Committee narrows revenue raising options

Stephen Atkins

By James Cahoy
Staff Writer

A property tax increase, a city sales tax or a vehicle tax are options Iowa City residents may face in order to stop a predicted $1 million city deficit by fiscal year 1989.

The Iowa City Citizens' Committee on City Revenue narrowed revenue raising options for Iowa City to three different tax increases Wednesday night.

The sales tax was suggested by several of the committee members as the best policy option because of the amount of revenue it could raise.

"A sales tax increase would have many advantages," committee member Ann Bovbjerg said. "It would generate a lot of money, both visitors and residents of the city would pay it, and it is flexible in terms of how much people would pay."

According to figures released by Iowa City Manager Stephen Atkins' office, a 1 percent sales tax increase for Iowa City would raise almost $2 million for Iowa City. This would not only meet the projected revenue shortfall, but would allow for property tax relief of almost $1 million. State law requires property tax relief be included on any referendum to raise money through another tax.

THE AMOUNT PAID in city

sales tax would be small for most citizens, and would be fair to most county residents, Bovbjerg said, but she added that a sales tax would also have disadvantages.

"It would be an extra charge, and it might change how and where people spend their money," Bovbjerg said. "It also is not very stable, in that it goes up and down depending on the economy."

Committee member Peter Fisher presented arguments for and against a property tax increase. Fisher pointed out that the property tax is deductible on state and federal income tax returns, as well as being more stable and predictable than a sales tax.

But Fisher said a property tax is regressive for lower income families, it does not take into account families' personal circumstances, and it could result in higher rental rates for apartment dwellers in the city.

"IN ADDITION, the 7,300 university students living in dorms and family housing do not pay property taxes," Fisher said. "Owners of tax exempt properties also do not pay property taxes. It is difficult to judge how fair a property tax increase would be."

The final proposal involved a vehicle tax. According to figures from the Atkins' office, a $25 tax on all vehicles registered in Johnson County would provide an additional $1 million revenue.

But Atkins said UI students would be able to avoid the vehicle tax.

"We have many students in town who would simply not bother to register their car in the county," Atkins said. "The tax would mainly fall on residents."

At the citizens' committee's next meeting, it will shape a final proposal to the Iowa City Council.

But committee members reaffirmed their commitment to raise city revenues rather than cutting city services.

Safe sex wins out in satire on AIDS

By Shawn Plank
Staff Writer

Dorothy, the Scarecrow, the Tinman and the Cowardly Lion gave UI students an unconventional lesson on safe sex practices to prevent AIDS and other sexually transmitted diseases on the Pentacrest Wednesday afternoon.

The four, played by students in the UI Theatre Arts Department, presented "The Wizard of AIDS," a satire of the movie "The Wizard of Oz."

Michael Barto, who directed the 30-minute show and starred as the Cowardly Lion, said he was looking for a lighter way of treating the serious subject.

"We were looking for a way to educate a general audience and not frighten people off," he said.

ABOUT 75 PEOPLE gathered on the lawn on the east side of Old Capitol as the show progressed. Afterwards, they were showered with condoms and pamphlets on safe sex information, provided by the UI Gay People's Union.

Following the show, Barto said he was surprised by the size of the crowd and was pleased with its reaction.

"People are happy and chatty and didn't get preached at," Barto said.

The four characters encountered the Wicked Witch of Unsafe Sex and traveled through the Forest of Sexually Transmitted Diseases while Dorothy, played by Laura

'The Wizard of AIDS' storyline pits The Good Fairy, Miller, against UI junior Don Shalley as the Wicked Witch of Unsafe Sex in a Wednesday performance.

Miller, held fast to her red ruby rubber slippers before the group met the Wizard of AIDS, played by Gina Kaufmann.

In this performance, AIDS stood for Aware Individuals Deserving Survival.

THE PLAY BATTLED misinformation spread about the AIDS virus and encouraged safe sex practices through parodies of songs, such as "If I Only Had a Brain," sung by the Scarecrow.

"I'd always use a rubber on a girlfriend or another, if I only had a brain," sang the Scarecrow.

But the songs also had their more poignant moments, such as when Barto, playing the Cowardly Lion, sang about watching a sexual partner die of AIDS.

"To watch him slowly suffer, took more strength than I could muster," the lion sang.

The play also took popular lines from the play, altering them slightly. The Forest of Sexually Transmitted Diseases was not a haven for "lions and tigers and bears," but rather of "gonorrhea, herpes and AIDS, oh my!"

BUT SAFE SEX won out over unsafe sex when Dorothy and her friends smothered the Wicked Witch of Unsafe Sex with a garbage bag-sized condom. And Dorothy found her way back to Kansas by clicking her heels together and repeating, "There's no sex like safe sex."

The eight-member cast, who collaborated on the script, has presented the play at the 620 Club, 620 S. Madison St., and in the downtown pedestrian mall. Barto said there is talk about touring the show around the Midwest during the summer.

Micheal Blake, GPU co-moderator, said the performance uses the right elements to treat the sensitive subject.

"Humor is a good way to broach a serious, touchy subject people want to shy away from," Blake said. "This is a really good way to get across good information in a non-threatening way."

American volunteer shot, not tortured, claims father

WASHINGTON (UPI) — American volunteer Benjamin Linder, killed while working with the Sandinista government in Nicaragua, was shot at point blank range, the victim's father and government sources said Wednesday.

However, David Linder, a doctor and pathologist, discounted a report that his son may have been tortured before being shot in the head from a distance of about 2 feet.

Earlier, government sources told United Press International that lacerations on Linder's forehead, inflicted either by a needle or a knife, indicated he may have been tortured before being killed in the May 28 attack by the adm. - backed Contras on a hamlet in northern Nicaragua. Those sources also said Linder had been shot from close range.

But during a recess of a hearing of the Western Hemisphere Subcommittee of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, Linder said he had concluded the lacerations most likely came from his son's broken glasses.

Linder told UPI he had found no evidence his son had been tortured before being shot or from his own inspection of the body at the funeral.

DURING HIS testimony, Linder was critical of the U.S. government and the failure of the State Department to investigate the cause of his son's death.

"I came to bury the guy, and I wound up as an investigator on the scene," Linder told the subcommittee. He said he encountered no one from the State Department.

Assistant Secretary of State Elliott Abrams explained that the State Department is not allowed to send people into the area where Linder died because it is a combat zone.

A doctor's pathology report shows Linder, 27, of Portland, Ore., was killed by a bullet that struck his right temple and exited the back of his head — fired from a gun about 2 feet away, Linder said.

"WHAT I'M TELLING you is that they blew his brains out at point blank range as he lay wounded," Linder said.

He said there was a bullet hole in his son's left forearm and punctures in the back of his legs from which metal particles were removed.

Mary Risacher, an American nurse who helped take care of the body shortly after the killing, said, "The thing that stood out most to me was the powder burn on his right temple."

She said Linder had no other wounds that could cause death "only the bullet fired at very close range in his right temple."

The evidence contradicts earlier news reports that the American civilian was killed by grenade shrapnel, the sources told UPI.

Sources said there is no evidence so far on who killed Linder, or why he may have been marked for assassination.

Panel rips McFarlane on 'shreds'

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Robert McFarlane, temper flaring, acknowledged Wednesday that he did not try to prevent Lt. Col. Oliver North from holding a Nov. 21 "shredding party" to destroy documents about the Iran-Contra scandal.

With his methodic, sometimes plodding style punctuated by outbursts under intense questioning from members of the House and Senate panel investigating the affair, McFarlane also lashed out at lawmakers who questioned a 1985 administration effort to ransom American hostages in Lebanon for $2 million.

In addition, the former national security adviser said he kept President Ronald Reagan generally informed of efforts to sustain the Nicaraguan Contra rebels, but dodged questions about whether he ever told Reagan about North's possibly illegal actions taken to grant the president's wish to keep the rebels' "body and soul together."

IN OTHER TESTIMONY on his third day before the panel, McFarlane also:

• Said he suspected North may have been working under the direction of former CIA Director William Casey.

• First said that he was denied access to Reagan, then changed his mind and said not even former White House chief of staff Donald Regan blocked him from the Oval Office when he needed to talk to Reagan, as was the popular notion.

• Recounted under questioning from Sen. George Mitchell, D-Maine, a conversation with North on Nov. 21, 1986, in which North said, "There's going to be a shredding party."

North expressed to McFarlane concern about Attorney General Edwin Meese's informal investigation under way that weekend into the U.S. arms sales to Iran. During that probe, Meese's aides turned up evidence of the diversion of sales profits to the Contras.

NORTH'S secretary, Fawn Hall, has told investigators that on the night of Nov. 21, she and North fed into shredding machines documents on the White House role in the arms sales to Iran and the diversion to the Contras.

Questioned by Mitchell, McFarlane said he did not try to dissuade North from shredding the documents and he did not tell Meese about the remark during a Sunday, Nov. 23, meeting with attorney general.

Mitchell then asked McFarlane if he understood what obstruction of justice is and if he knew of an American's obligation to prevent crimes if possible.

Tempers flare at hearings

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Robert McFarlane exploded with rage Wednesday at questions about his knowledge of a U.S. attempt to bribe the captors of Americans in Lebanon.

McFarlane defended the administration's use of Drug Enforcement Agency agents in a June 1985 ransom attempt for the American hostages, noting that other countries such as Israel have definitive policies toward terrorists.

He denied Sen. Warren Rudman's, R-N.H., suggestion that there may have been a legal need to notify Congress or provide written presidential authorization for the operation.

"No sir! It is more than passing strange to me that we cannot aspire to a policy that is more effective to deal with terrorism," McFarlane shouted.

"Now, it is undeniable that some countries are good at it. And they are good because terrorists know that whenever they commit terrorism against Israel, something, somehow, somewhere is going to happen."

"Now, it may not always be arms, it may not be pre-emptive attack. It may be negotiation, it may be bribing, but you can be goddamn sure if any Israeli is caught, he's going to have his government going after the government who did it," he said.

McFarlane immediately apologized for his "intemperance."

"Did you do that in this case?" the Maine Democrat asked.

McFARLANE responded, "Not well enough."

Mitchell: "You didn't try to persuade him not to destroy documents, did you?"

McFarlane: "No sir, I didn't, but I think it is worth noting at least that if his reason for saying that to me was his sense of obligation to me, to protect me."

After the hearing recessed for the day, Mitchell said, "I did not suggest that Mr. McFarlane was himself involved in the obstruction of justice. My question was what he felt the duty of a citizen to be on hearing the possibility that a crime may be about to occur. I believe it is not acceptable to merely do nothing," Mitchell said.

2,900 set to receive diplomas Saturday

The UI will hold spring commencement ceremonies at 9:30 a.m. Saturday, May 16, in Carver-Hawkeye Arena, awarding diplomas to approximately 2,900 degree candidates.

Steven Nelson, who will receive a doctoral degree from the College of Dentistry, will speak on behalf of the graduates.

UI President James O. Freedman will deliver the traditional charge to graduates and confer degrees.

The commencement will bring the total number of graduates since the UI was founded in 1847 to about 197,000.

Parking spaces for those attending commencement will be available in the lots south and west of the Arena and in the top two Dental Science Building lots. Additional parking will be available near Kinnick Stadium.

UI report shows downward salary trend

The latest economic forecast from the UI Institute for Economic Research shows a downward trend in salaries during 1986 that Institute Director Jerald Barnard says will continue in 1987.

The forecast, released this week, shows that between the fourth quarter of 1985 and the end of 1986, hourly earnings in Iowa declined from $10.45 to $10.12. This trend is expected to carry over into 1987 and affect the rate of growth in income.

"Our hourly wage has actually contracted because employment is growing so very slowly in Iowa and we continue to see layoffs, renegotiated labor contracts and early retirement for senior workers," Barnard said. "All of these have a dampening effect and, together with the abundant pool of labor in the state, the result is that wages just aren't increasing."

The forecast also says Iowa's economy will continue to experience modest growth in 1987, depending on the federal deficit, trade issues and inflation.

"We expect 1987 to be as good as 1986, which was not a year of rapid growth, but one in which some progress was made," said Barnard, who jointly prepared the forecast with William Vignor, research assistant.

Pharmacy supervisor receives award

The students and clinical faculty of the UI College of Pharmacy have voted to give Mark Sorenson, a pharmacy supervisor at UI Hospitals, the "Preceptor of the Year" award.

The award recognizes the efforts of a pharmacy preceptor — a pharmacist who provides students with instruction and practical experience in a professional setting. Sorenson worked with 20 pharmacy students during the past year.

Sorenson said he is especially pleased to be praised for something he enjoys doing and looks forward to being a preceptor again.

"You can't help but learn something yourself in this kind of a situation," he said. "I enjoyed working with the externs and, often enough, they were a big help, too."

The award, which is sponsored by the Syntex drug company, makes Sorenson a candidate for a national citation from the company and could bring a $1,000 donation in his name to the UI College of Pharmacy. The award will be presented to Sorenson at the UI College of Pharmacy's annual senior dinner May 15.

3 win Ballard Dissertation Fellowships

Three UI students have been awarded Ada Ballard Dissertation Fellowships for the 1987-88 academic year.

The fellowships, each with a stipend of $7,000 plus academic-year tuition, are awarded to students in the humanities who have completed all requirements for the doctoral degree except the dissertation.

Jeffrey Ostler, Mary Ella Saverino and Kathy Taylor each received the fellowship.

Ostler's dissertation is a study of the Populist movement in the United States in the 19th century. His work will focus on the reason movements such as Populism have not been more successful in changing the dominant economic and political order.

Saverino is working on the development and defense of an ethical theory which is concerned with virtue, or human excellence. Her work will include an assessment of ethical theories which have dominated recent thinking.

Taylor is studying four contemporary Mexican writers who have challenged conventional distinctions between history and fiction. In addition to dealing with innovative novels which have not yet received critical attention, Taylor will explore writing and re-writing of history, in particular as it relates to Latin America.

'Different' student billing system begins

By Scott Hauser
Staff Writer

U-bills may look a little different this month, but payment is still accepted as usual at the UI Cashier's Office in Jessup Hall.

Replacing the traditional letter-size envelopes addressed to the UI Cashier's Office in Jessup Hall are legal-sized envelopes addressed to the University of Iowa Payment Processing Center in Cedar Rapids.

The new bills are labeled a Statement of University Accounts Receivable.

Business office officials said the new system should not concern UI students because payments can still be delivered to the office in Jessup Hall.

STUDENTS CAN STILL slip the payments in the drop-box at Jessup Hall or mail the bills, the only difference for the UI is how its bank account is credited, UI cashier Don Ross said.

"It's cut out the human element at our end, really," Ross said.

With the new system, payments made are deposited directly into the UI's bank account rather than being processed by the UI before being deposited.

Under the old system, the UI Cashier's Office would process the payments as they came through the office. U-bills are sent to students the first of every month and payment is usually due by the 15th of the month.

With the new system, all processing is handled by the bank rather than the UI office.

UI Assistant Treasurer Duane Allison said the bills are mailed to a lock box in Cedar Rapids where they are picked up by the UI's bank and deposited to the UI's account.

HE SAID SINCE the money is directly deposited to the UI's account, the money is available for immediate use by the UI. Ross said the center was located in Cedar Rapids because all Iowa City mail goes to Cedar Rapids for processing, making Cedar Rapids the ideal location.

The new system will make the UI payment process more efficient without compromising student accessibility, Allison said.

"It's better cash management," he said of the new system. "We get to use the money faster."

Allison said he sees no disadvantages to the new system because UI students are served the same way as before.

"In the overall calculations, it should provide an increased funds to the university," he said because processing costs will be reduced.

Journalism society honors UI professor

By John Bartenhagen
Staff Writer

UI Journalism Professor William Zima has been named the outstanding 1986-87 faculty member at the UI School of Journalism by the campus chapter of Sigma Delta Chi, the professional society of journalists.

Professor Richard Johns, Sigma Delta Chi Faculty Advisor, said faculty members are nominated by students belonging to the organization. He said when nominating a faculty member, students must identify instances of service to the school and the news industry and instances of support for students, such as advising, special counseling or job placement.

Zima worked for nearly 20 years as a journalist at The Chicago Tribune, The Des Moines Register and The Milwaukee Journal. He has held positions as a city bureau reporter, copy editor, night city editor and was an editorial writer for 10 years. For the last 19 years he has taught journalism at the UI.

ZIMA SAID PRACTICAL experience can be both a benefit and a disadvantage to a teacher.

"I don't think news experience qualifies you to teach, but it does help you to present material in a better context," he said. "At the same time, if a teacher comes in with a bunch of war stories about their experiences, they can become boring to the students."

Zima added he misses the environment of the newsroom, but is able to stay in touch with the field through visiting professionals and correspondence with former students. Some of his former students include staff members at Newsweek, The New York Times, The Los Angeles Times and The Miami Herald.

"I miss not working periodically because it removes the rust from your skills," he said. "But I especially miss the newsroom — all the pain, strain and humor that is a part of producing a paper creates an intense camaraderie among newsmen."

THE RECOGNITION from Sigma Delta Chi is gratifying because it represents a form of feedback that is less extreme in its nature than the assessments of individual students, he said.

"I enjoy contact with students and this shows me that maybe I'm doing something right," he said.

Last year, Zima was honored by the University of Tennessee as the Edward J. Meeman Visiting Professor. He was named the outstanding faculty member there and received the Joseph P. Sbuttoni Jr. Memorial Key for 1985-86.

Zima is the fourth faculty member to be honored by the UI chapter of Sigma Delta Chi. Johns and Ken Stark were selected in 1985 and Jack Dvorak was chosen last year.

Tomorrow

Friday Events

The Iowa City Zen Center will hold Zen meditation sessions at 5:30 and 6:20 a.m. at 10 S. Gilbert St.

Richard A. Dupue of the University of Minnesota Department of Psychology will speak on "Behavioral and Dopaminergic Alterations in Seasonal Bipolar Affective Disorders" at a colloquium at 11 a.m. in Spence Laboratories Room 120.

A Pequena Coimbra, the Portuguese language club, will meet for a showing of the Brazilian film Galjin at 7:30 p.m. in Communication Studies Building Room 203.

The UI International Folk Dance Club will meet at 7:30 p.m. in Voxman Hall.

Liberal Arts Convocation will be held at 8 p.m. in Carver-Hawkeye Arena to individually recognize liberal arts graduates. Those participating should wear cap and gown.

Tomorrow Policy

Announcements for the Tomorrow column must be submitted to The Daily Iowan by 3 p.m. two days prior to publication. For example: Notices for Friday events must be submitted by 3 p.m. Wednesday. All notices will appear in the DI one day prior to the events they announce. Notices may be sent through the mail, but be sure to mail early. All submissions must be clearly printed on a Tomorrow column blank (which appear on the classified ads page) or typewritten and triple-spaced on a full sheet of paper. Each announcement must be on a separate sheet of paper. Announcements will not be accepted over the telephone. All submissions must include the name and phone number, which will not be published, of a contact person in case there are any questions.

Events not eligible

Notice of events where admission is charged will not be accepted. Notice of political events, except meeting announcements of recognized student groups, will not be accepted.

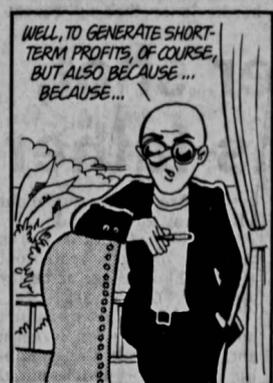

Notices that are commercial advertisements will not be accepted. Questions regarding the Tomorrow column should be directed to the managing editor.

Farmers find aid at Kirkwood

By Kathleen O'Malley
Staff Writer

A farm program at an area college aims to put profit back into agriculture by keeping local farmers on the farm.

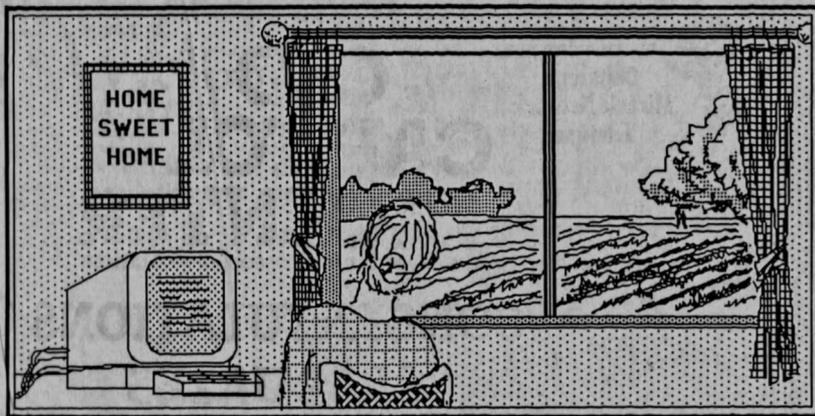

"Two major themes of our program are new hope and new economies of freedom for the farmer," Larry Statler, innovator of the program and dean of agriculture and technology at Kirkwood Community College, Cedar Rapids.

As the farm crisis continues, some farmers are being forced off their land, Statler said, while others are implementing Kirkwood's "new hope" plan which includes planting fruit and vegetable crops not normally seen on Iowa farms — blueberries, raspberries, strawberries, cauliflower and broccoli.

"Our primary goal is to keep the farmer on the land," Statler said. "Our secondary objective is to train those farmers that can't possibly continue to manage their land."

HE EXPLAINED THAT for those farmers who are stricken with severe economic conditions or who simply aren't intrigued by the alternative crop options, the program offers more than 150 different farm and non-farm alternatives.

Besides providing education to the farmer who decides to raise alternative crops and animals, the program provides labor-intensive instructions for those who work in plumbing, welding, farm equipment maintenance and electrical work.

In addition, farm women are getting trained in clerical work, bookkeeping, computer use, sales employment and craft projects.

In addition, the program tries to make participation as easy as possible for the farmer, according to John Halder, outreach coordinator.

HE SAID THE PROGRAM manages to do this by sending a five-member outreach staff to seven surrounding counties:

Benton, Linn, Jones, Iowa, Johnson, Cedar and Washington.

"Farmers don't knock on doors looking for help," Halder said. "Farmers are, generally, slow to change because of their conservative nature."

He said that after the outreach worker locates a community group of about 10 interested farmers, the three-hour counseling workshop begins.

Strategies in marketing, production and cost containment center around the alternative farm plan.

Some specific classroom instruction includes identifying local sources and customers who are in need of the new farm product, advocating natural farming by using a low-input of chemicals and recommending farm grouping among local farmers who share interests.

Statler said that the program's two-year experience has earned them the reputation of becoming the information center to nationwide groups that have an interest in implementing a similar program. He added that he has consulted and introduced the program to over 10 midwestern states.

The program receives faculty and resource support from Kirkwood, as well as a grant from the state department of education.

City chooses men to fill vacancies

By Carol Monaghan
Staff Writer

The Iowa City Council appointed four Johnson County residents to city boards and commissions Tuesday night, but none of the appointees were women.

Although Mayor William Ambrisco recently said the council attempts to actively practice affirmative action when making appointments to the city's governing boards, at least one woman's nomination by two councilors to the Board of Library Trustees did not muster a majority of the council's votes.

Both councilors Kate Dickson and George Strait nominated Dolores A. Olson, of 1113 Penkridge Drive, for a six-year term to the Board of Library Trustees. But the four of the six councilors present supported the nomination of two men, B. Kent Swaim, of 3318 Arbor Drive and Gary Scott Reed, of 114 N. Dodge St.

STRAIT SAID THE appointment of two men, which replace the vacancy of a man and a woman on the nine-member panel, will create a "serious gender gap." "We should make a very serious effort when appointments come up to keep the balance up," Strait said, who added Olson was "a very capable person."

"We have to give more than lip service to maintaining a balance," Strait added.

Councilor Kate Dickson said that at least two councilors should switch their votes to support the woman candidate.

But Ambrisco said he would encourage more women to apply to all boards and commissions.

"I can't recall one woman's application to the Airport Commission," Ambrisco said.

Earlier this month Ambrisco told The Daily Iowan that "the only thing that inhibits (the council) from having absolute equality on all of our boards is the lack of applications from women."

A May 1 breakdown of board and commission memberships show that there are more than double the number of men serving on city commissions than women. It listed 53 women compared to 112 men as members of Iowa City's 23 different board and commissions.

City council OKs BDI financing

The Iowa City council voted, 4-1, to adopt a resolution that provides $95,000 of city money to Business Development Inc. to help finance the construction of Heinz Road.

BDI's board of directors had requested money from the city to help pay for the project that is part of the larger Scott Boulevard project.

Scott Boulevard will eventually provide an industrial link to Iowa City's east side to Interstate 80.

The city has applied for and is expected to receive from the Iowa Department of Transportation, RISE funds to be used to finance 40 percent, or $107,412, of the cost of constructing portions of Scott Boulevard and Heinz Road. The land for Heinz Road extension is owned by BDI.

BDI's 60 percent share totals $161,118.

But BDI officials said they do not have sufficient funds to pay all of its share of that cost. The city will help finance $95,000 of the cost by issuing city bonds.

Councilor Larry Baker voted against the resolution, and said he was concerned about BDI's financial instability.

Iowa City Manager Stephen Atkins earlier said that $1.6 million of state RISE development funds were at stake, referring to the road use tax dollars.

City schools open discussion on AIDS

By Anne Kevlin
Freelance Writer

Sex education in public schools helps students understand the facts of life. Now, at the recommendation of U.S. Surgeon General C. Everett Koop, some public schools, including schools in the Iowa City Community School District, are teaching students how AIDS changes those facts.

Teaching about the birds and the bees in public schools is taking on a new dimension, partly because of Koop's current report on AIDS. In it, Koop advocates sex education that "must include information on heterosexual and homosexual relationships."

"Education about AIDS should start in early elementary school and at home so that children can grow up knowing the behavior to avoid to protect themselves from the AIDS virus," the report states.

The surgeon general's advice is hitting home in the Iowa City Community School District, where students are being taught the dangers of the deadly virus.

AIDS EDUCATION IS being well-received by parents, according to Richard Huber, science and health curriculum coordinator for the school district. "In general, I think the public is more supportive of sex education than they ever have been," he said.

Currently, sex education in Iowa City schools is taught in the first, fourth and sixth grades, but AIDS is not emphasized.

"I think you have to be very, very careful about scaring kids (in elementary grades) about incurable diseases," Huber said, adding that teachers, however, try to answer questions students in those grades have about AIDS.

Information about AIDS is included in the health curriculum of the seventh grade, where "thorough and frank discussions on AIDS occur," Huber said.

Teaching about AIDS can be difficult because the disease is so new, said Judy Gehrke, who teaches seventh graders at Northwest Junior High School. There are no textbooks on the disease, Gehrke said, so she tries to use the most recent AIDS information she can find, including magazine articles, pamphlets and videotaped TV programs.

IN TEACHING HER students the ways AIDS can be transmitted, Gehrke says she deals with sex frankly and openly. The students frequently ask why gay men are often AIDS victims, she said, and they are also "real concerned about whether you can get it through kissing."

Gehrke says she hasn't received any complaints from parents who object to her teaching about AIDS. Before she began the unit, she mailed information about the subject to the parents of her students.

One of the difficulties in teaching about AIDS, Gehrke says, is wondering how the students will react in the future. "You don't know what impression they're leaving with," she said. "I think that one of the things they come out with is that they have to be careful, and they have to be select" in choosing behaviors.

Gehrke said she thinks there should be a lot more AIDS education in other grades. "We have seniors in high school who haven't had anything on AIDS."

According to Huber, the school district is planning to expand AIDS education next year to include ninth graders as well.

JERRY ARGANBRIGHT, principal of West High School, said some information about AIDS is being incorporated into biology classes there, but there is no formal AIDS curriculum yet. 10th graders receive some AIDS education through a lecture on sexually transmitted diseases, he said.

Arganbright said he believes education about AIDS should be the responsibility of both parents and schools, but he said not all parents are teaching their children about the dangers of AIDS.

At City High School, students in this year's 10th grade biology classes also received about two weeks of AIDS education as part of a unit on immunology and epidemiology. Classes discussed the accumulation of knowledge from 1981 — when the first cases of AIDS were reported — to the present. Students learned how AIDS, originally thought to be a problem only for gay males and Haitians, "unfolded and became an affliction for the whole population," Bill Dutton, a City High biology teacher, said.

DUTTON ALSO SAID parents have been supportive of AIDS education, and some of his students are discussing the topic at home. "I have kids who have gone home and taught their parents (about AIDS)," he said.

This is the first year he has focused on AIDS in his class, but Dutton said the subject fits in closely with genetics and evolution, two of the other topics he covers. "(AIDS) is a logical extension of what we had been studying," he said.

One of the projects Dutton assigned his students was an evaluation of their lifestyles, both now and in the future. Dutton said the assignment was made for the students' personal uses, and the papers were not turned in to him.

"By being allowed to write in a non-threatening way to themselves, they were able to think about how (AIDS) would affect them," Dutton said.

Nira Pollock, a 10th-grade student of Dutton's, said the unit on AIDS benefitted her and her classmates.

"I think everybody in our class is convinced of the dangers (of AIDS)," she said.

Todd Buchanan

The Daily Iowan/Doug Smith

Photographer's success lies in determination, creativity

By Justine Todd
Special to The Daily Iowan

As a photographer, 25-year-old Todd Buchanan can make magic.

In 1984, the Iowa City native was part of a California newspaper photography team awarded a Pulitzer Prize for coverage of the Summer Olympics in Los Angeles. Buchanan's contribution — a finish line photo of bicycle road race winner Alexi Grewal — doesn't reflect the pains he went through to get the shot.

But, as with all good magic, what's not seen counts most.

"It's putting in the time that made the difference," Buchanan said. "I know I'm not as talented as some other photographers, but I put in the time."

"PUTTING IN the time" is Buchanan's modest way of describing the commitment, determination, creativity and willingness to pick himself up after getting knocked down that gives his photography a touch of magic.

Buchanan joined the photo staff at the Orange County Register in Orange County, Calif., at 23 — just two weeks after graduating from Western Kentucky University with a degree in photojournalism. In college, Buchanan was named the National Press Photographers Association College Photographer of the Year and took third place in the William Randolph Hearst photography competition.

By the time the Olympics were to start, he had been working at the newspaper only five months. As low photographer on the totem pole, Buchanan couldn't get an official pass allowing him to cover the games. Even the spectator tickets were sold out, so he was left trying to cover events he couldn't get near.

BUCHANAN SOLVED the problem when he realized the newspaper's three Olympic-credentialed photographers were so busy making preparations in Los Angeles, they were unable to cover things going on in Orange County, an area just 30 miles to the south.

Buchanan said he decided to concentrate his energies on covering the Olympic bicycle races in Orange County.

"With his planning and perseverance, Buchanan turned the Olympic bike races into an event for Orange County," Dennis Copeland, photo editor of the Orange County Register, said. "He gave 110 percent of himself and he did everything with a can-do attitude."

Starting a week in advance, Buchanan talked to Olympic officials, scouted the race path several times for the best vantage point and studied the racers as they practiced on the course.

"I decided the best place was not at the finish line, where the official press box was located," he said. "I couldn't get in there anyway because I didn't have a credential. But up on a hill, just past the finish line, was the place I knew I wanted to be."

THAT PLACE WAS a quarter-mile from the finish line, atop a 150-foot embankment. The distance, not to mention the height, presented problems solved only by renting a lens Canon made specifically for the Olympics. The 40-pound lens was 2 feet wide and would have cost Buchanan $30,000 if something happened to it.

"I got permission to be on the hill from the land owners, and staked my claim," he said. He chained a ladder to a tree to save his place and pitched camp, spending a sleepless night guarding his gear, which was worth more than $50,000 and weighed more than 100 pounds.

The following morning, Buchanan promised three spectators two six-packs each if they could keep the crowd from standing up in front of his camera when the winner crossed the finish line.

INSTEAD OF the usual jubilation and outstretched arms, Grewal, the first American to win a gold medal in Olympic cycling, crossed the line with a look of amazement and disbelief, and cradled his head in his hands, Buchanan said.

"It all paid off," Buchanan said. "As soon as I took the photo I knew what I had, but it's not often I get that feeling," he said.

"The credential photo area was right along side the finish line," Buchanan explained, "and when the rider came across the photographers were only getting his side and couldn't see his face. From my spot, when he crossed the line he rode straight toward me and I knew I had it," he said.

Successes come easy now for Buchanan, who came back to Iowa when California got old. He is now a photographer for the Cedar Rapids Gazette, and has earned several Iowa Press Photographers Association awards.

Still, Buchanan says he has a lot of goals to reach. He'd like to work professionally for National Geographic magazine, where he served as a college intern, and someday he'd like to earn an individual Pulitzer.

"That would be the ultimate honor of all," he said. "There's not much you could do to top that."

Train crash prompts drug tests

TAMA, Iowa (UPI) — Chicago Northwestern Railroad crew members involved in a two-train collision near Tama will be required to undergo drug tests during an investigation into the cause of the accident, railroad officials said Wednesday.

Ken Kettleson, spokesman for the railroad's Chicago headquarters, said the drug-testing requirement is simply a "safeguarding measure — not an indication of suspicion."

"Any time there's an accident in which the cause is not immediately evident, it's wise to cover every angle," Kettleson said. "We have no reason to suspect anyone might have been on drugs."

Kettleson said the accident occurred about 4:30 a.m. Wednesday when seven cars on a 116-car eastbound freight train derailed. A 110-car westbound cargo train then hit one of the derailed cars, causing 15 of its own cars to leave the track.

The trains were hauling plywood and new automobiles, Kettleson said.

TAMA FIRE CHIEF Larry Eisentrager said one crew member suffered minor facial lacerations, but his was the only injury reported. Kettleson declined to identify the crew member.

Kettleson said the Berg Corp., a Marshalltown, Iowa, equipment firm, has been contracted to move the derailed cars to a not-yet-designated location. He said the track has been closed through Tama and will not be reopened until cleanup efforts are thoroughly completed. A gravel road near the track also has been closed, he said.

A railroad crew from Albert Lea, Minn., has been called in to assist in cleanup efforts, Kettleson said.

Gayland Morgan, who lives just east of the crash site in rural Tama, said the noise from the collision jarred him from a sound sleep.

"It sounded just like thunder — at first I thought it was storming," he said. "Then I thought it might have been a plane. But when I went over there and looked, I could understand why it was so noisy. It's lucky no one was really hurt."

Kettleson said cleanup efforts could last through today.

AIDS awareness

"We're off to see the Wizard — the wonderful Wizard of AIDS." Reverberating off Schaeffer and Macbride halls, this phrase along with several others entertained more than 75 onlookers Wednesday afternoon. For half an hour, a group of UI students creatively informed audience members about one of the nation's biggest crises — AIDS.

The performance did not contain any cold facts or personal stories. No scare techniques were used nor did the actors lecture to audience members. Instead, Dorothy and her friends communicated a simple yet stark message to onlookers — AIDS can kill anyone who is sexually active.

In an entertaining manner, the cast of eight actors and actresses told onlookers that unless safe sex practices are used, heterosexuals and homosexuals alike run the risk of contracting acquired immune deficiency syndrome. Although the AIDS epidemic is anything but funny, the group was able to humorously convey that AIDS does not discriminate or judge. It just kills.

And the disease is deadly. More than 50 percent of the 30,000 reported victims nationwide since 1981 have died. The victims include people from all walks of life: men, women, homosexuals, heterosexuals, bisexuals, hemophiliacs, intravenous drug users.

Unfortunately, there is no "cure" for AIDS. Although scientists in several countries are currently at work developing a vaccine, experts predict that a cure is still several years away.

But sexually active individuals can take action to prevent contracting the disease. By practicing safe sex habits — using condoms and openly discussing sexual history with one's partner, for example — the rising incidence of AIDS may be slowed. After all, as Dorothy said, "There's no sex like safe sex."

Smart shoppers?

The United States is on a shopping spree. It's not an ordinary shopping spree, though. America is buying a country: Honduras. Honduras, the little trinket that's caught the eye of military planners in the Pentagon, is just what the United States has been looking for — it's strategically located, impoverished and unquestioning. Although Honduras was never exactly for sale, the United States has a way of making Third World countries see the benefits of becoming U.S. client states.

This week, the United States made yet another installment in its payment plan for Honduras. "Solid Shield '87," the codename for the largest U.S. military exercise in Central America, began in northern Honduras Wednesday when 50,000 American troops simulated an amphibious and airborne invasion of the region.

Actually, "Solid Shield '87" is nothing new: The United States has been holding continuous maneuvers in Honduras since 1983, rotating more than 100,000 American troops through this Central American nation. In addition to the troop exercises, the United States has given Honduras $382 million in military aid since 1981 and this year the Reagan administration plans to sell 12 F-5E fighter jets to the Honduran air force.

The end result of this "purchase" is that the United States has another pressure point to use against Nicaragua, which borders Honduras to the southeast. Already the primary base for the Contra rebels fighting to overthrow the Nicaraguan government, a well-fortified Honduras could one day be the command post in a U.S. invasion of Central America.

Such interpretations are, of course, cast aside by the Reagan administration, which claims to have only peaceful intentions in Central America. Unfortunately, U.S. actions undercut these peaceful words. A complete lack of support for the Contadora peace process, continuous funding (both legal and illegal) for the Contras and massive military aid programs for repressive governments all betray the U.S. intention to impose its will on the peoples of Central America.

U.S. blocks Contadora effort

By Colleen Smith and Stephanie D. Hnesh

SINCE JANUARY 1983, the four Contadora nations — Panama, Mexico, Colombia and Venezuela — have been trying to resolve conflicts in Central America through a regional peace treaty. Drafts of the proposed treaty have called for the withdrawal of all foreign military advisers in Central America, strict border control to protect the sovereignty of states, phased reductions in military forces and free elections.

However, the peace group has not yet been successful in drawing up a treaty that Nicaragua, Costa Rica, Guatemala, Honduras and El Salvador are willing to sign. Reasons for the inability to reach a formal agreement are many, but the lack of U.S. support for the Contadora peace initiatives is largely responsible for the deadlock. Instead, the United States has sought to undermine the Contadora process and implement its own plans for the future of Central America.

NICARAGUA IS THE ROOT of the U.S. opposition to the Contadora peace proposal. Unsatisfied with the group's acceptance of the Nicaraguan government, the United States has instead chosen to lend its support to the Contra rebels seeking to overthrow the Sandinistas. The U.S.-supported nations in Central America — Costa Rica, Honduras, Guatemala and El Salvador — are, in turn, being pressured by the United States to resist a Contadora treaty which does not require major political reforms in Nicaragua.

Nicaragua has been very close to signing a pact with the other Latin American nations, but Nicaraguan President Daniel Ortega refuses to formalize an agreement until the United States stops funneling aid to the Contras. Assistant Secretary of State for Inter-American Affairs Elliott Abrams, however, has said that even if Nicaragua signed a peace treaty the United States would continue to support the Contras.

EVIDENCE OF STRONG U.S. pressure against the Contadora peace initiatives came in 1984 when briefing papers leaked to The Washington Post described American attempts to prevent acceptance of a draft treaty. A National Security Council document, which tells how the United States persuaded El Salvador, Honduras and Costa Rica to reject the treaty, states: "We have effectively blocked Contadora Group efforts to impose a second draft of a revised Contadora Act."

The Reagan administration says it supports a peace treaty in Central America yet does nothing to back up its claim. Despite U.S. opposition, other groups, including members of the European Economic Community, the Organization of American States, the United Nations and representatives from Argentina, Brazil, Peru and Uruguay, have attended Contadora meetings in support of their efforts.

The United States ought to be condemned for this harsh stance toward the Contadora peace talks. These initiatives offer hope to the Latin American people that will never be found in a U.S.-controlled plan for peace in Central America. In order to seek a peaceful resolution to the conflicts, the Latin American countries need to work together without any pressure or manipulation from the Reagan administration.

The hierarchy of academics

By Vincent Casaregola

THE VOICE OF JUDGMENT is heard in the land — it is time for final grades. Perhaps more time, energy, sweat and pain is invested in the process of obtaining and dispensing grades than in any other academic activity. Though we pay lip service to the ideals of "higher learning" and "personal intellectual growth," all of us, students and faculty alike, crave to be members of the "elect," and grades seem our only security.

Grades are economic in nature — the currency of the curriculum. As a medium of exchange, they allow students to progress on their academic pilgrimage. At every phase of the journey students must possess the proper quantity and quality of grades if they are to continue.

Often an instructor will laugh at students' obsession with grades or comment that they should "concern themselves with learning and not worry about the grades." But the academy itself is obsessed with grades and students must develop the same obsession or "perish."

THE ECONOMIC SYSTEM enforced and supported by academic grades is essentially hierarchic. Alleged to be a "meritocracy," it is actually a plain, old-fashioned, self-perpetuating aristocracy. Grades are not a matter of education but of elimination. They are a means of sorting out and labeling the academic "undesirables," so that the hierarchy remains limited and narrow.

But wait! The learned professor cries, "Standards," and "Grade Inflation." Would we endanger our fragile economy or violate the pure standards of the elect by letting in "the transgressors"? We must maintain standards.

But what standards or, more precisely, whose standards should we uphold? Often, academic departments and divisions have a hard time agreeing upon standards within their limited disciplines. To expect a university-wide agreement is pure folly. The standards enforced by grades are usually those of the particular professor or teaching assistant and these are sometimes governed by tacit assumptions which have gone unquestioned for years.

To evaluate how well students measure up to these "standards," faculty use written documents. Not only in the humanities, but throughout the university curriculum, the course paper and the essay are major tools of evaluation.

UNFORTUNATELY, FEW FACULTY know enough about the research and theory of writing assessment to be effective interpreters of these documents. Frequently, essay tests and writing assignments are designed in a haphazard manner by individuals ill-qualified to judge the merit of the student responses.

Therefore, the grades derived from this process tend to be highly subjective opinions. In itself, this is not too great a flaw, if it were not for the immense authority with which we invest those grades and all that they imply. But the system is designed to regard these opinions as virtually unquestionable evaluations of student performance and ability. In many cases, this borders on professional malpractice on the part of both individuals and institutions.

Claims that "academic excellence" either exists or has fled are based on rather foggy notions of what constitutes such excellence. In very real terms, it has a great deal to do with creating a favorable impression, either on paper or in person. "Standards" and "excellence" are terms which often serve as smokescreens for indulging personal bias and stylistic narrowness.

EVENTUALLY, MOST STUDENTS learn to function, and sometimes thrive, in such an environment by developing the ability to conform to the arbitrary standards of a wide range of individuals.

A Machiavellian education to say the least.

Creativity, experimentation and intellectual exploration are then sacrificed on the altar of conformity to supposed "standards." Many academics who claim for themselves the right to explore new problems and to think experimentally would deny that right to their students. Of course, they would vigorously assert that they encourage creativity and yet they actively support a system of evaluation that works against it.

I do not believe that the situation is beyond hope and I know from personal experience that there are many professors and TAs working to resolve these problems. But, on the whole, the system of evaluation in higher education is still chronically ill. Students, faculty and administrators alike must join to question the accepted "standards" and to scrutinize the derivation of these standards.

ALL WHO PROFESS to make judgments about the performance of college students must make themselves more familiar with the discipline of assessment, particularly writing assessment. In general, we must cease granting overwhelming authority to grades, recognizing that accurate, thorough and honest evaluation of intellectual development is a complex process which cannot be reduced to five letters of the Roman alphabet.

As it is now, the "academy" does not serve principally as a place of teaching and learning, but as the focus of symbolic competition. It judges the contest and sells credentials to the winners. These credentials are signs of acceptance — a kind of imprimatur stamped on the heads of the graduates.

But these signs do not necessarily correspond to the rather complex phenomena of education and personal growth. Grades are very similar to the indulgences and relics sold by corrupt officials in the medieval church — short cuts to paradise, an economy of ready-made qualities. Perhaps our motto will someday read: "We sell memberships in the elite." O tempora! O mores!

Vincent Casaregola, a doctoral candidate in English at the UI, has been a teacher for 10 years.

Pentagon revises, expands rules on 'sexual misconduct'

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Pentagon has revised and expanded a regulation against "sexual misconduct" — including adultery, orgies and sodomy — to determine if someone qualifies for a security clearance, officials said Wednesday.

The new rule, which went into effect in January and was published without fanfare in the Federal Register April 8, covers the 2.7 million military and civilian employees of the Defense Department and civilian defense contractors who hold clearances for access to classified information.

It is an expanded and more detailed version of a vague "sexual misconduct" regulation that first went into effect in December 1979. The major revision resulted from security tightening recommendations made by a Pentagon commission in 1985 following disclosure two years ago of the Walker family spy ring.

"IT WAS A COMPLETE revision of existing regulations," said Peter Nelson, a Pentagon personnel security specialist who wrote the new rule. "The principal impetus was to incorporate recommendations" of the commission.

The new regulation forbids a variety of heterosexual and homosexual acts to try to weed out individuals who might be susceptible to blackmail and, therefore, targets of espionage agents, Nelson said.

"There are few people who could not be disqualified, based on those rules," said Andrew Feinstein, staff director of the House civil service subcommittee. Under the regulation, he said, the Pentagon "could send out people looking in people's bedrooms."

"This business about one's private life being exposed to blackmail is a lot of crap," said Richard Gayer, a San Francisco lawyer and gay activist. "Russian spies don't use blackmail except as a last resort. They get secrets by paying money for them."

THE RULE SETS forth five broad categories of "acts of sexual misconduct or perversion indicative of moral turpitude, poor judgment or lack of regard for the laws of society" under which an individual can be disqualified for clearance to classified information. There are 10 sub-categories.

Conduct that could disqualify someone from holding a security clearance includes acts performed with a minor or with animals, prostitution, pandering, sexual harassment, self-mutilation, spouse-swapping and group sex orgies. It also covers "adultery that is recent, frequent and likely to continue," transsexualism, transvestism, exhibitionism, incest, child molestation, voyeurism, bestiality or sodomy.

Grand jury probe starts in Atlanta

ATLANTA (UPI) — An aide to Mayor Andrew Young testified Wednesday before a federal grand jury examining the way police handled an investigation into charges that the mayor and civil rights leader Julian Bond were cocaine users.

Eugene Duffy, Young's chief aide at City Hall, appeared before the panel accompanied by his lawyer, Jeffrey Bogart. Both refused comment on the case.

The panel is investigating the police and City Hall handling of allegations made by Bond's estranged wife, Alice, that her husband and other prominent Atlantans are regular cocaine abusers.

Duffy is on the list of alleged abusers Bond's wife gave police.

U.S. ATTORNEY Robert Barr has notified Young and Duffy they are subjects of a federal investigation into the possible obstruction of a federal witness.

The grand jury probe centers on a March 25 phone call Young made to Alice Bond shortly after she went to police with her charges. The mayor reportedly made the call after he was told of the allegations by Atlanta Police Chief Morris Redding. After that call, Bond's wife called the news media to retract her accusations.

Three Atlanta police narcotics officers working on the case also were suddenly transferred to new assignments about the same time.

Bond's wife told police March 19 that her husband, the mayor and others used cocaine and that Bond used the drug every two hours.

Arms dealer sentenced to jail

BRIDGEPORT, Conn. (UPI) — Pakistani arms dealer Arif Durrani was sentenced Wednesday to 10 years in prison and fined $2 million for illegally exporting Hawk missile parts to Iran.

Chief U.S. District Judge T. F. Gilroy Daly told Durrani, 38, his testimony was riddled with "greed, lies, money, perjury, avarice and conniving."

"Your behavior might, under other circumstances, be considered by others as bordering on treason," Daly told Durrani, who declined to speak on his behalf. Durrani's lawyer said he would appeal.

"Whatever happens in Washington is and was no excuse for your lying repeatedly under oath," Daly said, referring to the Iran arms scandal involving the Reagan administration.

DURRANI HAD admitted shipping the missile parts but claims he was acting on behalf of the U.S. government in its efforts to secure the release of American hostages in Lebanon.

He also claimed to have met once with former National Security Council aide Lt. Col Oliver North to discuss how to obtain and ship the parts.

Prosecutors said Durrani arranged for 11 shipments of the missile parts to Iran via Belgium between June and September 1986.

Durrani, of Westlake Village, Calif., was arrested Oct. 3, 1986 and convicted April 2 after a lengthy trial.

He was given a five-year sentence and $1 million fine on each of two counts charging Durrani with exporting and attempting to export items on the United States munitions list without a license.

The sentences and fines are to run consecutively and cumulatively, resulting in a total 10-year prison term and $2 million in fines.

Daly also sentenced Durrani to 10 years in prison and fined him another $1 million on a third count of selling arms without first registering with the U.S. State Department, to run concurrently with the previous penalties.

Aaron Leonard

Former Iowa football recruit feels 'cheated' by athletics

By Steve Williams
Assistant Sports Editor

For the inner city kid, athletics provide an escape. They stand as an illusion of a better life away from the harsh realities of their present lives, which seem to be heading nowhere.

For Aaron Leonard, a kid from the Hill District of Pittsburgh, athletics were a chance to escape an urban maze he had no desire to be a part of.

Getting a scholarship to a major university in 1973 was the ticket Leonard had been waiting for. Now, the "good life" was in front of him and the NFL was a heartbeat away.

Unfortunately, however, Leonard found out that success can be a difficult thing to define and that his escape was actually just another form of imprisonment with new surroundings.

"I CAME TO IOWA with the aspirations of going on to the pros," Leonard said. "I was sent letters by over 60 schools from all over, but Iowa was the only one that promised me a full ride."

"However, after a few injuries, the coaches began to lose interest in me, as they realized that I would no longer be an asset to the team," Leonard said. "But while I knew that I would no longer be playing professional football, I also didn't know what I was going to do with the rest of my life."

During Leonard's time, Iowa was not the flourishing football power that it is today. In 1973, the Hawkeyes struggled through an 0-11 season under Coach Frank Lauterbur. A year later, Lauterbur was replaced by Bob Commings and although the record improved, Leonard was never a part of a winning team.

COMPOUNDING Leonard's disappointment were injuries, the kind that take away a person's ability to walk. Leonard suffered three such injuries to his knees. And it was this that made Leonard realize that football would be an unattainable goal.

"I had been playing well for the first half of my senior season, but during our homecoming game with Ohio State, I got hurt for the third time," Leonard said. "The next morning I woke up and felt the pain shooting through my knee and it was then that I realized that professional football would not be a part of my life."

"Coaches tried to get me back on the field before I was ready, but when they found out that I could no longer get the job done, it was like they turned their backs on me," Leonard said. "By this time, it was also too late to really get anything out of my academics, and even though I graduated, I wasn't really prepared for a future without football."

LIKE MOST ATHLETES hell bent on the idea that sports is the only way to go, Leonard was not overly excited about the concept of academics.

Unlike most athletes from the urban areas of this nation, he managed to graduate, something only eight of the 30 freshmen who came to the UI with Leonard in 1973 were able to do.

Leonard soon found, however, that the little time he spent preparing for a world outside of athletics was not nearly enough.

Today, Leonard drives a bus in Iowa City, the same town he tried desperately to escape after his graduation. Leonard is also back in school searching for a degree that will do something for his future, unlike the one he left with in 1978.

For Leonard, the maze has only expanded.

FORTUNES HAVE improved for Iowa football since Leonard's departure, but the problem has not gone away.

Urban athletes are still having trouble in school, evidenced by the 27.5 percent graduation rate of football players from urban areas since 1980.

"It's too bad that these high schools that promote athletics over academics don't realize what they are doing to these kids," Lyle Shannon, UI professor for urban research, said. "If they did, we might not have as severe a problem as we do today."

Meanwhile, Leonard has learned to deal with his disappointment but has not forgotten it.

"Realizing that I would never play football again was something that took me a while to face up to," Leonard recalls nine years later. "I was very bitter for a time and I felt like I had been cheated. Cheated by coaches, cheated by teachers and cheated by myself."

Hawkeyes set to meet Wolverines

By Eric J. Hess
Assistant Sports Editor

Junior Mark Boland will be on the mound Friday when Iowa takes on Michigan in the first round of the Big Ten double-elimination baseball tournament in Ann Arbor, Mich. Iowa, 28-26 overall and 9-7 in the Big Ten, will meet the Eastern Division champion Wolverines, 47-9 and 13-3, at Fisher Stadium. Game time is set for 4 p.m. In the other first round game, Minnesota, 35-20 and 12-4, matches up with Purdue, 34-17-1 and 10-6. If Iowa wins on Friday, it will meet the winner of the Purdue-Minnesota game at 4 p.m. Saturday. If Iowa loses in the first round, it meets the loser at 1 p.m.

THE HAWKEYES ARE expected to face Michigan left-hander Jim Abbott, who finished the Big Ten season with a 3-1 record and a 1.38 ERA. Boland, Iowa's winningest pitcher with a 6-3 record overall with a 5.95 ERA, pitched his way through the Big Ten with four straight wins. All four victories were complete games.

But that's not the main reason why the hurler from New Kensington, Pa., will be starting against the Wolverines, a team leading the Big Ten in stolen bases.

Boland said he was told Tuesday that he would be starting over freshman Allen Rath. He added that it was essentially because he is a "junk" pitcher that he got the nod from Iowa Coach Duane Banks.

Boland owns a slider as his top pitch while Rath carries a sharp fastball. And because Michigan is supposed to be a fastball-hitting team, Boland seemed the likely choice.

"RIGHT NOW I'M just peak-

St. Louis, Pendleton drive by Giants, 7-6

United Press International

SAN FRANCISCO — Terry Pendleton drove in three runs with three hits, including a game-winning, two-run homer in the ninth inning Wednesday afternoon to power the St. Louis Cardinals to a 7-6 triumph over the San Francisco Giants.

Ray Soff, 1-0, pitched an inning in relief for the victory. Todd Worrell worked the ninth for his fifth save of the season.

With San Francisco leading 6-5 in the ninth, Tommy Herr led off with a double for St. Louis. Pendleton then belted an 0-1 high fastball off Jeff Robinson, 2-1, into the right-field bleachers for his second home run of the year.

"Pitchers make mistakes," Pendleton said. "Robinson got a ball up to me, and I capitalized on it."

One out later, Willie McGee doubled, and came home on Curt Ford's single off reliever Scott Gottlieb for a 7-5 lead.

San Francisco pulled within 7-6 in the ninth off Worrell. Chris Speier singled to center before Worrell struck out Harry Spilman and Mike Aldrete. Joel Youngblood, batting for Mark Wasinger, then blooped a hit to center that bounced off Willie McGee's chest for a double, scoring Speier.

Baseball

ing," Boland said. Early in the season, he added, everything didn't seem to be clicking, including his pitching and the defense behind.

The Hawkeyes, who have not played in the Big Ten tournament since 1983, squeaked into a spot in the tournament after losing three of four games from Western Division champion Minnesota. Illinois finished with a 9-7 record, but Iowa slid into the tourney by virtue of winning three of four against the Illini earlier this season.

Third baseman Keith Noreen, who finished the regular season as the leading hitter for the Hawkeyes, said Iowa is looking forward to meeting the Hawkeyes face to face.

"I think it kind of pumps us up," Noreen said meeting 14th-ranked Michigan.

NOREEN, WHO BATTED .379 for the season, is followed by Luis Ramirez (.365), John Kuester (.348), Bill Heinz (.333), Randy Frakes (.324) and Jason Jones (.324). Iowa is batting .313 as a team.

Heinz, who will join the team via late airplane ride to Michigan because of final examinations, leads the team in at bats, total bases, homers and runs batted in. Frakes, a senior shortstop, leads the team in runs scored and slugging percentage.

For a team made up of mostly transfers and freshman, Boland said the team has molded into a balanced ball club.

"We know what to expect from each other now," Boland said. "At the beginning of the year, we didn't know each other. It was scary."

Rec Services sends message

By Cathy Cronin
Staff Writer

Within only one week, Recreational Services has received an extraordinary student response to its petition drive. During a time in which students were preparing for final exams 3,665 signatures were collected, 3,199 of those from the student population.

The purpose of these petitions was to "send a message" to the Student Senate and the Collegiate Associations Council that students do in fact support Recreational Services programs, according to Recreational Services Chair Don Schutt.

After receiving a proposed budget cut of $38,000 which decreases the student mandatory fee to $.36 per semester, Recreational Services is asking that the mandatory student fee be allocated at $1.03, the same amount as last year.

SCHUTT PRESENTED the petition signatures Wednesday to Vice President of Finance and University Services Dorsey Ellis. The intentions of doing this were to receive a recommendation from Ellis at the final meeting with the Board of Regents, Schutt said. The reaction from Ellis to the petitions was a positive one for Recreational Services.

"This is pretty impressive," Ellis said. "I've never known of a proposal for reduction of fees that affect so many people. I will be bringing recommendations to them (the Board of Regents)."

The Collegiate Associations Council provided explanations for its allocations which were submitted to Vice President of Student Services Philip Hubbard and Ellis. Rationale behind the cuts in general was simple. The following was taken from the recent memo presented by CAC to the Vice Presidents.

"THE CUTS WERE MADE based on the probability that the groups which were cut would survive on the lower fee allocation. The two groups which were cut most significantly, The Daily Iowan and Recreational Services, receive 13 percent and 6 percent of their budgets from mandatory student fees, respectively. All other groups receive nearly 100 percent of their revenues from student fees."

Funding for sportsclubs has been a big issue as far as the budget cuts were concerned. The funding by student services to Recreational Services has primarily been to cover the sportsclubs over the past few years. In 1982 it was discovered by Student Senate that much of the money that had been designated for sportsclubs was being used for general Recreational Services expenses.

"Particularly looking at the reopening of the Field House, we've just had enormous participation. This stuck me as a surprising recommendation... an activity that's enjoyed by so many different students," Ellis said. "I think that's a very good thing. It's a very healthy thing and something that the university should encourage."

Reds 12, Expos 6

MONTREAL — Barry Larkin hit a two-run homer to highlight a four-run seventh inning, and Tracy Jones drove home four runs Wednesday night to lead the Cincinnati Reds to a 12-6 victory over the Montreal Expos.

Reds starter Tom Browning, 4-4, allowed nine hits over six innings. Randy St. Claire, 2-1, was the loser in relief. Cincinnati trailed 6-3 entering the seventh, but erupted for four runs. Kurt Stillwell was safe on a throwing error by third baseman Tim Wallach, and scored on pinch-hitter Lloyd McClendon's double to left.

Jones followed with his third consecutive single to narrow the count to 6-5, and Larkin greeted St. Claire with a smash over the wall in left field to put the Reds ahead 7-6.

St. Claire loaded the bases and the Reds broke open the game with three runs in the eighth. Jones hit a three-run double to make the score 10-6. Dave Parker hit his ninth home run of the season, a two-run shot in the ninth for a 12-6 lead.

Braves 10, Phillies 4

PHILADELPHIA — Dale Murphy drove in four runs with a pair of home runs and every member of the team contributed an extra base hit Wednesday night to help the Atlanta Braves pound out a 10-4 victory over the Philadelphia Phillies.

David Palmer, 3-4, went five innings for the victory. Jim Aker worked the final four innings for his third save. Losing starter Bruce Ruffin, 2-3, allowed three earned runs in two innings.

Brewers streaking in wrong direction

United Press International

MILWAUKEE — Mike Davis hit his fourth home run in five games and drove in four runs Wednesday to help the Oakland Athletics crush Milwaukee 8-2 and hand the Brewers their eighth loss in a row.

Milwaukee, following a 13-game winning streak to start the season, now stands at 20-11 and fell out of first place in the American League East for the first time this season. With the victory, Oakland became the third team in a row to sweep the Brewers.

Milwaukee, once 9-0 at home, went 0-7 during its current homestand which started May 5.

Oakland starter Curt Young, 5-1, worked eight innings. He yielded only one run on seven hits while striking out three and walking two. Dennis Eckersley pitched the ninth, giving up a run on two hits.

Brewer starter and loser Teddy Higuera, 4-2, held Oakland hitless for six and one-third innings, while striking out six batters, but lasted only a third of an inning longer after giving up five runs on five straight hits.

Ron Cey stopped Higuera's bid for a no-hitter with a line drive single to right with one out in the seventh and Terry Steinbach followed with a single. Davis gave Oakland a 3-1 lead with his ninth home run of the season, a three-run blast to right.

NEW YORK — Larry Parrish collected three RBIs and Don Slaught slammed a two-run homer to cap a four-run fourth inning Wednesday night and lead the Texas Rangers to their fourth straight triumph, an 8-6 decision over the New York Yankees.

Texas starter Jose Guzman struggled, walking five, striking out three and yielding 10 hits over eight and two-thirds to improve to 2-2. Dale Mahoric picked up his fourth save by recording the final out.

The Rangers collected their sixth win in their last eight decisions. The Yankees suffered their second loss in 15 games at home this year. Tommy John, 2-1, lasted five and one-third innings and gave up eight hits and five runs.

Texas took a 4-2 lead in the fourth. Scott Fletcher led off with an infield single, Ruben Sierra walked, and both runners advanced on a groundout. Pete O'Brien bounced out to score Fletcher, and Parrish followed with an RBI single to center to tie it 2-2. Slaught homered to left to make it 4-2, his fourth homer of the season.

Dave Winfield belted his seventh home run of the season, a solo shot in the fifth to make it 4-3.

Texas took a 5-3 lead in the sixth when Parrish doubled off the left-field fence to score Incaviglia, who had doubled.

Detroit knocks out Atlanta; Bucks stay alive with Celtics

ATLANTA — Detroit guards Vinnie Johnson and Isiah Thomas rallied Detroit from a 12-point deficit in the fourth quarter Wednesday night, giving the Pistons a 104-96 victory over the Atlanta Hawks and a berth in the Eastern Conference finals.

The Pistons won the series four games to one and will meet the winner of the Boston-Milwaukee series in the conference finals. The Celtics lead their series 3-2.

Johnson scored 15 of his 17 points in the final quarter and Thomas had 12 of his 19 in the period. The Pistons outscored Atlanta 16-3 in the closing four minutes. Atlanta led 83-71 with nine minutes and 10 seconds left but Johnson and Thomas combined for 27 of the Pistons' 39 fourth-quarter points.

THE PISTONS TIED IT 93-93 on a technical foul. Hawks Coach Mike Fratello argued when Detroit scored before

NBA Roundup

Dominique Wilkins could return to the floor after chasing a loose ball.

The Pistons were ahead 96-93 before the Hawks hit a free throw and ran off six more points. The last four points came on free throws by Johnson and gave Detroit a 102-94 lead with 19 seconds left.

Wilkins, playing with a bruised leg, led the Hawks with 26 points while Randy Wittman had 21 and John Battle 16. Detroit's third guard, Joe Dumars, scored 21 points and Adrian Dantley added 17.

Bucks 129, Celtics 124
BOSTON — Sidney Moncrief scored 33 points Wednesday night and the Milwaukee Bucks stayed alive in the Eastern Conference semifinals with a 129-124 victory that ended the Boston Celtics' home winning streak at 33 games.

Boston leads 3-2 in the best-of-seven series, which returns to Milwaukee for Game 6 Friday night. Game 7, if necessary, would be Sunday in Boston.

Milwaukee had lost its previous 10 games at Boston Garden. The Celtics had won 79 of their previous 80 games at Boston Garden.

Moncrief, who scored a career playoff high, was fouled by Terry Cummings. The 6-foot-4 forward had 14 of his 23 points in the fourth quarter. Boston was led by Robert Parish with 30 points while Kevin McHale had 27 and Larry Bird 26.

BOSTON TOOK A 124-123 lead on Dennis Johnson's two free throws with one minute and 11 seconds remaining, but Cummings hit a short jumper over McHale with 51 seconds left to give the Bucks the lead for good.

Baseball Quickies

Quick Quiz
 Through Tuesday, the last four hits by Mike Pagliaro of the Yankees have all been homers. Who holds the AL record of having five straight hits — not in consecutive at-bats — all go for homers? (see answer below. Clue: he once hit 30 homers and stole 30 bases in the same season.)

Got Their Number
 Charlie Hough has beaten Cleveland 10 straight times dating back to April 23, 1984. The Texas knuckleballer turned back the Indians 6-1 Tuesday by allowing four hits over 7-13 innings.

Quick Quiz Answer
 Ken Williams of the St. Louis Browns had five straight hits go for homers between July 28 and Aug. 1, 1922.

Indy Notebook

INDIANAPOLIS (UPI) — The Indianapolis Motor Speedway is 78 years old. The track was originally designed to be an outdoor laboratory for the automobile industry shortly after its birth.

Owner Eddie Rickenbacker kept the Speedway alive through the Depression, but when racing was interrupted for World War II, the 2½-mile oval and its grandstands fell into disrepair. Rickenbacker sold the Speedway to Tony Hulman Jr. of Terre Haute in late 1945 and the Indianapolis 500 was revived the next year.

Pole Sitting
 Mario Andretti's pole at Indianapolis this year extends his all-time Indy car pole record to 59, six better than No. 2 A.J. Foyt. This is also his third straight pole position of the season. The last time a driver started a season with three straight poles was in 1962 when Rick Mears did it.

Jazz group Galadriel produces swinging, professional sound

By Denise Roth Copy Editor

TUESDAY night's performance by Galadriel at Gabe's held some surprises for those who had never heard the four-member jazz band before.

To start the evening, the band opened with "Isotope," which featured Jim Lehmkuhl, a versatile bass player, and Chris Merz, saxophonist and the band's leader.

"Miss You," a hit of the Rolling Stones, was then put in jazz perspective and seemed classier than the original recording by Mick and the guys.

MERZ DID A SPLENDID effort in performing "Eiderdown," a tough piece that challenges not only the sax player's fingers but his breath.

Chris Merz

Music

energy, but the swinging really started on a piece Merz composed himself, entitled "The Curse of Lono." Thornton brought out his flugelhorn to mimic the sax, and while the piece was high-paced and full of gusto, the horn seemed to lack the vibrance and luster of the sax.

Merz's composing leaves NOTHING to be desired. A blend that has undertones of Miles Davis, Chick Corea and the third-stream jazz of Wynton Marsalis, as well as the group's background in Johnson County Landmark and Iowa City Jazz Orchestra, enables the band to show off their talents in a variety of ways.

THE GROUP NOT only played fast pieces well, but did an excellent job on slow pieces and sudden rhythm changes. Merz and Lehmkuhl did an excellent job on Miles Davis' slow ballad, "My Funny Valentine." Perfectly in tune and in rhythm, the mellow piece could've put the crowd to sleep but instead kept it mesmerized.

Considering the group has only been together since the beginning of the year, they are well bonded with a tight rhythm section and four soloists who don't hesitate to stand back in the limelight.

Merz said jazz is exciting to him because, "You can paint a door and get yourself out" when referring to improvisation. Although he claimed the band headed off in different directions on one piece, the audience didn't notice because the band covered up with pure creative improvisation.

NBC plans new season's lineup

NEW YORK (UPI)—No. 1 ranked NBC is taking its biggest programming gamble in two years by dismantling its blockbuster Thursday night schedule to make room for a spinoff of "The Cosby Show," the network announced Wednesday.

NBC, the first of the three networks to reveal fall plans, announced three new dramas, two new comedies and 21 returning series for the 1987-88 prime-time season.

For two years NBC has been on top of CBS and ABC and much of that is due to the enormous success of "The Cosby Show."

Bill Cosby's program drew an average 63 million viewers a week for the just-finished fall season, making it the most watched television program in history.

For two years, "The Cosby Show" has served as the anchor of NBC's killer Thursday night schedule, which included Cosby, "Family Ties," "Cheers," "Night Court" and "Hill Street Blues."

But the new schedule for the 1987-88 prime-time season includes only Cosby, "Cheers" (minus Shelley Long) and "Night Court" on Thursday night. "Hill Street Blues," the most honored drama in TV history, was canceled. "Family Ties," starring Michael J. Fox, has been moved to Sunday to bolster one of NBC's worst time slots and to make room for "A Different World," the Cosby spinoff featuring Lisa Bonet as a college student.

IN ALL, NBC IS bringing in five new programs to fill four hours and its schedule will be balanced with 12 half-hour sitcoms and 12 one-hour dramas. Of last fall's new shows, all will be back except Loni Anderson's "Easy Street." The returners include the critically acclaimed "L.A. Law," "Amen," "Alf," "Matlock," "Crime Story" and "Our House."

"Crime Story" is the surprise renewal, considering it ranked 68th out of 103 series in the full-season ratings, but it is Entertainment President Brandon Tartikoff's favorite show.

"I believe our new program selections reflect our goal of offering shows that are distinctive and different," Tartikoff said.

The new programs:

• "J.J. Starbuck" (Tuesdays):

One-hour drama about a Texas billionaire whose fortune enables him to pursue baffling criminal cases throughout the country on his own time without pay. Stars Dale Robertson.

• "A Year in the Life" (Wednesdays): Critically acclaimed miniseries that aired last December about a middle-class Seattle family. Brought back as one-hour drama series. Stars Richard Kiley as Joe Gardner.

• "A Different World" (Thursdays): Half-hour spinoff created by Bill Cosby. Denise Huxtable of "The Cosby Show" strikes out on her own at Hillman College, with two unusual roommates. Stars Lisa Bonet.

• "Private Eye" (Fridays): Brainchild of the creator of "Miami Vice." Gritty private detective forms unlikely partnership with a ducktailed rock 'n' rollin' street hustler as they prowls Los Angeles' Sunset Strip. Stars Michael Woods and Josh Brolin.

• "Who's Dad?" (Sundays): Two pals torn apart by the love of the same woman are reunited after the flame passes away, leaving behind a 12-year-old girl. The two share custody when it can't be determined which one is dad. Stars Paul Reiser, Greg Evigan and Staci Love.

NBC also plans at least four miniseries, including "James Clavell's Noble House," starring Pierce Brosnan; "Poor Little Rich Girl: The Barbara Hutton Story," starring Farrah Fawcett; "The Ballad of Mary Phagan," starring Jack Lemmon; and "Mario Puzo's The Fortune Pilgrim," starring Sophia Loren and Edward James Olmos of "Miami Vice."

Love sizzles in Hitchcock's 'Notorious'

By George Yatchisin
Staff Writer

HOLLYWOOD'S truest love affair is with romance on ice. Passion breeds best when postponed, or even better, when denied. Scarlett never gets Ashley. Rick watches Ilsa fly off into the fog. We all need to see love lives as screwed up as our own, yet with a sense that our own, private, unrequited yearnings might enable us somehow. Hey, he might be lonely, but he's still Bogey. Consolation enough.

Alfred Hitchcock knew this trick of the movies better than anyone because he got to meet beautiful actresses in the flesh. It's silly to project his biography into his work, but his films are clearly fascinated with melting icy goddesses. Madeleine Carroll gets handcuffed to a man she despises in The Thirty-Nine Steps. Grace Kelly evades wife-killer Raymond Burr in Rear Window. Janet Leigh takes a shower for all time in Psycho.

Then there's Notorious. Alicia

Alfred Hitchcock

Bijou

Huberman (Ingrid Bergman) fits the title bill. She's daughter of a Nazi spy, quick to drink, fast-driving, quite possibly promiscuous. At a party she takes a liking to a mysterious, taciturn stranger who flashes a badge to free her from police trouble. The man turns out to be Devlin, who wants Alicia to do some American spying to atone for her father's sins. Devlin just happens to be Cary Grant. Considering the stars, it can't be much of a surprise that Notorious is only nominally a spy film; instead we're in the wonderful world of romance.

FOR DRAMA'S SAKE, love gets dangerous. Alicia must marry Alex Sebastian (Claude Rains) to inveigle further secrets from his cabal of cohorts. Devlin, slave to duty, eggs her on. Alicia, never loving Alex for a second, marries him to prove her love to Devlin. Even a shockingly sexy — for 1946 — series of provocative pecks and naughty nibbles, in one long take, as Alicia and Devlin traverse an apartment, fails to bring the true lovers together. Devlin even forgets the wine for dinner, that's how unromantic he is. Meanwhile, Alex has wine aplenty, even if some of the bottles in his well-stocked cellar hide uranium, not Dom Perignon.

Will Dev come to his senses and have an emotion, or at least a first name? Will Alicia break down and return to her slushy ways? And what of Alex, who really loves Alicia? Must he be punished for poor politics? Will his demanding mother spell his doom, as mothers tend to do in Hitchcock films?

IT'S UNFAIR TO give too much of the melodrama's drama away, so I won't. The joy of Notorious is watching Hitchcock dissect Hollywood's mating patterns while delighting in them at the same time. With stars such as Grant and Bergman, both sexes in the audience get equal ogle opportunities. Grant, though, plays Devlin so coolly, it's almost possible to hate him for being incapable of trust. Bergman, never lovelier, lets love put her in the utmost peril — the more she becomes a secure individual, the more threatening her world becomes.

As for Claude Rains, has any other screen villain been so easy to pity? Despite whatever evil he does, he's most like us — the least attractive, the supporting player, the one hemmed in from all sides. But also, the one who truly loves, truly loses. With his suave, silent, suffering devotion, he earns his place on the cross of love for all our amorous sins.

Notorious is showing at the Bijou tonight and Friday.
