Quake tremors shake up Iowa City

By Scott Hauser and Joseph Levy
The Daily Iowan

Iowa City residents had the earth move under their feet — literally — Wednesday night as the tremors from a midwestern earthquake rumbled through the area early Wednesday evening.

No damages or injuries were reported from the tremor, which was reported to the Iowa City Police Department at about 6:50 p.m.

"It's probably just the tremors of an earthquake somewhere else in the country," Raymond Anderson, a geology and mineral resources expert with the Iowa Geological Survey Bureau, said shortly after the tremor was reported.

Estimates of the duration of the tremor ranged from five to 30 seconds.

The quake, centered in Lawrenceville, Illinois — about 50 miles north of Evansville in southeastern Illinois — measured 5.0 on the Richter scale, according to the Earthquake Information Center in Golden, Colo.

REPORTED AT 6:49 CDT, the quake shook through the midwest with reports coming from Kentucky, Minnesota, Wisconsin, Indiana, Ohio and Iowa, a spokesman for the National Weather Service in Des Moines said.

Only minor damages were reported in the areas feeling the quake.

The Iowa City Police Department received reports from all over the city, but had no reports of damage at 7 p.m. Wednesday.

Most Iowa City reports were of people feeling floors and buildings vibrate, but pictures were reported to have fallen off walls on the sixth floor of the Ecumenical Towers, 320 E. Washington St., according to the police department.

U.S. strengthens fleet in Gulf Duty will continue 'until shipping war ends'

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The United States plans to increase its permanent naval presence in the Persian Gulf to eight ships for the escorting of Kuwaiti tankers flying the American flag, a senior Pentagon official said Wednesday.

A ninth ship, he said, will be on permanent station in the Gulf of Oman, just outside the horseshoe-shaped Strait of Hormuz that is the 30-mile-wide doorway to the bloodied waterway. The strait is the most treacherous part of the voyage because Iran has threatened it with Chinese-made Silkworm missiles.

In addition, an aircraft carrier battle group will be in the northern Arabian Sea "most of the time," the official said. Carrier task forces have cruised in the region almost continuously since Iran's Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini overthrew the shah in 1979.

RICHARD ARMITAGE, the assistant defense secretary for international security affairs, said in an interview the escort duty for the U.S. Middle East Force in the gulf may begin next month and will continue indefinitely "until the shipping war" ends. The tanker war is an offshoot of the nearly seven-year Iran-Iraq conflict.

"If the shipping war ends, we don't need to stay," he said.

Iraq's "unintentional" air strike in the gulf May 17 against the guided missile frigate USS Stark, which killed 37 sailors, sparked congressional concern that escorting the 11 Kuwaiti tankers would increase the danger for Navy warships and expose the United States to involvement in the war.

"We believe there's a risk, but it's a manageable one," Armitage said. "The risk didn't get any worse after the Stark."

THE 11 KUWAITI tankers, part of a fleet of 22, are to complete the process of registering as U.S. flag vessels by the end of June and President Ronald Reagan may authorize the start-up of escorting them in July, Armitage said.

The Middle East Force, based in the gulf since 1949 and generally composed of five frigates and guided missile destroyers led by a command ship, will be increased to eight vessels that could include a cruiser, he said. The force uses the island nation of Bahrain as a base.

Seven warships now patrol the gulf, including the guided missile cruiser USS Fox. The Stark, severely damaged by an Exocet missile, is being repaired in Bahrain by a crew from the destroyer tender USS

UI workers face 'alien' legislation

By Anne Kevlin
The Daily Iowan

A recent change in federal immigration laws means employees of the UI will have to prove they are not illegal aliens.

The new law contains anti-discrimination provisions, so all employees must undergo the same verification process, according to UI Associate Vice President for Finance and University Services Mary Jo Small.

"This law does not just apply to people who are aliens," she said.

The action stems from the Immigration Reform and Control Act of 1986, designed to cut down the employment of illegal aliens. The law, which became effective June 1, places responsibility on the employer to verify employee eligibility.

Employers who hire illegal aliens face fines and jail sentences, Small said. All employers, not just the UI, will have to comply with the verification requirements.

"It's a sweeping national change," she said.

The new law requires each person hired after Nov. 6, 1986, to verify U.S. citizenship or authorization to work in the United States as an alien, Small said.

EMPLOYEES WILL have to show certain documents, or combinations of documents, to prove their eligibility. Some of the documents on the list include U.S. passports, certificates of naturalization, birth certificates, employment authorization cards, social security cards and driver's licenses.

Personnel from various UI employment departments will verify the documents and sign, with the employee, Form I-9, which validates the employee's identity and eligibility to work.

Newly hired employees will have three business days from the start of employment to complete Form I-9, according to Small, but employees hired after Nov. 6 and before June 1 have until Sept. 1, 1987, to comply with the new law.

Those hired before Nov. 7, 1986, and who remained continually employed on the UI payroll will not be required to complete the form. Small said anyone who is required, but fails to provide verification of work eligibility, will be taken off the UI payroll.

ACCORDING TO SMALL, the law is presenting some difficulties because it is so new.

"It's a confusing process," she said. "The difficulty is that many people who are applying for jobs haven't had to go through this process and don't have the right papers."

Shane Crawford, an employee at the Union, agreed. "A lot of people will have to get in touch with their parents for their birth certificates," he said.

Crawford said he had not been notified about the new requirement.

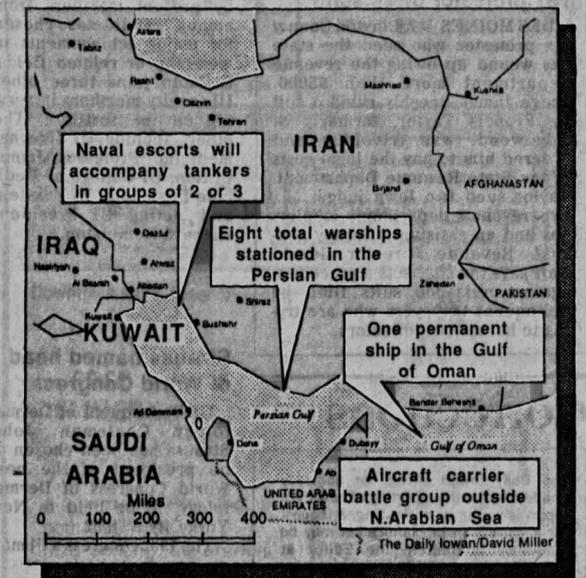

"It might be posted some place, but I haven't heard it through the grapevine," he said.

UI senior Diane Walker, another Union employee, said she has not heard about the requirement either, but is willing to comply.

"I HAVE NOTHING to hide. I'm not an illegal alien," she said.

UI senior and Union employee Mark Morton said he is opposed to the idea. "It's just another one of those hassles that they put upon us," he said. "This is the first time I've heard about this."

According to Small, the UI will send information at the end of the summer to each student concerning the new requirements.

Iowa athlete held for assault Inside

By John Gilardi
The Daily Iowan

An Iowa football player is being held on $10,000 bond in the Johnson County Jail after Iowa City Police charged him with willful injury in connection with an incident at his apartment early Tuesday morning involving an unidentified UI female student.

Keaton Smiley, a sophomore from Duncanville, Texas, and a starting defensive back on the Iowa football team, was arrested at 7:48 a.m. Tuesday after police received a 911 call at 7:30 a.m. from a "hysterical, crying female wanting police emergency" in connection with an alleged fight between a male and female at 530 S. Clinton Apt. 1, according to Johnson County District Court records.

The female caller hung up, but police traced the telephone number to the apartment and had officers en route within four minutes. Meanwhile, an anonymous male had called 911 to report the incident.

Smiley allegedly hit the woman with his fists and threatened to sexually abuse her at knife-point, according to court records.

The unidentified female student was treated at UI Hospitals and later released. According to police, the woman suffered a ruptured eardrum, a cut on one hand from the knife, lacerations, bruises and swelling over the left eye.

Smiley made his initial appearance in district court Tuesday afternoon. Court records indicate Smiley is prohibited from seeing or talking to the victim.

Stark to return in August

BROOKLYN, Iowa — One of the four Iowa sailors on board the missile-damaged frigate USS Stark has told his fiancée the ship will not return to the states until August.

Petty Officer Doran Rupe of Malcolm told bride-to-be Judy Glass of Brooklyn this week that repairs on the Stark will not be completed and the return trip won't begin until the end of June.

Shortly after an Iraqi missile hit the warship on May 17, families of the Stark crewmen prompted Gov. Terry Branstad to urge the Navy Department to give the sailors some time off.

Rupe and Glass are to be married Aug. 15 and the sailor said the Stark is scheduled to dock Aug. 5.

Farm concert needs site

LINCOLN, Neb. — The FarmAid III concert will not be held in Lincoln this fall because it would cost too much money to set up equipment at Memorial Stadium, a concert organizer said Wednesday.

Tim O'Connor said because Memorial Stadium is enclosed, holding the concert there would cost FarmAid organizers more money due to extra costs in bringing in helicopters and cranes.

"We don't feel that it is appropriate to solve technical problems by using money collected to help solve farm problems," he said.

O'Connor said Iowa State University may be the site of the concert. He said he went to Ames Tuesday to look at the technical layout.

Motive sought in murder

CARPENTERSVILLE, Ill. — Police were trying to determine a motive in the slaying of a successful suburban attorney who was found shot to death outside his office early Tuesday.

Investigators said they have no suspects and no motive in the fatal shooting of Timothy McNamee, 35, of West Dundee, Ill. McNamee's body was found near his car at his Carpentersville office about 6:30 a.m. Tuesday. He had suffered a single gunshot to the abdomen.

A highpower rifle later was found near the shooting scene, police said. The weapon was identified as a .3006 caliber Springfield Armory rifle.

Officer killed in accident

CHICAGO — An undercover Chicago police officer was killed in a "freak accident" early Wednesday when his gun apparently fell to the ground and discharged, authorities said.

Michael Durkin, 38, a patrol officer assigned on the near North Side, suffered a gunshot wound to the abdomen and was pronounced dead shortly after midnight at Weiss Memorial Hospital.

Durkin was in an alley behind his home with his girlfriend late Tuesday night when the accident occurred.

The weapon, an automatic pistol, was not Durkin's service revolver. Authorities said it was not known exactly what Durkin was doing with the gun when the accident occurred.

Tax protestor owes state

DES MOINES — A Clayton County tax protestor who sued the state has wound up owing the revenue department more than $5000. Judge James Beeghly ruled a suit by Francis Taylor, formerly of Edgewood, was frivolous and ordered him to pay the legal costs of the State Revenue Department. Taylor sued two Iowa judges, two revenue department employees and an assistant attorney general. Revenue Director Gerald Bair says the case sets a precedent against nuisance suits filed by delinquent taxpayers who are trying to harass tax collectors.

Pharmacology department lands $270,000 for research

By John Bartenhagen
The Daily Iowan

The UI Pharmacology Department has received a $270,000 research grant to study a brain hormone useful in treating tumors and in both suppressing and increasing fertility, Director of Pharmacology P. Michael Conn said Wednesday.

The focus of the research will be to determine possible side effects and develop better ways of manipulating the action of gonadotropin-releasing hormones — GnRH — in the body, Conn said.

GnRH causes the release of other hormones from the pituitary gland which regulate reproductive functions and sex hormone production.

"What we're doing is like taking a watch apart and seeing how each piece works," Conn said. "We're interested in this hormone because it has so much potential use. By understanding its molecular structure and function, we may be able to make it more useful."

ONE SURPRISING property of GnRH is that it can be used both as a contraceptive and as a fertility agent by either sex, Conn said.

"It's interesting because GnRH can be used to suppress ovulation and sperm maturation and may at the same time be used to stimulate fertility — it's kind of a paradox," he said.

Roy Pitkin, head of Obstetrics and Gynecology at UI Hospitals, said that, used as a contraceptive, GnRH may be administered nasally or by injection, thus allowing the hormone to directly enter a patient's bloodstream.

But he adds it will be at least five to 10 years before this method of birth control is available to the public. GnRH must first pass several levels of testing, he said — from experimentation in animals to the final phase of extensive field trials with humans — before it is deemed acceptable for large-scale, private use.

"IT'S A DIFFERENT approach to contraception," Pitkin said. "But first it has to be established that it is safe and that it has advantages over current methods of birth control."

Conn said other significant uses of GnRH include treating prostate and breast cancer and in treating endometriosis, the presence of uterine lining outside of the uterus.

GnRH is also useful in pediatric medicine, he added. It is used to treat precocious puberty, an acceleration of the maturation process, and cryptorchidism, a condition in infant males in which the testicles fail to descend into the scrotum.

Conn said he and a 15-member staff of students and technical persons will conduct the research. The grant, from the Andrew W. Mellon Foundation, is renewable annually.

Courts/police

Two Des Moines men appeared in Johnson County District Court on Wednesday charged with possession of drugs after their car was stopped for speeding on Highway 6 by the Iowa State Patrol Tuesday night.

Charged with possession of cocaine and marijuana with intent to deliver were Gerald Elton Reeves, 25, and his passenger, Bradley Summy. Both were released on their own recognizance and scheduled to appear in court June 24.

The state patrol stopped

Reeves' auto when it was clocked at 74 mph in a 55-mph zone. Reeves was also charged with speeding and both men were charged with failing to wear safety belts.

An Iowa City man was injured Tuesday night when his motorcycle was struck by a car at the intersection of Market and Clinton streets, according to Iowa City Police.

Larry D. Lee, 27, of 222 N. Johnson St., was taken to University Hospitals by Johnson County paramedics following the accident.

Police charged Gerald L. Houseman, 57, of Albany, Calif., with making an improper turn at an intersection after he reportedly turned into the path of Lee's motorcycle. Houseman posted a $130 bond and was released, while Lee was treated and released from UI Hospitals.

Incident: Iowa City Police reported a group of teenagers were throwing eggs at a Iowa City Transit bus at Burns and Taylor streets Tuesday night. The youths fled the scene before police arrived.

UI to receive environmental study center

By Tony Jeffris
The Daily Iowan

Gov. Terry Branstad's approval Tuesday of the Iowa Legislature's $12 million groundwater protection bill paved the way for the establishment of a Center for the Study of Health Effects of Environmental Contamination at the UI.

The signing of the bill — passed by the Legislature during the spring session — was delayed until late Tuesday due to disagreement over the state's tax structure.

The proposed center will be directed by Peter Isacson, head of epidemiology at the UI Department of Preventive Medicine.

Under the provisions of the current groundwater bill, the state will allocate as much as $240,000 to the center per year. The center will be responsible for carrying out epidemiological studies that relate the occurrence of disease to the presence of contaminants in Iowa's air, water, soil and food supplies.

ACCORDING TO the groundwater protection bill, the principle objectives of the center will be to aid the state in establishing reliable standards of the maximum contaminant levels for these resources.

"The genesis of this center is that the legislators were unhappy with regulation where they didn't have any sufficient data on humans," Isacson said. "I mean you were either overexaggerating the effect of contaminants or minimizing it. One of the charges of the center is really to get data in human populations.

"The problem is that even though we know that some of them are carcinogens it's hard to judge their exact effect on humans except by extrapolating from animal experimentation," he said.

Though Isacson did not object to this extrapolation he pointed out problems in its use for setting contaminant levels.

"RIGHT NOW THEY'RE regulating basically on guess work from lab animals," he said. "The response rate to a particular contaminant may vary between two different strains of mice and for certain contaminants there may not even be any correlation between mice and humans." While epidemiologists have been unable to clearly delineate the sources of most cancers in Iowa, one of the principle concerns in the Legislatures' bill has been pesticides.

"Right now I don't honestly know if there's enough pesticides in water to cause dangerous health effects, I'm more worried about chloroform and that class of contaminants," Isacson said.

Chloroform is in the class of synthetic-organic chemicals, 35 of which are banned from drinking water by state and federal regulations.

Isacson said national studies, some of which took place in Iowa, indicated higher rates of cancers particularly in areas where there were higher rates of chlorination for periods of more than thirty years.

"RIGHT NOW, however, the risk of removing chlorine would be worse than the risk of cancer, so no one is suggesting now that we abolish chlorinating water," he said.

Isacson indicated the chlorination studies may have significant correlation to the pesticide issue.

"What the studies did show that I think is important is that a small amount adjusted over a long time can have an effect so this bears on pesticides as well," he said.

While Isacson said he generally avoids the issue of whether pesticides should be banned in an agricultural state such as Iowa, he said, "The no-zero contamination standard would be ideal from a health standpoint; I think it's safer."

"Until we find conclusive evidence to the contrary, I feel the citizens of this state have a right to be concerned about this issue," Isacson said.

ISACSON SAID the center will do extensive interviews with patients to determine what type of exposure they've had.

One of the more important tools the center will have at its disposal is the state's cancer registry, which contains the case histories of more than 3,000 cancer patients in the state.

The bill allocates $79,000 for a preliminary report and plans for the establishment of the center, which will be made by July 1, 1988, contingent on the findings of the report, Isacson said.

Iowa officials calm budget-cut fears

By Scott Hauser
The Daily Iowan

Gov. Terry Branstad's last-minute veto of $35.1 million of the $2.4 billion state budget will not affect the UI's appropriations, state Board of Regents officials said Wednesday.

"The $35 million or so in cuts has not affected the University of Iowa," board office Director of Business and Finance Douglas True said.

While saying many of the specifics of Branstad's actions haven't yet been analyzed, the more than $375 million in appropriations for the regents was not significantly harmed, he said.

The governor's press secretary, Dick Vohs, said Branstad approved a $2.15 million state-funded work-study program — $1.15 million of which will be administered by the Iowa College Aid Commission solely to the regents institutions — as part of the general appropriations bill the governor signed Tuesday.

VOHS SAID THE governor's vetoes were made in non-education areas because education has been his highest priority this year.

"One of the reasons the cuts he made last night were so dramatic in some areas was because he was committed to not cutting education," he said, adding an across-the-board cut would have cut education too much.

Elizabeth Stanley, board office associate director for business and finance, said according to the regents' preliminary budget, their total appropriation is about $372 million, including the general appropriation and a number of specific and standing ones.

Not included in that figure is a salary adjustment appropriation or money from the Iowa Lottery, groundwater legislation revenue or oil overcharge revenue, she said.

SHE ADDED, however, she had not had a chance to make a complete assessment of the governor's signing session.

At its May meeting the board approved a preliminary UI budget of $410.3 million — $212.4 million for the general operating budget and $197.9 million for UI Hospitals and Clinics.

The UI will receive $130.5 million in state appropriations for its general university budget and will share an $18 million salary adjustment appropriation with Iowa State University and the University of Northern Iowa, True said.

True said the board has not decided how to divide those funds. UI Director of State Relations Frank Stork said most of the UI's appropriations are difficult to veto because they are built into the regents' base budget.

He said he hadn't read the veto messages yet Wednesday afternoon, but said he didn't think the governor had plans to veto any UI appropriations.

"TO OUR KNOWLEDGE his item-vetoes will not affect the appropriations of the university," he said.

Branstad did veto minor sections of the regents appropriations bill, Stanley said.

One item vetoed was a paragraph of the bill which would have provided copies of the three state universities' campus newspapers to the Educational Appropriations Subcommittees, the Legislative Fiscal Bureau and the Iowa Department of Management, Stanley said.

"Legislating free newspapers is wrong and should not be tolerated," Branstad said in his veto message, adding the newspapers should be made as gifts instead of appropriations.

The governor also item-vetoed a $2 million appropriation for a research project at ISU, True said.

Cooper altered dream before becoming UI administrator

By D.R. Miller
The Daily Iowan

When Carla Cooper was the managing editor of The Exponent at Northern State College in South Dakota and writing "radical editorials" for that student publication, she dreamed of someday being a teacher of literature and writing insightful articles.

But instead of writing journal articles for admiring peers, she now oversees the distribution of UI information for a curious local and national public as recently appointed UI director of university relations and assistant to the president.

"Faculty life was my aspiration," Cooper said of her early intentions of taking her Ph.D. in English to a college classroom rather than an administrator's office.

A native of the Midwest, Cooper received a bachelor's degree in her home state, South Dakota, and a Ph.D. in English from Purdue University. Prior to coming to the UI, Cooper was a university relations executive at the University of Houston.

COOPER SAID she was attracted to the UI because of "its role as a major research institution with a strong tradition in liberal arts education."

Cooper said although she expects to make no major changes in the basic operations of the UI Office of Public Information, she does have plans to improve on some of the services already offered, such as adding a yearly tabloid about UI research to The Spectator, an alumni newspaper produced by OPI, and including more feature articles in FYI, a faculty-staff newspaper also published by OPI.

"What we are really seeking is harmony of production, not only within the unit but within the entire university," Cooper said. "It is important to have an inclusive perspective and yet permit the individual to express a point of view," she added.

The scope of university relations will not only be to inform local and state constituencies but national and international ones as well, Cooper said.

ALTHOUGH COOPER had planned to work for UI President James O. Freedman when she was hired by the state Board of Regents last winter, she said his leaving will have little effect on her job.

Freedman announced in April he had accepted the presidency at Dartmouth College in Hanover, N.H., and would leave the UI in July.

"My last year at Houston I worked with three different chief executive officers," Cooper said. "I am resilient."

Cooper is the result of a nation-wide search conducted to replace Dwight Jensen, who was reassigned to the Department of Continuing Education and now serves as assistant to the dean there.

UI Acting Associate Vice President for Research and Educational Development Derek Willard chaired the search committee, which recommended Cooper to Freedman.

"WE SEARCHED FOR a communicator and a leader who could speak to all constituencies on campus," Willard said.

"The committee looked for a person with three qualities — a person experienced in the public relations field, a person who could articulate the academic vision of the UI and a person with leadership management ability," he added.

According to Willard, an important part of Cooper's job is to communicate with members of the Iowa legislature to find out what components of public opinion in the state the legislators act upon.

"It is up to her to transmit the basic values and worth of the UI to the public," Willard said.

Freedman had charged the search committee to find someone who could give the UI national media recognition, Willard said, adding this area is important to solicit endowed funding.

Activists disappointed after talk with Freedman, Hubbard

By Phil Thomas
The Daily Iowan

Four UI CIA Off-Campus protesters said they accomplished little in their meeting with UI President James O. Freedman and Vice President for Student Services Philip Hubbard Wednesday afternoon.

UI students Keith Hutchinson, Scott Fairbairn, Anne Johnstone and Iowa City resident Bruce Nestor met with the two to discuss the status of 17 UI students who will face hearings dealing with their February arrests. The protesters were arrested when they refused to leave the UI Office of Academic Affairs in Jessup Hall in protest of CIA recruiting on campus.

Hutchinson, one of those arrested, said he was surprised UI administrators want to have the hearings because the students were acquitted by an Iowa City jury in a trial last

Bruce Nestor

"IT SEEMS FAIRLY strange that they are not recognizing the decision that's being made in the civil courts," Hutchinson said.

UI Dean of Student Services Phillip Jones said the students will face university hearings this summer. The students' academic status will not change unless a disciplinary decision is made following the hearings.

"We may take action in terms of their registration," Jones said.

Hubbard said the meeting was a "civil discussion."

"They were expressing frustration with the slowness of the process," Hubbard said.

Nestor said the meeting was disappointing because no progress was made for the cause of the CIA Off-Campus organization.

"This meeting proved that only the people will stop the war in Nicaragua because the leaders won't," he said.

About 10 demonstrators gathered outside Jessup Hall before the meeting in support of the protesters and cheered when the meeting was finished.

Student corners 'matchless' market in condom business

By L. Legge
The Daily Iowan

Patrons of the Deadwood bar, 6 S. Dubuque St., may be in for a surprise their next trip to the cigarette machine.

Between packages of Marlboros and Salems in the vending machine they will find packages of condoms.

To many the concept is so novel — and so pragmatic — it is amusing, according to employees at the Deadwood.

Others find the concept of making condoms more available to help prevent unwanted pregnancies and the spread of sexually transmitted diseases serious.

BUT TO UI student Scott Simon, the entrepreneur marketing the contraceptives in the cigarette machine, the idea is strictly business.

"It's a business thing," said Simon, who, along with marketing prophylactics, is a graduate student in the UI College of Business Administration. "I put up the investment. I've taken the risk."

"It's just an idea that several people had. We were sitting around wondering if it would go," Simon said. "I just want to see if people will buy in this place. That's what the whole test is all about."

Deadwood owner Jim Strabala was in on the discussion. "We both agreed to try it," Simon said.

"MOST PEOPLE THINK it's a good idea," he said. "But good ideas and what people buy are two different things."

Strabala said selling the condoms in the bar is a service to his customers. "It's a convenience for them," he said.

The idea is simple: put the condoms, three at a time, into a package resembling a cigarette box. Then sell them in vending machines at the same cost as cigarettes.

The novelty is not that condoms are accessible, but that they are as accessible as cigarettes, Deadwood bartender Wendy Dockstader said.

"Look at Gabe's," Dockstader said, referring to another Iowa City bar. "They've had condoms in their bathrooms ever since I've been coming here. But it's just weird having them in a cigarette machine. They're so public. They're not in the bathrooms. They're just right there."

ACCORDING to Simon, the package is "exactly the same size as a Camels' straight box," plain white in color. If the venture is a success, he said, he will print an insignia on the box.

"There's a certain modesty factor involved," Simon said. "We felt that cigarette machines in most places are out of the way. I never notice who goes to the cigarette machine and I certainly don't watch what they buy."

"Of course," he added, "condoms have never been in a cigarette machine before."

Dockstader said the condom sales are acceptable to the Deadwood clientele. "I don't think anybody would bat an eyelid here," she said.

BUT PEOPLE purchasing the condoms may be embarrassed enough that "they would probably buy a pack of cigarettes, too," to disguise what they're doing, she added.

Simon said the Deadwood is a good place to market the service because "it's generally very crowded and it's always pretty consistent."

Stickers on the bathroom walls inform bar patrons that the condoms are available in the cigarette machines.

"I looked at it this way: if you're in a bar and you don't smoke, you don't go to the cigarette machine," Simon said. "But everybody in a bar goes to the bathroom."

The condom itself "is a basic, generic condom," Simon said. "They're manufactured by one of the largest (condom) manufacturers in the country. They're just plain cellophane-wrapped."

SIMON SAID if the idea works, he will expand and package more sophisticated condoms. "If it goes further, you can brand your own product," he said.

Simon receives the cardboard boxes flat, then glues them together himself and packs them. He then brings the boxes to the distributor, who stocks the machines.

"The hard part was finding a condom distributor — someone who would sell to me in large quantities, because condom sales have been increasing by 40 to 50 percent each year for the past couple years," he said, indicating production cannot keep up with demand.

Simon said his major selling point is to "be safe — whether being safe means being safe from pregnancy or some disease."

"College students especially, they're probably more active sexually than most other people. They really — whether they believe it or not — place themselves at a higher risk among heterosexual relationships."

"BUT IT'S A reality, and if it is a reality, you might as well provide protection that's readily accessible," Simon said.

If the venture is successful, Simon said he will expand the condom sales to other places as fast as he can.

"Hopefully you'll see them in every machine in town," he said.

Simon has defined what he considers success in this venture. "We have certain minimum levels we have to sell each week," he said. "Because you've taken one line of cigarettes out, you have to be able to sell as many of these as you would cigarettes."

If the experiment is not successful in Iowa, he will try it elsewhere, he added.

Meanwhile, as Simon anticipates success with his idea, the novelty continues to amuse people.

"I'VE HAD SOME friends say that I should put two cigarettes in the pack," Simon said. "Some people say I should put two mints in the pack."

The attitude at the Deadwood toward the condom sales is one of whimsy.

"We give a lot of people crap about buying the condoms — especially the regulars," Dockstader said. "Nobody is offended."

"They've announced it on the loudspeaker a couple times as a joke" that condoms are available in the cigarette machines, waitress Rebecca Tredway said. People cheered when they heard it would be a "safe summer."

But Dockstader, on a more serious note, added, "I hope people realize it can help out a lot."

Leaders wrap up economic talks

President: 13th summit was 'fruitful'

VENICE, Italy (UPI) — Leaders of the seven major industrial nations ended their 13th annual Economic Summit Wednesday with commitments to correct imbalances in trade and prevent further exchange rate upheavals.

In a 12-page economic declaration, the leaders also agreed to develop "mutually consistent" growth objectives along with a surveillance system to guard against any "significant deviations."

President Ronald Reagan called the summit "fruitful" but many delegates conceded that there were no new major economic or political initiatives in the final document — which Italian Premier Amintore Fanfani needed one solid hour to read at the closing ceremony.

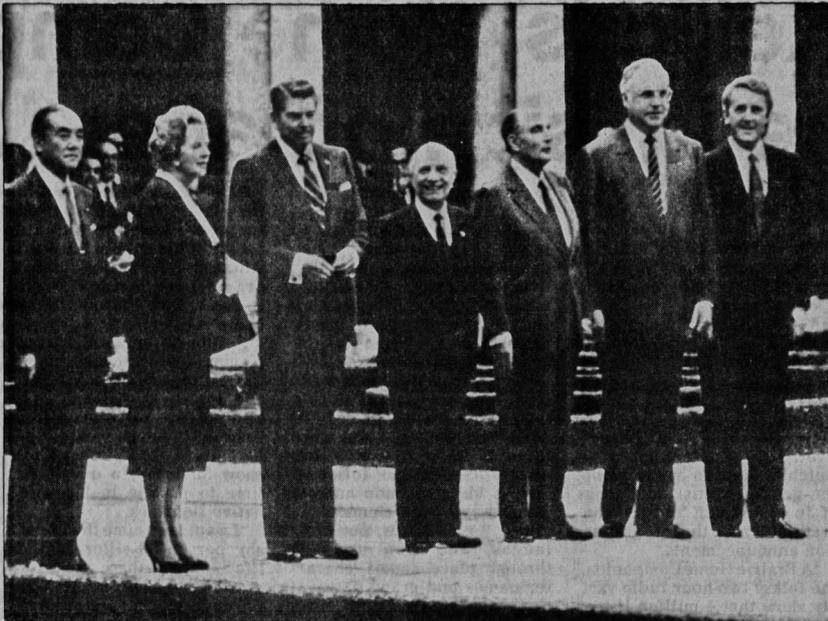

But little had been expected from the summit because of imminent elections in Britain and Italy, a leadership power struggle in Japan and Reagan's weakened position because of the Iran arms scandal.

IN FACT, EVEN before the meeting started, many had dubbed it the "reaffirmation summit."

A shorter political declaration issued Tuesday dealt only in general terms with East-West relations and arms control talks with the Soviet Union.

The United States failed to obtain tough language on the Iran-Iraq war with participants merely restating the need to maintain freedom of navigation in the Persian Gulf and demanding "effective" U.N. Security Council measures on a cease-fire.

Secretary of State George Shultz insisted, however, that Washington "got all it wanted" on the Persian Gulf and arms control.

Leaders of the seven nations at the Venice Economic Summit gather for an official group photo on the island of San Giorgio. Analysts have criticized the talks, saying little was accomplished.

Treasury Secretary James Baker told reporters that he could not "think of any major item on the economic side particularly that we came here wanting that we didn't get."

ONE NEW POLITICAL undertaking was a commitment by the "big seven" nations to "making no concessions to terrorists or their sponsors."

AIDS also was dealt with for the first time at an economic summit, with support for a World Health Organization global public education campaign and a ministerial-level international conference in Britain.

Another separate statement restated determination to fight the illegal production and trafficking of drugs.

Japan and West Germany were not named in the economic declaration but the summit agreed that "surplus countries" should reduce their trade surpluses and boost domestic demand.

Similarly, the United States, which drove down the dollar to try to raise exports and reduce imports, was not named in noting that "exchange rates alone will not solve the problem of correcting these imbalances." Stable currency rates are essential, the declaration said, and "further substantial shifts in exchange rates could prove counterproductive to efforts to increase growth and facilitate adjustment."

Other main economic points included:

- Global, free trade talks in Uruguay must be vigorously pursued, with early interim agreements if possible, as a "bulwark against mounting bilateral protectionist pressures."

- There should be "a concerted reform of agricultural policies" and "a progressive and concerted reduction of agricultural support."

- Third World debt — now up to $1 trillion — must be resolved.

These and other points were not new. Even the projected "surveillance" of national economic indicators and "mutually consistent" growth policies were described merely as "useful" by British Chancellor of the Exchequer Nigel Lawson.

French President Francois Mitterrand, according to his aides, told the others in private discussions that he believed the annual summits had turned into costly "spectaculars" and should be terminated.

Instead, he argued, leaders should meet on an ad hoc basis when there is good reason and do so in more informal conditions.

More words than action produced at meetings

Analysis

VENICE, Italy (UPI) — For a multimillion-dollar extravaganza, the 13th Economic Summit of the seven allied major industrialized nations produced fine words but little action.

French President Francois Mitterrand even complained that the annual summits have become costly "spectaculars" and should be replaced by ad hoc meetings, when needed, in more informal surroundings.

"It sure seems to have got out of hand," said one Canadian official about an event that cost at least $2 million a day. "It's a lot of trouble and pomp for a group photograph and a pretty innocuous statement."

A British delegate admitted the final economic declaration was "just as thin" as the earlier political declaration.

On political issues, the seven leaders basically reaffirmed their stand that freedom of navigation in the Persian Gulf must be maintained, the United Nations should mediate an end to the Iran-Iraq war and there should be "effective" measures to enforce a cease-fire.

WASHINGTON FAILED to get the others to accept a demand for an "enforceable" arms embargo on the two warring countries.

There was support in general, but not in specific detail, for the U.S. position on arms control with the Soviet Union.

The lone new political undertaking was on terrorism — a commitment by the summit nations to the principle of making no concessions to terrorists "or their sponsors."

There was no major action either on economic issues — the theoretical object of the exercise.

In private sessions, other summit nations criticized Japan and West Germany, Japan for its huge trade surpluses and continued import restrictions, and West Germany for doing too little to boost domestic demand.

The United States also was reminded that its huge budget deficit remains a major problem and that its success in talking down the dollar has not really helped the U.S. terms of trade.

BUT THE DECLARATION as usual avoided naming names, referring to "surplus countries," and saying "exchange rate changes alone will not solve the problem" of correcting trade imbalances.

Participants agreed to coordinate the exchange of economic indicators to help stabilize currency rates, and to hold consultations if there is any deviation from announced medium-term growth predictions.

Leaders also agreed that something urgent must be done about Third World debts.

They also called for progress in, and agreed to keep a close watch on, the newly launched "Uruguay Round" of global trade liberalization negotiations within the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade in Geneva.

Separate statements supported the global information campaign on AIDS by the World Health Organization and a continued battle against drug abuse and traffickers.

"We have agreed to meet again next year and have accepted the invitation of the Canadian Prime Minister to meet in Canada," the leaders said in the concluding paragraph of their 12-page declaration.

Garrison Keillor

Keillor's 'Home Companion' set to sign off after 13 years

By Joanne Ostrow
 Denver Post

What will Garrison Keillor's listeners miss most when the town of Lake Wobegon, Minn., goes into reruns?

At the top of the list are the more-or-less extemporaneous "News From Lake Wobegon" monologues. Then the commercials for the Powdermill Biscuit Company, Bertha's Kitty Boutique and Ralph's Pretty Good Grocery. Also Butch Thompson at the piano, the gentle Scottish folk songs of Jean Redpath and the congratulatory birth and graduation announcements.

"A Prairie Home Companion," the folksy two-hour radio variety show that 4 million listeners enjoy each week live from St. Paul, Minn., will cease production after next weekend. While it lasted, the show revived a radio format that had almost disappeared with Fred Allen, Jack Benny and Bing Crosby's "Kraft Music Hall." The closest surviving relative is The Grand Ole Opry, which inspired Keillor to create his show.

EACH WEEKEND for 13 years, Keillor's voice seemed to emanate from a forgotten time and place. Slowly and innocently, he told homespun stories in a seemingly effortless stream, offering quaintness in a high tech age.

His preacherlike tones could be lulling, inviting us to join him in a sympathetic look at what it is like to be human. We leaned close to catch his near-whispers, we followed him to his crescendo and we went away with a chuckle. He aimed for chuckles, not belly laughs, and won us over through place names, character names and grand observations on the tiniest of life's absurdities. He spoke for everyone who ever lived in a Lake Wobegon — or ever wished to.

And while the music and the stories were mostly by and about rural folks, the show's appeal reached well beyond the heartland. More than a few urbanites in the media have likened Keillor to Mark Twain.

SATURDAY'S SHOW will be his last. The guests will include Redpath, country legend Chet Atkins, acoustic guitarist Leo Kottke, pianist/organist/conductor Philip Brunelle and Hawaii's Kamehameha Glee Club.

Keillor talked publicly about leaving almost a year ago, but he still took some in his radio audience by surprise when he announced on the air in February that he would leave his Minnesota Public Radio show Saturday to devote full time to writing in his wife's native Denmark.

"I want to resume the life of a shy person," Keillor said, "a life in which there are Saturdays." It was a "simple, painful decision that is cheerfully made," he observed on the show, now heard live on 275 public radio stations.

The Saturday night variety show slated to succeed "A Prairie Home Companion" is "in the earliest stages of development," Minnesota Public Radio spokeswoman Chris Lenger said. It will be hosted by Noah Adams, formerly of National Public Radio's "All Things Considered." Two holiday specials have been scheduled for the Adams show, Nov. 21 and Dec. 19, in advance of its national debut Jan. 9.

KEILLOR, 44, TOLD critics he looked forward to retiring to a place where they do not speak English. "It relieves you of any responsibility to be intelligent," he said. "You can just be handsome for a change."

He offered advice, too. "Everybody ought to have Denmark as a possibility out there in the future, whenever you might need it." And what would he take to Denmark? "Two hundred pounds of books to get me through the first two years, a popcorn popper, a lot of angel food cake mix..."

After Saturday, reruns from Keillor's early shows previously heard only in Minnesota will be offered to public radio stations nationally, mixed with a compilation of "best of" tapes.

'Harry and the Hendersons' teaches silly, tender lesson

By Hal Hinson
 Washington Post

You've heard of him, I'm sure, but perhaps haven't seen him: Sasquatch, Bigfoot, the Abominable Snowman — these are all names for the legendary, perhaps nonexistent, creature of legend and lore. But the Hendersons just call him Harry.

It's not a bad name for him, really. He's about the size of your average sofa, but with Joan Crawford shoulders and a tiny waist. The Hendersons, George (John Lithgow), Nancy (Melinda Dillon), Ernie (Joshua Ruddy) and Sarah (Margaret Langrick), bump into him quite by accident. One day as they're returning home from a camping trip, he streaks out in front of their car and gets knocked cold. At first, it looks as if Dad has smashed into Chewbacca. They might be mistaken for each other — from the back — but Chewy never stank like this thing. Holding their noses, the family wrestles him onto the roof of their Country Squire and carts him home. His carcass tuckered safely in the garage — they think he's a goner — the Hendersons turn in and spin dreamy dreams of Carson and Letterman and Donahue.

the little lessons a Seattle family learns when confronted with the Big Guy. It's about learning to be human and, on that level, it's utter schlock — cloying, manipulative and overcute.

You could see it on another level, though — as a comedy about an obnoxious houseguest — and feel a little kinder toward it. In its ruder moments, the movie resembles a homey remake of Jean Renoir's Boudu Saved From Drowning. When Harry first shows up in the Hendersons' kitchen, rummaging through the refrigerator for late-night snacks, he's every host's nightmare of the unwanted overnighter; he's the dread in-law-come-a-visitin' writ large.

Dear, working from the script he wrote along with William E. Martin and Ezra D. Rappaport, has a great style for comedy. He gives the bits with Harry roaming through the house, redecorating as he goes, a real boingy crispness. Visually, it has some of the feel of Mad Magazine, though it's less aggressive and junk-crazed. Dear is at his best when he's doing purely physical stuff — like when Harry is stretched out in Dad's recliner, hooting at "The Addams Family" or when Lainie Kazan, the family's busybody neighbor, prances over — and at times he gives a hint of the slapstick energy Robert Zemeckis and Bob Gale have shown in their films.

IN THE EARLY scenes, you think that Harry himself might be a great character. He's a big, Arthur-Rackhamish figure, like a giant troll out of the Brothers Grimm, with a high, sloping brow and a great, gray beard. (What he really looks like is a 7½-foot-tall Danny DeVito.) And the scene in which he's revealed to us, lit only by a spinning flashlight and the refrigerator bulb, is a gem. But that's before he becomes a squeeze toy. Harry, it turns out, is a sensitive soul. He's got a woebegone expression and doleful bedroom eyes that he blinks girlishly when the moment turns tender. And turn tender it does, at the drop of a hat.

Though it's no chore to watch really, Harry keeps coming at you with goeey messages about animals — Harry's a vegetarian — and the wonders of nature and believing in miracles and you just want to shut the thing off. When she says her lines, Dillon is in a world all her own, and Lithgow is the best Disney Dad ever — better even than Dean Jones — but the movie won't leave you alone long enough to enjoy them. (Don Ameche, as a Big-foot fanatic, is shoehorned into the movie, but he has a kindly presence anyway.)

CINEMATOGRAPHER Allen Daviau has a great feel for soft, cushiony suburban light, but it's a tough light for laughs. Actually the movie isn't that interested in laughs; it wants to enlighten us. Daviau's dewy tones are better for the rapturous mood of E.T. (which he also shot) and that's the chord the filmmakers want to strike. They set out to make a tall tale on the order of

"Jack and the Beanstalk," but essentially the movie is sketch material padded out with sentiment. Yet Spielberg and Co. go for the big feeling anyway. With Harry and the Hendersons, they've tried to build an epiphany machine. They're people with a mission: single-handedly, they want to restore wondrousness to our lives — and it's not a proposition we get to vote on either.

Turow scores with first novel

By Dan Cryer
 Newsday

Presumed Innocent by Scott Turow

At the symbolic center of Scott Turow's smashingly good murder mystery/courtroom drama is a mere caricature of a woman. Carolyn Polhemus is the stuff of silly pop fiction. Every man's dream of uninhibited sexual adventure, she is bright, beautiful, busty and bold.

But her creation is no mistake. And Presumed Innocent is anything but silly pop fiction. For Carolyn's irresistible, all-powerful allure is what makes the book's protagonist, Rusty Sabich, risk everything — his career as chief assistant county prosecutor in a city like Chicago, a lovely, intelligent mathematician-wife, a lively second-grader son — for a love affair.

IT'S AN AFFAIR that Carolyn, another assistant county prosecutor, soon ends for ambition's sake, but the consequences for Rusty will last forever.

After Carolyn is raped and murdered, Rusty is put in charge of the investigation, and eventually he is accused of the crime.

It's no surprise that Turow has a sure feel for this gritty urban territory charged with ambition, corruption and passion. Now a partner in a Chicago law firm, he previously served in a public job similar to his protagonist's, rubbing shoulders with tough-guy types on both sides of the law. What's more surprising is that his first novel is so good.

TUROW, to be sure, wrote the well-regarded One L, a non-fiction account of life at Harvard Law School. But his adroit literary skills mark him as more than a novice among novelists.

Turow renders dialogue and scene-setting with remarkable dexterity. Diverse characters come alive with ease. And the pacing and surprise essential for suspense are just right.

We meet Kindle County Prosecuting Attorney Raymond Horgan, the onetime mentor who turns against Rusty after losing re-election; Rusty's unlikely best friend, Dan "Lip" Lipranzer, the homicide detective with the "duck-ass hairdo" and that look of lurking small-time viciousness that you've seen on every no-account kid hanging on a street corner; Nico Della Guardia, the ambitious former colleague who defeats Horgan and prosecutes Rusty; Alejandro "Sandy" Stern, the wily defense lawyer who's not sure his client is innocent; and Larren Lyttle, the street-smart black judge presiding over the trial.

THE EVIDENCE against Rusty is damaging if circumstantial: a fingerprint on a glass, telephone records indicating he called Carolyn shortly before the murder, a sperm type similar to his and traces of carpet fibers like those in his home. Rusty wants to avoid public revelation of adultery, let alone conviction for murder.

Before the trial is over, however, we learn that Carolyn has slept in more than a few departmental beds, that Horgan and Lyttle guard some other explosive secrets, that innocence, in short, is marked primarily by its absence. Perhaps justice is, too.

But there is more to this novel than the unexpected shift of plot.

"Presumed Innocent" is not only a well-crafted, deftly paced story but an intriguing commentary on the corruptions of politics, the convolutions of love and the ambiguities of justice.

Botha renews state of emergency

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa — President Pieter Botha Wednesday renewed South Africa's year-old state of emergency for up to another year.

"The ordinary laws of the land are still not sufficient to curb the threat" to security and public order, Botha said in an address to a joint meeting of the white, Asian and mixed-race chambers of Parliament.

Botha imposed a nationwide state of emergency on June 12, 1986, in an effort to curb two years of anti-government black violence that had claimed about 2,100 lives. The year of emergency rule ends at midnight tonight.

Under the 1986 action, Botha granted police and soldiers virtually unlimited powers of search and arrest and imposed strict censorship. Since then, about 500 blacks have died in continuing riots with black and white police and soldiers.

Protestors demonstrate in S. Korea

SEOUL, S. Korea — The city erupted into its worst political violence in years Wednesday afternoon, as thousands of angry anti-government protesters fought riot police in four hours of rugged street battles.

The demonstration came on what was supposed to be a day of glory for the government. Several hours earlier, ruling party chief Roh Tae Woo had been formally nominated at a convention as successor to President Chun Doo Hwan.

Demonstrators built barricades, lit bonfires and threw so many stones that streets all over Seoul's central sector were littered with rubble.

Police, who had banned the rally, blanketed a huge swath of Seoul with tear gas. It invaded shops, offices and homes and left many people who had nothing to do with the protests gasping for breath. Calm was restored Wednesday night.

NATO nears missile agreement

REYKJAVIK, Iceland — NATO's secretary-general said Wednesday the alliance's foreign ministers would likely agree this week on a formal petition to eliminate intermediate-range nuclear missiles from Europe.

"It seems to me it's within reach to have an agreement on the elimination of all — or almost all — of the long-range and short-range intermediate nuclear weapons," Lord Peter Carrington said at a news conference on the eve of the spring meeting of the North Atlantic Council.

Carrington also said that NATO, as an alliance, would not be able to play a role in defending shipping in the Persian Gulf because the region is outside the NATO area of defense.

Once the NATO arms petition is formalized, U.S. negotiators will take the alliance stance to Geneva for arms talks with the Soviets.

Publisher unveils AIDS textbooks

WASHINGTON — A publisher unveiled Wednesday two small textbooks that tell children about AIDS and suggest they refrain from sex or be very careful.

The Merrill Publishing Co. of Westerville, Ohio, said that its two 30-page booklets — "AIDS, What You Should Know" and "AIDS, Understanding and Prevention" — are "the first booklets about AIDS that are part of a comprehensive health education curriculum package" for sale to elementary and secondary schools.

Linda Meeks, one of the authors, said the company had produced two different booklets to give schools a choice on how explicit they want to be when teaching about AIDS.

The soft-cover booklets are intended for use in grades 5 through 12 and come with teachers' editions and a video tape.

AIDS education begins in Nicaragua

MANAGUA, Nicaragua — After months of downplaying the possibility of AIDS in Nicaragua, the government has launched a campaign to teach the public how to prevent the spread of the deadly disease.

Officials still insist no cases of AIDS have been detected. But they are now openly acknowledging some Nicaraguans have probably been infected by the AIDS virus.

The public education campaign centers on full-page newspaper advertisements outlining procedures for safe sex. The ads encourage the use of condoms and warn against sexual practices that could spread the always-fatal disease, which is spread through sexual contact and contaminated blood.

Pros, cons of proposed wage hike

WASHINGTON — Proposals to raise the minimum wage would do little to help the working poor, Labor Secretary William Brock told Congress Wednesday, calling instead for job training to help the needy climb out of poverty.

"Make no mistake: We believe that the increase is bad policy, especially in the context of today's economy," Brock said. A committee is now reviewing proposals to raise the minimum wage, currently $3.35 an hour.

Committee Chairman Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., disagreed. "One of my top priorities on this committee is to see the minimum wage once again be a living wage," Kennedy said.

Vietnam vet surrenders, discusses fate

QUANTICO, Va. — A decorated Marine sharpshooter who fled into the Vietnamese jungle 17 years ago wore his reissued uniform Wednesday to a meeting where he discussed his fate with a military review panel.

Douglas Beane, 39, who had lived in Australia since 1970, surrendered to military police at Los Angeles International Airport Tuesday and was flown to Quantico Marine base at about 9:30 p.m.

Beane allegedly escaped from a military hospital in Vietnam on Feb. 28, 1970, while receiving psychiatric treatment and awaiting a possible court-martial on charges of black marketeering and threatening another Marine's life.

Mountain of tires goes up in blaze

HUDSON, Colo. — Fire triggered by lightning raged Wednesday in a mountain of 5 million used tires, belching black smoke a mile high, and firefighters battled the blaze with bulldozers and a World War II bomb.

The fire, which erupted Tuesday night, spewed more particulate pollution into the air "than Denver has had in five years," said Wes Potter of the Weld County Health Department.

"This is the big one," she said. "This is the one we've always been afraid might hit. And it has."

They summoned the World War II bomber and dumped thousands of gallons of slurry — a gruel-like mixture of fire-retardant chemicals — onto the blaze.

Wright furious over scandal revelations

WASHINGTON (UPI) — House Speaker Jim Wright blasted the administration Wednesday, saying the Iran-Contra hearings revealed "arrogance, lawlessness, greed" and deliberate attempts to deceive the American public and Congress.

The Texas Democrat said the worst scandal of the Reagan presidency would not have occurred if the administration had "shown any regard for the president's constitutional obligation that the laws be faithfully executed."

WRIGHT CITED testimony by Assistant Secretary of State Elliott Abrams that he had not been "authorized to tell the truth," in a congressional appearance last fall and Fawn Hall, Lt. Col. Oliver North's former secretary, who said there were times "you have to go above the written law."

Hall, who later withdrew her statement, was the last witness in the first phase of the panels' hearings to investigate the administration's secret efforts to supply the Nicaraguan Contras after Congress banned military aid in 1984. The committees next will investigate the secret sale of U.S. arms to Iran when they return for more hearings beginning June 22.

Hall worked for North, the White House aide at the center of the scandal, for four years and told the committees Monday she felt uneasy about altering sensitive documents at North's direction but believed there was a "solid and very valid reason that he must have been doing this."

SEN. GEORGE MITCHELL, D-Maine, a member of the Senate Iran-Contra panel, said it is clear from Hall's comments and others that there are people "who thought that their patriotism and their commitment to the cause was more important than obeying the law."

"It is clear that what Fawn Hall blurted out yesterday represented the attitude of many of those involved," Mitchell said in a telephone interview.

U.S. doubts source of Iranian missiles

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Silkworm anti-ship missile the United States has accused China of providing to Iran is being manufactured in Iran, an Iranian spokesman said Wednesday.

Amir Zamini, spokesman for the Iranian mission to the United Nations, said the missile was captured from Iraq during an Iranian offensive 18 months ago. In a telephone interview with United Press International, Zamini said Iran has since begun manufacturing duplicates of the missile, but he could not say which country initially manufactured the missile.

Asked how a nation with no known experience in missile manufacture could duplicate a sophisticated missile with a 50-mile range in 18 months, Zamini replied: "Necessity is the mother of invention."

BUT A U.S. official at the economic summit in Venice and a State Department official in Washington said there was no doubt the missiles were being delivered from China to Iran.

The officials said Iran has no known missile-manufacturing capability, and laughed at the prospect of it duplicating and

Jim Wright

"It is clear there is an effort under way to create the impression that patriotism, commitment to a cause, sincerity of belief, lack of venal motive somehow combined to justify evading the law," he said.

IN ANOTHER development, special prosecutor Lawrence Walsh made a rare appearance before the federal grand jury investigating the secret sale of U.S. arms to Iran and the diversion of profits to the Nicaraguan Contras.

After meeting with the panel for 15 minutes, Walsh declined to comment on when he might seek further indictments in the case. He indicated to reporters that the grand jury may be stepping up its activities in July. Two people have pleaded guilty to an illegal tax scheme to arm the Nicaraguan rebels.

Also Wednesday, it was disclosed that Thomas Green, the lawyer for retired Maj. Gen. Richard Secord, a principal figure in both the Iran and Contra arms deals, refused to testify in April before the federal grand jury investigating the case.

His lawyer, Earl Silbert, told The Washington Post that Green cited several reasons for not testifying including attorney-client privileges and his Fifth Amendment right against self-incrimination.

manufacturing the missile in 18 months.

Zamini's comments came as White House chief of staff Howard Baker said he believed China's claim that it never sold or gave Silkworms to Iran.

In an interview with ABC News from Venice, Baker said, "I accept the Chinese government's statement that they did not give them or sell them to Iran. I do not dispute that."

ZAMINI said Iran also is manufacturing another missile, a surface-to-surface weapon called the Falcon.

The spokesman also said the Iranian U.N. mission has been emphasizing Iran's policy of not attacking American shipping in the Persian Gulf, through which much of the world's oil is transported, and the need for freedom of navigation in the waterway.

Tehran radio has warned that Iran would strike back at U.S. facilities worldwide if American forces attempted a pre-emptive strike to knock out the Silkworms.

U.S. officials have said Iran appears to be building permanent installations for the mobile missiles on the coast along the Strait of Hormuz.

Tremor

Ron Eiken said, adding he thought the vibrations were due to the bar's music.

"IT WAS REAL gentle, but you could feel it yourself," he said.

Iowa City resident Glenn Jacobsen said he was in Mexico City before the large earthquake in 1985, and felt minor tremors before it struck.

"This was more severe than anything I felt in Mexico City," he said. "We were sitting in our family room and the chairs and tables moved," he said, describing the vibrations, adding ornaments attached to the windows rattled, he said.

UI Senior Sharri Heisler said, "I was standing in the kitchen and I felt the earth rumbling."

Heisler said she saw wires running into the house shaking.

"It was freaky. Everything on the racks started shaking," Sally Kunke, an employee at John's Grocery, 401 E. Market St., said. "I thought it was the wind and then I saw the stuff on the shelf move."

MANY IOWA CITY residents said they didn't take much notice of the disturbance as it happened, but said they remembered some strange rumblings earlier in the evening.

"I thought a truck ran into our wall," Stephanie Blonigan, an employee at King of Jeans in the Old Capitol Center, said.

Signs in the shop swayed back and forth, Blonigan said, and a dressing room door opened and closed by itself. "The whole wall shook. I said, 'What the hell is going on?'"

Blonigan said she never stopped to think that the rumbling and shaking could have been an earthquake. "My brother lives in California and he always calls me when there is a tremor. Now I get to call him," she added.

Others said they felt shaking, but said they didn't think the incident was an earthquake.

"I was in the bathroom," Chris Larson, an employee at Pipers Candies in the Old Capitol Center, said. "I looked and the mirror was shaking. I didn't think anything of it at the time."

Heisler said a friend of hers from California told her it was an earthquake.

"He came over and asked if I felt it and said it was an earthquake," she said.

Others said they never felt the quake. "It passed us by," Iowa City resident John Perdue said. "Maybe we were asleep."

Earthquake rocks epicenter

By Shawn Plank
The Daily Iowan

Minutes after an earthquake rocked the Midwestern town of Lawrenceville, Ill., epicenter of Wednesday's quake, Brad Detz, the nighttime disc jockey at WAKO-FM there, faced a bank of lit-up phones.

Some called to report minor damages, like a ceiling fan that had fallen and shattered in a resident's house in the southeastern Illinois town.

But some called in to request a song only too appropriate.

"I'm all shook up," sang Elvis Presley.

"We had to play it," Detz said.

But Detz and other area residents reported the quake, registering 5.0 on the Richter scale, did no major damage and caused no injuries. The residents, while admitting slight fear during the brief tremors, were upbeat within two hours after the quake.

"It was kind of interesting," Detz said. "I kind of got a kick out of it. I've never been in an earthquake before."

DETZ REPORTED THERE were some scary moments in Lawrenceville. He looked outside and saw the WAKO transmitting towers swaying from the force of the tremor.

"I thought they were going to come down," Detz said.

About 10 miles away east of the epicenter in Vincennes, Ind., Butch Wilson, a dispatcher for the police department there reported a chimney falling off a fireplace but said there was no significant damage.

"It's pretty routine now," Wilson said.

However, Wilson was in a computer room with a paneled floor and said the panels were popping up from the grid.

"It felt like someone was under there pushing them up," Wilson said.

John Lawson, a dispatcher and jailer in Lawrenceville said the town was in "pretty good shape," but when it happened, he said he thought the building was going to fall down.

"Now we're just waiting for the aftershocks," Lawson said.

Acadia.

The tankers will be escorted in groups of two or three, World War II-convoys style, 780 miles through the gulf, Armitage said. The voyage is expected to take 48 hours, he said. Each convoy run will be made every week or 10 days, he said.

The escorts will wait outside Kuwait and in the Gulf of Oman for the tankers to assemble in groups and will not take them through the waterway one at a time, Armitage said.

"Our desire is not to get into a fight," he said. "We're protecting non-belligerent shipping — not cargo ships carrying containers, but oil tankers."

The rules of engagement for the warships are similar to those in effect before the Stark was attacked, but "what has changed is vigilance," Armitage said. "If they (the Navy ships) err now, they're going to err on the side of prudence."

There will be "no more assumptions" that Iraqi planes will not attack and "we're not going to take any chances," he said. "We will treat everybody the same."

Kuwait, which borders Iraq, accepted a U.S. offer to have its tankers fly the U.S. flag to assure their protection by Navy warships against attacks by Iran. The offer came after Kuwait put three of its tankers under Soviet registry for the same reason.

ARMITAGE acknowledged that "one fundamental reason" for reflagging the Kuwaiti ships was "to keep the Soviets from having an increased naval presence in the Persian Gulf."

Air cover for the escorts and their charges may be provided by U.S. Air Force AWACS radar surveillance planes, which have been based in Saudi Arabia since 1981.

Aerospace company eyes Iowa

DES MOINES (UPI) — Gov. Terry Branstad revealed this week Iowa is one of the finalists as the location for a new General Dynamics electronics plant that could employ up to 500 people making aerospace components.

Although a final decision is three months away, Branstad said if Iowa is selected Ames, Cedar Rapids, Des Moines and Iowa City would be the most likely sites.

The governor told The Cedar Rapids Gazette he heard Iowa was being considered for the plant when he met with General Dynamics officials last week during one of his economic development blitzes to Los Angeles and San Diego.

Branstad also disclosed an unnamed high-tech firm is considering Red Oak as the site for another electronics plant that will make aircraft navigational equipment.

If Iowa is selected, the plant would compete with a large Rockwell-Collins facility in Cedar Rapids, Branstad said.

General Dynamics officials will visit Iowa this week to meet with the state's congressional delegation, Branstad said.

Branstad said the firm is looking at three other unidentified states. He said the company wants to move away from large centralized plants to smaller facilities.

The Iowa governor has been wooing General Dynamics since December 1985 when Branstad heard the aerospace company was looking for a site to expand.

TV station sues over Hawk games

By Shawn Plank
The Daily Iowan

A Sioux City television station that unsuccessfully bid for broadcast rights to Iowa sports events has filed a suit against the state Board of Regents and the UI in Johnson County District Court.

The suit, filed Monday by KMEG-TV, states the station requested permission to examine all bids for the rights to broadcast the games but that the request was refused.

Bruce Lewis, general manager of KMEG, a CBS affiliate, says the documents are public records and should be made available under the state's open records law.

"We asked the university for copies of the bids and the criteria by which winning stations had been selected," Lewis said.

An attorney for KMEG, Don Ribble of Cedar Rapids, said officials at the UI stated they did not have the records. Officials told Lewis a Florida-based company, Rasmussen Communications Management Corp. of Naples, Fla., possessed the records.

RASMUSSEN, A PRIVATE company, was employed by the UI to provide marketing services for the television sports package beginning this spring. The company was also listed in the suit.

Lewis said he contacted the Florida company about obtaining the records, but his request was refused because Rasmussen is a private corporation. Lewis also charges company officials initially were willing to provide the records but later changed their minds.

"I made I don't know how many calls and they said, 'You bet, we'll get those records right out to you,'" Lewis said. Later, Rasmussen officials were less helpful and told Lewis, "We don't think you have a right to see them."

Although the suit states KMEG is suing for damages and attorney's fees, Ribble said his client is more interested in the disclosure of the bidding process.

"WE'RE NOT AS concerned about the damages, our real interest is the information," Ribble said.

Lewis hopes the disclosure will help him win the broadcast rights to the games.

"I'm going for the package. I want the games. If I am indeed deserving of it, I want it," Lewis said. "Any money I get from (winning a damage award) compared to what those games would do for me is minimal."

KCAU-TV, the ABC affiliate in Sioux City, won the rights to the broadcast package offered by Rasmussen. The package includes Hawkeye basketball and football games as well as shows featuring Iowa basketball Coach Tom Davis and football Coach Hayden Fry. KTIV-TV, the Sioux City market NBC affiliate, broadcast Hawkeye games before KCAU landed the lucrative package.

Lewis said the package helps improve the station's ratings and helps it attract advertising dollars. But the package also brings prestige.

"IT BRINGS good will, which is as important as the rating points are," he said. "The station's image is greatly

CHICAGO — Dwight Gooden struck out 10 in his second appearance of the season and Keith Hernandez led a 19-hit attack with a pair of homers Wednesday, giving the New York Mets a 13-2 rout of the Chicago Cubs.

Gary Carter and Kevin McReynolds added four hits apiece and Tim Lincecum cracked a three-run homer in a five-run third as the Mets ended a three-game losing streak.

Gooden, 2-0, lasted eight innings in his second start since drug rehabilitation, allowing eight hits and walking none.

Hernandez snapped an 0-for-9 streak with two home runs.

Davis powers A's to sweep

United Press International

OAKLAND, Calif. — Mike Davis homered and reached base four times Wednesday, helping the Oakland Athletics complete a three-game series sweep with a 5-2 victory over the Chicago White Sox.

Dennis Eckersley, 5-4, who relieved when starter Joaquin Andujar strained a hamstring, worked five shutout innings to hand the White Sox their ninth loss in 11 games. Eckersley, who has retired 33 of the last 37 batters he has faced, allowed just two singles and struck out six. Jay Howell pitched the ninth for his 11th save.

Neil Allen, 0-3, surrendered 10 hits over 6 1-3 innings.

Trailing 2-1, Oakland took a 4-2 lead in the second on five straight hits. With one out, Terry Steinbach and Tony Phillips singled. Stan Javier doubled, scoring Steinbach to tie the score 2-2. Mike Gallego then bunted for a single to score Phillips from third. Luis BALTIMORE — Ellis Burks hit two homers, including a grand slam, and Marty Barrett also hit a grand slam Wednesday night, powering the Boston Red Sox to a 15-4 rout of the slumping Baltimore Orioles.

Burk's sixth home run of the season ignited a five-run fourth inning and Barrett's bases-loaded clout triggered a five-run seventh as the Orioles dropped their seventh straight defeat and 11th in their last 12 games. This marked the first time two grand slams ever came off Oriole pitchers in the same game.

Red Sox starter Al Nipper, 5-5, scattered seven hits in nine innings, including solo home runs to Lee Lacy and Ray Knight. Eric Bell, 5-4, took the loss as Boston erupted for 18 hits.

The Orioles took a 1-0 lead in the first inning on Lacy's third home run of the year. Boston tied the score 1-1 in the third on an RBI single by Jim Rice.

Blue Jays 4, Yankees 1

NEW YORK — Jimmy Key combined with Tom Henke on a seven-hitter and George Bell hit his 21st home run Wednesday night, leading the Toronto Blue Jays to their eighth straight victory, a 4-1 decision that handed the New York Yankees their third consecutive loss.

Key, 8-3, struck out three and walked one, lowering his ERA to 3.15. Henke recorded four outs for his 10th save. The Blue Jays, who completed a three-game series sweep, have won 11 of their last 12 games and increased their lead in the American League East to 2 ½ games over New York.

Yankees starter Tommy John, 6-2, allowed six hits, walked four and struck out three over 7 2-3 innings, his longest appearance of the season. The 44-year-old left-hander had won his last four starts.

Bell gave Toronto a 3-0 lead in the third. With one out, Lloyd Moseby walked and Jesse Barfield reached on third baseman Lenn Sakata's error. With both runners moving, Bell drove a 3-2 pitch over the wall in left, giving him 54 RBI this year.

New York drew to 3-1 in the fifth without a hit. Gary Ward reached on second baseman Manny Lee's error, stole second and went to third on catcher Charlie Moore's throwing error. Ward scored on Henry Cotto's groundout.

In the ninth, Lee led off with a single, was balked to second by Dave Righetti, went to third on Moseby's flyout and scored on a passed ball by Rick Cerone to give Toronto a 4-1 edge.

Iowa's Moe named to national all-star squad

Iowa basketball player Jeff Moe has been selected to travel to Europe this summer as a member of an Athletes in Action All-Star team.

Athletes in Action, a sports ministry team, will spend July 1-11 in the Soviet Union playing the Kiev, Vilnius and Moscow junior teams. The squad travels to Yugoslavia July 12-20 to participate in the Sarajevo Tournament with two Yugoslavian teams and a squad from Brazil.

"I consider it a great honor to be selected to this team," Moe said. "The trip to Russia will probably be a once in a lifetime opportunity. It will be great to experience a different culture."

THE 6-FOOT-3-INCH Moe, a senior-to-be from Indianapolis, averaged 11.2 points per game last season as the Hawkeyes' rugged sixth man. A top shooter from three-point range, Moe was also an honorable mention Big Ten Selection last season.

Former Iowa Assistant Basketball Coach Mel Hankinson, recently hired to revamp the basketball program at Masters College in Newhall, Cal., will coach the 10-man squad. The team will meet June 20-30 in Waukesha, Wis., for a formal training camp.

"It will be fun to play for Hankinson," Moe said. "He helped recruit me and is a great basketball coach."

The team was selected through an application process and a letter exchange between Athletes in Action and selected coaches throughout the country. The squad is composed of athletes from both large and small universities, with an emphasis on the player's Christian faith.

"WE WERE LOOKING for Christian athletes with a commitment to share their faith," Gordon Young, an Athletes in Action official, said. "We also look for men with a genuine love for basketball."

"I feel the trip will be a great benefit to me religiously," Moe added. "We'll also help a lot of people over there. It will be a rewarding experience."

Moe is a graduate of Brebeuf (Ind.) High School, a small Jesuit college prep school of about 500 students. Despite the school's unfavorable reputation for sports, Moe was a first team all-state selection by United Press International his senior season.

DESPITE HIS STELLAR senior showing, only former Iowa Coach George Raveling offered Moe a scholarship to play in the Big Ten, a conference where Moe's feisty play has won him the affection of Hawkeye fans and the enmity of both opposing players and fans.

"I play hard all the time," Moe said. "Sometimes it seems like I might be wasting energy, but I think my play helps get the team going."

Baseball Almanac

Quick Quiz
Philadelphia's Steve Brodasian Tuesday tied a NL record by notching his eighth save in as many opportunities and has 15 saves for the year. Last year, the right-hander tied a club record with 29 saves. Who shares the Phillies' season-save mark with Brodasian? (answer below)

Nifty Newcomer
Newly acquired Joe Niekro won his first game as a Twin Tuesday, a 5-2 vent over the Royals to help Minnesota move into a tie for first with Kansas City in the AL West. Niekro, 44, went 6 1/3 innings, giving up one earned run in his first start since being traded from the Yankees Sunday for catcher Mark Salas. The knuckleballer struck out six and walked three.

Who's Hot
Bill Madlock drove in two runs with four hits Tuesday to spark the Tigers to their fourth consecutive triumph, 8-5 over the Brewers. Madlock, signed June 4 after being waived by the Dodgers, has 12 hits in 23 at-bats for a .522 average with Detroit.

Who's Not
Cincinnati's Tom Browning pitched two innings in relief for the Reds against the Giants in his first relief appearance in the majors, after making 93 straight starts for the Reds. Having been hit hard all year, Browning was sent to the minors after Tuesday's game.

American Iron Man
Baltimore's Cal Ripken played in his 822nd consecutive game Tuesday, tying Gus Suhr for the eighth longest streak in major-league history. This season, Ripken has a chance to climb to sixth on the all-time list by passing Ed Yost (820) and Stan Musial (805). Ripken's target date for record holder Lou Gehrig (2,130) is June 1995.

Japanese Man of Steel
Sachio Kinugasa of the Hiroshima Toyo Carp played in his 2,129th consecutive game Tuesday — two short of the baseball record held by Hall of Famer Lou Gehrig. The 40-year-old Kinugasa, a 23-year veteran, blasted his 494th career homer to pace the Toyo Carp to a 10-2 rout of the Yokohama Taiyo Whales in a Central League game. Kinugasa, a player-coach, is expected to break the record Saturday when Hiroshima plays the Chunichi Dragons in Nagoya.

Hot Seat
Darryl Strawberry of the Mets was fined and removed from Tuesday's starting lineup for arriving late for the second straight day. Manager Dave Johnson fined Strawberry a reported $250 and replaced him with Lee Mazzilli. Strawberry was sent up to pinch-hit against the Cubs' Lee Smith in the ninth but struck out to end a 6-5 loss.

'Possessed' Magic Johnson carries Lakers in NBA finals

BOSTON (UPI) — Do not be fooled by the wide smile and easy-going nature, or his team's Hollywood image. Magic Johnson plays basketball as if possessed by demons. Those demons drive him, forcing him to do what is necessary for his team to win. That's what carried him into the lane to nail his game-winning hook shot with two seconds left in Game 4 of the NBA Championship Series.

Some would call it the desire to be a winner, but that's too easy. Everyone who plays professionally wants to win. Magic Johnson suffers for it.

"It's hard to pinpoint and you can't get it," Johnson said with a smile. "You've got to either have it or you don't. You can't coach it and you can't inherit it."

Johnson most definitely has it. If the voting were held for the series Most Valuable Player today, Johnson would undoubtedly be the winner.

HE IS THE LEADING scorer and passer in the finals, averaging 28 points and 11.8 assists entering Game 5 at Boston Garden. He also leads the Lakers in rebounds with 32.

Mychal Thompson, who was traded to the Lakers in mid-season from San Antonio, gushes when speaking of Johnson.

"It's a choice of having Phyllis Diller or Christie Brinkley as your leading lady," he said. "He's the best, the friendliest, the nicest, and most competitive person I've been around."

Johnson is in line to become the first to win three Championship Series MVP awards. Larry Bird won in 1984 and 1986. The others to snare two series MVP trophies are Kareem Abdul-Jabbar (1971, 1985) and Willis Reed (1970, 1973).

Johnson, named the series MVP in 1980 and 1982, can also join Reed (1970), Abdul-Jabbar (1971), Moses Malone (1983) and Bird (1984, 1986) as the only players to win the regular-season MVP and the post-season MVP.

THE CHAMPIONSHIP series has rekindled the Bird-Johnson comparisons that started back when the two played in the 1979 NCAA Championship. Each has won three NBA titles since joining the league and are 1-1 in head-to-head post-season competition.

Lewis said the station made a "darn good" bid but did not say how much it offered. Also named in the suit are Iowa men's Athletic Director Bump Elliott and Associate Director Larry Bruner, UI Vice President for Finance

Ueberroth accepts plan by Jackson

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — Major league baseball has accepted Jesse Jackson's demand that each team devise an affirmative action plan to increase the numbers of minorities in management positions, Baseball Commissioner Peter Ueberroth said Wednesday.

"Every team will have a strong and positive affirmative action program in place within the next 30 days," Ueberroth said.

"Many already do. And the firm represented by Clifford Alexander and Janet Hill has been retained to evaluate each major league team to make sure the plans are correct and to make sure the plans are implemented."

Jackson met separately with owners of American and National league teams at their summer meeting Wednesday to call for an increase in minorities in front-office jobs and emerged with Ueberroth to say that progress had been made.

"WE HAD VERY positive meetings with both groups of owners to lay out the body of our concerns and expectations," Jackson said. "Most basically, each team must comply with the law and come forth with an affirmative action plan that includes women, blacks and Hispanics."

Now that baseball has accepted his demands, Jackson said he and a group of ex-players and civil rights activists will evaluate each team's plan and examine the progress that has been made at a meeting in Chicago on June 29 before deciding on further action.

"We shall take back a report of our meeting today and we plan to meet again with Commissioner Ueberroth," Jackson said. "By June 29, we will be able to make a judgment. The movement that has begun to take place is impressive."

JACKSON HAD previously threatened lawsuits, demonstrations and fan and player boycotts if his demands were not met, but backed off from any ultimatums after meeting with the owners.

"I did not call for a boycott," Jackson said. "I said if negotiations fail, we might have to resort to litigation or some sort of demonstration. But we hope for success at negotiations."

Jackson said there were many qualified minority candidates for management jobs in baseball and agreed that progress has been made in the wake of controversial comments made in April by former Los Angeles Dodgers executive vice president Al Campanis on ABC's "Nightline" program.

Campanis said blacks lack the "necessities" for management jobs and was later dismissed from his position by the Dodgers.

"The funny thing is that Al Campanis didn't get fired because he lied," Jackson said. "He got fired because he told the truth (about how baseball executives feel)."

"Some adjustments have been made since Mr. Al Campanis, the fall guy, pulled the scab off the cancer. Now that it has been fully exposed, I'm convinced the owners are ready to move."

Ticket sales could involve racial strain

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (UPI) — Promoter Butch Lewis says closed circuit ticket sales are lagging for Monday night's Michael Spinks-Gerry Cooney bout because he refuses to accentuate the white vs. black angle.

Lewis bills the scheduled 15-round bout at the Convention Hall as a heavyweight championship bout, although Spinks' International Boxing Federation title has been lifted. The 15,571-seat seat Convention Hall is nearly sold out but closed circuit ticket sales around the nation have been poor.

Lewis has enough money up front to pay off the fighters' combined $6.5 million purse and will probably turn a profit, but the closed circuit exhibitors stand to lose if sales don't pick up.

"Closed circuit sales are dragging," Lewis said. "I got calls from exhibitors. They're mad I'm not promoting it from the racial angle. I told them I won't."

"I don't want to make this a black-white issue, and the fighters don't either," Cooney and his camp is white, Spinks and his handlers — including Lewis — are black. But the fighters have kept race out of the promotion, unlike Cooney's unsuccessful 1982 challenge against Larry Holmes. The hype leading to that fight was filled with ugly racial overtones.

HOLMES STOPPED COONEY IN 13 rounds but lost his title on a decision to Spinks in 1985.

"I don't even think about that," Spinks said of the black-white issue. "I think Larry brought a lot of that on himself because he projected an image of a nasty person."

"I think I project an image where people want to see me win. I don't think people will send me letters saying 'You're a nasty so and so.' You reap what you sow, what I throw out will come back to me."

Krishnas may be sued over team logos

NEW VRINDABAN, W.Va. (UPI) — Major league baseball, several college sports programs and Peanuts cartoon creator Charles Schulz are moving toward suing a Hare Krishna community over the group's nationwide panhandling operation.

Attorneys for baseball, the colleges and Schulz say they believe the New Vrindaban commune violated their clients' trademarks and copyrights, and sources close to the case say suits may be filed within weeks.

Law authorities, who are pursuing criminal charges, estimate that New Vrindaban collected more than $6 million from 1984 through 1986 in return for caps, buttons and stickers bearing the registered logos and names of sports teams and Peanuts characters.

One source said major league baseball and United Features are expected to seek about $5 million in damages each. The amount the colleges may seek would depend on how many institutions join suit.

MANY ITEMS manufactured at the mountain community 75 miles southwest of Pittsburgh, carried such words as, "Go Yankees," "Go Tigers," "Go Stanford" and "Go Rutgers." Others depicted Peanuts characters Snoopy and Woodstock, including one with the message: "Eat, Drink and be Irish."

None of the license holders gave permission to the community to use their names or logos. Schulz is said to be incensed that Snoopy was portrayed as what could be a beer drinker.

Investigators say the panhandling operation involved teams of Krishna devotees, dressed in street clothes instead of their saffron robes, soliciting at sporting events. In nearly all cases, the Krishnas did not identify themselves as members of the India-based sect.

Sources close to a wide-ranging investigation of New Vrindaban say the possible civil suits, coupled with potential criminal fines, could total in the millions of dollars and crush the community.

"THIS COULD BE the end of New Vrindaban. They might have to liquidate," one source said. "This could financially break them," another source said.

Kirtanananda Swami Bhaktipada, guru of the 2,900-acre village of several hundred shaven-headed followers, denies any wrongdoing and says his community is the victim of religious persecution. He also vows it will survive any suits.

"I don't think they can do anything to us," Bhaktipada, 49, said. "You sue a beggar and you catch a louse. We're beggars," Bhaktipada, formerly Keith Ham, is the son of a Baptist minister.

New Vrindaban, the largest of 14 independently operated Krishna communities in North America, has been the target of a series of high-profile inquiries the past year by local, state and federal authorities.

IN MARCH, the governing body of the International Society of Krishna Consciousness, in a move challenged by Bhaktipada, excommunicated Bhaktipada. In doing so, they cited the investigations and accused him of trying to elevate himself as sole leader of the sect, which has an estimated 5,000 members worldwide, most of them in the United States.

The investigations have focused primarily on whether New Vrindaban residents conspired in the suspected murder in Los Angeles in May 1986 of a dissident devotee who had alleged illicit activities at the community, from drug dealing to child abuse.

Information gathered in the murder inquiry led to a raid last Jan. 5 in which a team of about 50 sheriff deputies, state policemen and FBI agents seized three truckloads of souvenirs from New Vrindaban.

IN A COURT AFFIDAVIT, the FBI said it has "reason to believe" the merchandise violates trademark and copyright laws and is part of a scheme to "traffic counterfeit goods," primarily at pro and college sporting events.

Bhaktipada insists there were no violations since New Vrindaban is a non-profit organization and because the souvenirs were not sold, but given away as "gifts" in exchange for contributions.

Attorneys for baseball, Schulz, colleges and the government say there are no such exemptions in the law.

"It is our intention to pursue this in anticipation of criminal indictments," said Bruce Smith, assistant U.S. attorney for the northern district of West Virginia. Bruce Baumgartner, an attorney for major league baseball and United Features Syndicate, which handles Schulz's account, said his clients "will demand a payment of damages ... (and) it could reach into the millions of dollars."

Smith declined to predict when indictments might be sought. His office has been waiting for months for a federal grand jury to be convened.

LAW AUTHORITIES believe the trademarks of nearly all major league baseball teams and most NFL teams were violated. An NFL attorney said the league has decided not to sue, but will be on the lookout for violations next football season.

The U.S. attorney's office recently contacted officials of the Kentucky Derby, the Preakness and the Belmont Stakes to advise them that their trademarks also apparently were used.

Smith said he also needs to reach other possible victims — singer Michael Jackson, the rock group the Grateful Dead and Pope John Paul II. Authorities seized buttons of all of them at New Vrindaban.

The investigations began after dissident devotee Steven Bryant was gunned down in Los Angeles, and another devotee, Thomas Drescher, was charged with the murder.

Bryant had made allegations of criminal activity at New Vrindaban, including child abuse, drug dealing and beatings. He also accused Bhaktipada of brainwashing his (Bryant's) wife.
