Riverside vigil

Bernard Schulte waits on bank of the Iowa River Monday as divers search the river for his son, Alvin, who is missing after falling from a boat Saturday. In Schulte's back pocket is the only sign of his son so far: a shoe discovered when the boat was found downstream.

Workers end Mid America propane fire

By James Cahoy
Staff Writer

The fire at the Mid America Pipe Line Co., which had burned since April 4, was finally extinguished Monday, according to company officials.

A press release issued by Mid America said the fire had been put out at 10 a.m. Monday, but occasional flaring would continue to occur as part of the maintenance work being done to get the plant back into normal operation.

"Hopefully, we'll be able to rest now and put this thing behind us," Mid America Co. District Manager D.G. Prescott said.

The fire began about two weeks ago, when a propane gas mixture from an underground storage facility was ignited by a spark from a malfunctioning engine on an air compressor.

WEST BRANCH Fire Chief Dick Stoolman said the fire was extinguished Monday by pumping water into the damaged valve, the source of the fire. On Saturday, firefighters were able to close off two nearby valves, which enabled them to control the pressure of leaking gas from the propane storage facility and get close enough to put out the blaze.

"We could have put out the fire Saturday, but we were all tired, so we decided to wait until after Easter to finish it off," Stoolman said. "It was just too hot to extinguish anytime previous to that."

Stoolman said he was relieved to get the fire out, and was thankful no lives had been lost in the process.

"You can't buy a life, but you can buy a pipe," Stoolman said. "I want our fire department to resume their normal lives and normal jobs. We have had other fires beside this one."

BUT QUESTIONS still remain about the cause of the fire.

A preliminary study by the Iowa Utilities Division indicates the fire can be traced to a design flaw within the facility, but Prescott denied that any definite cause of the fire had been determined.

"We won't know the cause of the fire for awhile," Prescott said. "As far as I know, there will be no changes in the design of the plant. Mid America will be sending an engineering team to investigate the cause of the fire in the near future."

Prescott said he did not know if it was unusual for a pipeline plant to have had as many accidents as the Iowa City Mid America plant has had.

He had no estimates of the cost of the fire to the Mid America facility, which have been previously suggested at more than $1 million, but said Mid America will reimburse all local fire and law enforcement departments for their expenses in putting out the fire.

"We won't know for a while what the costs of the fire are," Prescott said. "We are glad to finally have it out."

Iranian speaker offers hostage release deals

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Ali Akbar Hashemi Rafsanjani, the speaker of the Iranian parliament, proposed new deals for the release of American hostages in Lebanon in an interview released Monday.

Rafsanjani said if the United States were to return money and property seized by the U.S. government during the 1980 hostage crisis "we will help you in Lebanon." The Iranian leader is apparently referring to some $500 million in Iranian funds that were blocked to assure Iranian payment of debts and indemnities ordered by a tribunal set up in the Hague after the 52 American hostages were released from Tehran.

He also suggested that if the U.S. government were to restrain the activities of the anti-Khomeini Mujahedin e-Kalk opposition movement, the Iranian government would end its support of terrorist groups in Lebanon.

RAFSANJANI, the highest ranking government official who played an active role in the secret sale of U.S. arms to Iran, made the proposals in an interview last week in Keyhan Hava'i, a Persian-language newspaper published by the Iranian government for Iranians living outside Iran.

The Mujahedin are permitted to operate openly in the United States even though some State Department officials have identified the group as terrorists who also were responsible for the murder of some Americans when the shah was still in power in Iran.

The Mujahedin group claims to be behind a steadily escalating war of guerrilla attacks and terrorism against the Iranian Islamic Republic.

He said Iran placed responsibility for the Mujahedin attacks on the United States because the U.S. government permits the group to operate openly.

"IF THEY (the U.S. government) used their influence and stopped these people (the Mujahedin), then they might expect us to stop the groups in Lebanon," he said.

Rafsanjani did not admit that the seven Americans known to be hostages in Lebanon were taken by Iranian groups, but he said, "Many of them (the hostage takers) are our friends. Of course we do not know them, but as they listen to us, perhaps there is reason to believe that they are our friends."

Rafsanjani said his government is now in the process of preparing its own version of the events in the arms deal with the United States.

THE SECRET SALE of arms to Iran and the alleged diversion of profits to the Nicaraguan Contras is now the subject of congressional investigations and a probe by special prosecutor Lawrence Walsh. Congressional hearings are scheduled to begin May 5.

Edmund Muskie, a member of the Tower Commission, which has issued the most extensive report to date on the worst scandal of the Reagan presidency, said recently there were suspicions that profits from the arms sales had been kicked back to Iranian officials in an effort to free the hostages.

Muskie said those suspicions were not mentioned in the Tower Commission report because there was no concrete evidence it had happened.

Key Marine recants testimony

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A key witness in the sex-for-secrets spy scandal has recanted his original statement that Sgt. Clayton Lonetree allowed Soviet agents to roam the U.S. Embassy in Moscow, Lonetree's lawyer said Monday.

Attorney Michael Stuhff said Cpl. Robert Williams, one of the six Marines brought home last week for questioning, told him he had been threatened by investigators from the Naval Investigative Service when he made the statement.

Stuhff said Williams' decision to repudiate the testimony leaves the government without a case.

"There's really no evidence at all against Lonetree in regards to those allegations we've always claimed are false — of allowing people to wander through the embassy. . . . There's no physical evidence to back them up and there's no credible testimony," Stuhff said.

A MARINE CORPS spokesman and the prosecutor in the case declined to comment on Stuhff's remarks.

Stuhff said Williams made the comments to him prior to testifying in a closed Marine proceeding in Quantico, Va., last Thursday to determine if Lonetree would be tried by a court martial on espionage charges.

"He (Williams) was threatened that he would never be able to get a job and that his career in the Marines would be ruined — that if he walked out of the (interrogation) room, he (sic) would be over with. . . . They got in his face and told him that he'd have to do this," Stuhff told United Press International in a telephone interview.

Stuhff and the other attorney representing Lonetree, William Kunstler, have been forbidden by the proceeding officer from discussing any testimony in the closed hearings.

STUHFF SAID HE had been informed by the chief Marine prosecutor, Maj. Dave Beck, Wednesday night that Williams was repudiating his original statement.

He and Kunstler previously have said Cpl. Arnold Bracy of New York had repudiated his initial statements, which reportedly led to the charges of espionage against Lonetree for allowing Soviet KGB agents access to secret parts of the Moscow embassy in exchange for sexual favors.

Both Lonetree and Bracy have been charged with espionage.

In addition to Lonetree and Bracy, Sgt. John Weirick of Eureka, Calif., who once served in the Leningrad consulate, is being held on suspicion of espionage.

Regents launch search for president

By Scott Hauser
Staff Writer

The state Board of Regents will request a professional executive search firm be used to find a successor to UI President James O. Freedman at its Wednesday meeting in Iowa City, where the goal of selecting a new president by September 1987.

According to official regents documents released Monday, regents President John C. McDonald will also ask the board to accept Freedman's resignation and approve the appointment of UI Vice President for Academic Affairs Richard D. Remington as interim president.

Freedman announced last week he would step down from his post at the UI this summer to become president of Dartmouth College.

MCDONALD SAID the board has had very good experience using professional search firms, adding the firms are especially helpful in the first phases of the search because they have contacts throughout the nation.

"Of course we're going to do this very, very carefully," he said. "It's an important appointment for the university and it's an important appointment for the state."

As part of the search process, the board is asked to direct the UI to establish a fund to pay the expenses of the presidential search.

Regents Executive Secretary R. Wayne Richey said professional search firms typically charge one-third the amount of the position's first salary plus out-of-pocket expenses. Freedman's salary is currently $112,500, which would set the search cost at about $40,000, Richey said.

THE FUND WILL ALSO have to cover costs incurred by an on-campus selection committee, he said.

The board used a professional firm to select Iowa State University President Gordon P. Eaton and University of Northern Iowa President Constantine W. Curris, but not in selecting Freedman in 1982, McDonald said.

As part of the search policy, an on-campus committee comprised of UI faculty, staff, student and alumni representatives will be created to assist the search.

McDonald said the UI committee will establish criteria on which candidates for the position will be judged and will narrow the list of candidates to at least six finalists.

THE BOARD WILL have final determination of the new president, McDonald said.

In a proposed schedule released with McDonald's memo, the board plans to approve the search procedures Wednesday, and next month approve the appointments for the on-campus committee.

From May to August, the board plans to advertise for the position, search for and screen applicants, with the board interviewing the final candidates in September.

The regents will also be asked to approve a retirement waiver for UI Vice President of Educational Development and Research Duane Spriestersbach, who was asked by Freedman to stay at the UI until a replacement could be found. Spriestersbach had planned to retire June 30.

UI student appointed to medical board

UI College of Medicine senior Rodney Dynes has been appointed as a student representative of a national organization for family doctors.

Dynes was appointed to the Commission on Membership and Member Services of the American Academy of Family Physicians. The Kansas City-based organization boasts more than 59,000 members nationwide.

Dynes duties will include recruitment of new members, enforcement of medical study requirements and coordinating membership services.

Army showing movies at library today

A U.S. Army cinema van will be showing movies about opportunities in the Army in front of the north entrance of the Main Library from 1 p.m. to 5 p.m. today.

Iowa City Recruiting Office Staff Sgt. John Mikelson said the event, scheduled to coincide with Riverfest, is designed especially for college students interested in Army programs such as the GI Bill.

Mikelson said about the cinema van — a semitrailer that folds out into a cinema seating about 30 people — is complete with 15 movies about the Army.

For more information about the event or for recruiting details call Mikelson at 337-6406.

Local woman takes part in national forum

Mildred Lavin, of the UI Division of Continuing Education, was among 100 citizens from around the nation who gathered in Washington, D.C. this month to report on the 1986 National Issues Forum to members of Congress and the executive branch.

Lavin and the other participants represented more than 100,000 people in some 300 communities taking part in the forums last fall, which were non-partisan town hall-type meetings designed to involve citizens in the discussion of important public issues.

The Iowa City forums, at which farm crisis, crime and immigration were discussed, were held in October at the Iowa City Public Library.

Lavin said the Washington trip strengthened her belief in the importance of citizen involvement in the policy affairs of government.

"The senators, representatives, legislative aides and commissioners — all of those who worked with us at hearings on the issues we studied — were serious and sincere in their support of our work," she said. "I'm convinced of the positive effect we can have on lawmakers when we study, discuss and then bring our voices to Washington."

Self help hearing impaired lecture slated

The founder and executive director of Shhh, Self Help for Hard of Hearing People, Inc., will speak at the UI Wednesday, April 22.

Rocky Sone will discuss the importance of self-help and support for people who are hard of hearing at the UI Department of Speech Pathology and Audiology weekly seminar at 11:30 a.m.

Stone will discuss the issues of forming community self-help groups for people who have hearing losses at 7 p.m. Both presentations will be at the Wendell Johnson Speech and Hearing Center auditorium, Room 308.

The speeches are open to the public and interpreter services as well as assistive listening devices will be available.

State to appeal Ortega case thrown out of District Court

By Anne Halloran
Staff Writer

The state of Iowa is appealing a case that was thrown out of Johnson County District Court early this month involving a UI student who was charged with falsifying public documents.

Johnson County District Judge Paul K. Kilburg decided to dismiss the case of David Ortega, 19, of 1315 Burge Residence Hall, who allegedly printed phony Oregon driver's licenses on his computer.

Kilburg said Ortega was printing blank forms which could not constitute driver's licenses because they were not filled in with information.

Ortega's lawyer, Leon Spies, said Monday that David Tiffany filed the appeal last week on behalf of the Johnson County Attorney's Office.

Courts

"It did not say on what grounds they are filing the appeal," Spies said. The grounds will be stated later in a brief to the Iowa Supreme Court, Spies said.

Spies said he will probably be representing Ortega during the appeal to the Supreme Court.

Ortega said Monday he was not informed of the appeal.

An Iowa City man who was arrested on a charge of stealing a car after taking it for a test drive made his initial appearance Saturday in Johnson County District Court.

Edward Allan Rohn, 18, of the Project H.O.P.E. rehabilitation center, 1916 Waterfront Drive, was charged with second-degree theft and operating without owner's consent after the incident last Thursday.

Court records state Rohn was taking a car belonging to a resident on Miller Avenue and Benton Street for a test drive and failed to return it.

Rohn later admitted to Iowa City police officers he stole the vehicle, court records state.

Rohn was being held Monday at the Johnson County Jail in lieu of a $5,000 bond for the charge of second-degree theft and a $5,000 bond for the charge of operating without owner's consent. His preliminary hearing is scheduled for April 27.

A fire that gutted the kitchen of an Iowa City mobile home late Sunday resulted in about $8,000 damage.

The fire started in a wood storage cabinet at Bon Aire Trailer Court Lot 237, residence of Diane Scott. The trailer is owned by Dan Scott, Burlington.

No injuries were reported. The cause of the fire was still under investigation Monday.

The wood storage cabinet contained different types of cleaning and bug killing chemicals, which helped to ignite the rest of the kitchen, according to Iowa City Fire Department reports.

Iowa City firefighters were contacted on the 911 emergency telephone number at about 10:30 p.m. and responded to the fire.

Fire and water damage was contained to the kitchen area but the rest of the mobile home sustained heat and smoke damage.

Vandalism Report: A baseball size rock was thrown through a window at an Iowa City office building sometime during the weekend, according to Iowa City police reports.

A rock was used to break a 36 inch by 24 inch window sometime before Monday at the Iowa City School District Office, 509 S. Dubuque St., reports state.

An employee of the office reported the damage to Iowa City police at about 6 a.m. Monday. The value of the window was not reported.

Former UI professor Benz dies

By Shawn Plank
Staff Writer

Lester G. Benz, 83, a nationally known scholastic UI professor emeritus of journalism and former Iowa newspaper publisher, died at his home Saturday afternoon of a heart attack.

A memorial service will be held at 3 p.m. Wednesday. He donated his body to the UI College of Medicine. Memorial donations may be made to the UI Foundation or to the First United Methodist Church of Iowa City.

Benz joined the UI School of Journalism faculty in 1953 and was publisher of The Daily Iowan from 1955 to 1958. He was associated with the UI until retiring in 1972. Besides part of the teaching community in the School of Journalism he had charge of teacher training for high school journalism in the UI College of Education.

BENZ'S ASSOCIATION with Quill and Scroll Society began in 1957, when he became executive secretary, a position he held until 1972. He had been a member of the Society's Board of Trustees since 1957.

Benz was born June 28, 1903, in Winona, Minn., the son of the Rev. John E. and Elizabeth Benz. He married Marguerite He in 1928 in Hinton, Iowa. She predeceased him in 1977.

Benz received his bachelor's degree from Morningside College in Sioux City and his master's degree in education from the UI. He was a high school teacher in Iowa for seven years before embarking on a career in journalism.

His professional experience included several years as a reporter for the Sioux City Tribune, followed by 21 years as editor and publisher of weekly newspapers in Sheffield and Osage. In 1949 he was president of the Iowa Press Association and a member of the board of directors of that group for nine years. Papers which he published won numerous awards in state and national competitions.

Laser's uses have multiplied

By Shawn Plank
Staff Writer

The prospect of having a $25 million laser center built at the UI has the campus buzzing about lasers and their applications. Such lofty subjects have even gotten attention during the halftime show at the annual spring football intersquad game.

Last Saturday, Lou Crist, voice of the Hawkeye Marching Band, announced at halftime the band would salute the laser center, "what we hope will be one of the newest additions to our campus." The band opened with the theme from Star Wars.

ONE OF THE often-mentioned applications for lasers has been President Ronald Reagan's Strategic Defense Initiative. But UI officials have said, with a ban on classified research at the UI, it is not desirable to attract "Star Wars" laser-related research grants.

UI Vice President for Research Duane Spriestersbach cited a Jan. 16, 1987, article in Science magazine that reported lasers may not be used in Reagan's programs as widely as had been perceived.

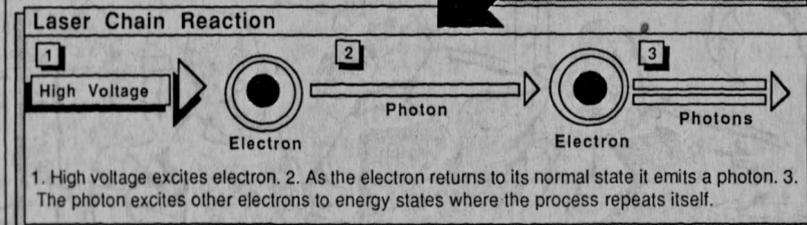

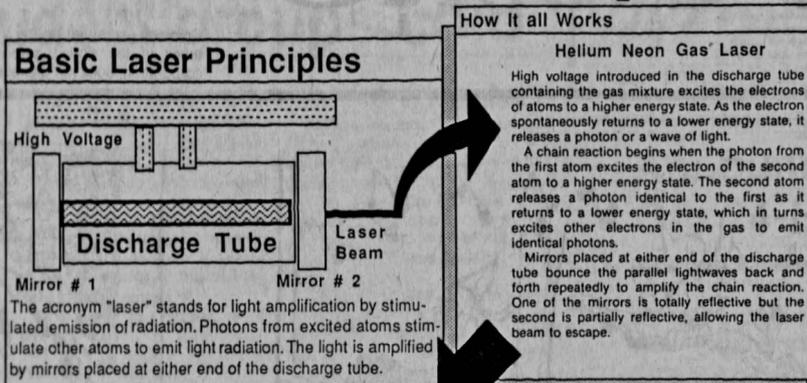

"It's one of the knee-jerk reactions that lasers are the guts of SDI," he said.

BUT LASERS ARE being used more in research and have proven themselves useful in an increasing number of applications. The UI has placed a priority on laser science, and a bonding resolution to fund a laser center is working its way through the legislature.

Although lasers were invented in 1960, the field of laser science is a relatively new one, UI Laser Facility Director William Stwalley said. The laser has been used as a tool in industry as well as in research in the fields of chemistry, physics and engineering. But the UI Laser Center would bring together the three fields in an interdisciplinary study of the device and its applications.

Gary Holton, head of laser operations at the University of Pennsylvania, one of the nation's leading laser labs, said he's seen changes in laser technology since "the old days" — 10 or 15 years ago.

"There was little that could be done with lasers then," he said. "Researchers who used lasers were in the minority. Now the applications are so numerous and lasers are more routine."

This story is the second in a five-day series on the proposed UI Laser Center.

THE WORD "LASER" is an acronym for light amplification by stimulated emission of radiation. Most sources of light are emitted spontaneously, having a wide range of wavelengths and moving in various directions. But laser light waves travel in step — at the same wavelength and in the same direction.

The parallel nature of laser light waves makes them more intense, bright and powerful than regular light. The laser's intensity has been put to use in a number of industrial applications where lasers have been used to drill holes, cut fabric and weld metals.

The laser's heat and cutting applications have also been put to use in medicine, especially in the field of ophthalmology, where lasers have been used for eye surgery.

ONE OF THE MOST popular and fastest growing applications of lasers is in music. Sales for compact disc players, which use a small laser as a phonograph uses a needle to play music, topped 9 million in 1986, according to Laser Focus magazine. Sales for the players are expected to top 14 million this year.

Lasers can also be found at supermarket checkout stands all over Iowa City, scanning bar codes on groceries to ring up customers' grocery bills and to keep track of store inventory.

UI College of Engineering Visiting Professor Anjan Ghosh has done work with optical computing, which uses light, including laser light, rather than electrical circuitry to process signals.

The field of optical computing has been booming for the past few years, Ghosh said. The boom is due to the number of advantages optical computing may eventually have over conventional means of computing. Lasers promise to make computers faster because the beams travel at the speed of light, he added.

But optical computers for practical use may be at least 10 years away, Ghosh said, because even though a number of different elements of optical computers have been demonstrated no one has been able to draw them together into an analytical computer.

"I think it has to go a long way before it takes over conventional computers," he said.

UI COLLEGE of Engineering Professor Roderic Lakes works with laser holography, a process by which three-dimensional objects are displayed in two-dimensional form. Holograms are widely used on credit cards to thwart counterfeiting.

The holography lab was established in the Engineering Building six months ago because of overcrowding in the laser facility. A course in holography has been offered and a number of student research projects have resulted, Lakes said. But the lab is only committed to the space for another year and Lakes said it may move or shut down after that.

"It's been a very productive research program," he said. "We may be able to get some space (in the laser center.) If it gets off the ground, it will help a lot of research on campus."

Tomorrow: Lasers and economic development — how will they help pull Iowa up by its bootstraps and how many jobs will they provide?

Protest march

Groups opposing U.S. policy in Central America and South Africa will converge on Washington, D.C., this weekend for a scheduled three-day demonstration. What could mark the largest protest since the Vietnam era, is scheduled to begin Saturday in the capital city and will culminate with an act of "civil disobedience" in front of the CIA headquarters in Langley, Va. A similar rally is also scheduled for San Francisco, which will coincide with the march on Washington.

Approximately 200 coalitions nationwide are sending people to protest oppressive U.S. policies. More than 1,000 buses are expected to begin arriving in the capital city on Saturday, according to the National Mobilization for Justice and Peace in Central America and Southern Africa.

With a projected turn out of 500,000 for the Washington rally, this weekend's protest could quite possibly be reminiscent of the 1960s Vietnam protests across the nation. In retrospect, the actions of these protestors was a definite factor influencing the withdrawal of American troops from the controversial war in southeast Asia.

In addition to the rally, protesters will be bouyed by a recent Massachusetts court ruling in which 15 anti-CIA activists were found not guilty of trespassing and disorderly conduct. The court ruled that the 15 protesters, including Amy Carter and Abbie Hoffman, were not guilty of the charges because they were trying to prevent more serious and greater injustices of the CIA.

As a result of increasing opposition to the practices of the CIA and the timely acquittal of Carter and crew, this weekend's protest in Washington should be very emotional as well as effective in showing disapproval for the current U.S. policies. Although the ultimate impact of the upcoming demonstration may not be apparent for some time, those actively involved in the march on Washington and San Francisco should be applauded in their effort to make their voice heard.

Because the apathetic attitude of so many Americans is crucial to the current administration's ability to continually carry out exploitive and oppressive foreign policies, demonstrations are a very necessary step in the pursuit of a fair and humane foreign policy.

Paying the bills

Just as the 1988 presidential campaign is threatening to get off the ground, a nasty group of people are trying to ruin everyone's fun. Wouldn't you know it? It's those darn creditors again.

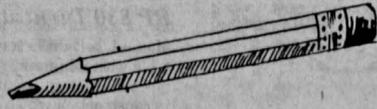

Gary Hart, the early leader among the Democratic candidates, is having a particularly tough time shaking those collection agencies. The former Colorado senator still owes $1.3 million from his failed 1984 attempt at the Democratic nomination and is not what many people consider a good credit risk. Sen. John Glenn, D-Ohio, is another one saddled with debt. He owes almost $3 million from three years ago and he's not even in the hunt for next year's nomination.

What does this state of affairs say about American politics today? Well, first it says that politicians don't always pay their bills. (Surprised?) Second, and perhaps more importantly, it says that money has become the crucial link to successful political campaigns. If a candidate is to have a reasonable chance of winning election today, he/she had better be prepared to drop more money than many people earn in a lifetime. In fact, he/she had better be prepared to sink into debt.

The dangers of such political realities, where only the wealthy can afford representation in government, is well-known. It's not what is usually meant by democracy. Under these conditions, it is natural that politicians become tied more closely to special interest groups offering to foot the bills for their expensive campaigns. The person with little or nothing to contribute to campaign warchests becomes less important to candidates.

There is a brighter side to the political credit crunch, however. If nothing else, it's comforting to know that regardless of political clout, name recognition or photogenic characteristics, everyone has to pay their bills.

By Scott Raab

Friends, Hawkeyes, Iowans, put down your beers. I come to bury James O., not to praise him. The indoor practice facilities that men build live after them, the laser centers are often vetoed with their bones; so let it be with Freedman.

Bear with me; my heart is in New Hampshire there with Freedman. And I must pause till it come back to me.

There. I'm OK now. Really. I guess it's only natural for a community of scholars like us to lean on the Bard at a time of great loss. The Ivy League won; our prez's fled. Will life go on after no one's left in Iowa named Bathsheba?

Sure: just pretend that UI President James O. Freedman's off on another bridge-building junket to the Pacific Rim, followed by a fund-raising shuttle to Des Moines and then a trip to Washington, D.C., to testify for President Ronald Reagan's next hatchetman.

YEAH, THAT'S IT — he'll be back any month now, same as ever, to tell another one about how rooted in Iowa he truly, deeply feels. Meanwhile, the university, the state and the governor and his regents have the chance to put money where their mouths are, to find a woman of color, commitment and vision to preside over this university.

No more boasts that the UI was the first university west of the Mississippi River to admit women on an equal basis with men, as if that somehow excuses a sorry record of hiring and retaining female teachers and administrators.

Enough of committee reports on how tough it is to find minority students. It's gonna be tough when lip service is all we pay. If we recruited black athletes, minority scholars might not dismiss the place. If we nurtured and promoted our already outstanding program in African-American World Studies, we might avoid another decade of committees and platitudes. Instead, we cut its funds and seek $25 million to attract laser wizards.

LET THE PACIFIC RIM rise and the Age of Light dawn at some more elite campus — Dartmouth, say. Give us a leader whose actions (talk est cheap) in shaping the university's role in society beyond affirming the worst of that society, its brainless love of technology, its heartless subordination of intellectual to economic growth.

Above all, we need someone, liberal or conservative, who sees that the university is a political institution, not Democratic or Republican, but an integral part of a country's power structure, supportive or subversive or both. Someone whose vision of scholars and scholarship stretches past the study carrel and faculty lounge.

No more rhetoric about investing money in South Africa as an intellectual issue, when those dollars pay white police to murder black children. An end to the vacuous notion that allowing the CIA to recruit on campus is a "freedom of choice" issue, when any student is already free to work for the CIA, and other colleges freely deny admission to the CIA.

LET'S TRY A PRESIDENT, liberal or conservative, who deals with issues like these head on, instead of conveniently leaving town when trouble brews. Someone who sees that civility and tolerance toward evil perpetuate evil; that even a community of scholars sometimes must take passionate action as a community.

The leader of a great university must raise moral issues, not just funds. She must lead.

Words, a token name or two on some losers' list, are no longer enough. Not after Gov. Terry Branstad has filled the state Board of Regents with businessmen who just happened to give money to his campaign. Not after Branstad's spokesman challenged anyone to find qualified women to serve as regents. Not in 1987.

Now that we've been lullabied and betrayed by yet another pale male's lofty patter, let's kick tradition's butt. Put the action back in affirmative action. Begin at 101 Jessup Hall.

Next leader should be sure to serve UI

By Bruce Nestor

UI PRESIDENT James Freedman's reactionary political views were first revealed when he enthusiastically endorsed William Rehnquist for Chief Justice of the U.S. Supreme Court. These views have been confirmed by his recent appointment as president of Dartmouth — the most conservative, most white, most male-dominated school in the Ivy League — can be nothing less than a fully qualified member of the white male business establishment.

In his tenure at the UI, the fawning admiration of the media largely concealed the reactionary nature of Freedman's agenda for the UI. Essentially, Freedman's task at the UI was to make the university better serve the business and corporate interests which dominate the Board of Regents and the legislature. Large parts of this task have already been accomplished.

For instance, Freedman's highly touted Laser Center is nothing other than a $60 million public subsidy for the corporations which one day will use this technology, developed with public money, in order to earn fantastic amounts of private profit. It may create some jobs, but most of them will be for white men who hold PhDs, not for unemployed farmers, economically marginalized women or undereducated minorities.

Another key task in creating a business orientation for the UI is the elimination of the diversity which universities sometimes harbor. Freedman has proved adept at this task. For instance:

• In an attempt to eliminate the Afro-American World Studies Department, Freedman has cut its funding, resulting in reduced numbers of staff and faculty. This has occurred despite numerous student interest in the courses offered by this department.

• Freedman has ignored the report of the UI Council on the Status of Women which calls for increased funding and efforts for programs such as daycare, programs which would ensure an equal place for women and working people within the university structure.

• Of 56 UI departments which set affirmative action goals in 1985, only 12 of them met their goals. Minority faculty still make up only 4 percent of tenured faculty, a proportion so small as to make the environment for minority students and faculty positively hostile.

• Freedman has not only refused to fight tuition hikes, he has actively supported them. As tuition rises, only those with money will attend — the best way of ensuring that the UI serves the interests of those who already have money and privilege.

Freedman is not in control of this process — he is a tool of Gov. Terry Branstad and the businessmen who own the governor. The recent appointments of Des Moines businessmen Marvin Pomerantz and John Fitzgibbon to the Board of Regents makes this quite clear. The enormous power of these men in the state legislature is demonstrated by the confirmation of these appointments even though they violated Iowa's gender balance law.

The appointment of conservative businessmen to the regents makes it more likely that the search for Freedman's successor will result in the appointment of a new president who will answer to business interests even more enthusiastically than did Freedman. However, public pressure may still be able to influence the president selection process. The UI community should unite behind certain demands to be made of any new UI president.

Oppose Tuition Hikes — A new president must be committed to access to education for all, not just a privileged few. He or she must actively and forcefully oppose all tuition hikes. Programs which increase access of women and working people to the UI, such as daycare, must also receive support.

Enforce Affirmative Action — Affirmative action goals must be met. More women and minority members must receive tenure, and recruitment and retention programs for working class and minority students must receive more funding and forceful support. Affirmative action programs must also include elevating women and minorities to substantive positions of leadership within the university.

Support a Diverse Curriculum — A new president should unequivocally promise to restore cuts and increase funding for the Afro-American World Studies Department. Courses on the nature of social inequality should be made a part of the required curriculum.

The demands we are raising are sure to be opposed by the interests which run the regents. This means that we must struggle hard to ensure that the UI does not become a greater tool for corporate interests. When used by politicians and businessmen, economic development is nothing but a code word for the creation of private profit.

We urge all concerned people to join us at the regents meeting held April 22 in Iowa City, and let your voice be heard.

Proposed freeze in funding leaves student groups cold

By Scott Hauser
Staff Writer

UI administrators will propose no increase in the amount available to fund UI student groups through the use of mandatory fees at Wednesday's state Board of Regents meeting in Iowa City.

According to official regents documents released Monday, regents Executive Secretary R. Wayne Richey will recommend the board approve the proposal.

While the 0 percent increase has angered UI student leaders responsible for funding student groups, UI officials said the money saved by the proposal will go to financial aid and faculty salary increases.

"The university finds itself in hard financial times," June Davis, assistant to UI Vice President for Finance Dorsey Ellis, said.

SHE SAID THE administration is not singling out student activities for cuts, adding the entire UI has had to deal with cutbacks this year.

"I'm not certain we can support all our groups without an increase," UI Collegiate Associations Council President Mike Reck said.

Reck said the CAC received about $3.72 per UI student last year and spent about $200,000 of the student activity budget last year, but needs more money to continue funding its 105 student groups.

"If we had the money, we'd give it to them," UI Vice President for Student Services Phillip Hubbard said.

According to the documents, the UI proposes $55.27 per student be used for student activity fees in 1987-88. For the summer of 1988, the proposal is $18 per student. Both figures are the same as the previous year's amount.

MANDATORY STUDENT fees are not figured in addition to tuition, but are an "earmarked" part of it, Richey said in his memo to the board concerning the proposal.

The fees are used to fund three areas of student activities: student activity groups; student services such as Campus and student health; and building fees and debt service.

In his memo, Richey said, "The university has predicated this decision on several factors, including the actions of the board in December to direct tuition revenue increases next year to student financial aid and faculty salaries."

UI Student Senate President Joe Hansen submitted an alternative budget proposal to Ellis' office asking for an increase of about 7 percent.

Reck said he thought there was little chance of changing the fee budget now, adding the usual process is for the student governing bodies to budget their groups with the UI's final figure in mind.

Because of the lateness of the fee budget, the budgeting process will not be completed until next month, he said.

But Davis said last year's budget wasn't completed until June, adding student fees were increased 11.9 percent during the academic year and 36 percent for the summer session then.

Tardy posting of law grades prompts grievance action

By Monica Seigel
University Editor

A UI College of Law professor who had failed to submit grades for a course he taught last semester posted the grades today, "clearing up" most of the problems created by his tardiness, College of Law officials said Monday.

A formal grievance was filed against Professor Paul Neuhauser with the UI Office of Academic Affairs earlier this month by a student who claimed Neuhauser's failure to submit the grades until now handicapped many law students in their attempts to get jobs.

The third-year law student, who declined to be identified, said the grades should have been posted within three weeks after the final exam was administered Dec. 12. The student charged Neuhauser with violating the UI codes of Ethics and Academic Responsibility.

NEUHAUSER TURNED in the grades for the course today, allowing processing of class rank and grade point average within the law school to be completed, Debra Paul, registrar for the College of Law said.

"Having those grades will take care of everything that needs to be figured up to this point," Paul said.

College of Law Dean William Hines agreed, but said something will still have to be done to handle the grievance that has been filed against Neuhauser.

"The missing grades problem is certainly taken care of, but there is still a grievance pending," Hines said.

Hines said he is unsure of what action — if any — will be taken to ensure this problem won't happen again.

"WE'RE FINALLY in the position to carry on with things here, but until the grievance is cleared up, we're not in the position to talk about what further things might happen. That's a personnel matter," he said.

In the complaint filed with UI Vice President of Academic Affairs Richard Remington, the student says Neuhauser's submitting the grades is not sufficient.

"Submission of the grades by Professor Neuhauser subsequent to this writing will not mitigate the validity of this complaint as his actions have already reached the point of being patently unfair," the grievance states.

Remington was unavailable for comment Monday.

Neuhauser, whose pay was being withheld until the grades were turned in, was also delinquent in submitting grades last year, Hines said, but not to the same extent.

Agency gains OK to purchase home

By Carol Monaghan
Staff Writer

The Iowa City Council gave its approval Monday evening to Youth Homes Inc. for the purchase and remodeling of a $90,000 property on Evans Street that would be used as a girls' home.

Youth Homes Inc. operates an emergency shelter on Ronalds Street and an eight- to 10-bed girls' home at 517 E. Washington St. Last November, the council approved $100,000 in Community Development Block Grant funding for acquiring and rehabilitating a structure to accommodate the girls' home and to remodel the emergency shelter on Ronalds Street.

"We reviewed every piece of property on the market in Iowa City that meets the requirements for our use," Bill McCarty, director of Youth Homes Inc., said at the informal council meeting. "By the criterion we use, the property on Evans is clearly the more desirable."

SOME OF THE criteria used in evaluating the property included zoning, the neighborhood, the location, the price, the condition and the proximity of the property to neighboring buildings, the estimated cost of rehabilitation and the suitability of floor plans to Youth Homes' desired uses, McCarty said.

City councilors the cost to renovate the existing property on Washington Street in comparison with purchasing the Evans Street property is nearly identical.

"The Evans Street property is clearly the more valuable of the two," McCarty said.

McCarty said the Evans Street property is valued at an estimated $25,000 more than the Washington Street property.

Youth Homes Inc. will also request a special exception for zoning and the reduction of parking requirements for the Evans Street property, McCarty said.

"THE REAL QUESTION is 'Will our courts permit sending our local girls to the home instead of shipping them off to Clinton and Newton,'" Councilor Ernest Zuber asked McCarty.

Zuber said the main argument for the approval of the CDBG funds in November by the council was to upgrade the facilities so local courts would place the juveniles in the Iowa City homes.

In other business, the council approved the selling of a $95,000 bond to assist Business Development Inc. in financing the local share of costs for the construction of Heinz Road.

THE CONSTRUCTION of Heinz Road, located in southeast Iowa City off U.S. Highway 6, is part of the larger Scott Boulevard project and Iowa City Manager Stephen Atkins said the agreement was necessary to preserve the $1.6 million in state RISE economic development funds for the project.

The agreement would require BDI to repay the city for the principal and interest costs associated with the city advancing construction costs, Atkins said.

During tonight's formal meeting, the council plans to approve the resolution awarding the contract of the Mercer Park swimming pool project to Larsen Construction Company of Independence, Iowa.

Larsen Construction was the lowest of six bidders with a bid of $2,970,800. This was below the earlier architect's estimate of $3,198,000.

New loan cooperative offers financial hope for students

By John Bartenhagen
Staff Writer

Students who have given up on receiving financial aid because of cuts in higher education appropriations may have somewhere else to turn, a new loan cooperative spokesman said Monday.

Loans of up to $15,000 per year are now available to college students regardless of personal need from ConSern, a cooperative effort between a consortium of Washington, D.C.-based universities and the Student Educational Resource Network.

According to Janis Moyer, marketing vice president for ConSern, the loan program was established to provide financial aid to students from middle and upper-income families — those which are usually ignored by other student aid programs.

"OUR PROGRAM is designed to meet the needs of 70 percent of the nation's college students, people from the middle class and above that do not qualify for income-based grants and loans," she said.

University Support Services, Inc. will sponsor the program, and it will also be backed by several large Washington banks, Moyer said.

"This was all begun by universities," she said. "Schools are looking to decrease the tension on campuses that has been caused by increasing educational costs. That's where we come in."

STUDENTS WILL be able to borrow $1,500 to $15,000 yearly, she said, up to a total of $60,000. Interest rates for ConSern loans are fixed at 3.6 percent above the commercial paper interest rate and are currently about 9.5 percent.

"This program's greatest benefit is that it will allow students to attend universities they wouldn't have been able to afford before," she said.

"I had a call this morning from a woman with triplets who are ready to enter college," Moyer said. "Her children are very bright, but without putting a second mortgage on her house there is no way she can give them the education they deserve."

John Moore, director of UI Student Financial Aid, said many programs like ConSern have sprung up as a result of decreasing government aid and lowered interest rates.

"Banks and private industries are coming up with innovative programs because of the restrictive nature of Guaranteed Student Loans," Moore said.

BUT MOORE SAID these programs will have limited immediate impact on the UI.

"With our relatively low costs, we're the middle ground and outside of medical and dental students, our students don't really need to borrow $15,000," he said.

Moore added he was not concerned about private involvement in student financial aid.

"If a student borrows $15,000 at 9 percent, as long as the interest rate stays around that level, it's a pretty good deal," Moore said.

"There are more benefits than disadvantages to private involvement," he added. "The tightening of federal programs is going to force people out of college if more money isn't made available."

MOYER SAID ELIGIBILITY for loans is based upon credit worthiness, which is measured in terms of personal income or assets. Applicants are charged an initial fee of $45 and an additional non-refundable processing fee of 5.5 percent is deducted from the loan amount.

Loan payments begin within 30 days and can last up to 12 years, but Moyer added students may elect to pay only interest while they are still in school.

Moyer said loans are available through participating universities nationwide as well as many businesses, who will offer the loans as a fringe benefit to employees wishing to continue their education.

Van Allen water isn't harmful despite a nasty smell, taste

John Bartenhagen
Staff Writer

It may not taste or smell very good, but there is nothing seriously wrong with the water in Van Allen Hall, UI Physical Plant Acting Director James Howard said last week.

Howard, dispelling rumors of dangerous water problems in Van Allen, said the shock chlorination and flushing of the Van Allen water supply last month was simply in response to complaints of unpleasant odor and taste.

Stagnant water in dead-end pipes and a trace of some oily substance may have caused the problem, Howard said.

He added his department has received no complaints since the system was treated.

"We certainly hope there are no more problems, but if there are, they should be found soon because we are constantly sampling the university water supply," he said.

HOWARD SAID dead-end water lines are lines that are no longer needed because of a change in the design of a building's water delivery system. These lines are "capped off," trapping entering water.

"The water lines in that building are always being rearranged," he said. "When they cap off a pipe, the water just goes up and lies there until we get rid of it."

"They really pose no health threat, but they can sure make the water pretty offensive to the senses," says UI Water Plant Manager Ken Lloyd of organic materials that may have found their way into Van Allen Hall water supplies.

Ken Lloyd, manager of the UI Water Plant, said unused fire lines also contributed to the problem.

"We found that the fire lines hadn't been flushed by the people who were supposed to do it," Lloyd said. "The water in those lines was pretty ripe."

LLOYD SAID OCCASIONAL losses in water pressure in the building may have reversed the flow of water in these dead-end lines, causing stagnant water containing organic material to be sucked into the general water supply.

He added the problem caused an unpleasant odor in water delivered to bathrooms and laboratories, but did not affect the building's drinking water.

Lloyd said he believes progress has been made in solving the odor and taste problems, but added there is a possibility the treatment will be repeated at the end of the semester.

Flushing and shock-chlorinating the system should have removed any chemical or organic agents responsible for waters unpleasant smell and taste.

"Shock chlorination removes all traces of organics causing the problem," he said. "They really pose no health threat, but they can sure make the water pretty offensive to the senses."

A CHEMICAL ANALYSIS also revealed traces of oil in the water supply, Lloyd said.

"We discovered there were a number of unapproved connections that tied together different water supplies," Lloyd said. "What happened is some well-meaning people inadvertently hooked together some things that should have been left alone."

He said the unapproved connections may have been responsible for traces of oil found in the water, adding the amounts found posed no danger to people who may have drank the contaminated water.

Reagan set to meet with NATO allies

POINT MUGU NAVAL AIR STATION, Calif. — President Ronald Reagan flew back to Washington Monday for a week of meetings with America's NATO allies on how to respond to the Kremlin's proposals to rid Europe of most nuclear weapons.

White House chief of staff Howard Baker, clarifying the conditions needed for a summit, said the superpowers would meet if "useful business can be conducted."

During meetings last week in Moscow between Secretary of State George Shultz and Soviet leaders, the Russians proposed eliminating medium-range and shorter-range nuclear weapons from Europe.

"I think there is great reason for hope," the president said Saturday. "This hasn't been said enough, but it's the first time there has ever been a Russian leader who has actually suggested eliminating... some of the weapons."

Poindexter expected to obtain immunity

WASHINGTON — Congressional panels probing the Iran-Contra scandal were expected to vote immunity this week for Rear Adm. John Poindexter, a key witness who may be able to say what President Ronald Reagan knew about the affair, officials said Monday.

Poindexter has refused to cooperate with investigators and has declined until now to testify before various committees.

Investigators hope that by granting Poindexter limited immunity they will get a detailed account of the secret sale of arms to Iran and the alleged diversion of profits to the Nicaraguan rebels.

Aides with the House and Senate select committees probing the scandal said the House committee likely will vote Wednesday on a grant of immunity for Poindexter and the Senate panel will vote Thursday.

Burning mattress blocks exit, 6 killed

CAMDEN, N.J. — Six people, including three young children, were trapped and killed Monday when a mattress apparently set aflame by a dropped cigarette blocked the only exit from a burning rowhouse apartment, authorities said.

The careless smoker who started the fire apparently tried to carry the mattress through the only door to the upstairs apartment, but could not get outside and dropped the mattress, blocking the only escape route, investigators said.

Some neighbors rejected the careless smoking theory, saying they believed the home was torched by someone throwing a fire bomb.

Pre-school molestation trial begins

LOS ANGELES — Three years after defendants in the McMartin Pre-School molestation case pleaded innocent, the long-awaited trial in what was once the largest child sexual abuse case in U.S. history began Monday.

The trial on 99 counts of child molestation and one count of conspiracy is expected to last one to two years.

Raymond Buckley, 28, and his mother, Peggy McMartin Buckley, 60, the remaining defendants in what was once the largest molestation case in U.S. history, are charged with a total of 100 counts of sexually abusing 14 of their pupils at the now-closed Virginia McMartin Pre-School in Manhattan Beach.

After an 18-month, $4-million preliminary hearing, charges against the other five defendants were dismissed early last year because of insufficient evidence.

S. Korean students still demonstrating

SEOUL, South Korea — Thousands of students staged demonstrations across South Korea Monday protesting government and campus administration policies, police said. Students hurled rocks at police on one campus.

Officials at the National Police Headquarters said 2,900 youths at four universities in Seoul and 5,600 students at 14 provincial universities staged protests during the day.

"Virtually all the actions were to protest administrative matters on campus," a police spokesman said. "About 100 students at one university threw rocks at police, but there were no other violent actions. No firebombs were involved."

U.S. rep vows no trade war

OISO, Japan (UPI) — U.S. trade representative Clayton Yeutter, denying American trade policy has turned protectionist, Monday vowed "in blood" that trade sanctions against Japan will be lifted if it lives up to a semiconductor agreement.

Yeutter, visiting Japan in the midst of the two nations' worst postwar trade dispute, called the sanctions imposed last week "a relatively small blip" on an otherwise steady relationship but blamed them squarely on the Japanese.

Addressing a conference of Japanese and American government, business and academic leaders, he laced a conciliatory speech with sharp criticism of Japan's reluctance to stimulate its economy, open its markets to imports and reduce its huge trade surplus with the United States — $59 billion last year.

"THE ADMINISTRATION is not protectionist, and will not become protectionist," he said in a dinner speech at the conference, held in a seaside resort southwest of Tokyo. His remarks departed widely from a prepared text.

President Ronald Reagan last Friday slapped $300 million in tariffs on Japanese computer, power tool and television imports in retaliation for Japan's alleged violation of an accord signed last year in which it pledged an end to unfair trade in computer chips.

The move, following years of protest from U.S. semiconductor makers, has angered Japanese. Some have voiced fears it signals a general trend toward protecting uncompetitive industries and could ignite a trade war.

"It is not protectionist in any sense of the word," Yeutter said. "It is intended to be a temporary action."

BUT HE SAID, "Don't talk to me, talk to your Japanese semiconductor producers."

"If the spirit of that agreement is carried out, I give you my word tonight — in blood if you want — that those restrictions will be lifted," Yeutter added.

The sanctions, the first against Japan since World War II, came after the Japanese failed to disprove charges they had continued to "dump" chips at unfairly low prices on world markets and had not improved American chip makers' access to the Japanese market.

Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone will visit Washington April 29 for fence-mending talks with Reagan, but it appears unlikely he will get the measures lifted so soon.

Yeutter also singled out Japan's quotas on a variety of agricultural imports as a symbol of American irritation. He acknowledged America's own substantial farm programs but said they were not protectionist.

The semiconductor and agriculture issues are expected to dominate Yeutter's talks this week with Japanese officials.

Resignation follows Argentina rebellion

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (UPI) — Army Chief of Staff Gen. Hector Rios Erenu, whose dismissal was demanded by rebel army officers to protest human rights trials, resigned Monday in the first of several expected changes in the military high command.

President Raul Alfonsin accepted the resignation and named Defense Minister Horacio Jaunarena, a civilian, to take over the post "for as short a time as possible" until the right military officer can be found to take the job, presidential spokesman Jose Ignacio Lopez said.

As Rios Erenu stepped down, loyalist troops from the 2nd Army, who moved into the Campo de Mayo base outside Buenos Aires during the weekend to quell a rebellion by officers angered by human rights trials, packed their equipment Monday and began to return to their bases.

Altamirano said 60 rebel officers are under arrest at Campo de Mayo — including ring-leader Lt. Col. Aldo Rico — and will face court martial.

THE RESIGNATION of Rios Erenu, a staunch backer of President Raul Alfonsin, was a major demand of the rebels, who also wanted amnesty for officers accused of human rights crimes during a period of military rule in the 1970s.

The officers contended the chief of staff did not inform Alfonsin of their concerns.

Rios Erenu's position was weakened by his inability to get middle-level officers to follow orders and by his failure to bring a quick end to the rebellion, which began at a base in Cordoba April 15 and spread to Campo de Mayo April 17.

The Cordoba rebellion ended Friday. Alfonsin flew by helicopter April 19 to Camp de Mayo and personally negotiated the surrender of those insurgents.

Altamirano said other changes in the high command were expected. He said Jaunarena will exercise the duties of chief of staff "until there is a resolution on the makeup of the highest ranks of the army."

“HOW I MADE $18,000 FOR COLLEGE BY WORKING WEEKENDS.”

When my friends and I graduated from high school, we all took part-time jobs to pay for college.

They ended up in car washes and hamburger joints, putting in long hours for little pay.

Not me. My job takes just one weekend a month and two weeks a year. Yet, I'm earning $18,000 for college.

Because I joined my local Army National Guard.

They're the people who help our state during emergencies like hurricanes and floods. They're also an important part of our country's military defense.

So, since I'm helping them do such an important job, they're helping me make it through school.

As soon as I finished Advanced Training, the Guard gave me a cash bonus of $2,000. Then, under the New GI Bill, I'm getting another $5,000 for tuition and books.

Not to mention my monthly Army Guard paychecks. They'll add up to more than $11,000 over the six years I'm in the Guard.

And if I take out a college loan, the Guard will help me pay it back — up to $1,500 a year, plus interest.

It all adds up to $18,000 — or more — for college for just a little of my time. And that's a heck of a better deal than any car wash will give you.

THE GUARD CAN HELP PUT YOU THROUGH COLLEGE, TOO. SEE YOUR LOCAL RECRUITER FOR DETAILS, CALL TOLL-FREE 800-638-7600,* OR MAIL THIS COUPON.

Hawks' Brown uses finesse to outbattle opposing hitters

By Dan Millea
Staff Writer

Pam Brown may not be the fastest pitcher Big Ten hitters will face this season, but as her one-hitter against Minnesota Saturday proved, the Iowa hurler can get the job done.

Brown, who prepped in Peoria, Ill., was not heavily recruited as a high school senior, but she has made an immediate contribution as a Hawkeye rookie.

"I came in (this season) thinking that since we had a junior and a senior pitcher, that this year would be a learning experience," Brown said, "but I've been real happy" with the playing time.

"Pam has been really tough all year," Iowa Coach Ginny Parrish said. "She had one bad outing against Indiana where she just got shelled, but she's been probably our most consistent pitcher all season. We're very pleased with her."

BROWN HAD HER finest weekend of the season against the Gophers, raising her Big Ten record to 3-2 with a pair of wins. She picked up a win in relief Friday and allowed just one hit through seven innings in the opener Saturday for a second.

After teammates Cristen Barry and Tracy Langhurst were battered by Minnesota in the fourth inning of the second game Saturday, Brown came in and again shut the Gophers down, allowing only one hit in 3½ innings. If not for a two-hitter from Minnesota's Carla Cray, Brown could have easily recorded three wins for the four game series.

"She hits her spots, that's what makes her effective," Parrish, who agreed Brown's speed is less than intimidating, said. "And she has a real competitive attitude. If she's not throwing well or if someone gets a hit off of her, she gets mad and comes back tougher."

BROWN AGREED THAT her strength lies in finesse rather than power. "It's really my rise ball, I think, and mixing a lot of pitches" that causes problems for hitters, Brown said. "And placement is a key."

Despite her success over the weekend, Brown said she hasn't conquered college softball yet and "everything can be improved on."

"It's been a big adjustment, since I am a freshman. It's very different. The whole game is more difficult. There's more concentration involved."

In high school Brown was voted first team all-conference three times and led her team to the state tournament twice, including a second place finish in her junior year.

But Iowa was the only major midwestern university to show an interest in Brown. She eventually chose Iowa over Nevada-Las Vegas, Eastern Illinois and Illinois State.

"I really liked the (Iowa) coaches and the program is a good one," Brown said of her choice. "It's close to home and academically it's a good school."

Brown will visit her home state today when Iowa, 10-4 in the Big Ten, meets Northwestern, 9-1, in a key double-header in Evanston, Ill. The two clubs split a pair of games in Iowa City last week and a Hawkeye sweep would turn the league race upside down.

Painful looks give Seko second title

BOSTON (UPI) — Toshihiko Seko, seeing the pain in his opponents' faces, turned Heartbreak Hill into a weapon Monday to win the Boston Marathon for the second time.

The 30-year-old Japanese broke away from the pack after 20 miles and finished the 91st edition of the race in 2 hours, 11 minutes and 50 seconds.

"I looked at the other people's faces and they were suffering," Seko said through an interpreter. "So I thought that if I could start there, not many people could follow me."

Using machine-like strikes, the 5-foot-7 runner crested the famed Heartbreak Hill with a 70-yard lead. He extended his advantage to 100 yards by 21 miles, to 350 yards by 23 miles and was never threatened.

Steve Jones of Wales finished second in the 26-mile, 385-yard race in 2:12:37. Geoff Smith of Britain, winner of the Boston Marathon in 1984 and 1985, finished third in 2:12:42.

ROSA MOTA OF Portugal won the women's competition in 2:25:21. Two Belgians finished second and third — Agnes Paradaens in 2:29:50 and Ria Van Landeghem in 2:29:56. Mota, a 99-pounder, was the clear favorite.

"The big factor was the front wind," Mota said through an interpreter. "I felt it all along the course."

Men's defending champion Rob de Castella, who set the course record of 2:07:51 last year, was knocked down at the race's start. Several officials were standing in front of the starting line when the gun was fired at noon. De Castella fell and rolled once before regaining his feet. He was among the leaders through 10 miles and finished sixth at 2:14:24.

"I don't think it affected me, I don't think it made any difference," de Castella said of his fall, then noted. "Early on, I didn't feel smooth or comfortable or relaxed. Because of that, there was a sense of foreboding."

SEKO, WHO WON this race in 1981, said there was no countdown to the noon starting gun for the 6,253 official runners.

"I was surprised to hear a bang," he said.

Seko and Mota each earned $40,000 and a $31,000 Mercedes Benz.

"It's a big race and I am happy," Mota said. "I tried to run as fast as I could. I started slow and I felt good and I decided I would run a bit faster."

Andre Viger, winner of the wheelchair division was among six wheelchair competitors who fell about 100 yards from the starting line. A policeman helped Viger right his chair and the Canadian went on to win his third Boston title.

Tour de France winner shot by friend in hunting accident

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (UPI) — Greg LeMond, last summer's Tour de France cycling champion, Monday was accidentally shot in the back by a hunting partner and is expected to be hospitalized one to two weeks.

Officials said the 25-year-old cyclist, the first American to win the prestigious French race in its 83 years, underwent 1½ to 2 hours of surgery Monday afternoon at the University Medical Center at the California-Davis School of Medicine.

Dr. Sandy Beal, a trauma surgeon at the hospital, said LeMond is in stable condition. He said he will be in the hospital one to two weeks and need two months to "get back to normal."

"Because he's young and in very good condition, he'll recover," she said. "He'll probably lose about two months of training. He should be able to go back and train as vigorously as he had prior to the accident."

THE ACCIDENT happened about 10:50 a.m. in the Sierra Nevada foothills in Lincoln, the Placer County sheriff's office said. LeMond was transported by helicopter to the hospital by the California Highway Patrol.

Captain Larry Newman of the sheriff's office said LeMond was hunting turkeys on a ranch owned by Louis Barber, about 28 miles northeast of Sacramento. The cyclist was hunting with Patrick Blades and Rodney Barber, the ranch owner's son. Blades fired a shotgun at a turkey and hit LeMond, who collapsed.

Johnese Spisso, the hospital's trauma center coordinator, said the hunters were wearing camouflage.

The helicopter left McClellan Air Force Base in Sacramento and reached LeMond at 11:40 a.m. The flight to the hospital took 15 minutes. Newman said Blades became hysterical after the accident and was taken to Roseville (Calif.) Community Hospital for observation.

Hawkeyes get Big Ten break

By Robert Mann
Staff Writer

After finishing 5-3 in the Big Ten's Western Division at the mid-way point of conference play, the Iowa baseball team's game against St. Ambrose today should be a welcome break.

The Hawkeyes (17-16 overall) are behind Minnesota (3-1 in the Big Ten), which will play Big Ten games this week. Iowa leads Wisconsin (4-4), Northwestern (3-5) and Illinois (1-3) in the Western Division.

Earlier this season Iowa won three of four games from Illinois and split with Northwestern.

Relief pitcher Ron Griffith

Baseball

said the game today against St. Ambrose can provide an opportunity for the Hawkeyes to play several players and get a break from conference games.

"THEY HAVEN'T BEEN that tough the past couple of years," Griffith said. "This helps the players break away from the tough competition, and some of the players who haven't played much get the chance to play in case they're needed in Big Ten play."

Last season the Hawkeyes defeated St. Ambrose in Iowa

City, 22-6.

Pitcher Al Rath, who will not play against St. Ambrose, but should pitch against Western Illinois Wednesday, agreed that the next two weeks will help the entire team.

"These games should help us keep our skills up," he said. "This way we won't have any long layoff."

The game today starts at 3:00 p.m. at the Iowa Baseball Diamond. The Hawkeyes play Western Illinois Wednesday in Iowa City at 3 p.m. before traveling to Kansas for three weekend games.

The Hawkeyes resume Big Ten play May 2 against Wisconsin on the road, where they will play four games.

Brewers win 13th to tie record

CHICAGO (UPI) — Robin Yount's two-out, bloop RBI single capped a two-run seventh inning Monday night that rallied Milwaukee to a 5-4 victory over the Chicago White Sox and gave the Brewers a major-league record-tying 13th straight triumph to start the season.

Paul Molitor doubled home the tying run in the seventh and also doubled to ignite a two-run first for the Brewers, who equalled the Atlanta Braves' 1982 13-0 start. Milwaukee goes for the major-league record Tuesday night at Comiskey Park with Mark Candioli to start.

JUAN NIEVES, WHO pitched a no-hitter against Baltimore last Wednesday, was shelled for seven hits and four runs in 4½ innings. But Chuck Crim, 2-0, bailed Milwaukee out of a bases-loaded situation in the fifth and earned the victory by pitching 3½ innings of one-hit relief. Dan Plesac got the last three outs — two by strike out — for his fifth save.

Greg Brock hit a two-run homer in the first for Milwaukee before a crowd swelled to 24,019 by Brewer fans who drove the 90 miles to Comiskey Park for the record-tying victory.

Bill Schroeder started the seventh-inning rally with a walk off Jose DeLeon, 2-1. With pinch-runner B.J. Surhoff going on the pitch, Jim Gantner bounced out to first and Surhoff took second. Dale Sveum grounded to second, sending Surhoff to third.

Chicago went ahead 4-3 in the fifth, knocking out Nieves. Ivan Calderon led off with a double to center and went to third on Carlton Fisk's grounder to first. Greg Walker hit a high chopper to second, allowing Calderon to score. Tim Lulett followed with a double and Fred Manrique was intentionally walked. Nieves couldn't handle Ozzie Guillen's swinging bunt, loading the bases. Crim relieved and struck out Ron Karkovice to end the threat.

Sailing club defeats 17 teams to win Ohio State tournament

By Marc Bona Staff Writer

The UI Sailing Club finished first out of 18 clubs competing at the Ohio State Tournament this weekend, edging host Ohio State, 143-144.

The rest of the schools and their point totals: third, Notre Dame, 157; fourth, Toledo, 165; fifth, Purdue, 186; sixth, Miami (Ohio), 219; seventh, Northwestern, 224; eighth, Cincinnati, 242; ninth, Michigan State, 279; 10th, Ohio Wesleyan, 297; 11th, Michigan, 298; 12th, Denison, 409; 13th, Bowling Green, 421; 14th, Wright State, 437; 15th, Xavier, 458; 16th, University of Chicago, 462; 17th, Kent State, 476; 18th, Hiram, 561.

IN THE A DIVISION, Bill Vickers skipped the club to a first-place victory with Alesia Glandon at crew. In the B division, Gunther Lubben took fifth at skipper with Paul Goodman crewing.

UI Coach Bob Woodward said defeating the Buckeyes made the win more enjoyable.

"Ohio State is the club we like to beat," he said. "We've got a semi-friendly rivalry. Beating them is good for two things: One, it's a good boost for the morale of the club. Two, it's a good win because it gives us a good yardstick in regards to measuring how far we've come in accomplishing our goals from the beginning of the season."

"It's a long way away, too, so we like to think it was worth our while," Woodward said.

The club's next competition is the Huntley Team Race, April 25-26, beginning at 10 a.m. and ending in late afternoon, weather permitting. The club will launch from the MacBride Nature Recreation area at the South arm of Lake MacBride.

The UI lacrosse club, competing in the Big Ten tournament at Evanston, Ill., finished sixth overall, winning one game and losing two.

The club started off slowly, losing to Wisconsin, 8-4, and Indiana, 7-3, before bouncing back to defeat Illinois, 9-0.

Lakers, Celtics are favorites to meet for NBA title series

NEW YORK (UPI)—The Boston Celtics and Los Angeles Lakers, the NBA's two dominant teams this season, are far from certain opponents in the June championship.

At least three other clubs — the Atlanta Hawks, Detroit Pistons and Dallas Mavericks — stand a legitimate chance of winning the crown.

The Lakers will finish the season with the NBA's best record. But they lost to the Houston Rockets in the Western Conference finals last year and this year lost the regular-season series 3-2 to the Mavericks.

Dallas controls the Lakers fast break better than any team because of the disciplined offense run by Coach Dick Motta. The setup usually leaves one or two men back on defense after a missed shot and prevents the Lakers from igniting the break.

DALLAS FINISHED AS the Midwest Division champs, and should the Mavericks and Lakers win their opening two rounds they would meet for the Western Conference title.

"The front-runner has to be the Lakers," Rick Sund, the Mavericks director of player personnel, said. "Their record speaks for itself, and they have been just a little short of awesome their last 30 games. But our players have confidence against the Lakers. We play them extremely well."

The Celtics, the defending champions, have been depleted by injuries and have struggled on the road. Late in the season they lost nine of 10 away from Boston Garden. Entering the final week of the season Bill Walton appeared in seven games and Scott Wedman six.

They were also in danger of losing the best record in the Eastern Conference to the Hawks, whom they met in the last game of the season Sunday.

THE HAWKS OWN THE longest winning streak of the season at 11 games, but Atlanta Coach Mike Fratello lists the Celtics as the favorite to reach the league finals.

"Boston is still the defending champion," he said. "The LA Lakers have the best record in the NBA this year. Hopefully, we'll compete for it, but it's a long way to go until you reach the conference finals."

Should the Celtics and Hawks take their first two series, they would play in the conference finals. Along the way, though, one of the two likely will face the Detroit Pistons, who won 50 games for the first time since 1973-74.

"We finally got over the 50-win hump, but it's what you do in the playoffs that count," Detroit Coach Chuck Daly said. "I'm optimistic about the playoffs, but whomever we play in the first round, it will go five games. If we win, I like us against Atlanta or Boston because we match up well."

FRATELLO, SUND AND Daly were guarded about playoff projections, preferring to dwell on the first round.

"We never try to get ahead of ourselves," Fratello said. "We don't look ahead. That's the worst thing this team can do. We take it one game at a time, one day at a time.

"I think each of the first-round opponents in the Eastern Conference are capable of winning. There is not one first-round team that is not capable of beating the team it's matched with.

"I don't know who you'd rather have in the playoffs. Any of them can be headaches. How much difference is there between us and Indiana? Not much."

"As feasible as it is for the Mavericks to get to the conference finals and play the Los Angeles Lakers, if we are not careful it's possible to get dumped in the first or second round," Sund said.

"We are one of the youngest clubs in the league, and if you start to point to the finals before you go to the first series, you can find yourself in trouble."

One thing the Lakers and Celtics have in their favor is experience. Since 1969 — the last time a team (Boston) repeated as league champion — the Celtics have won five titles and the Lakers four.

"We've never been there before so it would be a new experience for us," Fratello said. "That (lack of experience) will certainly take a toll on certain teams. Maybe you learn only going through the situation."

But Fratello's star player, forward Dominique Wilkins, knows what is in store.

"Games get a lot more physical during playoff time," he said. "They become more physical because it means more to both teams."

Philadelphia honors Erving

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — Hundreds of teenagers went on a rampage breaking windows and forcing store owners to close shop after a farewell parade Monday for retiring Philadelphia 76ers star Julius Erving.

Police said 37 people were arrested, including at least 21 youths. There were no serious injuries, although two women police officers suffered minor cuts and bruises during scuffles.

POLICE ESTIMATED more than 30,000 people — from businessmen and women to parents with children hoisted on their shoulders — lined the downtown parade route.

The parade under cloudy skies and a few drops of rain included Erving, his wife Turquoise, his children, teammates and public officials, including Mayor Wilson Goode.

Erving, a 16-year veteran, and his wife were seated in the jumpseat of a 1928 Packard and surrounded by more than 25 police officers on foot and horseback. They blew kisses to the crowd as they passed.

"I HAVE BEEN A FAN for a long time," Phil Spigner of Philadelphia said. "He's a great guy. At the garage where I work, he used to come in. I got his autograph for my son. The team needs his leadership."

"I have been a fan since they acquired Dr. J.," Maude Reynolds said. "I guess (guard Maurice) Cheeks is my favorite now."

Facing his fans from a grandstand at JFK Plaza, Erving told them the secret of his success.

"I think the root of it all is charity — charity that I learned and that became an influence in my life as a direct commandment from God," Erving said. "Be charitable."

Erving is involved with the Special Olympics, the Lupus Foundation, the March of Dimes and other charities. Before Erving's last regular-season home game Friday night, team owner Harold Katz donated $50,000 in Erving's name to the Special Olympics.

A fade-away jumper with 4:58 left in the third period of the 76ers' Friday night home game against the Indiana Pacers boosted Erving's career point total to 30,000.

He became the third player in NBA history to break the 30,000 mark, trailing only Wilt Chamberlain and Kareem Abdul-Jabbar, who still plays for the Los Angeles Lakers.

Erving has gone through 23 ceremonies around the country on his farewell NBA tour. With Philadelphia in the playoffs, he potentially could play 26 more games. Milwaukee is home against Philadelphia in the first round of the playoffs Friday night.

Imagery reflects philosophy in Marvin Bell's poetic works

By B. Gordon
Staff Writer

THE FIRST photographs retained the effects of light on light-sensitive gel, capturing an image. The longer the light was allowed to dwell on the film, the more detail appeared in the finished picture.

Marvin Bell was an art photographer before there was such a thing as "art photography," and his poetry is seasoned with the visual patience and clarity of that form.

"We can ask where the photographer stood, but not why," he wrote in "Where He Stood: A Photographer's Portfolio" (New and Selected Poems, 1987), and it is Bell's perpetual quest for the present moment that, the poet said, best explains his work.

"We have a life right here. That's what I want to say," Bell, who will be reading tonight at 8 in Communications Studies Building Room 101, claimed in a recent interview. Yet he admits that his poetry is very much philosophical.

"EVEN THOUGH IT'S full of imagery, it is a philosophic enterprise. For me, writing poetry is part of the act of thinking. I can think by writing ... but making poetry is not that kind of thinking's main concern," he said.

"Most of the language we use is the result of convention, reflex and prejudice," he continued. "In writing I try to somehow shake free of that by some form of intensification — of language, of emotion, of concentration."

Bell is the head of the poetry section of the UI Writers' Workshop and his eight books of poetry have won National Endowment for the Arts and Guggenheim Foundation fellowships as well as Senior Fulbright Appointments to Yugoslavia and Australia.

AN EARLY MEMBER of the Workshop himself, he recalls fondly the days when "poetry was almost a gratuitous art form" and the thought of publishing in any kind of quar-

"For me, writing poetry is part of the act of thinking. I can think by writing ... but making poetry is not that kind of thinking's main concern," says Marvin Bell. "Most of the language we use is the result of convention, reflex and prejudice."

Reading

terly — hence the competition between poets that sometimes exists today — was almost beyond the realm of possibility.

"It's always been fun to be part of an outsider group for me," Bell said. He considers his early work in photography as well as his first vocation as a jazz hornplayer part and parcel of his need to feel himself on the fringes of the "establishment."

Bell's suspicion of any establishment, even the ones he joined himself, is evident in some of his work:

Things We Dreamt We Died For

Flags of all sorts.
The literary life.
Each time we dreamt we'd done the gentlemanly thing, covering our causes in closets full of bones to remove ourselves forever from dearest possibilities, the old weapons re-injured us, and we gave in to getting even,
a little less like us
if a lot less like others.

— (from Things We Dreamt We Died For, 1966)

BUT THE GROUND of Bell's work is not rebellion and the stance of the individual, but belief and love. He begins his poem, "What Lasts" by saying, "So help me, Love, you and I." Bell's poetry is very aware of both the staying power of love and the destructive potential of the lack of it:

They advanced without water, with inadequate supplies, they lost their weapons but drove on,
when they lost their arms they went without them, and then without feet and without stomachs.

— from "A Picture of Soldiers," A Probable Volume of Dreams, 1969.

"I REALLY WOULD like the surface of my poems to seem welcoming," Bell said of his direct, simple style which has not significantly changed in more than 20 years of writing.

"Art is a way of distracting the conscious mind so that the unconscious mind can float upwards as it will," he said. "And if your conscious mind is going at 90 miles an hour, then it needs that distraction all the more."

When Bell talks about writing, one gets an image of an ex-smoker talking about how good he feels now that he's healthy. "My vision is clearer when I'm writing, my heart is steadier. Everyone needs a way of talking to themselves — for me, poetry is one of those ways."

"One writes up to one's own limits for one's own reasons," he added. "The great Chinese masters were exiles. They weren't giving any poetry readings."

Monkey business highlights mildly amusing 'Project X'

By Hoyt Olsen
Staff Writer

PROJECT X, despite its title and a cast of chimpanzees, is not the mindless comedy the TV ads lead one to expect. Instead it is an earnestly lightweight drama about the use and abuse of laboratory animals. Despite its loaded dice approach and a dearth of interesting human characters, Project X manages to be modestly entertaining.

The use of animals for lab experiments arouses considerable antagonism between the experimenters and animal rights advocates. While such controversy has inspired acts of civil disobedience abroad, particularly in England, most Americans appear pretty complacent. The prevalent attitude here appears to be that test animals are probably necessary, so please do not trouble us with the grim details. A film that attempted to treat animal experimentation realistically and objectively would die a thousand deaths at the box office.

PROJECT X worries very little about realism and objectivity, and goes straight for your heart. The chimpanzee characters are bright and cuddly, almost human and cuddly, affectionate and cuddly, better than human and cuddly, and oh so cute and cuddly. Obviously, it is better to kick Lassie down an elevator shaft than to harm one hair on such adorable critters.

And the chimps are not exactly being used to find a cure for cancer. They are part of a top secret project at the Strategic Weapons Research Center, where an uncuddly scientist-bureaucrat is trying to learn how long human pilots can continue flying a mission after being radiated by a rocket's red glare and bombs bursting in air. As part of this jolly preparation for World War III, the chimps are being exposed to lethal doses of radiation.

AS IF THIS WERE not enough to win sympathy, one of the chimps can talk. Early in the film, Virgil is the lab animal for a graduate student's dissertation on animal communication. We see her teach the cheerful little fellow to use sign language, at which he becomes only slightly more adept than Marlee Matlin. But Teri, the grad student, has to give Virgil up when the government drops her funding (to spend more money on World War III, Project X would imply).

Film

Although allegedly intended for a zoo, Virgil ends up you-know-where, where he clutches his little alligator doll and makes sad eyes at Matthew Broderick through the bars on his cage.

BRODERICK, THE HUMAN star, plays Air Force enlisted man Jimmy Garrett, who is assigned to Project X after borrowing the line without permission to entertain a date. Garrett helps train the chimps to fly, and befriends Virgil after he realizes that the animal keeps repeating the sign for "Help." Only later does he learn what happens to the chimps after their training is complete — and is drawn into an unwanted conflict between following his orders and his conscience.

AS PRESIDENT RONALD Reagan knows, it is not easy to maintain one's dignity while performing with chimps (a reference to Bedtime for Bonzo, not to Reagan's present Cabinet). Broderick, despite the almost constant presence of his scene-stealing simian co-stars, manages to hold his own, and should not have to abandon a legitimate career and shift to politics for years to come.

Director Jonathan Kaplan delivers a movie that is certain to win your sympathy, although it is possible to resent the manipulative manner in which this is accomplished. The middle scenes, in which Airman Garrett and Virgil are building a relationship, are particularly affecting. The biggest disappointment is the conclusion, which offers much predictable action while stretching credibility well past the breaking point.

ONE WONDERS WHAT sort of audience will be attracted to Project X. The film may not be fast-paced enough for a teen audience, and the only real romance is between human and chimp. An older audience might wish for more development of human figures. Children will adore the chimps (actually, everyone should adore the chimps), but two scenes showing their exposure to radiation could be quite disturbing for youngsters.

So Project X is a fair-to-middling film with good intentions, but may be a box office flop nevertheless.

Novels capture spirit of America's adolescents

By Teresa Heger
Arts/entertainment Editor

EVERY few months a new book is published, heralded as a new Catcher in the Rye. The (usually young) author is lauded as the second J.D. Salinger; the novel's main character becomes a reincarnation of Holden Caulfield.

Two recently published novels fall under this rote praise. Jujitsu for Christ by Jack Butler is called a "Bible-Belt Catcher in the Rye." The main figure in Greg Matthews' Little Red Rooster is dubbed a "Holden Caulfield reincarnated in 1987."

There is a deliberate intention behind this Salinger-esque media hype. Publishing houses want to attract the young college crowd and the yuppie set. Who has read Catcher in the Rye and not liked it? Only communists and book censors, no doubt.

BY TODAY'S PUBLISHING standards, any adolescent, coming-of-age novel can be labeled as a second coming of Catcher. But such praise tagged on Little Red Rooster and Jujitsu for Christ does both works an injustice; the books are quite able to stand on their own merits.

Butler's Jujitsu for Christ is set in the deep South during the civil rights years. The protagonist, Roger Wing, is an 18-year-old who opens a karate studio in downtown Jackson, Miss. He becomes entangled with rednecks and born-again Christians, jujitsu and race riots.

Butler's greatest strength is his deadpan humor. His laughs are situational; his language is relaxed and perfect for the story. For example, at one point Roger's classmates discover he is not a Christian. He is persuaded into attending a Bible Club meeting after school by his friend Patsy. After listening to a half hour or so of preaching, Roger is hit by a wave of "grace."

"I want to be a Christian," (Roger said into the silence at the close of the little hymn. Patsy almost fainted. The entire Bible Club was stricken with silent pandemonium. They were like a child who has tied a string to a stick and hooked a five-pounder.

Roger eventually becomes close to a black family — a closeness that leads him out of innocence and into guilt. When tragedy strikes, Butler's gentle humor serves to strengthen, rather than undercut, the novel's parting message.

MATTHEWS' BITING WIT in Little Red Rooster is just as successful. Rooster's main character, Burris Weems, narrates the book via a stolen tape recorder. He captures, unwittingly, the pathos and humor in middle/lower class America.

Poking fun at the tasteless aspects of U.S. culture seems to be Matthews' greatest source of comic inspiration. Burris slams everything from "Benson" episodes to urban landscaping to pancake houses. Even Burris' mother, Peggy, sells black velvet paintings at shopping malls:

Peggy's got creativity... The pictures she does are generally stampeding stallions or lions and tigers, and Elvis and Jesus and Kenny Rogers. Kenny's face is fatter than Jesus', and his hair and beard are shorter, and Jesus doesn't have a mike in his hand. She sells more Jesuses than Kennys, but more tigers than Jesus. Elvis is a steady seller too.

WHEN BURRIS BEFRIENDS a co-worker at a summer job, he is plunged into a world of sexual/emotional politics he cannot understand. The first section of Rooster rolls along easily; the last third of the novel takes a darker turn. Like Roger in Jujitsu for Christ, Burris becomes disillusioned with himself and mankind.

Both Jujitsu for Christ and Little Red Rooster are worth reading. They offer touching and humorous views of what growing up — and perhaps growing bitter — in America is all about.

Robertson stars as Ford in upcoming mini-series

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Cliff Robertson is at it again, playing another historical figure and loving it.

Robertson's biographical roles include President John F. Kennedy, astronaut Buzz Aldrin and treasure-hunter Mel Fisher.

Now he is starring in the two-part mini-series "Ford: The Man and the Machine," based on the Robert Lacey biography. Produced for Operation Prime Time, a cooperative of independent television stations, the four-hour miniseries will air on various broadcast dates beginning April 27.

Robertson found Lacey's book unbalanced in its treatment of the wizard of Detroit, making Henry Ford appear to be an uncompromising villain socially, politically and even in family relationships.

HE THOUGHT, too, that the script was unsympathetic to Ford.

"I've always felt that Hollywood has too often used very bold tones, either black or white," he said. "None of us are all black or all white. We are multi-toned in shades of grays and complexities."

"Whenever I get to play a historical figure — or a living man — I try to do as much research as possible. For every argument on one side there's a rebuttal on the other. If you take trouble to turn the coin over, you start to get into the real person," he said.

Robertson said playing a biographical role is far more exciting and satisfying than playing a fictional character.

"THERE'S AN ADDED responsibility to tell it and act it truthfully because if you don't people will see that you're guilty of assuming or maybe embroidering the role," he said. "You've got to be more honest."

On the other hand, he said, "I still think art copies life. If life is painting the portrait, there are so many things we can find in that tapestry that are not discovered by some facile scriptwriter in a short period of time."

Robertson added that playing President Kennedy, who was still in office at the time, was fraught with pressure.

"It could have been a lot worse," he said. "Suddenly there was this giant international spotlight focused on me. People all felt they knew Kennedy and, of course, comparisons were made."

"Happily, after the first five minutes audiences got into the story and it wasn't that tough," he said. "The easy part was the president's cooperation. He could not have been more helpful and gracious about it."

"DIDN'T THINK I did a particularly good job. On the other hand, I've never been too satisfied with anything I've done. Maybe the screenplay could have delved more deeply into the inner spirit of the man. But there was an awful lot of history to cover," Robertson said.

"Playing Ford was a distinctly different experience. I felt the writers were out to hurt him and his reputation. They portrayed him as a bigot, as Lacey did in the book," he said. "But Ford must be put into focus based on the times in which he lived and what the customs and attitudes were."

Cliff Robertson

Television

God knows he had his faults and shortcomings.

"But he was a true American original and a mechanical genius," Robertson added. "He was a brilliant man who found answers to problems with deceptively simple solutions."

IN ADDITION TO "FORD," Robertson recently completed the movie Malone, co-starring Burt Reynolds.

The picture marks the sixth movie project in which Robertson has been associated since he was allegedly blacklisted by a number of Hollywood studios and independent producers in 1978.

The blacklisting followed his involvement in the scandal surrounding Fred Begelman, Columbia Pictures head at the time. Many people within the industry blamed Robertson for exposing the popular and powerful Begelman's misdeeds.

This scenario was chronicled in the best-selling book Indecent Exposure.

Robertson didn't work again for three and a half years. Eventually he was reduced to doing television commercials. An entire generation knows him only for his AT&T ads. Finally he was hired to co-star in Brainstorm with the late Natalie Wood.

"Before I was blacklisted I worked fairly steadily," Robertson concluded. "But since I began working again I've never been busier. Thank God."

Local jazz orchestra swings to the top

By Denise Roth
Copy Editor

LATELY, influence in the music world has stemmed from the past in the remake of old hit songs. So it isn't unusual that the concept of a jazz orchestra has been reborn. An offspring of this idea includes the Iowa City Jazz Orchestra. The group has yielded even more in the past year than its founder, Ed Sarath, had expected.

Performing all original music, the Iowa City Jazz Orchestra has been invited to participate in the 21st annual Montreux Jazz Festival in Switzerland this July. The group will also be performing at the North Sea Jazz Festival in Holland. To raise funds for the trip, the orchestra has scheduled two benefit concerts Wednesday at 8 p.m. in Clapp Recital Hall and Thursday at 9:30 p.m. at Gabe's, 330 E. Washington St. It will also give the opening concert at the Arts Festival in May.

SARATH, FOUNDER OF the jazz orchestra, considers the

Ed Sarath

Music

15-day festival the "most famous in the world. It's a very unique opportunity to be invited to perform." The orchestra was invited after submitting a copy of their newly released record album, Fifth Fall, which has already been accepted for distribution in New York and Europe.

In the past, the festival has featured such well-known jazz names as Pat Metheny, Herbie Hancock and Wynton Marsalis. The Iowa City Jazz Orchestra is scheduled to perform during the last three days of the festival, at the climax of events.

Sarath said this will be great for the orchestra since many unknown groups are scheduled at the beginning. By being able to play at the end of the festival, sandwiched between big names, the orchestra will receive more coverage, an essential factor in becoming established in the jazz scene.

"I'M REALLY EXCITED about going," Chris Merz, saxophonist in the orchestra, said. "When I was a freshman I went with Johnson County Landmark Jazz Band to Europe (to a college jazz band festival.) This will be really different type (of festival) — to go play among professional groups and play Ed's music."

Sarath said the community needs to realize the importance of the invitation. "We get a chance to represent the community in a very unique way," Sarath said. "This is a one-shot deal and we're being regarded as a first-class professional group."

"Jazz orchestras are popping up in other cities such as Cleveland and Dallas," he said. "I bet we're one of the smallest communities to have one."

The 20-member ensemble plays its own music, composed by Sarath and other members. Some ideas come from improvisation rehearsals. Essentially, it's "our own jazz," Sarath said. "It doesn't follow anyone else specifically, it has lots of influences."

This original contemporary repertoire, as well as its top-level personnel, which include nationally-acclaimed trumpeter Paul Smoker and pianist Bob Washut, has made the ensemble one of the most exciting big bands on the emerging jazz scene.

The orchestra had originally scheduled jazz pianist Joanne Brackeen to perform at this week's concerts, but she was unable to come because of illness. She has tentatively been rescheduled for next fall.
