Adviser: Reagan knew of dealings

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Robert McFarlane revealed to the Iran-Contra panel Monday that President Ronald Reagan had a far greater role than previously known in efforts to help the Nicaraguan rebels keep "body and soul together" when Congress banned U.S. aid.

The former national security adviser said Reagan knew Saudi Arabia chipped in millions of dollars for the Contras in 1984 and 1985, and Reagan interceded with a third country — said by a panel source to be Honduras — that had seized a shipment of Contra military supplies purchased with the Saudi money.

McFarlane said he gave explicit directions to his staff that the Contra supply operations be conducted within the law and recounted how he told aide Lt. Col. Oliver North that some of his plans might be illegal.

IN WHAT COULD draw other administration figures into the Contra cash connection, McFarlane said North told him that he had received approval for the diversion of profits from the U.S. arms sales to Iran for the Contras — but McFarlane said North did not tell him who approved the scheme.

McFarlane is the second witness to quote North as saying he believed he was operating with approval from superiors. Last week the panel's first witness, retired Air Force Maj. Gen. Richard Secord, said he had no firsthand knowledge of what the president knew but said North told him he had discussed the Contra diversion with Reagan.

In long-awaited testimony, McFarlane offered a White House insider's view on efforts to keep the Contras armed and to sell U.S. weapons to Iran.

LAST WEEK, Secord described for four days his role in implementing the initiatives, providing a never-before-seen glimpse into the world's arms bazaar and secret Swiss accounts.

McFarlane also conceded that he suspected the U.S. overture to Iran was never going to reap the benefits promised by Israel — an opening into Tehran's radical Islamic government and freedom for the American hostages held by pro-Iran extremists in Lebanon.

He recounted that from Israel's first suggestion about arms sales in early July 1985 — and his discussions with the president from that time — the hostages were a critical factor in all negotiations.

He also said Reagan approved the first Israeli arms shipment before the weapons went to Tehran in August 1985. That dating contradicts Reagan's statements to his Tower Commission in which he first said he approved the shipment before it left Israel, then said the approval came after it landed in Tehran and finally said he could not remember when he approved it.

McFARLANE SAID he also contributed to a false chronology of events when the scandal first was revealed to "gild" the president's role in the dealings.

In rambling testimony about his now-famous secret mission to Tehran in May 1986, McFarlane said the negotiations with Iranian officials over the exchange of arms for hostages degenerated when the Iranians dickered over the number of Americans to be released, then demanded that the United States pay for the remaining hostages' upkeep.

UI, students differ on ways to combat racism

By James Cahoy
Staff Writer

While racism at the UI continues to be a problem, UI students and faculty members are divided on the best way to deal with it.

UI Dean of Student Services Phillip Jones said the UI offers many programs to help deal with the problems of racism on campus.

"We have organizations such as the UI Human Rights Commission, which investigates racial slurs and upholds UI policies against discrimination," Jones said. "We also offer a number of classes and programs dealing with the problem of racism. There are institutional mechanisms which the university has for dealing with the problem of racism."

BUT JONES ADMITTED that the UI in many ways does not go far enough in dealing with racism.

"The university is making an effort to deal with racism, but that does not mean we are doing as well as we should in dealing with the problem," Jones said. "Much of the criticism of the university, particularly in its effort to recruit minority faculty, is legitimate. In this regard, Iowa needs to produce more results."

Black Student Union President Kelvin Burton said the best way to deal with the problem would be to make the environment at the UI more supportive toward minorities.

"The No. 1 concern of the university in terms of minorities should be to make them feel more comfortable here," Burton said. "That includes faculty members as well as students."

BURTON SAID THE UI must have a better record on the hiring and promotion of minority faculty, as well as sponsoring activities to bring the UI minority community together. "By the university sponsoring minority speakers or even large-scale assemblies, they can help minority students feel less alone and deal with problems better."

A better affirmative action program would be the most effective way to combat racism at the UI, according to UI Assistant Professor of English Melba Boyd, a member of the UI Affirmative Action Committee.

"The University of Iowa does not have an effective affirmative action program, and this amounts to a very sophisticated form of racism," Boyd said. "I don't think the recruitment of more minority faculty will eliminate the problem of racism, but it may illuminate it and help us better deal with the problem."

BOYD CITED SEVERAL Big Ten universities, including Minnesota and Wisconsin, that have implemented effective affirmative action programs and helped alleviate minority discomfort.

"There is no reason why Iowa cannot follow the lead of schools which do have good affirmative action programs," Boyd said.

UI Director of Special Support Services Paul Shang, whose group offers UI minority students help in dealing with racism, said increased counseling and support for students who feel victimized by racist attitudes is a possible solution.

"We should try to be more attentive to students who have to deal with racism," Shang said. "We should try to increase interaction among minority students and help them to take pride in themselves."

Former Associated Residence Halls President Larry Pearlman said the UI should offer more programs to educate students on other cultures besides their own.

"There should be some effort to combat the stereotypes and misperception people have of other cultures," Pearlman said.

Property owner objections put end to paving projects

By Carol Monaghan
Staff Writer

The Iowa City Council tentatively decided Monday evening to scrap two alley paving projects because of objections from property owners bordering the alleys.

Single-family property owners objected to the cost of the project. One retired couple faced an assessment of more than $1,000 for the paving of the alley. Councilor Kate Dickson said:

"It's like an increase in their taxes; it's not fair," Councilor Ernie Zuber said.

But residents along at least one of the alleys said its poor condition makes it dangerous.

"It's a real hazard to drive back there," UI senior Claudia Dineen, of 614 S. Johnson St., said. "You have to swerve all over to miss the potholes."

Oncoming cars or pedestrians could be hit by drivers attempting to avoid potholes, some that measure "8 to 10 inches deep," she said.

The alley, south of Bowery Street between Dodge and Johnson streets, is the only access road to 19 structures. The alley, once bordered by only single-family dwellings, is now also lined with apartment buildings that have increased traffic along the outlet.

Eldon Wells, of 648 S. Governor St., said many property owners were unsure how they would pay for the project.

"Many of the owners who were retired expressed deep concern," Wells said. "They are being assessed the same per foot as someone with a $750,000 or more investment in an apartment building."

THE ENTIRE ALLEY paving

project for fiscal year 1987 originally included three alleys: the first located south of Bowery Street between Dodge and Lucas streets; the second, behind the Iowa City Press-Citizen, between Washington and College streets; and the third, located south off Bowery between Johnson and Dodge streets. The alley behind the Press-Citizen will be the only alley to be voted on for improvements at the council's regular meeting tonight.

Meanwhile, several residents along the alley said they would at least like to see the holes filled with gravel or the road graded.

"It's like an obstacle course," UI senior Kim Webster, of 633 Dodge St., said. "Even at a slow speed on a moped or bike you would have to avoid the trenches or you could fall off."

Meese requests probe into his Wedtech ties

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Attorney General Edwin Meese, cleared once by a special prosecutor of favoritism and financial misconduct, asked for and received Monday a second independent counsel probe of his ties to the scandal-plagued Wedtech Corp.

Independent counsel James McKay, responding to a formal request to accept the case from Meese's deputy, Arnold Burns, agreed to expand his probe to include allegations of impropriety against the attorney general.

Burns' move followed Meese's request that "all questions" of possible wrongdoing in his dealings with Wedtech — while a top White House aide and in later associations with company principals — be referred to McKay, who already is investigating former White House aide Lyn Nofziger's lobbying on behalf of the company.

Meese maintained

through a spokesman that he would be cleared of wrongdoing.

In a letter to McKay, Burns asked the special prosecutor to "enlarge his current ongoing investigation" to include whether Meese violated federal law in "his relationship or dealings" with Wedtech, Nofziger, a San Francisco businessman with whom Meese invested $60,000, or his longtime friend and former attorney, E. Robert Wallach.

McKay is coordinating his probe under the 1978 Ethics in Government Act with ongoing investigations of the company in New York and Baltimore. Already, four Wedtech executives have pleaded guilty to bribing more than a dozen public officials.

UI junior earns 1987 NEH scholarship

The National Endowment for the Humanities has named UI junior Franklin L. Yoder a NEH Younger Scholar for 1987.

Yoder, a religion and history major from Kalona, Iowa, is one of 88 college students to receive the award. Winners were selected from 650 eligible applicants in a nationwide competition.

NEH Younger Scholars are expected to produce a substantial research paper with a bibliography that is submitted to the endowment for review.

Yoder will work on a project entitled "A Case Study of the Impact of the Agricultural Depression of 1920-40."

The Younger Scholars Award carries a stipend of $2,200.

Nursing conferences offered for credit

Continuing education credits will be awarded to nurses who attend two continuing education seminars held within the next week sponsored by the UI College of Nursing and eastern Iowa hospitals.

A conference on job risks and protection against transmittable diseases will be held at Grinnell General Hospital in Grinnell on Friday, May 15.

The program is designed to assist nurses in recognizing patients who might transmit infections to health care providers and will focus on decreasing the risks of contracting hepatitis, herpes, AIDS and chlamydia.

Featured speakers from UI Hospitals include Dorothy Rasley, nurse epidemiologist, and Stephen Streed, epidemiology education and systems coordinator.

The pre-registration fee for the all-day conference is $25. A workshop focusing on adult learning in the health care field will be held at Burlington Medical Center in Burlington on Tuesday, May 19.

The one-day session will highlight the wide range of teaching and learning activities demanded of today's health care providers. Discussion around development applications will reflect the difference between "classroom" approaches and those recommended of adult learners.

UI doctoral degree candidates Kathleen Kelly and Judith Murray will be the featured speakers.

The pre-registration fee is $27.

For more information on the two seminars contact Sandy Reed, Continuing Nursing Education, N216 Oakdale Hall.

Autologous blood transfusions offered

Officials at Mercy Hospital in Iowa City — in an attempt to lessen public fear of contracting AIDS through blood transfusions — said they are still offering autologous blood transfusions for patients scheduled for surgery.

An autologous blood donor has his or her own blood drawn and stored for possible use during upcoming surgery.

"We're actively encouraging people to ask their physicians about this option," Mercy Hospital Pathologist and Blood Bank Committee Chairman Douglas Schnetzler said. "The most important advantage is obvious. Receiving your own blood completely eliminates the risk of acquiring a blood transmitted disease."

The growing threat of AIDS has triggered a new look at the nation's blood supply, Schnetzler said. The supply is considered largely safe because of an AIDS antibody screening test.

But a small risk of contracting the disease through a blood transfusion still exists.

The potential donor for an autologous transfusion is someone with elective surgery scheduled. A maximum of four autologous units of blood can be drawn.

Mercy Hospital has made autologous donation available for three years.

Last-minute tax bill worries Branstad

DES MOINES (UPI) — Gov. Terry Branstad said Monday he may call the legislature back into special session to replace a $170 million tax bill with a proposal that cuts income tax rates.

Branstad, at his first news conference since lawmakers adjourned for the year at 3:25 a.m. Sunday, said he is concerned the tax bill passed during the final hours of the session will give Iowa the highest state income tax rates in the nation and discourage businesses from locating in the state.

"I have a goal of reducing the rates and making Iowa more competitive," Branstad said. "I'm disappointed we weren't able to get that accomplished this session."

THE BILL, WHICH makes

Iowa tax laws conform with recent changes in federal tax laws, would increase taxes an estimated 16 percent and leave the state's top tax rate at 13 percent.

Branstad asked lawmakers in January to reduce the number of tax brackets from 13 to two, with a top rate of 6 percent. He also proposed the elimination of a provision of the tax code allowing Iowans to deduct all their federal tax payments on their state returns.

Majority Democrats said they were unable to work out a compromise because Branstad refused to accept any plan with a top rate higher than 6 percent.

Branstad said he was willing to compromise and offered several alternatives to lawmakers during the final days of the session. But he and lawmakers "could not work things out."

"I'VE BEEN CALLED a wimp and I've been called too forceful. There are people in the legislature who will find something to call you, whatever," Branstad said. "I think it's time to forget the name calling and forget the finger pointing, and look at how we can pull together for this state's future."

On other topics, Branstad said he will sign a bill that increases the speed limit to 65 mph on rural interstates. He said he will hold a bill signing ceremony as soon as the measure hits his desk.

"The Department of Transportation has been working behind the scenes. The signs are already painted... Upon my signature they will be put up the same day," he said.

Branstad said he also plans to sign a $62.5 million bonding bill that will enable the Board of Regents to build a $26 million laser research center at the UI and a $38.5 million molecular biology center and five other projects at Iowa State University. The measure also contains $3 million for the remodeling of Latham Hall at the University of Northern Iowa.

The governor said he also plans to sign into law a bill requiring his future Board of Regents appointments to include equal numbers of men and women.

Branstad also said he has some "big concerns" about the $2.4 billion budget adopted by the legislature, saying lawmakers tried to camouflage its actual level of spending.

The Iowa City Police Department determined Monday that a woman could not prove her complaint against a police officer who arrested her.

Lynne M. Vermace, no address listed, filed a complaint against Iowa City Police Sgt. James Hazlett after Hazlett arrested her April 23 on charges of assault and interference with official acts after she failed to stop at four stop lights on her bicycle.

"Numerous statements were reviewed and citizens spoken to," a report from Iowa City Assistant Police Chief Ken Stock stated. "Upon review of all statements, we find allegations against Sgt. James Hazlett as unsubstantiated."

The department refused to give further information about the complaint, claiming it was a personnel matter.

Courts

An Iowa City man who was arrested on a charge of struggling with an Iowa City police officer made his initial appearance Monday in Johnson County District Court.

Jerry Lee Frantz, 39, of 635 S. Dodge St., was charged with interference with official acts causing injury, disorderly conduct and public intoxication after the incident Sunday at a residence at 141 Clapp St.

Court records state police were attempting to arrest Frantz after he was harassing his ex-girlfriend by raising his middle finger to her and occupants of the residence.

Iowa City police warned

Frantz that he would be arrested if he repeated the gesture, but Frantz disregarded the warning and told the occupants he would return after the arrest, court records state.

While police attempted to arrest Frantz, he resisted by trying to struggle free from the officers. One police officer suffered injuries from the struggle including several small cuts and an abrasion on the back of his entire forearm, court records state.

After the arrest, Frantz failed a sobriety test, court records state.

Frantz was released on his own recognizance. His preliminary hearing is scheduled for May 26.

Rienow, Slater hall residents engage in cross-street battle

By Joseph Levy
Assistant Metro Editor

Students living in Rienow and Slater residence halls engaged in a cross-street window battle late Sunday evening, leaving Grand Avenue covered with glass and other debris Monday morning.

In what is becoming an annual trench war, residents from all floors of the 12-story complexes battled "just about anything they could find" out of windows, one Rienow Resident Assistant said.

The two buildings, which face each other and are separated only by Grand Avenue, have battled traditionally during finals week for the past two years. Incidents from previous years include billiard balls being hurled from windows at cars and several shouting matches.

SCOTT STROHM, an RA in Rienow who watched most of the incident, said this year's battle also began as a shouting match, but later erupted into full-scale warfare.

"Pretty soon we had chaos," he said.

One Rienow resident reported a couch had been hurled from an upper floor at Slater, but Slater Hall Coordinator Ken Neuhaus denied the incident.

"I didn't see any couches laying around this morning," he said.

The Daily Iowan/Rod Faccio

So much glass from broken bottles had accumulated on Grand Avenue this morning that cars were forced to bypass the battlefield, Neuhaus said. Housekeeping employees from both buildings were forced to clean up the debris Monday morning.

RAs in both buildings kept a close eye on the event, and several students were reprimanded this morning, Neuhaus said.

HE ADDED THE incident didn't appear to involve alcohol, and that students were probably just trying to keep up the tradition of the pre-finals-week battle.

Neuhaus said he wasn't certain anything could be done to prevent residents from going overboard — especially on the eve of finals week.

"I don't know that there's much to do to prevent it," he said, explaining he hoped eventually students would begin to appreciate the dangers involved with flying glass. "The yelling thing and the noise thing can be a healthy release, but as far as throwing the glass and damaging the property, I'd be happy if the students didn't do it."

"Students are under a lot of pressure and we understand that," Neuhaus said.

Group alleges discrimination, files $10,000 suit against UI

By John Bartenhagen
Staff Writer

The UI Lesbian Alliance has filed a $10,000 suit against the UI charging it with sexual preference-based discrimination, alliance member Tracy Moore said Monday.

The suit came as a result of a decision by the UI Printing Service not to print the June 1986 issue of Common Lives/Lesbian Lives, a journal of lesbian culture produced by the Lesbian Alliance.

Although the UI Printing Service had printed two previous issues of Common Lives/Lesbian Lives and the June issue was originally accepted for printing, a decision was made not to print that issue because it contained photographs of an explicitly sexual nature.

JULIA MEARS, assistant to UI President James O. Freedman, explained to a subcommittee of the UI Human Rights Committee that UI administration has an unwritten policy against printing sexually explicit photographs involving nudity.

Moore said although that issue of the publication was eventually printed by another printer, the delay damaged both the journal's reputation and financial status.

"It damaged us by throwing the schedule off so that the June issue was published in September," Moore said. "Since we're a quarterly publication, it reduced our yearly revenues by one-quarter."

At first, Mears admitted the UI had caused the organization a loss of income, Moore said.

"BUT MEARS DID NOT understand what kind of figures we were talking about — she thought it was just a few hundred dollars," she said.

Moore added the reputation of the journal — which has a circulation of about 2,500 — may have suffered due to the gap in publication.

"Non-profit publications like this don't last too long anyway, usually less than two years," she said. "But our journal is six years old and we've developed a lot of credibility by coming out regularly."

In a report to the UI Administration, the committee concluded, "the ultimate reason why the unwritten policy prohibiting UIPS from publishing sexually explicit pictures was adopted and the reason why UIPS declined to publish (the June issue) was the lesbian affectional preference shown in the pictures."

THE COMMITTEE REPORT stated these decisions were in violation of the UI Policy on Human Rights, adding that printing service had previously published sexually explicit photographs, "presumably of a heterosexual variety."

Moore said when Mears was contacted by the alliance's attorney, Duane Rohovit, she indicated the UI would not implement the recommendations of the committee.

"It makes the committee look like window dressing," Moore said. "And what does it say about the UI's non-discrimination policies? Are they equally a facade or is there something to them?"

But UI Assistant Director of Admissions Virginia Gross, chairwoman of the Human Rights Committee, said UI administrators involved in responding to recommendations may have to consider factors not within the committee's focus.

"MY EXPERIENCE WITH the admission of foreign students leads me to believe that the central administration does take the recommendations of this committee seriously," she said.

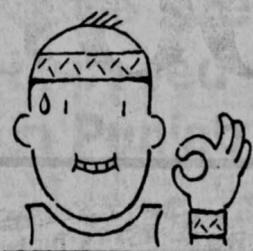

Moore said she is not surprised that the organization has encountered resistance from the UI.

"Iowa City has always been a liberal town and a leader in gay politics," she said. "But the UI has always lagged far behind. It's (human rights) policies usually align with what happened five or 10 years ago."

"You're not in the lesbian society long without realizing that you are subject to being controlled by the people that hold the power," she added. "So our validity as a group is tenuous at best."

Mears was unavailable for comment Monday.

Aircraft join Chinese troops to battle raging forest fire

BEIJING (UPI) — Cloud-seeding aircraft joined thousands of troops Monday to defend a city of 100,000 in northeastern China from a raging forest fire that has swept through four towns, killed 142 people and left 51,000 homeless.

The government-run China News Service said the fire had advanced Monday to within 13 miles of Tahe, about 900 miles northeast of Beijing in Heilongjiang Province.

The fire split into two parts, the China News Service said, with the western section advancing south toward Huzhong and the larger eastern half threatening Tahe, a city of 100,000 people, and a small settlement.

"We have not yet gained control of the fire," a Forestry Ministry official said. "We can't say when we will do so because communications in the area are very poor."

Aircraft equipped with dry ice, silver iodide and other chemicals took off Monday afternoon for the disaster area to seed clouds in an attempt to induce rain, a China News Service official said.

He said the blaze, which erupted in the Daxingan Mountains near the Soviet border last Wednesday, had weakened considerably because high winds that drove the flames forward at several miles per hour Sunday subsided Monday. Officials said the winds were expected to begin gusting again today.

About 15,000 men battling the blaze were expected to be helped by light rain and snow forecast for Monday.

MORE SOLDIERS AND firefighters were sent into the area Monday and three firebreaks were cleared in the forest to help control the blaze, spreading southeast in a front 110 miles long and 25 miles deep, authorities said.

The fire has swept through the county town of Mohe and destroyed Xilinj, a town of 20,000 people 90 miles northwest of Tahe, and the towns of Mu Er and Tuqiang between Xilinj and Tahe, the Forestry Ministry official said.

He said the blaze has also gutted "several villages," killed at least 142 people and seriously injured 88.

More than 51,000 people have been left homeless and have been settled in tents and other makeshift shelters. Some 27,000 people have been evacuated by train from Xilinj and Tuqiang.

The cause of the fire, which erupted simultaneously in several areas of the forest, has not been determined. China Daily said preliminary investigations showed that an oil leak from a bush-cutting machine might have ignited the fire.

State rule imposed in Punjab

NEW DELHI, India (UPI)—The government suspended the moderate Sikh administration of the strife-torn northern state of Punjab Monday and imposed direct federal rule for six months because of a surge in violence by Sikh separatists.

It was the second time the government has ordered that the state be ruled from New Delhi since Sikh extremists began their bloody campaign in 1983 to turn Punjab into the independent nation of Khalistan.

More than 250 people have died in Sikh extremist violence in Punjab since Jan. 1, one of the bloodiest periods in the more than 4-year-old campaign by the separatists.

Most of the attacks have been directed against Hindus in what officials say is an attempt by the extremists to scare members of the minority Hindu community into fleeing the predominantly Sikh state.

SECURITY FORCES in all northern states were put on alert in case of an extremist backlash against the announcement, the news agency Press Trust of India said.

"A situation has arisen in which the government of the state could not be carried out with the provisions of the constitution," a federal proclamation said. It said federal rule would be imposed in Punjab for six months.

Opposition legislators in Punjab and members of Parliament in New Delhi, alleging some Punjab Cabinet ministers maintain links with the extremists, had been demanding that Rajiv Gandhi's government dismiss the state's moderate Sikh government and impose direct federal rule.

But some observers portrayed the imposition of federal rule, known as "president's rule," as an effort by the Gandhi administration to woo voters in neighboring Haryana state, where the mostly Hindu electorate votes July 17 in assembly elections.

The elections are considered crucial to Gandhi, whose Congress (I) Party has not won a state election on its own since he came to power in October 1984.

Long-delayed trial begins for Barbie

LYON, France (UPI)—Klaus Barbie, a frail 73-year-old who as a Nazi Gestapo chief was called the "Butcher of Lyon," went on trial Monday for alleged World War II crimes and identified himself as Klaus Altmann, a Bolivian businessman.

About 1,000 people strained forward in silence as a pale, balding Barbie shuffled into the ornate courtroom and sat handcuffed in a defendant's box shielded from the audience by a bulletproof slab of glass a third of an inch thick.

The trial had been delayed repeatedly since Barbie was extradited to France in 1983 from Bolivia, where he lived for 30 years.

When the red-robed judge, Andre Cerdini, asked the defendant to identify himself, Barbie answered, "Altmann, Klaus" and said he was a "businessman" from La Paz, Bolivia, and was born Oct. 25, 1913, in Bad Godesburg, Germany.

ASKED WHERE THE name Altmann came from, Barbie said: "I have been Altmann since Oct. 30, 1957, when I took Bolivian nationality." Lawyer Charles Libman, one of the attorneys representing the civil parties who have joined the French government in its prosecution, said, "We want a more precise identity."

Barbie again said "Klaus Altmann."

Calling that a "false identity," Libman asked why Barbie now refused to correctly identify himself after admitting he was Klaus Barbie when he arrived in France in 1983.

"I will not respond to this question," Barbie said through his German interpreters.

BARBIE'S ATTORNEY, Jacques Verges, said Barbie had a Bolivian identity card and driver's license until they were stolen at St. Joseph prison last year.

Barbie is accused of fatally torturing one Jew, torturing others and deporting nearly 800 people, mostly Jews, to death camps.

Jury selection is expected to last at least seven weeks. Five men and four women were chosen today as potential jurors and three men and three women as potential alternates.

Thatcher looks to third term

LONDON (UPI) — Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher won royal approval Monday for a general election June 11 and instantly became odds-on favorite to gain an historic third straight term in power.

On orders of Queen Elizabeth II, the current Parliament will be dissolved May 18 and Britons will go to the polls 24 days later to decide who and which party will run the country for the next five years.

Thatcher, riding the crest of unexpected local election victories and a string of opinion poll successes, was immediately installed by bookmakers as 8-1 odds-on to become the first prime minister to win three outright election victories in a row.

LONDON'S FINANCIAL center reacted with record enthusiasm. Stocks opened 30 points higher and kept climbing, and the Financial Times' index leaped an unprecedented 53 points.

The 61-year-old Conservative prime minister told her Cabinet earlier Monday of her decision to shoot for an early election, then she drove the half mile from her 10 Downing St. residence to Buckingham Palace to seek the monarch's permission. In a formality rooted in tradition, the queen "has been graciously pleased to signify that she will comply with this request," said an official announcement from Downing Street.

The meeting between monarch and prime minister, who are known to be cordial but not close, lasted about one hour. Details were, as usual, not disclosed.

Thatcher came to power as the nation's first female prime minister in 1979, then gained re-election in a landslide in 1983.

IF SHE WINS again, she will become the first prime minister to gain three consecutive outright election victories, and will be on course to become the longest-serving leader in terms of unbroken service since Lord Liverpool's rule from 1812 to 1827.

Thatcher still has a full year to run on her current term, and in going for an early election she is risking a solid 134-seat majority the Conservatives now hold in the House of Commons.

But she was persuaded to take the chance by the Conservatives' surprise gains in last week's local elections in England and Wales, plus late opinion polls showing them 11 points ahead of their major opposition.

Most opinion polls predict a Parliamentary majority of 25 to 50 seats for the Conservatives. But Conservative Party chairman Norman Tebbit said his own computer readouts indicated a majority of 100 seats or more for Thatcher.

Tebbit, himself considered a leading candidate for Thatcher's mantle some day, told Independent Radio in London that he would put aside his own ambitions if Thatcher could continue as prime minister "until the year 2000."

The Conservatives' sizeable edge in opinion polls has been attributed, in part, to Labor's disarray through intra-party infighting between its moderates and left-wing extremists.

Thieves loot Polish jet wreckage

WARSAW, Poland (UPI) — Looters descended on the burning wreckage of the Polish LOT jetliner and stole rings and money from the 183 people killed in the crash, a state-owned newspaper reported Monday.

The report came Monday as a government commission continued its investigation into why the Ilyushin-62 slammed into the forest 53 minutes after taking off Saturday from Warsaw's Okecie airport on a flight to New York.

A spokesman for the government panel suggested Monday that the jetliner's steering system might have failed as the pilot was guiding the jetliner back to Warsaw.

Also Monday, LOT Polish Airlines announced that it will pay $75,000 to the survivors of the 172 passengers and 11 crew members killed in the crash.

Many of the American victims of the crash were from New York, Connecticut and New Jersey.

A youth newspaper reported Monday that witnesses saw a group of people running to the crash site two minutes after the jetliner went down.

The looters descended upon the crash site "to pull rings from the fingers of the bodies and to get rich on this cemetery," a witness told the newspaper.

Aquino's candidates take early lead

MANILA, Philippines — President Corazon Aquino's candidates took an early lead Monday in the first congressional elections in 15 years, but the vote was marred by violence that left at least 16 people dead.

Election officials estimated that 90 percent of the country's registered voters cast ballots.

The National Citizen's Movement for Free Elections, citing unofficial returns from less than 1 percent of polling stations, said Aquino's hand-picked candidates were winning 22 of the 24 seats being sought in the crucial Senate race.

Officials say they do not expect results for a day or two and do not expect a trend to emerge until later in the week.

Aquino hailed the election as the "most peaceful and honest" in Filipino history, but there were scattered incidents of gunfire and ballot theft. The military said 16 people died in the violence.

Derailed train car spews sulfuric acid

ELM CITY, N.C. — Deadly sulfuric acid spewing from a tanker car in a derailed CSX freight train car spread like a fog Monday over parts of Wilson County, forcing up to 3,000 people to flee their homes and jobs.

Authorities said 26 cars of a 137-car CSX train vaulted off the tracks about a mile south of Elm City and one of the derailed cars began spewing a cloud of concentrated sulfuric acid into the air.

No injuries were reported, but authorities ordered the area evacuated while they tried to contain the leak and neutralize the concentrated acid.

Norm Going, a CSX spokesman in Jacksonville, Fla., said the train was enroute from Hamlet, N.C., to Richmond, Va., and was going about 40 mph when it jumped the tracks. The cause of the accident was not immediately known.

Arlington Heights treasurer arrested

The Arlington Heights village treasurer, who fled to Canada after being charged with bank fraud in Illinois, pleaded guilty in Ontario Monday to weapons and stolen property violations.

Lee L. Poder fled to Canada Friday where he was arrested at the border and charged with possession of an unregistered gun, possession of stolen money and possession of stolen license plates.

He is accused of making an unauthorized investment of $20 million in Arlington Heights Village funds to buy U.S. Treasury bonds, then selling the bonds and transferring the proceeds to his personal bank accounts.

A deportation hearing before Canadian customs officials has been set for June 2, officials said.

Poder, 42, of Clarendon Hills, Ill., was arrested without resistance by Canadian customs officers when Poder tried to cross from International Falls, Minn., to Fort Frances, Ontario.

Park ends 'grad nights' after shooting

GURNEE, Ill. — A second "grad night" for high school seniors at Six Flags Great America amusement park has been canceled in light of the shooting of two youths last weekend, officials said.

"The decision is in keeping with the park's overall commitment to providing a safe, fun environment for all guests," Josephine Zammuto, public relations manager for the park, said in a statement Sunday.

Early Saturday, Timothy Pruitt and Reginald Norwood, both 18, Chicago, were shot and seriously wounded as hundreds of teens left the park at closing, police said.

Pruitt, who dropped out of Gage Park High School earlier this year, was shot in the face. Norwood, a student at the school, was shot in the stomach. Both were hospitalized in fair condition. No one has been charged in the shootings.

Editor expelled for marrying Asian

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa — The South African government has ordered the expulsion of a white British editor who is married to a South African woman classified under apartheid as an Asian, a colleague said Monday.

Jon Lewis, whose wife is considered a non-white under the rules of South Africa's system of racial separation known as apartheid, was denied permanent residency and ordered to leave the country within 30 days, the colleague said.

The expulsion of Lewis, 33, came against the backdrop of a government crackdown on racially mixed marriages.

Following a substantial move to the right in last week's whites-only election, the government began ordering racially mixed couples living in white areas to move to areas zoned for non-white racial groups.

Lewis is an editor of the South Africa Labor Bulletin.

McFarlane tells of choosing hostage

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Former national security adviser Robert McFarlane told Congress Monday he was asked to "play God" and choose one American hostage to be released after the first U.S.-approved shipment by Israel of arms to Iran.

A stone-faced McFarlane described in detail a meeting in early August 1985 involving President Ronald Reagan in which an Israeli plan for selling arms to Iran was proposed.

McFarlane said that within days of the time the Israelis first proposed the idea, Reagan made a decision to go ahead with attempts to approach moderate Iranians as suggested by David Kimche, director of the Israeli foreign ministry.

"Did there come a time when you received a call from an Israeli representative telling you that as a result, an American hostage would be allowed to go free?" Arthur Liman, chief counsel for the Senate select committee on the Iran-Contra scandal, asked McFarlane.

"Yes," McFarlane responded. He said the call was between Sept. 10-11.

"Was that a very unpleasant call?" asked Liman. "It was extremely disappointing," McFarlane said. "It was a report from Mr. Kimche in Israel that as a practical matter they had run into difficulties with the Iranian intermediaries . . . that the United States could expect one hostage to be released within a couple of days."

"Were you asked to play God and choose one hostage?" asked Liman.

"Yes," McFarlane said, pausing, "and I asked for Mr. (William) Buckley," the CIA station chief in Beirut.

He said he later chose the Rev. Benjamin Weir, a Presbyterian minister who was freed by the Moslem extremist Islamic Jihad in Lebanon Sept. 14, 1985. Buckley, it was learned, died in captivity, reportedly after being tortured to death.

U.S. will borrow funds to finance operations

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The House Ways and Means Committee, fearful the government will be forced to shut down because it is running out of money, voted Monday to finance federal operations with more borrowing.

Lawmakers endorsed a plan with two options. One would raise the debt ceiling high enough to pay for government activities through July 17. The other would permit enough borrowing to carry the government through the end of the next fiscal year on Sept. 30, 1988.

"I think the long-term extension would be the statesman-like thing to do," House Speaker Jim Wright of Texas said. "It's childish to play brinkmanship with a matter of this gravity."

THE CURRENT DEBT ceiling of $2.3 trillion will drop to $2.1 trillion on Friday unless Congress and President Ronald Reagan agree to an increase.

The government has enough available cash to conduct business until about May 28, administration officials said. After that date, the money will run out, leaving the government without cash for June benefits, the government payroll, contracts or debt payments.

"We cannot overestimate the effects of such a dereliction of duty," White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said.

The plan, approved by the committee on an unrecorded voice vote, would raise the debt ceiling to $2.32 trillion — enough to last about 60 days.

UI festival showcases skillful writing

By Hoyt Olsen
Staff Writer

ONE thing that the just-concluded UI Playwrights Festival proves is that writing an effective play is a very difficult undertaking.

For starters, there is the problem of audience. Poets are free to leap light-years beyond the expectations and interests of their readers because it is relatively inexpensive to print a chapbook, which may then achieve a modest nationwide distribution.

A playwright, to reach a major audience, must be produced repeatedly. Because few college or professional theaters can risk a production that may run heavily into the red, only plays with some commercial potential are likely to be staged even once.

And there are major obstacles to finding a theater audience in a nation of television watchers who have developed expectations based on the conventional, realistic narrative formats necessary to attract a mass audience. When innovative drama meets TV audience expectations, the result is some of the confusion overheard during the Playwrights Festival.

DURING A.M. Homes' play, The Coffin in the Living Room, two students assigned to attend a production sat behind me and proceeded to exchange comments frequently during the production, one sure sign of TV mentality brought to the theater.

Homes' play happens to use an absurdist approach to explore some very serious ideas about the American family as an institution. A father is dead, and his remains are on display in the family living room, where his adult children occasionally speak to him or offer him breakfast amid general disagreement between each other about Dad's state of health.

A doctor is eventually summoned to examine the body for signs of life; he does so by asking the deceased (among other things) to "name the dead Kennedys." When all finally agree that Dad is dead, the children put Mom on trial for murder, and variously accuse her of also being the root cause of most of their individual hangups, sexual and otherwise. Reality was cleverly examined through action that was far from realistic.

Meanwhile, behind me, Student A would say to Student B, "This is craazy." "Yeah," B would reply, "I can't make any sense of this at all." Then they would say it again. And again. They altered their routine when one female kissed another, making a combined noise roughly approximate to "Aooouugh."

THERE WERE SIMILAR audience problems during Andrea Kirchmeier's 3 Cats in a Rowboat, or Sharks in My Backyard, a whimsical mask drama (with musical accompaniment) that was often very funny, but seldom very concerned with "normal" cause-effect relationships. For instance, there is one scene where the sharks have disguised themselves as cats to fool the grotesque Fish Hunter, who is really hunting the cats, who have now disguised themselves as sharks — well, you get the drift.

The audience seemed to enjoy the play's unusual humor, with good reason. But during post-performance viewer responses, a number of those who spoke clearly felt a need to twist what they had seen into some more familiar form. Why would the Fish Hunter want to catch cats? What does it mean? The cats were a symbol for something, right? Were you making a political statement?

Unfortunately, the ground rules didn't permit the artists to respond to questions, a decision that frustrated some audience members.

THERE IS A DANGER in any writing program (from rhetoric classes to the Writers' Workshop) that an instructor's preferences may narrow the range of students' work. Judging from the festival plays, this is certainly not the case in the Playwrights Workshop.

Branko Dimitrijevic's Appealing to the Lowest Tastes of the Uneducated Audience was reminiscent of Hollywood comedies of the 1940s and '50s, despite its Hungarian setting. It was essentially a romantic comedy, with overtones of Billy Wilder's The Apartment, coupled with a fairly gentle satire of journalism under a totalitarian regime.

facing financial ruin happens to believe that an occasional human sacrifice is necessary to replenish the land's fertility.

Even in its attempt to be politically relevant, this play does not seem too far removed from many science fiction features of the 1950s (of the "Dare we tamper with nature, Dr. Petersen?" variety). The daughter's urban computer-programming boyfriend ("Interfacing is my life.") fills the role of the mad scientist who believes that technology can solve any problem.

William Whitman's Under the Boardwalk, the most uniformly polished and poetic of the plays I saw, dealt with the links between generations of a black family living on an island off the Georgia coast. In some ways the play seemed to be a dramatic fusion of Roots with One Hundred Years of Solitude. Whitman employs time jumps, a voodoo medium who sees both past and future ("It's like a radio that gets all the stations at once," she explains), and music alternating between African rhythms and American jazz to capture his subject.

There was also Todd Ristau's Bad Seed, the one production I missed. Ristau used werewolves as a tool to explore sexual awakening. There was, in short, an infinite variety to the plays offered as evening performances.

And a wide variety of writing skills was demonstrated in each. None of these plays is ready to leap to off-Broadway — but one or two of these playwrights may have the skill and stamina to make a lasting impression.

Edmonton ups series lead

DETROIT (UPI) — Mike Krushelnyski scored late in the second period to snap a 2-2 tie Monday night, carrying Edmonton to a 3-2 victory over the Detroit Red Wings and moving the Oilers within one victory of the Stanley Cup final.

The Oilers, who lead the best-of-seven Campbell Conference final series, 3-1, can advance to the Stanley Cup final against Philadelphia or Montreal with a victory in Game 5 Wednesday in

NHL Playoffs

Edmonton.

Krushelnyski scored the game-winner with one minute, 14 seconds left in the second on a low, 13-foot slap shot that went through the legs of Detroit goalie Glen Hanlon. Wayne Gretzky set up the goal by drawing in a Red Wing defender with a pump-fake and sliding the puck across the ice to Krushelnyski.

Detroit had several good chances to tie the game in the third period but Edmonton goalie Grant Fuhr made every save.

THE OILERS RALLIED to knot the score 2-2 when Glenn Anderson fired a 25-foot shot through Hanlon's legs at 5:34 of the second.

Detroit took a 2-1 lead in the second when Shawn Burr and Gerard Gallant scored 2:11 apart. Burr tied the score 1-1 just 22 seconds into the period when he pushed a rebound of his own shot under a sliding Fuhr.

Gallant gave the Red Wings a 2-1 edge at 2:32 when he slipped a backhand behind Fuhr.

Dave Hunter gave Edmonton a 1-0 lead at 17:30 of the first period when he batted in a rebound of teammate Reijo Ruotsalainen's shot from five feet.

Two Hawks prepare for hoop trials

By Eric J. Hess
Assistant Sports Editor and United Press International

Two Iowa basketball roommates — Roy Marble and B.J. Armstrong — will be heading for Colorado Springs, Colo., Wednesday in hopes of gaining a spot for the 1987 Pan American Games to be held in Indianapolis.

Marble and Armstrong, stalwarts in Iowa's recent 30-5 season under first-year Coach Tom Davis, will be competing against 57 other players who accepted invitations for the five-day tryouts.

"It's a very big honor," Marble said.

Twelve players and three alternates will be picked to represent the United States at this summer's Pan Am Games.

A FIVE-MEMBER selection committee made up of Indiana's Bob Knight, Arizona's Lute Olson, Louisville's Denny Crum, Wisconsin-Eau Claire's Ken Thompson and Georgetown's John Thompson. Thompson will also coach the United States at the 1988 Olympic Games in Seoul, South Korea.

Marble said he expects the five-member committee to be looking for several attributes when choosing the team.

"I think they'll look for leadership," Marble guessed, adding that a possessing a winning attitude may also be a key factor. "Basically someone who'll give their all on the court."

Marble said Crum and Michigan State Coach Jud Heathcote will be leading the coaching staff for the Pan American Games.

"They'll stick to something basic," Marble said during a break of studying for finals.

MARBLE, WHO WILL join Armstrong as juniors for Davis next season, said he thinks the coaching staff will organize offenses and defenses structured with simplicity in mind, gearing towards plays which use the raw talent of the players selected.

Marble, the Flint, Mich., resident who has led the Hawkeye scoring attack for his first two seasons as a forward, will be trying out at the No. 2 guard position.

"He'll be at the point," Marble added of Armstrong, who was unavailable for comment.

B.J. Armstrong

But while some of the nation's best talent is expected to be at the tryouts, Marble said he won't be paying a lot of attention but rather showing the committee what he can do with a basketball.

"Whatever happens happens," he said, adding that in addition to fine tuning his skills, he has also been on a weight-lifting program.

MARBLE'S GOALS DO include a trip to the 1988 Seoul Olympics. And the invitation to the Pan American tryouts is just a few steps from that plateau.

"That's one of my No. 1 goals — to make the Olympics," Marble said.

At a news conference Monday in Louisville, Ky., Crum said Navy center David Robinson will more than likely be the foundation of the U.S. team.

Crum predicted the bigger lane used in international competition will benefit a player of Robinson's size and talents.

The 7-foot Robinson, who was given a waiver and will not attend the tryouts because of school and military obligations.

Crum spoke at a news conference at Crawford Gym on the Louisville campus where the Pan Am team will hold its final practices in July. The team will play exhibitions July 28 in Indianapolis and Aug. 1 in Louisville.

Tennis pros allowed into Seoul Olympics

ISTANBUL, Turkey (UPI) — The International Olympic Committee Monday formally approved the eligibility of tennis professionals at the 1988 Seoul Olympics.

"It was predictable this was going to go through after being unanimously recommended by the Executive Board," Robert Helmick, president of the U.S. Olympic Committee, said.

"It is not a dramatic shift because we have had professionals in Olympic Games for some time. But tennis is a large jump, it is a fully integrated sport drawing together amateurs and professionals."

The move, which returns tennis to the Olympics after a 64-year interval, was approved by consensus without a vote.

Philippe Chatrier of France, president of the International Tennis Federation, learned of the decision in Paris.

coaches, promoters and managers are also banned.

THE ONLY REWARDS will be Olympic medals. A player may not accept any form of financial reward "unless such payment has been established by the IOC in respect of the Olympic team."

"It was our goal to help the International Federation have the sport of tennis back in the Olympics," said Willi Daume of West Germany, chairman of the IOC eligibility commission. "The best tennis players in the world should have the right to participate in the Olympic Games."

"I have spoken with nearly all the top players in the world and all of them agreed the Olympic tennis tournament would be for the athletes themselves, the No. 1 in tennis."

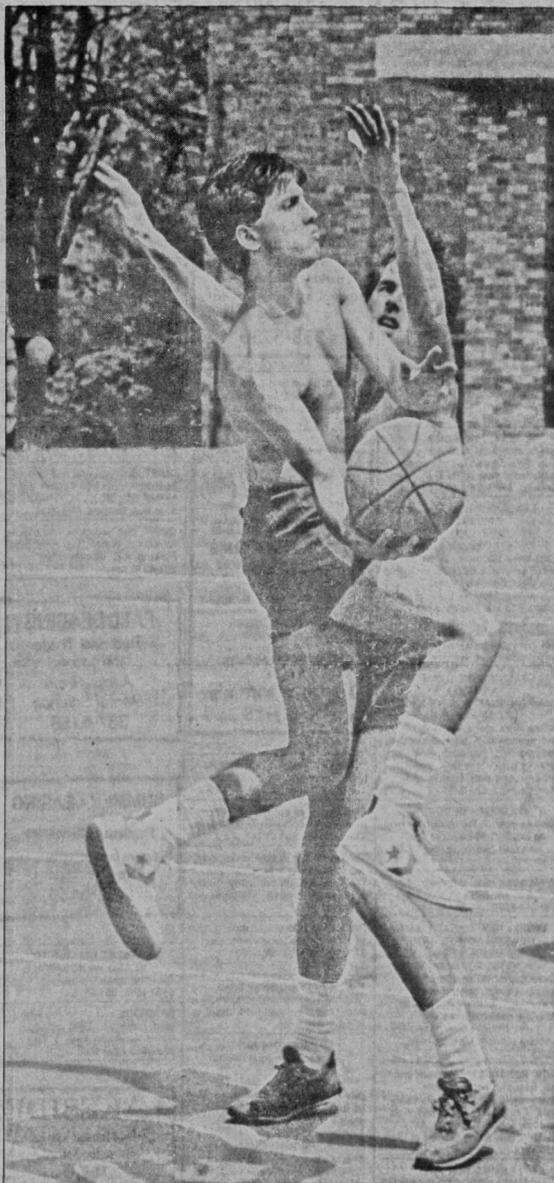

DAUME SAID IF THE tournament had been restricted there could be an Olympic champion who is not even the best player in his club.

"It is much more important that the Olympic Games are for the elite of the world, the best in the world, not third or fourth best," he said.

But although such a player as West Germany's Boris Becker would be eligible, there would be no place for the world's No. 1 player — Ivan Lendl, the Czechoslovakian who lives in the United States.

"Ivan Lendl is not eligible because he refuses to play Davis Cup for Czechoslovakia," Daume said. "If he is nominated by his country for the Davis Cup, he must play in order to be eligible for the Olympics."

LENDL HOPES TO become a U.S. citizen. Daume said if Lendl played in the Davis Cup for his adopted country he could represent the United States at the Olympics.

Sailing club finishes season on down note

By Marc Bona
Staff Writer

The UI Sailing Club closed its season on a disappointing note, finishing seventh out of nine clubs in the Midwest Dinghy Championships held at Madison, Wis.

Host school Wisconsin-Madison took top honors and earned a berth at Nationals, which will be held at Kings Point, N.Y., May 20.

"We've done really well," UI Club Coach Bob Woodward said of his club's season. In spring regattas, the UI finished first on two occasions, third once and seventh once.

Woodward blamed the club's poor showing on the club's main weakness — sailing in strong winds.

"When the wind blows you need the weight to keep the boat flat, which makes it go fast, and we just don't have the weight," he said.

The winds on the Madison waters were measured at 20-25 knots, according to Woodward.

The club will compete next in the Nevins Trophy, Sept. 12-13 at Long Island, N.Y.

"We sailed against some of the toughest schools around," Woodward said. "We're not heading home with our tails between our legs."

• The Hawkeye Soccer club traveled to Cedar Falls, Iowa, competed in the Northern Iowa Invitational and came away with the best record of any participating club in the round-robin tournament.

The Hawkeye club, which finished the tournament with a 2-1-1 record, began play inauspiciously with a 3-3 tie against Luther. The club then beat Northern Iowa, 2-1, and blanked the Waterloo Strikers, 3-0, to advance to the championship game, where Northern Iowa edged the Hawkeye club, 3-2.

Before the Hawkeye players knew what hit them, Northern Iowa had jumped to a quick 3-0 halftime lead. Despite a two-goal comeback attempt, the clock ran out on the Hawkeye club.

Scoring two goals apiece for the Hawkeye club during the round-robin tournament were Rodrigo Carraminana, Walid Afiti, Wes Kachingive and Raul Curto. Jeremy Sawadogo added one goal.

The club will see action May 24 against the Cedar Rapids Comets at 1 p.m. at the Hawkeye Drive Apartments' field. The club will travel to Waterloo May 31 and June 7 to play in the "My Waterloo Days" tournament.
