Gulf causes U.S. policy clash

By David Hoffman and Helen Dewar
Washington Post

WASHINGTON — President Ronald Reagan Tuesday rejected Democrats' demands that he delay the planned reflagging of Kuwaiti oil tankers in the Persian Gulf, and Democratic congressional leaders predicted that Congress would not block the increased U.S. military presence in the region.

The Senate Foreign Relations Committee approved legislation to delay the reflagging, and the House is expected to consider a similar proposal today. But the congressional leaders indicated that the measures were mostly an attempt to go on record against the administration policy rather than an effort to stop it.

"We don't honestly think, given the time schedule, that it is possible to prevail ... to effect a delay in this operation," Senate Majority Leader Robert C. Byrd, D-W.Va., said. "As a practical matter, this policy has been announced," he added, and "it is in the process of being implemented."

REAGAN LISTENED to objections to the reflagging plan at a White House meeting with bipartisan congressional leaders and, minutes later, presidential spokesman Martin Fitzwater read a statement to reporters.

Written in advance, it said Reagan is "moving forward with preparations" to put 11 Kuwaiti tankers under the U.S. flag and provide them with U.S. naval protection.

Fitzwater said the preparations would be ready by mid-July, "at which time we plan to proceed." Navy officials said the arrangements would be complete by next Tuesday.

The president also announced that he plans to undertake a renewed diplomatic initiative aimed at reducing tension in the region and ending the Iran-Iraq war.

Variations revealed in GPAs

By John Bartenhagen
The Daily Iowan

Although grades are commonly used to compare college students, differences of almost one point in the average GPA among departments in the UI College of Liberal Arts suggest factors other than academic ability have a large impact on individual student grade points.

According to records from the UI Office of the Registrar, the overall grade point for the UI College of Liberal Arts is within about one-tenth of the UI average, but GPAs in the various departments for the 1986 fall semester ranged from 3.2 for creative writing to 2.3

This is the last of three stories examining grade point averages at the UI for mathematics.

UI Education Professor James Marshall said he expects grading to differ between departments because methods of testing and assigning grades vary with subject matter.

Professors in all departments have passed through a socialization process unique to the study of that subject, he said, which they in turn pass on to their students.

"IT'S KIND OF like parenting," he said.

UI Philosophy Department Chairman Phillip Cummins said General Education Requirement courses, which attract more students than other classes, may also distort departmental grade points.

"In GER classes, we try to stick by college-recommended curves," he said. "But because of the liberal policy for dropping classes at the UI, teachers keep losing their 'D' and 'F' students throughout a semester. If you keep using the bell curve, then you punish students who don't deserve it."

But UI senior Tom Stewart, an education major, said he thinks the variance in GPAs between departments is caused in part by differences in the quality of instruction.

"This is a research institution, and many of the teachers aren't dedicated to teaching and it shows," he said. "Many of the professors have a real bad attitude toward core and introductory classes. They don't care, they don't expect much from the students and the students give them exactly

Council votes for 1 percent city sales tax

By Joseph Levy
The Daily Iowan

A proposal to implement a local 1 percent sales tax was given approval over raising property taxes by the Iowa City Council in a unanimous vote Tuesday evening.

The sales tax proposal, which is designed to stem the projected $1 million deficit facing Iowa City in fiscal year 1989, was agreed to by the council following more than 90 minutes of public discussion.

The discussion focused on the debate between raising property taxes or approving the sales tax, the two options which were put forward by the Iowa City Citizens' Committee on City Revenues in May.

The six councilors present at the meeting each rendered testimonials as to why he or she supported the 1 percent sales tax addition.

IOWA CITY Mayor William Ambrisco said he favored the sales tax because it would give voters the opportunity to make the decision themselves, while a property tax increase would be a council decision not voted on by the public.

"That's the democratic thing to do and it's the fairest thing to do," he said.

The issue could go to voters as early as October if the council can agree upon ballot wording by their July 14 meeting, Iowa City Clerk Marian Karr said.

The council directed Iowa City Manager Stephen Atkins to look into possible wordings for a ballot and report to the council at their July 14 meeting.

An estimated 55 citizens attended the meeting. Four members of the Citizens' Committee on City Revenues and six local residents spoke in the discussion. None of the six were in favor of the property tax increase.

RETIRED Iowa City resident E.L. Gjovig said he has spoken with many retired, low income or handicapped citizens and none of them were in favor of a property tax increase.

"They're the ones who can least afford to pay it," he said.

Gjovig added a sales tax increase would be easier to swallow for Iowa City residents. "People will soon forget about that 1 percent sales tax increase."

UI Professor George Nickelsburg agreed a sales tax would be preferable, arguing the detrimental economic effects of a local sales tax are overrated.

"Who are these people who are going to flee from Iowa City to buy in Cedar Rapids?" he asked.

Nickelsburg said he figured a purchase of at least $250 would be necessary before it would be economically beneficial for an individual to shop in another area if the Iowa City area implemented a 1 percent local sales tax.

"Do we really know what percentage of sales are made in Iowa City that are under $250?" he asked.

Atkins added the local sales tax is not applicable to automobile purchases.

Smoking bill set to clear Iowa's public air

By Julie Rutz
United Press International

DES MOINES — When the clock strikes 12 early today a host of bills approved by the 1987 Legislature and Iowa's governor will become law and affect everybody from smokers and farmers to grandparents and drivers.

Beginning today, smoking will be banned in most public places. Although it does not apply to restaurants, the Clean Indoor Air Act will allow $10 fines to be assessed against smokers who light up in non-smoking sections.

The new law will redefine the meaning of a public place. It will not, however, apply to tobacco stores, private offices occupied only by smokers, lobbies and malls of 300 square feet or less, dormitory rooms and motel rooms, factories, warehouses and bars.

ALSO TODAY, people under 18 years old who try to buy chewing tobacco and merchants who sell smokeless tobacco products to minors will be subject to new penalties.

First-time offenders will have to pay a $100 fine or serve a 30-day jail sentence. Those convicted two or more times could be sentenced to one year in prison and fined $1,000.

Iowa motorists will also feel the effect of lawmakers' actions.

After Tuesday, the state will no longer issue six-year driver's licenses. People will have to choose between a two-year license, which costs $8, or a four-year license, which costs $16. Since 1984, the state has issued six-year licenses that cost $20.

CHANGES WILL ALSO be made in chauffeur's licenses. Four-year licenses will cost $30 and two-year licenses will cost $15. In addition, motorcycle licenses will no longer be free. Effective today, the state will collect $1 for each year the motorcycle license is issued. The fees will be used for driver safety programs in public schools.

Housewives will pay more for household cleaners and farmers will have to dig deeper in their wallets for farm chemicals because of a new ground-

Bill Sackter

Iowa City remembers Sackter Inside

By Lisa Legge
The Daily Iowan

Tuesday was the day to commemorate Iowa City legend Bill Sackter and to celebrate the success of others helping others.

"Four years since his death, Bill Sackter Day has gone from a sad occasion to a celebration of what he stood for when he was alive," said Barry Morrow, who was Sackter's guardian and is now a Hollywood screenwriter.

"This is not just to commemorate Bill from our point of view," UI Social Work Professor Tom Walz said, "because he was such a public figure, he was a real inspiration to people who have handicaps."

SACKTER, who died in 1983, had a learning disability for which he was confined to a mental institution for 44 years. He met Morrow and they moved to Iowa City in 1974. Bill lived a productive life as proprietor of Wild Bill's Coffee Shop in North Hall.

"His personality was blessed with love and kindness that is just so rare these days, particularly among celebrities," Walz said.

Morrow wrote two made-for-television films called "Bill" and "Bill: Out on his Own" portraying Bill's life and how he overcame his handicap. Morrow won an Emmy for his screen treatment of the film. Mickey Rooney, who played Bill, won an Emmy for the role.

"He only came into his own when he came to Iowa City. He had 12 good years, having good friends and good experiences," Morrow said.

couldn't read or write, he wasn't officially qualified to work for the UI.

"We had to invent a way for Bill to work for the university," Morrow said.

"Dr. Walz, then-director of the school, made Bill a consultant," Morrow added. "So he was able to go from janitor to coffee shop proprietor with the new title of developmental disability consultant to the School of Social Work."

The coffee shop still functions today and employs four disabled people.

Suit filed over veto

DES MOINES — Two Democratic lawmakers Tuesday filed suit to restore $14.8 million in spending vetoed by Gov. Terry Branstad June 9 and hired the woman who lost the governor's race to Branstad in 1982 to plead their case.

Rep. Tom Jochum and Sen. Joe Welsh, both of Dubuque, said they believe Branstad violated the Iowa Constitution when he item-vetoed 11 expenditures in the $2.4 billion budget lawmakers sent him last month. Jochum said he is especially upset with Branstad's veto of a $57 million increase in Aid to Families with Dependent Children benefits.

"We want to resolve the conflict that has been developing between the executive and the legislative branches of government," Welsh said. "I believe Gov. Branstad, in his five years in office, has used his veto power excessively."

Gore: crop quotas bad

DES MOINES — Democratic presidential candidate Albert Gore Jr. launched his Iowa presidential campaign Tuesday by denouncing proposals to force sharp cutbacks in American agricultural production.

The Tennessee senator, in an address to 150 supporters in Des Moines, said proposals such as one by Sen. Tom Harkin, D-Iowa, to set production quotas on major commodities would lead to a sharp drop in farm exports.

DES MOINES — The Iowa Student Loan Liquidity Corp. Tuesday announced a repayment program officials predict could save borrowers as much as $100 a month. The new program offers a consolidated payment plan that may be spread over a longer period than offered by other plans.

Under the plan, a borrower owing $5,000 or less can make monthly payments of $63 for as long as 10 years, and borrowers owing $45,000 or more can pay $474 a month for as long as 25 years.

"This program is designed to help the student who is paying a number of unlike loans to different agencies," an official said. "It will also help the student who is just starting out in a career and would welcome a monthly savings."

Illegal fireworks selling

DES MOINES — Despite efforts in the Legislature to allow Iowans to buy fireworks, several retailers mistakenly believe they now can get away with selling more powerful explosives than those permitted under current law, officials say.

"So far this year, we've ordered 100 to 125 retailers statewide to remove certain items from their fireworks displays," assistant Iowa Fire Marshal Roy Marshall said.

Marshall said only three types of explosives — caps, sparklers and snakes — are legal in Iowa, but officials have removed more powerful bottle rockets, ladyfingers and Roman candles from retailers' shelves.

Michigan gets waste dump

DEARBORN, Mich. — Michigan was designated Tuesday as the "host" state for disposing low-level radioactive waste from across the Midwest well into the next century. Officials said it was too early to say exactly where — or when — a dump would be built.

Delegates to the seven-state compact voted 6-1 for Michigan. Members were not allowed to vote for their own state.

Action groups help raise money, inform area public

By D.R. Miller
The Daily Iowan

Demonstrations and loosely affiliated special interest groups created to change public opinion may be giving way to citizens' action groups, the political director of such a group said Monday.

To these new, highly-organized, well-financed action groups, politics means raising money, said Jay Larson, political director and Cedar Rapids coordinator for the Iowa Citizen Action Network.

Educating the public about a cause and raising money to keep people informed are the keys to success in the political canvassing business, said Larson. In that business, ICAN works to carry Iowa concerns to local, state and federal legislators.

Many Iowa City residents have encountered ICAN workers passing petitions door-to-door and asking for contributions to support non-partisan legislative actions.

"OUR SYSTEM PROVES that political canvassing pays," Larson said.

Since the group began in a one-room office on Burlington Street in Iowa City, ICAN has helped establish legislation to stop utility companies from turning off service during the winter months and has been partly responsible for the addition of an ombudsperson to the Iowa Commerce Commission for consumer interests.

ICAN also successfully authored and saw passed into law a bill restricting the dumping of toxic waste into landfills. In addition, it has also been instrumental in the recent passage of the groundwater bill, Larson said.

Recently ICAN moved into a new office suite on the second floor of the Roosevelt Hotel in Cedar Rapids. It hopes to expand the statewide phone solicitations done there, ICAN Field Phone Director Brad Lint said.

IN LAST November's election, ICAN supported seven area candidates. All were elected, Larson said. The group plans to be just as active in upcoming elections to keep the public informed about the electoral process and voter registration, he said.

People who work for ICAN are professionals, ICAN Field Canvasser Lisa Pentony said, adding a person can earn more than $200 a week doing phone or door-to-door canvassing.

"We don't turn down people who are looking for a summer job," Pentony said. "We do want them to know there is a career in a political action group."

ICAN's goal is to educate the public about issues that involve it and to raise money to keep the organization going, Pentony said.

MANY OF THE ICAN employees work out of the office in the Cedar Rapids/Iowa City area. Their coverage area includes most of eastern Iowa.

"We go on camping canvasses where we camp out and do a town for a few days," Larson said.

Some people may object to solicitation for petition signatures and money over the phone or at the door, but Cedar Rapids attorney and ICAN supporter John Lane said grassroots support is the way to change federal and state legislation.

"ICAN is a classic grassroots organization trying to move the monolith of bureaucracy in this country," Lane said. "If that's what it takes to get the job done, that's great."

More than 25 similar state organizations are affiliated with ICAN. These groups attempt to change state and federal legislation when they feel it does not reflect the needs of average people, Larson said.

A Montrose, Iowa, man filed an appeal in Johnson County District Court Monday in his $20 million lawsuit against UI Hospitals, according to court records.

Steve Lawse, 37, claimed that Robert Corry, a surgeon at UI Hospitals, performed a faulty kidney transplant on him in 1973 that resulted in the need for extensive treatment, according to court records.

Lawse was disabled in 1982 from kidney disfunction and alleged that he was mistreated by UI Hospitals employees in further treatment for his kidneys. Lawse also claimed he was assaulted by a hospital employee in April 1985, according to court records.

Lawse also alleged in his suit that he should have been provided with more information and psychological preparation before the 1973 operation, according to court records.

A state appeals board in July 1985 denied Lawse's initial claim against Corry and UI Hospitals. The lawsuit was filed in Johnson County District Court in December 1985. On June 10, 1987, the court ruled in favor of Corry and the hospitals, according to court records.

Theft: About $50 was reported stolen after a burglary at Wendy's Restaurant, 840 S. Riverside Dr., Monday night, according to police reports.

Entry to the building was apparently made through a rear door of the restaurant and the money was taken from an office, according to the report.

Theft: A VCR valued at about $200 was reported stolen from a residence in the 10 block of Dunnagan St. at about 4 a.m. Tuesday, according to police reports.

Families needed for exchange students

A Connecticut-based organization is looking for Iowa City host families for Spanish high school exchange students.

More than 500 high school students from Spain are scheduled to arrive in the United States this fall as participants in the Academic Year in America program sponsored by the American Institute For Foreign Study Scholarship Foundation.

Students will live with families throughout the country and attend local high schools for one year.

Families interested in hosting a student should write to the American Institute For Foreign Study Scholarship Foundation, Department P-5, 100 Greenwich Avenue, Greenwich, Conn., or call 1-800-248-HOST.

Supervisors vote to purchase insurance

day to purchase a $27,000 insurance premium for the next two years, an increase of 33 percent over the previous premium price.

The vote to accept the premium was 4-1, with only Supervisor Dick Myers voting against immediately paying the premium, which will provide $13 million in coverage. Myers questioned why the premium had gone up so much and recommended that the board do more investigation into the subject before paying the premium.

Elderhostel reunites friends

By Holly Wilkins
Special to The Daily Iowan and Scott Hauser
The Daily Iowan

The Big Band sounds of Jimmy Dorsey no longer pour from the University Ballroom, 10 p.m. curfew are no longer in effect, the buildings are taller and the skirts are shorter. But to Vera Thummel and Stacey Wahl, friendships always stay the same. The two 1930s graduates have returned to the UI this summer as students and roommates in the UI Summer Elderhostel program, to restore their love of learning and re-enact their time together on what was then the State University of Iowa campus 50 years ago. "I love the memories of my romantic stomping ground here," Thummel said. "The liveliness here triggers such good feelings." "It was a happy time," Wahl said. "The room I am staying in for Elderhostel looks out on the step where my husband asked me to marry him; seeing it again warms the cockles of my heart." In September 1937, the two became friends when SUI Dean of Women Adelaide Burge placed them together as roommates in Eastlawn Cooperative Residence Hall. THE SECRET TO the longevity of their friendship is their compatibility, Wahl said. She said the two were a "perfect combination" from the start. "We had very few differences in opinions and ideas, plus a tremendous sharing between us," Thummel said. After graduating from SUI, the women had become so close they expressed their gratitude to Burge. "We went and personally thanked the dean for putting us together," Thummel said. Both women pursued teaching careers after they left the university and have been teaching ever since. Wahl, originally from Ottumwa, Iowa, now lives in Ridgefield, Conn. Thummel, from Webb, Iowa, now lives in Harlan, Iowa. The Elderhostel program, sponsored by the UI Division of Continuing Education, offers a new opportunity for them to share a lifelong love of learning. THE TWOSOME IS taking a two-week intensive course in autobiographical writing taught by a student of the Iowa Writers' Workshop. Sharing was also the key 50 years ago when it came to studying; the two shared one desk in Eastlawn where they sat face to face on opposite sides studying their different subjects. Wahl was a mathematics and history major while Thummel majored in speech and drama. "I can remember going crazy with calculus on one side while Vera finished her studies and would write letters home," Wahl said. While the names of the UI's prominent people have changed over the years since the pair first lived on campus, the university had a number of well-known scholars and athletes then, too. THE TWO WOMEN came to a university which included SUI President Eugene Gilmore, James Van Allen, Virgil M. Hancher, Dean Burge and E.C. Mable, who was better known as "God" in the drama department, Thummel said. The "big man on campus" at the time was 1939 Heisman Trophy winner Nile Kinnick, famous for his athletic prowess and a 4.0 grade point average. And when it came to men on campus 50 years ago, the library, better known as the "Marriage Mart," was the place to meet them.

Diocese fund drive benefits Newman Center

By Tony Jeffris
and Frank Contreras
The Daily Iowan

A new Newman Catholic student center in Iowa City will be one of the results of the completion Monday of a $5.8 million fund-raising campaign by the Roman Catholic Diocese of Davenport. The four-month campaign, called "Foundations in Ministry: A Gift for the Future," will allocate $2.5 million for the new center, which will replace the old facility at 104 E. Jefferson St., and establish a $1 million endowment for future operation of the center. The remaining funds will go toward seminary education and clergy relief projects throughout southeast Iowa. THE COMPLETION of the new student facility may come as early as 1988, diocese officials said. "This move was designed to serve the Catholic students of the university and others as well," said the Rev. Monsignor Michael Morrissey, vicar general of the Davenport Diocese. Morrissey said the new facility was desperately needed to replace the older building, which was built in 1911 and currently attracts about 1,500 students per week. "There is definitely visible deterioration. The whole second and third floor were condemned by the Iowa City Fire Department years ago," Morrissey said. The new building will include a 500-seat chapel with movable seating and a hydraulically adjustable altar area. The building will also house a music practice room, game room, student study area, lounge reception area and cafeteria as well as have more parking space than the old facility. JOE MATTINGLY, music director for the center's Newman Singers, said the new facility will draw more students and will enhance the cohesiveness of the UI Catholic student community. "Oftentimes students will walk in here in their sophomore or junior year and say, 'Wow, I didn't realize this was here,'" he said. "It's difficult to see the direct advantages of the center but they are definately there. I would be very surprised if the attendance at the liturgies doesn't double." Students who use the Newman Center said they are pleased with the contributions made by the people of the diocese. "We really needed this," said UI Junior Tony Stout, member of the Newman Singers. "I remember having choir practices in the kitchen of the old building where the ceiling was caving in." "For a while there people were saying, 'Huh, we need 5 million bucks? It's never going to happen.' Well it did and I think the students who use the new facility will really appreciate it," Stout said. CONTRIBUTIONS WERE MADE by 116 parishes throughout southeast Iowa to the fund-raising effort, though some found it more difficult to give than others. "Some people said they could not give because of the bad farm economy, while others felt it was not worth their effort," said the Rev. Daniel Mannhart, pastor of St. Bridget's parish near West Branch. "But overall, there was very little resistance."

Meese's blind trust ruled unethical

WASHINGTON — Attorney General Edwin Meese's controversial blind trust, set up with a financial consultant connected to the scandal-plagued Wedtech Corp., does not meet ethics law requirements, the head of the government ethics office said in a letter made public Tuesday.

David Martin, director of the Office of Government Ethics, said that Meese failed to get approval from his office before setting up a "limited blind partnership" with W. Franklyn Chinn, a former official with Wedtech and subject of several continuing investigations.

"No 'limited blind partnership' has been or could be approved under the statutory scheme as creating a qualified blind trust or other arrangement authorized by the Ethics in Government Act," Martin wrote.

Soviets enact new economic reforms

MOSCOW — The Soviet Union enacted sweeping legislation Tuesday altering the country's economic management, mandating public debate on draft laws and guaranteeing the right of appeal against abuses by officials.

The 1,500-member Supreme Soviet ended a two-day session by rubber-stamping the three broad democratization reforms sought by Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev.

"The large-scale and far-reaching reconstruction drive currently under way in the Soviet Union calls for tapping as fully as possible the democratic potential of socialism," President Andrei Gromyko told the session.

"Very many urgent questions remain and they should be tackled after an all-around consultation with the people," Gromyko said in stressing the need for mandated public debates.

PTL faces criminal investigation

WASHINGTON — The Justice Department has decided to launch a formal criminal investigation into the PTL ministry focusing on allegations of tax fraud and other wrongdoing during the reign of its exiled founders, televangelists Jim and Tammy Bakker, law enforcement sources said Monday.

The investigation will be conducted by the department's tax division in concert with Vinton D. Lide, U.S. attorney in Columbia, S.C., sources said. Evidence compiled by the tax division and the Internal Revenue Service will be presented by Lide's office to a federal grand jury, the sources said.

Iranian missile hits Kuwaiti ship

TEHRAN, Iran — A Kuwaiti-flag container ship was hit just above the water line Tuesday by a missile said to have been fired by an Iranian gunboat off the Saudi coast. No casualties were reported.

The Kuwait-based United Arab Shipping company said the ship, carrying cargo for the Persian Gulf and Far East, proceeded under its own power to Bahrain for repairs. The company operates 16 container ships and is owned by seven Arab Gulf countries, including Iraq.

The attack was the third on Arabian shipping lanes since Saturday, when Iranian gunboats were thought to have hit the Norwegian-flag and Swedish-operated tankers Mia Margarethe and Stena Explorer.

10 mines found near Kuwaiti port

WASHINGTON — In a sign the war in the Persian Gulf could spread, at least 10 mines presumably planted by Iran have been found near the main Kuwaiti oil port and the United States may send Navy helicopters and men to Kuwait to keep the area clear, Pentagon officials said Tuesday.

That the mines were tethered to the bottom of the 30-mile-wide channel in international waters leading to the port of Ahmadi and were not free-floating indicated they were deliberately planted there and did not drift westward from waters off Iraq, with which Iran has been at war nearly seven years.

Prosecutor wants life penalty for Barbie

LYON, France — The prosecutor in Klaus Barbie's trial Tuesday demanded the maximum penalty of life in prison for the former Lyon Gestapo chief, saying he committed "particularly inhumane" crimes and remains "faithful to the Nazi ideal."

Prosecutor Pierre Truche said that in 1943 and 1944 Barbie was involved in 842 deportations of Jews and Resistance members to Nazi extermination or concentration camps. He said 373 of them died, including 52 children, and many were tortured.

"Barbie has not changed in any way," Truche said. "He remains faithful to the Nazi ideal." Truche's appeal for the maximum punishment allowed under French law came at the end of a two-day final argument on the charges against Barbie in the eighth and final week of a trial that began May 11.

Panama lifts state of emergency

PANAMA CITY, Panama — Panama's Legislative Assembly reinstated individual liberties Tuesday and lifted a state of emergency imposed almost three weeks ago to quell anti-government protests. The 39-member assembly, calling for national harmony, lifted the state of emergency in a resolution passed late Monday that took effect Tuesday.

7-year-old testifies in child abuse case

NEWARK, N.J. — A day-care center teacher accused of molesting 20 preschoolers used a kitchen knife and fork in her assault on one boy and threatened to kill his parents if he revealed the abuse, the boy testified Tuesday.

"She touched me in my private places," the now 7-year-old boy told jurors in closed-circuit television testimony in the trial of Margaret Kelly Michaels, 24.

Michaels, who now lives in Pittsburgh, is charged with sexually assaulting and threatening 20 children during the 1984-85 school year at the Wee Care Day Nursery in Maplewood, N.J.

World War II bomb defused in London

LONDON — Army bomb experts Tuesday defused a one-ton Nazi bomb that was unearthed at a construction site near the Tower of London and forced the evacuation of 2,000 residents for more than a day, police said.

But some old-age pensioners, who survived the World War II Nazi "blitz" bombing, refused to leave their homes.

"They said Hitler didn't get them in the war and there was no way he was going to get them now," said Police Inspector Roger Pool.

S. Korea elections to change

By James Kim
United Press International

SEOUL, South Korea — President Chun Doo Hwan, offering a "grand national compromise and reconciliation," promised today to seek changes in the South Korean constitution that will allow his successor to be chosen in a direct presidential election.

Chun, in a live television broadcast, said he had "decided to fully accept" proposals made by ruling party chairman Roh Tae-woo, Chun's hand-picked successor, who urged the government

Monday to reform the electoral system to end weeks of street rioting and respond to popular wishes.

"I have spent many sleepless nights thinking long and hard about what might be the right or wrong way to save the republic," said Chun, who spoke in a monotone from behind a broad wooden desk.

"Now is a crucial moment in the destiny of our nation," he said in a radio and television broadcast transmitted live to the United States by Cable News Network.

CALLING FOR a "grand national compromise and reconciliation," Chun said he would move to replace the nation's indirect, electoral college system of presidential selection with a direct, popular vote.

"I hereby make it clear that if the basic law is expeditiously revised," Chun said, "then the 13th (South Korean) presidential election will be held under a new constitution."

CHUN WAS responding to the proposal offered by Roh, who stunned dissidents and members of his ruling Democratic Justice Party by recommending the government accept opposition demands for revision of the constitution to allow direct presidential elections.

The proposals triggered nationwide jubilation and ended weeks of the most violent rioting in years.

Chun met with Roh for 70 minutes and received the recommendations. The president then met with National Assembly Speaker Lee Chai-yung and Chief Justice Kim Young-chul to discuss matters related to Roh's eight-point proposal, the officials said.

North makes first panel appearance

By Dan Morgan
and Walter Pincus
Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Fired White House aide Oliver North gave congressional investigators seven binders of documents related to the Iran-Contra affair Tuesday, including copies of personal notebooks in which some material had been blacked out by his attorneys.

In his first testimony under oath, Marine Lt. Col. North said during a private appearance Tuesday that the notebooks contain "day-to-day notations of some of my conversations and activities, which may relate to the subject matter of your inquiry," according to a transcript released by the committees.

North's lawyers made the deletions on grounds that the material was private or was not relevant to the House and Senate panels' investigation, committee sources said.

Committee leaders who had just been through a week of legal battles with North's principal attorney, Brendan V. Sullivan, said Tuesday that the deletions had forced another showdown last weekend, when Sullivan insisted that the committee had no right to view the original notebooks.

UNDER AN agreement reached Tuesday after weekend negotiations supervised by Sens. George J. Mitchell, D-Maine, and Warren B. Rudman, R-N.H., the committees reserved the right to have their chief counsels inspect the original notebooks. They also reserved the right to have a professional document examiner analyze them to discover possible alterations or identify missing pages. One source said a preliminary examination suggested that the deletions were "modest."

Two senior committee officials said the issue was so contentious that as recently as Monday it remained uncertain whether North would appear as a witness as scheduled beginning next Tuesday. Throughout the maneuvering, the committees have had the option to stop offering concessions to North and to begin potential criminal-contempt proceedings.

ONE COMMITTEE source said Sullivan and other attorneys involved in editing the notebooks would be subject to an obstruction of justice charge if relevant material were blacked out along with the "private," "personal" or "non-relevant" portions.

North, now an "action officer" at Marine headquarters, appeared in uniform for his sessions with committee members at the Rayburn House Office Building. He avoided reporters and shook hands with committee members before being sworn in and being formally granted limited immunity from prosecution.

Tuesday's session with North was a brief, preliminary one. Investigators were expected to work all night reading the new material in preparation for another closed session with North today in which interrogation will be limited by agreement with North's attorneys to what he told President Ronald Reagan about the Contras, and what others informed him about the president's knowledge.

AIDS 101

Beginning next fall, Iowa City ninth-graders will be required to take part in a new health class which will address the issue of AIDS as well as other venereal diseases.

The Iowa City School District is wisely implementing the course as a measure to educate, and hopefully protect, our younger citizens from the deadly disease.

While the debate on the means to control the AIDS epidemic rages on in Congress, it's encouraging to see local schools acting appropriately and acting now.

Regardless of people who panic and say there should be mandatory testing of homosexuals, aliens and even couples about to be married as the way to fight AIDS, presently the only viable method for combatting the disease is education.

Since the young are generally impressionable, eager and receptive to new ideas and to education in general, educating them about the deadly disease as early as possible is appropriate and will probably prove highly effective. Also, due to the fact that most teen-agers are easier to influence than adults, this is clearly the most plausible age group to focus preventive education on.

Many "adults" harbor prejudicial attitudes about AIDS and the homosexual population in general. These people are misinformed or too narrow-minded to give good advice and information. Public school districts provide the most logical source of value-free, correct information about the disease, and the Iowa City School District is to be commended.

Wrong replacement

It wasn't much of a surprise.

Sources in President Ronald Reagan's administration say that the president will most probably nominate Robert H. Bork, possibly as early as today, to become the next justice on the U.S. Supreme Court.

Bork, 60, has been described as an unbending conservative whose ideological beliefs are quite different than his predecessor Lewis Powell, a crucial swing vote on the court since he was appointed in 1972.

More likely than not, the Senate will confirm Bork, who has strong legal credentials. His only handicap may be his role in the Watergate scandal with former President Richard Nixon over a decade ago. Bork fired special prosecutor Archibald Cox after two other former Nixon officials had refused to do it.

But the Senate, if it has any backbone at all, should put up a fight against Bork. His appointment will probably spell the end of three decades of judicial activism and will be a further setback in the hard-fought quest to safeguard the rights of women, minorities, suspects in criminal cases and the press in the United States.

The Senate should be very careful about who is confirmed for the vacant position. The Senate should remember that this decision could reverse the direction of the court and destroy the gains that have been made during the past 30 years.

Otherwise, it is questionable whether justice will really have been served.

Careful celebration

The fourth of July weekend brings thoughts of independence, freedom, friends, barbecues, family picnics and, of course, fireworks.

State Reps. Daniel Jay, D-Centerville, and William Harbor, R-Henderson, are trying to push legislation to legalize class C fireworks. To those familiar with the language, Class C fireworks are the "biggies," including cherry bombs, roman candles and soldier salutes. The hope of these legislators is that the revised law will stop money from leaving the state in the form of Iowans buying fireworks elsewhere.

But according to a 1985 study done by the U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission, 57 percent of those involved in fireworks-related injuries were between the ages of one and 15. The Commission also reports that the numbers of injuries among young people are increasing every year. Although this group does not have the right to vote and its political influence is almost nonexistent, it nevertheless seems an error in judgment to ignore them.

Believing that a few more dollars coming into the state is more valuable than protecting Iowa's children from injury is simply a question of priorities.

Fireworks are fun. But they should be used cautiously by people trained to do so. People who show off by lighting fireworks should remember the consequences may be grave.

Pro sports in need of more training for blacks in media

THE Rev. Jesse Jackson has made some major inroads in terms of working with Baseball Commissioner Peter Ueberroth; they are developing an affirmative action plan that would, somewhere down the line, increase the number of blacks in the ranks of baseball management circles.

While professional sports seems to be the focus of attention in the area of equal rights, the idea of equal access for minorities to the other end of sports — broadcasting — must be looked at also.

While I realize that some of the sports broadcasters have "formal training," most of them do not. The training for most of these individuals presented itself because of access to opportunity. They were given a chance to do the job, and that chance came because they had what many might consider outstanding athletic careers. So when they hung up the cleats or put away the jock strap, there was the golden opportunity to continue clinging to the sport, to stay in the public eye and to make good money at the same time.

THERE SHOULD BE a training program for minority athletes who wish to go into broadcasting. The program should be jointly funded and sponsored by the sports in question (basketball, boxing and football). It would provide former athletes with the basic skills that are needed when you get behind the microphone.

But at this juncture I guess my question is: Where are the brothers? I can, to an extent, understand baseball announcers being white. Baseball is the major sport with the largest percentage of white Americans as players and spectators. Therefore, I can see why people like Harry Caray, Joe Garagiola, Bob Uecker and others would be along for the play-by-play. Furthermore, baseball is not exactly constant action on the field. You need fanatics whose love for the game enables them to reach way back for trivia to fill in those gaps that are made by the constantly delayed action.

Matthew Stelly

But what about football? What you have is an outright buddy system. Pat Summerall, Tom Brookshire and Frank Gifford are excellent broadcasters, but what about former football greats such as James Harris (one of the few blacks ever to play quarterback in the NFL), Alan Page, Otis Taylor or even the now-paralyzed Darryl Stingley? These are men who contributed to the game in a big way and who ought to be offered the same kind of on-the-job training that people like Jimmy Cefalo, Joe Namath, Roger Staubach and others have been fortunate enough to get. Ahmad Rashad is the exception, not the rule.

And pro basketball is a travesty as well. Not only do very few blacks announce the games, but the ones who are selected — with the exception of James Brown — appear to be almost illiterate. Have you ever heard Bill Russell's answer to a question like, "What do you think the coach is telling them at halftime?" It takes him almost ten minutes to complete a sentence.

THE TRAINING PROGRAM that I propose could help make the former greats in this sport — Wilt Chamberlain, Elgin Baylor and others who dominated the game once it was desegregated — into top announcers and commentators.

Finally, there is boxing. It's bad enough that most of the ringside seats — which cost a fortune — are always filled with white men and women looking on as blacks and Latinos beat the crap out of one another. But I think it really takes a lot of nerve to have white men sitting at ringside acting as experts.

Al Bernstein (the so-called "prince of pugilism"), Larry Merchant and Gil Clancey all sit at the top of ringside commentary. Yet not one of these people has had one single professional fight. But there they are, second guessing the managers of fighters and commenting on "mistakes" made by the boxers.

The training program would enable the ranks of sportscasting to be more representative of the sports that are being broadcasted. It would also expand what little creativity currently exists in broadcasting. And it would certainly humanize the ranks of people who, to this day, use terms like "greyhound," "horse," "bull" or "stud" to describe those who participate in professional sports.

Powell: A hard to replace Justice

FOR several years it has been clear that Justice Lewis F. Powell Jr. was one of the single most powerful people in America. On a U.S. Supreme Court more or less evenly divided between right and left, Powell occupied the moderate center, frequently casting the decisive fifth vote that turned minority views into opinions of the court.

In particular, he has provided the fifth vote in abortion and affirmative-action cases, and his retirement, announced last week on the final day of the court's term, puts both areas in jeopardy.

Though President Ronald Reagan has named Sandra Day O'Connor and Antonin Scalia to the court and has elevated William H. Rehnquist to be the chief justice, these appointments have not altered the court's basic ideological makeup. If the president nominates an ideological conservative, the right could count five votes on the Supreme Court, and it could ratify the Reagan-Meese-Rehnquist political agenda and make it the law of the land into the next century.

THIS MEANS THAT easy access to abortion could be reversed. It means that the course of race relations in this country could be changed. It means that the court could stand aside and allow civil liberties and the rights of criminal defendants to be curtailed. It means that the court would favor the rights of the authorities over the rights of individuals and that it would shirk from enforcing the Bill of Rights.

As a measure of Powell's importance in these areas, it is worth noting that in 20 civil-liberties cases that the court decided by one vote during the term just ended, Powell cast the deciding vote in each case. Some of these decisions went one way and some the other. An ideological Reagan appointee is likely to decide them all one way — Rehnquist's way.

Lewis Powell has been a good, fair and honest justice who understood that the role of the court is frequently to balance conflicting interests and rights. In that sense he could be called a judge who expressed the essence of a truly conservative judicial philosophy. He did not always decide cases as we would like. For example, he provided the fifth vote last year upholding Georgia's sodomy law, and this year he cast the fifth vote upholding Georgia's death-penalty law despite overwhelming evidence that it was applied in a racially discriminatory way. But, in his 15 years on the court, Powell has been willing to hear and consider all sides in a dispute and to arrive at an answer with a minimum of preconceptions.

IN SEEKING TO replace Powell, the president should look for another jurist like him — a centrist, a coalition builder rather than a ready vote for a political litany. And the Senate, which must approve the nomination, should consider whether the nominee's political and legal views fit the nation or just the president.

We have not always agreed with Powell's decisions, but we respect the integrity of his decision-making and his genuine effort to reach the wise decision in complicated, difficult cases. This is the highest attribute of a Supreme Court justice, and the president and the Senate should put it above all others in finding and seating a replacement. Many important questions of law and policy hinge on this nomination.

Laughing aloud

To the Editor:

I heard recently of the DI's decision to stop publishing Scott Raab's scathingly funny column and felt disappointed, both because I'll miss the acerbic, dead-on accuracy of Raab's humor, and also because of what this indicates about the sort of critics we will accept in our community.

Scott Raab's column was unabashed. It attacked sacred cows and local absurdities. It favored the frontal offensive: Instead of tiptoeing up to his subject, Raab slammed into it head-on. In other words, he was gutsy. Time after time after reading his column, I laughed out loud.

He was often tongue-in-cheek, and one main reason he offended some readers is that they read him narrowly and literally, missing the sarcasm. Yes, Raab's is a blunt, ferocious and incisive style. Yes, he is a shrewd observer of who we are. Which is why I, for one, would like him back.

Be fair

To the Editor:

Regarding the DI's presidential campaign coverage: Joe Biden has been on the front page three times this summer; Michael Dukakis — who grew a larger crowd than Biden in his most recent Iowa City visit (400 to 375) — appeared on page five; and a major Students for Jesse Jackson fund-raiser this past weekend went uncovered.

Please cover the candidates fairly. I know it's hard work, but I hope and expect you can do it.

Little boys

To the Editor:

Last Saturday night at a bar in Iowa City I witnessed a group of approximately 25 young men (more appropriately called "little boys") make complete fools of themselves. They were celebrating a bachelor party downtown (by bar-hopping) and decided to verbally abuse a young woman because she was overweight. They grabbed her identification card from her hand and ran into a bar.

I was working at this bar and saw the woman come in with tears in her eyes, trying to get her identification. These "little boys" began to chant "get out" and screamed obscenities at her. Eventually she was given her card back and one of the boys was slapped on the wrist by a police officer.

The sad part of this story is that incidents like this occur frequently. I do not understand why groups of immature people feel it is necessary to treat other human beings badly because they are not "beautiful people." This abysmal behavior is unfortunately common in elementary school. There is no excuse for it in college.

I'm sure this whole incident will be a big "joke" to all the "little boys" who were a part of this, but the young woman will have the painful memory for the rest of her life. In addition, she was visiting Iowa City from out-of-state. Hey boys — way to make a good impression.

But next time you go on one of your rampages, think about how you would feel if someone did that to your sister or your mother.

FITZWATER SAID Reagan has urged the U.N. Security Council to meet before the middle of July to vote on a cease-fire resolution and that the United States will be "consulting" at the United Nations on a second resolution calling for sanctions against any nation refusing to comply with the cease-fire terms. The first resolution has U.N. support, but the Soviet Union and China have opposed the second.

Fitzwater announced that Reagan is sending U.N. Ambassador Vernon Walters to "several capitals" for talks on the resolutions and that Secretary of State George P. Shultz is being sent to the U.N. Security Council meeting.

Meanwhile, a Washington Post-ABC News Poll shows that Americans strongly support the principle of a military presence to protect U.S. interests in the region but remain divided about the reflagging plan.

THE NATIONWIDE telephone survey of 1,506 people between June 25 and June 29 found that 79 percent of those questioned favor maintaining a military presence to protect U.S. interests in the region, with only 20 percent opposed. Of those supporting the military presence, 43 percent said it is important enough to risk war while 56 percent said it is not.

Asked whether the United States should protect the reflagged Kuwaiti tankers even at the risk of being attacked, 49 percent agreed and 49 percent disagreed. This is a small decline in support for the reflagging since a survey a month ago.

The survey also found that Republicans favor the reflagging plan by 60 to 39 percent, while Democrats oppose it by similar margins. Men favor the reflagging by 61 to 38 percent, while women are opposed by 59 to 39 percent.

DEFENSE SECRETARY Caspar W. Weinberger told reporters that Kuwait has agreed to provide oil for U.S. naval forces in the region and provide bases for helicopters involved in mine sweeping. He also said that Oman has agreed to provide military-access rights and that Saudi Arabia has agreed to fly an additional sophisticated radar plane.

what they ask for."

STEWART SAID weed-out classes, in which many students receive grades below 'C,' also have an effect on GPAs.

"They work against the goals of education," he said. "When half a professor's class is failing, it says a lot about that professor."

While lower grade points may affect student job prospects, UI Business and Liberal Arts Placement Office Director Nancy Noth said potential employers also consider other aspects of a student's education.

"Employers don't just look at GPA," she said. "If a student has a 2.6 GPA, but has taken courses the employer considers important, then grade point will not adversely affect that student's chance of being hired."

Employers are, however, swayed by high grade points, she said.

"Accounting firms want 3.0 GPAs and above, and it's much the same across the board," she said. "But if a student takes courses in departments where the grading is tough, then we try to provide employers with that information."

THE PLACEMENT office is in the process of compiling a report that would break down grades by department and major, she said, so employers can see what kind of competition a student has gone through.

"It's important because not only are students competing against others from this university, they are competing against students from other schools that may not have the standards we do," she said.

While grade points and future job prospects are important, Marshall said educators must view grading in a broader context.

"If we frame it as a problem, then right away we're talking about changing the grading system," he said. "It is not a problem — it is a condition of schooling that different disciplines evaluate in different forms."

"Grades are statements to the community at large about the success of an individual, but they communicate to the student as well," he added. "We don't know which audience is most important — whether grades should be a rigid statement to the community or a statement to the student saying: 'You've made significant progress in this course and you should be rewarded.'" water protection law that imposes new taxes and license fees on household cleaners, landfills, farm chemicals and other pollutants.

Fees from the new permits to sell the products, which cost between $10-$3,000, depending on gross sales, will likely be passed on to consumers. The funds will be used to educate the public about groundwater pollution and pay for research on ways to prevent contamination.

ALTHOUGH SOME COSTS for farmers will be going up, lawmakers also adopted bills designed to help family farmers.

One of the new laws will extend to two years, the amount of time farmers are given to repurchase their land after it has been repossessed.

Another new law will limit to 1,500 acres the amount of land corporations and authorized farm trusts can own. It was designed to protect small family farm operations.

Teachers in the state's 436 public school districts may be a little less destitute after Tuesday. A measure which boosts beginning teacher salaries to $18,000 a year takes effect today.

The new law will allow the state to spend $92.5 million to give teachers average pay raises totaling nearly $3,000 this fall.

OTHER NEW laws include:

- corporations: New tax laws will go into effect based on federal tax laws of 1987. Corporations are expected to pay an additional $15 million in taxes because of the changes;

- employees: Iowa will become the first state in the nation to ban random drug testing of employees. The tests will only be allowed if a company has probable cause. Workers who test positive must be provided drug counseling and treatment by the employer. Those violating new law would be subject to simple misdemeanor, which is punishable by a 30-day jail term or a $100 fine.

Sackter

"The coffee shop is Bill's legacy," Morrow said. "Not only are these people who work there dispensing coffee, they're giving a lot of themselves. And who are the better teachers of social work than those who are on the receiving end?"

MORROW SAID THE memory of Sackter is still alive.

"This is the only time in which a person of limited intellect — an idiot is what they called Bill when he was institutionalized — was honored," Morrow said, referring to the numerous achievement awards Sackter won. "We need to keep that alive."

Tuesday's celebration was an effort to do just that.

"There are probably very few students still here at the university who would remember Bill. He is really a legend," Morrow said. "I've heard others describe Bill as 'that guy who ran the coffee shop who had the movie made about him.' That's missing the point.

"I think those who pass through the coffee shop will be touched by the stories and the pictures," he said. "I think there is something of his spirit left in that room. There's something imbued in this school and there always will be."

"There's a new bird in town!"

Connors advances to quarterfinals

WIMBLEDON, England (UPI)—Jimmy Connors, the last American man in the tournament, produced the most remarkable comeback of a storied career Tuesday to reach the quarterfinals of Wimbledon.

Connors seemed a destroyed old warrior late in the third set, then thrilled an adoring Center Court crowd with an incredible 1-6, 1-6, 7-5, 6-4, 6-2 victory over Mikael Pernfors.

Pernfors, the Swede who won two NCAA Championships for the University of Georgia, swept through the first two sets with ease and led 4-1 in the third. It was at this point when Connors turned embarrassment into triumph, winning six of the next seven games.

Again in the fourth set Pernfors surged ahead as he came within a point of going up 4-0. But he double faulted on break point in the fifth game and Connors followed with another break in the seventh.

IN THE FINAL set, even though the muscles in his right leg were cramping and he needed treatment during changeovers, Connors broke in the third and fifth games for a 4-1 lead. Pernfors got one break back in the sixth game, but Connors broke one more time in the next game, raising his left arm in triumph.

All that was left for the 34-year-old American was to hold service, and he did this at love, ending the 3-hour and 39-minute contest with a cross-court backhand off service return.

Pernfors had rallied from a two-set deficit only a day earlier to upset Tim Mayotte.

If Connors had lost, the United States would have been left without a representative in the quarterfinals for the first time since 1967. Instead, the two-time champion has to return for his next match Wednesday against hard-serving Slobodan Zivojnovic of Yugoslavia.

There were a couple of other close calls, most notably to Chris Evert and Pam Shriver, but otherwise form held up on another steamy day.

IVAN LENDL, the second seed, won in straight sets for the first time while Swedes Mats Wilander and Stefan Edberg, seeded Nos. 3 and 4, each dropped a set for the first time.

Among the women, seven of the top eight seeds made it to the quarterfinals, led by five-time defending champion Martina Navratilova and No. 2 Steffi Graf.

Evert struggled for 2 hours and 7 minutes on Court No. 2, the so-called jinx court of Wimbledon, before emerging with a 6-2, 2-6, 7-5 decision over unseeded Ros Fairbank of South Africa.

Shriver, seeded fifth, had an even more testing time, surviving two match points to overcome No. 16 Sylvia Hanika, 6-7 (4-7), 7-5, 10-8.

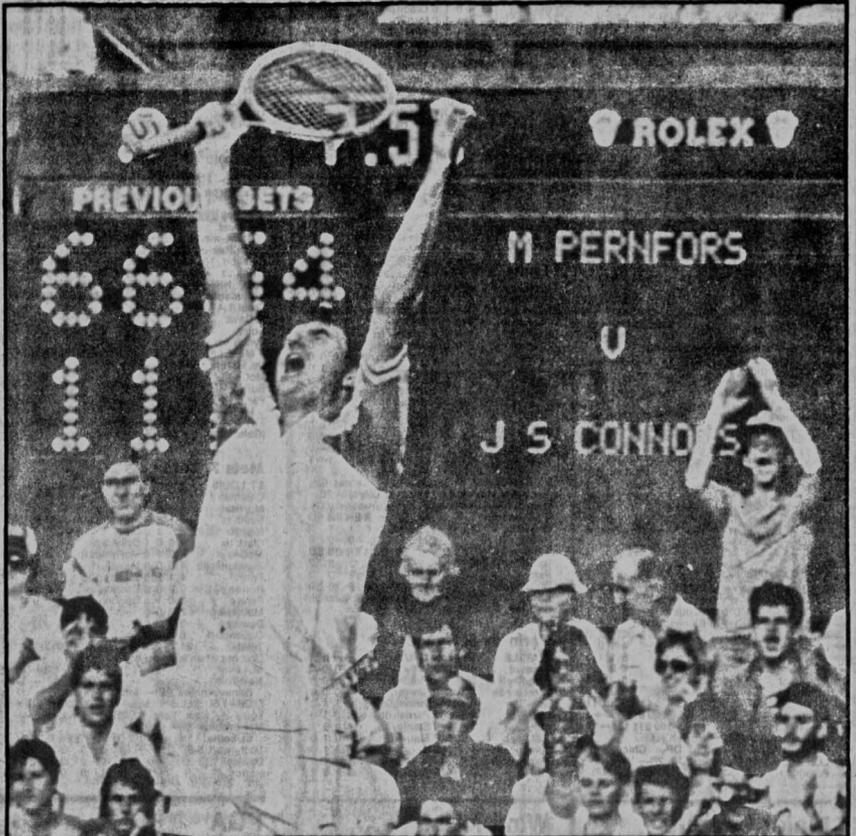

Navratilova, seeking to equal the Wimbledon record of eight singles titles, crushed Gigi Fernandez, 6-3, 6-1, and has yielded 12 games in four matches. She has won 38 successive singles matches at the All-England Club since 1981 and has reached the quarterfinals 13 straight years.

GRAF, WITH 43 consecutive victories since November, was tested for the first time here in beating 17-year-old Jana Novotna of Czechoslovakia, 6-4, 6-3.

Wilander overcame some early problems to defeat 14th seed Emilio Sanchez of Spain, 2-6, 7-6 (7-1), 6-3, 7-5, and Edberg beat Jakov Hlasek of Switzerland, 6-3, 6-7 (5-7), 6-1, 6-4. Neither Wilander nor Edberg has made it past the fourth round before.

Also reaching the quarterfinals were No. 9 Henri Leconte, No. 11 Pat Cash and two unseeded players, Zivojnovic and Anders Jarryd.

Leconte, an excellent grass court player, beat eighth seed Andres Gomez, 7-5, 7-5, 7-5; Cash, a semifinalist at Wimbledon in 1984 and a quarterfinalist last year, crushed Guy Forget, 6-2, 6-3, 6-4; Zivojnovic, a semifinalist here last year, ended the hopes of Peter Doohan, the man who upset Boris Becker, 6-2, 6-4, 7-6 (13-11), and Jarryd eliminated Russian Alexander Volkov, 7-6 (7-5), 7-5, 6-7 (4-7), 6-4.

Jimmy Connors shows his excitement Tuesday after defeating Mikael Pernfors in a fourth-round match at Wimbledon. Connors came back from two sets down to win 1-6, 1-6, 7-5, 6-4, 6-2.

NCAA reinstates basketball scholarships

DALLAS (UPI)—The nation's major college athletic powers Tuesday rejected the cost-cutting pleas of the NCAA Presidents Commission and defeated proposals to limit scholarships and trim the size of football coaching staffs.

In addition, delegates to the NCAA's special convention shocked the Presidents Commission by overturning a decision made last January and reinstating two lost scholarships to Division I basketball programs.

"We made a mistake," said Presidents Commission chairman John Slaughter, chancellor of the University of Maryland. "We shouldn't have come here with specific numbers in mind."

"I wouldn't say it is frustrating. But it is disappointing. You have to be realistic. There are issues here that are very important to a lot of people."

NEWLY APPOINTED NCAA executive director Dick Schultz said he did not view the action Tuesday as a slap at the Presidents Commission.

"What I heard the membership saying out there," Schultz said, "was that we have to cut back, but maybe assistance to students is not the way to do it."

Schools in Division I-A voted 69-39 against reducing total football scholarships from 95 to 90. Of the schools that finished among last year's top 20, the only ones to vote in favor of the scholarship cuts were from the sponsoring Pac 10 Conference — Arizona State, Arizona, UCLA and Washington.

They then tabled a proposal that would have cut 27 scholarships in 21 men's and women's Division I sports.

Next, the delegates tabled the amendment that would have cut the size of Division I assistant football coaching staffs from nine to eight.

FINALLY, THEY overruled the convention's chairman and brought to the floor a proposal to boost men's and women's basketball scholarships from 13 to 15. The scholarship limit in that sport had been cut at the NCAA's convention in San Diego last January, but they were reinstated Tuesday in a 164-124 vote.

"We didn't actually increase anything," North Carolina State basketball coach Jim Valvano said. "We just stayed where we are."

Even Slaughter voted in favor of returning the basketball scholarship limit to 15.

"I thought it was a bad idea in January when we cut the scholarships," Slaughter said.

Division I-AA schools first voted for a sharp scholarship reduction throughout their programs. But when Division I basketball regained its lost scholarships, the Division I-AA schools voted again and restored the scholarships they had cut only an hour before.

Division I-AA schools did reduce the size of football coaching staffs from seven to six and in Division II scholarships were trimmed in 24 sports.

The tone of the day's voting was set by the decision on major college football scholarships.

University of Washington president William P. Gerberding touched off the debate by saying the NCAA convention needed to leave a symbol behind.

Iowa AAU teams still alive

By Eric J. Hess
The Daily Iowan

The field for the National Amateur Athletic Union 19 and Under National Basketball Championship has been cut to 16.

Five pools of four teams began action Sunday. After three games of intrapool play, the top 16 have emerged with all three Iowa entries successful.

The Iowa Host Team, Señor Pablos, made the cut for what will be a double-elimination tournament starting today. A champion will be named in the finals on Saturday.

Señor Pablos fell 95-85 in the last game Tuesday at Carver-Hawkeye Arena to Pacific Northwest.

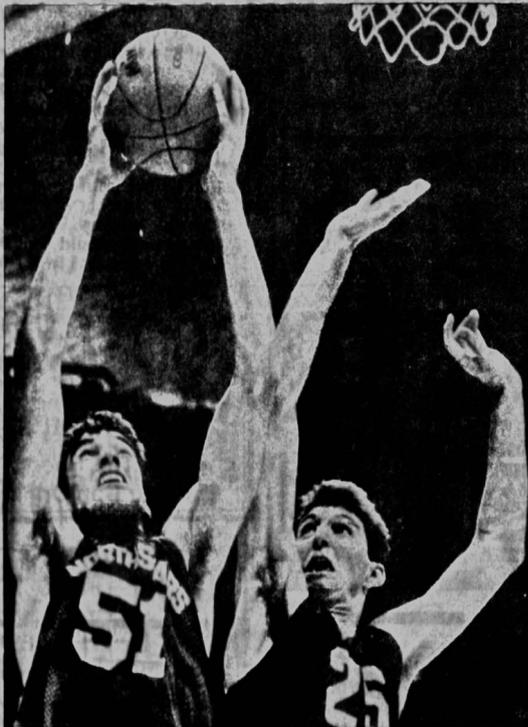

JEFF CURTIS AND Peter Charleston led Pacific Northwest with 26 points each. Charleston also pulled down 13 rebounds.

Señor Pablos' Robert Johnson popped in 16 points to lead his team. Iowa recruits Brig Tubbs and Rodell Davis were held to two points.

Tubbs shot 1 for 8 from the field but grabbed 10 rebounds. The 6-foot-8 Tubbs was less than pleased with his performance. He said he'll get a chance to relax and get away from basketball after the AAU tournament is over, but today the club will meet a strong Michigan team at 4 p.m. at the Arena.

Davis said he's exhausted. "It's tiring," Davis, one of Iowa Coach Tom Davis' four recruits, said. "Playing in tournament after tournament, all-star game after all-star game."

RODELL DAVIS, WHO along

Iowa's Wade Lookingbill rips down a rebound in AAU action.

with Tubbs plays in Iowa City's Prime Time League, said he has played in seven all-star games in Illinois and Iowa. And now he's playing for Iowa in the AAU tournament.

Rodell Davis said that he hasn't spoken with Coach Davis directly about his role as a Hawkeye next season. But he expects to be either playing an off-guard spot or a forward position. "I'm not really looking for a starting position," he said. But, Rodell Davis added, five or 10 minutes coming off the bench would be suffice for his first season, just enough to make a contribution.

In other action Tuesday, the two other Iowa teams were winners. The Estherville Northstars, who suffered a loss to the Metropolitan Gauchos on Monday, returned to overpower Arkansas 120-90.

TROY SKINNER LED the way with a 28-point performance. Curtis Stuckey, who has signed to play college basketball for Drake, added 21 for the winners.

Iowa Sports Supply won by forfeit 15-0. Its scheduled opponent, Florida Gold Coast, did not arrive for the tournament.

The two Iowa teams, which finished first and second at the Iowa AAU at Des Moines in April, will meet today at 8 a.m. in the first round of the tournament at the Arena.

In other games Tuesday, Michigan topped Central of Illinois 129-107; South Carolina downed New England (New Hampshire) 87-59; Georgia nipped Missouri Valley 70-67; Inland Empire stopped Ozark of Missouri 85-71; Indiana defeated Southeastern 101-91; and North Carolina overpowered Lake Erie 117-96.

The schedule for today's games in bracket order with times and places in parentheses include the Estherville Northstars versus Iowa Sports Supply (8 a.m. at the Arena), North Carolina versus Pacific Northwest (10 a.m. at the Arena), Central of Illinois versus Georgia (noon at the Arena), New England versus Metropolitan Gauchos (2 p.m. at Regina High School Gymnasium), Michigan versus Señor Pablos (4 p.m. at the Arena), Ozark versus Arkansas (6 p.m. at the Arena), Inland Empire versus Indiana (2 p.m. at the Arena) and South Carolina versus Lake Erie (4 p.m. at Regina Gymnasium).

Cuthpert scores 30 as Fitzpatrick's rolls

By Marc Bona
The Daily Iowan

Had Tom Davis been in the East Gymnasium of Iowa City High Tuesday night, he would have been pleased — not just at seeing hard-played Prime Time League basketball but seeing it played by past, present and future Iowa Hawkeyes.

Iowa recruit Curtis Cuthpert, who was supposed to play in the Amateur Athletic Union's 19 and Under National Basketball Championship, scored 30 points to help lead Fitzpatrick's to a 121-118 victory over The Athlete's Foot.

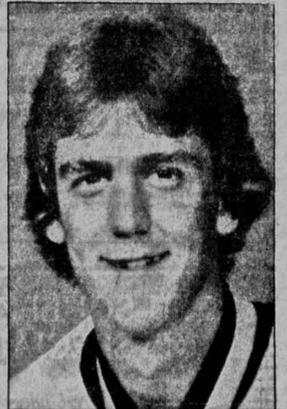

AAU officials hadn't secured Cuthpert's birth certificate for proof of his age as of Monday, causing him to miss AAU action.

IOWA'S ED HORTON also scored 30 points for Fitzpatrick's. Bernard Dutchik, a student at Kirkwood Community College, added 19 for the winners. Kevin Drahozal, a 1977 Iowa City Regina High graduate, grabbed seven rebounds and poured in 17 points.

But it was Iowa's Al Lorenzen of The Athlete's Foot who took game-high honors, scoring 31 points and tying Drahozal with seven boards. Lorenzen had several forceful dunks which brought the rim a little closer to the floor.

"Everybody came out here a little tight because of the long weekend," Horton said. "But we got it going. It was a good game."

Former Hawkeye Todd Berkanpas scored 29 points, including six three-pointers, in a losing cause.

Todd Berkanpas

FITZPATRICK'S LED at the half, 58-49, but Berkanpas helped The Athlete's foot mount a comeback when he canned four straight three-pointers late in the second half. He hit his fourth with one minute, 49 seconds remaining, to draw his team within three, 118-115. After a miss, he tried again with 34 seconds left and hit to tie the score.

But Cuthpert proved he can play at crunch-time, canning a shot from inside the key with four seconds remaining. Berkanpas threw up a shot at the buzzer, but Fitzpatrick's Kevin Drahozal flew in front of him and blocked it.

In another PTL contest, Southgate Development pounded First National Bank, 148-112, despite a 47-point effort from Iowa's Bill Jones.

NCAA Division II schools make cuts

DALLAS (UPI)—Going where the larger schools refused to go, NCAA Division II members Tuesday sliced the legal maximum number of athletic scholarships.

While Division I-A institutions asked for further study and Division I-AA schools voted down the grant reductions, Division II schools closed their business session of the NCAA special convention by cutting five football scholarships and a total of 32 grants in other sports.

An attempt to stay competitive led to the Division I-AA schools' action. They waited for the results of the Division I-A votes before casting ballots, then matched the larger institutions' legislation.

Division I-AA did cut the size of football coaching staffs with a 52-39 vote in the morning. But after some discussion, the group voted again in the afternoon. The result was the same — a 13-vote majority — so beginning Aug. 1, 1988, coaching staffs must be down to six assistant coaches.

Other than that, the Division I-AA schools adopted the same restrictions on spring football practice and recruiting limits that had been passed by the NCAA's largest schools.

Bulls' Banks sidelined for six months

CHICAGO (UPI) — Chicago Bulls forward Gene Banks suffered a ruptured Achilles tendon Tuesday and could be sidelined for up to six months, the team announced.

Banks is scheduled to be operated on Wednesday by team physician John Hefferon, a team spokesman said.

The team is not practicing and it was not immediately known how Banks suffered the injury, the spokesman said.

Banks will be in a cast for two months and it will be six months before he can resume any running.

Banks, in his second year for the Bulls, played in 63 games last year averaging 9.7 points and 4.9 rebounds a game. He shot .529 from the field and .767 from the free throw line. He was picked up by the Bulls after playing four years at San Antonio.

Rummells gives timely golfing advice

DES MOINES, Iowa (UPI) — Dave Rummells, a West Branch native nearing the $200,000 career mark in only his second year on the PGA Tour, has some advice for novice golfers seeking the secret to success:

"Stay away from double bogeys."

Rummells, 29, the former captain of the University of Iowa golf team, has won $113,725 so far this year, but he says he's still battling that fearsome foe of professionals and weekend duffers alike — the double bogey.

"You can make some bogeys and live with it, but those doubles are killers," said Rummells, who was stung by three double bogeys and a triple bogey in the U.S. Open.

He won $83,227 in his first year on the tour, finishing ninth in the Hawaiian Open and 10th in the Tournament Players Championship.

His best finish this year has been ninth in the Doral Open. He won $15,400 Sunday for his 11th-place finish in the Greater Hartford Open.

Chicago marathon will change seasons

CHICAGO (UPI) — America's Marathon-Chicago, which hosted a world record effort three years ago, will be shifted from an autumn date to the spring, with the next race scheduled for 1988, organizers said.

Bob Bright, executive director of the race, said Monday the only chance for a major television contract would be to hold the event in the spring, forcing the move from the fall. The 1988 race will be run May 8.

Bright said negotiations with ABC-TV have not been finalized but are going well.

A marathon has been run in Chicago for 10 years, always in the fall. In 1984, Steve Jones of Great Britain set a world record in the Chicago race.

To fill the hole left by the switch in dates, America's Marathon organizers will plan to host a half-marathon, just over 13 miles, during the original Oct. 25 marathon date.

Ditka looks to cut excess quarterbacks

IOWA CITY, Iowa (UPI) — Chicago Bears Coach Mike Ditka says his NFL team's training camp will revolve around a new math equation — one quarterback position can be divided by three but not by five.

To that end, Ditka said Monday that recuperating quarterback Jim McMahon has his team's starting job until somebody takes it away from him, but the days for two of Chicago's other four Bear signal-callers are numbered.

"If he's well, he's going to be our starter until somebody else can beat him out, and if Jim's well, it's going to be tough to beat him out," Ditka said.

"I think the psychological barrier will be a little tough for him, but I think he'll get over it," Ditka added. "He's where he should be. He was too heavy last year, he knows that."

McMahon is in great shape and throwing the ball at about 70 percent his normal velocity since undergoing shoulder surgery Dec. 12, Ditka said, adding that the quarterback should be 100 percent by the time training camp opens Aug. 1 in Platteville, Wis.

Local raceway provides down-home thrills

By Marc Bona
The Daily Iowan

WEST LIBERTY, Iowa — Fourteen miles from Iowa City, in the middle of much farmland and few houses, is the West Liberty Raceway. It does not have the glamour of the Indianapolis 500. There are no luxury box seats, no plush infield with a nine-hole golf course, no pit lanes and no announcing from Jackie Stewart. They call it drafting.

Instead, there are wooden stands, a dirt track and Phil Roberts calling the action. It's a place where the Mario Andretti, the Tom Snevas and the Rick Mearses of the Indy world should compete at least once a year to remind them what racing life is like for a lot of local, down-home folks. A place where people can stand in line beneath posters advertising Loretta Lynn and the Nitty Gritty Dirt Band and pay only $1 for a beer. Life on the quarter-mile dirt track is a thundering pack of cars, skidding sideways on the banks then speeding forward on the straightaways, kicking up cakes of dirt as they go along.

SATURDAY NIGHT, drivers in four classifications — bombers, pro stock, modifieds and late models — turned out to compete in the Midseason Championships of the Winston Racing Series.

One driver in the bomber division, Tom Hansen, 22, is a UI senior majoring in business. Hansen, who said he's always been interested in cars, first came to the races as a spectator and liked what he saw.

"I came out to the races, and it looked like a lot of fun," said Hansen, who drives a '73 Ford Galaxy 500. "It's the only place where you can smash another car without getting a ticket.

Hansen, along with Mike Kral, 18, and Mike Jones, 20, is trying to form a racing team called Leisure Racing.

"WE CALL IT 'Leisure Racing' because that's what it is for us — leisure," Hansen said. "Anybody who wants to put their name on our car and who's willing to sponsor us is more than welcome."

But not everything is fun and games. "Every week something breaks," Kral said.

"But it's awful fun," Jones added.

And it's fun for the fans who sit in the grandstands amid the aromas of popcorn from the concessions booths and gas from the cars. Some of the race-watchers are newcomers to the track; others are regulars.

Don Miller comes "every week, since they stopped racing in Davenport." Miller, who said he and his wife, Laura, make the trek from Davenport, used to help build cars in the 1950s.

"The races are about the same everywhere," Miller said. "It's just the drivers who are different."

Although the surroundings were different, the results were similar. Tires flew into the infield and cars slammed into the red and white walls.

Some cars raced to victory, leaving the rest of the pack in a cloud of dust — literally — as the checkered flag waved. The winning drivers would get out of their cars after their additional lap, stand proudly in front of their cars and hold a facsimile of the checkered flag as a photographer captured them on film. The photos are sold for a dollar. Flags can also be purchased.

Others would never see the finish line, limping off with burnt out engines, blown tires or some other mechanical problems.

Valvano turns NCAA decision

DALLAS (UPI) — On a day supposedly dedicated to cutting costs, North Carolina State basketball coach Jimmy Valvano convinced the NCAA special convention to approve additional spending.

At Valvano's urging, Division I members reversed an earlier vote in overriding a ruling from the chair that increasing basketball scholarships was not a proper job for this "cost-cutting" convention.

Then, by a 40-vote margin (164-124-7), they increased the limit for major college basketball scholarships from 13 to 15 — restoring the two grants lost at this past January's regular NCAA convention.

"We didn't actually increase anything," Valvano said as members of the media crowded around his seat near the back of the convention hall. "We hadn't gone back to 13 yet. No one has been operating at 13. So, actually, all we wound up doing was maintain the status quo."

"We didn't actually increase anything," Jim Valvano says of the NCAA's decision to add two scholarships to college basketball's budget. "We hadn't gone back to 13 yet. No one has been operating at 13. So, actually, all we wound up doing was maintain the status quo."

VALVANO SAID the vote in January to cut overall basketball grants from 15 to 13, "was done somewhat in haste. It was more of a knee-jerk reaction to what appeared to be a mood to cut costs at every level of college athletics.

"I think everybody thought that a lot more cuts were coming and we were just leading the way," he said. "When it became apparent at this convention that that wasn't going to be the case, I think people quickly agreed that there was no reason for basketball to be the fall guy."

Valvano said this doesn't mean that cuts won't be coming in the future.

"To think change is not going to take place," he said, "is wrong."

"SOME PEOPLE VIEW this as a cost-containment session that didn't go that way. It was supposed to be a forum, to get some provocative thoughts out. I don't think it will be any tougher to make cuts in the future."

Valvano took exception to one speaker opposing the increase who claimed that if basketball teams should come up short-handed, they could always recruit a couple of walk-ons from among the student body.

"That was oversimplification," Valvano said. "We are committed to a search for excellence, seeking the best. If we had been limited to 13, we would have wanted the best 13 we could find."

"What I think came forward was the thought that while we need to cut costs, we should look for cuts in other avenues, in non-people ways."

"There are a lot of ways you can save money — where you play, who you play against."

"I hope people don't take the wrong signal from all this," Valvano said. "We did table a lot of stuff, but we did what this special session was supposed to do — and that was to produce some thought."

NCAA puts stiff penalty on fouling

DALLAS (UPI) — The NCAA Basketball Rules Committee Tuesday took action to try to cut down on intentional fouls by making the penalty stiffer.

"It's distasteful to people to see the game stopped by somebody intentionally fouling," said Edward Steitz, the NCAA's rules editor. "It takes an eternity to play the end of the ball game because of the all the fouls."

When an advertisement contains an error that is not the fault of the advertiser, the liability of The Daily Iowan shall not exceed supplying a correction letter and a correct insertion for the space occupied by the incorrect item, not the entire advertisement.

A player who is fouled intentionally will still get two free throws, but his team will also keep the ball next season. "We're trying to cut down fouling toward the end of the ball game as much as we can," said Steitz, who is representing Springfield College at the current NCAA special convention.

"Unless you're directly playing the ball, we've set down guidelines for that to be called an intentional foul. The thinking behind it is if you increase the penalty, it serves as a deterrent."

STEITZ SAID THERE were times when it was more prudent to foul a player than to let him try a 3-point shot.

He said, "We saw some signs of it in a couple of games in the NCAA tournament in the early rounds. In the Syracuse-Kentucky Wesleyan game, it wasn't even funny. The Kentucky Wesleyan kid chased the weakest free-throw shooter on the Syracuse team all over the court, fouled him and he went to the line and he missed (the free throws)."

Other serious discussion at the rules committee meeting centered on the 3-point shot. There is still support to move the 3-point line back from 21 feet to the Olympic distance of 21-9.

The idea was tabled.

"The committee felt the rule did what it purported to do," Steitz said. "The shooting percentage was at 38 percent and that's what the research had shown us (prior to implication of the rule). It became a total part of the game."

THE COMMITTEE'S research also showed that the 3-point goal has won some converts. Steitz said that 85 percent of the coaches who responded to his questionnaire like the 3-point shot "and that included many who before were unalterably opposed to it."

"As we moved along the coaches learned how to use the 3-point rule offensively and defensively. They came off with the feeling that the game has never been more exciting."

Other potential rule changes discussed by the rules committee included going to an Olympic-style game in which teams have the option of taking free throws or possession and ways to minimize the rough play under the basket.

Steitz said the later could be solved by a wider lane, but the committee took no action.

The rules editor also said his meeting was marked by the usual drastic suggestions.

"We always have radical suggestions," Steitz said. "We always have before us the no foul-out rule, where a player could not foul out of a game. We have people who play a lot of international ball who want to limit the times out to two per half. These come up every year."

Steitz, himself, has a rather radical suggestion to improve the game.

"What I'd like to see, if I have my druthers but I don't think I'll see it in my lifetime, is to raise the basket," he said. "Make it 12 feet"

Evert advances to quarterfinals

WIMBLEDON, England (UPI) — For just a fleeting moment during the final stages of a difficult match, Chris Evert began to think about history.

Standing in the brilliant sunshine of a crowded Court 2, struggling for survival against an unseeded South African player, Evert suddenly thought about who she was and how much she has accomplished.

To what extent this flashback affected her game no one ever knows, but she did weather a difficult moment to defeat Ros Fairbank, 6-2, 2-6, 7-5, Tuesday to reach the quarterfinals at Wimbledon for the 15th time in 16 years.

"My record in Grand Slams crossed my mind, I have to admit," Evert said of that moment in the third set on what is known as a jinx court. "I'm concentrating out there, not really thinking about these other things. But sometimes I start to think the worst, and I thought for a second: 'The round of 16, I'd prefer not to lose now if I have a choice.'"

"I NEVER THOUGHT I would lose but you just never know on this surface."

Evert, ever the optimist, knows she did not play to her standard Tuesday, and she admits she was fortunate to win. But she takes this negative and turns it into a positive.

"I've had one struggle, it's not as though I've gone three sets every match," she said. "I'm not too worried. If you look at my record at Wimbledon and other tournaments I've always had one match where I go three sets or maybe don't play to the best of my ability."

"When that happens I think I usually play better afterwards. Condition-wise out there I never felt tired and I hung in there, which means the desire is still there."

Hagler's wife files for court protection

HINGHAM, Mass (UPI) — The wife of former middleweight champion Marv Hagler has filed a family abuse petition seeking court protection from her husband because she "fears physical harm," a court clerk said Tuesday.

Bertha Hagler filed the civil petition last Friday in Hingham District Court, a non-criminal action requesting court-ordered restraint, the clerk said.

"She just filed it to let the (court) know she fears physical harm," the clerk said.

A hearing on the matter was continued from last Friday to today.

Hagler, who has been in seclusion since his surprising and bitter defeat against Sugar Ray Leonard April 6 in Las Vegas, is not charged with any criminal offense, officials said.

Hagler, who recently moved from Brockton to Hanover in Massachusetts, could not be reached for comment, but his lawyer, Morris Goldings, said the issue was a family dispute.

"The matter and it's a matter of privacy in the family," Goldings said. "I really don't have any comment on it."

HANOVER POLICE Chief

Marvin Hagler

Paul Lingley said his department had papers to serve on Hagler, but did not know his whereabouts.

Lingley said he expected Hagler to show up in court on Wednesday. Goldings said he had planned to meet with Hagler to discuss the matter.

Pat Petronelli, Hagler's manager, said Tuesday that he had talked with the former champion and Bertha Hagler, but did not reveal any details of the conversation.

Petronelli said Goldings had told him not to discuss the matter.

Amana offers chance to relax

By Marc Bona
The Daily Iowan

Monday's 21st annual Amana V.I.P. Golf Tournament highlighted the play of professional golfers and celebrities from the sports and entertainment worlds in a relaxed atmosphere.

Most of the participants seemed to have fun at the one-day event from the start, through a one-hour rain delay in late afternoon, right up to the end.

Basketball coaches Bobby Knight (Indiana) and Johnny Orr (Iowa State) traded digs before teeing off in early morning. Fuzzy Zoeller, who finished with a 2-under-par 70, laughed and joked with reporters immediately after coming off the 18th.

Basketball coaches Bobby Knight and Bob Wenzel tied for first in the free-throw shooting contest, each hitting four of five.

THE EIGHTH AND 13th holes were designated as "Closest to the Pin" honors. Andy North won Amana kitchen appliances for his shot which landed 14 feet, 11½ inches from the pin.

North, who played basketball and football before a back ailment started him playing golf, was the only non-coach who shot baskets at the hoop erected near the first tee.

Don Pooley won a 1987 Buick Skyhawk after his shot landed 3 feet, 10¼ inches from the pin. The eighth hole is a par-3, 196-yard hole. The 13th is a par-3, 181-yard hole where the tee is elevated and the green is almost entirely surrounded by water.

On the ninth green, Doug Tewell, who finished at 67, one behind winner Vance Heafner, hammed it up, prompting the crowd to cheer a fellow golfer in his group.

Chicago Bears' Coach Mike Ditka told the crowd he was in "a promising mood," so he promised another Super Bowl victory. Ditka said the last time he made the same promise the Bears became world champions.

Not everyone was as relaxed, though. JoAnne Carner, one of three women currently on the LPGA Tour and one of eight pros competing at Amana with career earnings exceeding $8 million, looked a little tense on the course, smoking a cigarette up until she had her picture taken seconds before she teed off.

SEVERAL AMANA Refrigeration employees, who usually accounted for three or four players of the fivesomes, expressed their anxiety, turning to family and friends in the gallery before teeing off and saying they were nervous.

West Branch natives Dave Rummells and Marv Cook teamed up, as Cook — an Iowa football player — caddied for pro Rummells, who recently competed in the U.S. Open at San Francisco and is currently 53rd on the PGA money leaders list with $113,725 earned.

Rummells, a crowd favorite, finished at 1-under-par 71 on the par-72 Finkbine course. Celebrities were also crowd favorites, providing the fans with colorful scenarios. Country singer Roy Clark hurried onto the first tee, spoke a few words to the audience and proceeded to hit a "mulligan" — a shot which is more to the right than straight.

Pat Boone, who spoke candidly during the rain delay about his chances of becoming the new PTL head, wore plaid, baggy knickers, drooping below his knees, looking a bit like the Ben Hogans and Bob Jones' of old.

Spanky McFarland, formerly Spanky of "Our Gang" fame, criticized his own play as he swaggered his rotund figure around the links. "We're playing best team ball, but I'm not helping my team much," he said.

George Lindsey, best known for his portrayal of Goober on "The Andy Griffith Show," addressed the crowd prior to teeing off.

"If there's a golfer in the group, let us know if there is a tournament when you're involved and we'll come and laugh at you," Lindsey said.

Fans seemed to enjoy the action, especially three excited young men watching Willie Mosconi hit from the middle of a fairway.

"Hey, Willie!" they yelled. "I can't shoot golf, but I can shoot a pool ball! You're the greatest, Willie!" Mosconi nodded to them.

One fan, noting the salty language of Orr, muttered under his breath, "If he talked like that on television he'd be cool."
