Smiley charged on 5 assault counts

By John Gilardi and Phil Thomas
The Daily Iowan

Iowa football player Keaton Smiley will make an appearance for arraignment at 8:30 a.m. Friday in Johnson County District Court after five charges were filed against him in connection with two alleged assaults, according to court documents.

Five counts — one felony, one aggravated misdemeanor and three serious misdemeanor charges — were filed against the UI sophomore by Johnson County Attorney J. Patrick White in connection with two separate incidents, according to court records.

FOUR CHARGES WERE filed after Smiley allegedly assaulted UI student Cheryl Zemaitis on two separate occasions, while one charge was filed in connection with an assault on UI junior Jennifer Lee.

Smiley was arrested by Iowa City Police June 9 at his apartment at 530 S. Clinton St. after allegedly beating and threatening Zemaitis with a knife. Zemaitis was treated at UI Hospitals for a ruptured eardrum, a cut on one hand from the knife, lacerations, bruises and swelling over the left eye, according to court records.

Lee said Thursday she was assaulted by Smiley at The Fieldhouse, 111 E. College St., May 17, 1986. Lee suffered a broken nose in the incident, according to court documents.

Smiley made his initial appearance in Johnson County District Court June 10 and was originally held on $10,000 bond. The following day Smiley was released to the custody of the Sixth Judicial District Department of Corrections and was confined to travel within Johnson County, according to court records.

IN THE TRIAL information, Smiley was charged with assault with the intent to commit sexual abuse in the first count in connection with the June 9 incident. The charge, a Class C felony, is a forceable felony and, if convicted, Smiley would face a mandatory prison term.

Also stemming from the incident at the apartment were three additional counts — aggravated assault, false imprisonment and assault causing injury.

The aggravated assault charge is an aggravated misdemeanor and is punishable by up to two years in prison and/or a $5,000 fine. The false imprisonment and assault causing injury charges are serious misdemeanors, which are punishable by up to one year in prison and/or a $1,000 fine.

Court documents indicate that on the aggravated assault charge, Smiley on June 9 allegedly beat Zemaitis and caused "bruises to her face, eyes, arms, back and legs and causing bleeding from her nose."

COURT RECORDS ALSO indicate that Smiley "held a kitchen paring knife forcibly near and against her and waved the knife, capable of inflicting death, so as to indicate intent to inflict death or serious injury" in connection with the aggravated assault charge.

The false imprisonment charge stated that Smiley allegedly "locked the door to his apartment ... and forcibly and by threats of violence, substantially restricted" Zemaitis from leaving the apartment on June 9, according to the trial information. The trial information stated that Smiley on a separate occasion kicked Zemaitis "repeatedly on her legs causing multiple bruises and abrasions." That incident occurred Oct. 27, 1986.

The fifth count reflected information given to Iowa City Police on May 17, 1986, but was not brought to the attention of the county attorney until last week. Iowa City Police said the case was "accidentally put aside" during a busy night and that the case apparently "fell through the cracks."

Iowa athletic department officials said they would not comment on the situation until Coach Hayden Fry returned to Iowa City.

Huge bee swarm injures 5 in attack

MUNFORDVILLE, Ky. (UPI) — A gigantic swarm of bees went "berserk" when their hive was upset and attacked a farmhouse, forcing authorities to send in a rescue helicopter and leaving five people hospitalized.

Volunteer Fire Chief Bobby Jagers, who was stung at least 150 times, said from his hospital bed Monday that when he arrived at the Wilson farm Sunday with three members of his department a huge cloud of bees was swarming around the house.

"This was unreal," Jagers said. "I've seen them swarm and go from one hive to another and make a small ball of bees ... but these were solid for 500 feet each way."

Jagers said Kenneth Pierce, who had been helping apiarist Euel Wilson move a hive when it fell over, had taken refuge in the basement. Wilson, who owns the bees, "left at a rapid pace" and escaped unharmed, Jagers said.

PIERCE TRIED TO get into the farmhouse, Jagers said, "but they wouldn't let him in, so he went into the basement. They wouldn't let me in either. They didn't want to get stung."

"There were bees so thick you couldn't hardly see through them," he said. "Every time you got out of a vehicle, you got covered."

Leslie Wilson, 74, Euel Wilson's mother, said: "It was awful. I didn't let them into the house because it was covered up with bees. We got the guys in the basement and did everything we could for them and called an ambulance."

Some of the bees, she said, were still there Monday, "swarming around my kitchen door."

Hart County Sheriff Charles Lasenby said that when the hive fell over, the bees "went absolutely berserk. They attacked anything and everything."

Zoning panel OKs proposal for waste plant

By Craig Sterrett
The Daily Iowan

The Johnson County Zoning Commission approved 3-1 Iowa City's application to build a new waste treatment plant on the city's south side.

The application will now be sent to the Johnson County Board of Supervisors for approval or denial at its July 9 meeting.

The application, which rezoned 51.5 acres 1 mile south of Iowa City from rural to light industrial, was passed with the condition that the access road for the plant come in from the north, possibly an extension of Sycamore Street, as opposed to using a private lane called Nursery Road, which runs between Pleasant Valley Golf Course and Pleasant Valley Orchards & Nursery Inc.

The condition was made in response to concern from citizens and zoning commission members over the location of the access road for the plant. Two residents of Nursery Road, Arie Kroeze and Kent Braverman, had voiced concern in past meetings over having added traffic and trucks filled with sludge traveling on the private gravel lane.

"NOBODY HERE does not want this site to be built," Zoning Commission Chairman Robert Saunders said. But he stressed the point that the private lane should not be used as the access for the plant. "I certainly would not want 1,600 trucks a year coming down my driveway."

Saunders added that Nursery Road would be a poor choice for an access road even without residents' complaints. "The sight lines from at the intersection of Nursery Road and Sand Road are not good," he said.

Residents also expressed concern over the dewatering process of sludge that would take place at the plant. Some of the residents expressed concern that their wells would dry up as a result of the process.

But zoning commission members said residents could receive compensation in the event of a well drying up.

"THERE IS A process if a well goes dry the person may file with the Iowa Department of Natural Resources and the person may receive compensation," Zoning Commission Member Steve Lacina said.

Concern was also expressed by some residents that the odors caused by the plant would be unavoidable.

'Nuns' have irreverent habit

Inside

By Anne Kevlin
The Daily Iowan

It is an unusual order of nuns, dedicated to "expiration of stigmatic guilt and the promulgation of universal joy."

They wear nuns' habits, originally donated by nuns from a Cedar Rapids convent who thought they would be used as costumes in the play "The Sound of Music."

But, as these nuns confess, their activities are less than reverent. Performing a pom-pom routine in their habits to the "Iowa Fight Song" is just one example of the outrageousness of The Sisters of Perpetual Indulgence.

The "Sisters" will be performing Friday evening at 7:30 in Macbride Auditorium, as part of this year's Lesbian/Gay Pride Week.

ORIGINALLY FORMED in Iowa City in 1976, The Sisters of Perpetual Indulgence is a performance group comprised of gay, straight and bisexual men and women who use crazy antics to address serious issues. The primary purpose of the group, now based in San Francisco, is to raise funds for non-profit community organizations, according to founder and president Ken Busche, a.k.a. Sister Vicious Power-Hungry Bitch.

"It's the most creative organization I've ever experienced,"

Busche said.

The group directs most of its efforts to the gay community, Busche said, but other interests and causes get attention, and money, from the Sisters as well.

Beneficiaries of the group's fund-raising activities have included the AIDS Foundation, the Shanti Project and Bay Area Lawyers for Individual Rights. Group members perform in hospitals and parades, promoting AIDS funding and opposing nuclear power. Lyndon LaRouche, Jerry Falwell, Phyllis Schlafly and the Pope have all been the brunt of criticism by the Sisters.

THE SISTERS of Perpetual

Indulgence raise money by performing for nominal admission fees, charging membership dues and selling souvenirs — novelty pins and post-cards.

One of the most popular souvenir items, Busche said, are what the Sisters call Holy Relics. When a San Francisco bathhouse burned to the ground, much to the dismay of its primarily gay clientele, the Sisters bottled the remaining ashes and sold them.

Reaction to the Sisters of Perpetual Indulgence varies, according to member Joanna Walner, a.k.a. Sister Blanche DeRoote — so-named because she dyes her hair. The group

Suicide ruled in death

New program aids jobless

WASHINGTON — Workers slated to be laid off by Harnischfeger Corp. in Cedar Rapids and J.I. Case Co. in Davenport will receive job-placement assistance by testing a Canadian employment-search program, Rep. Tom Tauke, R-Iowa, said Monday.

Tauke said the program uses labor-management committees to foster re-employment before or after workers lose their jobs due to plant closings or major layoffs.

The program is expected to help about 100 Harnischfeger workers and about 700 Case workers scheduled to be laid off this summer, Tauke said.

Campaign bill stalls

DES MOINES — Iowans should demand Sen. Robert Dole, R-Kan., end a filibuster on a federal elections bill limiting campaign contributions, the leader of an effort to reform Iowa's election laws said Monday.

State Rep. Rod Halvorson, D-Fort Dodge, said the proposed limits on donations from political action committees are necessary to curb the governmental influence of wealthy special interest groups.

The bill would place a ceiling on campaign contributions from political action committees and establish voluntary state-by-state limits on a candidate's total spending.

Court takes farm case

WASHINGTON — The Supreme Court agreed Monday to decide if a farmer's experience and labor can be considered capital in bankruptcy proceedings, a question that could make it easier for debt-ridden farmers to keep their land.

The case has far-reaching repercussions for farmers facing Chapter 11 bankruptcy proceedings. At issue is whether bankruptcy courts may devise reorganization plans allowing farmers to stay on the land, even if their liabilities greatly exceed their assets.

95-year-old under seige

DUBUQUE — A 95-year-old armed man held Dubuque police at bay for more than 15 hours Monday, police said. The man, who police declined to identify, barricaded himself inside his home with a semi-automatic revolver and a knife just before midnight Sunday night.

Police tried to make contact throughout the night, throwing in a canister of tear gas at about 5 a.m. The gas apparently had no effect on the man, who shortly afterwards fired two shots from his gun.

Police tried another dose of tear gas and finally ended up waiting it out until 3 p.m. when they broke into the house and overtook the man without a struggle. Police said no one was injured.

Merchants unhappy with sports campers' conduct

By Scott Hauser
The Daily Iowan

Harrassment of customers and shoplifting are the alleged result of a Friday night visit by Iowa sports camp program participants, merchants in the Old Capitol Center said Monday.

Jeff Arnell, manager of General Nutrition Center, said about 100 of the "unsupervised" campers roamed in packs of 10-12 throughout the mall Friday night, insulting customers and merchants and stealing merchandise.

Arnell said about $100 in merchandise, including Gold's Gym tank tops and a bottle of amino acids, was stolen by the youths from his store Friday night as they moved in and out of the store.

"At first we were nice and wanted to know where they were from," he said. "And they said they were from the wrestling camp."

ARNELL SAID HE

reported the trouble to Old Capitol Center security, but said no action was taken.

Mall officials declined comment Monday afternoon.

Arnell said he has not pressed charges against anyone because there were too many youths for him to watch continually.

UI Director of Recreational Services Harry Ostrander said he had not heard reports of disruptive behavior, but said problems occasionally arise because of the large number of sports campers.

He said about 4,000 people attend the sports camps during the summer.

"When we bring that many people in — and they come from all over the country, from all 50 states — we always have a few problems," he said.

He said the campers are not allowed to go out without supervision.

MARK JOHNSON, Iowa assistant wrestling coach and supervisor of the group

Friday, said the group was not disruptive.

"I was down there and I didn't get any evidence of that," he said. "There were about 1,000 people down there; we had about 100 to 150 people there."

He said only Arnell was displeased with the group.

"The mall people were not upset," he said.

Arnell said Johnson acted unconcerned about the reports.

Other merchants said they also had trouble with the campers.

Emmett Frazer, manager of Campus Theatres, said his employees told him of an unruly and obnoxious group of campers both outside and inside the theatres.

He said he wasn't present Friday evening, but was told the group was making "wisecracks" and insulting people.

"We had an R-rated movie," he said. "They were very nasty to the cashiers trying to ask them for their IDs."

The lease of one of the 12 tenants at the UI's Technology Innovation Center has been renewed by the state Board of Regents, effective July 1.

The tenant is Functional Home Designers, a specialist in consulting services for the design, construction and furnishing of new and existing homes or workplaces for persons of widely differing age levels and physical abilities.

By working with architects, builders, public planners and private homeowners, Functional Home Designers serves the needs of individuals advancing in age or having physical disabilities who wish to remain living and working independently.

The regents approved the lease renewal at their meeting last week in Cedar Falls.

The UI Technology Innovation Center is designed to help Iowa's economic development by helping out selected beginning companies by providing office space and funding.

Soviet scientists visit UI for symposium

The UI College of Engineering will have a role in international diplomacy Oct. 10-17, 1987, when it hosts a delegation of 12 leading Soviet scientists at an environmental symposium.

Titled "Fate of Pesticides and Chemicals in the Environment," the symposium will be an unusual meeting for both the United States and the Soviet Union, UI Professor and Chair of the UI Department of Civil and Environmental Engineering Jerald Schnoor said.

The symposium is part of "Project 12.03-31," a program of joint symposiums between the United States and the Soviet Union which was a direct result of negotiations between the two nations in the early 1970s.

Schnoor said this is the first time the Soviets have agreed to participate in an environmental symposium held in the United States under this program, having preferred to send one or two scientists to U.S. laboratories for extended periods of time.

Two other project symposiums have been held in the Soviet Union.

UI establishes chair to honor former dean

The UI has announced the establishment of the Hunter Rouse Chair in Hydraulics, the latest endowed chair to be set up by gifts to the $150 million Iowa Endowment 2000 Campaign.

The Hunter Rouse Chair was created to honor Hunter Rouse, a UI emeritus professor of engineering who served as director of the UI Institute of Hydraulics from 1942 to 1966, and as dean of the College of Engineering from 1966 until 1972.

Business climate strong despite closings

By John Bartenhagen
The Daily Iowan

Two downtown Iowa City businesses, Serpico's Pizza and The Video Exchange, both formerly of the 10 block of S. Clinton St., recently closed after being in business only a short time, a phenomenon some local businessmen say is not new to the city.

The owner of both buildings previously occupied by the businesses, Haywood Belle, said the prior owners did not necessarily leave due to slow business, but said he did not know the specific reasons.

"I don't know how common this is, but it does happen," he said.

Duane Noser, owner of Ewers Men's Store, 28 S. Clinton St., said the temporary vacancies may have some effect on downtown businesses.

"CLINTON STREET is probably the top location in Iowa City," he said. "But now there are two more empty buildings and you hate to see that."

Paul Heath, associate director of the UI College of Business Small Business Development Center, said businesses close for a variety of reasons.

"People may get tired of the effort involved, they may have inadequate working capital or the business might not be profitable," he said. "And sometimes, the owners perceive a better opportunity elsewhere — one that would maximize their investment."

But the strength of the local business economy should negate any effects the short-term vacancies might have, Heath said.

"Of course it's better if the buildings are full," he said. "But business conditions in Iowa City and Cedar Rapids are fairly good. We've had more successful business come through our office than in previous years."

IN THE PAST YEAR, the Small Business Development Center has counseled more than 600 clients interested in improving existing businesses or beginning new ones, Heath said.

Noser said people are often not prepared to meet the challenges of opening a business.

"I think they have to be more selective in what they choose to go into," he said. "You have to have a business that people are interested in and you can't do that by measuring the traffic outside. It's the traffic inside that counts."

But Gary Lindquist, owner of Cards Et Cetera, Ltd., in the Old Capitol Center, said buildings in the downtown area do not stay vacant long.

"For the most part, Iowa City has no problem leasing to retailers," he said. "It drives the rent way up, but I'm glad we have that problem."

Lindquist added the business climate in Iowa City, although highly competitive, is a healthy one.

"YOU NEED A good balance of businesses that compliment each other and draw people to them," he said. "A Hallmark store out in the middle of nowhere would close before it opened."

Belle said both owners sold their leases before leaving and the buildings will be occupied in about one week by a hair salon and a fast-food restaurant.

The former proprietors of both businesses have moved out of state and were unavailable for comment Monday.

Denial of pregnancy leads to confusion, desperation

By Lisa Legge
The Daily Iowan

For some women, news of an unwanted pregnancy comes down to a question of whether or not to keep the baby. Some women choose to completely deny the pregnancy until the baby is born.

"When women come here who are late in the pregnancy, some of them are really young and not even dealing with the pregnancy," Gayle Sand, associate director of the Emma Goldman Clinic for Women, 227 N. Dubuque St., said. "Sometimes women find themselves pregnant and they have a panic reaction," said Larry Breheny, director of Catholic Social Services in Des Moines. "They avoid the issue until the last minute and they find themselves in a real corner."

Both pro-life and pro-choice agencies agree that many times denial of a pregnancy can end in tragedy.

An Independence, Iowa, man was charged Wednesday with knowingly disposing of a body without a permit, according to media reports. He had allegedly set fire to the body of his sister's newborn in an effort to dispose of the body; it was unknown if the baby was alive at the time.

Since the beginning of the year, the bodies of five other newborns have been disposed of improperly, one of which lived.

In many of these situations the young mothers are completely alone, pregnancy counselors said.

"It appears all these girls are feeling alone and isolated with their problem," Breheny said.

Said Sand: "Sometimes not even friends or relatives knew about the pregnancy. So they're denying it to them as well. They're probably real scared."

Sand said when women come to the clinic late in their pregnancies, the counselors try to help them think realistically.

"WE DO REALITY thinking with them, telling them they need to carry the pregnancy to term," she said. The clinic then discusses the various options open to the expectant mothers, such as adoption and keeping the baby.

James Yeast, associate director of Catholic Charities of Dubuque, gave an example of a woman who came to the agency late in her pregnancy.

"She was alone," Yeast said. "She had no family nearby and her boyfriend had kicked her out of the house.

"We tried to get her in touch with her family and she decided to keep the baby," Yeast said.

Many women who come to adoption centers late in their pregnancies to discuss options decide to keep the baby after all, said Shirley Kredit, office coordinator at Bethany Christian Services, an adoption service in Pella, Iowa.

"APPROXIMATELY 90 percent of the expectant mothers end up deciding to keep their babies," she said. "They get a lot of pressure from their friends and peers who say, 'You're not going to give up your own baby, are you?'"

Breheny said more needs to be learned about women who, in desperation, dispose of their children when they are born.

"It would be interesting if the court system would let agencies know what these six individual situations were and what the agencies could have done for them," he said. "It would help to get some feedback on how these young women got into the predicament."

"It would give us a better idea where to start," he said.

Campus panel reviews plans

By Shawn Plank
The Daily Iowan

A $2.2 million plan to provide additional specialized laboratory space for the UI College of Engineering was reviewed by the Campus Planning Committee Monday.

The plan calls for remodeling and expanding the old Breese's Auto Parts building, 324 S. Madison St., to provide space for labs, offices and a conference room. The building could be in full operation as early as January 1989, UI Facilities and Planning Director Richard Gibson said.

The building would house an area for environmental research laboratories, headed by UI Civil and Environmental Engineering Chair Jerald Schnoor. It would also provide space for the Computer-Aided Engineering Lab, and some generic lab space, UI Senior Architect Stephen Buckman said. The state Board of Regents approved purchasing the Breese property for $515,000 at its April meeting in Vinton, Iowa. The UI will acquire the property after leasing it for five years. Plans call for expanding the building, located east of the UI Physical Plant offices, from its current 16,000 square feet to about 22,000 square feet.

THE BUILDING would be expanded on the north and west sides and extensive exterior work and landscaping would also be done. Buckman said the building could be expanded as demands arose.

A parking lot located north of the expanded facility will hold 22 cars, Buckman said. He estimated about 50 cars are able to park in the old Breese lot.

Buckman said the plan has been reviewed by city planning and zoning officials and reported, "Everyone is excited about what is happening."

The two-story building will be wheelchair-accessible and will include an elevator and a computer room for graduate students. The Des Moines architectural firm of Brooks, Borg and Skiles is in charge of the remodeling design.

The planning committee also reviewed plans to landscape the areas in front of Burge and Daum residence halls along Clinton Street.

THE PLAN CALLS for elimination of grassy space in front of the halls, which Gibson said is impossible to maintain and because of heavy traffic, often turns into mud.

Concrete steps leading to the curb would replace the grassy area. Planters would be built along the east side of each building and trees would be planted between the building and the street.

Nanny life: More than laundry

By Lisa Legge
The Daily Iowan

This past spring many UI students responded to advertisements for nannies. Responsibilities for those taking the summer jobs usually include caring for two or three children and light housekeeping duties.

But the job is not all laundry and kid.

According to nanny agencies and former nannies, the job has a social aspect as well.

"We don't just put people together," Muriel Lewis, co-owner of Nannys East in Livingston, N.J., said. "We have a whole nanny network, so when a girl comes out we give her the names of other nannies in her area."

The agency sponsors meetings for the nannies to attend, where they offer tips on discipline, safety and so on, as well as giving the nannies an opportunity to get together. "Then they meet on their own, too," she said.

"WE SPONSOR social activities like beach parties and bowling parties," Lewis said.

"It gives the nannies opportunities to meet other nannies, to network and to express concerns openly."

Lewis said Midwesterners are often very enthusiastic about being placed in the East.

"They are anxious to be nannies here," Lewis said. "For them it's an opportunity to see another part of the country and experience another culture."

But experiencing another culture may not always be pleasant. Sometimes homesickness sets in, agency representatives say.

"We were recognizing that homesickness is really a factor," Lewis said. "It's important for the nannies to have support because the transition is really a big one for them."

The support systems facilitate communication between nannies and their families, as well as between more experienced nannies and those new on the job.

"NOW WE'RE TRYING to establish a volunteer buddy system," Lewis said. "Nannies who have been here two months or more will be assigned a buddy. Kind of like Alcoholics Anonymous — they'll have someone that's there for them."

UI senior Michelle McLaughlin was a nanny in Bronxville, N.Y., last summer. "It would've been really boring if I wouldn't have known anyone," she said, adding that because the majority of families in her area had nannies, there were plenty nearby.

UI junior Brian Schaeffer spent last summer in Philadelphia as a nanny. He didn't get his job through an agency, but through a friend who was already a nanny there and knew other nannies.

"There were quite a few teenagers out there working as nannies," Schaeffer said. "Plus we got to know the people that lived there from parties and stuff."

Lewis said her firm encourages its nannies to organize playgroups among themselves. "It's a chance for the kids and the nannies to socialize," she said.

Nannies get their share of time off to socialize, Lewis said, usually getting weekends and evenings free.

Phase III Committee set to recommend funds dispersal

By Craig Sterrett
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa City Community School District Phase III Committee will make its preliminary report on recommended distribution of Phase III funds to the district Board of Directors at the board meeting tonight.

The committee last week settled on the final wording of the 41-page report outlining how $850,000 in state funding, for which the district qualifies, should be distributed.

The 11-member committee comprised of teachers, administrators and community representatives began deliberations over the bill May 12. Committee members stressed their report was not a final solution, but rather a guideline of recommendations to the school board which must submit their final report to the state Department of Education by Jan. 1, 1988.

"THE PLAN NOW will be developed," said Sally Staley, a community representative. "The board can either accept, modify or reject the proposal."

Phase III of House File 499, which was passed June 9, is intended to "enhance the quality and effectiveness of teachers." Teacher excellence will be "promoted through the development of performance-based pay plans and supplemental pay plans," according to the bill.

In their report, the committee recommends the board of education consider and adopt four categories or goals by which to distribute the funds. In the category of "professional growth opportunities," funds would be provided for in-service meetings, professional conferences and graduate courses.

Under "job enlargement duties," money may be provided for additional responsibilities assigned to a teacher within the contract day. These would include implementation of secondary department heads and elementary team leader concept and released time for coordination and articulation of curriculum.

MONEY WOULD ALSO be provided to those who take on "extended contract duties" or duties which extend beyond the contract day, such as an expanded summer curriculum writing program, the report stated.

Some of the Phase III funds would be set aside to award teachers for outstanding performance and to give the teachers added incentive, according to the report.

Superintendent David Cronin praised the committee for completing the report, saying while other districts have been fumbling along, the committee managed to put together a good report ahead of schedule.

"I think it is a very good report," Cronin said. "It is right on target and I would be surprised if the board doesn't use it as a guideline."

Fred Astaire

Dance legend Astaire dies from pneumonia

By Vernon Scott
 United Press International

FRED Astaire, the dapper dancer whose effortless grace and partnership with Ginger Rogers made him a Hollywood legend, died Monday from pneumonia. He was 88.

Astaire died at 4:25 a.m. at Century City Hospital.

Slim and urbane, Astaire was often cast as a good-hearted playboy and looked perfectly at home gliding down a seemingly endless series of stairs in full formal regalia, his flashing feet drumming a catchy tattoo as he swung Rogers or another partner, symbolically sweeping her off her feet.

Astaire's co-stars included many of the reigning queens of Hollywood for half a century but he is best remembered for his dancing partnership with Rogers in a series of musicals that brightened the Depression and World War II years, beginning with Flying Down to Rio in 1933.

ASTAIRE AND ROGERS, who had supporting roles, stole the picture and were teamed again in Roberta, Top Hat, Follow the Fleet, Swing Time, Shall We Dance and Carefree, finishing the string with The Barkleys of Broadway in 1948.

His leading ladies included Eleanor Powell, Rita Hayworth, Betty Hutton, Judy Garland, Leslie Caron, Vera-Ellen, Audrey Hepburn and Cyd Charisse.

Gene Kelly, Hollywood's other great dancing leading man, admired Astaire and once described them as a "fraternity of two." He said their styles were as different as those of Marlon Brando and Cary Grant.

"My style is strong, wide open,

Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers dance their way through the 1936 film Swing Time. The dancing duo starred in nearly 10 films.

bravura," Kelly once told an interviewer. "His is intimate, cool, easy. Mine is a plebeian style, his is an aristocratic one."

AS ASTAIRE reached his 50s, he moved smoothly from dancing to dramatic roles, usually playing suave, charming types, in films such as On the Beach and The Notorious Landlady. He was nominated for an Oscar as best supporting actor for his performance in Tower of Inferno, the disaster epic.

"I like straight dramatic roles," he said after hanging up his dancing shoes at the age of 69. "I don't have to worry about slippery stages, long dance rehearsals and choreography. Dancing is an athletic career and I don't want to do it all my life any more than Willie Mays wants to spend the rest of his life chasing fly balls. At my age, I don't want to disappoint anyone, including myself."

In 1972 Astaire co-starred as a dapper crook in the TV series "It Takes a Thief" with his friend Robert Wagner and at the age of 81 was appearing in the TV space opera "Battlestar Galactica."

WHEN ASTAIRE received the American Film Institute's 1981 Life Achievement award, the great Russian ballet dancer Mikhail Baryshnikov commented that Astaire gave "dancers complexes because his perfection is absolute. When I first saw him I was discouraged, because I believed everyone in America was that good."

"I didn't know I was that good, really," Astaire told the audience after a screening of many of his best moments. "At the time I used to beat the floor to a pulp and then looked at the film and it didn't seem as though I was moving at all."

In 1958 he starred in the one-hour "An Evening with Fred Astaire," which won the highest television rating in history at the time and garnered nine Emmy awards.

His illustrious career made an often-told Hollywood joke of the judgment scribbled down by the film executive who saw his first screen test in 1932: "No screen personality. Can't sing. Can't act. Can dance a little."

SOMETIMES MISTAKEN for an Englishman, Astaire was born in Omaha, Neb., on May 10, 1899, to a haberdashery salesman. He and his sister Adele, 18 months his senior, displayed early talents in kiddie shows and their mother took them to New York, determined to get them into show business. They later became popular on Broadway in the 1920s in such stage hits as Lady Be Good and George Gershwin's Funny Face. It was his solo appearance in Broadway's The Gay Divorcee that brought him to the attention of Hollywood.

Astaire was married in the 1940s to the former Phyllis Potter who died in 1954. They had two children, Fred Jr. and Ava.

"I don't have a particular love for my accomplishments as a dancer," he told an interviewer when he was older. "I fact, I feel I could have done a good deal better as both a dancer and with my music."

Much of the world disagreed.

UI festival salutes Coward

Humorous 'Hay Fever' opens summer jubilee

By Hoyt Olsen
 The Daily Iowan

SOMEWHERE in every Noel Coward play, there is a character patterned on Noel Coward. In Present Laughter, one of the plays being presented during University Theatres' Noel Coward Festival this summer, the Coward figure is Gary Essendine, a popular, middle-aged actor who regards his place in history as inconsequential:

"I don't give a hoot about posterity. Why should I worry about what people think of me when I'm dead as a doornail anyway? My worst defect is that I'm apt to worry too much about what people think of me when I'm alive."

What people thought of him varied considerably during Coward's lifetime. Often enough, their impressions were dead wrong.

Coward was born just before Christmas 1899 and was therefore christened Noel. His father was a piano salesman and his mother became a full-time stage mother, establishing herself as a dominant influence over Coward until her death.

SHE HAD COWARD on stage at age 10, earning 1½ guineas for the role of Prince Mussel in The Goldfish. Soon he was a full-time professional, working his way through juvenile roles in Peter Pan and other entertainments, earning his own dressing room by age 17.

Coward's rise became even more meteoric when he turned to writing. At age 25, his play The Vortex was a transatlantic hit; Coward was the author, director and male lead in the role of a drug addict. "Civilization makes rottenness so much easier," his character observes.

The utterances of Coward characters are invariably wonderful. Their lives, if not always wonderful, are at least usually upper crust, sparkling lives that caused people to flock to Coward plays during the Jazz Age of the 1920s and 1930s. While still in his mid-20s, Coward had five hits running simultaneously in London theaters. Coward was capable of mercurial speed in his composition: Blithe Spirit, perhaps his best-known play, was written in five days.

THERE IS A tendency sometimes to think of Coward's plays as all of one fabric: witty, sophisticated, urbane and devoid of substance.

Not so. "Coward wrote all kinds of plays," Eric Forsythe, the director of University Theatres' Summer Rep '87, said recently. "The three productions that we're doing in Mable show a double range. They move from light farce (Hay Fever) to high comedy (Present Laughter) to more dramatic material in Song at Twilight. They also show a range in terms of time: Hay Fever was one of his most popular early comedies, Present Laughter was written in the late '30s and Song at Twilight in the mid-60s," Forsythe added.

"A great deal of the fun is that Coward is able to capture the nuance of his own time period and circle of friends. He writes about people he knows. In the early plays, he's writing primarily about young people; in Present Laughter the concern is middle age, people who wish they were younger and are getting older and have to come to terms with that. His later plays are about older people dealing with age, being retired, looking back — even the title, Song at Twilight, is so apropos to that issue," Forsythe said.

COSMO CATALANO, the director of Hay Fever, considers Coward's technical craftsmanship to be a primary cause of revived interest in Coward's work. "One of the things I had to tell my cast is, 'It's absolutely important that we do not mess about with the lines.' They need to be said exactly as they were written because they are structured with an attitude about how a dialogue works on the stage which is not influenced at all by film."

"The first part of the line is a signal that I'm talking; the content is at the end. And you have to move that way, play on the rhythm of those lines, because they're so well done (that the actor cannot afford to stray)," Catalano said.

But tastes change and Coward's plays lost favor with the public after World War II. So Coward became a Las Vegas entertainer, playing and singing his own witty compositions, packing in the audience and earning $40,000 a week.

He wrote 281 songs during his lifetime — despite never having learned to read music — in addition to 27 plays, a novel and three autobiographical works.

INTEREST IN Coward's plays grew again during the 1960s, sparked by a London revival of Hay Fever directed by Coward himself, and by his play Song at Twilight, about an aging writer who has spent a lifetime concealing his homosexuality.

In addition to the three featured Mable plays, the Festival also includes Oh Coward, a cabaret-style tribute comprised of Coward songs and skits; readings of Vortex and selections from Tonight at 8:30; the film Blithe Spirit; and a guest lecture.

The Festival opens this Friday, June 26, with Hay Fever, and runs to July 25. For information on tickets and showtimes, call the Haneber box office at 335-6255.

Reagan assails Democrats on budget

MELBOURNE, Fla. — President Ronald Reagan opened a tough partisan campaign against Democratic budget and tax programs Monday, vowing that "any tax bill that makes it into the Oval Office won't make it out alive."

Senate and House, both controlled by Democrats, are expected to approve a $1 trillion federal budget resolution this week calling for $65 billion in higher taxes over the next three years.

"The tax and spend crew might as well just face the fact — there isn't going to be any tax hike in this administration," the president said.

White House strategists believe that a hard line on budget issues will enable the president to recapture the image of decisiveness and determination that may have been dissipated by the continuing concern over the Iran-Contra scandal.

Heroin smugglers sentenced 45 years

NEW YORK — Five of the top defendants in the "pizza connection" heroin smuggling trial were sentenced Monday to up to 45 years in prison, fined a total $2.5 million and ordered to pay $2 million in unprecedented restitution to drug victims.

Sentencing of 16 of the 18 men convicted March 2 in the 17-month trial began in U.S. District Court in Manhattan before Judge Pierre Leval.

The defendants were convicted of operating a drug trafficking ring that imported narcotics into the United States from Sicily and distributed them in East Coast and Midwestern cities using pizza parlors as fronts.

Court allows testimony after hypnosis

WASHINGTON — The Supreme Court ruled 5-4 Monday that states cannot bar the use of hypnosis of criminal defendants in court cases even if the controversial method for enhancing memory has convinced a defendant of his or her innocence.

Writing for the majority, Justice Harry Blackmun said in a case from Arkansas that people accused of a crime have a constitutional right to testify in their own behalf — and that hypnotically refreshed recollections are encompassed in that right.

Chief Justice William Rehnquist, in dissent, said there is no consensus on the reliability of such testimony and said the court's imposition of a rule at this point is premature.

Falwell calls Belli 'expert at theatrics'

TEGA CAY, S.C. — The Rev. Jerry Falwell scoffed Monday at celebrity lawyer Melvin Belli, saying the PTL ministry needed a miracle, not Pat Boone, and giving it back to Jim Bakker would be "like handing the asylum over to the inmates."

"Mr. Belli is obviously an outstanding attorney," Falwell said. "He's an expert at theatrics and clearly that is what we had" when Belli suggested Boone be brought in to run PTL and that if Falwell only knew Bakker's side of the story, he would be glad to let the deposed founder take over again.

Bakker hired Belli to help him wrest control of PTL away from Falwell, to whom he handed it over when he resigned in disgrace in March. Belli returned to California earlier Monday, saying Falwell ought to agree to appoint singer Pat Boone, once a familiar figure on PTL television programs, as an interim caretaker for the beleaguered ministry.

Judge orders Deaver to stand trial

WASHINGTON — A federal judge ordered ex-White House aide Michael Deaver to stand trial on perjury charges next month, despite word from his attorneys they will ask the Supreme Court Monday to decide if his independent counsel is operating constitutionally.

Deaver's attorney, Herbert Miller, told U.S. District Judge Thomas Jackson that he would file their case with the justices later in the day, challenging last week's rejection of the constitutional question by the U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia.

Deaver is facing trial on a five-count indictment for lying about his private lobbying work. The appeals panel refused Deaver's request that the indictment be dismissed because the 1978 Ethics in Government Act — under which special prosecutor Whitney North Seymour was appointed — is unconstitutional.

Helicopter training ends in tragedy

FORT HOOD, Texas — A helicopter crashed Monday at Fort Hood's Central Texas training ground, killing nine people, a base spokesman said.

Circumstances and the cause of the crash were not immediately available, but no other aircraft were involved, Maj. George Creach said.

He said the crash of the UH-1 Huey helicopter occurred before 9 a.m. about 1 1/4 miles inside Fort Hood's western boundary. He did not know if there were any survivors aboard the helicopter.

Creach said the helicopter's crew members were from the 53rd Engineer Group from Oklahoma City and they were participating in a routine training exercise in support of the 49th Armored Division of the Texas National Guard's summer exercises June 13-29.

W. Germans won't extradite Hamadei

BONN, West Germany — West German government sources confirmed Monday that Bonn plans to reject a 5-month-old U.S. request to extradite an accused Lebanese terrorist, Mohammed Ali Hamadei, and that the suspect instead will be tried in this country for murder, hijacking and plotting to cause an explosion.

Hamadei allegedly was one of the terrorists who staged the June 1985 hijacking of a TWA jet airliner. U.S. Navy div. Robert D. Stethem of Waldorf, Md., who was one of the passengers, was killed during the hijacking.

Commission to investigate Waldheim

VIENNA — Austria named a historian Monday to head a commission to investigate whether President Kurt Waldheim was involved in Nazi war crimes in the government's first official effort to clear up the controversy.

Rudolf Kurz, a Swiss military historian, will chair a six-man commission to determine the extent of Waldheim's World War II service as a German army intelligence officer.

Kurz said he would research war documents from Yugoslav, American and Norwegian archives, as well as seek testimony from Waldheim.

S. Koreans look to quiet riots

By Lena H. Sun
Washington Post

SEOUL, South Korea — South Korean President Chun Doo Hwan, facing the largest violent opposition to his seven-year rule, was reported Monday to have agreed to meet opposition leader Kim Young Sam as part of a series of concessions to help defuse the nearly two weeks of antigovernment rioting.

Chun is also expected to accept opposition demands to lift the 2-month-old house arrest of another leading opposition figure, Kim Dae Jung, and to release hundreds of demonstrators arrested since the disturbances began June 10, newspapers and television reported Monday, quoting ruling party officials.

The opposition has said that the release of those jailed and the lifting of Jung's house arrest are the preconditions for a meeting between Chun and Sam, who heads the main opposition party. A spokesman for Sam said Monday he assumes the conditions would be met.

JUNG'S HOUSE arrest, the latest in a long series since the former presidential candidate's return from U.S. exile in February 1985, was imposed April 8 after party infighting prompted him and Sam to lead a massive walkout from their old party and form the current Reunification Democratic Party, the main opposition group.

A few days later, on April 13, Chun announced his decision to postpone until after next year's Summer Olympics a dialogue with the opposition aimed at amending the constitution to allow direct popular election of the president.

That decision was immensely unpopular and is at the root of the current crisis. One of the common chants of student demonstrators has been to call on Chun to "reverse the April 13 decision."

After meeting with Chun Monday, ruling Democratic Justice Party chairman Roh Tae Woo said he suggested to Chun "that due consideration be given to opposition requests that the house arrest of Kim Dae Jung be lifted and the persons arrested for their roles in the opposition rallies be released." Korean reporters quoted Roh as saying, "My suggestion was accepted."

MONDAY'S DEVELOPMENTS came as the focus shifted from the subsiding street protests to the government's political response. Clashes were reported at universities in Seoul and there were reports of continued demonstrations in other cities, but the numbers involved appear to be dwindling rapidly.

It was unclear Monday how the government's announcements would affect further disturbances. Many of the student demonstrators are considered radicals who will accept nothing but the overthrow of the government.

But some observers said that Chun's more flexible attitude is aimed more at calming the much broader segments of Korean society who share some of the students' frustrations but may not necessarily endorse their methods.

Deal may end North's silence

By Karen Tumulty
Los Angeles Times

WASHINGTON — Lt. Col. Oliver L. North and congressional Iran-Contra investigators Monday appeared close to breaking the deadlock that has threatened to delay or prevent the testimony of the central figure in the scandal, committee sources said.

Under the outlines of a tentative deal, sources said, investigators would limit the amount and scope of private testimony they heard from the former White House aide before he appeared in public. This would work to the disadvantage of the investigators, who had hoped to use extensive private testimony to prepare themselves for North's public appearance.

On the other hand, sources said, the possible agreement may mean that North would testify before the panels heard publicly from his former boss, John Poindexter, who had served as President Ronald Reagan's national security adviser. This would help assure the committees, which have already talked to Poindexter privately, that North's account would not be influenced by Poindexter's version of events.

NORTH HAD PREVIOUSLY been scheduled to give public testimony in mid-July, but the agreement may bring him forward as early as July 7, sources said.

Rep. Lee H. Hamilton, D-Ind., chairman of the House's investigating committee, told reporters that the congressional committees had "made a lot of progress" in their talks with North's attorney, Brendan Sullivan. He declined to disclose any details of the arrangement but noted that while "not all questions are resolved, things are moving forward."

North last week informed the panels that he would refuse to appear before key staff members in private, as other witnesses have before testifying publicly. Lawyers for North, who has been granted immunity from prosecution that is based on his testimony, complained that the grant of immunity would not cover his private testimony.

WHEN COMMITTEE members continued to insist on a preliminary closed-door session, they raised the possibility of citing North for contempt of Congress — a drawn-out legal process that could have delayed North's testimony for months and, in practical terms, prevented it entirely. North could face an indefinite jail term if found guilty of contempt.

Leaders of the House and Senate committees plan to present the proposal to other members today. The Iran-Contra hearings are also scheduled to resume today after nearly a two-week break.

"Nothing has been resolved finally and will not be until the committees put their stamp of approval on it," Hamilton cautioned.

Nuns

gets negative reactions from straight and gay people, she said, but the Sisters have their fans, too.

"The people who are usually the boldest and come up to us and tell us how much they like us are women," Walner said.

BUSCHE SAID HE blames adverse reactions to the Sisters on "the stigma of cross-dressing, the stigma of homosexuality."

Members of the Catholic Church often oppose the group's actions, but Busche said The Sisters of Perpetual Indulgence are not mocking the church.

"We value the work of traditional nuns," he said. "We don't oppose the Catholic Church or Christianity, we oppose certain attitudes. The Catholic Church is doing a lot of good things in different parts of the country."

Members of the group consider themselves nuns, because of the contributions they make.

"We do the same thing nuns do, except we have sex," Walner said.

BUT THE SISTERS OF Perpetual Indulgence oppose many of the opinions of the Pope, particularly his stands on homosexuality and abortion. They plan to protest his visit to California, which is scheduled for September.

"We are not welcoming the Pope to San Francisco," Walner said. "We do not want him to come."

The Sisters of Perpetual Indulgence encourage the use of condoms to prevent the transmission of AIDS. During Mardi Gras last winter, the group threw condoms from balconies to crowds in the New Orleans streets. Walner said many people mistook the condoms for doubloons, the coins commonly thrown from Mardi Gras parade floats.

"A lot of people didn't know what they were," she said.

The Sisters of Perpetual Indulgence also guest-hosted MTV, which was being televised from New Orleans. According to Walner, group members blew up condoms like balloons until an MTV producer realized what they were doing and told them to stop.

OF THE 35 MEMBERS in the group, nine actually perform, Busche said. The performances are difficult to explain.

"It's a potpourri of different theatrical modes," he said. "Satire is certainly a prominent one. We use a lot of Catholic imagery."

The members take on names, like Sister Missionary Position, Sister Homocycle Motorsexual, and Her Holiness Reverend Mother the Abyss, when they join the group. Members volunteer their time and pay dues, Busche said.

Political activism is the main reason for belonging to the group, Busche said, but the members also enjoy performing. The Sisters of Perpetual Indulgence are especially popular in San Francisco, he said.

"We sort of have come to represent San Francisco tolerance and unorthodoxy," Busche said. "We've sort of become the mascots of San Francisco."

game last year. He was one of the few top choices who did not attend the seven-round draft at Felt Forum.

Armon Gilliam, a 6-9 forward from Nevada-Las Vegas, went to the Phoenix Suns with the second choice. Gilliam was not concerned about playing with a team he had earlier this year by the indictment of several current and former players on drug charges.

After Gilliam, teams turned to guards and swingmen. New Jersey selected Ohio State guard Dennis Hopson third followed by swingman Williams of Georgetown to the Los Angeles Clippers, swingman Pippen of Central Arkansas to Seattle, North Carolina guard Kenny Smith to Sacramento and California guard Kevin Johnson to Cleveland.

Pippen, 6-7, was not recruited out of high school and ended up at Central Arkansas of the NAIA. He averaged 24 points a game last year.

"I WAS SURPRISED to go as high as I did," Pippen said. "I'm looking forward to going to Chicago and playing with Michael Jordan."

Alabama forward Derrick McKey was chosen with the ninth pick by Seattle. The 6-9 play in the league. There are more players in Arena Football from Iowa than any other college or university.

Stoops had such an outstanding game Friday that he was awarded the "Ironman Award," appropriately named because of the single platoon system the league demands. Stoops, The Pittsburgh Post-Gazette reported Saturday, played exceptional defense and made several catches in the Pittsburgh win.

AFTER RETURNING in 1983 as the Big Ten's top returning rusher, Phillips went on to become the third all-time leading ground-gainer in Iowa history, amassing 2,177 yards in his collegiate career.

Phillips, though, played mostly at defensive back against the Dynamite Saturday night, a position which took him out of his normal offensive environment.

"I wasn't used to it myself," he said after the game. "But it's something you've got to do. It wasn't hard learning it at all. It's just something I had to get used to all over again. I mean,

I did it when I was in high school."

Phillips, who was the first player signed by the league, finished the game Saturday with a four-yard reception on offense. Defensively, he batted a pass and was in on four tackles.

But the Iowa Connection with Arena Football doesn't stop at its founder and players. Chicago Coach Jauch played on Iowa's 1959 team which capped its season by defeating California in the Rose Bowl. But Jauch (pronounced YOCK) said Saturday's clash was more exciting than being part of a Rose Bowl victory.

"Oh, yeah, I would say that," Jauch agreed. "Yeah, this was a very exciting game. The problem was that in the '59 Rose Bowl I was on the right side of the field. Tonight I wasn't on the right side of the field. Hopefully in the future I'll get on the right side of the field."

Other Arena Coaches from Iowa include Washington Coach Bob Harrison and Denver Equipment Manager John Honcharuk.

Mandlikova drops dreary Wimbledon

WIMBLEDON, England (UPI) — Rain, the constant companion of Wimbledon, washed out the entire opening day's program Monday, and the gloomy atmosphere was further dampened by the withdrawal of fourth seed Hana Mandlikova.

put an official start to the proceedings on Court Center by playing Karel Novacek of Czechoslovakia.

BECKER, THE POPULAR West German teenager, provided the faithful Court Center fans with the only highlight of a dreary afternoon when he made a brief appearance to check on conditions.

During the steady rain, close to 2,000 people zealously stood exposed to the rain to protect their positions in the standing section. There were an estimated 24,000 people on the grounds, but there are no rain checks at Wimbledon and no refunds.

Although rain frequently disrupts the program, this is the first time since June 29, 1978, that an entire day's schedule was called off. It is also the fourth time since 1888, and the first occasion since June 23, 1969, that the entire opening day's program was washed out.

FIFTH SEED Helena Sukova, who last week defeated Chris Evert and Navratilova to win a tournament at Eastbourne, moves into Mandlikova's spot in the draw. This means instead of possibly facing Evert in the quarterfinals and Navratilova in the semis, she now is in the bottom half of the draw and could meet instead Shriver and Steffi Graf for a chance at the final.

The forecast called for further rain every day through Thursday. The situation would create a huge logjam of matches, an occurrence familiar to Wimbledon officials.

"It's frustrating for all of those spectators sitting out there all day, and it's frustrating for the players sitting around the clubhouse," Mills said. "It's frustrating for everyone, but it's out of our control."

When weather conditions permit, two-time defending champion Boris Becker will

TWO YEARS AGO, on opening day, several matches were started but only one involving Ivan Lendl and Mel Purcell was completed. When he came off the court following his victory, Lendl was furious to learn that his was the only contest allowed to proceed in dangerous conditions.

All the rain of the last month could be damaging to Becker since it serves to slow the courts and he is at his best on a fast surface.

In addition, Becker has had difficulty getting enough practice time, and on Sunday was denied a court by at least three clubs since he is not a member.

There has been more than three inches of rain in London during June, the most since five inches fell in June 1958. One bookmaker has offered odds of 33-1 against rain interrupting or preventing play on Court Center every day.

DeNike tops field for victory at Pro-Am

By Scott Wingert
The Daily Iowan

Bettendorf professional Kevin DeNike continued his rise to the top of Iowa's golf circuit Monday, firing a 6-under-par 65 at Finkbine Golf Club to capture the second annual I-Club Pro-Am Golf Tournament.

DeNike, the point leader among professionals on the Iowa Golf Association tour, pocketed $560 for the title. His pro-am team, made up of four amateur teammates, also won the best-ball portion of the tournament, racing to an 11-under par 60 to win $500 for that victory.

Dave Hilgenberg of Council Bluffs nabbed second place and $430 with a 3-under 68 and Mike Hall of Cedar Rapids finished third at 2-under 69, winning $363. Iowa City professionals Tim Doherty from the Elks Club and Iowa Golf Coach Chuck Zwerner from Finkbine shot 74 and 77, respectively.

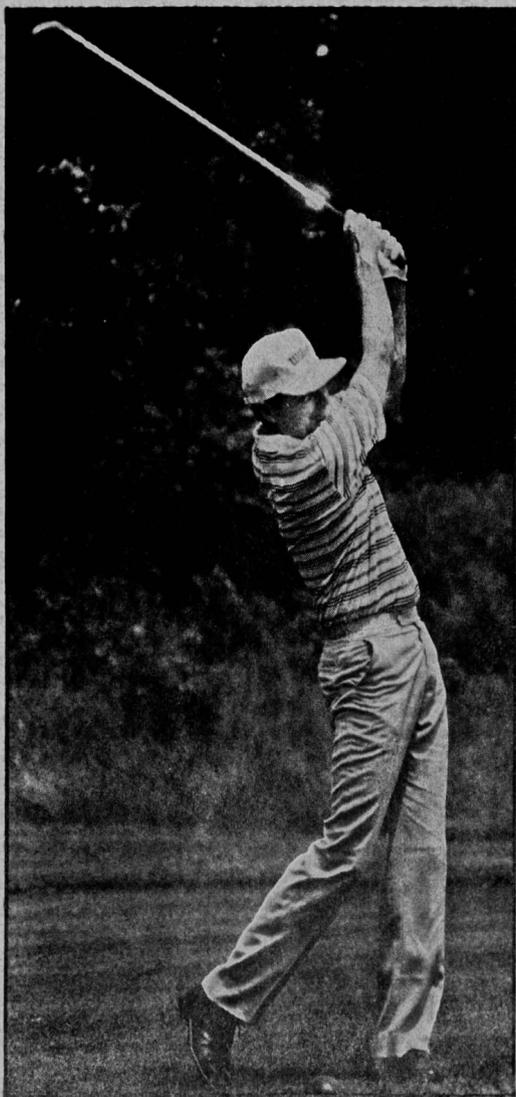

THE TOURNAMENT, sponsored by the National I-Club and the Iowa Section of the Professional Golfer's Association, had a professional purse of $2,500 and $5,000 worth of prizes for the amateurs.

DeNike, who started on the 14th hole, came to the fifth hole 2-under before canning three straight birdies on 5, 6 and 7 to take command of the tournament. He three-putted the 10th hole for bogey but followed with an eagle at 11.

"I liked the course today, but the greens were unbelievably slow," DeNike said. "They were almost unfair. I tried to hit it as close to the pin as I could because I felt I only had a 50-50 chance to make anything outside of three feet."

"These were the slowest I've ever seen these greens," Hall added. "They putted smooth, but everything fell low of the cup."

third alternate. "I've just played great this year," DeNike said. "I nearly turned the big corner at Medinah, but I didn't fade away after not getting to the Open. I'm still going strong."

Thirty-six professionals from all corners of the state turned out for Monday's event, but it was a lack of amateur teams that took away some of the tournament's luster.

"I wish we would have had more than 14 teams today, but the professional turnout was fantastic," Mark Jennings, director of men's athletic funding at the University of Iowa, said. "We needed to do more grassroots promoting for some amateurs, but we really had quality in our small numbers. "THE PROS REALLY don't like to play in pro-ams when the field isn't full," DeNike added. "But we all had a good time out there today. This is a great golf course."

Doherty, in his second year at the Elks Club and fresh off an incredible round of 59 there two weekends ago, found the tournament much to his liking.

"The format of this tournament is good," Doherty said. "They just need to get out in the field a little bit and promote it better. We needed more amateurs."

Jennings said the tournament serves more for public relations than as a fund raiser, but the professional turnout gave it a big-time atmosphere.

Lohaus, Gamble selected by NBA

By Steve Williams
The Daily Iowan

It didn't take long for Brad Lohaus to get used to green.

Halfway through his press conference at Carver-Hawkeye Arena on Monday, Lohaus donned a Boston Celtics' baseball cap, symbolizing his full approval of being chosen to the East-Coast power in the second round.

"Deep down, they've always been one of my favorite teams," Lohaus said. "The Celtics have been winning championships before I was born and it's a great feeling to know that I'll be going to one of the best teams in the NBA."

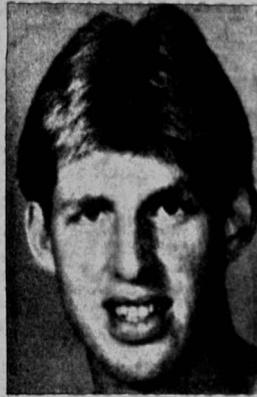

Lohaus' good fortune was only the beginning of good news for Iowa graduates, as Kevin Gamble found a home in the third round of the NBA draft with the Portland Trailblazers.

EVEN GERRY WRIGHT, whose commitment to the Air Force will keep him from playing in the NBA in the near future, was selected by the Detroit Pistons in the fifth round.

But while Wright has no interest in the NBA, Gamble's reaction to being drafted was much more receptive.

"I really didn't care what team drafted me, just as long as someone did," Gamble said. "I don't know much about Portland. I'm just going to get into the best shape I can and go in there and see what happens."

Gamble's destination may have been a surprise, but according to Assistant Coach Bruce Pearl, the Celtics' interest in Lohaus has been going on for some time.

"We knew the Celtics really wanted him," Pearl said Monday. "The only question was whether he would still be available in the second round."

"I THINK BRAD is in a perfect position," Pearl continued. "(Bill) Walton may not play next year, and (Kevin) McHale just had surgery today and if Brad can put on some size and still keep a good outside shot, he has a legitimate shot with the Celtics."

"I know I have a lot of work to do," Lohaus said. "But so many things can happen, I'm just going to try my best to make the team."

Even in a year when the NBA draft was not quite up to its normal standards, Lohaus and Gamble can consider themselves lucky to have been given a shot at basketball's highest level.

Heading into the 1986-87 season, the only thing concerning the two Iowa seniors was whether they would have a place on the Hawkeyes' starting roster. But, after finishing a year in which they combined for 23.2 points a game and 12 rebounds, Lohaus and Gamble have shown that their NBA dreams were not just clouded visions.

"It was slipping away there for a while," Lohaus said, "but after last season, it kind of rekindled the flame."

"I wasn't really thinking about the NBA much until last season, but it's always been a dream of mine," Gamble said. "This season raised my stock a lot and if it wasn't for Coach Davis and his staff, I wouldn't be in the position I'm in now."

San Antonio takes Robinson as first player in 1987 draft

NEW YORK (UPI) — The San Antonio Spurs made 7-foot-1 David Robinson the top choice in the NBA draft Monday while the Washington Bullets went to the other end of the measuring stick with the first-round selection of 5-3 Tyrone Bogues.

The Spurs and Bullets made calculated gambles. San Antonio demonstrated a willingness to wait two years while the center from Navy completes his military obligations. Washington was undeterred by the prospect of presenting the NBA with perhaps the sport's most uneven look.

Bogues would become the NBA's smallest player and would join 7-6 teammate Manute Bol, the league's tallest player. Bogues was joined by two high school teammates in the first round. Reggie Williams and Reggie Lewis also attended Dunbar High School in Baltimore, the first time a high school scored such a coup.

THE OPENING ROUND was also highlighted by a trade of top selections between Chicago and Seattle. Scottie Pippen barely had time to learn he was selected by Seattle before he was traded to Chicago for Olden Polynice and a draft choice.

San Antonio earned the right to choose first by winning the May 17 draft lottery. Robinson, powerful and agile, was named College Player of the Year after averaging 28 points, 12 rebounds and 4.5 blocks a game.

Iowa keeps ties to Arenaball

By Marc Bona
The Daily Iowan

ROSEMONT, Ill. — Six years ago, Iowa City native Jim Foster sat in New York's Madison Square Garden, watched an indoor soccer game and invented a new sport.

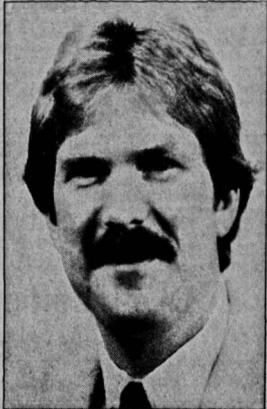

What started as a brainstorm scribbled on the back of an envelope in February, 1981, blossomed into reality, as Arena Football left the drawing board and opened its inaugural season Friday and Saturday in Pittsburgh and Chicago, respectively.

The brainstorm eventually formed a common denominator which runs throughout the teams and its administration. Simply put, this prevailing bond can be called "The Iowa Connection."

At almost every level of the Arena Football League — player, coach and administrator — past and present Hawkeyes are involved.

"I GET A LOT OF ribbing about that," Foster said. "There's a lot of Iowa folks involved with Arena football and they happen to be good players. I'm not complain-der and president was born and raised in Iowa City, attended high school and graduated in 1972 with a degree in advertising and broadcast journalism. A former reporter for The Daily Iowan, Foster also lettered in track.

Foster also played minor league football from 1974-1979 in Iowa.

He said the Iowa Connection in the league extends beyond people. Foster said the night he dreamed the game was when he figured on using thin goal posts — an idea he came up with remembering the narrow posts on the old Iowa practice field.

"I REMEMBERED them from practice at Iowa when I was a kid," he said. "And then I remembered as a kid in Iowa City — that's the next Iowa Connection — that my dad gave me one of those Pitchback nets, and I used to throw my football on it instead of my baseball. And I thought, 'what would happen if I built the world's largest Pitchback net?' So that's how it started out."

Foster then contacted former Canadian Football League Coach Ray Jauch, a friend of the family. Jauch helped Foster organize the first showcase Arena football game in Rockford, Ill., last year.

Foster's own ties to Iowa remain strong. Above his office in his Northbrook, Ill., home is a sign which reads, "The Hawkeye Room."

The long hours put in that office helped make the league work said Foster, who describes himself as "36 going on 90." But the future looks bright for Foster's concept. He said the league, which has a television contract with ESPN, has offers to play in Japan, England and Madison Square Garden.

MORE THAN 12,000 turned out for the first game in Pittsburgh's Civic Arena, while more than 10,000 showed up in Rosemont, Ill., the following night.

Foster's father, Pat, is also involved with his son's invention. The elder Foster, who lives in Iowa City, is the game equipment coordinator for the league.

Pat Foster said the metal rims on the nets were manufactured in Coralville by Ron's Welding & Supplies, Inc., "the exclusive manufacturers of Arena Football Goalside Rebound Net Frames," according to an advertisement in the sport's program.

Jim Foster said the design for the nets will be patented in the near future.

But the Fosters aren't the only Iowa natives to be involved with the sport. Four former Hawkeyes — Eddie Phillips (Chicago), Nate Creer, Jon Roehlk (Washington), and Mike Stoops (Pittsburgh) — all

Seaver ends career in familiar setting

NEW YORK (UPI) — Pitching great Tom Seaver retired from baseball Monday 16 days after rejoining the New York Mets, leaving the team he carried to its first championship 17 years ago.

Seaver, with a 311-205 record and 2.86 ERA in a magnificent 20-year career, was attempting a comeback at age 42. He said he was unhappy with his progress after being sidelined nine months. The right-hander pitched poorly in an exhibition game against minor-league hitters and in two simulated games against the Mets.

"I can't complain about anything," Seaver said at a Shea Stadium news conference. "I have had more than my share of accomplishments, championships and good times. You have to know when it is time to go. Now this is the time for me to go."

SEAVAR ENTERED the majors in 1967 and pitched more than 10 seasons for the Mets. He captured the National League Cy Young Award three times (1969, 1973, 1975) and won 20 games five times, including a 25-7 mark when the Mets won their first World Series title in 1969.

"I wanted to be fair to the Mets management and the players in the clubhouse who are trying to win a championship," he said. "If I felt I would be able to contribute, and that things would have gotten better, I would have kept going. But I honestly didn't think things would get any better."

"This is a happy-sad day," Mets General Manager Frank Cashen said.
