Oliver North

North won't testify in private

By Walter Pincus and Dan Morgan
Washington Post

WASHINGTON—Lawyers for Lt. Col. Oliver North Wednesday notified congressional investigators that the former White House aide will refuse to answer questions in private about the Iran-Contra affair.

The unexpected development led to cancellation of this morning's initial closed-door interrogation of North and may mean that he will not be questioned until mid-July when he appears before nationally televised hearings.

North had been subpoenaed to appear with his records Thursday to be questioned by lawyers for the House and Senate select committees, under a grant of limited immunity from prosecution. But at a 7:30 a.m. meeting on Capitol Hill Wednesday, North's chief attorney, Brendan Sullivan, informed the chief counsels for the two panels, John Nields Jr. of the House and Arthur Liman of the Senate, that he believed the deposition procedure violated North's right to due process, sources said.

NORTH'S DECISION was supported with a legal brief arguing that any private deposition would not be covered by the immunity statute, according to House committee chairman Lee Hamilton, D-Ind. Hamilton said the brief raised questions on North's behalf about "secrecy, access to documents and double questioning."

The chairmen and vice chairmen of the House and Senate select committees Wednesday disputed the legal legitimacy of Sullivan's position. But they said it left the committees with the choice of either pursuing a time-consuming contempt process against North, which could last months, or agreeing to take North's testimony for the first time at public sessions.

All except one of the previous witnesses have agreed to preliminary, private sessions with committee lawyers — a standard procedure in congressional investigations as well as in civil and criminal trials. The exception was businessman Albert Hakim, who was also appearing with limited immunity, and who insisted that any non-public testimony be given to an executive session of the committee with a required number of members present.

Regents make UI tougher to enter

By Scott Hauser
The Daily Iowan

CEDAR FALLS — Incoming UI students will face tightened entrance requirements — the only question is when — as the state Board of Regents supported Wednesday stricter UI standards, but asked the UI to study whether 1989 is too soon to implement them.

"The standards are fine with me, it's the time factor that's the problem," Regent Percy Harris said during discussion at the regents Cedar Falls meeting.

UI Vice President for Academic Affairs Richard Remington urged the board to approve the UI's recommendation to tighten the UI College of Liberal Arts entrance requirements — including two years of foreign language, four years of science, and three years each of natural and social science — effective in the fall of 1989.

INSTEAD THE BOARD voted to refer the request to an interinstitutional committee for further study.

In another academic procedural matter, the board approved the UI's compacted calendar for the 1988-89 academic year.

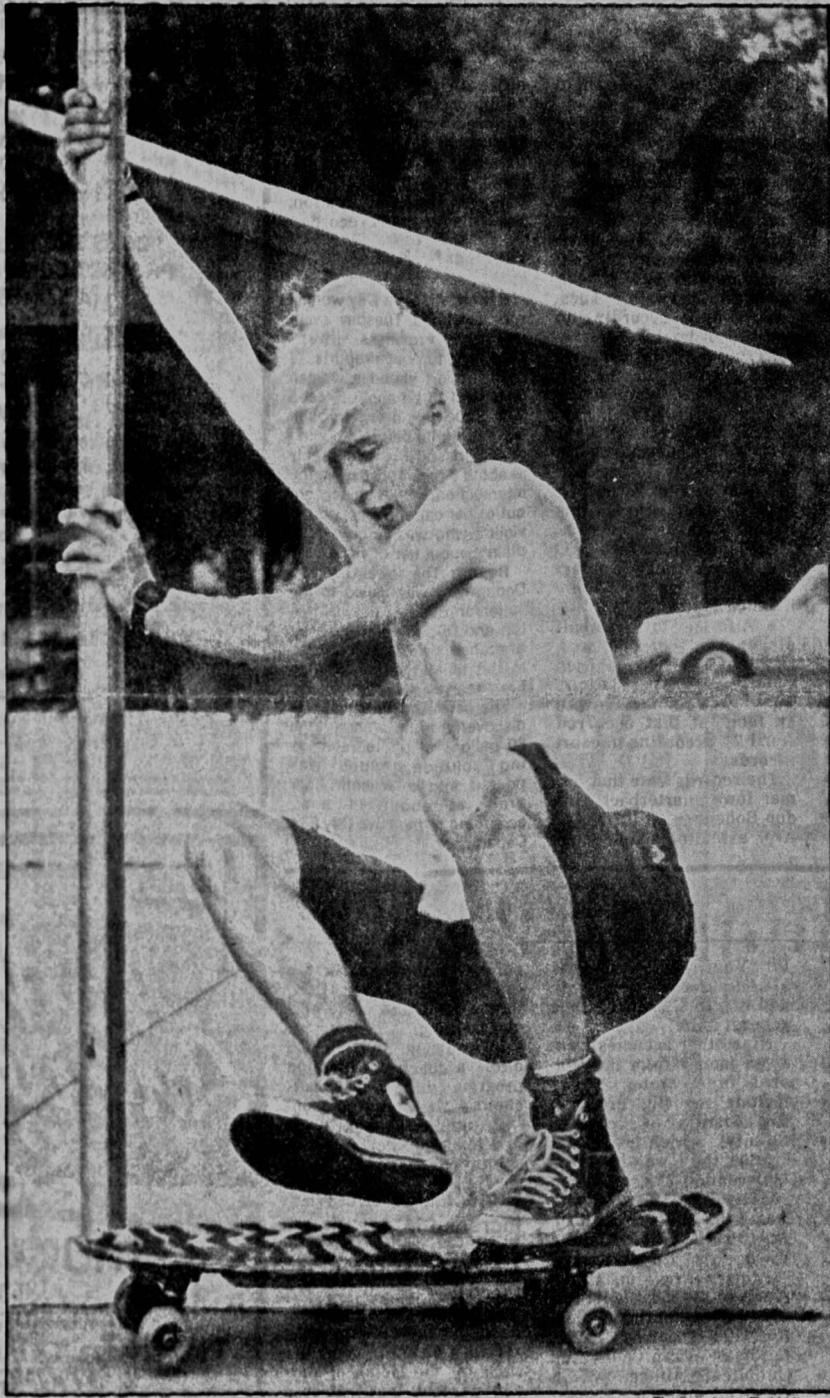

Under the new calendar, classes will start about one week later in the fall, winter break will be shortened one week and the spring semester will end about two weeks early.

The compacted calendar will also allow the UI to start the summer session later in the summer but requires final examination week to begin the day after classes end.

Remington said further study of the entrance requirements was warranted but urged the regents not to postpone the decision to implement the requirements too long.

"WE THINK IT'S high time that these standards be put in place in the fall of 1989," he

Wolfram realizes childhood dream

By Lisa Legge
The Daily Iowan

Winning the title of Miss Iowa last week was a childhood dream come true for Robin Wolfram.

"When I was a little girl I used to run around and pretend I was Miss America," the Ventura, Iowa, native and UI senior said. "We made crowns out of tinfoil."

Wolfram, 24, reigned as Miss Scott County for the past year before winning the state crown. In September she will represent Iowa at the Miss America pageant in Atlantic City, N.J.

Her mother recalled Robin's early aspirations. "She told me when she was a little girl," Cynthia Wolfram said. "She would never be satisfied until she saw her face on the cover of a magazine."

Wolfram began her sojourn for the title two years ago when she entered the state pageant, where she made the top 10.

"I GOT INVOLVED in the pageant because of the scholarship program and because I was in pursuit of a career in broadcasting or entertainment — being able to perform and for the scholarship." She will resume her studies in communications broadcasting next year when her reign is over.

Wolfram said she worked eight hours a day before this year's pageant in preparation.

"I did all the preparation I could do for this," she said. "If I hadn't won, it would have been just something that was supposed to happen. There was nothing else I could do."

Working for the state pageant and making appearances as

Miss Scott County did not hinder her school work. "She worked her way through school and kept on the Dean's List," Cynthia Wolfram said. "She drove back and forth from Iowa City to Davenport. She missed very few appearances."

"I DON'T MEAN it in a braggadocious way," Cynthia Wolfram said. "It was a lot of work for her."

Wolfram said all the work paid off. "It's a coming together of everything I had prepared for," she said. "It's kind of a reward for all my endeavors."

But for Wolfram, the work is not over.

"She's been on a non-stop schedule since Saturday," her business manager, Judy Zeiser, said. "She's been making appearances to say hello, do some public relations. It's like training for the Olympics."

Wolfram received judges' critiques of her performance last week. "They told me the areas I'm really strong in," she said. "Now I'm working on polishing everything."

The 24-year-old, who, as a child "used to cry because no clothes ever fit," won the swimsuit competition at the state pageant.

TO PREPARE FOR the national competition, Wolfram said, "Everyday I do a three-hour workout to keep myself in shape but now it's more concentrated." Her program involves running, aerobics and weightlifting.

Wolfram also won the talent competition by singing, something in which she never

Iranian mines threaten U.S., Kuwaiti ships

By David B. Ottaway
Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Iran has begun laying anti-ship mines in the northern Persian Gulf and the United States is assessing the potential threat to U.S. Navy ships and Kuwaiti tankers sailing under American flags, a senior administration official said Wednesday.

The official said marine salvaging sources reported that the mines have been laid in waters leading into Kuwait's main oil port at Ahmadi.

At first, they were thought to have broken loose from the Shatt al Arab waterway marking the Iran-Iraq border, but "it now looks as if these may be mines that have been deliberately planted out there," the official said. "This is a new development. It's not clear how much of a threat it's going to be."

The possible use of mines — allowing Iran to sabotage Kuwait-bound ships but avoid a direct military confrontation with the United States — appears to be a contingency the administration has yet to fully consider. At least one Soviet tanker, leased to Kuwait earlier this year, hit a mine in mid-May just outside Kuwaiti waters.

THE DEFENSE Department is planning to add three more heavily armed warships to the five-vessel U.S. Middle East force under its plan to provide a military escort for 11 Kuwaiti ships that are being reregistered under the American flag.

Pentagon spokesman Robert B. Sims said Tuesday there are no plans to add minesweepers to the fleet. He said the Defense Department is still evaluating the potential threat of the mines.

Sims said there are "other ways" to deal with the threat than sending U.S. minesweepers. One U.S. official noted that Saudi Arabia has four

U.S.-built minesweepers in its small navy.

The Soviet Union, which has leased three oil tankers to Kuwait, now has four minesweepers in the gulf and is adding one guided-missile cruiser, according to Assistant Secretary of Defense Richard L. Armitage, who testified before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee Tuesday.

THE USE OF MINES is a tricky issue because the Iranians appear to be laying them only inside Kuwaiti waters where U.S. naval ships escorting the Kuwaiti tankers are not now scheduled to enter. Thus, the Kuwaiti tankers could be successfully escorted through the gulf only to be hit later by Iranian mines.

This is not the first time the United States and its Middle East allies have contended with a mine threat. In the late summer of 1984, a Libyan ship spread mines in the Red Sea in an attempt to sabotage traffic passing through the Suez Canal.

The United States, among a number of other Western powers, sent minesweepers to destroy what turned out to be makeshift, underpowered Libyan mines that did no damage.

Sharp congressional criticism of the administration's plan to reflag 11 Kuwaiti tankers continued Wednesday.

The chairman of the House Armed Services Committee, Rep. Les Aspin, D-Wis., said the Central Intelligence Agency had told his panel that its analysis rated as "quite high" the likelihood of a "no-fingerprints" Iranian retaliation, "such as a terrorist attack against Americans or increased attacks on non-U.S. flag shipping."

Aspin also suggested Iran might try to use mines, not in the Strait of Hormuz where the current is too swift, but elsewhere, "say, in the channel entering Kuwait's harbor."

ROCK ISLAND, Ill. — U.S. marshals have begun serving about 150 arrest warrants for Quad-Cities area motorists who have ignored court appearances or fines stemming from traffic violations at the Rock Island Arsenal.

Federal marshals from Springfield, assisted by police from Rock Island and Davenport arrested 24 people and served 40 warrants Tuesday, said Don Lamb, chief deputy marshal.

Those people arrested were taken to U.S. District Court to face their charges or to make arrangements to pay overdue fines, he said.

Old couple's ordeal ends

FARGO, N.D. — An elderly Chicago-area couple, lost for two days in the North Dakota Badlands without food or water, said Wednesday they were glad to be alive.

Frank and Marguerite Plennert of Park Ridge, Ill., were found weak and dehydrated Tuesday morning, about 500 yards from where they left their car Sunday afternoon, said authorities at Theodore Roosevelt National Park in western North Dakota.

The retired locksmith and his wife of 43 years said they made a wrong turn while trying to avoid a buffalo on a trail in the North Unit of the national park.

"We both feel shaky and weak. We had no food or liquid. We were almost at the end of our rope," said Marguerite Plennert, 72.

Murder suspect stays in jail

CEDAR RAPIDS — A woman suspected of killing her mother tearfully told a Linn County judge she has nowhere to go if she's released from jail.

Yvette Myers, 31, is accused of using a hammer to beat her 60-year-old mother to death on Monday. An argument over a loan apparently escalated into violence when Myers hit her mother with a ball peen hammer, causing massive head injuries. The court decided to keep Myers behind bars in lieu of $287,000 bond.

A brother, Robin Myers, told the court his sister is not a cold-blooded killer but she does have reoccurring mental problems.

Board appoints principals for Lincoln, Central schools

By Craig Sterrett
The Daily Iowan

New principals were appointed to two Iowa City Community School District schools Wednesday at a special meeting of the district board of directors.

The school board unanimously voted to appoint Michael O'Leary principal of Coralville Central Elementary, and voted 5-1 to appoint Chris Kolarik to fill the opening at Lincoln Elementary.

Principal positions opened at Coralville Central, Lincoln and Longfellow elementary schools at the end of the 1986-87 school year. The board will wait to fill the vacancy left by Tom Holmes at Longfellow until a later date.

O'Leary, 36, who will fill a vacancy left by Stan Bishop, will leave his position as principal of Sunnyside Elementary in Burlington which he has held since 1986. With a B.S. from Upper Iowa University and a M.A. from the University of Northern Iowa, O'Leary has been teaching since 1973 at La Porte City, Waterloo and Howard-Winneshek schools, where he was also assistant principal from 1973-76. He has been involved in elementary administration since 1985 at Dunkerton and Burlington.

A FORMER IOWA CITY resident, O'Leary was chosen because of "his knowledge and understanding of elementary age children and elementary students," Superintendent of Schools

David Cronin said. "It's fantastic," O'Leary said. "I am very, very pleased to be involved in the Iowa City School District. I am really looking forward to coming back to Iowa City."

Kolarik, 32, who will fill a vacancy left by Jan Harvey, has been in the district since 1979 as a kindergarten through third grade teacher and as half-time principal at Lincoln this year. She has a B.A. and M.A. from the University of Iowa.

Kolarik was chosen from three final candidates because of her "familiarity with Lincoln school and her strong basis of support from parents and staff at the school," Cronin said.

Kolarik was unavailable for comment Wednesday.

Regents officially approve UI laser funding

By Scott Hauser
The Daily Iowan

CEDAR FALLS—Work on the proposed UI laser facility moved up toward groundbreaking next spring as the state Board of Regents officially authorized funding of the project and approved a feasibility study of laser building-connected projects.

At its meeting in Cedar Falls Wednesday, the board approved the distribution of proceeds from $65.6 million in academic building revenue bonds to the three regents universities.

The UI was authorized to spend $25.1 million in proceeds, with $25 million going to fund the new laser research center and the remaining $100,000 to remodel the Old Law Building — now the UI International Center.

UI Vice President Dorsey Ellis presented to the board a plan to locate the building in the parking lot north of the Union and asked for authorization for a feasibility study to locate a new parking ramp at the corner of Capitol and Bloomington streets to replace the lost parking in the Union lot and possibly to house a chilled water facility.

"WHAT WE'RE ASKING is to proceed with planning in conjunction with our consultants to see whether this is feasible," he said.

Last week the UI Campus Planning Committee approved the site location with the understanding an integrated effort would be made to include the parking ramp and the chilled water facility — which is needed for the laser center and the UI Chemistry-Botany Building — as a package.

The ramp would displace the Hillside Arboretum — an area planted with trees for student and exhibition by students and faculty — which Ellis said would be replaced if another location could be found.

MUCH OF TUESDAY'S dis-

ussion on bonding revenues centered on whether Iowa State University would be able to proceed immediately with work on its plans for a research park with its approved $37.5 million.

ISU Vice President for Business and Finance Warren Madden proposed $750,000 of the proceeds go to fund the park.

Board Office Director of Business and Finance Doug True said the entire amount of $65.6 million would not be available to the regents in one single amount because the bonds will be sold in segments.

The board office recommended ISU use the first part of its funding on its other capital projects, holding off on the industrial park until other sources of revenue could be found.

After considerable debate, the regents agreed to fund planning for the six ISU projects with the understanding alternative funding would be found for the park if necessary.

City mulls requiring course for bartenders

Stephen Atkins

By Joseph Levy
The Daily Iowan

Bartenders in Iowa City will have to complete a course in alcohol awareness before they can receive their serving licenses if a proposal initiated by Iowa City Manager Stephen Atkins comes to be.

Atkins' plan would require bartenders to attend a 12-hour course at Kirkwood Community College covering alcohol-related problems, attitudes and ways to deal with drunken customers before they are allowed to tend bar.

"We want bartenders to understand the psychology of alcohol," Atkins said.

The proposal was discussed briefly at Iowa City Council meetings this week, where councilors told Atkins to further investigate the feasibility of adoption.

"Most students are human beings. They don't want to get nailed on the roadway any more than anyone else," says Iowa City Manager Stephen Atkins.

"Iowa City might be a good place to start (the program)," Councilor Kate Dickson said. "If anyone could put this to the test, Iowa City could."

ATKINS SAID the program had been initiated successfully in Schaumburg, Ill., where he was city manager before coming to Iowa City. The program there was also coordinated with a local community college, which helped develop a curriculum.

Participants attended 12 hours of courses over a four-week period and were then given their licenses. Bartenders who were already licensed were given 18 months to complete the additional training.

The high concentration of drinking establishments in the downtown area and complaints about public intoxication, disorderly conduct and drunk driving led Atkins to believe such a program would have its place in Iowa City.

"I've got to believe the problem of overconsumption can be attended to," he said, adding Iowa City's status as a college town shouldn't hinder the progress of an alcohol awareness program.

"MOST STUDENTS are human beings," he said. "They don't want to get nailed on the roadway any more than anyone else."

Harry Ambrose, owner of the Tycoon I.C., 223 E. Washington St., said he would readily welcome a program licensing bartenders.

"With (insurance) laws the way they are right now, I think it's a fantastic idea," he said. Ambrose explained such a program could even lower liability insurance rates for drinking establishments. Currently, bars are held liable if an intoxicated patron harms another individual in or out of the facility.

The law would also discourage those who aren't serious about tending bar from acquiring a license, Ambrose added.

The council requested Atkins further investigate the proposal before they take action on it. Atkins said he would consult area bars and restaurants and come back to the council for action within a few months.

Action-packed 'Predator' suits the times

By Matthew Willis
 The Daily Iowan

I CAN imagine Elliott Abrams, the State Department's man-in-charge of Latin America, telling Congress we need a couple hundred billion more to combat Predator. That alien in the jungles down there is knock-knock-knockin' on our back door. Imagine, something worse than commies...

Arnold Schwarzenegger's latest star vehicle is a hybrid of Rambo and Alien(s), if you can believe it. A half-dozen mercenaries led by the big guy are sent in to rescue a cabinet official taken prisoner in some unnamed Latin American country. But something's not right in the tropics and it's not the Russian advisers that are haphazardly blowing our hardy boys away, either. There's some kind of alien thing tracking and hunting the humans on the ground. The old Ten Little Indians plot is played out until Schwarzenegger gets really mad. And then you can guess the rest, 'cause Arnie's ready to party now. The dialogue is at a minimum, there's plenty of firepower and the lush tropical setting is facilitated by plenty of filters and primordial lighting.

MANY OF THE sci-fi/monster films of the 1950s that featured bug-eyed nasties from outer space (such as The Thing, Invasion of the Body Snatchers and Them) and which generally built on feelings of fear and paranoia towards the Other are seen today as reflecting feelings of uncertainty toward elements of American society — the Cold War, McCarthyism, Eisenhower complacency, and the retrenchment of patriarchal authority in politics, sexual or otherwise.

Many of today's films can be read in a similar manner and what more appropriate film than Predator? This kind of fantasy is closer to the surface of things than the "realistic" and "serious" films that claim to take on big issues. Predator is a real meat-and-potatoes film, a gung-ho celebration of might. It's not as blatantly jingoistic as Iron Eagle or Top Gun, but it's a Reagan-era flick all the same.

SCHWARZENEGGER and his gang show us that militarism means integration — a black is best buddies with a rock and roll redneck and the crew includes a Native American and a kid with glasses (there's even a token woman, but she's not allowed to use any weapons). These boys with toys are moral to boot; about "that Libyan thing," Arnie says that he only rescues people and doesn't go in for assassination. And the real enemy isn't the Latin Americans or their Soviet advisers, but the regular Army brass and the CIA (here represented by Carl Weathers), who have gone soft sitting behind their desks. Weathers uses Schwarzenegger's team under false pretenses to destroy one of the enemy's bases before they invade somebody.

BUT BEFORE THIS film can turn into another superficial rerun of Vietnam, the predatory alien strikes and the chase is on. Our gun-toters are trapped in the jungle, the victims of a superior technology. This is the "nightmare" of Vietnam, the jungle as a place of evil with America mired within it. At one point, the mercenaries open fire on the jungle itself, literally shredding it to pieces. "Nothing human could have lived through that," says one of them, echoing Gen. William Westmoreland's notorious pronouncement that the Vietnamese weren't really human because they could take so much firepower and keep coming back for more.

The last of our boys, Arnie himself, must take on the attributes of the guerrillas to win. Using "primitive" weapons, building booby traps and becoming one with the jungle by camouflaging himself with mud, he goes after the foreign devil.

THE FILM SUGGESTS the U.S. is now the underdog, that liberalism has weakened us and that we're practical pushovers. The Right's warnings are clear — the big bad wolf is at the gates. Unless we tighten up the moral fiber of the nation, spend much more on defense and go on the offensive, we'll have to head for the hills to fight it out.

Making Schwarzenegger the one to do the dirty work is symptomatic. His body has been made a fetish and his films usually extol his superhuman status. As Abrams would probably put it, "All we need, Mr. Chairman, is a billion in humanitarian aid and a few dozen of these Schwarzenegger guys and I promise that I won't come back for more."
 You bet.

Martin tries to steal his own show in mediocre 'Roxanne'

By George Yatchisin
 The Daily Iowan

THE best film comedies are tangle tangos: battles of wills, battles of words. The Marx Brothers had each other to bounce off of, the classic screwballs set the sexes upon each other, an ensemble like Monty Python assaults all conceptions of stability and sense. Comedy falls prey to pathos, however, when one star hogs the humorous limelight, hence my aversion (among my many faults) to Charlie Chaplin. His career is summed up by the cloying close-up that closes City Lights, a moment of maddening, narcissistic beauty. Chaplin, the writer, star, director, producer and score-writer, has gone too far.

Steve Martin risks the same excesses in his new vehicle, Roxanne. Although he leaves the direction to Australian emigre Fred Schepisi, Martin's desire to do a Cyrano de Bergerac update led him to pen the screenplay and become executive producer. Roxanne is his baby.

Movies

MARTIN ALSO stars as C.D. Bales, the witty, wonderful fire chief in a small-town heaven of a ski resort. Bales' only problem is his nose — it's bigger than a bread box. C.D. meets and falls for the beautiful visiting astronomer Roxanne (Daryl Hannah), but his proboscis prevents any action. Instead, he helps fellow fire fighter and hunk Chris (Rick Rossovich) woo Roxanne, since Chris' glands leave his brain stranded; at one point he tells Roxanne that her breasts are like pillows and he needs to do some fluffing.

This plot synopsis makes it clear that the film denies the insanity it seems to want to cultivate in an opening, audience-rousing sword fight satire: C.D. vanquishes — with a borrowed tennis racket — two fiends armed with ski poles. Despite being a fantasy and given to any outlandishness for a joke (Hannah gets to deliver the line of the film, in pidgin English, at a moment of "high drama"), Roxanne can't help but be Hollywood. The tragic ending of Edmond Rostand's source material disappears and the big, beaked beast wins beauty; mindless hunks must shuffle off to Vegas with bartending bim-bos.

ROXANNE IS intermittently funny, but can't escape being more product. One of the best scenes, in which Martin gets to play stand-up comic, even provides us with a laugh track as he performs before an extremely appreciative crowd. Martin's best performances have been struggles — a fight with Lily Tomlin for his own body in All of Me, a fight for his own feelings vs. Tin Pan Alley sugarcoating in Pennies from Heaven — but Roxanne isn't a struggle, it's raised arms in victory. In the balcony scene, when C.D. pretends he's Chris, reciting his lines of love, Martin's eyes pool with adoration, but they seem misty with self-love, flooded mirrors turned inward.

IT WOULD HELP if Hannah were more worthy of his adoration, but however beautiful she is (and she may be Lori Singer: Who knows?), her acting has become as wimped-out as her real-life boyfriend Jackson Browne's idea of rock and roll. She's not aided by the role much — supposedly a

Bensusan's audience builds

By Alex Wilding-White
 The Daily Iowan

Pierre Bensusan; Musiques (Lost Lake Arts)

WHILE HE WILL certainly not become a household name in the pop music sense, French guitarist Pierre Bensusan is nevertheless starting to make waves with select music audiences in America. Already a favorite with European audiences, Bensusan's early records are being re-issued through the Windham Hill subsidiary label Lost Lake Arts, which, no doubt, is aiming at the growing audience for "New Age" music as the base for furthering Bensusan's following here.

Bensusan is an acoustic guitarist out of a lineage dominated by Americans (John Fahey, Stephan Grossman) and Brits (John Renbourn, Bert Jansch, Ralph McTell), one that has expanded the repertoire of the instrument by exploring a wide variety of music from many different cultures and often developing new techniques to accommodate new musical idioms and tonal ranges.

Last year's Early Pierre Bensusan, a selection of material from his first two records, consisted heavily of Bensusan's Irish jigs and reels. Most of the tracks were solo guitar and were played in a straightforward manner that highlighted Bensusan's crystal-clear phrasing, imaginative style and inventive use of various guitar tunings.

Musiques, a re-issue of a record released in 1980, is a very different album, living up to the plural form of the title in several ways. Bensusan draws from a wider range of music, from an Argentine tango and a Scottish work song to a Turkish ballad and an excerpt from Handel's "Water Music." He also makes liberal use of studio overdubbing to create ensemble arrangements and to utilize different playing methods, such as flat-picking and linear soloing.

Bensusan approaches the variety of material here with flair... and... understated humor... For those who found 'Early Pierre Bensusan' a delight, 'Musiques' will prove a very welcome addition.

HIS USE OF overdubbing meets with mixed results. On "La Marche," a Bensusan original inspired by the story of a bagpipe player who drifts out of the marching procession never to be seen again, the layered effect of two acoustic guitars, a mandolin and an

Iowa Supreme Court ruling: Unborn children are 'family'

By Scott Sonner
United Press International

DES MOINES — In a 6-3 opinion defining unborn children as family members, the Iowa Supreme Court ruled Wednesday the parents of a fetus killed in a car accident may recover damages under their family insurance policy.

Chief Justice W. Ward Reynoldson said in the majority opinion a minor child "including an unborn child, is a 'family member' and a 'covered person' within the scope of the policy" issued by IMT Insurance Co. to Michael and Joan Craig of Black Hawk County.

In a sharp dissent, Justice Louis Schultz said the "plain meaning of the terms 'person' and 'family member' in the policy do not include the unborn.

"A person is a human being who has attained a recognized individual identity by being born alive," Schultz wrote.

THE SUPREME COURT, reversing a lower court ruling, said the Craigs are entitled $25,000 under the IMT policy for their unborn son delivered dead in December 1984. Joan Craig was 6½ months pregnant at the time.

IMT agreed the unborn child was viable and the death was a direct result of an automobile accident caused by a uninsured motorist five days earlier.

But the firm argued the fetus was not covered as a family member and the parents may not recover damages.

Reynoldson said state laws bar a wrongful death claim on behalf of an unborn child, but he said parents are allowed to recover for loss of consortium or companionship as a result of that death.

"Clearly the Craigs unborn child is a 'person.' He also was related to the Craigs by blood and resided in their household," Reynoldson wrote.

He said the policy does not define "person" and defines "covered person" as "you or any family member."

"They had good reason to believe the term person in their policy would encompass minor children and therefore their unborn child. To read the policy more narrowly would imply exclusions not expressly provided for in the policy. This we decline to do," Reynoldson said.

Justices Arthur McGiverin and Charles Wolle joined Schultz in the dissent.

"I do not believe that an unborn child is either a covered person or a family member under the terms of this policy... Under the policy the bodily injury simply was not sustained by a covered person," he said.

Pipeline company employees replaced after salary dispute

By Shawn Plank
The Daily Iowan

Union boilermakers, working under a contractor at the Mid America Pipeline Co., east of Iowa City, have been locked out and replaced by non-union workers after a salary dispute.

About 10 workers were affected by the dispute which began last Wednesday, when an extension expired on a contract between Boilermakers Local 83, Kansas City, and Quad City Boiler Inc., Davenport. The Quad City firm is contracted to do work on boilers at the Mid America plant.

Union officials charge Dave Johnson, owner of the company, with cutting wages as much as 50 percent. Chuck Clancy, a union official from Kansas City, said Johnson offered $4.50 per hour for shop work, down from $9 per hour and $14.42 per hour for field work, down from $18.50 per hour.

CLANCY REPORTED the wages were cut because Johnson said the boiler company needed to stay competitive. But Clancy added Johnson has no proof the new salaries were necessary for the company to compete.

"He's never proven that to us," Clancy said. "We want to know where he got his information."

The contract expired April 17, 1986, but had been extended until last Wednesday by mutual agreement.

THEY ALSO reported Johnson hired security guards to keep the workers away from the work site.

Clancy added he's contacted Johnson by telegram, saying the union is ready to negotiate a settlement, but he hasn't heard back and accused Johnson of "stalling."

Johnson was unavailable for comment Wednesday.

Law could plug brain drain

By John Bartenhagen
The Daily Iowan

A new state law raising starting teachers' salaries to $18,000 may keep more UI College of Education graduates from leaving Iowa, but Judith Hendershot, UI director of Educational Placement, said the majority will continue to look for work elsewhere, especially in the Sun Belt states of Florida, Texas, New Mexico and Arizona.

But Jerry Kuhn, assistant to UI College of Education Dean Charles Case, said the new law will even benefit graduating teachers who choose to leave the state.

"I think the law makes the Iowa schools more competitive in terms of this year's graduates," he said. "But it's encouraging even to those who leave because of the increased recognition of education's importance."

THE LAW CONSISTS of a three-phase plan that will go into effect Sept. 1. In addition to raising starting teachers' salaries, the plan provides funds to raise experienced teachers' salaries and to allow school districts to reward teachers for exceptional performance both in and out of class.

UI Education Professor John Conner said teachers will benefit most from the third phase of the law.

"If Phase III comes through properly, it will give teachers the opportunity to take sabbaticals to pursue advanced degrees or to recover from teacher burnout," he said. "It's a very important part of the plan."

Hendershot said many factors influence a college student's decision to leave Iowa.

"The school population in Iowa is dropping, which causes a shortage of openings," she said. "And you can't say that in the past people went out of state solely because of the lower pay here, but it certainly was one factor."

KUHN SAID MANY teachers, both experienced and newly graduated, have been lost to other states because of the erosion of Iowa's smaller school districts.

"Teachers' pay in Iowa was low to begin with, but in the small rural schools, it was incredibly bad," he said. "We've lost many outstanding teachers and we hope this pay raise will at least slow the rate at which they're leaving."

Hendershot said state governments need to do still more to make the field of teaching more attractive.

"There needs to be more professionalism," she said. "Teachers want more autonomy within the profession, more say in the governance of school districts and improved working conditions."

Although the raise in salaries is considerable, Kuhn said Iowa is about average in terms of teachers' pay.

"It's very forward-looking, though," he said. "We've had good schools and this will help keep them that way."

TAs struggle with dual roles

By John Bartenhagen
The Daily Iowan

They are both students and teachers, and sometimes the combination of the two roles can be confusing for UI teaching assistants.

Student and departmental expectations are forcing many UI TAs to make decisions which can have an adverse effect on their own education, according to one rhetoric TA.

Kris Carle, a doctoral student in communication studies, said TAs must sometimes ignore their own studies in order to devote adequate time to their students.

"There is a point in the semester where everyone is short on time and you have to set priorities — are you a student or a teacher?" Carle said. "At the end of the semester, everyone is crunched for time and if you're concerned, you have to feel the pressure."

Tim Doffing, a mathematics TA said taking only two classes per semester allows him time to be both a student and an instructor.

"I LIKE TO THINK I give my students a fair amount of time," he said.

Professor Doug Trank, head of the UI Rhetoric Department, said a lack of time at the end of a semester creates a potential for problems, but added most faculty understand that TAs have dual roles and are willing to grant extensions for late papers and other class work.

"I don't think it causes many problems for students, though," Trank said. "Graduate instructors I have contact with are more likely to put their students before their own classes."

UI Dean of Academic Affairs Phillip Hubbard said although the dual role may complicate the lives of some TAs, the experience they gain teaching benefits both themselves and their future students.

"MANY PEOPLE who are pursuing graduate degrees are potential faculty somewhere," he said. "If they are going to teach, they need to have experience in the classroom beyond what they have gotten as students."

Without TAs, the UI would be unable to offer as many different classes or to accommodate as many students, Hubbard said.

UI Dean for Advanced Studies Rudolph Schulz said TAs are also trained informally.

"When I was teaching psychology, I had TAs working for me and I provided training on a one-to-one basis. I'm sure it is still done in many cases," he said.

Doffing said TAs in the Math Department are gradually prepared to teach independently. First-year TAs conduct discussion sections for a professor's lecture, attend meetings once a week and work in the tutoring lab, he said.

CARLE SAID although TAs are not necessarily less capable instructors than professors, he expects students to view them as less qualified.

"If I'm a senior and have only been taught by three full professors, I would certainly be angry," he said. "There should be some point where students are getting professors for their classes, but where do you draw the line?"

Doffing said students are more likely to resent a TA who has not taught before.

"If you're teaching a class for the first time, you're probably not as comfortable with the material and the students might feel they should get something better than this," he said.

Trank said the notion that TAs are less capable teachers than professors is unjustified.

"IT'S A TOTAL misconception because many graduate instructors have taught longer and have taught a wider variety of classes than some of the newer professors," he said. "Some of the most extraordinary teachers come from their ranks."

He added, however, the use of TAs should be limited to lower level classes.

"Their main goal is to work on their own degrees and it would be unfair to ask them to design and teach an upper-level course," he said.

Trank said TAs receiving little or no training are a detriment to the system.

"It's unfair, not only to the students, but to the instructor as well," he said.

Hubbard said the UI has taken steps to train TAs through programs sponsored by the UI Council on Teaching and the UI Graduate Student Senate.

"WE FEEL THAT it is essential for TAs to be prepared prior to entering the classroom," he said.

Being both a teacher and a student creates other unique problems, Carle said.

"We're definitely under constraints in terms of being in a middle ground, being part student and part teacher," he said. "When a faculty pay raise comes from increased tuition, it puts us in a weird position — we're going to make more, but we're going to have to pay more, too."

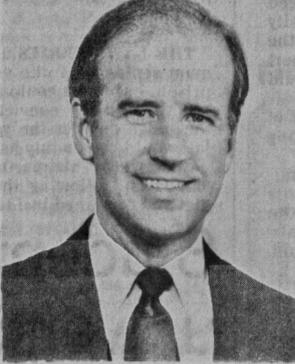

TAs are also divided in their roles as educators, Carle said, between not wanting to damage students' grade-point averages and a duty to departmental standards. A department's concern for normalizing grades may affect student perception of a TA's performance, he said.

"Some departments do lean on TAs to keep their grade curves down, but then our spot (teacher evaluation) forms come out worse — the students just take it out on you there," he said. "At the same time, I can see the departments' dilemma — we might contribute to grade inflation which would lessen the value of degrees from this university."

Waldheim plans trip abroad to Vatican

VATICAN CITY — Pope John Paul II will meet here next week with Austrian President Kurt Waldheim during the controversial Austrian leader's first official trip abroad since his election a year ago, the Vatican announced Wednesday.

The Vatican statement set off an angry chorus of protest from Jewish groups because of allegations by those groups of Waldheim's involvement in Nazi-era atrocities. The U.S. Justice Department in April, after concluding that there was sufficient evidence to suspect him of involvement in Nazi persecutions, prohibited Waldheim from entering the United States.

The World Jewish Congress has alleged that Waldheim had participated in the deportation of Jews from Greece and was linked to Nazi atrocities against civilians in Yugoslavia.

Communists surrender in Philippines

TANDAG, Philippines — More than 1,200 communists, including a town mayor and 200 guerrilla fighters, turned themselves in Wednesday in the biggest mass surrender since the start of a rebel amnesty program four months ago.

The communists, who swore loyalty to President Corazon Aquino's government in an elaborate ceremony in Tandag, 530 miles southeast of Manila, took advantage of the administration's cash-for-guns amnesty program, unveiled in late February.

About 450 regular New People's Army fighters have now given up the armed cause since Aquino announced her amnesty program. The government pays $450 for an M-16 armalite rifle and $250 for an AK-47 automatic rifle under the amnesty program, which expires at the end of August.

Reagan to appoint Ruder to SEC post

WASHINGTON — President Ronald Reagan announced Wednesday he will nominate Northwestern University law professor David Ruder to serve as chairman of the Securities and Exchange Commission. Ruder, an expert in the area of insider trading enforcement, would succeed John Shad as head of the SEC.

"No one is better equipped to continue the fine work of Chairman John Shad in the area of insider trading enforcement," the president said in a statement.

"The commission's vigilant efforts to enforce the anti-fraud laws have enhanced investor confidence in the nation's securities trading markets, and under the leadership of David Ruder, we can expect the commission will continue with that essential role," Reagan said.

ITT plans to withdraw from S. Africa

NEW YORK — ITT Corp. Wednesday became the third major U.S. company this week to announce plans to withdraw from South Africa amid signs of political conflict in the white-ruled nation has made it impossible to do business there.

ITT said it had sold its only wholly owned South African subsidiary, Alfred Teves Engineering (S.A.) Ltd., an automobile brake maker, to Glasfin Investments Ltd., a South African company, for $3 million.

On Sunday, Ford Motor Co. said it would donate the bulk of its 42 percent interest in South African Motor Corp. to the company's employees, most of whom are black.

On Tuesday, Citicorp, the last U.S. bank operating in South Africa, announced the sale of its unit there to First National Bank of Southern Africa Ltd. for about $39 million.

W. Germans near decision on Hamadei

BONN, West Germany — The West German government said Wednesday it will decide next week whether to extradite accused Lebanese terrorist Mohammad Ali Hamadei to the United States for trial on air piracy and murder charges in the 1985 hijacking of a TWA jet.

The decision will be made June 24, chief government spokesman Friedhelm Ost said in a statement. In Washington, a State Department source said it was likely the West German government would try Hamadei.

The United States wants to try Hamadei for the murder of U.S. Navy diver Robert Stethem, one of the 153 passengers and crew aboard Flight 847 en route from Athens to Rome. Some of those passengers "clearly and unmistakably" identified Hamadei as one of the hijackers at a lineup in federal police headquarters on Monday, informed sources say.

Jarvik-7 donated to Smithsonian

WASHINGTON — The Jarvik-7 artificial heart that saved the life of a Phoenix man two years ago was presented to the Smithsonian Institution Wednesday.

The $15,000 plastic and metal blood pump was the first with a successful outcome after use as a temporary lifesaver until a natural heart became available for a transplant.

The Jarvik-7 replaced the severely diseased heart of Michael Drummond, who was 25 when he underwent the operation Aug. 29, 1985. The artificial heart was replaced nine days later by a natural heart from a teenage motorcycle accident victim.

Asked how he felt to have something that was beating in his chest go on display at a museum, Drummond said: "I'm just happy that I could give a part of something that kept me alive for other people to see."

NBC faces strike of newsmakers

NEW YORK — NBC and the union representing 2,800 of its news writers, editors and technicians are "on a collision course" that could result in a nationwide strike at the top-rated network, officials said Wednesday.

NBC said it probably will tell the National Association of Broadcast Employees and Technicians Friday that it will move to impose a contract that the union rejected 2½ months ago when the network first made the offer.

"If the company takes such an action, it will result in serious ramifications and could certainly trigger a labor dispute," said John Krieger, a NABET spokesman.

Asked if that meant a strike, he said, "Yes."

Bakkers plan to start new ministry

TEGA CAY, S.C. — Tammy Faye Bakker, tears rolling down her cheeks, charged Wednesday that the Rev. Jerry Falwell's minions had sold her son's toys, given away her dogs, bulldozed her record albums and shredded her mail.

In a rambling, often-contradictory talk with reporters outside the deposed PTL founders' million-dollar lake-side "parsonage," Tammy Faye said the couple is down to their last $37,000.

At one point she said she and Jim are starting a new ministry, but have not decided where to start it because they are waiting for God to tell them what to do. But she said they hope to be on television in 30 days.

Goetz victim renews $50 million lawsuit

By Bruce Olson
United Press International

NEW YORK — A lawyer representing a young man paralyzed in the Bernhard Goetz subway shootings said Wednesday he will try to force Goetz back into court to testify in a $50 million civil lawsuit.

Ron Kuby, an associate of civil rights attorney William Kunstler, said the suit, filed shortly after Goetz shot four young men on Dec. 22, 1984, would be "revived immediately."

The suit contends that Goetz committed "unlawful battery" against Darrell Cabey, 21, one of the four youths who surrounded Goetz on a subway train. When another youth, Troy Canty, asked for $5, Goetz responded by shooting the four, severely wounding Cabey.

Goetz, 39, was cleared of attempted murder by a state jury on Tuesday but was convicted on one illegal weapons possession charge for carrying a loaded, unlicensed gun in a public place. He faces sentencing on the gun charge Sept. 4.

THE LAW CARRIES a minimum sentence of one year in prison, but Goetz could get no jail time on the conviction if the judge decides the year in jail would "be unduly harsh."

Goetz went to his apartment in Manhattan following the verdict and remained inside Wednesday while hoards of reporters milled around on the street outside.

Mark Baker, one of his attorneys, said Goetz's "spirits are very good. He's hanging around the apartment enjoying the quiet. He's been in the middle of media circus for a long time and he is enjoying the solitude."

But the legal wheels were turning elsewhere, as Kuby and lawyers for two other victims prepared to press civil suits. Canty, 21, is suing for $5 million and James Ramseur, 20, is suing for $8.5 million.

"Our case has not moved forward up to now because Goetz said he would take the Fifth Amendment if called, a right he had while the criminal case was proceeding. But now that it is over, Goetz can be compelled to give testimony," Kuby said.

Joseph Kelner, the attorney representing Goetz in the three civil suits, said, "We shall see what we shall see. We will follow all the leads the law affords us."

After the $50 million suit was filed, Goetz countersued and Kelner said the countersuit — for $1 — would continue.

Goetz was not called as a witness in his seven-week trial and has made no public statements since his trial opened in April.

Student riots force university closings

By Sam Jameson
Los Angeles Times

SEOUL, South Korea — More than a score of universities were shut down Wednesday in an effort to stem a wave of anti-government protests, but thousands of students continued to battle the police in much of the country.

The violence appeared to be less intense than it was Tuesday. Students on dozens of university campuses were busy preparing for what is expected to be a major protest today.

Nonetheless, there were more violent incidents in Seoul and other cities, among them Pusan, Chinju, Taegu and Taejon.

Students attacked police stations, set fire to police vans, seized two tanker trucks and threatened to blow them up, fought running battles with the police, hurled stones and gas bombs and were tear-gassed in return.

IN PUSAN, on the southeast coast, the U.S. Consulate was reported closed as a precautionary measure after the police fired tear gas at students demonstrating nearby.

Bands of students were reported to have attacked two police stations and burned three police vans in Pusan. Two officers were reportedly injured.

In Chinju, to the west of Pusan, students occupied a stretch of highway, hijacked two tanker trucks carrying liquefied gas and threatened to blow them up. The police took possession of the trucks before the threat could be carried out.

In Taegu, an inland city north of Pusan, several thousand people fought with the police, and in Taejon, in the central part of the country, students burned a police post.

HERE IN SEOUL, the capital, students demonstrated on university campuses, waved banners and sang revolutionary songs.

Student sources said today had been designated "Anti-Tear Gas Day" and that there would be demonstrations nationwide demanding that the police stop using gas.

They said they expect to see larger numbers of students taking part in the unrest because of the universities being closed. By Wednesday, classes had been halted at 28 universities, ahead of final examinations, and dozens more were expected to be closed today.

PRESIDENT Chun Doo Hwan, according to government sources, had previously made it a special point of pride that he had not closed universities to stifle student protests.

Joining the students today will be followers of the National Coalition for a Democratic Constitution, a new alliance of political, religious and dissident groups.

mittes will meet Thursday to vote on the next step to be taken. Sen. Daniel Inouye, D-Hawaii, chairman of the Senate select committee, said he would recommend that his committee reject the contempt option and move ahead with public testimony by North in mid-July without the benefit of prior closed-door interviews.

But Hamilton stopped short of saying he would make such a recommendation and cautioned that allowing North to have his way "could have an effect on the rest of the investigation."

Hamilton pointed out that private interviews permit committee lawyers to develop "more coherent (public) testimony," and give the attorneys a chance to verify statements given in depositions.

Hamilton also said North's private depositions would have been useful in the questioning of North's former boss, one-time national security adviser John Poindexter. North also will have the benefit of having heard Poindexter's testimony before giving his own.

POINDEXTER was interrogated in secret Wednesday for the second time and is scheduled to appear as a witness beginning July 7.

Sen. Warren Rudman, R-N.H., vice chairman of the Senate select panel, told reporters at a news conference with Inouye that it is still possible North might refuse to testify in public, but that there are strong indications that he will.

When North appeared before the House Foreign Affairs Committee last Dec. 9, he refused to answer questions and invoked his Fifth Amendment right against self-incrimination. At that time, however, he asserted that he was anxious to "put this issue to rest quickly and fully; and to further that end, I want to be able to provide a full exposition of the facts as I know them on this matter."

SINCE THEN, however, North, through his attorneys, has taken a number of legal steps to impede efforts by Congress and independent counsel Lawrence E. Walsh to carry out their investigations. In addition to his move Wednesday, which Sen. Warren B. Rudman, R-N.H., called "frivolous" but within North's legal rights, the Marine lieutenant colonel has carried on a legal battle with Walsh.

He has refused to provide Walsh's staff with a sample of his handwriting, a step that triggered a broader challenge to Walsh's authority as an independent counsel.

THE DECISION by the committees last month to grant North limited immunity was not unanimous on the House side, and some Democrats there are reluctant to make further concessions.

If the committees bow to North's position, it would require more extensive questioning at the public session. Inouye, who took note of this, insisted that the committee would stick to its goal of adjourning after the first week in August. To meet that goal, however, he said the committees would meet five days a week instead of four starting in July and might hold "late sessions." Some committee sources have said the hearings might continue into the evening in some cases.

Regents

said, adding the requirements have been under study since 1974.

The requirements are substantially the same as the course background the UI currently recommends high school students interested in the UI take, except they are required instead of recommended.

Remington said the new standards include no requirement that all Iowa high schools are not already required to offer.

He said the new requirements will prepare prospective students for college by getting them to take a full academic load all four years of high school.

Discussion of the proposal centered on whether the new standards would hamper minority recruitment and whether high school students, their parents and counselors would be made aware of the requirements.

UCOLLEGIATE Associations Council President Mike Reck said he supported the idea of stricter standards but urged the board to give particular consideration to first generation college students, minority students and students from small schools.

Agreeing with the idea of placing the burden of college preparation on high schools, he said, "But to try to impose standards on the high schools, you're going to catch many students in the middle." The board is also being asked to consider a similar proposal to tighten the entrance standards at Iowa State University which would go into effect in 1991. The board has already approved such requirements for the University of Northern Iowa.

"THAT'S THE whole point of referring it," Regents President Marvin Pomerantz said. "To see if we can't get some logic worked out."

Remington, who is a member of the regents Interinstitutional Committee on Educational Coordination — one of the two committees which will study the proposal — said he hoped the panel could have its report completed by the next regents meeting on July 8.

Miss Iowa

trained individually before this year. To prepare for the national pageant, a tape of her performance has been sent to an agent to determine what she'll sing in September.

"I've been visiting with politicians, economists and farmers in the area," Wolfram said, adding the seven-minute interview at the national pageant could be on any topic from international politics to personal philosophy.

"I'll be practicing walking and pivoting," she added. And for now, Wolfram also must maintain her image as Miss Iowa.

"I'LL BE TRAVELING across the state making appearances," she said. "Wolfram is paid for all her appearances, Zeiser said, whether they are pageant-related, civic or commercial."

"And of course I'll be driving my Mustang," she said. The car, a 1987 model, was a prize she won along with the crown.

Because Wolfram is now somewhat of a public figure, she said, "People are going to be looking for flaws."

Printed on the side of the car is "Miss Iowa" in pink and white letters. "I can't speed because everyone will know it's me," she said.

There are other limitations on Wolfram as Miss Iowa. "I'll be doing commercials for the Iowa Safety Commission, so I can't use a fuzz-buster," she said.

Cynthia Wolfram has confidence that her daughter can shoulder the responsibility.

"I know she can carry the ball real well as Miss Iowa," Cynthia Wolfram said.

As for the national title, Wolfram's mother has confidence in her daughter as well.

"Robin is a combination of facets making up a girl that can be an example for all American girls," Cynthia Wolfram said. "Robin is a talented, deeply spiritual girl."

Justice official blasts Walsh

By George Lardner Jr. and Joe Pichirallo
Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Independent counsel Lawrence Walsh said Wednesday he is determined to pursue the Iran-Contra investigation as long as it takes to bring it to a conclusion, even if it lasts up to three years.

"I have no limitations on my commitment," Walsh said in an interview. "I certainly hope that it's not going to take anything like that. But if there are trials, appeals and retrials, it could theoretically take a long time."

The Justice Department on Tuesday launched a slashing attack on the independent counsel system, denouncing it as unconstitutional, complaining that it invited investigations of trivialities and particularly singling out Walsh's inquiry as too expensive.

Walsh, a former high-ranking

Justice Department official, seemed unperturbed by the sharp attack, which was delivered by Assistant Attorney General John Bolton against a backdrop of previously stated "constitutional concerns" about the 1978 independent counsel law.

THE STATUTE, enacted to handle criminal allegations against high-ranking government officials, will expire in January unless Congress renews it. Legislation to make the system permanent is now pending on Capitol Hill, but Bolton, who said his remarks had been cleared by the White House counsel's office and the White House Office of Management and Budget, said that his department would recommend that President Ronald Reagan veto it.

"These people (independent counsels) are unconstrained and unsupervised by anyone," Bolton charged. He maintained that any law authorizing a prosecutor to investigate federal crimes without being accountable to the president is unconstitutional.

Walsh acknowledged that he has a much freer hand than do regular Justice Department prosecutors, who must report to the attorney general and who must compete with each other for resources. But Walsh added that he is controlled by the mandate that a three-judge federal court gave him last December when they appointed him to conduct the investigation under the Ethics in Government Act.

"LET'S FACE IT," he said. "You can't have maximum accountability and maximum independence. You have to decide what is most important for the country."

Walsh and others have said that outside investigations of high-level government officials are important to ensure public confidence in the administration of justice; they have pointed out that Walsh's own appointment was recommended last fall by both President Reagan and Attorney General Edwin Meese as necessary to avoid "the potential for conflict of interest."

At the White House Wednesday, reaction to Bolton's pronouncement was mixed. Presidential spokesman Marlin Fitzwater initially told reporters that "the existing counsels have received the full support of the president" and that some of the language in Bolton's statement was "intemperate and outrageous."

Later in that same briefing, however, Fitzwater said Bolton's letter "speaks for the administration (and) ... represents our position on the legislation."

Texas slapped with probation as conference deteriorates

AUSTIN, Texas (UPI) — The NCAA placed the University of Texas on two years' probation Wednesday for recruiting and ticket violations, but Texas will not be subject to the NCAA's stiff penalty for repeat offenders if it errs again in five years.

Texas also was not barred from bowl games and will be able to appear on television during the period of probation, which will be cut to a year if it complies with 13 actions suggested by the NCAA.

The university becomes the fourth Southwest Conference school on NCAA probation, joining Southern Methodist, Texas Christian and Texas Tech. Two more SWC members, Texas A&M and Houston, are under investigation for possible violations.

UNDER THE NCAA sanctions, Texas will be allowed only 20 football scholarships instead of 25 for the 1988-89 season, and only 75 prospective athletes will be allowed to make on-campus visits, down from 95.

However, Charles Smart, the NCAA's assistant director of enforcement, said from his Mission, Kan., office that Texas will not be subject to the "death penalty" for major repeat offenders leveled in February against SMU, which will not play football for two years because of NCAA rules violations.

The NCAA said the probation would be cut to a year if the university follows 13 recommendations, including firing staff members who knowingly violate NCAA rules, adopt a rules education program for staff members, dismiss from the team students who violate NCAA rules and give notice to alumni to comply with NCAA rules.

TEXAS COACH DAVID McWilliams, who succeeded the fired Fred Akers in December, said the university's staff and players "have all dedicated ourselves to be sure we do not make these or other mistakes in the future."

A nine-page NCAA report released from its headquarters cited 51 rule violations by the Longhorns, including players selling complimentary tickets at inflated prices and accepting car loans and small amounts of cash from coaches, boosters and alumni.

All the violations occurred under Akers' administration. Akers was fired in December after the Longhorns suffered through their first losing season in 30 years.

The NCAA release listed what it described as several significant violations:

- Between 1980 and 1985, 10 players sold complimentary tickets, some for amounts in excess of face value, to teammates, friends and athletic department staff members.
- A former assistant football coach made statements that could have led a prospect to believe that he would receive improper benefits if he enrolled at Texas. The coach also gave the player a Texas jersey.

- At least twice during the 1980-81 academic year, a representative of the university entertained a prospective player, his family and coach and provided them with transportation and cash.
- In January 1984, two athletic department officials obtained a $2,600 loan from a bank in Austin to repair a player's car. The two students who damaged the car each obtained a $1,300 loan and paid the loan.

The NCAA twice has placed Texas on probation, but neither case involved sanctions.

Hoyt set to return to baseball but Padres don't want him

SAN DIEGO (UPI) — LaMarr Hoyt, the Cy Young Award winner jailed briefly earlier this year for smuggling pills from Mexico, has been authorized to return to baseball, but the San Diego Padres do not want him back.

The Padres Wednesday asked waivers on Hoyt with the purpose of giving him his unconditional release.

Arbitrator George Nicolau ruled Tuesday that Hoyt did not breach his contract when he pleaded guilty to two misdemeanor charges and served a 45-day sentence at a federal prison near Pensacola, Fla. Nicolau also slashed Baseball Commissioner Peter Ueberroth's one-year suspension of Hoyt to 60 days.

The 60-day period, retroactive to the beginning of the season, has already been completed.

Nicolau's ruling makes Hoyt eligible to return to the cellar-dwelling Padres, but owner Joan Kroc insisted that Hoyt, who won the Cy Young Award with the Chicago White Sox in 1983 and has three years left on his San Diego contract, would never again play for her team.

"We may be forced to pay him, but we will not be forced to play him," Kroc told The San Diego Union Tuesday, indicating that she would pay Hoyt the $3.2 million in salary remaining on his contract if necessary. HOYT'S AGENT, Ron Shapiro, said Wednesday he was still waiting for a copy of Nicolau's ruling and had not formulated a plan to get his client back into baseball.

"We don't count this as a win or a loss," Shapiro said in a telephone interview from Baltimore. "There are legal procedures and requirements that have to be followed."

Padres spokesman Bill Beck said the team would not comment further until Wednesday afternoon. Hoyt, 32, was at his home in South Carolina and could not be reached for comment. In 35 games for the Padres last year, the right-hander posted an 8-11 record with a 5.15 ERA.

"We just want LaMarr to get back to work," said Gene Orza, associate general counsel with the Major League Baseball Players Association, which handled Hoyt's grievance.

"The arbitrator found that it (Hoyt's release) was a disciplinary action, and the question became how much discipline should be imposed."

THE PADRES' POLICY on drugs states a player who has two drug offenses is banished from the team forever.

San Diego released Hoyt Jan. 7, two days after he surrendered to begin serving his sentence, and six weeks later Ueberroth announced Hoyt's suspension for the 1987 season.

Hoyt was arrested Oct. 28 for trying to sneak a cache of painkillers and Valium pills, stuffed in the crotch of his trousers, across the border at San Ysidro. It was his second arrest in nine months at the same border crossing.

On Feb. 10, Hoyt had been stopped there by U.S. Customs officials with a quantity of Valium and Quaaludes. That case was settled with an administrative fine.

Baseball Almanac

Quick Quiz
Jose Guzman of the Rangers hurled 7 1-3 innings of hitless ball Tuesday against the Angels. Who was the last Texas pitcher to throw a no-hitter? (answer below.)

Welcome Back
Outfielder Jim Eisenreich, who retired from baseball when a nervous disorder kept him out of the lineup, has been recalled to the major leagues by the Royals. Eisenreich retired from the Twins in 1984 after missing most of the 1982 and 1983 seasons when the disorder made him too nervous to play the outfield. He was claimed by the Royals on waivers last October and started this season with Memphis of the Double-A Southern League. At Memphis, Eisenreich was leading the league with a .382 average in 70 games. He drove in 57 runs and scored 60 runs. Fifty-seven of his 105 hits were for extra bases.

Hot Seat
After being released by the Yankees, left-hander Bob Shirley has served up five homers in 6 1-3 innings since joining Kansas City.

Quote of the Day
"I've been dreaming a lot about Pete Rose lately. Maybe I should have been dreaming about Hank Aaron," said Toronto's Jesse Barfield, who went 4-for-5 Tuesday in a 10-4 triumph over Detroit but failed to homer.

Trainer's Room
Yankee Stadium personnel used a stretcher to remove a fan from the playing field Tuesday night in the seventh inning of New York's 6-5 triumph over Baltimore. With the Yankees preparing to bat in the seventh, attention suddenly turned to the left-field corner and stadium security personnel raced to the aid of the fan, who was lying on the warning track in left field. Officials said the fan, a male, fell out of the lower deck and was taken by ambulance to Lincoln Hospital. A Yankees spokesman, quoting a hospital spokesperson, said the man was taken to the hospital but refused to be admitted. The night administrator at the hospital said the facility had no record of such a person being admitted.

Iron Man
Baltimore's Cal Ripken played in his 829th consecutive game Tuesday, tying Ed Yost for the seventh-longest streak in major-league history. This season, Ripken has a chance to climb to sixth on the all-time list by passing Stan Musial (895). Ripken's target date for record holder Lou Gehrig (2,130) is June 1995.

Big Bang Theory
(Winning team scores as many or more runs in one inning as losing team does in entire game.)
The Big Bang Theory held true in 8 of 13 games Sunday (June 14th) bringing the season total to 500 of 788 for a percentage of .635.

Quick Quiz Answer
Bert Blyleven hurled a no-hitter for the Rangers on Sept. 22, 1977 — also against the Angels.

Far East Footnotes
Rich Lancelotti, formerly of the San Francisco Giants, smashed his league-leading 21st and 22nd homers to propel the Japanese Central League's Hiroshima Toyo Carp to a 17-5 victory over the Yakult Swallows. Lancelotti has hit eight homers in his last six games. Gary Rajsch belted a two-run homer, his 12th shot of the season, as the Chunichi Dragons turned back the Hanshin Tigers 5-3.

Pitt officials deny paper's allegations

PITTSBURGH (UPI)—University of Pittsburgh officials Wednesday refused to confirm published reports the school will declare running back Charles Gladman and defensive back Teryl Austin ineligible because they signed contracts with New York agents Norby Walters and Lloyd Bloom.

The Atlanta Constitution, citing NCAA sources, said Gladman will be suspended pending confirmation he signed with Walters, and Austin will be declared ineligible immediately. The NCAA was informed of the situation Tuesday, the newspaper said.

The Pittsburgh Press, also citing sources, said the two players had been suspended from the team as a result of the university's investigation of the two agents.

Tony Woods, a former Pittsburgh defensive end and the No. 1 draft choice of the Seattle Seahawks, earlier admitted signing a contract with Walters during his junior year.

"SINCE LEARNING OF THE involvement of student-athlete Tony Woods with agents Norby Walters and Lloyd Bloom, the University of Pittsburgh has been actively and aggressively investigating all matters relating to agent-player agreements," read a statement issued by Dean Billick, Pittsburgh associate director of athletics. "While doing this, we have been in constant dialogue with the NCAA staff, keeping them abreast of our attempts to uncover the facts, while receiving from them guidance on procedures and processes associated with various actions we should be considering.

"As soon as we have sufficient information to make conclusive decisions we will submit our final report to the NCAA and at the appropriate time release a more definitive public statement."

GLADMAN AND AUSTIN WOULD BE the first football players to lose eligibility in the Walters case. Alabama basketball player Derrick McKey last month was declared ineligible for his senior season when it was revealed by the FBI he had signed with Walters and Bloom.

Walters and Bloom have admitted giving cash to college athletes, many of them with eligibility remaining. Numerous undergraduates have been subpoenaed to testify before the grand jury in Chicago. Walters and Bloom face a variety of possible charges that include violation of the RICO (Racketeering Influenced Corrupt Organizations) Act, mail fraud and wire fraud.

Athletes also may face indictment for fraud committed against their respective colleges in accepting cash from the agents and signing contracts, which is a violation of NCAA rules.

Pittsburgh Coach Mike Gottfried allegedly uncovered the evidence Gladman and Austin received money during their junior seasons in 1986, the Constitution said.

Since June 10, tens of thousands of students and citizens have protested in the streets of Seoul and provincial cities in a violent campaign calling for the overthrow of President Chun Doo Hwan.

CHUN, WHO SAYS HE will step down in February 1988, is almost certain to be replaced by ruling party chairman Roh Tae-woo, whose nomination June 10 as his party's candidate for president touched off the recent violence.

Roh, a former four-star general and close personal friend of Chun, is seen as a continuation of the military-backed government.

In the United States, civil rights leader Jesse Jackson indicated the controversy could lead to a U.S. boycott movement.

Jackson, appearing Wednesday on ABC's "Good Morning America," said he had met the South Korean ambassador and appealed for free elections, the release of political prisoners and an end to "violent suppressions."

"We simply said unless something happens we would call for a protest and that is the first step to a boycott," said Jackson, a potential, but as yet undeclared Democratic candidate for the 1988 U.S. presidential election. "We're not calling for a boycott yet."

until more than 13 hours later. As the day progresses, most of the game's recognizable figures will take their turn in the tree-lined arena.

Among them will be Norman, who has led during the final round of the last five major events, and Nicklaus, who when he tees off will establish yet another record.

It will be the 31st consecutive Open appearance for Nicklaus — equalling a mark first set by Gene Sarazen and later tied by Arnold Palmer.

The last eight Opens have been won by players who had previously captured a major event, but a host of young players will be trying to break that streak this week.

Open's field set to test Olympic

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — The toughest test in American golf begins today on one of the game's historic stages with Greg Norman, Jack Nicklaus and the sport's other superstars beginning their quest for the year's second major championship.

With the hills of San Francisco serving as a backdrop, a 156-man field will compete for the nation's oldest professional golfing title — the United States Golf Association Open.

Beautiful weather has been in evidence for the practice rounds and more of the same was forecast for the opening round.

Eleven former Open champs, 22 major championship winners and competitors from 31 states and nine foreign countries will make their first official tour of the 6,709-yard Lake Course of the Olympic Club this morning.

The thick, wiry rough, the small, slick greens and the heavy ocean air could make the Olympic Club one of the most difficult assignments in recent Open history.

"I DON'T THINK this course will favor any particu-player, you can't win anywhere." Scott Hazledine, head professional at the Roy Rogers-owned Happy Trails Resorts

Korean riots could force '88 boycott

SEOUL, South Korea (UPI) — The U.S. Olympic team will not attend the 1988 Summer Games in Seoul if the safety of the athletes is threatened, U.S. Olympic Committee President Robert Helmick said Wednesday.

But Helmick, in South Korea during the worst anti-government rioting in seven years, said he expected the situation to be "well in hand" by the start of the Seoul Summer Olympics in September 1988.

"We will assess the situation in August and September of 1988," Helmick said. "As we do for any games, we would not send a team anywhere if a team was in jeopardy."

In Toronto, International Olympic Committee president Juan Antonio Samaranch told reporters he was concerned because of the recent troubles in Seoul, but he was certain the games would not be threatened.

"I AM SURE THAT the games will be held in Seoul — not only that, but that they will be the best games ever," he said on the final day of a three-day visit to the Canadian city bidding for the 1996

Olympics. Helmick, a member of the International Olympic Committee and head of FINA, the international governing body of aquatic sports, said the USOC was monitoring South Korea's political situation "day by day, month by month."

"We (the USOC) are satisfied the situation will be well in hand by the Olympic Games," Helmick said. "We are continuing to prepare to be here in September 1988."

"We are prepared to cancel the trip if the safety of the team is in any way in question, which means flying into the airport, going from the airport to the hotel and from the hotel to the venue," he said.

HELMICK HAD HIGH praise for the planning and construction of the Olympic facilities by the Seoul Olympic Organizing Committee.

"There has been no organizing committee that has been better prepared so early than the Seoul organizing committee. We have been very impressed," Helmick said.

Helmick refused to comment on whether the games were threatened by the domestic Howser dies after battling brain tumor

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (UPI) — Dick Howser, the quietly brave Kansas City Royals manager who learned he had brain cancer nine months after leading his club to the 1985 World Series championship, died Wednesday at age 51.

Howser died at 2:45 p.m. at St. Luke's Hospital, a spokeswoman said. His wife, Nancy, was at his bedside.

"This is a sad day for baseball," Baseball Commissioner Peter Ueberroth said in a statement released by his New York office. "Dick Howser was one of the great men of our game."

Howser had been at St. Luke's Hospital since June 3, when he was taken there from his Lee's Summit home by ambulance. In the past year he had undergone three operations for a malignant brain tumor. The latest, in March, was an experimental procedure that induced cancer-fighting cells into the brain.

HIS LAST APPEARANCE during the regular season was the 1986 All-Star Game when he led the American League to its second victory in 15 years. Two days later Howser entered the hospital. One day later, he learned he had a tumor the size of a golf ball.

Howser's struggle against cancer won him a wide following across the country. He attempted to return as manager in February during spring training but was too weak to continue after only two days. His position was assumed by Billy Gardner.

"Anytime someone battles back like that and comes back, you have to respect that," Gardner said Wednesday. "He was a great guy. He achieved a lot."

Royals officials said a memorial service will be held tonight at the Village Presbyterian Church in Mission, Kan. Howser's funeral and burial will be Saturday in Tallahassee, Fla., his hometown. The funeral is at Fellowship Baptist Church, followed by burial at the Tallahassee Memory Gardens.

THE CLUB HAS scheduled Dick Howser Day for July 3 at Royals Stadium and will retire his No. 10, the first number retired by the Royals. Players will wear a memorial patch on the right uniform sleeve.

Many players and baseball executives remembered the Royals' World Series victory in 1985 over St. Louis as the perfect showcase for Howser. With his team trailing 3-1 in games, Howser was harshly second-guessed for his pitching decisions.

Said Cardinals Manager Whitey Herzog: "I remember after the seventh game I went in to congratulate him and he was just as nice in victory as he would have been in defeat."

"He didn't manage by the book," said Royals third baseman George Brett. "That's the way we won the World Series that year. He was a man that wasn't afraid of criticism."
