Biden gets Iowa perspective

Candidate makes pitch for daycare, financial aid

By Shawn Plank
The Daily Iowan

Democratic presidential candidate Joseph Biden Jr. brought his message of community and idealism before about 375 Iowa City area residents Friday night, urging increased financial aid to college students and an expanded federal daycare program.

The crowd that packed into an Iowa City Park shelter surprised even Biden, who has scored low in presidential popularity polls in Iowa. But the Delaware senator has attracted increased support in Johnson County.

During his stop in Iowa City, Biden said the first thing he would do as president would be to set up a daycare center in the White House.

"If and when I do that, American business will have so much pressure put on them once we show it can be done," Biden said. He added companies can benefit economically and increase productivity with a daycare center located in the business place.

HE ALSO SAID students should be allowed to borrow up to $50,000 from the federal government to attend college. The government would bundle the loans and sell them on the secondary market and students would pay back 5 percent of their annual income after graduation.

Democratic presidential candidate Joseph Biden Jr. has his hands full with members of the Joffrey Ballet at a recent stop at the UI.

Biden said students should be able to break through elitism and attend schools like Princeton or Harvard.

"It's damn important that people like me get to go there," said Biden, who attended the University of Delaware, a public school.

U.S. Rep. Dave Nagle, from Iowa's Third District, also turned out to greet Biden.

"I just wanted to come and say hello," Nagle said. "This is not an endorsement."

As he walked away, Biden said, "Thank you Senator Nagle. It could be vice president, Dave."

THIS PROMPTED Nagle to return to the floor and joke, "I would like to reconsider."

Throughout the day Friday, Biden also traveled to smaller towns — Manchester, Independence and Vinton — and while he turned some heads, he didn't meet with the enthusiastic support he found in Johnson County.

Biden toured the Buchanan County Courthouse in Independence in the morning, meeting with a handful of courthouse workers and area residents.

"I'm one of the 400 candidates running for president," he told workers. "Look me over, will ya?"

Biden interrupted the tour to call his wife collect from the basement of the courthouse. His 17-year-old son was about to take off for Switzerland on his own.

Biden's concern for his family is well known. Each night he commutes from his home in Wilmington, Del., to the Capitol via Amtrak. He began making the four-hour-a-day trips after his first wife and daughter were killed — only 41 days after he began to serve as a senator in 1972.

BIDEN, WHO SERVED as a county supervisor in Delaware for two years before being elected to the Senate, joked with Buchanan County Supervisor Leo Donnelly that the job of running a county is sometimes more difficult than running the country.

"Yeah," Donnelly agreed, "but they're not paying me for your job."

Biden spoke with 10 Independence residents in the courthouse, while his staffers anxiously glanced at their watches, realizing they were running 30 minutes late.

Donnelly, one of the three Democratic supervisors, said he was impressed by Biden's knowledge of a wide range of issues.

"I'm surprised he knew so much about farmers," Donnelly said. "He's the first one I

Party chief to talk with opposition

By Sam Jameson
Los Angeles Times

SEOUL, South Korea — Roh Tae Woo, chairman of the ruling Democratic Justice Party, pledged Sunday to seek a political solution to turmoil that has swept South Korea since the party nominated him as its candidate to succeed President Chun Doo Hwan.

Korean newspapers and the government-owned Korean

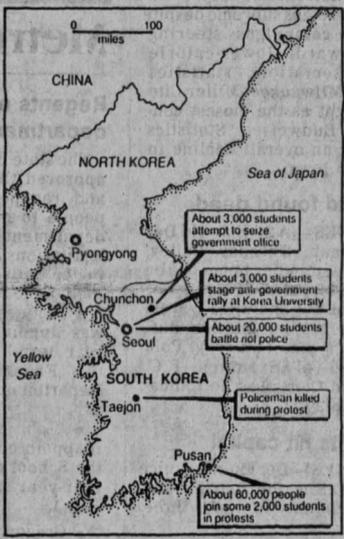

Broadcasting System reported that Roh, with Chun's approval, was expected to announce the party's willingness to reopen talks with the opposition on revising the authoritarian constitution that Chun imposed in 1980 during a period of martial law.

Roh made his pledge to a party caucus summoned to draft recommendations that will be made to Chun today in an effort to halt ongoing public protests by tens of thousands of students and other citizens, who are demanding democracy for this country and an end to military-dominated rule.

A PARTY SPOKESMAN said that Roh would make public the proposals for a solution later today, after he meets with Chun.

"Either all of us fall off a cliff together or all of us continue with our prosperous achievements," Roh told the caucus. "I will see to it that the current situation is solved politically."

Earlier, both Chun and Roh had described as "irreversible" an order by Chun suspending talks on constitutional revision until after the 1988 Summer Olympics Games that are scheduled to

Database will improve state job climate

By John Bartenhagen
The Daily Iowan

A new database linking Iowa with South Korea will be established at the UI in the near future, Gov. Terry Branstad announced Friday afternoon.

Branstad said the project is intended to help people interested in investing, locating or embarking on a joint venture in either Iowa or South Korea.

"With the imbalance of trade, there is going to be a tremendous amount of Korean investment opportunities in the years ahead," he said. "This database is an important first step and could be valuable in helping Iowa attract new industry and jobs from Korea." The database is a joint project undertaken by the UI and the Institute of Industry and Science, Pohang, South Korea.

The system will be developed by utilizing a $12,000 grant from the POSCO foundation, a non-profit educational organization established by the Pohang Steel Co., which will be matched by the UI.

BRANSTAD MET with Hyung Sup Choi, chairman of the POSCO foundation, as part of his ten day trade mission to Japan, South Korea and Malaysia to promote trade and educational ties.

UI Computer Science Professor Doug Jones said the idea of a database with South Korea could be comparable to establishing a brokerage firm.

"A brokerage works by getting people together with like interests, telling who's selling and who's buying —

Professor charged with theft, assault

By Tony Jeffris and Shawn Plank
The Daily Iowan

A man who claims he was physically attacked and robbed of a cassette tape at a UI panel discussion Thursday has filed criminal charges against a New York doctor and lawyer.

Victor Herbert, lawyer and professor of medicine at the Mount Sinai Medical Center, was charged Friday in Johnson County Magistrate Court with fifth degree theft and simple assault.

Sheriff's deputies were waiting to serve notice of the charges Friday while Herbert was giving a lecture on nutritional anemias at the UI Medical Alumni Auditorium.

The charges were initiated by Frank Wiewel, of Otho, Iowa, near Fort Dodge. Wiewel claims that Herbert forcibly removed his cassette tape at the end of a public forum Thursday titled "Does the First Amendment Protect Commercial Speech?"

"I didn't incite it," said Wiewel. "He came over the first row and took the tape recorder off me physically. Frankly, I was incredibly offended."

THE INCIDENT occurred following a heated discussion between Herbert and Wiewel on the subject of Immuno-Augmentative Therapy (IAT), a cancer treatment popularized by Lawrence Burton, a doctor of zoology in the Bahamas.

The IAT treatment involves mixing blood samples from several patients and re-initiating them into the system of a single patient to build up immunities that may not have been present previously. The therapy has been attempted on a limited scale with cancer and AIDS patients.

Herbert repeatedly interrupted Wiewel as he attempted to offer his opinion on the subject, witnesses said.

"That's a lie. That's a big fat lie," Herbert said, shouting down Wiewel with the aid of a microphone. "Don't you know that that's a lie?"

HERBERT SAID HE took the cassette because Wiewel had stolen his intellectual property. After returning the tape recorder and case, Herbert told Wiewel he would return the tape once it was erased.

"I just wanted to make it clear that he was making false statements about the doctor and his therapy," said Wiewel, who is president of the Immuno-Augmentative Therapy Patients Association.

"Victor Herbert is stomping around the country disclaiming the therapy," Wiewel said. "If this man (Burton) has got something, then you can't just bury it under the sly guise of quackery."

"I believe Dr. Herbert is a dangerous man," Wiewel said. "He was not interested in the truth."

In Thursday's discussion, titled "Protecting the Consumer from Health Fraud:

Medical and Legal Issues," Herbert cited Wiewel's group as a possible fraud.

WHEN ASKED WHY he felt Herbert took the cassette, Wiewel said, "I don't know, there were tape recorders all over the room. I suppose it was because I challenged him on the thing. Apparently the man does not want people to hear what he is saying."

Herbert, who was brought to Iowa for a series of three lectures, was not available for comment.

UI Medical Oncology Professor Charles Riggs, who organized the conference, expressed regret that the incident at the afternoon discussion happened. Riggs said he

ISU solar project not dead

AMES — Gov. Terry Branstad's veto of a $2 million appropriation for the development of a solar energy source, called amorphous silicon, at Iowa State University has not necessarily doomed the project, university officials said.

An ISU spokesman said backers of the project will seek funding elsewhere. ISU lobbyists argued that Iowa could take the lead in developing the substance into a consumer product that could power everything from smoke detectors to vehicles. One of the major selling points was that the $2 million initial outlay would more than pay for itself in economic development benefits.

Spilotro hit was planned

CHICAGO — Chicago crime syndicate bosses decided within a week after Anthony Spilotro's Las Vegas racketeering trial ended in a hung jury last year that Spilotro and his brother were to be killed, it was reported.

The gangland bosses believed Spilotro would be convicted and sent to prison. That would have cleared the way for the reputed new boss of the Chicago underworld, Joseph Ferriola, to place his own man in the Las Vegas operation, The Chicago Tribune reported Sunday.

Spilotro, unaware that a hit contract was already out on him, met twice last June with mob chiefs in Chicago. A week after the second meeting, the bodies of Spilotro, 43, and his brother, Michael, 41, were found buried in an Indiana cornfield.

Iowans prefer Budweiser

DES MOINES — Although light beers and bargain brews are making their mark, Budweiser is the beer of choice among Iowans, the state Wholesalers Beer Distributors Association said Sunday.

Budweiser reigns supreme despite advertising campaigns steering Iowans toward lower-calorie beers. Association statistics showed Old Milwaukee, Miller Lite and Bud Light as the closest contenders to Budweiser. Statistics also showed an overall decline in beer sales in Iowa.

21-year-old found dead

DES MOINES — A 21-year-old Des Moines woman, Tuesday Bailey, was found dead in her home on the city's east side, police said Sunday.

Police said the body was discovered by her brother and her husband about 9 p.m. Saturday. Polk County Medical Examiner R.C. Wooters said there was no indication of foul play.

Bank heists hit capital

DES MOINES — Des Moines police are investigating the fourth bank robbery in the city in under three weeks.

A lone gunman walked into the East Des Moines National Bank Friday and went to each teller demanding money. The suspect fled on a motorcycle that was later found abandoned. Witnesses said the suspect stripped off an outer layer of clothes after leaving the motorcycle.

Two weeks ago three banks were robbed within two days. A suspect in a June 5 robbery of a downtown bank was apprehended. Police do not believe the robberies are related.

Broken steam line causes shower in UI Art Museum

By D.R. Miller
The Daily Iowan

It began raining inside the UI Art Museum Friday afternoon when a high-pressure steam line broke, blowing a large hole in the floor, according to UI Physical Plant Director Jim Christenson.

Around 4 p.m., a pipe broke in the museum and Iowa City firefighters were called to the scene. After they succeeded in turning the pipe off, they utilized fans to clear the room of the steam, according to Christenson.

"The greatest damage was to the interior of the museum," Christenson said. "When all the steam hit that air conditioned air in the museum, it condensed. The woodwork was covered with water just like there was a heavy rain inside.

"A slug of water got into the system and was forced through like a sledgehammer," Christenson said. "This created unusually high pressure in the pipes. It knocked out one of the steam traps (a pressure safety device) and that allowed a break in the steam line to occur," Christenson said.

CHRISTENSON suggested a possible cause of the accident was the heavy rain storm which occurred Friday afternoon, during which the power plant went off line for a brief time.

This, coupled with the rain-water entering the mechanical areas from the heavy run-off might have cooled the steam system down faster than normal, which could account for condensation in the pipes, Christenson said.

When personnel turned the system back on, possibly too fast, the slug of water started to move and caused the explosion.

But Christenson said no definite cause for the accident had been determined as of Sunday.

"As of yet we are not absolutely sure," Christenson said. "By noon Monday we should have the answers."

A second explosion occurred in the old law building at the same time, but no damage was reported. The building is also undergoing remodeling in preparation for the new residents, the UI International Center and the Video Center.

Smiley's attorney surprised at new charges

By Phil Thomas
The Daily Iowan

An attorney representing UI football player Keaton Smiley said Sunday he was "surprised" at the possibility of additional charges being filed against the sophomore from Duncanville, Texas.

Waterloo attorney Jay Roberts, who will now represent Smiley, said he is suspicious of assault allegations brought forth late last week by UI junior Jennifer Lee.

Charges are expected to be filed against Smiley today in Johnson County District Court by Johnson County Attorney J. Patrick White in connection with the incident.

ROBERTS AND JIM Thomas, of Anamosa, Iowa, have been appointed by the Johnson County District Court to represent Smiley after Iowa City attorney Mary Weideman decided last week to withdraw from the case.

Lee told The Daily Iowan last

Wednesday that Smiley struck her in the Fieldhouse Bar, 111 E. College St., May 17, 1986, causing a nasal fracture.

"I think it causes a person to ask some questions about why it sat around for a year, including the person who was allegedly assaulted," Roberts said.

Smiley is currently charged with willful injury, a forceable felony, in connection with the alleged beating and threatening of UI student Cheryl Zemaitas at his apartment at 530 S. Clinton St. on June 9. Zemaitas suffered a ruptured eardrum, lacerations, bruises and a cut on one hand in the incident, according to court records.

ROBERTS SAID HE and Smiley were not anticipating any charges or allegations, other than those in the Zemaitas incident.

"We don't know anything about (Lee's allegations)," he said. "As far as we know there was nothing to this and it was a surprise. I can say that Mr. Smiley was not expecting these charges, lost, filed or whatever."

If Smiley is convicted of the charges in the Zemaitas case, he will face a mandatory prison sentence. Willful injury is a Class C felony and may be punishable by up to 10 years in prison and a $5,000 fine.

Neither Lee nor White could specify whether the charges filed against Smiley in connection with the Lee incident would be felony or misdemeanor charges.

Last week Lee told the DI that she met Smiley in August of 1985 and they became friends. Lee said she was verbally assaulted by Smiley several times before the alleged assault in May 1986.

Lee said she reported the incident to police immediately after being treated at Mercy Hospital that evening under the assumption that charges would be filed, but no action was ever taken.

Ice cream cart cools outdoor patrons

By Anne Kevlin
The Daily Iowan

There's something special about the way so many people swarm to ice cream on hot summer days — and what better way to market the stuff than outdoors in the heat and humidity.

Now, a portable ice cream cart serving ice cream sandwiches means students and other worshipers of the sun are able to enjoy Great Midwestern ice cream without having to leave the great outdoors.

Operated by the Union, the ice cream cart began selling at the end of the spring semester, according to UI senior Eric Johnson, who staffs the cart. But business hasn't been great, he said.

"I was kind of afraid that I'd lose my job, because I'm not selling a lot," Johnson said. "I think when people get used to seeing me around, business will pick up."

REACTIONS TO THE ice

The Daily Iowan/Todd Mizener

Ice cream vendor Eric Johnson helps UI senior Peter Dippery beat the heat by serving up a Great cream cart vary, Johnson said, and people often ask him for something cold to drink rather than ice cream. He occasionally gets teased for having an easy job — an accusation he doesn't deny.

"Yeah, it's easy," Johnson said.

Because he spends six hours a day outside, sunburn is a job hazard, so Johnson keeps sunscreen in a compartment in the cart and spends much of the day in the shade of the Union entrances. But heat seems to have a positive effect on ice cream sales.

"You're going to be busy selling these today," one customer told Johnson as the temperature neared 100 degrees early last week.

"This is incredible," Johnson

Midwestern coffee-chip ice cream sandwich in front of the Union recently.

said, repeating the flavors of Great Midwestern ice cream — blueberry, coffee, chocolate chip and vanilla — as customer after customer peered into the cart.

Johnson prepares the ice cream, sandwiching it between cookies made by the Union, before he takes the cart out each day.

Chair established to honor Freedman

By Anne Kevlin
The Daily Iowan

UI Vice President for Academic Affairs Richard Remington announced the establishment of the James O. Freedman Chair in Letters at a reception honoring Freedman Friday afternoon on his last day as UI president.

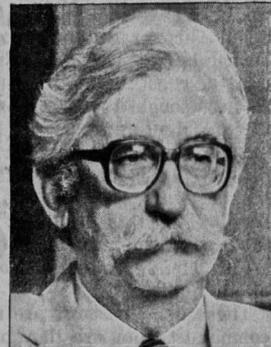

The endowment by Grain Processing Corporation in Muscatine symbolizes Freedman's commitment to the liberal arts during his five year term as president, Remington said.

About 300 UI faculty and staff members attended the reception in the lobby of Hancher Auditorium. On July 1, Freedman will officially become president of Dartmouth College in Hanover, New Hampshire.

Remington said he believed the reception was an appropriate end to Freedman's career at the UI.

"I just find it difficult to say enough about the quality of the experience of working with him, and what he's brought to the university," he said.

REMINGTON, WHO IS Acting UI President until a new president is chosen, presented Freedman and his wife, Bathsheba, with parting gifts from the UI. Freedman received a special edition of the Samuel Beckett novel "Company," and Bathsheba received a pair of crystal candle holders.

Richard Remington

"I really don't want to say goodbye," Bathsheba Freedman told the crowd. "It was very hard to come here in the first place. I had never really been west of New Jersey."

James O. Freedman also praised the UI and its faculty in his parting words.

"This university gave us the chance to see a part of the country we had not known before," he said.

Korean Conflict

In the past few weeks there has been an escalation of tensions in South Korea. The government of President Chun Doo Hwan has been fighting with students and other civilian protesters.

There is growing discontent among South Koreans, especially the middle class, with the policies of Chun, who seized power in a bloody 1979 coup. In January of this year, a 21-year-old linguistics student was arrested for protesting and within hours was dead from a brutal form of water torture. The subsequent dismissals and resignations of several high-ranking police officials over the incident was seen by many Koreans as too little too late.

In April, Chun again made a bad political move by stating that any discussion of constitutional reforms would be shelved until after the 1988 Olympic Games in Seoul. This enraged the opposition — the Reunification Democratic Party — which had been and continues to call for constitutional and other reforms. Among the reforms sought by the opposition is direct election of the president by the people.

But Chun's biggest blunder, and what may prove to be his downfall, came two weeks ago when he hand-picked his successor, Roh Tae-woo, an old friend of Chun's from military school. Roh is virtually guaranteed to be the next president under the present electoral system. Within hours, protests had begun in Seoul and dozens of other cities.

These demonstrators are not, as Chun has claimed, communists, nor are they particularly anti-American, although they have protested outside our embassy and are clearly disappointed with our government's past support of Chun.

The demonstrations in the past few weeks have a very broad-based support, including students, the middle class, church leaders and businessmen. Our government needs to look long and hard at their policies with regard to President Chun.

To the present administration's credit, they have expressed support of a bipartisan Congressional resolution criticizing President Chun and calling for negotiation between the Korean government and its opposition. But more options need to be seriously considered.

Trade sanctions, and the removal of our 40,000 troops from South Korea are moves which should be strongly considered. Our own Gov. Terry Branstad, in South Korea on a trade mission, should be asking himself what the cost is of dealing with a government which has such a gross record of human rights violations.

Lastly, we should all keep in mind the hopes and desires of the Korean people, typified in the words of a Korean factory worker this weekend: "Why can't the Americans help us become a democratic country out of the goodness of their hearts?"

Smart study

The decision of the state Board of Regents last week to defer the question of whether to tighten admissions requirements to an interinstitutional committee for further study is a good one.

The UI's recommendation to tighten the UI College of Liberal Arts entrance requirements would include two years of foreign language, four years of science and three years each of natural and social science — effective in the fall of 1989.

In a world which is becoming increasingly interdependent, such recommendations are ideas which are not only necessary to keep the UI competitive, but more importantly, necessary for students to function in life after college.

These required courses are needed for students to understand and take an active role in U.S. policy decisions in such areas as: environment control, international trade and policies which promote an equal exchange of information with all countries.

But UI administrators are smart to hesitate. The pool of knowledge of the world community increases each day. Students today must learn more just to be up on current issues. And, in the face of cut after cut to education, time — more than ever — means money.

The UI must take into account minority students — many of whom must spend time in remedial courses — and start summer and high-school programs which will allow these students to compete for placement and moreover to graduate on time.

Many UI students can not graduate in four years as it is now. If the UI expects students to take even more courses — although their reasoning is admirable — they must be ready to do more than just study other institutions. They must be ready to learn and change. The UI must be ready to make sweeping curriculum changes, if necessary, to allow students to get out in four years.

Arms control means more politically

S EVEN years of fitful negotiations may finally have brought the United States and the Soviet Union to the brink of concluding an agreement to limit intermediate-range nuclear forces.

Even though the Soviets have accepted the "zero option" first proposed by the United States and will be dismantling many more warheads than the United States, the prospect of an agreement has aroused anguish in Helmut Kohl's West German government, opposition from Reps. Jack Kemp, R-N.Y., and Les Aspin, D-Wis., and the Olympian criticism of Richard M. Nixon and Henry A. Kissinger.

AMID THE CLAMOR of contending voices, several points should be kept in mind.

An INF agreement will not mean the denuclearization of Europe. Under terms of the zero option, the United States would have to remove its 208 ground-launched cruise missiles and 108 Pershing 2 ballistic missiles from European soil. That would still leave more than 4,000 U.S. nuclear warheads in place, not to mention those of the British and French or on U.S. carriers offshore. Even if the 1,000 or more battlefield nuclear weapons were removed, more than 2,000 U.S. nuclear weapons would remain. As if that were not enough, the North Atlantic Treaty Organization is considering whether to add new missiles and bombs to its nuclear arsenal.

An INF agreement will not decouple Western Europe from U.S. protection. The ties that bind America to Europe are those of interest and sentiment, not the physical presence of U.S. nuclear weapons. The site from which U.S. nuclear strikes would be launched against the Soviet Union would hardly affect calculations in the Kremlin or the White House about whether an American president would be willing to risk retaliation against the United States for the first use of nuclear weapons on Europe's behalf — "coupling," in NATO parlance.

An INF agreement will not affect military balance. What deters a deliberate attack on Western Europe continues to be the conventional balance of power, which is not nearly as one-sided as the Pentagon likes to pretend. In addition, there is the risk of escalation to nuclear war. The elimination of INF warheads from Europe does not change that. Even if all 1,500 INF warheads now deployed in Europe are removed, it will reduce the nuclear arsenals of the superpowers by less than 3 percent.

AN INF AGREEMENT would make a modest but useful contribution to military stability. It is the threat of war, not the number of weapons, that arms control — above all else — seeks to reduce.

Thus stability, not reduction, is the ultimate test of any agreement. By that standard, the zero option does not diminish the deterrence of premeditated war. And it somewhat reduces the risk of inadvertent war in a crisis by eliminating the Pershing 2, which — by virtue of its range, accuracy and short flight time — can attack Soviet command and control facilities in a matter of minutes. That gives the Soviets an incentive to preempt in a crisis, which puts both sides at risk of becoming embroiled in a nuclear war that neither sought. For stability to be greatly enhanced, the superpowers would have to agree to reduce their strategic nuclear weapons, not just INF.

An INF agreement will be truly meaningful if it leads the way to other, more far-reaching, arms-control measures.

The draft INF treaty is based on a rather simple concept: Eliminate a class of weapons defined by range (300 to 3,300 miles) and characteristics (land-based missiles). Nuclear weapons with ranges below 300 miles or above 3,300 would not be covered by an INF accord. Nor would those based at sea or launched or dropped from bombers. An INF accord would thus be both lonely and exposed. If subsequent agreements limiting strategic weapons and conventional forces are not reached in due time, inevitable quantitative and qualitative developments will undercut the value and jeopardize the viability of an INF accord — especially so in view of the administration's repudiation of SALT 1 and SALT 2, a repudiation that leaves no limits on strategic nuclear forces.

THE AGREEMENT could be a significant political achievement. The accord could compensate with political punch for what it lacks in military meaning. It would oblige an administration, avowedly hostile to any arms control, to defend a bilateral security arrangement with the Soviet Union before Congress and the people. That would make it more difficult for the administration to proceed unilaterally with programs, like the premature deployment of a primitive SDI, that do nothing for U.S. security and jeopardize the very framework required for future arms-control agreements.

An INF accord could point the way to further advances on the arms-control front. Agreement on the outline of a more comprehensive accord controlling strategic offensive forces and SDI is still possible, provided the United States is prepared to scale back its intention to develop and deploy strategic defenses. The framework could be concluded by a summit meeting this fall, with the details to be negotiated in 1988 and ratification to await a new administration.

That would be an arms-control achievement worthy of strong bipartisan support. And it would earn President Ronald Reagan a bright place in history.

Unethical editor

To the Editor:

I have been reading newspapers and working for and with the media for many years now, but the DI recently committed one of the most irresponsible acts of journalism I have ever come across.

I am referring to the "Smiley arrest raises questions" column of June 12. Despite the convoluted (if not racist and classist) paradigm of "anticipatory socialization" which Stelly, for some reason, feels he needs to give credence to his analysis, the article raises some very critical questions. Those questions concern the role of athletes, in general, and black male athletes, in particular, in the high-powered drama of big-money intercollegiate athletics. I agree in general with Stelly's analysis, though I recognize that there are a couple of factual errors, for example, the lack of black churches in Iowa City.

However, what struck me immediately after reading the article was that Keaton Smiley's name is not mentioned in the article. Not once. Nor is there even an allusion to his recent arrest. It seems clear to me, therefore, that Stelly did not write this article with Smiley's arrest in mind. In fact, it seems highly possible that Stelly may have written this article some time before Smiley's arrest even happened.

Why the decision to run the article at this time? Why then that choice of headline? To sell newsprint? To assuage the conscience of a white liberal newspaper staff who can't correctly analyze a political question if its circulation depended on it?

This is what I mean: Stelly's article seems to me a provocative examination of the exploitation of black athletes by this (yes, this) university. As it appears to me, the article is not meant to be in any way an apology for Smiley's alleged behavior. Rather than comment directly on Smiley's case, however, the DI editorial page editor decided Stelly's article would serve that purpose. And in the moment — when the Smiley incident was on the front pages — she decided to run this article and then approved the copy editor's choice of headline. In doing this, she was blatantly unethical in the performance of her job.

Further, the printing of this article at this time might alienate a group of potential allies to the cause of exploited athletes. Most feminists would be outraged if Stelly's article was in fact an apology for Smiley's alleged behavior. And the end result is that two oppressed groups — black athletes and victims of male violence — are placed in conflict with each other when they should not be.

For in fact, Smiley's actions, if true, are reprehensible; and the UI athletic administration's exploitation of black athletes is reprehensible. Social activists can and should fight against male violence and at the same time fight against exploitation of black athletes.

Rather than serve the public by clarifying difficult issues, the DI editorial staff has only further confused its readers. If the objective was to point to how oppressions are linked, how the oppressor in one instance is the victim in another, then I suggest much more careful discussion occur among the staff, rather than trust the personal, and very confused, agenda of one staff member.

UI policy needed

To the Editor:

I was disturbed to read of the alleged actions of Keaton Smiley in the DI (June 11, 1987). Unfortunately, this is not a unique or isolated incident. Hardly a week goes by without an athlete who is larger and stronger getting in a fight and physically harming someone.

I should emphasize here that most athletes carry themselves in a mature manner, and athletes who use their natural size and strength against Iowa City residents or UI students should not be supported through scholarship or aid by this institution, which is designed to promote "quality education."

I am calling on the UI to immediately institute a policy whereby athletic scholarships are withdrawn when an athlete is convicted of an assault charge. It should not matter if the athlete is an all-American or a fifth-string bench warmer. A swift and consistent policy is necessary.

Even more than this, it is time that the rights of the average, tuition-paying student are given equal consideration to those of the varsity athlete.

Christian choice

To the Editor:

Jim McNeish, self-proclaimed founder of "Virgin Whores" seems to be a hateful and confused person. Because the Viewpoints editor may not have understood fully the significance of McNeish's misogynist letter, and because a zeal for "freedom of expression" is often a virtue, I'm not asking for an apology for its irresponsible inclusion in the DI.

But because McNeish himself may not be clever enough to recognize the meaning of his dollup of wit, I'd like to point some things out for him.

His intended point seems to be that "lesbians" and "Christians" are mutually exclusive categories. Overlooking for a moment that lesbianism is not even mentioned in the New Testament, or that our church fathers have periodically quibbled over the definition of "Christian," the question becomes what is McNeish's authority for such a proclamation?

Most likely, he'd say the Bible is his authority, although if we could get him to be honest and reflect for 10 seconds, he might grant that his authority is a specific interpretation of the Bible. This is a common interpretation which has been passed down from many, but not all, of our church fathers. He might even think he's echoing the language of those fathers in using "virgins" and "whores," words so wonderfully evocative and archetypal that he even capitalizes them.

Why do I think him hateful and confused? Because he could have used any number of humorous oxymorons to make his point (the support group for jumbo shrimp has a nicely absurd ring) but he specifically chooses words which have been used hatefully for centuries to label women according to — how might he put it — their relation to "whoopie making." To be fair, McNeish speaks from a long tradition of evaluating women in terms of whoopee. "Virgin" or "harlot" do in fact follow a great many names in the catalogue of the faithful, and are most often followed by "martyr."

There are implications to McNeish's letter that perhaps go beyond his intentions. McNeish is telling women of all persuasions, "Do not bother to try and respect yourselves. You've lost the war for your identities even before your personal battles over spiritual growth or sexual preference are fought, because you're all either virgins or whores."

May the spirits of blessed Agatha, Dymna and Mary Magdalene be with me in inviting Jim McNeish to go whoopee himself.

Animal alternatives

This is in response to Earl Higgins' editorial defending the use of animals in research (DI, June 15). The time has come for humans to take a very close and soul-searching look at the use of animals in experimentation.

If it is morally objectionable to submit humans to the horrors of scientific experimentation, how can we humans find it morally justifiable to use non-humans in such research simply because they cannot defend themselves against our wishes?

Mr. Higgins states that recently passed legislation protects animals from mistreatment by researchers. The fact is that legislation does little more than set standards for housing and handling of some animals before they enter the laboratory; it does not prohibit the researcher from doing virtually anything he pleases to the animal. This includes withholding anesthetics or using curare-like drugs which paralyze but do not kill pain, provided he states he felt this procedure was necessary to his experiment. Furthermore, this legislation is very poorly enforced.

The experiments performed on non-humans are to a great extent trivial, redundant, unnecessary tests which are not directly related to the health of humans. Animals are blinded, scalded, battered, electrically shocked and forced to undergo the most horrendous psychological suffering, all for the supposed benefit of humans. In addition, the same experiments are performed over and over again.

A sampling of professional journals published between 1975 and 1982 showed that experiments involving the starvation of animals had been performed 550 times.

We humans must form a new ethic which will recognize the right of non-humans to be treated with the same consideration and respect for the high quality of life that humans are wont to invoke for their own species. All beings, humans and non-humans alike, have basic rights, including the right to live to the full extent of one's ability to enjoy life.

Alternatives to the use of animals in experimentation exist, and many more will be discovered if researchers look for them. Just as we have progressed from the day of the horse and buggy to more modern means of transportation, so there will come a research policy which actively pursues alternatives to the use of animals in experimentation.

Search continues for missing journalist

BEIRUT, Lebanon — Pro-Syrian militiamen searched West Beirut Sunday for a kidnapped American journalist and two Lebanese men as the head of Syrian forces in the country met with the spiritual leader of a pro-Iranian group accused of holding the captives.

A Syrian military source said it had been learned that the captives, Charles Glass, 36, a former ABC television correspondent; Ali Osseiran, 40, and their bodyguard driver, police Sgt. Suleiman Suleiman, 26, were in "good health."

The three men were kidnapped Wednesday at the entrance to the Shiite south suburbs of Beirut. No group has claimed responsibility for the abductions.

Nabih Berri, head of the pro-Syrian Shiite Amal militia, ordered his men to fan out across west Beirut to find Glass and Osseiran. "It should be solved as soon as possible," Berri said.

AIDS report rejects mandatory testing

CHICAGO — Gay rights groups Sunday applauded the American Medical Association's comprehensive draft report on AIDS testing, saying that "adds another reasoned voice to our side."

The AMA Board of Trustees issued 17 recommendations Saturday rejecting expanded mandatory testing for the AIDS virus and urging that a routine screening program be voluntary.

The trustees said mandatory testing of homosexuals and intravenous drug users "will only drive people underground and away from the health care system."

Instead, the report said physicians should counsel people from these groups, as well as pregnant women and surgical patients from high risk areas, to seek such testing. The report also encouraged physicians to recommend testing for couples seeking marriage licenses.

Soviets, U.S. try to avert Iranian victory

WASHINGTON — The United States and the Soviet Union are working together to avert an Iranian victory in the Persian Gulf War with Iraq, a Reagan administration official said Sunday.

"I think we share, at least temporarily, an interest in the region — an interest in preventing an Iranian victory in the Gulf War," said Undersecretary of State Michael Armacost.

Armacost said, among other things, the Soviets are concerned an Iranian victory could fuel uprisings among its huge Moslem population.

Hasenfus seeks payment for legal bills

WASHINGTON — Eugene Hasenfus, the American captured in Nicaragua while airdropping arms to the Contras, charged Sunday the State Department has reneged on pledges to ensure repayment of expenses connected with his trial in Managua.

Hasenfus and his wife, Sally, estimated they incurred more than $30,000 in legal, travel, lodging and telephone bills while he was being detained and tried from October to December.

Sally Hasenfus said Elliott Abrams, the assistant secretary of state for inter-American affairs, told her over the phone, "Everything will be taken care of — the tickets, your passport, a place to stay at the U.S. Embassy in Managua."

Kurdish guerrillas kill 31 in Turkey

ANKARA, Turkey — Suspected Kurdish guerrillas herded residents of an eastern Turkish village into a town square and unleashed a firestorm of hand grenades and automatic weapons, killing at least 31 people in the worst attack of the rebels' 3-year-old war, the Anatolian news agency said.

The semi-official news agency said the rebels surrounded the village of Pinarcik, Mahdin province, near the Syrian border in the dark and used megaphones to order residents into the main square.

It was the deadliest attack since Kurdish guerrillas fighting for an independent state of Kurdistan launched a rebellion against Turkish security forces three years ago.

Panama leader faces political challenge

PANAMA CITY, Panama — After four years as Panama's strongman, Gen. Manuel A. Noriega is being seriously challenged by popular unrest over alleged corruption, vote fraud and political murder.

The worst rioting since the military seized power in 1968 has forced him to suspend civil liberties, censor the press and deploy troops to help the police make hundreds of arrests.

A six-day national strike withered last week under the crackdown, but not before an unlikely spectrum of Panamanians — business executives, white-collar professionals, Roman Catholic bishops and many of the poor — had rallied behind a National Civic Crusade against military rule.

Paper says no extradition for Hamadei

HAMBURG, West Germany — A West German newspaper said Sunday federal Justice Minister Hans Engelhard has decided against extraditing suspected hijacker Mohammad Ali Hamadei to the United States.

Welt am Sonntag made the statement in the first paragraph of a front-page story but provided no further information on the decision it said Engelhard had made.

The paper devoted the rest of its story to political pressure being exerted on West Germany by 65 U.S. senators to extradite Hamadei under pain of damaging German-American relations.

The United States has asked West Germany to extradite Hamadei to stand trial for air piracy and murder in connection with the 1985 hijacking of a TWA jet in the Middle East during which Navy diver Robert Stethem, one of the 153 passengers, was shot to death.

Four men complete flight around world

PARIS — Fatigued but happy, three Frenchmen and a Canadian flying a 1930s vintage plane Sunday shattered Howard Hughes' 50-year-old speed record for a trip around the world in a twin-engine, prop-driven airplane.

Flying "The Spirit of J and B," a Lockheed Lodestar 18, the same type of plane that Hughes used to set the record in 1938, the pilots began the 15,000-mile voyage from Paris last Wednesday and completed it in 88 hours and 48 minutes, beating Hughes' record by 2 hours and 29 minutes.

During the flight, Frenchmen Patrick Fourtice, Henri Pescarolo and Hubert Auriol and Canadian Arthur Powell spent 72 hours and 18 minutes in the air with 16½ hours spent on the ground during eight refueling stops.

PTL may see courtroom fight

By Chris Mould
United Press International

TEGA CAY, S.C. — Celebrity lawyer Melvin Belli met Sunday with Jim and Tammy Faye Bakker to discuss how to return the PTL ministry to its founders and said that after Jerry Falwell hears the facts, "he'll send Jimmy back to his pulpit."

The silver-haired California attorney spent four hours with the Bakkers at their million-dollar lakeside "parsonage" and afterward joined the couple in meeting reporters.

"It's an incongruity that these men of God are in a rattle or a hassle or some litigation," Belli said. "I'm sure once Mr. Falwell hears the facts, he'll send Jimmy back to his pulpit."

Bakker, wearing a black suit and polka-dotted tie, insisted he and Tammy Faye, who wore a hot pink dress, were "peace-makers" and wanted to avoid court.

"BUT SINCE PTL has gone into Chapter 11, we feel we must have legal counsel," Bakker said. "We gave birth to the vision and dream of Heritage USA and our desires and goal is that that ministry continue and all creditors be paid 100 percent. Perhaps even more than that, that all the partners have fulfilled the vision and dream we gave them to have a place of retreat."

Falwell, in a telephone interview afterward, said he was glad the Bakkers "have such excellent representation," but added:

"I personally do not feel that the future of Heritage Village and the PTL ministry will be determined, however, in the courtroom."

The challenge he and the new PTL directors face, Falwell said, is to "raise $70 million for debt elimination and at the same time restore spiritual and financial credibility to a very embattled ministry."

BELLI, WHO WAS accompanied by two associates — one a bankruptcy specialist — said that he didn't feel Bakker's side of the story had been properly told.

"We're going to tell it without venom. This is a man of God. Mr. Falwell is a man of God. If there's anything to the limited wisdom the good Lord has given me, I hope he'll give me enough to see these people through their travail."

Belli insisted he came "in the spirit of peace" and added: "I hope we won't get to the point of going into the ring and putting on the gloves."

In other PTL developments, Falwell announced that "little babies are dying" because his ministry has lost so much money, and the Heritage USA theme park closed its water slide and train ride for the day to "give Sunday back to God."

FALWELL'S PTL directors placed the television ministry and theme park resort into bankruptcy June 12, two days after the Bakkers returned from California. And it is in bankruptcy court, apparently, that the fight over the ministry will be waged.

Before the lengthy meeting, Belli said of Bakker: "I've always liked the fellow. I like a man of God anyhow, no matter what his denomination is. I want to get him back on the air and in his ministry as soon as possible and that's what he wants me to do."

Soviet elections offer choice

By Celestine Bohlen
Washington Post

MOSCOW — The Soviet Union Sunday carried out its first experiment with multi-candidate balloting in scattered districts across the country during local elections that tested other themes of Kremlin leader Mikhail Gorbachev's campaign for "democratization."

Although voters in only 5 percent of the election districts were given a choice at the ballot box, the elections of local councils and district court judges around the country took place under a variety of other new conditions that the official press widely hailed as a break with past practices.

"The departure from old, overly rigid procedures for advancing candidates . . . sets apart the character of today's election practices, resulting in the increased involvement of the people," the government newspaper Izvestia said in an editorial Sunday.

THE MOST significant experiment involved multi-candidate lists, a practice already in place in several East European countries and announced here in April as a result of political reforms pushed by Gorbachev.

The experiment is taking place in 76 districts around the country. No multi-candidate list was offered in the city of Moscow, and the only one under way in the Moscow region is in an area closed to foreigners.

Before Gorbachev came to power more than two years ago, the Soviet Union had tried to give greater credence to the role of elected government officials. Those elected Sunday will serve on 52,000 different councils, or soviets.

But the power in the country remains firmly in the hands of the ruling Communist Party. So far, suggestions to make the selection of party officials more democratic — which were aired publicly by Gorbachev last January — have not been adopted.

IN THE EXPERIMENTAL areas, election districts were consolidated and voters were able to choose from a list of candidates that exceeded the number of available positions.

At the No. 5 polling station in Moscow's Krasnopresnenski region, where Gorbachev and his wife, Raisa, voted Sunday, election committee chairwoman Tamara Zuikova noted that changes in procedure had made the candidates more accountable and had given voters a greater chance to voice their preferences.

Sunday, only one name per political office was on the ballots given to the 1,850 voters in the district, but during the nominating stage, two or sometimes three names were presented to the designated "work collectives" charged with picking the candidates, she said. "Before, it was always one. As a result, this time we are seeing new people and younger people."

According to official predictions, Sunday's election will result in a dramatic 80 percent turnover on the 800-member mossoviet, or city council. Sixty percent of the city's 9,970 deputies to regional councils will be changed, according to Zuikova.

Congress will OK Kuwaiti escort plan

By Sara Fritz
Los Angeles Times

WASHINGTON — The Democratic-controlled Congress will approve President Ronald Reagan's plan to provide naval escorts to Kuwaiti oil tankers in the Persian Gulf, but not without imposing tight restrictions on the operation, the chairman of the House Armed Services Committee said Sunday.

Rep. Les Aspin, D-Wis., appearing on CBS' "Face the Nation," said that the exact terms of the Democrats' position will be announced later this week after a meeting of the House and Senate leadership. Leaders of both chambers have previously expressed strong opposition to the plan.

Although many members of Congress still fear that escorting the Kuwaiti tankers will lead the United States into a direct confrontation with Iran, Aspin said that Democratic leaders do not believe that they can wholeheartedly approve or disapprove of the president's plan.

CONGRESSIONAL OPPOSITIONS of the plan, under which 11 Kuwaiti tankers are to be re-registered to fly the American flag, have proposed resolutions that would either prohibit the move or invoke the War Powers Act, which requires congressional approval for putting U.S. forces in a combat area for more than 90 days. "Congress has been put in, I think, a very tough position," said Aspin, who has been one of the most vocal critics of the escort plan. "A vote to go ahead with the reflagging carries a lot of risk, and a vote against the reflagging, pulling the administration back from the reflagging, I think carries enormous risk, too, of Iranian terrorist actions. . . . So, in a sense, the two obvious options — yes and no — are not very good."

As a result, Aspin predicted that the resolution put forth by the Democratic leadership will seek to chart a middle course, perhaps imposing a time limit on the naval escorts. He did not specify how long a time limit was being considered by the Democrats.

IN ADDITION, Aspin said, the Democrats' resolution may require the administration to obtain the cooperation of U.S. allies that rely heavily on the Persian Gulf for their oil, saying in effect: "You can go ahead with this, provided you have some kind of participation of the allies." The United States receives less than 7 percent of its oil from the region.

The administration's escort plan is designed to underscore its commitment to keeping open international sea lanes in the gulf. Democrats and many Republicans have accused Reagan of failing to give adequate consideration to the risk.

be held in Seoul. And while newspapers and the Korean Broadcasting System were reporting Sunday that the government and its party were now expected to agree to end that suspension, they also reported that no compromise would be offered to accommodate a demand by the opposition for direct presidential elections.

CHUN LIMITED by the constitution. One term in office, is due to step down next Feb. 24. The constitution provides for an indirect election, by electoral college, to pick his successor, and that election is scheduled for the end of this year.

The opposition rejects the indirect system, charging that Chun is in a position to manipulate it in favor of Roh, his hand-picked candidate to be the next president. And if the opposition, especially the hard-line Reunification Democratic Party, rejects whatever peacemaking proposals Roh announces Monday, the danger of continued turmoil, followed by government crackdown, is likely to grow.

A hint of the opposition's attitude came after Sunday's ruling party caucus when Kim Young Sam, president of the Reunification Democratic Party, declared that "the ruling party still has not gotten the message of what the people really want."

PRIME MINISTER Lee Han Key warned in a Friday television broadcast to the nation that continued turmoil, which has confronted South Korea's military-backed rulers with their greatest challenge to date, would make it "inevitable" for the government to implement an "extraordinary decision" to cope with the unrest. He gave no details, but his statement implied that measures considerably stronger than the riot-control steps undertaken so far, principally involving the use of unarmed police and tear gas, could be anticipated.

Quiet returned to most of the nation Sunday. The only reported street clashes occurred on the island of Cheju and in the cities of Iri, Kwangju and, once again, in Pusan, a port city of 3.5 million population 205 miles southeast of Seoul.

Sunday's clashes in Pusan, involving several thousand students, were far milder than earlier demonstrations there, several of which turned into riots.

BECAUSE OF A translation

error, the Los Angeles Times mistakenly reported in its Sunday editions that Lee Tae Chun, 28, a trading company employee, died in Pusan of injuries suffered while demonstrating against the government. Lee, critically injured Thursday, remains in a coma on a life support system in a Pusan hospital, authorities said.

In Seoul, Sunday's principal protest took place at the Myongdong Roman Catholic Cathedral, site of some of the most intense earlier demonstrations. About 1,000 students filled the driveway leading to the cathedral plaza, sang anti-government songs and chanted slogans demanding an end to "military dictatorship" and restoration of democracy.

Police, out in heavy numbers in the Myongdong section, fired only one barrage of pepper gas, a virulent form of tear gas, when some of the students tried to march into the street from the cathedral grounds.

THE RULING PARTY'S anticipated peace offering was expected to coincide with visits here by two officials of the United States, which for the first time Friday explicitly urged Chun to reopen talks with the opposition on constitutional revision.

Database

that's what a database will do," Jones said. "It's like computerized dating, except that here we're not looking at sex, we're looking at economic ventures."

Jones said that the idea behind establishing the database was, in principle, a good one.

"IT'S A PRETTY DECENT example of the type of things a government can do for the economy without a lot of cost involved," Jones said. "To the extent that Korea could become a larger trading partner with Iowa, it could have an effect."

But Jones said in practice he was skeptical of the effects of establishing a database with South Korea.

"People have to use it to make it work," Jones said. "Unless you have a lot of people registered in the system, it tends to fall through."

Gaston Sigur, assistant secretary of state for East Asia-Pacific affairs, is due here today on the heels of Edwin Derwinski, under secretary of state for security assistance, science and technology, who flew in Saturday.

Biden

heard and he sounded good." Biden also spoke to small groups at the 218 Cafe in Vinton where Deb Lohrer, a Benton County campaign organizer, said Biden's organization there was still loose.

"WE SAW SOME very encouraging things today," she added.

Don Boddicker, a Vinton lawyer and farmer, sat across a table from Biden in the 218 Cafe arguing with the candidate on a broad range of issues. Biden flashed a smile at Boddicker as he made his points and signed autographs on placemats.

Boddicker, 72, a Democrat, said he voted for Ronald Reagan for president in 1980 and 1984.

"Reagan in my opinion is a realist," said Boddicker. "He and I went through the same era."

Boddicker said his barber told him in 1984 the "list of Democratic candidates is laughable. We didn't see how they can ask the public to vote for any of them."

Herbert

did not condone the behavior of either of the men nor the panel members who attempted to intercede in the discussion. "I invited (Herbert)," Riggs told Wiewel shortly after Thursday's melee. "I did not invite this. I did not invite your comments."

RIGGS SAID FRIDAY he found Herbert's action "disgressing."

"I would not have taken the tape myself," Riggs said. "The point (of the forum) was to raise awareness of the issues about what rights people have to say these things to the public. What we ended up discussing was the substance of the communication and not the communication itself."

Though Riggs did not excuse

Herbert's behavior he explained that Herbert felt indignant of Wiewel's challenges in the absence of scientific evidence and added that to the best of his knowledge he felt Herbert's opinions to be medically sound.

"There is no clear indication that those (IAT) treatments work," he said. "These are therapies for which I know only negative reports."

But Riggs said he would offer no opinion on whether he felt that Wiewel was stealing Herbert's intellectual property.

Herbert is scheduled to appear in court on July 7. Both charges against Herbert are simple misdemeanors and carry maximum sentence of 30 days in jail and a $100 fine.

Lecture fires taping debate

By Tony Jeffris
The Daily Iowan

The events that took place at Victor Herbert's discussion of the First Amendment and commercial speech last Thursday brought lively debate on an equally unresolved issue — what constitutes theft of "intellectual property."

According to UI Assistant to the President and legal advisor Julia Mears, the UI does not have an explicit policy forbidding taping of UI lectures.

"There isn't a university policy forbidding taping that I can think of," Mears said. The UI policy, she said, stems out of the legal doctrine of fair use. Under the doctrine, persons are allowed to tape even copyrighted material so long as it is not redistributed for commercial gain.

"We have had professors with a great deal of concern about people taping their lectures, which they consider their intellectual property, and having them redistributed to Linn-Mar lecture notes," she said. "This is a legitimate property interest that UI lecturers can assert."

BUT MEARS ADDED that there are notable exceptions in which direct use of "intellectual property" for commercial gain is acceptable. These are applicable to journalistic pursuits, in particular for book, film and theater reviews. The UI, she said, also has an explicit policy requiring that taping accommodations be made for persons with physical handicaps.

Mears said she questions whether anyone could be banned under UI policy from taping lectures or speeches, including situations such as the one involving Herbert.

"I have a real question about having some tape recorders approved for use and others not approved," Mears said. "I don't see any reason why this guy (Frank Wiewel) couldn't also tape his remarks.

"The question here is whether we can prevent someone from bringing their own accommodations. In these circumstances I don't think we could," she said.

Richard Zimmerman, a local attorney specializing in media law, concurred with Mear's opinion.

"There has been an ongoing battle between academics and persons who would use their material," Zimmerman said. "I don't think it is clear at this point. It seems to me, though, that a person making an appearance at a public forum has very little claim to copyright their material."

Lohaus, Gamble wait for NBA call

By Steve Williams
The Daily Iowan

Two former Iowa basketball players will have a chance to advance to the game's highest level today when the 23 NBA teams meet for the 1987 edition of the collegiate draft.

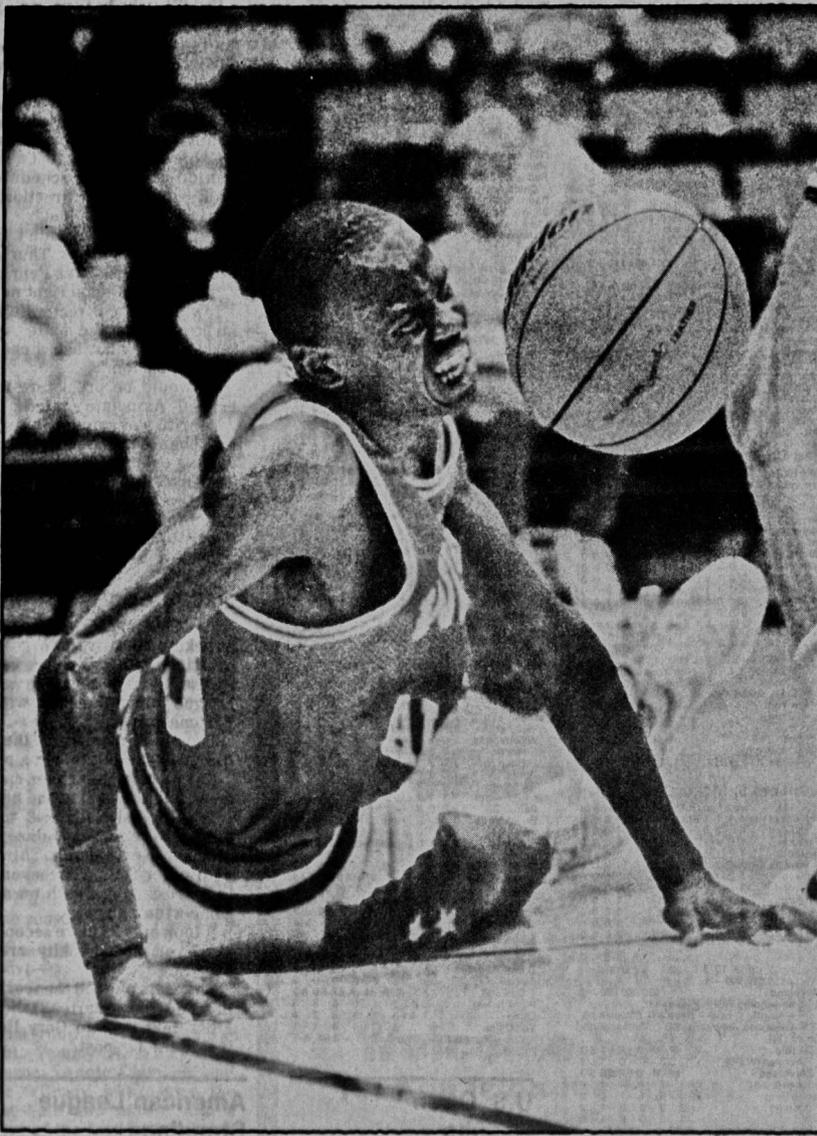

Brad Lohaus and Kevin Gamble, Hawkeye standouts from a year ago, have been waiting and wondering for months as to what their futures would be. And although their destinations are still undecided, both are expected to be drafted sometime today.

"It's been my life's dream," Gamble said Sunday, "and I'm just happy that I'm being considered a professional athlete. This year raised my stock a lot and if it wasn't for Coach (Tom) Davis and his staff, I wouldn't be in the position that I'm in now."

WHILE GAMBLE IS considered a likely late-round pick, Lohaus is being looked on as a potential impact player, something that wasn't even being thought about a few years ago.

Two years ago, person could have been committed for tabbing Lohaus as a possible NBA player. In his first four years at Iowa, the 7-foot forward was little more than an embarrassment to the Hawkeyes, playing only sparingly and doing little while he was in.

But after last year's transformation, Lohaus is not only being accepted by NBA scouts, See Draft, Page 3B

Illinois wins Classic tilt; Iowa splits

By Steve Williams
The Daily Iowan

Iowa may have proven that the basketball played within its borders is better than people think.

After holding off Wisconsin's best high school talent 93-89, the Iowa All-Stars battled Illinois to the limit before losing 88-84 in the four-team McDonald's Midwest All-Star Classic at Carver-Hawkeye Arena.

Illinois, heavily favored in both its Sunday contests, had to come from behind against both Iowa and Minnesota to remain unbeaten. Iowa and Wisconsin finished 1-1 on the day while Minnesota went home without a win, losing 101-99 to Illinois and 97-86 to Wisconsin.

"I think we had the best talent out there today," Illinois Coach Duncan Reid said. "This was a good day for our players, but it's always hard on the coaches because there is so little time to prepare for these things."

ILLINOIS' squad was further hampered by the fact that several players, including Fighting Illini recruit Marcus Liberty, were unable to make the event sponsored by Iowa City's Ronald McDonald House. And even some of those who did wound up not playing after altercations with the coaching staff.

One such player for Illinois was Curtis Stuckey, a 6-foot-1 guard who will attend Drake this fall. After telling Reid he didn't want to re-enter the game against Minnesota, Stuckey was sent to the locker room, appearing later in the second half in his street clothes.

"I don't know what was the matter with Curtis," Reid said after the first game. "As far as I'm concerned, he can go to Drake and coach (Gary) Garner right now."

One Illinois all-star who did come to play Sunday was Rodell Davis, an Iowa recruit making his first appearance on the Carver-Hawkeye court.

DAVIS was high scorer in both of Illinois' games, scoring 26 against Minnesota and 20 against the Iowa team.

"This was a great opportunity for me to show the people in Iowa City that I can play basketball," Davis said. "I also knew coach Davis was around and I wanted to show him what I could do as well."

Davis was one of three Iowa recruits making an appearance Sunday. The other two were Brian Garner from Wisconsin and Brig Tubbs of Iowa.

Garner, a 6-1 guard made the biggest impression on the Iowa fans Sunday, slashing, passing and dunking his way to a game-high 21 points against Iowa.

Arena Football kicks off inaugural season

By Marc Bona
The Daily Iowan

ROSEMONT, Ill. — Everything was different, but it was still football.

Only it wasn't really football, it was Arenaball, and Saturday 10,103 fans witnessed the sport's first televised game — as well as its first overtime contest — as the Denver Dynamite defeated the host Chicago Bruisers, 52-44, in The Horizon.

The score was indicative of a typical Arena Football game. In the sport's inaugural game the night before, the Pittsburgh Gladiators defeated the Washington Commandos, 48-46, in Pittsburgh's Civic Arena before 12,117 fans.

And, according to Chicago Coach Ray Jauch, it was an exciting game.

"I think the idea of the game is to provide an exciting game for the fans," he said. "I think

CHICAGO BRUISERS

DENVER DYNAMITE

Pittsburgh Gladiators

from that standpoint you have to be pleased (by) both ball games — the one in Pittsburgh the other night and this one. If these are any indicators of what Arena Football is all about, it should have fan interest, and that's what's important."

WHEN ASKED if defense could be played in the sport, Jauch said, "It doesn't look like it, does it?" But he added it isn't impossible.

From the start, the game promised something which resembled football but was a little different. Take the kicking game, for example.

Chicago's Nick Mike-Mayer, the oldest player in the four-team league at 37, came on the field and set up as any placekicker in the National Football League would, but something seemed different.

What was different was that he was standing on his own goal-line, attempting a 50-yard field goal. And splitting the uprights takes on a new meaning in this sport. The width of the goal posts is 9 feet, less than half of those in the NFL.

Granted, Mike-Mayer had no wind to contend with, but he found the gap six times in the game, converting on four extra points and booting field goals of 21 and 45 yards.

BUT IT WASN'T only the kicking game which seemed different. Behind each end zone — 7 feet above the end line — were two 35-foot-high nets, each measuring 30 feet across and taut as a fishing line being pulled by an agitated marlin.

A ball bouncing off a net is live, meaning players can catch a ricocheted ball and run, making for a quick transition from offense to defense if a defender nabs it.

And that's another aspect of the sport which differs from modern-day football: players go both ways. That is, everyone but quarterbacks and kickers play offense and defense, a throwback to days of old.

And, if single platoons are being instituted, why not bring back the drop kick? That's right. Arenaball rules allow for a drop kick, which is only fair considering punts are illegal.

Some other notable rules which differ from the NFL's:

- Drop kicks are worth four points as field goals, two as extra points.

- Receivers need one foot inbounds for a legal reception.
- Kickoffs downed in the end zone are brought to the 5-yard line.

Players — who must be 21 or older — are paid $500 a game, plus expenses. Rosters are kept at a 16-man maximum, and no player with college eligibility remaining may be drafted.

The new rules made for a different game in some respects, but the pseudo-clone of football also had its similarities. See Arena, Page 3B

U.S. Open champion Scott Simpson waves his putter to the crowd.

Simpson outduels Watson; earns Open title, $150,000

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Scott Simpson stood up to the most intensive pressure of his nine-year career Sunday and outdueled Tom Watson to win the 87th U.S. Open — his first major championship.

Simpson, already in the midst of the best golfing year of his professional career, held his game together under the rigors of Open Sunday and on a golf course that claimed one victim after another on a sun-splashed afternoon.

He equaled the day's best round with a 2-under 68 that gave him a 72-hole total of three-under 277 — one shot ahead of Watson, whose 30-foot putt for birdie that would have tied Simpson at the final hole stopped just two inches from the cup.

Simpson shot a 32 on the back nine of the Olympic Club, sinking a four-foot birdie putt at the 14th and a pair of 15-footers at the next two holes. He won $150,000, vaulting him to the top of the 1987 earnings list.

SIMPSON AND WATSON turned the Open into a two-man tournament after five players shared the lead early in the day. The two battled along the back nine with Simpson making a key shot and Watson following suit.

When the pressure built to its highest, however, Simpson faced the test. After notching his three straight birdies to move in front of Watson by a stroke, Simpson put his second shot on the difficult, par-4 17th into a greenside bunker.

Faced with a rugged shot, Simpson clubbed the ball out and watched it roll across the slick green to within six feet of the pin. He sank the uphill putt to keep the lead and made a safe par at the final hole.

WATSON THEN NEEDED to birdie the 18th to force an 18-hole playoff today. He put his second shot on the 343-yard hole on the front fringe and, for a brief second, appeared to have hit the putt he needed to hit. But the ball began to lose speed as it traveled uphill and, at the last second, curled to the left.

Watson was seeking his first victory in three years and, briefly on the back nine, had the lead by himself.

"It's hard for me to even imagine this," said Simpson, who, with the victory, automatically wins a spot on the U.S. Ryder Cup team and who posted his ninth top-10 finish of the year. "My No. 1 reason to play on the tour was just to make a living for my family. I never thought of something like this."

"I HAD ONE OF those days. It was one of the best putting See Open, Page 3B

Bachman ties for 13th at nationals

The Daily Iowan

Former Iowa all-American Dan Bachman earned a spot on the 1987-88 senior national gymnastics team at the McDonald's U.S. National Gymnastics Championships in Kansas City, Mo., Sunday.

Bachman, who finished 13th in the 72-man field which qualified at regional meets in May, qualified for the World University Games in Zagreb, Yugoslavia, July 3-13.

Three other Iowa gymnasts, competing with Bachman for the Hawkeye Gymnastics Club, also competed but failed to qualify for the senior team. Ron Nasti finished 37th, Jeff Dow finished 54th and Keith Cousin took 65th.

ties with the traditional sport.

THE GAME HAD its altercations, almost expected in any sport when bodies are crashing into one another. And it had a crowd favorite — Reggie Smith, Chicago's 29-year-old receiver, 25 yards back from North Carolina Central.

At 5-foot-6, Smith is the shortest player in the league, but his mite-sized frame shot through the Denver defense for receptions in the secondary, much to the delight of the crowd which chanted "Reg-gie!" "Reg-gie!"

Smith finished the game with 39 yards in four catches, including a 27-yard touchdown. Smith also grabbed an interception while playing on defense.

And the game had passing — plenty of it. In fact, Dynamite quarterback Stuart Mitchell exploded for 298 yards in the air while the team rushed only 13 times.

The Bruisers fared no better on the ground, banging out 12 carries for 27 yards. But when the final gun sounded, each team had combined to tally 68 attempted passes.

THUNDERING planes from Chicago's nearby O'Hare International Airport roared overhead as the eight-man squads pounded each other on the Horizon's padded artificial surface. The playing field measures 200 feet long and 85 feet wide, the size of a regulation National Hockey League rink.

And within the padded walls of the Horizon fans saw a game go down to the wire.

Denver took a 30-27 lead going into the fourth quarter and added to the lead on a 12-yard touchdown pass from Mitchell to Steve Trimble with nine minutes, 52 seconds remaining.

But leads don't last long on 50-yard fields, and the Bruisers mounted one of the many comebacks in the game. Mike Hold hit Ken Sanders for an 11-yard touchdown, and Mike-Mayer's foot closed the gap to two. Bruisers' Terry Hinn intercepted Mitchell 19 seconds later and dove in to give Chicago a 42-36 lead.

"My goal was to make a good first impression here today," Garner said after the game. "Iowa's style reminds me a lot of my high school and I'm very excited about playing here."

"BRIAN DID an outstanding job for us during his career at Washington," Garner's high school coach, Lyle Rusk, said of his star player who averaged 16 points and 8.9 assists per game. "He can move the ball up the court and is such a good judge of what is going on around him, that I think he will make a fine addition to the Hawkeyes."

Garner and Davis also showed their leaping ability, thrilling the crowd in the slam-dunk contest held between games.

Iowa's third recruit, Tubbs, didn't do quite as well as his future teammates, but his size is something which may help the Hawkeyes' attack in the future.

Iowa led Illinois for most of the second half in the last game of the night, running off 10 straight points to take a 59-49 lead.

But Illinois, who came from 25 points down against Minnesota, staged its comeback and tied the game at 70-70 with less than five minutes remaining. By the 1:30 mark, Illinois was in control and on its way to its second straight win.

he's being praised by them and has been picked by many as a first-round selection.

"I think Brad is a definite first-round pick," Gamble said. "He had a great year for us and deserves all the credit in the world."

Lohaus averaged 11.6 points per game and 8.1 rebounds while helping the Hawkeyes to a 27-4 regular-season record and an appearance in the final eight of the NCAA tournament. Gamble meanwhile averaged 11 points per contest and 4.7 rebounds and was the saving force in Iowa's come-from-behind victory over Oklahoma in the round of 16 in the NCAA tournament.

WHILE LOHAUS AND Gamble wait their turn in tomorrow's draft, players like David Robinson already have a handle on where they are headed.

Robinson, the expected first-round pick of the San Antonio Spurs, will spend his first two years out of school serving the Navy.

"He's a terrific athlete, got speed, quickness, jumping ability and he's 7-foot-1," Spurs General Manager Bob Bass told United Press International. "I don't see anything holding him back. We definitely are going to draft him."

rounds of my life. I was just concentrating on making a smooth stroke and, for some reason, the putts just kept going in. It was a big thrill to win the U.S. Open. Gee, I can't think of anything better than that."

Watson, who began the day a shot in front of Simpson and Keith Clearwater, shot a 70 Sunday and his 278 total brought him $75,000. Seve Ballesteros finished third, five shots behind the winner at 282, after a round of 71.

"I felt I had a good chance to win, but my putting was not as good as it is supposed to be," said Ballesteros, who lost in a sudden-death playoff at this year's Masters. "I guess putting is not my thing anymore. I didn't have my momentum like I've had in the past."

Tied for fourth at 283 were Bobby Wadkins, Curtis Strange, Bernhard Langer, Ben Crenshaw and Masters champion Larry Mize — who made a bid to become the first person in 15 years to win both the Masters and Open in the same season.

Mize and Langer were part of a five-way tie for the lead early in the day before slumping to 72s.

The group at 294 included Dan Pohl, Tommy Nakajima, Jim Thorpe, Lennie Clements and Mac O'Grady, who eagled the first hole and moved into a share of the lead as he played on the back nine.

Navratilova, Graf top Wimbledon field

WIMBLEDON, England (UPI) — Martina Navratilova begins her bid for a sixth consecutive Wimbledon title facing two daunting facts:

She has not won a tournament since November; West German teenager Steffi Graf is the premier women's player at the moment.

Navratilova came to Britain last week aiming to reassert her superiority on her favorite surface, grass. Instead, she ended a five-year, 69-match unbeaten streak on British grass courts, losing to Czechoslovakia's Helena Sukova in the final of a $200,000 tournament in Eastbourne.

"I blew it," Navratilova said. All six of her Eastbourne titles have been followed by Wimbledon victories. A victory there would have given an immeasurable boost to her attempt to match Helen Wills Moody's eight Wimbledon singles titles and become the first to win six in a row.

VICTORY WOULD also have gone some way toward diminishing the loss to Graf in the final of the clay-court French Open. It was Graf's first Grand Slam title, earned eight days before her 18th birthday. Navratilova double-faulted at match point, one error in a long line of mistakes once thought impossible from the world's No. 1 woman player.

"I've found enough ways to lose matches this year," she said. "I hope I've gone through them all."

Graf, ranked No. 2 in the world, has won her last eight tournaments, but grass is not her best surface and she has not played a grass-court tournament in two years. She missed last year's Wimbledon with a virus.

"MARTINA HAS TO BE the favorite without a doubt," said Navratilova's friend and doubles partner Pam Shriver. "If you win five times in a row, seven times in nine years, you have to be the favorite. Until we see how Graf performs on grass we won't know how dangerous she is."

Navratilova says her problem is not a decline in her game as much as an extended case of nerves.

"I believe I have a lot of good tennis in me," Navratilova said. "Although lately I've been falling apart at the drop of a hat. Simple shots that are there and I end up missing them."

"At this point it's all emotional. The shots are there. There are some physical problems, but not enough to affect me. There's not anything wrong with me technically."

"I'm not brimming with confidence, but I'm still the favorite. It's still grass, and playing Center Court at Wimbledon isn't like playing Center Court at Eastbourne."

Chris Evert, the No. 3 seed, also favored her old rival to take the crown.

"Graf will win on every surface, but whether she wins on grass this year remains to be seen," Evert said. "I'd still put my money on Martina."

Wilson's 'Red Truck' invites comparisons with Faulkner

By George Yatchisin
The Daily Iowan

The Red Truck by Rudy Wilson

FIRST novels almost always lead a reviewer to compare a novice writer to more established ones. Hence, publishers can collect "young Fitzgeralds" and "young Carvers" and watch them disappear after the first book and a story or two in Atlantic and Esquire. Such is fame.

Rudy Wilson's first novel, The Red Truck, also suggests such a critical easy out. Told in a sometimes difficult, often poetic first person, it's the baroque tale of two Mississippians hungry for a spirit they confuse with Jesus. It would be simple to tag Wilson a "new Faulkner" and move on. But he's more.

As with Faulkner, the telling of the story is more important than the story itself, because, after all, all stories can end only one way — in death. But unlike Faulkner, Wilson doesn't leave ugliness to the world's edges; he specifically sheds light on the black heart none of us can escape. The Red Truck has scenes of violence and passion shocking in their intensity and explicitness, scenes that seem all the more shocking because the characters seem so rarely fazed. Wilson's world is emotional because all emotion is denied.

INSTEAD, MAN turns savage, nothing more than a machine for killing and violent sex: early on, the book offers a gruesome wartime scene in which a marauder rapes a recently beheaded woman. This scene seems emblematic for the entire book — we crush and kill and control until there's nothing left, until we can only find salvation in a red truck or a circular stomach tattoo. Even love is denied. When the main characters Billy-Billy Jump and Tedianna Sayers finally discover each other, their all-consuming passion (featuring yellow paint and fellatio, among other things) leads to a return home, and an inexplicable death. Fate is the world's only constant.

However, the beauty of Wilson's writing softens the blows; he's so talented, the reader can't help but be cheered. For example, a particularly eloquent passage occurs when the young Billy is consoled by his father after getting beamed by a baseball: "I felt our arms sticking out, our elbows. And him out there, kneeling down, and my legs sprawled out like a doll's... He didn't know about what I wanted to ask him, about death, where people went, where they were now. So I told him a story. He watched my face when I talked. I was still crying some between some places."

And tell us a story Wilson does, one so rich in language and thought that it transcends any comparisons, even transcends the sometimes derogatory tag that Wilson wore in the Fiction Workshop here at the UI; he's far from writing slice-of-life stories about 30-year-old angst. Instead, he has created a world of mystery and pain and words, a world where language is the texture we can rub up against and feel some living, some life.

Forget that Devil, Jack. Fred Astaire is Angelic in

YOLANDA AND THE THIEF

Arthur Freed and director Vincente Minnelli teamed up for this opulent fairy-tale musical which, according to Rick Altman, is "one of the true lost gems of the musical world." Set in a mythical south-of-the-border country, Yolanda reflects Hollywood's fascination with Latin romance in the 1940s. Fred Astaire masquerades as the guardian angel of an heiress (Lucille Bremer) in order to pilfer a few of her millions. Bremer's real guardian angel interferes with the con man's plot and makes him realize his love for Bremer. The film's surrealistic sets and garish colors make this one of the most strikingly original musicals ever to emerge from Hollywood.

A polar expedition runs into insanity, death, and starvation. Filmed at great hazard in the Arctic Circle, and very much looking it, S.O.S. Iceberg is a strange and brutal film, quite unlike anything else ever made by Hollywood. Starring Leni Riefenstahl and Rod LaFocque

Mädchen in Uniform

Superb performances grace this sensitively filmed relationship between a teacher and a pupil whose unhappiness under the strict Prussian discipline of the fashionable girls school drives her to suicide. As Pauline Kael notes, "the controversy has never completely subsided... the teacher is not viewed as decadent or even naughty, and yet she seems unmistakably lesbian. The film is already a legend.
