Short skirts: A casual dress moves toward sophistification

By Lisa Legge

"Now that we understand the history, we can develop the behaviors and understand the culture that will drive the movement to change," said Jessica Chomicki, a sociologist at the University of Iowa.

"It's an attitude, not an age," said Chomicki, who believes that women are wearing the skirts to show their influence on fashion trends and to express their identity.

The trend has been embraced by designers and consumers alike.

"It's not just for younger people anymore," said Chomicki.

"We've seen women of all ages wearing the skirts," she said.

"These are not the skirts that are going to be seen on the runway, but rather as a trend in women's fashion," said Chomicki.

Board of Health will review hospitals' waste disposal plans

By Tony Justice

The Johnson County Board of Supervisors will review plans for disposal of hazardous materials from the UI Hospitals and Research Institutes.

The plan would require all hospitals to submit a detailed waste management plan to the Environmental Protection Agency.

The plan would also require hospitals to develop and implement a comprehensive waste management program that includes the identification and tracking of hazardous materials, as well as the proper disposal of such materials.

"We are going to go over to the Environmental Protection Agency in regard to what is considered hazardous," said Larry Anderson, director of the Johnson County Environmental Health Office.

Anderson said the board needed to initiate the process of reviewing the plan in order to assess the remote possibility of dangerous chemicals being transported through the county and the potential impact on the environment.

Anderson said the board was not aware of any problems with the disposal of hazardous materials at the county facility, but that the issue was being investigated.

"As part of the plan, UI Hospitals will make arrangements to purchase at least 700 pounds of hazardous waste per month, which will be transported to the site located in the OldeCraft building on the campus," said Anderson.

"The need has been identified, but there is a commitment by the UI Hospitals to be located at the OldeCraft building," said Anderson.

"We estimate that we will need to add 1.2 million pounds of hazardous waste to the site, and that is estimated to cost around $200,000 per year," said Anderson.

"We believe that the best option is to bring in the Department of Environmental Health and Safety at the campus level to handle the disposal of these materials," said Anderson.

"By bringing in the Department of Environmental Health and Safety at the campus level, we can ensure that the proper procedures are in place to handle the disposal of these materials," said Anderson.

"We believe that the campus level is the best option, as it will allow for better communication and coordination with the local health department," said Anderson.
Care choices

The decision by the Johnson County Board of Supervisors Thursday to privatize the Johnson County Care Facility was a wise one. Privatization will mean more money for the county without lowering the quality of care at the facility. But it also means that the supervisors did not stop to consider the decision to privatize the facility. They also voted to accept the contract for the facility's operation to a new company.

Palmers, the off-field policy

Nights and waking up to change some light bulbs

I KEEP having this same nightmare. I'm walking down an Iowa City street which is familiar and yet somehow alien to me. As I walk, my mind is filled with memories of past events. I see people sitting on chairs and benches, seemingly engrossed in their own thoughts. And then I realize that I am walking on the street of a different time, a time when the world around me was different.

Michael Humes

Outing /Oliver North's own view

I was needful for it to be happening. I approached him with the chance to add a new dimension to my life. I was willing to give it to him. But it meant that I was going to have to make a sacrifice. I had to give up my privacy, my comfort, and my freedom. I had to live in a world where I was watched at all times. But I did it, because I knew that it was the right thing to do.

The truth in Oliver North's own view

I had been a member of the CIA for ten years. I had seen the world from a perspective that few others had. I had been involved in some of the most important and sensitive operations that the CIA had ever undertaken. But now I had to walk away from it all. I had to leave the agency and go out into the world on my own.

I never expected to find myself in the position I am now. I had thought that I would be able to live a normal life, with a family and a home. But that was not to be. I was forced to leave my wife and children behind, and to live a life of hiding.

But I have come to terms with my past. I have accepted the fact that I am a nobody, and I have tried to make the best of my situation. I have tried to help others, and to give back to the world what it has given me.

I hope that someday I will be able to come out of the shadows and into the light. I hope that I will be able to make a difference in the world and to show others that even the most terrible things can be overcome.

WASHINGTON (AP) — White House

chief of staff Howard Baker

said Thursday that the Obama administration should consider the nomination of a conservative jurist to the Supreme Court at some point, despite the White House's criticism of a possible nomination.

"We've got to do something about this. If we don't, we're going to have another standoff," Baker

said at a meeting of the NAACP here. "I think it's in the interests of our country to see

somebody with conservative

views appointed to the Court.

"The American people
care about these things, and

they want to see somebody

who's going to vote as they vote," Baker said. "We can't

just ignore the issue."

Baker said he was continuing talks with Senate leaders about

the nomination of a conservative

jurist, possibly Judge Robert Bork

or Judge Antonin Scalia, to the Court. He said he was hopeful some agreement could

be reached soon.

The NAACP has

opposed the nomination of Bork,

who is considered a conservative

jurist, and has asked the Senate

to delay action on the nomination

until a review of the nomination is completed.

Baker said he was

hopeful the Senate would

consider the nomination

soon, but he said he did not know when that would be.

"We're trying to work things out," he said. "But

we're not going to just let

this thing go on indefinitely."

Baker said he was

hopeful a compromise could

be reached soon.

"We're not going to take any more of this," he said. "We've got to get this done in a timely fashion."

"I was with Bias in his hotel room, and he was so cool... He's cold, colder than hell," Indiana Coach Bobby Knight says of the late Maryland basketball standout Len Bias.

"performance-enhancing" for the teams. "The concept was taken out of context.

"Bias thought he was cool," said Knight, who coached Bias during the championship last season. "He was going to impress his peers. He was so cool... He's cold, colder than hell."

"Len Bias had his own mind," Knight said. Bias was killed in a car crash in a hotel parking lot. The coach who killed him was under the influence of alcohol.

"One of Bias's friends, Brian Tribble, was brought to trial for drug charges related to the 22-year-old. All American's death. Tribble was in the room with Bias when he died, and was accused of supplying the drugs that killed him. Last month, a jury in Prince George's County, Md., found Tribble guilty on all charges.
