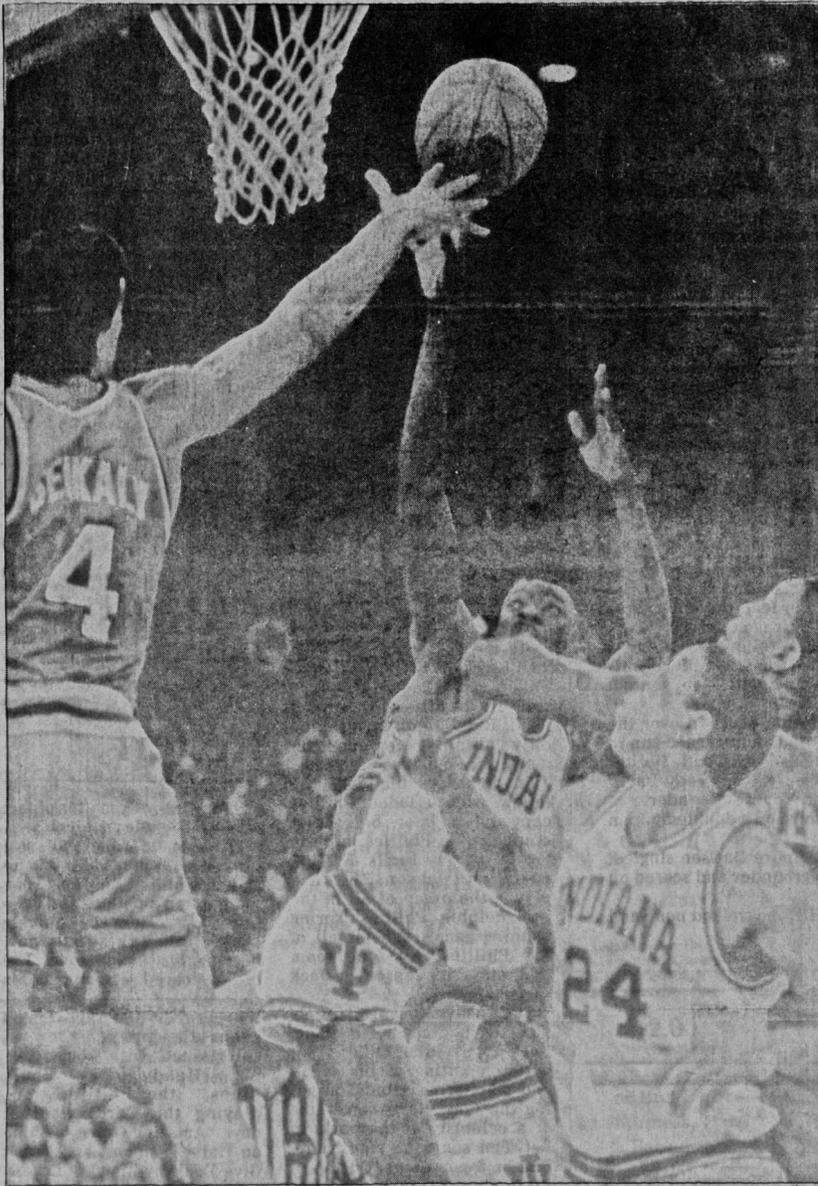

KNIGHT, WHO LAST won the title in 1981, took his third crown in stride.

"To me as a coach it doesn't mean anything," he said. "Sure I'm tickled, but for these kids — to come back like they did and to hang in the game the way they did."

Indiana grabbed a 34-33 half-time advantage on a three-point shot by Alford one second before intermission. Seikaly hit two free throws and Greg Monroe connected on an 18-foot jumper to start the second half, but Indiana scored seven straight points to regain the lead, 41-37.

Seikaly ignited a 15-3 run with a three-point play off a short bank shot as Syracuse moved to a 52-44 margin, the biggest advantage for either team. Reserve center Derek Brower scored five points for the Orangemen inside during the spurt.

THE HOOSIERS responded with a 10-0 run to move in front 54-52. Douglas then led another Syracuse charge, scoring seven points in a 9-2 dash.

Keith Smart scores two of his 21 points that led the 1987 tournament MVP, hit a 15-foot jump shot Indiana Monday to the NCAA Championship. Smart, with :04 left to seal a 74-73 win over Syracuse.

Thomas then hit a free throw and a layup in traffic and Smart scored on a twisting drive to tie the score 61-61 with 5:42 left.

Seikaly leaned inside for a basket to put Syracuse ahead 70-68 with 2:03 to go. He was fouled on the play and missed a free throw, but Coleman grabbed his 19th rebound as the Orangemen retained possession.

Douglas missed a running jumper and Smart scored on a drive to tie the game 70-70. Howard Triche then made a five-footer. When Smart missed for Indiana, Triche grabbed the rebound and was fouled.

Asked if the last three seconds at the end of the game, might have made a difference, Boeheim said: "It was a close call, but I'm not gonna think about that."

'Quiet' leader carries Hawks

By Cathy Cronin
Staff Writer

Looked to as a "quiet leader", according to Iowa softball Coach Ginny Parrish, sophomore shortstop Lynda Schlueter gets the job done.

"Her actions say a lot more than her words," Parrish said. "She's the type of player that doesn't talk about it, she just does it. She's not a flashy player and is never picked out as being the star, but she's dependable and consistent. Lynda gets the job done."

Softball

Being such a down-to-earth and quiet player might seem, from the outside, to contribute less to the team's outlook and attitude but according to Schlueter it's better to have at least one person like that.

"It's better to have somebody that doesn't get too excited," Schlueter said. "If too many people out there are loud, when things go bad they'll really go bad."

WHEN THINGS DO go wrong for the Iowa women's softball team Schlueter is the one to take a different outlook.

"She's the one that will say 'well this isn't such a big problem, nothing that a couple wins can't fix,'" Parrish added. "In the tough situations she doesn't choke. And she'll make the hard plays look easy and routine."

Starting in all 18 games so far this season, Schlueter and the Iowa team stand with a 9-9 record overall, seven of those wins acquired during the team's spring trip to Florida. Schlueter felt positive about the Florida trip overall but attributed the losses that they did have to mental letdowns.

"We started out pretty well," See Schlueter, Page 2B

Chiapparelli sparkles for Iowa

By Laura Palmer
Staff Writer

COLLEGE PARK, Md. — Shortly after winning his first NCAA title, Iowa 177-pound Rico Chiapparelli looked over at his teammate, 167-pound national champion, Royce Alger and said, "I still can't believe it."

"I'll tell you what, when Royce won I was in tears and that got me psyched up," Chiapparelli said. "I wanted to win after I saw him win because me and him are roommates (in College Park), and I knew I couldn't go back to my room tonight if I lost because he'd be on my butt."

"We're really good friends even though we have two totally different styles and approaches to the sport, but I think that's why we're so close," Chiapparelli said.

THIS WAS Chiapparelli's third attempt at capturing an individual national crown. Last year Chiapparelli and Alger were the only two Hawkeyes who did not wrestle in the finals. This year, Chiapparelli compiled a 21-1 record and collected his third Big Ten title on his way to his first national title.

"I felt we pushed each other in the room all year," Alger said. "It's kind of ironic because nobody in Iowa City hurt more than Rico and I after we didn't make it to the finals. It's not really a rivalry, but if I won, he knew he'd have to win."

Shortly before Chiapparelli

Rico Chiapparelli, shown here wrestling for the Big Ten championship, won his first national title Saturday in College Park, Md.

Wrestling

stepped to the mat it was announced that Iowa State had won the meet.

"It bothered me inside, but I couldn't let it effect my preparation for the match. It bothers me a lot right now, but I had to repress it while I was warming up," Chiapparelli said. "Before I went out there to wrestle (and Jim) Heffernan lost and I looked in that little corner room over there out in the tunnel, and Royce and (Iowa assistant Coach) Mark Johnson and a couple other guys were in there crying."

"I JUST HAD TO get away from that scene because I needed positive feelings when I was going to go out there and wrestle. I know that effected them a lot, and I hope my victory will help the coaches be a little bit more happier."

The Hawkeye 177-pounder was seeded second going into the tournament and defeated No. 1 seed Darryl Pope from California State-Bakersfield, 5-2, in the finals.

After a scoreless first period, Pope collected one point on an escape at the beginning of the second period. Chiapparelli began the final period with an escape to tie the score 1-1. With 1 minute, 20 seconds on the clock, Chiapparelli scored a takedown, but Pope escaped to trail 3-2. With seconds left in the match, Chiapparelli countered a takedown attempt by Pope to win the match 5-2.

"I DIDN'T WRESTLE a real good match. He's real short and kind of hard to get in on," Chiapparelli said. "But the one time I did I was able to finish it and catch his ankle as he was going out of bounds. I knew if I got his ankle they'd give me two and they did. You can't hesitate on the edge. (Iowa Coach Dan) Gable always tells us that."

Chiapparelli fans greeted the senior from Baltimore, Md., by chanting "Rico" and continued to cheer him on throughout the match.

"I couldn't help but hear that (the chant)," Chiapparelli said. "I'm sure it helps me, and I'm sure that got to my opponent a little bit too. This is supposed to be a neutral area and it's kind of ended up my home by everybody being here."

Russians are step for Schwab's quest

By Scott Wingert
Special to The Daily Iowan

One thing dominates Northern Iowa wrestler Mark Schwab's mind — the 1988 Olympic Games.

A great preview to the Games to be held in Seoul, South Korea, takes place in Carver-Hawkeye Arena April 1 when a team of United States hopefuls clash with the best competition the world has to offer, the Soviet Union. Schwab will wrestle at 52 kilograms (114.5 pounds).

Schwab's probable opponent in the meet, the first of four in the United States with the Soviets, is Vladimir Toguzov, the reigning champion of the Goodwill Games and the World Cup at 52 kilograms.

Schwab, who compiled a brilliant 106-1 mark while winning four high school state championships from 1982-85 at Osage, Iowa, is 0-3 vs. Toguzov, but each match has been close.

"I think I can beat him," Schwab, who first lost to Toguzov 10-3 in the Junior World Tourney in Colorado Springs in 1985, said.

Last summer, the two met in Schwab's only other international competition, the prestigious Tbilisi Tour in Tbilisi, Russia. He lost both matches to Toguzov, 6-2, but rallied to finish third in that tournament. "In Russia, I was 0-0 with him the first time with 30 seconds left," Schwab said. "I was warned (for stalling) then he took me down and leg-laced me for exposure points."

Though Schwab's international experience is limited, the quality of it has been great. For Iowa wrestling Coach Dan Gable, the assistant coach of the U.S. team, there is no comparison.

"WRESTLING THE Soviets is the No. 1 competition you can get," Gable said. "Schwab has proven himself internationally against tough Eastern-bloc competition. He is very physical at that weight."

Barry Davis, the only other Iowan on the U.S. team and Schwab's roommate on the 20-day Russian tour, concurs with Gable.

"Mark stays within his style very well," Davis said. "He is very strong for his weight. He has the kind of style that will give any wrestler problems."

Schwab will get only two or three good practice sessions with Davis before the meet but has been wrestling extensively in Cedar Falls.

"I REDSHIRTED THIS season to concentrate on the Olympics," Schwab said. "I wanted to work on technique." See Schwab, Page 2B

Sportsbriefs

North Korea banned in Olympic soccer

LONDON (UPI) — North Korea's prospects of co-hosting the 1988 Summer Seoul Olympics were dealt a setback by FIFA's decision to banish the country's team from the Olympic soccer qualifying tournament.

The International Olympic Committee has authorized a fourth meeting between North and South Korean Olympic officials, but Friday's ruling by soccer's world governing body has changed the scenario.

The FIFA ban was imposed because North Korea failed to show up for qualifying matches against Malaysia and Thailand. The organization's Executive Committee rejected Pyongyang's claim for automatic entry to the finals as co-hosts, saying it only recognized Seoul as the Olympic Games organizer.

North Korea based its argument on the fact it had agreed "in principle" to an IOC proposal in which Pyongyang would stage some Olympic soccer group matches, in addition to a road cycle race, archery and table tennis.

Turnbull, Hanika advance at net tourney

PISCATAWAY, N.J. (UPI) — Wendy Turnbull and Sylvia Hanika both struggled with unseeded opponents Monday before advancing to the second round of the $150,000 U.S. Women's Indoor Tennis Championship.

Turnbull, seeded sixth, defeated Leslie Allen, 7-6 (7-2), 6-2, and Hanika, the eighth seed, beat Jo Durie of England, 3-6, 6-4, 6-3.

"I was missing too many volleys and not concentrating well," said Turnbull, who needed a service break in the 12th game to force the tie-breaker.

The 34-year-old Australian built a 5-1 lead in the tie-break. Allen, who has not played on the tour regularly in two years, held serve in the opening game of the second set before dropping the next five.

Wegman, Crim six-hitter dumps Cubs

MESA, Ariz. (UPI) — Bill Wegman and Chuck Crim combined on a six-hitter Monday to lead the Milwaukee Brewers to a 2-1 victory over the Chicago Cubs.

Crim, trying to make the team as a reliever after an 0-3 record at Triple-A Vancouver last season, reduced his spring earned run average to 1.54 with two shutout innings.

It was the Brewers' fifth exhibition decision over the Cubs in six games. Milwaukee scored an unearned run in the first inning off loser Greg Maddux. Paul Molitor singled, stole second, took third on catcher Jody Davis' errant throw and scored on Robin Yount's grounder.

Milwaukee added a run in the third on a double by Juan Castillo and a single by Molitor.

The Cubs scored in the fourth. Andre Dawson singled, took second on Keith Moreland's grounder and scored on Davis' single.

Maddux, Ron Davis and Frank DiPino walked none and struck out nine for the Cubs.

Sailing club wins first regatta

By Marc Bona
Staff Writer

While the basketball and wrestling seasons are complete, the UI sailing club is continuing a winning tradition.

The club swept all honors at the Notre Dame Icebreaker Regatta, March 28-29, winning the A and B divisions as well as the team trophy.

Gunther Lubben skippered the club to victory in the A division with Joey Grandganett and Paul Goodman comprising the crew. In the B division, Skipper Tim Craven sailed to the win with Tricia Combs at crew.

The club did not have the regatta wrapped up until the final day of competition as Lubben was tied with Ohio Wesleyan and Craven was down by a point to Ohio State after Saturday's action.

"THEY BOTH SAILED real consistently on both days," Iowa Coach Bob Woodward said. "They could do no wrong."

Iowa took the team trophy in the field of 11 by scoring 53 points, while host Notre Dame finished a distant second with 81. Ohio State rounded out the top three with 100 points.

Ohio Wesleyan finished fourth with 103 while Wisconsin came in fifth with 138. Southern Illinois finished sixth with 141, two points ahead of seventh place Wisconsin-Green Bay.

Michigan finished in eighth place with 152. Albion (Mich.) came in ninth with 170, with Marquette finishing 10th with 175 points. Xavier rounded out the field with 202 points.

"It's pretty gratifying when you go in with your second team and do that well," Woodward said. "Also, I think both skippers learned a lot, especially Tim. I think he's got real good possibilities in terms of improvement over the next few months."

"GUNTHER IS STARTING to become really dominant in the boat now. He's feeling really confident," Woodward added.

"It was good to kind of bounce back from sailing with the heavyweights in Tulane and sail against the major Midwest schools and come out on top," Woodward said.

Iowa's next competition will be April 4-5 at Belmont Harbor (Chicago) in the IIT Regatta. The UI club will again be sailing against 10 other clubs.

"The only problem with the IIT is that Gunther and Tim will not be available. Bill Vickers will sail instead," Woodward said. "It will be a tough regatta but a lot of fun. We should be in the top three."

The sailing club will be holding spring informational meetings beginning April 1 at 7 p.m. in EPB Room 107. Also scheduled are meetings April 7 in EPB Room 109 at 6 p.m. and April 8 in EPB Room 107 at 7 p.m. For more information contact Beth Janeczek at 335-3072 during the day or 337-3054 at nights.

The UI badminton club will be hosting the Spring Badminton Classic April 3, 4 and 10 in the Field House.

The event, open to the public, is sponsored by the UI badminton club, Recreational Services, Wilson's Eastdale Sports Center and River City Sports. All participants will be guaranteed two matches, with prizes and trophies to be awarded to winners.

Deadline for co-ed doubles is March 31 with matches to be played April 3. Deadline for men's and women's singles is April 1; matches will be played April 4. Deadline for men's doubles is April 7, with matches to be played April 10.

Entry forms are available at Recreational Services, the Field House. For more information contact Duane Miller at 335-7610 or Kong Soon Chak at 338-5979.

In other club notes: The UI lacrosse club will compete in the Western Illinois Tournament in Macomb, Ill., April 4-7. The UI bowling club will elect officers tonight in Schaeffer Hall Room 221A at 8 p.m. The men's bowlers finished 13th in the field of 21 at sectionals in Des Moines, March 13. The women did not advance. The club will begin fall play in September with tryouts for new members to be announced in the future.

The UI Sportsclubs column appears every Tuesday. To have information printed in this column, contact Marc Bona at the DI newsroom, 335-5848.

Snapp adds lustre to spring training

CLEARWATER, Fla. — Wilbur Snapp is the organist at Jack Russell Stadium here. Big deal. But Snapp is also the only organist to ever be ejected from a baseball game.

Snapp's a loveable-looking old fellow with a faded Phillies cap and a beer belly that stretches his Phillies uniform top to its very limits. For the past five seasons he has played the organ at all of the Philadelphia Phillies' spring training games and for all of the Phillies' A-league team that plays its season at Jack Russell.

The wooden, Kawai organ sits directly behind home plate. Snapp divides his time between sitting at his organ and wandering around greeting the fans. He is something of a celebrity at the park. In between songs he signs autographs for his fans. On top of his organ, Snapp has a glass fishbowl for tips, a sign that reads "Retirement is hard work" and three small statues of mice.

LAST SUMMER DURING a Clearwater Phillies game, Snapp and the crowd thought an umpire's call was ridiculously bad. As the crowd screamed at the offending official, Snapp broke into a rendition of "Three Blind Mice."

The umpire turned, pointed to Snapp and tossed him out of the game.

Scott Reifert

Snapp is pretty matter-of-fact about the whole incident.

"They made a bad call, so I played it," he said as he smiled while at the same time not missing a note of "As Time Goes By." Then he quickly broke into what has now become his theme song. The crowd roared. He tipped his cap.

In between autographs Snapp keeps the pre-game crowd entertained with songs like W.C. Handy's "St. Louis Blues," (the Phillies were playing the Cardinals that day), "Amazing Grace," "Shine on Harvest Moon," and "Can't Give You Anything but Love."

By the fifth inning a beer salesman named Ruben Washington stopped by Snapp and began to sing along. When the song ended the crowd cheered and Washington reached down and picked up his plastic glasses of beer.

"Beer here. B-e-e-r. Come on now people. You people gotta drink this here beer for me."

Scott Reifert is a UI student who spent spring break touring spring training in Florida.

Schlueter

Schlueter said. "Then our hitting went downhill and we were at a loss."

WITH AN AVERAGE of .375 Schlueter is the second highest hitter on the team, under Karen Wick who has a .418 average. Feeling that was her weakest point last year she has worked hard to improve on it.

"I've been working on my hitting a lot and will hopefully keep hitting well in the Big Tens," Schlueter said.

Schlueter attributes her increasing success in hitting to the new style Parrish is teaching this year. Last year different batting styles were taught but with the attitude that you could do what you wanted, if it felt comfortable try it.

"This year she showed us how to chop down more on the ball and said that we should all do it. Then if it really didn't work you could go back to your old way," Schlueter added. "This batting style is completely different from high school. Then you were taught to hit the ball at an even line and now we're supposed to swing down."

Regardless of the different batting styles and different outward attitude towards the game this Hawkeye helps in keeping the team together.

"I just say my words of encouragement and keep my cool," Schlueter said with quiet confidence. "I just try to work together with everybody."

That confidence will have an opportunity to see action today as the Hawkeys will face St. Ambrose at 3 p.m. in a doubleheader at the Iowa Softball Complex.

and a lot of different types of attacks. With the nationals in Ames next year, I decided on this year rather than next."

Schwab placed fifth in the NCAA tournament last year as a freshman with an overall record of 49-9. After the Russian tour, he passed a major test in mid-November when he won the Hall of Fame Classic in Stillwater, Okla. That title qualified him for the Russian dual on Wednesday.

While Gable said he is not certain who the Russians are bringing over, Schwab says he is preparing for Toguzov.

"I really want to wrestle him (Toguzov) again," Schwab said. "He slowed the other matches down, and that's when I'm not as effective. I've got to quicken the pace of the match and watch out for that leg-lace."

AS IMPRESSIVE AS Toguzov's credentials are, Gable says most of the other Russians are even better.

"They're a little down at that weight (52 kilograms)," Gable said. "They usually have world champions stacked up in each weight class. They can't lose. It's not in their psyche."

Legendary group 'imports' Irish sound

NEW YORK (UPI)—Irish eyes will be smiling in Iowa City when Paddy Moloney and the Chieftains, the legendary traditional Irish music group, appear at Hancher Auditorium Wednesday at 8 p.m.

The group's tour coincides with the release of the latest Chieftains album, In Ireland, recorded with classical flutist James Galway.

Chieftains leader Paddy Moloney, with a toothy smile is broader than a politician's brogue, seldom misses a chance to exercise his wit. Upon seeing a limited edition, green-vinyl pressing of the album he quipped, "We've all heard of the wearing of the green, but this is the first time anybody can play the green."

Moloney, in addition to playing a mean tin whistle, is the Charlie Parker of uilleann pipers, a child prodigy who breathed new life into an ancient tradition.

MOLONEY'S CRUSADE has been to change the public image of Irish music from accordion sing-along to the virtuosic "Irish classical music" that he and the Chieftains champion.

"That wasn't the world I or most of the members of the band grew up in Irish-music-wise," he said. "We regarded the late '40s, early '50s as a time of revival, when music really started to come out of the homes. Before that there were ceili bands with thumping pianos and double basses and that sort of stuff."

"You also had the 'Mother Machree' and 'Did Your Mother Come from Ireland' thing. One of my ambitions was to let people know there's a better side to Irish music, that there was a greater music in existence," he said.

MOLONEY'S INTEREST in Irish music goes back to his earliest childhood memories growing up in Donnycarney in Dublin's north side.

"I taught myself the whistle," he said, "but the late Teo Rowsome, the king of the pipers, taught me the pipes. He played regularly every week in the pipers' club, that was his profession, making pipes and playing pipes. I have great admiration for him, funny fella he was."

At the time Moloney started playing, traditional Irish music was coming out of a kind of cultural hibernation. "It was never driven totally underground," he explained. "I think the worst period (for Irish music) was going back to the beginning of this century."

"There was an awful decline trying to pick our pieces up after the British got out in 1921. There was a lot of immigration. There were more Irish musicians in Chicago than there were in Ireland," Moloney said.

"BY THE '40S there were still pockets of musicians, but in the houses," he continued. Then in the late '40s and early '50s, when I started to play, there was more recognition of music. It's very healthy at the moment. I founded an organization of uilleann pipers. At first there were just 15 of us. Now there are over 400."

The Chieftains

In 1963 Moloney formed the Chieftains and recorded the group's first album. "I was fortunate to come in at that time and found a group playing duets and solos and that sort of thing to give Irish music more exposure."

Although the Chieftains were very much against the grain of the pop music coming out of the British Isles at the time, Moloney insists that the Beatles and Rolling Stones were actually fans.

"I REMEMBER Marianne Faithful and Mick Jagger were going around together and they were behind a bush in the garden at one of our open-air concerts in '65," he said.

"Behind the scenes there was quite an audience. We had that sort of a sound that was very close to people's hearts. But I never thought when we made Chieftains 1 that I'd have a big concert at the Albert Hall in London sold out," he said.

It was five years before the group made its second album, after Moloney became managing director of Claddagh records in 1968. Over the next seven years he helped produce 40 albums of Irish traditional music and poetry while playing with the Chieftains at night.

The group were amateurs in the best sense of the word, playing and recording in their spare time while holding down day jobs — a construction foreman, a postal worker, a purchasing agent, a consulting engineer and an orchestral musician.

"IN 1975 WE WENT full-time professional," Moloney recalled. "Actually, we got great assistance and recognition from the government. I organized sabbaticals for two of them who actually went back after four years of touring. They'd still join up with us on special occasions."

Since then the Chieftains have gone from triumph to triumph. In 1976 the group won an Oscar for the score of Barry Lyndon. In 1979 the Chieftains broke all records for a live audience when they played for Pope John Paul II and 1,350,000 people at Phoenix Park in Dublin.

In 1983 they became the first group to give a concert at the Capitol building in Washington, D.C., at the invitation of House Speaker Tip O'Neill. That same year the Chieftains toured China and became the first Western group to perform in ensemble with a Chinese folk orchestra, making the film and soundtrack album, The Chieftains in China, in the process.

MOLONEY AND the Chieftains have been much in demand on pop music sessions the past few years, recording with the likes of Art Garfunkel, Dan Fogelberg and Don Henley and performing with Eric Clapton, Van Morrison and Jerry Garcia.

"(Paul) McCartney always was a great fan," Moloney noted. "I worked with him on his brother Mike McGear's album in the early '70s. Then I worked with him on the B-side of 'Ebony and Ivory,' called 'Rain Clouds,' and we talked about a lot of pieces of music that he had heard from the band."

Most recently Moloney sat in for two cuts on the Dolly Parton-Linda Ronstadt-Emmylou Harris album Trio and has played on two current hits on the British charts, Gary Moore's version of "Over the Hills and Far Away" and the new Ultravox single, "All Fall Down."

Agency promotes local entertainers

By Jeff Rynott
Staff Writer

A LOCAL TALENT agency is seeking to help new performers find places to play and get established in the Iowa City entertainment scene.

The agency, American Heartland Performers, composed of entertainment consultant Kevin Kelly and partner Jim Gaeta, hopes to continue Iowa City's reputation as a live entertainment capital in the Midwest.

"This used to be the musical haven of Iowa," Kelly said, adding that AHP hopes to fill a void in coordinating the Iowa City market.

Gaeta originally founded the agency in the 1960s as Hawk-eye Promotions, later undergoing name changes to All-Star Attractions and Top Notch Talent, before forming AHP two years ago with new partner Kelly. Gaeta noted that it is harder now to get local music to statewide and national audiences than it was when he began.

"A LOT OF PEOPLE give up, but with a talent agency I think we can help them, take care of the business side of entertainment," Kelly said.

"It will mean bigger pay and better jobs in the long run," Gaeta added, noting that such talent agencies help their patrons get matched up with tavern owners, record companies and others looking for performers.

Kelly said the agency tries to get musicians and performers in touch with one another so they can form acts.

"If we don't have the acts together, there's nothing to market," he said. "Our organization does support live music and original music — the shift has been to supporting original artists."

The agency also looks for places for new talent to play in the area. In addition to weddings, parties and dances, AHP has dealt with The Dubuque Street Brewing Co., 313 S. Dubuque St., and especially with Cheers, 211 Iowa Ave.

"This used to be the musical haven of Iowa," entertainment consultant Kevin Kelly says of Iowa City.

"WE NEEDED A place to showcase talent," Kelly said. "That's how Cheers comes in. Cheers has really supported local bands and given them a chance," he added.

Roy Yelder, manager of Cheers, said the tavern had been working with AHP in booking live entertainment since the fall semester of 1986, and was pleased with the relationship.

"They were willing to do the extra work to book the bands, which is a very time-consuming endeavor," Yelder said.

Yelder added that one of the advantages of booking local performers — which the tavern does every Wednesday and some weekends — is their dependability.

"We only had one act that couldn't make it, and that was because of a death in the family," he said.

Kelly in the future the agency hopes to work with bands and performers who are willing to work full-time toward achieving national success. He added the agency plans to tape bands' original music and submit the tapes to MTV and record companies to stir up interest.

"We're looking for talent that can go somewhere," he said.

Mark Morris troupe slated to dance at Hancher tonight

Mark Morris, one of the hottest young choreographers in modern dance, will bring his Mark Morris Dance Group to Hancher Auditorium tonight at 8.

The works on the program, all created by Morris, are Celestial Greetings, set to Thai music by Eric Satie, and New Love Song Waltzes, set to music by Brahms. The group will also perform Strict Songs, commissioned by the Seattle Men's Chorus as a memorial to Liberace.

Morris' dances are athletic and highly theatrical, featuring inventive movement, impish wit and a taste for the outrageous and the unexpected. Morris has been compared to George Balanchine because, like that master choreographer, Morris takes his inspiration for movement from the music.

BUT MORRIS' dances address such unclassical themes as professional wrestling, vampires, a striptease, washing machines and a sock hop. He choreographs prolifically, to musical sources ranging from Bach to the Violent Femmes.

Morris' eccentric talent has proven adaptable, and his activities have ranged from new works for the Next Wave Festival at the Brooklyn Academy of Music to commissions from the Joffrey Ballet and the Batsheva Dance Company of Israel. New York Times critic Hack Anderson wrote, "One of the most likable things about Mark Morris as a choreographer is the way he romps through styles and forms like a frisky puppy."

The Mark Morris Dance Group has been featured on the PBS series, Dance in America, and Morris has been honored with a New York Dance and Performance Award for choreographic achievement and choreographic grants from the National Endowment for the Arts, the New Jersey State Council on the Arts and the Jerome Foundation.

ALAN KRIEGSMAN of the Washington Post said of Morris: "He's swept like a whirlwind through the dance world, leaving gasps of surprise, amusement and awe in his wake. In short, he's a hot number, the hottest around."

The fuss is well-founded," Kriegsmann continues. "The range of his work is remarkable. He assimilates whole batches of traditions and styles and converts (or subverts) them into something startlingly novel."
