Branstad approves speed lift to 65 mph

DES MOINES (UPI) — Motorists began driving 65 mph legally on Iowa's rural interstate highways for the first time since the Arab oil embargo Tuesday, as Gov. Terry Branstad signed into law a bill repealing the 13-year-old 55 mph limit.

The bill, which passed on the final day of the legislative session affects travelers on approximately 670 miles of Iowa's 800-mile interstate highway system. The speed limit remains 55 mph on all other highways and on interstates in the Des Moines, Sioux City, Council Bluffs, Cedar Rapids, Iowa City, Waterloo and Davenport metropolitan areas.

"We will now have a higher speed limit on interstate highways," Branstad said as he signed the bill at 11:36 a.m. Tuesday.

"I think if the people drive cautiously we can live with the 65 mph and still have safe motoring on the interstates, but I think it's important to continue to abide by the 55 mph speed limit on the rest of the highways in Iowa," Branstad said.

BRANSTAD SAID he signed the bill even though he objects to a provision in the new law which prohibits insurance companies from raising their premiums for minor speeding infractions in areas where the posted speed limit is between 35 mph and 55 mph.

"I have some concerns about that. I think we need to look carefully at the impact it could have on insurance premiums and whether it's fair to the individuals that are not involved with speeding convictions," Branstad said.

The bill reached Branstad's desk Tuesday morning after receiving the necessary signatures of Lt. Gov. Jo Ann Zimmerman and House Speaker Don Avenson, certifying its passage in both chambers of the Legislature.

ALTHOUGH THE BILL took effect immediately, motorists could not legally drive 65 mph for several hours in some areas until state transportation workers posted the new speed limit along the highways.

DOT maintenance engineer Lee Smithson said his crews spent the entire afternoon Tuesday riveting metal plates to 263 existing signs showing the new 65 mph speed limit. DOT crews also erected 36 "speed zone ahead" signs at the outskirts of urban areas warning motorists to slow down, and placed another 36 signs showing the urban speed limit at 55 mph.

All 335 signs were erected by nightfall, Smithson said.

UI officials disagree over success of attracting funds

By Shawn Plank
Staff Writer

The Iowa Legislature approved a number of projects affecting state universities before adjourning this past weekend, but UI officials disagreed Tuesday how successful the public universities were in attracting funds from the assembly.

The legislature boosted faculty salaries, increased financial aid to students and passed a $65.6 million bonding resolution, funding high tech research facilities, including the proposed UI Laser Center.

UI Vice President for Academic Affairs Richard Remington said while the passage of the bonding resolution was a bright spot, it wasn't necessarily a good year for state Board of Regents institutions in the legislature.

"I wouldn't call it a good year compared to other components of higher education in the state," he said.

THE STATE'S SMALLER, privately-owned colleges fared better during the legislative session, Remington said. Lawmakers increased tuition grants to private college students by $3.7 million.

But UI State Relations Director Frank Stork, who lobbied the legislature during the four-month session, said the universities fared well.

"In my opinion, it was a good year for the regents institutions as well at the University of Iowa," Stork said. "I believe the legislature and the governor responded to the regents top priorities."

One of the priorities was raising faculty salaries. In November, UI President James O.

Freedman and Iowa State University President Gordon P. Eaton advocated raising student tuition to boost salaries by 13 percent. The presidents said the UI and ISU were losing faculty members because salaries at the two schools were low in relation to comparable universities.

THE STATE appropriated about $35 million for salary increases for all state employees, Stork said. The state Department of Management will allocate the amount to be given to state agencies and the universities.

The 13 percent increase will include 5 percent from state appropriations, 6 percent from the tuition increase and 2 percent from internal reallocation of funds at each university, Stork said.

McFarlane: Reagan not responsible

Former security adviser admits misleading panel

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Robert McFarlane, summarizing two days of testimony Tuesday on the U.S. arms sales to Iran and the White House scheme to skirt the ban on military aid to Nicaraguan rebels, absolved President Ronald Reagan of blame in the foreign policy scandal.

The former national security adviser told congressional panels investigating the Iran-Contra affair that to protect himself, he misled lawmakers last year in testimony about the scandal that has plagued Reagan with his most severe crisis of his presidency.

However, McFarlane said: "I believe . . . that President Reagan's motives and direction to his subordinates throughout this enterprise has always been in keeping with the law and national values. I don't think he is at fault here and if anybody is, I am."

McFARLANE HAS SPENT this week testifying about the two-year White House effort to circumvent the ban on military aid to the Contra rebels by drawing on varying kinds of help from other countries to support the force.

He said that at the outset, the administration believed it could easily find legal ways around the Boland Amendment, but it immediately became apparent the plan to keep the Contras armed and in the field would run into murky questions about any U.S. official's involvement in soliciting private aid for the rebels.

Under questioning by chief House committee counsel John Nields, McFarlane also testified he edited a White House chronology last November to hide Reagan's approval of the early overtures to Tehran's radical Islamic government because of the legal questions about Israel's arms transfers to Iran in August and September 1985.

THE WHITE HOUSE chronology was used to brief Reagan for his Nov. 19 news conference, in which he insisted that no third country was involved in the operation. Twenty minutes after the news conference, the White House issued a statement correcting the president — a third country, Israel, had conducted the early sales.

Most critical to the chronology was determining when Reagan approved the first arms sales, conducted for the United States by Israel in August and September of 1985. Those deals were not covered by Reagan's January 1986 national security "finding" approving U.S. efforts to open a door to Tehran with weapons — and to purchase freedom for the American hostages in Lebanon.

McFarlane said administration officials were concerned about the U.S. approval of the Israeli sales since they were not covered by the finding.

EVEN THOUGH McFarlane had been out of government for more than a year — he resigned Dec. 4, 1985, as national security adviser — he was connected to a computer system that gave him access to National Security Council documents, including the chronology.

His successor, John Poindexter, directed the writing of the chronology, and McFarlane said he suggested several changes to "gild" Reagan's approval of the Israeli sales.

The new language in the chronology said Israel had gone forward with the arms sales in the autumn of 1985 and the United States had agreed to it after the weapons were in Tehran.

In addition, McFarlane said he was not fully forthcoming in testimony last December about his knowledge of Saudi Arabia's contributions to the Contras, which eventually totaled $32 million in 1984 and 1985.

NIELDS QUESTIONED McFarlane with delicately worded phrases, and the retired Marine colonel sat bolt upright and told Nields to take off the kid gloves because he was not "a fragile flower."

Apparently despondent over his role in the scandal, McFarlane attempted suicide Feb. 9 with an overdose of Valium. He now is under treatment with anti-depressants but appeared hale during his appearance before the panel.

After the hearing, Sen. Howell Heflin, D-Ala., said, "McFarlane was trying to tell the truth. He does engage in language gymnastics. You have to press him to make sure you get the full story. . . . He's basically trying to tell the truth but you've to push him."

Asked if there was a coverup, Heflin said, "That's one interpretation of it. . . . It has some of that appearance."

Student-athletes fall victim to 'crime'

By Steve Williams
Assistant Sports Editor

There's a crime taking place in the United States — the crime of luring student-athletes who have dreams of pursuing professional athletic careers to college and university campuses.

Aaron Leonard was a football player for Iowa in 1973-78. And of 30 freshmen who came to the UI on an athletic scholarship in 1973, Leonard was one of only eight to receive a degree.

Leonard, from the Hill District of Pittsburgh, saw athletics as a "way out." But when an injury eliminated that escape route, Leonard did the only thing he could. He pursued his diploma and tried to make his way through the job market.

But Leonard is back in school again, searching for a new, useful degree — one he didn't get the first time around. To survive, he drives a bus more than 40 hours a week and works at KRUI, the UI's radio station, an additional 20 hours.

THERE HAVE been several changes in the Iowa football program since Leonard's days in uniform, but problems remain.

Players are still having a hard time graduating, despite Coach Hayden Fry's winning record.

"Once I was finished playing, I was pretty much on my own as far as the athletic department was concerned," Leonard said.

"I had to learn to play a sport all year long and handle school as well, and once I was finished, they never bothered to help me."

Leonard realized college athletics weren't all they were cracked up to be. He says he discovered coaches were interested in winning at any cost, and if grades had to suffer, so be it.

Of the 30 freshmen who came to the UI with Leonard in 1973 — a time when Iowa's team was one of the Big Ten's worst — only 26.7 percent received degrees.

IN THE PAST six seasons, a time when academic success by athletes has been strongly stressed, the graduation rate for football players from urban areas is still only 36.7 percent.

"It's hard to speculate on how the environment affects these athletes, but we try to recruit players who will try to be the best student-athlete they can," Iowa Athletic Director Bump Elliott said. "We can't go to class for them, but we do as much as we can to promote academics to the athlete."

"We've run into many cases where students from inner-city high schools will receive special treatment just because they are star athletes and as a result, they can't even read and write," Lyle Shannon, UI professor of urban research, said. "If it was not for athletics, many of them would never even have a shot at

NU employees file equal pay complaint

About 400 female managerial/professional employees at Nebraska University have been subjected to unlawful wage discrimination because of their sex, according to two women who have filed a complaint with the federal Equal Opportunity Commission in Denver.

The women, Queen Foreman and Rosalind Fisher, are employed by the university's personnel department, and discovered the discrepancy in December 1985 when they learned that a man in their department was doing the essentially the same job they were, but was paid $2,500 more a year.

Foreman said they investigated the budget books and discovered many women were receiving less pay for equal work. When they approached university officials about the issue, the run-around began, she said.

Foreman said they were offered money to resolve the issue — to shut up, but refused because the school gave no reason for the salary differences. She said issue is not money, but the reason for the discrimination.

University officials contend the allegations have no merit, but a Lincoln, Neb., attorney said losing the cases could cost the university millions of dollars in back pay.

Suit evidence: IUPUI degrees not valid

Two former sociology professors at IU-Purdue University at Indianapolis filed a $4 million lawsuit against the IU Board of Trustees, claiming their contractual rights, freedom of speech and due process have been violated.

Kenneth Colburn Jr. and Robert Khoury filed the complaint, claiming they were not rehired by the school, while another employee who was fired for serious errors in student records was rehired later.

The former professors allege the school's recorder made errors in student records that would invalidate nearly 20 percent of the school's liberal arts degrees awarded since 1975.

The recorder, Rose Gaither, was fired in March 1985, but then rehired as a secretary. The lawsuit claims this case is an example of the kind of favoritism and politics that determined who was hired or reappointed to their positions at the school.

Incident sparks growing racial tensions

A thoughtless fraternity serenade recently ignited growing racial tensions at Oklahoma State University.

Sigma Alpha Epsilon fraternity members serenaded certain sorority houses dressed in black face makeup and carrying a burning emblem of their fraternity — in preparation for the house's "Plantation Ball" party.

Black student leaders say they take the insensitive event to be a racial slur, and when considered with the growing number of similar incidents on campus, marks the need for Oklahoma State to formulate a policy on racism and discrimination.

The fraternity issued a formal apology for the event, but one black student leader at nearby Oklahoma University expressed surprise that the tradition could have continued so long in the past without student protest.

Report: IU education quality declining

A recent report by Indiana University students, faculty and administrators states the quality at the school is declining.

The Strategy Group on Academic Preparation and Achievement's report states that many students at the university's Bloomington, Ind., campus lack basic skills in communications, mathematics and science, are unable to deal with moral issues and lack appreciation of history, the arts and cultural diversity. These areas are among the skills or experiences the Association of American Colleges describes as "basic to a coherent undergraduate education."

The report contains a disclaimer stating that it is not meant to imply that all or even most of the school's undergraduates are seriously deficient in all of these areas. Instead the report states that student's perceptions of their college preparation don't agree with faculty views on student preparation.

University officials say the report's results will not be acted upon until fall.

Democratic lawmakers blast Branstad's special session

DES MOINES (UPI) — A special legislative session would be foolish unless the Democrat-controlled Legislature and Republican Gov. Terry Branstad can craft a compromise tax reform bill beforehand, Democratic leaders said Tuesday.

"I see no good reason to come back unless he has a viable plan for tax reform," House Speaker Don Avenson, D-Oelwein, said at a news conference.

Branstad hinted Monday he is considering a special session this summer because he does not approve of a $170 million tax bill lawmakers sent him during the closing hours of the regular session early Sunday.

Branstad said the bill would raise state income taxes an average of 16 percent and give Iowa the highest state income tax in the nation.

AVENSON AND Senate Majority Leader Bill Hutchins, D-Audubon, said Branstad caused the stalemate over tax reform by insisting lawmakers cut the state's top tax rate from 13 percent to 6 percent, and by alienating his fellow Republicans by proposing the elimination of a provision of current law allowing Iowans to deduct all their federal tax payments on their state returns.

"After three and a half months of us trying to reach a compromise it would seem kind of foolish to spend the taxpayers dollars in calling us back unless there is some kind of compromise worked out ahead of time," Hutchins said. "I question whether that could happen."

Avenson said by calling for the elimination of federal deductibility, Branstad lost the support of Republicans in the Legislature who have fought for years to retain the provision.

"UNFORTUNATELY the governor's leadership was a very divisive style of leadership. He beat up on his own (party)," Avenson said. "He failed to reflect his own party's philosophy and priorities and he therefore caused a lot of problems."

On another topic, Hutchins, who owns a dry cleaning business, said he was willing to "take the heat" for getting an amendment approved to a bill that will lift the state's 4 percent sales tax now placed on plastic bags used by dry cleaners.

"I don't make any apologies," he said. "I think many legislators end up getting things accomplished in a bill that probably does affect them."

Seat belt use rises in Iowa

AMES (UPI) — Nearly three times as many Iowans are wearing seat belts when they travel the state's highways than in June, just before the state required drivers and front seat passengers to buckle up, transportation officials said Tuesday.

Gus Horn, of the Iowa Department of Transportation's Safety Office, said a survey of 17,000 motorists by the DOT and the Iowa Highway Patrol last month showed 63 percent were obeying the law.

A similar survey taken before the law took effect showed only 23 percent of Iowa motorists wore seat-belts, he said.

Horn said seat belt use was highest on Iowa's interstates.

An Iowa City man who was arrested on a charge of hitting an Iowa City police officer in the face while the officer was arresting the man's brother made his initial appearance Tuesday in Johnson County District Court.

James Thomas Miller, 18, of RR 7, was charged with assault causing injury and interference with official acts after the incident which occurred Friday at 102 E. Burlington St.

Court records state Miller ran from police after an officer told him he was under arrest.

When the officer attempted to chase Miller, Miller's brother held the officer back.

While the officer was arresting Miller's brother for interference, Miller came back and tried to free his brother by hitting the officer in the face and nose. After Miller ran a second time, he came back and hit the officer in the head four times, court records state.

The officer suffered several injuries including a cut on his upper lip and in the mouth and a bloody nose, court records state.

Miller was being held Tuesday in the Department of Corrections. His preliminary sentence is scheduled for May 26.

An Iowa City man who was arrested on a charge of igniting a board on fire to see inside his apartment because his lights were out made his initial appearance Tuesday in Johnson County District Court.

James E. Dye, 40, of 507 Iowa Ave., was charged with reckless use of fire and public intoxication after the incident Tuesday at his residence.

Court records state Dye's neighbor notified Iowa City police officers that Dye was swinging a burning board.

When officers arrived at Dye's residence, they found him holding a charred board with a can of gasoline near him.

Dye told police he was not attempting to burn the house down, but he was going to use the fire to see inside his apartment because his lights were out and he didn't want to go into a dark apartment, court records state.

A neighbor reportedly put the fire out before the officers arrived, court records state.

Court records state Dye failed a sobriety test after he was arrested.

Dye was released on his own recognizance. His preliminary hearing is scheduled for May 26.

Council delays decision on paving project

By Carol Monaghan
Staff Writer

William Ambrisco

Single home owners told Iowa City councilors Tuesday an alley paving project that charged the same per foot to apartment owners as single home owners was not an equitable system.

The Iowa City council voted to delay a decision on the project because the six councilors needed for a majority vote were not present. Two of seven councilors were absent.

Mayor William Ambrisco said one alley paving project south of Dodge and Lucas Streets, thought earlier to meet with too much disapproval from property owners, may yet be negotiable because one apartment owner along the alley agreed to pay above his share of the assessment outlined by law.

But single property owners along at least one of the alleys, bordering Bowery Street between Dodge and Johnson streets, objected to paying for improvements to the alley that they said are needed because of increased development in the area — development they objected to originally.

"I ALREADY LIVE below the poverty level," Peter Cross, 608 Johnson St., said. "I am more frightened than threatened by a project I could not begin to pay back in a lifetime even if I did not have a pacemaker."

Sven Armens, 617 S. Dodge St., said he and his wife have seen "the entire area degenerate" since apartment developments were allowed.

"The multi-family housing sprawled over the entire property with no allowances on a dead end alley with no outlets to either Dodge or Johnson streets," he said in a letter to the city. "This caused excessive traffic with accompanying noise and dust, a breaking down of the roadway, and speeding by mostly student tenants which, on an improved road, can only further threaten dangers to our grandchildren and our pets."

BUT AT LEAST one apartment owner in the area said the alley is a "no man's land" and that the city should take at least some responsibility for its upkeep.

"I am more than a little concerned the council decided to scrap the project," Joe Holland of 120½ Washington St. said. "There is a saying in the city that if you don't come in before the public hearing you lost the battle. In a sense, that rings true here."

Holland said the dust was so bad, residents along the alley could not leave the windows open and chink holes were so deep that a vehicle could be damaged.

"The only solution is to pave the alley," Holland said.

The council is required to have at least six votes before the project can pass, and several councilors have already expressed their objection to one project.

Three alleys were originally considered for paving. These included the one south of Bowery Street between Dodge and Lucas streets; an alley behind the Iowa City Press-Citizen; and between off Bowery between Dodge and Johnson streets.

Smoking policy snuffed out by Iowa City School Board

By James Cahoy
Staff Writer

An attempt to allow smokers a limited right to smoke in Iowa City Schools failed to pass at the Iowa City School Board meeting Tuesday night, as the board moved closer to banning smoking.

The board turned down, by a 4-3 vote, the second reading of a policy which would have allowed for separate areas to be designated for smokers in Iowa City schools.

The vote may signal defeat for attempts to allow smokers a limited right to smoke in Iowa City schools. The board will consider a policy which would completely ban smoking at its next meeting. At least three of the board members — Board President Randall Jordison, Vice-President Lynne Cannon and board member Craig Gjerde — are known to favor such a policy.

BUT BOARD MEMBER David Wooldrik, who voted against the policy, said he was not sure he would vote for a total ban on smoking.

During the discussion Tuesday night, board members argued the pros and cons of allowing designated areas for smoking.

Board member Orville Townsend, who voted in favor of the policy, said he was concerned that a total ban on smoking would be "punitive."

"I don't feel comfortable telling someone else what to do," Townsend said. "I would like to see us have a limited smoking policy and respect the rights of smokers."

Board member Ellen Widiss also supported the policy as a "temporary" move.

"We could see how this policy works and then decide where to go from there," Widiss said.

BUT JORDISON said he thought smoking should be banned in the schools, and said any attempt to allow limited smoking would not be sufficient.

"I think we would really be falling short if we do anything less than ban smoking," Jordison said.

Cannon agreed, and said the proposed policy was backing off from what the school board had proposed at its meeting two weeks ago.

"I had thought the board's intent at the last meeting was for a policy to ban smoking," Cannon said.

Iowa City Schools Superintendent David Cronin suggested that the policy could be made workable by designating not only rooms but specific times for smokers.

But Jordison said he thought that even designating specific hours would infringe on the rights of smokers.

"I'm concerned that the place that would be used would be the teacher's lounge, and it would be difficult to designate any time when smokers could use it," Jordison said.

A total ban on smoking is favored by a majority of Iowa City teachers, according to a poll conducted by the school district in April. According to the survey of 389 teachers, 200 favored the proposed ban on smoking, 145 disagreed with the ban and 44 offered no opinion either way.

Unfair treatment

Next week, while most UI students are enjoying a well-deserved break from school, university administrators and faculty members will be busy implementing policy, assigning final grades and making preparations for upcoming semesters. While these tasks will keep administrators busy for a number of weeks, re-evaluating the university's policy on discrimination needs to be added to the list.

Last week, the UI Lesbian Alliance filed a $10,000 suit against the university charging officials with discrimination — sexual preference-based discrimination. Members of the group are taking action against the UI in response to the university's refusal to print an issue of Common Lives/Lesbian Lives.

Although two previous issues had been published by UI Printing Service, administrators refused to publish last June's volume because it contained sexually explicit photographs. According to Julia Mears, assistant to UI President James O. Freedman, "unwritten university policy" prohibits the printing of such material.

Lesbian Alliance members and a UI subcommittee contend, however, that the issue was halted because the pictures depicted homosexuals, rather than heterosexuals.

"The ultimate reason why the unwritten policy prohibiting UIPS from publishing sexually explicit pictures was adopted and the reason why UIPS declined to publish (the issue) was the lesbian affectional preference shown in the pictures," states a UI Human Rights subcommittee report.

This allegation of such blatant discrimination is alarming. One would expect censorship of this nature to occur in a less liberal environment; certainly not in a university community where individual freedom and the expression of ideas is highly valued. But the reason why UI officials now appear concerned is more disturbing.

While the censoring of ideas may bother some officials, the financial implications of the case appear to be causing the most apprehension. According to alliance member Tracy Moore, Mears initially admitted that university action had caused the group to lose revenue. But little action was taken; that is until officials realized the group had lost substantially more than a few hundred dollars, Moore said.

The UI has looked into the issue — the issue of economic loss, that is. And what action, if any, the university takes, as a result of the subcommittee's report still remains to be seen. It's not too late, however, for administrators to start focusing on the real issues of this case — discrimination and censorship rather than the possible loss of a lawsuit.

A truly embarrassing display

By Monica Seigel

What you're about to read may lead you to believe that I dislike fraternities. But before anyone makes that judgment, let me say it's just not true. Some of my best friends are Greeks.

About two weeks ago, I attended the annual Take Back the Night rally and march. It was a very impressive event; obviously the women who planned it had worked very hard.

The spirit of the people who participated in the rally lies beyond description. About 500 people gathered to protest violence against women. For almost two hours they listened and sang and cheered about advancements being made to end discrimination against and harassment of women.

From the Metro Desk

At the end of the rally, all were invited to join in a candlelight march around the UI campus and Iowa City on a route highlighted by "trouble spots" for women — areas where cases of sexual assault had been reported.

THE MARCH STARTED out with much the same spirit as the rally. But as the demonstrators marched down Clinton Street, the mood changed a bit.

On Clinton Street, the marchers were greeted by a number of people who, ignorant of even what issue was being addressed, yelled profanities and harassed the protesters. None of these so-called counter-protesters, however, topped — or I guess I should say bottomed — the behavior of several "gentlemen" at the Lambda Chi Alpha fraternity house.

These boys — distracted from their party for a moment — put down their beers, pulled down their pants and "mooned" the marchers as they passed by.

Pretty classy, fellas. Pretty mature.

A Daily Iowan photographer captured the moment on film (with the Lambda Chi Alpha house letters looming in the background) and for a second I thought we should print the pictures to "embarrass the bare-assed," as one of my friends so cleverly put it. But then I realized these people — these representatives of the Lambda Chi house and of the UI Greek system — who stooped to such a ridiculous act in the first place probably wouldn't be ashamed. They would probably think it was funny and they'd be proud of themselves.

SO, I HAVEN'T mentioned the incident until now. But I've heard copies of the photographs were sent to the Lambda Chi Alpha national chapter office and to UI officials by some of the women involved in the march. Maybe the boys and their buddies in the house won't be laughing so hard when someone asks them what they thought was so impressive about their naked rear ends.

I saw the pictures. There was nothing too impressive.

I don't suppose those guys knew that by doing what they did they perfectly exemplified what several of the speakers at the rally had spoken out against: the lack of respect for women and the lack of seriousness with which the issue of violence against women is taken.

Hopefully they know now. And hopefully no one needed to tell them an apology is in order. I'm sure they took care of that just as quickly as they were able to zip up their pants.

Doing it right?

To the Editor:

Last year, a UI student was injured in a bridge jumping accident. Following the accident, The Daily Iowan published a story about the dangers of diving into the Iowa River off Iowa City's bridges in an attempt to deter students from participating in this spring tradition.

But on the front page of the DI May 12, there was a picture of a bridge jumper at the Hancer footbridge "showing how to do it right." This was the second picture of bridge jumpers the DI has run this spring.

So, is the DI now condoning or encouraging this kind of behavior? If so, I hope all the people who decide to jump off a bridge "do it right."

Book thieves

To the Editor:

Classes are ending and it seems like everybody is happy. But it is not like that. This is the time when bookstores buy books and it is also the time for stealing books.

Last Friday, I was in the UI Main Library studying for a test on Saturday. I had to make a call, so I did it. When I came back, my book was not there.

This is not a new problem. Talking to friends, I know how easy money comes to a lot of students in this way. They do not have to prove the books are theirs when they sell them; they just have a new way of making money.

Librarians say they can do nothing. They say the lost and found department will call if it "appears." In the meantime, you just have to wait, but this is not so easy when you have a final test the next day.

Stealing books is not a new problem, but it seems like nobody cares about it. The important thing is making money, no matter where the books come from!

A set up?

To the Editor:

Who stands to gain the most from Gary Hart's hara-kiri happening?

Sen. Joseph Biden? No. Sen. Richard Gephardt? No. The Rev. Jesse Jackson? Maybe. Vice President George Bush and the Republican Party? Yes, absolutely yes.

Did Hart, the Democratic front runner for his party's presidential nomination, commit political suicide? Or was Hart ambushed? Stabbed in the back as was Julius Caesar. When a beautiful, beguiling, designing woman turns on the charm, any man — even a president or presidential candidate — is likely to melt like heated butter and become entangled in the web of conspiracy. Was Hart such a victim?

... Was the Miami Herald also suckered into this dirty trick? It surely seems so.

Pursuing these premises to their probable conclusion, some investigative reporter could well dig up strong truth and win a Pulitzer Prize — by laying the blame where it most likely belongs. Then Gary Hart could still be the next president of the United States. Take heart. Hang in there Gary.

Party loyalty lost in America

By Richard C. Wade

THE SUDDEN DEPARTURE of Gary Hart from the campaign has, strangely enough, probably not altered the Democratic nomination or the presidential outcome. Before his exit, Hart was clearly his party's front runner, just as Vice President George Bush has had a handy lead in the Republican sweepstakes. In both cases, the polls have placed them around the 50 percent mark and found their competitors struggling to get into the double digits.

Yet the margin of their standing was more apparent than real. In the terms of the political trade, their support has been "soft" — broader than it was deep. Indeed, the perceived vulnerability of both Bush and Hart had induced a bevy of other candidates on both sides into the field. The races, especially in the Democratic Party, were wide open even before the elimination of Hart.

Why should this be? Usually such large margins built up by front runners would discourage new entrants and turn expert speculation toward the fall of 1988 rather than the prospects for the coming 12 months. The reason, I think, is a general misconception about the nature of modern American politics. Informed opinion still thinks in terms of party, as if the Democratic and Republican parties possess a general, if somewhat vague, coherence; as if people still hold to inherited or acquired allegiances; as if the parties, even as they jostle for uncommitted voters, embody significant differences.

Actually the words "Democratic" and "Republican" have lost their historic meanings and no longer lay claim to traditional ties and presumed loyalties. Everywhere, voters examine candidates without regard to labels or enrollment. If they like what they see, as in the case of President Ronald Reagan, they are happy to disregard party lines (he himself was once a Democrat); if they find him wanting, like Hart, the rejection is quick and decisive.

THE FACT OF THE MATTER is that we

... The words "Democratic" and "Republican" have lost their historic meanings and no longer lay claim to traditional ties and presumed loyalties. Everywhere, voters examine candidates without regard to labels or enrollment. If they like what they see, they are happy to disregard party lines; if they find him wanting, the rejection is quick and decisive.

Comment

no longer have a two-party system but rather a no-party system. The independents in both parties now outnumber predictable party voters. Indeed, some polls indicate that a majority no longer consider themselves Democrats or Republicans, and tend to measure candidates by their freedom from partisan commitment. They also reject leaders of their own constituencies who try to influence them. Labor unions supported Walter Mondale in 1984 only to discover that half their membership abandoned them for Reagan. In the same way, black voters disregarded the choice of most of their spokesmen and went in droves for the Rev. Jesse Jackson in the Democratic primaries.

Moreover, millions of citizens have dropped out of politics altogether; barely half even bother to exercise their franchise in presidential elections, and less than a quarter participate in the primary process.

This rampant independence is a central fact of contemporary politics. And its sources are not hard to discover. An almost continuous prosperity since World War II has produced a generation that does not need politics for jobs or success. Television has replaced parties as a mediator between candidates and citizens, withering the grassroots organizations that once nourished political activity.

IN ADDITION, A STRING of public scandals beginning with Watergate has bred a corrosive cynicism about the entire democratic process. The result is a skeptical electorate that trusts its own judgment more than the established sources of political authority — parties, elected officials or civic leaders.

Neither party carries out its intramural debate within the confines of a well-defined constituency. No matter what their registration, or what they tell the pollsters, the voters will exercise an independent judgment in both the primaries and the general election.

It is also worth noting that the 1988 outcome will be decided in the suburbs. More people now live in the suburbs than in the cities. They also vote in higher percentages than their urban neighbors. To the Democrats, this fact is especially challenging. They have been historically an urban party, but for the first time next year delegates to their national convention will contain more suburban than urban representatives.

These voters are notoriously predictable and constitute a fitting battleground for the adversaries in our new no-party system. All of the hopefuls will have to contend with this volatility. Gary Hart has demonstrated that only five days separates the "clear front runner" from no candidacy at all.

City

Iowa City masseuse offers unique and relaxing therapy

By J. Majerus
Special to The Daily Iowan

The sunlit room was warm and smelled slightly of scented oil. It housed a few plants, some Eastern artwork, a couple of wooden chairs and the massage table, which was about waist high. It was midmorning, and Joan Harris, an Iowa City massage therapist, had just welcomed her first client of the day.

After a brief discussion with the woman about her general health and expectations of the massage, Harris told the woman to undress when she was ready and lie down on the massage table. She explained it was easiest for her to work with the client fully undressed, but if the woman felt more comfortable, she could leave some clothing on. Harris then left the room, closing the door behind her.

After a few minutes, she knocked and waited for the woman to answer before entering again. Once back in the room, Harris began what she called "the art of massage." Seated at the head of the massage table, Harris took a few deep, slow breaths and began massaging the woman's scalp.

AFTER A FEW moments, Harris moved to the woman's side and pulled the covers back to her legs. With a look of intense concentration, Harris' oiled hands began their work on the woman's back. Harris continued to breathe slowly and deliberately, and spoke only to ask the woman to take a breath. "Deep breath in," she said softly. "Let it go. Good."

As she worked, Harris often took what appeared to be a runner's stance, crouching next to the table, using her whole body and leaning into the stroke. After finishing the back, Harris worked on the woman's legs, then worked her way down the body, covering her ears, chest, abdomen, arms, hands, feet and, finally, face.

WHEN THE WOMAN

emerged from the room, she and Harris talked about the massage experience. Harris had noticed a particular tightness in the woman's abdomen, and suggested deep breathing exercises to alleviate tension in that area.

Taking out her checkbook, the woman asked Harris what she owed for the massage. Harris said her fee ranged from $20 to $30, and asked the woman to pay what she could inside that bracket. The woman paid Harris $25, and said the massage was "definitely" worth the money.

"It is the best massage I've ever had, for the overall effect — I feel like I've just had a really good sleep," she said. "I was impressed by the strength in her hands."

ELENOR MAFFITT, a regular client of four years, said she sees Harris every other week for massage therapy.

"If I could afford it, I'd go every week. For my income it's a lot to pay, but I don't feel that it's too much for what I get. Joan is a very dedicated person," Maffitt said. "She's not out to make a lot of money. I think she takes a personal interest in all her clients. She's patient and always very positive."

Harris, who has been studying massage therapy for the past 12 years at workshops and institutes across the country, has been trained in Shiatsu, Native American Learning, Reflexology, Polarity, Jin Shin Do and Postural Integration.

"EVERYBODY RESPONDS to different techniques," she said. "It's nice to have a variety. I tend to focus more on connective tissue, which is a deeper, slower stroke that requires more energy for me than Swedish techniques."

Harris began doing therapeutic massage at the Emma Goldman Clinic for Women in 1980. She left the clinic in 1986 to study physical therapy and since has done massage therapy in her home, seeing 10 to 15 clients each week.

Harris described therapeutic massage as "the systematic manipulation of the soft tissue of the body for relaxation and stress reduction," and said massage helps the body's own healing process.

"Physiologically, it relaxes tense muscles and assists in recovery from muscle injury," she said. "It increases circulation of the blood and lymph and thereby improves the delivery of nutrients to tissues and the removal of waste products. It is one tool in a variety of means to attain a healthy and balanced lifestyle."

Carol Mullen, an Iowa City chiropractor, said she has advised patients to use massage therapy.

"In some cases I do recommend massage therapy, and that's usually in the case of noticeable paravertebral muscle spasm. Massage will help relieve that muscular contraction," she said, adding that in such cases, massage enhances the patient's spinal adjustment.

MAFFITT, WHO IS a practicum counselor working toward her master's degree in the UI School of Social Work, also recommends massage therapy for her clients.

"Having your physical muscles relaxed relaxes you emotionally," Maffitt said, adding that massage would be a good preparation for someone facing a test, an interview, or other stressful event. Maffitt also said she thought that massage therapy would be especially helpful to the older population because benefits to the circulatory system could be achieved without the physical effort usually required.

The essence of her work, Harris said, is sensing what a client's needs are.

"You put your eyes at the ends of your fingertips and you listen with your entire being to the message coming from that person," she said. "The person on the table is her own healer — everyone has a healer within."

making it into a university of any kind."

INNER-CITY ATHLETES continue to struggle, but officials say their Iowa counterparts don't experience as much difficulty.

Information from the UI Registrar's Office indicates the graduation rate for Iowa football players enrolled between 1981 and 1985 is only 53 percent.

Thirty-nine percent of those players were from Iowa. Of those, 67 percent have graduated. Of the remaining players, only 45 percent received diplomas. And when broken down into athletes who attended urban high schools, the graduation rate is only 36.7 percent.

Fred Mims, assistant athletic director and UI Athletic Student Services director, is responsible for helping athletes meet academic requirements and adjust to their new surroundings.

Student Services provides mandatory study hours, personal tutoring and counseling for student-athletes, Mims said, adding there is only so much an office staff can do.

"IF WE HAVE a student who is trying, but just can't handle the pressures of school at this university, we encourage them to transfer somewhere where they can do better," Mims said. "But there are those who just don't try to make it, and there's just not much you can do with this type of individual."

Mark Spranger, an Iowa football player from 1981-86, knew where he was headed from the start.

Unlike urban students trying to build a future on athletics, Spranger came to the UI knowing there would be no pro scouts knocking on his door after graduation.

With that in mind, he decided to trade a football career for an education.

For five years, Spranger went to practice, went to the games... and went to class. Last December, he received his degree.

Spranger, however, does not exemplify the majority of football players who come to the UI.

"OUT OF ALL the guys who come here and play football, I'd say about 10 percent really go in there and take advantage of their scholarship," Spranger said.

This does not mean, however, that the athletic program doesn't encourage the student-athletes to do their best.

"I think Hayden has done an excellent job in motivating his students to perform better in the classroom," Mims said. "And with the complex system that he runs on the football field, he can't afford to have below-average students on the field."

"Coaches do try to help as much as they can," Spranger agreed. "But there comes a point where the athlete has to take some responsibility for himself."

While things have gotten better since Fry arrived in 1979, there is still some ground left to cover.

"Between the time of the mid-1970s and the time that Fry came here, we have been taking less risks with students who may have trouble in the classroom," Elliott said. "And because the program has risen to a new level, we now have the chance at getting the better student-athlete."

Legislature

Regents Business and Finance Director Douglas True said the faculty salary increase this year is part of a proposed three-year program to raise salaries 13 percent each year.

But the burden of increasing the salaries may be placed on the backs of students in the form of tuition hikes for two more years, he added.

State funded work-study for students in public universities will also increase next year. The new $2.1 million program will give $1.1 million in aid to regents students. The remaining $1 million will go to qualified students enrolled in any Iowa colleges.

LAST YEAR, in a $1 million work-study program, most of the funds, $640,000, were allocated to private college students.

"I think it is a positive step," Remington said. "As the federal government decreases aid, the state needs to respond."

Gregg Shultz, campus director of The United Students of Iowa, which lobbies the state legislature on higher education issues, said the legislature did what it could with few resources.

"All in all, they did fine. On a lean year like this, it was tremendous," Shultz said. "Where they cut everything else, education got a shot in the arm, a booster shot."

Rep. Charles Poncey, D-Ottumwa, chairman of the House Appropriations Subcommittee on Education, said the regents institutions did better in the 1987 legislative session than in past sessions, but they still lost out to elementary and secondary schools.

"The only winner in education for the past six years has been K-12," he said. "I can't help but feel that higher education has been short changed."

Poncey said the legislature could deal more effectively with higher education issues if the number of school districts in Iowa were reduced.

"It was a difficult session," Poncey said. "I'm happy to be home."

Hearings

REP. DANTE FASCELL, D-Fla., said of McFarlane, "The question still remains — he was just an adviser to the president. Somebody had to give him orders. ... There are only three people above him. ... All I'm going to say is he was working for the president carrying out admittedly presidential policy."

In his testimony, McFarlane described how other countries, including Saudi Arabia, Brunei, Honduras and Guatemala, were guided to help the Contras while the ban on U.S. aid was in effect. Taiwan also reportedly contributed $2 million, according to The Wall Street Journal.

The following is a partial transcript of McFarlane's testimony:

Mr. Leon: Why was it that you didn't rein him in, Mr. McFarlane? Why was it that you didn't take him under control more?

Mr. McFarlane: Well, I think, Mr. Leon, that the belief that Col. North was acting within the restrictions of foremost concern to the Congress on not raising money — which I believed — and in the knowledge that when he had an idea which came close to the line of legality, propriety, he had always brought it to me and I'd been able to say yes or no, that I had confidence that that would continue to be the relationship.

I'm afraid that in the past two days that Ollie is really getting a bum rap which appears to be endorsed from me, and I don't intend that. I think Col. North is a man of immense devotion to the preservation of human life. Now that sounds like a platitude, but it isn't at all. He is a person of very deep and profound conviction, belief in God, who relies on his conscience — as all of us do — but one that is formed in scholarly pursuit of scriptures.

HE IS QUITE cynical about government. Ollie is a man that is a veteran of an experience in Vietnam — of which I was very conscious and I think not uncommon to the experience of many people — that is, a situation that anyone who exposes himself to the loss of life, his own, has to deal, and that is, "Is it worth it?" And for him, it was an easy determination, that yes, it was, because there were enough daily shows of evidence by Vietnamese people — young and old, children, others — of their satisfaction that he was there.

Students end boycott after transfer

CAPE TOWN, South Africa — Thousands of students at a mixed-race university Tuesday ended their five-week-old boycott of classes after authorities agreed to transfer a white dentistry professor accused of racism.

Government officials, backing a decision by the "colored" University of the Western Cape, transferred lecturer Dr. Jeffrey Cohen to the white and predominantly Afrikaner Stellenbosch University, 20 miles away.

UWC Rector Jakes Gerwel said the university's executive committee backed the finding by a four-man commission probing the racism charges that Cohen "is not suitably placed in the UWC faculty of dentistry and its oral and dental hospital."

Cohen, who is also employed by government health services, said he had tested foreign-trained dentists seeking compulsory registration with the South African Medical and Dental Council and many failed the tests. Many were black South Africans trained in Third World countries.

Blunders cited in Palme investigation

STOCKHOLM, Sweden — The Swedish Judicial Commission harshly criticized the government and police Tuesday for a long list of blunders that followed the still unsolved assassination of Prime Minister Olof Palme.

The commission, in a 200-page report on the first 12 hours after the murder, said officials and police were so shocked by the Feb. 28, 1986, slaying that they neglected to follow correct emergency procedures — possibly allowing the killer to escape.

Palme was killed on a downtown Stockholm street by a lone gunman while walking home with his wife, Lisbet, from a late movie. The crime remains unsolved.

The commission report, presented at a news conference, said the worst mistake made in the early stages of the murder hunt was the lack of a coordinated, efficient search by the police command.

Many policemen on duty were not told of the assassination for hours. It took 90 minutes to set up roadblocks on the city outskirts and a nationwide alert was delayed for 2 hours and 45 minutes, the report said.

Gunman goes on rampage, murders 7

BRUSSELS, Belgium — A rifleman shot and killed seven people ranging from a 90-year-old grandfather to a 3-year-old boy and wounded three others Tuesday in two attacks, then committed suicide when authorities cornered him, police said.

Michel Vanwijndaele used a .22-caliber rifle to kill seven people in a six-and-a-half hour shooting spree before police spotted his blue Opel car at a gas station, police said.

Police said the gunman entered a farm in the small village of Bogaarden where he shot and killed a grandfather, 90, the grandmother, 84, their daughter, 46, her husband, 54, and the couple's son, 20, police said.

Another son, 24, was seriously wounded in the stomach and shoulder but managed to alert neighbors, police said.

As the gunman left the farm, a 37-year-old woman and her 3-year-old son were passing by. They fled into a nearby house, but he followed them and killed them too, police said.

Three hours later, the gunman entered a farm in Denderwindeke where he shot and wounded his father-in-law, 59, and the man's 87-year-old mother. Both were in serious condition.

Former Congressman returns to prison

WASHINGTON — Former Rep. George Hansen, R-Idaho, returned to federal prison to serve the remainder of his sentence Tuesday, less than 24 hours after his parole was revoked.

Hansen's lawyer, Frank Campbell, said a U.S. Parole Commission member notified him that Hansen would be returned to the Federal Correctional Institute at Petersburg, Va., where he served six months last year before being paroled Dec. 19.

Hansen, 56, a maverick ultra-conservative, was sentenced to 15 months by filing false congressional financial disclosure forms that omitted $334,000 in income.

He was arrested April 15 at the Omaha, Neb., airport before boarding a return flight to Washington after a speaking engagement. The parole commission determined he had not obtained permission from his parole officer before making the trip.

Supreme Court becomes landmark

WASHINGTON — The Supreme Court building became a national historic landmark Tuesday in a ceremony celebrating the 200th anniversary of the Constitution.

Interior Secretary Donald Hodel praised the building for its architectural as well as legal significance, saying, "Here dwells the ultimate institutional protection for the Constitution of the United States whose bicentennial we celebrate this year."

As part of the bicentennial observation, the National Park Service this year is designating, in addition to the court, five other new landmarks that are tied to major court cases.

House votes down Kemp's SDI plan

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The House soundly rejected a call Tuesday from Rep. Jack Kemp, R-N.Y., to deploy the first elements of Star Wars by 1993, a central feature of the New York congressman's campaign for the GOP presidential nomination.

Kemp's proposal, an amendment to the $289 billion 1988 defense authorization bill being considered by the House, failed by a 301-122 vote. Fifty-nine House Republicans voted against Kemp's proposal.

Although members rejected Kemp's deployment proposal, they voted 216-203 to maintain money for the "space-based kinetic kill vehicle" — a small rocket that could kill a nuclear missile by the force of impact. It is that system Kemp and other conservatives are pushing for as the most promising potential element of an early missile defense. The defeated amendment would have sharply cut the program's funds and made it illegal to develop or test it.

APPROVED ON A VOICE vote was an amendment barring deployment of any Star Wars element without congressional permission.

The Star Wars part of the bill contains $25 million for work on ways to knock out a missile — U.S. or Soviet — launched accidentally, and members voted 297-121 against a proposal to boost that program to $300 million.

Earlier, members voted 219-199 to allocate $3.1 billion in the bill for the Strategic Defense Initiative, as Star Wars is properly known. President Ronald Reagan initially asked for $5.7 billion, a request later pared down in the Armed Services Committee to $3.58 billion and then cut further on the floor.

KEMP'S AMENDMENT sought to require the Pentagon to start full-scale development and testing of SDI systems and components to achieve deployed operational capability by 1993, something he estimated could cost at least $50 billion.

He acknowledged from the outset of the debate he would lose, saying nevertheless, "I want to send a very sharp signal to this administration — that this is not a technological debate. This is a political debate."

"There has to be someone... to tell this administration, irrespective of what the left wing wants... that we believe it is morally imperative, politically practical, technologically feasible and prudently fiscally responsible for us to move to deploy and develop on-the-shelf kinetic energy weapons," he said.

Rep. Les AuCoin, D-Ore., countered, "The question is not whether we could do it. It's whether we should do it.... The whole history of the arms race is: Monkey see, monkey do."

Navy rescues ailing professor from canoe

HONOLULU (UPI) — An ailing university professor plucked by Navy rescuers from an experimental ancient-style Polynesian canoe on a two-year Pacific voyage was reported in stable condition Tuesday aboard the frigate USS Brewton.

A spokesman at Pearl Harbor said E. Dixon Stroup, 59, professor of oceanography at the University of Hawaii, was being treated aboard the Brewton with antibiotics to counteract a severe bacterial infection in his legs.

In a midmorning radio report, a medical officer aboard the ship described the infection as "severe in both legs with massive swelling and ulcers," but the prognosis for recovery was "good."

STROUP HIMSELF then took the microphone and reported:

"I'm relieved to be receiving medical attention and thankful. I'm very impressed by the boat landing, but embarrassed to be the focus of so much attention. I'm disappointed at having to leave Hokulea."

Lt. Cmdr. Gary Shroud said Stroup was to be flown by helicopter to the city of Hilo when the Brewton reached an area about 100 miles of the Island of Hawaii about 3 p.m.

The rescue saga began Saturday night when the doctor on board the canoe used an emergency radio to call the Coast Guard and report on Stroup's condition.

The canoe is completing a two-year, 16,000-mile voyage retracing some of the routes sailed by ancient Polynesians.

Part of the experiment involves navigation by ancient methods without any aid of modern navigational techniques.

In order not to compromise the research effort of the voyage, the emergency radio was not used to assist the Coast Guard in pinpointing the Hokulea's location. A Coast Guard C-130 aircraft flying under a 200-foot cloud cover helped the Brewton locate the canoe about 550 miles southeast of Hawaii Monday afternoon.

A 25-foot utility boat braved six-foot seas and whitecaps in a rain squall to transfer Stroup from the canoe to the Brewton.

"It was tricky in those conditions," Navy Third Fleet public affairs officer Lt. Cmdr. Chuck Conner said.

It is possible the researcher contracted the infection about three weeks ago shortly before Hokulea left Rangiroa.

Simon to announce candidacy

CARBONDALE, Ill. (UPI) — Sen. Paul Simon formally will announce his candidacy for the Democratic presidential nomination on the Southern Illinois University campus next Monday, officials said Tuesday.

After making his first formal announcement at 9 a.m. from the steps of Shryock Auditorium, Simon will fly to Des Moines for a similar announcement Monday afternoon before returning to Carbondale for a news conference. Following the news conference will be a $100-a-plate Simon fundraiser dinner at SIU at which Simon and Sen. Dale Bumpers, D-Ark., will be the featured speakers.

Illinois' junior senator had announced his intentions to seek the presidency in Washington April 9 after Bumpers decided not to run.

Pam Huey of Simon's Washington office said Simon is scheduled to fly from Carbondale late Monday to Birmingham, Ala., for the first of three formal announcements Tuesday of his candidacy, with later stops at Atlanta and Manchester, N.H.

Simon upset Republican incumbent Charles H. Percy for a U.S. Senate seat in 1984 after serving 10 years in the House from the 22nd Congressional District in Southern Illinois. He also served in the Illinois Legislature and as lieutenant governor after publishing several weekly newspapers in Southern Illinois.

Reagan denies soliciting aid

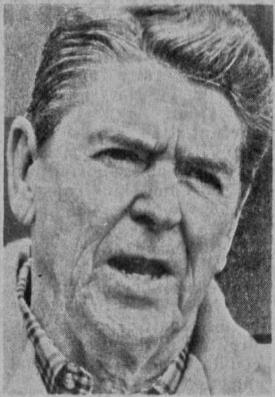

WASHINGTON (UPI)—President Ronald Reagan, under mounting scrutiny of his staunch support for the Nicaraguan Contras, denied Tuesday that he sought aid from other countries to keep the Contras armed during a suspension of U.S. military assistance.

Reagan, in a curt response to questions from reporters, said he never personally solicited third-country support for the Contras, despite suggestions he may have pursued the issue with Saudi officials in 1984 and 1985.

When pressed by reporters while meeting with GOP leaders, Reagan — feeling pressure from congressional hearings into the Iran-Contra scandal — first protested he was "not going to answer any questions on those things until this is over."

"If I were going to answer any questions," he said, "I'd say, 'No.'"

THE DENIAL CAME in response to testimony Monday from former national security adviser Robert McFarlane, who detailed close involvement by Reagan in certain key aspects of the clandestine Iran arms and Contra aid operations.

Ronald Reagan

Bombarded with questions provoked by that testimony, White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater remained adamant that Reagan, while aware of behind-the-scenes contributions to the Contras, knew of and participated in nothing illegal.

The fine distinction at the heart of the defense fashioned by the White House in recent days was evident when Fitzwater — asked to clarify what Reagan knew of the aid solicitations — retorted at one point, "He was aware of the legal ones and not aware of the illegal ones — if there were any."

FITZWATER AGAIN underscored the deep-seated commitment Reagan has felt all along toward the Contras — a theme the president echoed in a speech to a business group promoting economic development in Latin America.

"We must remember that in Nicaragua, the freedom-fighters' fight is our fight," Reagan said.

Reagan's involvement in third-country aid to the Contras was called into question by the disclosure that in early 1984, a previously unannounced 10-minute May 9 meeting between Reagan and Prince Bandar bin Sultan, the Saudi ambassador, was followed by word that the Saudis would begin contributing $1 million a month to the Contras.

MOREOVER, McFarlane testified that a February 1985 state visit by Saudi King Fahd was followed days later by word that secret assistance to the Contras would be doubled to $2 million a month.

The White House depicted the timing of the meetings with Reagan and Saudi aid to the Contras as coincidental, and unrelated to administration moves during those same periods to sell additional U.S. arms to Saudi Arabia.

Fitzwater insisted the weapons sales — $40 million worth of Stinger anti-aircraft missiles in May 1984 and a $3 billion-plus arms package proposed in early 1985 and later scrapped in the face of opposition from Congress — were offered strictly "for our own national security reasons" and not as a quid pro quo or reward for aid to the Contras.

"THERE WERE NO other reasons for these sales," he said. "Nor did the United States government link them in any way to Saudi actions or decisions in any other area of activity or policy."

Although McFarlane described Reagan as gratified but not surprised by the increased flow of Saudi money to the Contras, Fitzwater insisted the president did not have a hand in the Saudi decision.

The denial by Reagan did little to pinpoint exactly what he did know about administration efforts to raise third-country funds for the Contras.

Donations to CBN dive after scam

VIRGINIA BEACH, Va. (UPI) — The Rev. Pat Robertson said Tuesday the battle of the network evangelists cost his Christian Broadcasting Network $10 million in lost donations and urged viewers to send money "to a ministry of integrity."

Robertson, in the middle of a week-long televised fund-raising drive he said is necessary to avoid cutbacks in outreach programs, said his operation needs $21 million by the end of the year.

Also Tuesday, the Rev. Jimmy Swaggart said on his syndicated show that he was not behind an attempted hostile takeover of the PTL empire — "I have enough problems of my own, let alone trying to run a water slide" — and added he had "absolutely nothing — I mean zero" to do with the exposure of Jim Bakker's liaison with Jessica Hahn, a church secretary.

ROBERTSON, an all-but-formally-announced GOP presidential candidate, said CBN donations were down "a staggering 33 percent" in April and added, "We just can't continue to have that sort of drain."

Robertson said $8 million to $10 million has been lost in donations in recent months "because of problems with other ministries and not what happened here." He underscored his monetary pleas by saying he had sent out 60,000 brochures containing detailed financial information.

He noted, for instance, that CBN raised 74 percent of its income last year — $135.2 million — from donations. Some $10.7 million came in through interest income and $36.9 million came in from advertising revenue.

Robertson, drawing a sharp contrast to the $1.6 million annual salary drawn by the PTL's Jim and Tammy Bakker, said he draws an annual salary of $60,000 and added he gave $90,000 to the ministry last year.

"BASICALLY I work for free," he said.

Robertson called the PTL scandal a "bad apple" and asked viewers, "Is it proper to penalize someone who has integrity because somebody else misbehaves?"

"I don't think there's a single ministry in the United States that hasn't been affected" by the PTL sex scandal or Oral Roberts' plea for $8 million to keep him alive, Robertson said.

Robertson spoke just as candidly about the problems of television ministers when he kicked off his fund-raising drive Monday.

"People say now, 'We want to know what's going on,' and I don't blame you," he said. "We want you to be assured that CBN effectively uses the resources God provides."

Aquino-favored candidates set to control Senate, House

MANILA, Philippines (UPI) — A slate of candidates hand-picked by President Corazon Aquino appeared headed Tuesday for a sweep of the powerful Senate, and opposition leader Juan Ponce Enrile warned the result would trigger "instability of unimaginable proportions."

Unofficial returns based on 4 percent of the vote showed Aquino's candidates leading in contests for 23 of the 24 seats in the new Senate, according to the National Citizens Movement for Free Elections.

Aquino's candidates were also poised to win a majority in the 200-seat House of Representatives, according to early returns.

Election authorities are not expected to issue an official count until returns from outlying provinces are sent to Manila during the next few days.

The Grand Alliance, which is headed by Enrile, a former defense minister under Aquino, charged the results were "fraudulent" and threatened a Senate boycott.

Juan Ponce Enrile

"THERE IS EVERY indication that the minds of our people are being systematically conditioned to accept the fraudulent claim of a total or near-total opposition shutout," an opposition statement said.

In a statement released by the alliance, Enrile said, "Under these conditions, we will not sit in the Senate."

"If we cannot have an honest and clean election, I don't want to be part of it," he said.

In Washington, the Reagan administration praised the Aquino government for its role in the election.

"The conduct of the election was a convincing demonstration of the Filipino people's commitment to and belief in democratic processes," State Department spokesman Charles Redman said.

Enrile, fired by Aquino in November after some of his aides were implicated in an aborted coup plot, warned, "I am afraid this would be the beginning of instability of unimaginable proportions."

A key member of ousted President Ferdinand Marcos' 20-year regime before leading a military revolt that installed Aquino 15 months ago, Enrile enjoys widespread support among the country's 250,000-strong armed forces.

Barbie denies charges

LYON, France (UPI) — Twice-convicted Nazi war criminal Klaus Barbie, accused of being the "Butcher of Lyon" who deported hundreds of Jews to their deaths in World War II, Tuesday denied responsibility for Nazi repression in Lyon.

In his first substantial comments since the trial began Monday, Barbie acknowledged he was chief of the Gestapo or secret police in Lyon but said he worked for Werner Knab, the head of the SS or the elite Nazi military corps. Barbie did not admit to any crimes.

"It was he who was responsible. We were a command of 120 men," he said of his Gestapo unit. "I was not in charge. I was not the master of Lyon."

Historians believe Barbie acted independently of Knab.

"Listening to the charges against me, it's like I'm before the Nuremberg (Germany) tribunal" that judged Nazi war criminals between 1944 and 1946, he said.

BEATE KLARFELD, the Nazi hunter who worked to have Barbie extradited from Bolivia in February 1983, reportedly said Tuesday Barbie "has exactly the same behavior as the other Nazi criminals I have seen. None of them appear guilty, they all assume the same innocent attitude."

Military tribunals condemned Barbie to death in absentia in 1952 and 1954 but the convictions are no longer valid because a 20-year statute of limitations has long since expired. He escaped the convictions by escaping to South America with U.S. assistance in 1951.

Barbie's lawyer, Jacques Vergès, said the latest charges of "crimes against humanity" should be thrown out because the 1954 conviction encompassed them.

Polish crash puzzles experts

WARSAW, Poland (UPI) — A team of U.S. forensic experts arrived Tuesday to identify the Americans among the 183 people killed in Poland's worst plane crash, and puzzled investigators tried to determine why the pilot did not try to land his disabled craft sooner.

The Soviet-built Ilyushin-62 crashed in a forest south of Warsaw Saturday as the pilot was trying to return to Warsaw's Okęcie airport 53 minutes after takeoff en route to New York. The crash killed all 172 passengers and 11 crew members aboard the LOT airlines jetliner.

Government spokesman Jerzy Urban told Western journalists Tuesday that investigators were puzzled over why Capt. Zygmunt Pwalczyk decided to return to Okęcie, 140 miles away, even though closer civilian and military airports in the area would have permitted an emergency landing after he reported his plane had developed mechanical problems.

"HE WAS OFFERED other airports to land," Urban told reporters at his weekly news conference. "It is a puzzle yet to be solved why he decided to return to Warsaw. Maybe his decision was the most reasonable under the given situation."

Airline sources said Tuesday the pilot declined to use the other airports, including the Modlin military base 19 miles outside Warsaw, knowing they did not have the necessary rescue equipment. The civilian airports are smaller than the Warsaw field.

The plane's engines caught fire but there were conflicting reports on how many of the four were involved and whether flames were seen immediately after takeoff or just before the pilot attempted to land.

"IT'S TOO EARLY to draw final conclusions," said Col. Stanislaw Andrzejewski, a member of the investigating panel. "But I can say that the catastrophe was not a result of the pilot's error but of the situation beyond his control."

The official PAP news agency said the U.S. government had offered to send a team of forensic experts to help identify the American victims of Saturday's crash and it "announced its arrival to Warsaw" Tuesday.

The State Department said the victims included 24 Americans, and 14 Polish citizens who lived in the United States. Several of the U.S. victims were from New York, Connecticut and New Jersey.

Montreal remains alive with 5-2 win

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — Larry Robinson scored the go-ahead goal during a power play and assisted on two scores 19 seconds apart in the second period Tuesday night to help the Montreal Canadiens avoid Stanley Cup playoff elimination with a 5-2 triumph over the Philadelphia Flyers.

The victory drew the defending champions within 3-2 in the best-of-seven Wales Conference championship, which resumes Thursday at the Montreal Forum. Game 7, if necessary, would be Saturday at the Spectrum in Philadelphia.

Canadiens goaltender Brian Hayward made 24 saves, and his teammates finally solved goalie Ron Hextall. Despite the deficit in the series, Montreal has dominated every game except for the fourth but had been frustrated by Hextall.

MONTREAL IS BIDDING to become only the fifth team in NHL history — and third this season — to rebound from a 3-1 deficit in a seven-game series. The others were the 1942 Toronto Maple Leafs, 1975 New York Islanders, and 1987 Islanders and Detroit Red Wings.

Both teams entered the game with 6-2 road records and only .500 winning percentages at home during the postseason. The Canadiens are 4-4 at the Forum and the Flyers moved to 5-6 at the Spectrum.

Montreal's Ryan Walter uses his stick in an effort to stop a first period goal run by Philadelphia's Scott Mellanby on mid-ice during NHL Stanley Cup action. Montreal, with a 5-2 win, kept its playoff hopes alive.

Hawkeyes accept NIC tourney bid

The Iowa softball squad received a pleasant surprise early Tuesday — an invitation to the inaugural Hardee's Softball National Invitational Championship at Western Illinois in Macomb, Ill.

The tournament, a 16-team, double-elimination event this Friday through Sunday, pits Iowa, 29-24-1, against U.S. International, 22-15-1, in the first round Friday at 4 p.m.

"We're really excited about it," senior Carol Bruggeman said. "Obviously, with our record, this shows what they think about the quality of the Big Ten."

Four teams that reached top 20 status at one point or another during the season were awarded seeds and the other 12 slots were drawn at random. Michigan, 34-17, received the top seed and Iowa State, 28-16, is the second seed.

ILLINOIS STATE, 38-18 and Iowa's probable opponent should it win Friday afternoon, is the third seed and Nicholls State, 43-11, is the fourth seed.

U.S. International is the champion of the West Coast Athletic Conference for the second straight year. The Hawkeyes finished fourth in the Big Ten this season with a 12-12 record.

Softball

"This is a total surprise to us," Bruggeman said. "We're looking at it as an opportunity to show some people we deserve to be there in the first place, despite our record."

Iowa will be without the services of seniors Tracy Langhurst and Beth Kirchner on Friday because of final examinations. If the Hawkeyes win Friday afternoon, both will be available for Saturday's 10 a.m. second round game against the Illinois State-Stephen F. Austin winner.

Langhurst's absence will make freshman Pam Brown, 11-7 overall and winner of six of her last seven decisions, or junior transfer Cris Barry, 6-7 this season, the probable starter.

"This is a little nicer way to end our season," Kirchner said. "We're excited about this tournament. We're playing well right now."

Rockets keep hopes alive with close win over Sonics

United Press International

The Houston Rockets still have a chance to win their second consecutive Western Conference title.

The Rockets staved off elimination in their conference semifinal series Tuesday night with a 112-107 victory over the Seattle SuperSonics.

The best-of-seven series shifts to Seattle for Game 6 Thursday night with the Sonics holding a 3-2 edge.

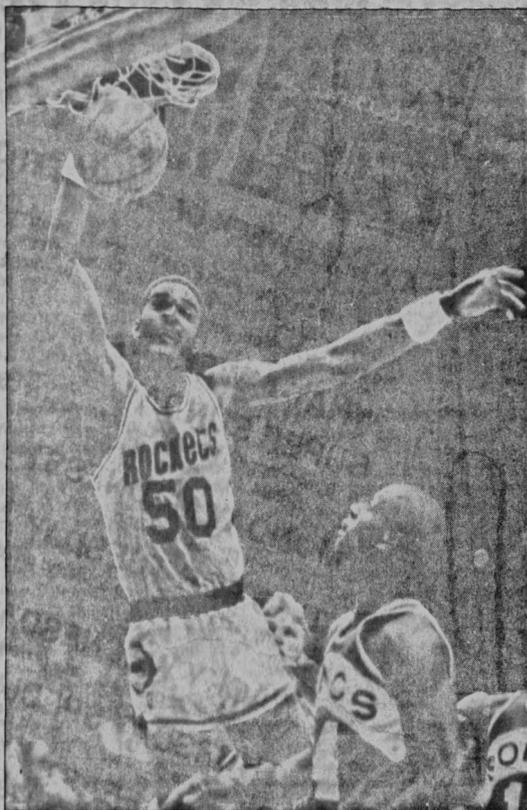

Akeem Olajuwon scored 26 points and Rodney McCray collected a triple-double with 24 points, 10 rebounds and 11 assists to power host Houston. Dale Ellis scored 14 of his 27 points in the fourth quarter to lead Seattle.

The Sonics trailed 89-86 entering the final period and took their first lead of the game with 7:11 left on a 3-point shot by Tom Chambers.

WITH 2:21 remaining, Olajuwon hit a pair of free throws to give the Rockets a 108-105 lead. Ellis sank a jumper with 1:12 remaining to make the score 108-107 but missed a shot with 15 seconds to go that could have put Seattle ahead. Robert Reid and Allen Leavell each made a pair of free throws to account for the final margin.

In a game scheduled for later Tuesday night, the Los Angeles Lakers hosted the Golden State Warriors in the fifth game of their Western Conference semifinal with the Lakers holding a 3-1 lead.

Games set for today, the Boston Celtics, leading 3-1, try to close out their Eastern Conference semifinal series against the Milwaukee Bucks in Game 5, and the Detroit Pistons, also up 3-1, have a chance to advance with a victory over the Atlanta Hawks in the fifth game of their series.

Houston's Ralph Sampson goes up for the dunk in the Rockets' 112-107 NBA Western Conference semifinal win over Seattle.

AT ATLANTA, THE Hawks are searching for a way to slow Detroit guard Isiah Thomas, who scored 66 points in the Pistons' victories in Games 3 and 4.

"There's no question that we've got to slow down Thomas to give ourselves a chance," Atlanta guard Glenn "Doc" Rivers said. "There may be 1,000 guys who are as quick as Isiah, but no one can handle the ball like he does."

Thomas is predicting the Pistons will advance to the Eastern Conference final to play either Boston or Milwaukee. "The Hawks have to win three straight, and I don't think that can happen," he said.

At Boston, the Bucks will try to send the Celtics to just their second loss in their last 81 games at Boston Garden. Boston is so confident of a victory that Larry Bird is taunting the Bucks.

The Board in Control of Athletics, meeting for the last time of the 1986-87 year, convened Tuesday in Carver-Hawkeye Arena to discuss ramifications of payments to UI student-athletes, among other issues.

David Vernon, one of the three members on the committee created to investigate the payments to UI student-athletes, appeared before the board and said the future is what matters now.

"The thrust of the report is how we might work to prevent that in the future," Vernon stated. He also said there are two questions now facing the board: "One, how to make students less willing to accept money, and two, should a lawsuit be filed to develop a sense of community in the student-athletes?"

THE LAWSUIT REFERRED to by Vernon would be directed toward Norby Walters, the agent who paid former UI football players Ronnie Harmon and Devon Mitchell money while they were still students.

Dorsey Ellis, UI vice president of finance and planning, said a lawsuit may be a possibility. "I think we will proceed with discussion (of a lawsuit)," he said, mentioning the idea of a joint-lawsuit in conjunction with other Big Ten schools. Board members stated conference schools in the same state of a professional team may be very willing to join with Iowa in legal action against agents.

Board chairperson Julia Davis, also a member of the Committee to Investigate Alleged Relationships Between Sports Agents and University of Iowa student athletes, was asked if there were any possible reason why two student-athletes would accept the money and two would not.

"THE ATHLETE WITH whom I spoke with made it very clear to me ... that it looked like easy money," she said. "The best way to make a synopsis of that is that they had a sense of values to discourage (the offers)."

Looking for help in needed areas, the Iowa men's swimming team signed eight newcomers for the upcoming fall season.

The Hawkeyes, whose lack of depth in breaststroke and diving events cost them a possible Big Ten title last March, signed breaststroke Mark Gwidt from Milwaukee and Doug Mencl from Beatrice, Neb., along with diver Tomasz Rossa from Warsaw, Poland.

Iowa also signed three-time junior national champion Roland Zschiegner from Camarillo, Calif., Erik Ardelean from North Canton, Ohio, and three in-state swimmers, including Chris Beckwith from Bettendorf, Tom Evers from Des Moines and Todd Trappe from Mason City.

Zschiegner will be Patton's top recruit heading into the 1987 season after winning the 200-yard butterfly and 200- and 400-yard individual medley in the 1986 junior nationals. And if history is any indication, Zschiegner's future may be golden.

"We've had a number of junior national champions come to Iowa," Patton said, "and all of them have gone on to win Big Ten titles."

"What they told me made it easy for them to say no," she added.

According to Davis, UI President James O. Freedman said he "wants the committee to remain a committee."

Also discussed at the board meeting was a proposed study on freshman eligibility. Appearing before the board were: Al Hood of the UI Councilor Education program; Jerry Dallam, who works in the UI registrar's office; and James Maxey, Director of Research for the American Testing Program.

THE PROPOSAL, MADE in response to previous recommendations by the board to study freshman eligibility, will collect data concerning UI student-athletes from 1980 to 1987.

Included in the resources is a budget for $30,000 which will encompass personnel, postage and forms and computer analyses.

While staggered deadlines have been established over the course of the next year, the Meanwhile, Rossa will add experience to a much depleted diving staff which has Jeff Schoeneman as the lone returner.

"Tomasz is an outstanding diver and should have an instant impact on our program," Patton said. "He is a national champion from Poland and will have big tournament experience coming into the season."

Patton was also pleased with the number of quality swimmers recruited from the state this year, noting that Beckwith, Evers and Trappe can become quality Big Ten swimmers in time.

Quick Quiz
What team holds the major-league record for grounding into the most double plays in a season? (Clue: The team plays in the American League.)
The ERA Cure
Need a cure for that blasted earned run average? Ask to pitch against the Kansas City Royals. Kansas City has been shutout 8 times in 28 games. The major-league record for being shut out in a season is held by the St. Louis Cardinals, who were blanked 33 times in 1908.
They Come in Bunches
Atlanta Braves slugger Dale Murphy, who only hit three home runs in the month of April, has connected for six round-trippers already in the month of May. Murphy has homered in each of his last four games.
Running Wild
In Sunday's victory against the Minnesota Twins, the New York Yankees stole seven bases. The last time a Yankee team stole seven bases in a game was June 23, 1931 at Chicago. In that game Tony Lazzeri and Ben Chapman each had three, Lou Gehrig, one.
Quiz Answer
The Boston Red Sox hold the major-league record for grounding into 171 double plays in 1982 and then again in 1983. The 1945 St. Louis Cardinals set the record for grounding into the fewest double plays with 75. Their records: Boston, 1982, 89-73; Boston, 1983, 78-84; St. Louis, 1945, 95-59.
Oh, those bases on balls!
A walk is considered by many to be more damaging than a hit because it cannot be defended. Too many walks combined with timely hits is one of the quickest ways for a pitcher to get lit.
Teams allowing 5 or more walks in a game are 80-140, a winning percentage of .364.
Teams allowing 4 walks in a game are 60-70, a winning percentage of .462.
Teams allowing 3 walks in a game are 85-74, a winning percentage of .535.
Teams allowing 2 walks in a game are 86-61, a winning percentage of .585.
Teams allowing less than 2 walks in a game are 84-47, a winning percentage of .641.

Baseball Almanac

Today is May 13, 1987. It's Day 38 of the season. The All-Star Game will be played in 62 days. The playoffs start in 146 days. The 1986 World Series teams, the Red Sox and the Mets, are each under .500.
Matchup
The Houston Astros send Cy Young Award winner Mike Scott, 4-2, against the New York Mets and Ron Darling, 2-1, at the Astrodome (7:35 p.m.).
Stat of the Day
Eric Davis has hit six home runs against the Phillies this season. Lou Gehrig holds the major-league record for most homers in a season against one team, 14 against Cleveland in 1936.
Who's Hot
Scott Bankhead, the pitcher Seattle obtained from Kansas City last December, is 5-2.
Who's Not
The Kansas City Royals were shut out in eight of their first 28 games.
Hot Seat
After Monday's outing against the Reds where he allowed three runs in 1-3 innings, Mets reliever Randy Myers had a 13.50 ERA.
Trainer's Room
The Kansas City Royals hope to have third baseman George Brett back in the lineup Wednesday or Thursday in Baltimore. Brett has been out since April 20 with a separated cartilage in his right hip cage.
People
When the Red Sox announced Ellis Burks had achieved his first career stolen base, someone in the press box at Fenway Park shot back, "and that puts him on the Red Sox all-time list."
Diamonds
In 1942, Braves pitcher Jim Tobin hit three straight homers in a 6-5 victory over the Cubs

Quick Quiz
What team holds the major-league record for grounding into the most double plays in a season? (Clue: The team plays in the American League.)
The ERA Cure
Need a cure for that blasted earned run average? Ask to pitch against the Kansas City Royals. Kansas City has been shutout 8 times in 28 games. The major-league record for being shut out in a season is held by the St. Louis Cardinals, who were blanked 33 times in 1908.
They Come in Bunches
Atlanta Braves slugger Dale Murphy, who only hit three home runs in the month of April, has connected for six round-trippers already in the month of May. Murphy has homered in each of his last four games.
Running Wild
In Sunday's victory against the Minnesota Twins, the New York Yankees stole seven bases. The last time a Yankee team stole seven bases in a game was June 23, 1931 at Chicago. In that game Tony Lazzeri and Ben Chapman each had three, Lou Gehrig, one.
Quiz Answer
The Boston Red Sox hold the major-league record for grounding into 171 double plays in 1982 and then again in 1983. The 1945 St. Louis Cardinals set the record for grounding into the fewest double plays with 75. Their records: Boston, 1982, 89-73; Boston, 1983, 78-84; St. Louis, 1945, 95-59.
Oh, those bases on balls!
A walk is considered by many to be more damaging than a hit because it cannot be defended. Too many walks combined with timely hits is one of the quickest ways for a pitcher to get lit.
Teams allowing 5 or more walks in a game are 80-140, a winning percentage of .364.
Teams allowing 4 walks in a game are 60-70, a winning percentage of .462.
Teams allowing 3 walks in a game are 85-74, a winning percentage of .535.
Teams allowing 2 walks in a game are 86-61, a winning percentage of .585.
Teams allowing less than 2 walks in a game are 84-47, a winning percentage of .641.

Editor files his final column

I have been covering sports at The Daily Iowan for the last four years and will be filling this space for the last time. In doing so I would like to write about coaches — lots of coaches — that I have come in contact and tried to work with here at Iowa.

Some memories will be pleasant. Some will not be and others are downright hilarious. One thing for sure, it will be an insight into the personalities behind the well-respected, nationally-ranked Iowa Athletic Department.

My first assignment as a freshman reporter in fall 1983 was to go to Kinnick Stadium and talk to the Iowa legend — Coach Hayden Fry — after his good 'ole boys were done practicing for the day.

What was I supposed to say to him?

I didn't know. I didn't have too.

HAYDEN SPOKE THE first words and laughed and said, "Look's they have a new cub on the job?" Fry then talked to me for a few minutes and asked me how I was doing and if I liked school. I was impressed. How could I not be? He was too genuine.

Fry proved that to me on a few other occasions.

One time after the Hawkeyes were done with practice Fry watched as this little girl wandered away from her father and came close to the gate and in front of the mammoth men. Fry scooped her up and walked over and returned her to her father, who was wide-eyed upon witnessing the event.

Fry's counterpart in the "money sports" at the time was men's basketball Coach George Raveling — the most arrogant and conceited person I've encountered at Iowa.

RAVELING LEFT IOWA because of media pressures among other things. How could he have had media pressures? He wouldn't talk on the phone to anybody or return a call if his life depended on it. Maybe that's why he received some critical press.

One time I had been trying to get a hold of him just to ask him a few questions for a basketball preview. The basketball office secretary and I were becoming friends because of all the messages I left with Raveling.

Melissa Rapoport, the DI Sports Editor at the time,

The Daily Iowan/Rod Faccio

helped me out. She was close friends with George. She placed a call, only seconds after I had placed the last one, and George, finding out it was his Missy on the line, was in. Melissa then chatted for a few minutes and asked him if he would talk to one of her reporters. Reluctantly, he said yes.

I never seriously considered trying to get a hold of Raveling on the phone again. It was a waste of time.

RAVELING'S replacement, Tom Davis, responded to media pressure incredibly well in his first year and like Fry is sincere as they come.

Last November, I first had a chance to talk to Davis before the Great Alaska Shootout. He returned a message that I had left and above all was interesting to talk to.

On the flight to Alaska I introduced myself to Davis and then introduced Davis to my father, who was living out a dream by traveling to the nation's 49th state. Davis was cordial and later remembered speaking to my father when they bumped into each other again at the Anchorage Sheraton, just a few hours after Iowa's win over North Carolina State. Davis didn't have to show this courtesy.

Another phone calling episode displays the difference between the two Iowa basketball coaches.

I HAD PROBLEMS getting a hold of Raveling even when he was sitting at his office in Carver-Hawkeye Arena while Davis could be found in a situation, which I believe was at the very least, untimely.

I was writing a Iowa-Purdue basketball preview for our Monday Jan. 19, 1987, edition, our first after the winter break.

The Iowa team was already in West Lafayette, Ind., and I figured my chances of speaking to the Iowa Coach were not very good. I tracked down the hotel where they were staying and left a message with trainer John Streif to have Davis call me if he had the chance.

Ten minutes later Davis called, and it wasn't like he had anything better to do — Purdue was only playing Louisville in a nationally televised contest at Mackey Arena. Another example of class from the former Wisconsin-Platteville guard.

Coach Davis, the only question I have for you now is how is your new riding lawn mower working?

THOSE THREE ARE NOT the only ones at Iowa who deserve good or bad grades, and what an appropriate term during finals week.

One who deserves a high mark is Iowa men's gymnastics Coach Tom Dunn. Dunn is always easy to work with and keep in touch with. The only problem I found was I had trouble getting "good" quotes from him, but it wasn't his fault — I just kept asking stupid questions. Now I consider myself a gymnastics expert. Dunn certainly is. I've seen him move the Hawkeyes from 12th in the nation to fifth in the last few years. I hope they keep climbing.

A poor grade goes to other side of the Hawkeyes' gymnastics program — women's Coach Diane Chapela.

Chapela is hilarious. She often has to go home after a meet to write quotes down that sound good. If Iowa loses, and they have done so quite a bit after finishing last in the Big Ten for five straight years, Chapela pouts and is unavailable for comment or she just takes her phone off the hook.

WHAT'S WORSE IS that she complains if something bad is printed about her team. How nice can you be in doing a Big Ten preview for women's gymnastics team? Maybe like this:

After five cellar-dwelling seasons the Hawkeyes hope to rise to the top of conference on the majestic wings of Iowa Coach Diane Chapela's brilliance. Ha! With a program that keeps doctors and knee brace companies in business?

Minuses: Iowa baseball Coach Duane Banks (despite what Steve Williams says) and Glenn "PR" Patton.

Iowa men's track Coach Ted Wheeler receives an honorable mention of honorable mentions for some of his quotes that have kept The Daily Iowan laughing. Wheeler once said, "Two of our athletes will be out this week because they pulled some strings in their hams." Hamstrings, Ted. A Yogi Berra phrase if I've ever heard one.

Last but not least I will not mention wrestling or Coach Dan Gable. I leave those things up to Staff Writer Dan Millea.

Riders should prepare for heat

After racing in 90-degree heat this past weekend, I decided it was time to write about riding in the heat, even though it will probably turn cooler again. But sooner or later we will get some very hot and humid days. And if you plan on riding in such conditions, you should be prepared to do so.

The first rule is to drink. Drink as often and as much as possible, which means drink even if you're not thirsty. In hot weather (above 80 degrees) I try to drink at least one regular size water bottle (16 ounces) every 20 miles.

I also reduce the amount of sugar in the drink in proportion to the temperature. As the temperature rises I drink more, so I require less sugar per bottle. Dilute your carbohydrate drink in the heat or you might end up with cotton mouth or a stomach ache. Sugar draws water into the stomach causing these symptoms. It's also wise to avoid drinks with caffeine, since this drug is also a diuretic. As much as I enjoy coffee, it's a no-no on a hot, humid day.

YOU ALSO MIGHT NEED to

install another water bottle cage on your bicycle, so you can carry enough water to last the entire ride. Definitely put at least one cage on if you plan on riding seriously this summer. Two is best. With two you won't have to stop as often for water.

There are no handups during training as in a race, so be prepared to stop at a park or a convenience store for water, pop or whatever. My favorite drink is a 32 ounce Diet Pepsi or maybe even a QT Hawg for those dog days.

You should know the symptoms of dehydration so you can tell when to call it quits. Some of them are dizziness, headaches, nausea and the cessation of sweating. If you think you're getting dehydrated and you're out of water, it's best to stop anywhere where water is available.

In Iowa you can stop at a farmhouse, and the people there would most likely be glad to fill your bottles and let you rest a while in the shade. If you begin to feel better you might cautiously continue riding.

HOWEVER, IT MIGHT be best to call somebody to pick you up when you're ready to call it quits. I know it's embarrassing not to be able to make it home on your own power, but it's probably a wise decision.

There are also several other precautions for hot weather cycling. Ride in the early morning or late evening if possible. You can't really train your body to adapt to the heat and humidity, so why suffer needlessly in such conditions.

If you must ride during the hottest part of the day, you can prepare for that also. Drink plenty of liquid the night before. Wear a cycling hat and sunglasses. Usually people don't have to be told to wear such items, since they're so fashionable now. Use a sunscreen if you don't have a tan or have a tendency to burn.

I WEAR JERSEYS even on the most scorching days because a sweat-soaked jersey keeps me cooler than my bare skin. I also like to place a wet sponge just below my neck, so the water can cool my back throughout the ride. The sponge can also be re-moistened with water from a bottle during the ride. It's also nice to have enough extra water so you can douse your head during a race or ride. You don't know how much of a relief it is to have someone spraying you during a race until you have ridden in such conditions. On most rides, however, you must do your own spraying.

If you've genetically inherited a high level of heat tolerance, you shouldn't have any problems in the hot weather. But if you're susceptible to hot weather, the few precautions I've suggested might help you finish a race, survive RAGBRAI or just enjoy your summer rides more. Don't let the Iowa summer put an end to your cycling.

REMBER September? You were fresh, eager, ready to be academically invigorated. You were ready to read books with fine print and few pictures. You were ready to begin a steady relationship with a computer terminal. You were going to avoid socializing in the UI Main Library and get serious about your grades. You were going to jump out of bed Friday morning in time to shower and have a leisurely breakfast before that 8:30 a.m. class.

September was a helluva long time ago, wasn't it? Your eyes are permanently crossed from the small print, your computer is still better at Donkey Kong than Muse or Wylbur, and you now realize the library's rule against tailgate parties is almost as narrow-minded as any instructor who would take attendance on Fridays.

HEY, UNCLE HOLLYWOOD knows how you feel. Uncle Hollywood knows you need a few months to lean back and relax. It's summer vacation time in California, too, and Uncle Hollywood is going to quit messing around with heavy stuff like Platoon and give you outdoor action comedy adventure romances with happy endings and maybe Molly Ringwald.

Hot Pursuit does not have Ringwald, but it has everything else for a summer diet. Mercifully, it also has a certain integrity unusual to the flyweight film fare of summer. There are no nerds, no nudity (other than one set of running male buns seen from a distance), no gore.

Danny, the movie's hero, is a college freshman who actually studies instead of partying, even when his girlfriend Lori arrives unexpectedly in town the evening before his chem final. Danny's demanding chemistry professor is actually portrayed as a sympathetic human being instead of a martinet or dullard. Even Lori's parents behave as reasonable adults might.

BY SUMMER standards, this qualifies as incredible realism.

Film

But don't worry that Uncle Hollywood is trying to approximate Chekhov in Hot Pursuit. The movie's premise is that Danny drowns off during the chem final after studying all night and believes he will have to stay on campus to make up the course. Accordingly, he cancels out on the Caribbean vacation he is supposed to take with Lori and her family — but then is given a reprieve by his kindhearted instructor, who realizes what has happened.

Unfortunately, Danny has already missed his flight, and much of the rest of the movie concerns his (how did you guess?) hot pursuit to catch up with Lori and her family.

Writer-director Steven Lisberger manages to keep the chase fairly eventful without ever allowing developments to strain belief further than adventure movies are allowed by common consent to strain it. Best of all, he keeps Danny a likeable teen instead of making him into a bumbler or a superhero, even when he is performing heroics against a gang of hijackers. Actor John Cusack assists by playing Danny within a moderate guy-next-door range, losing his temper with a sense of humor that he has lost his temper, or voicing his frustration with an underlying optimism that things have to get better.

ROBERT LOGGIA becomes rather hammy as a skipper in pursuit of men who hijacked his boat, but still delivers some enjoyable touches. As Lori, actress Wendy Gazelle is asked to do little more than look attractive, which she does quite adequately.

The modest pleasures of Hot Pursuit will be most appreciated by those between ages 12 and 16 — but if one desperately needs some light relaxation between finals, there are worse places to find it.

Judging from Uncle Hollywood's list of coming attractions, many of those worse places will be coming to your hometown cinema this summer.

Hart's speech draws record viewers

NEW YORK (UPI) — NBC won the prime-time ratings week, but it was Gary Hart who scored the big numbers, attracting an estimated 20 million daytime viewers in his farewell speech, figures showed Tuesday.

Hart's speech Friday at noon, in which he withdrew from the Democratic presidential campaign, beat out game shows and soap operas — drawing about 30 percent to 50 percent more than the networks and the stations ordinarily have at that hour.

The overall ratings were not higher, but more stations carried the broadcast than usually carry network daytime programs.

In prime-time, NBC won a week in which all three networks launched a heated race, fueled with specials, TV-movies and miniseries, to win the all-important May sweeps period that sets future advertising rates.

On Sunday, the networks went head-to-head with special programming, and CBS's two-hour "A Gathering of Old Men" came out the winner (No. 10) over the first installments of NBC's "Hands of a Stranger" (No. 27) and ABC's "Queenie" (No. 37).

NBC HAD FIVE out of the top 10 prime-time shows. The season finale of "Cheers" was the most watched show of the week and marked the first time in its five-year history that "Cheers" has been No. 1. It was the cliffhanger, where Diane (Shelley Long) and Sam (Ted Danson) call off marriage at the last moment. Long will not be back next season. "Family Ties" was No. 2 and "The Cosby Show" was No. 3. ABC's "Moonlighting" was next, followed by CBS's "Murder, She Wrote."

For the week ending May 10, the third week of the summer repeat season, NBC posted a 14.6 rating and 25 share, CBS had a 14.1 rating and 25 share and ABC had a 10.9 rating and 19 share, according to the A.C. Nielsen Co.

In news, "NBC Nightly News" with Tom Brokaw had a 10.4 rating and 22 share, "CBS Evening News" with Dan Rather had a 9.8 rating and 21 share and "ABC World News Tonight" with Peter Jennings had a 9.3 rating and 20 share.

EACH RATINGS point represents about 874,000 households and a share is the percentage of operating sets tuned to a particular show.

The top 10 prime-time shows for the week ending May 10, according to the A.C. Nielsen Co., were:

1. "Cheers" (NBC)
2. "Family Ties" (NBC)
3. "The Cosby Show" (NBC)
4. "Moonlighting" (ABC)
5. "Murder, She Wrote" (CBS)
6. (tie) "Murder, She Wrote Pt. 2" (CBS)
7. "Nothing In Common" (NBC)
8. "Golden Girls" (NBC)
9. "Growing Pains" (ABC)
10. "A Gathering of Old Men" (CBS)

'Gardens of Stone' explores unseen side of Vietnam War

By Kevin C. Kretschmer
Staff Writer

Film

A SELDOM seen side of the military is glimpsed in director Francis Coppola's Vietnam-era drama Gardens of Stone. The film, from the novel by Nicholas Proffitt, looks not at the war itself, but at the effects it has on soldiers stationed halfway around the world.

The story is set at Fort Myer, Va., the home of The Old Guard, the official ceremonial unit of the U.S. Army. Adjacent to the post is Arlington National Cemetery where Old Guardsmen perform highly ritualized burial services as part of their daily routine.

Gardens of Stone examines the pressures of acting the role of "toy soldier" at a time when patriotism is considered a questionable quality by the public and real-life conditions call for the well-trained soldier to serve his country in Vietnam. Unlike so many other accounts of the military, this story does not focus on the top brass of the unit. Instead it relates the feelings and actions of the average soldier, the non-commissioned officer.

THE RONALD BASS screenplay is masterly in creating credible, yet very human characters with which to explore the inner conflicts of the highly professional soldier whose personal code is challenged by the politics of modern war.

The main section of the film is told as a flashback inside a framing device that forces the viewer to make an emotional investment with the characters from the outset. This narrative trick is unnecessary; the story would easily stand on its own without this device. As it is, this technique undercuts the tension created during the unfolding of the storyline. Still, the film retains the audience's interest in, and sympathy with, its characters.

James Caan stars as Sgt. 1st Class Clell Hazard, a platoon sergeant who becomes father-figure to Spec. 4 Jackie Willow (D.B. Sweeney), the son of a Korean War buddy, who is assigned to The Old Guard. The gung ho recruit rejects the safety of this state-side duty and immediately requests a transfer to an infantry unit stationed in Vietnam. The worldly Sgt. Hazard tries to explain that this war is unlike previous wars and is better left to others. "In this war there is no front. It's not even a war. There's nothin' to win, and no way to win it," says Hazard. Willow remains unconvinced.

HAZARD'S AND WILLOW'S private lives are further complicated and enriched by the women they encounter. Samantha Davis (Angelica Huston) is a Washington Post reporter and anti-war activist who, nevertheless, discovers Hazard's soft side, the usually hidden side of the career soldier. Mary Stuart Masterson plays Rachel, the independent daughter of an Army colonel who disapproves of her romance with an enlisted man.

Coppola is still maturing as a director. As with his previous film, Peggy Sue Got Married, he shows a growing strength in shaping believable personalities in the fiction. He is becoming a complete director, no longer just a technician with a flashy visual style.

Caan ended a five-year career hiatus to play the role of Hazard and his return is an auspicious one. This part may be his best to date and he succeeds in infusing it with the proper amounts of hard-edged cynicism and underlying self-doubt.

IN HIS FIRST major starring role, D.B. Sweeney gives a fine performance as the spirited young soldier. Huston and Masterson are well-used in their roles, though it is James Earl Jones, as The Old Guard's sergeant major, who makes the greatest impact in a supporting role. Jones steals virtually every scene he appears in as Caan's long-time friend and colleague "Goody" Nelson.

The photography, by Jordan Cronenweth (who also worked with Coppola on Peggy Sue Got Married), is striking and the extensive location filming at Fort Myer and Fort Belvoir, Va. is used effectively.

It would have been interesting to have seen the response Gardens of Stone would have received had it been released 20 years ago. In 1987 it is still an extremely worthwhile depiction of a view of the Vietnam War and the military that is rarely presented.

Entertainment Today

At the Bijou

Mildred Pierce (1945). Joan Crawford plays the devoted mother who works her way to the top to be able to the best of everything to her ungrateful daughter (Ann Blyth). At 7 p.m.

Notorious (1946). Alfred Hitchcock directed this electric thriller starring Ingrid Bergman and Cary Grant. Bergman plays the bitter daughter of a spy, who — to redeem herself — agrees to spy back on her father's Nazi friends. Her relationship with Grant is anything but innocent; no more nice girl image for Bergman. At 9 p.m.
