North's shredder operated till firing

By Karen Tumulty

WASHINGTON — Even as Department of Justice investigators were combing his records only a few feet away last November, Lt. Col. Oliver North continued methodically shredding the documents that could have provided the blueprint of his secret projects at the White House, North told congressional investigators Thursday.

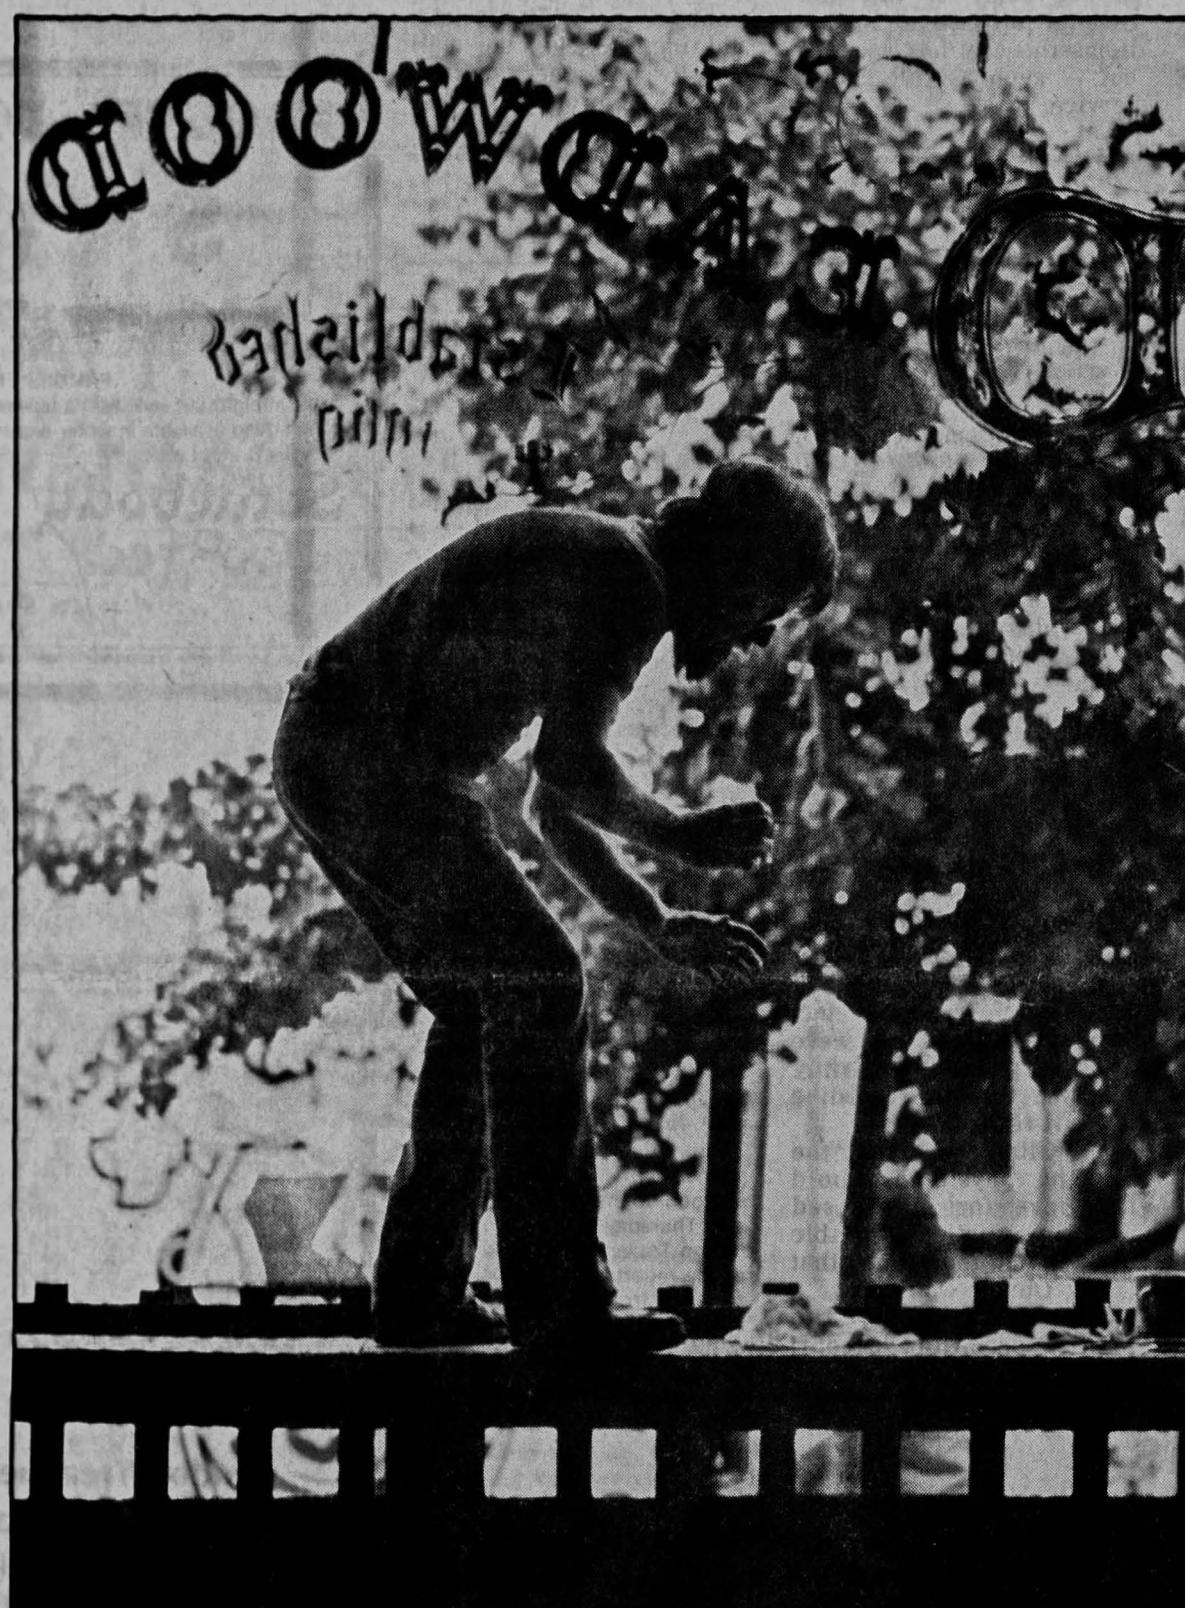

"They were working on their projects," North said drily. "I was working on mine."

North's testimony added to the criticism of the department's preliminary investigation of the Reagan administration's sale of arms to Iran and military support for Nicaragua's Contra rebels at a time when U.S. government assistance was banned. Department spokesman Terry Eastland denied North's account.

Eastland said that he talked "in detail" with John Richardson and William Bradford Reynolds, the two officials who scoured North's office. "It is their firm recollection," he said, "that at no time did Oliver North shred any documents or turn on the shredding machine."

IN HIS THIRD day of testimony to congressional investigating committees, North said that the infamous "shredding party" that began in his office on Nov. 21 lasted far longer

Iranians open fire on tanker

Attack seen as a warning to U.S. and Kuwait

By Charles P. Wallace
Los Angeles Times

NICOSIA, Cyprus — An Iranian gunboat attacked an American-operated oil tanker in the Persian Gulf Thursday only a few miles outside the Kuwaiti oil terminal where U.S. warships are scheduled to begin naval escort duty next week.

Reports from Bahrain and Dubai, centers of salvage operations in the gulf, said that the tanker Peconic was hit by 18 rocket-propelled grenades and machine-gun fire from the Iranians, who attacked at midday about 60 miles southeast of Kuwait's Al Ahmadi oil terminal.

No injuries were reported among the tanker's 40-man crew, who managed without assistance to quell a fire started in the starboard bunker tank.

The Peconic is registered in Liberia but is owned and operated by Gray Shipping Inc., a subsidiary of Universe Tank-ships Inc. of Delaware, and is under charter to Texaco Panama Inc., a Texaco subsidiary.

THE DAYLIGHT ATTACK came after two days of Iraqi air raids on Iran's oil export installations at Kharg Island and was seen as a bold Iranian warning of the dangers of Kuwait's continuing support of Iraq in the Iran-Iraq War.

Shortly after the attack on the Peconic, Iran's official Tehran radio cautioned the United States against proceeding with the plan this month to place 11 Kuwaiti oil tankers under the American flag and provide them with U.S. Navy protection in the gulf.

By intervening in the gulf, the broadcast said, the United States is "entering quicksand which will have more dangerous consequences than the U.S. military ever experienced in Lebanon or Vietnam."

It could be called a reporter's dream.

No, the editors didn't need a travel article on Jamaica, and no, they weren't going to let me interview Baryshnikov. But my jealous colleagues still glared at me — the lucky reporter who got the assignment to interview a palm reader.

Naturally, I was dubious about the whole thing. Further editors' instructions detailed the extent of the assignment, which included actually having my palm read.

This was a first. The trepidation of meeting a psychic — someone who could possibly know my thoughts, or how long I will live — combined with my skepticism of the occult. I had doubts.

But interest (and the editors breathing down my neck) prompted me to meet Ann Taylor, palm and card reader, who promises "advice on all affairs."

AND WHAT A SURPRISE. On Wednesday afternoon, walking into her office at 1705 Highway 6, I saw nothing mystical or supernatural — no crystal ball or beaded curtains, no incense — just an ordinary room. Above a single table was a shelf with pictures of Jesus Christ — Taylor said she is a deeply religious Catholic — and Elvis Presley.

Taylor was eager to talk about her psychic abilities.

"I was born with this talent," she said. "I received this gift from God."

Taylor said she didn't realize she had psychic abilities until she was 12 years old. Her mother is psychic as well, she said, adding her mother always seemed to know what Taylor was doing.

"I figured it was just a mother's intuition; I thought everyone had it," she said.

Everyone does have some degree of psychic ability, according to Taylor, who said people use the ability in different ways.

"I read just for people who are interested in it," Taylor said.

Slain South Korean student becomes symbol of protest

By Mark Fineman

KWANGJU, South Korea — One month ago Thursday, Pae Eun Shim lost her eldest son in the South Korean public's battle for democracy when he was gravely injured by a police tear-gas grenade that struck him in the head. He died 27 days later on a hospital life-support machine, never having regained consciousness.

Pae "lost" her son's body to the same cause Thursday night when student leaders insisted that the site selected for his burial be changed and that he be laid to rest alongside the graves of 194 Kwangju residents who were killed in an uprising here seven years ago against President Chun Doo Hwan's military-backed regime.

"He is no longer only your son," one student leader told Pae. "Your son belongs to the people now."

PAE'S SON, Lee Han Yol, 21, a sophomore at Yonsei University of Seoul, was finally buried after a marathon, 18-hour funeral that began with a three-mile march that drew an estimated 1 million people in the streets of Seoul, then traveled 170 miles south to this traditional anti-government stronghold.

Here in Lee's hometown, seemingly all of Kwangju's 1 million citizens poured into the streets in mourning and protest, and authorities finally deployed riot police early Friday to reclaim the downtown area that had been taken over by mourners for nearly six hours.

Wearing riot helmets and gas masks and banging their riot shields, police charged into the streets here just after 1 a.m. to break up what had become a festival of defiance.

New entrance requirements warn students

By John Bartenhagen
The Daily Iowan

New entrance requirements for the UI passed Wednesday by the state Board of Regents are a warning to marginally prepared high-school students and not an attempt to restrict admission, UI and Iowa City school officials said Thursday.

The standards, which will be implemented in the fall of 1990, will require incoming students to have taken four years of English, three years of mathematics, two years of a single foreign language and three years of both natural and social sciences before being admitted to the UI College of Liberal Arts.

William Mitchell, head counselor at West High School, 2901 Melrose Ave., said the toughened standards will not affect the majority of Iowa City high school students.

"I don't think it will change too much because, in the past, a high percentage of our students would have met the requirements anyway," he said. "But the nature of the community has a lot to do with that — many parents and students here are college-oriented."

THE REQUIREMENTS are an improvement over past UI policy because they represent a more honest approach to informing students about preparation for college, he said.

"I think it's good that the university is telling students what background they need to be successful in college," he said. "Plus they've told us exactly what the requirements are and when they are to go into effect, so we can make sure no students are inconvenienced."

But while toughened standards may not affect local students, UI Collegiate Associations Council Acting Vice President Gordon Fischer said he is concerned about the impact on minorities and students from small, rural high schools.

"The administration has set a goal of 8.5 percent for minority student recruitment and it seems counterproductive to pass these requirements in view of that goal," he said. "I believe they are truly concerned, but I just hope they take admissions on a case-by-case basis."

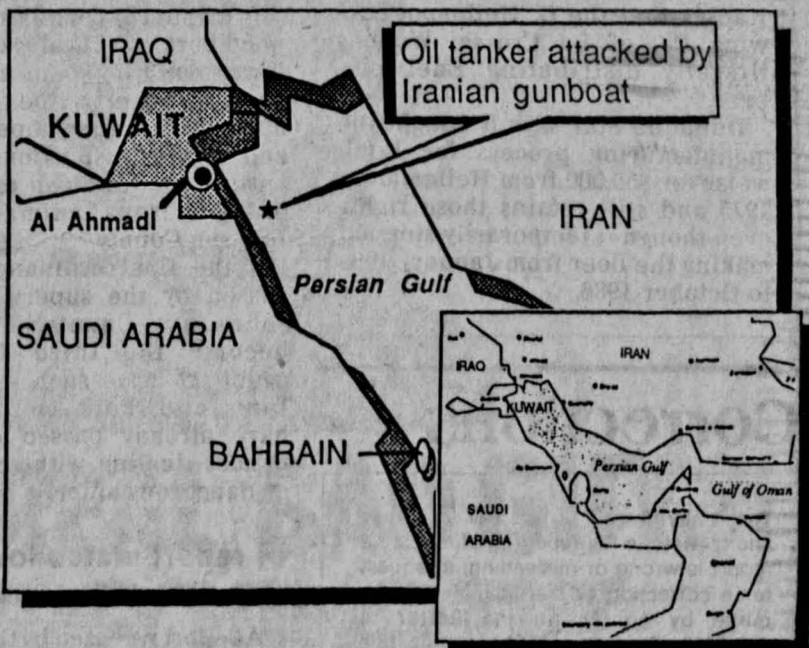

UI Associate Vice President for Academic Affairs Kenneth Moll said the higher standards should not come as any surprise because they are consistent with recommendations made by both state and national reports on education.

"WHAT WE'RE doing is just consistent with a national trend," he said. "There's strong support for students to have broader and deeper educations."

The new requirements will help both the UI and students by making it unnecessary to offer some lower-level courses, he said.

"Some courses offered now at the UI are really no more

Iowa faces $50 million suit

CEDAR RAPIDS — Former customers of Morris Plan are suing the state of Iowa for $50 million, claiming the state auditor did not police the insolvent loan company properly.

The suit filed by two Linn County couples said the bankruptcy reorganization of Morris Plan and its parent company, MorAmerica, in 1985 would not have been necessary if regulators were doing their job.

The suit says the state auditor's office knew of insider loans made by Morris Plan to MorAmerica as early as 1982 and should have taken action.

Grants aid 2 cities

DES MOINES — Economic development in Webster City, Iowa, and Davenport was aided Thursday by the awarding of two state grants that could mean several hundred jobs for Iowa.

The Economic Development Department awarded $500,000 to Webster City officials who are seeking to put together a $4.5 million package of aid for Webster City Products, a maker of laundry products.

The Gage Metalcraft Co. of Minnesota also said it will move to Davenport after the state awarded a $250,000 grant to help the company relocate.

Iowa debate scheduled

DES MOINES — Presidential contenders Rep. Jack Kemp, R-N.Y., and Rep. Richard Gephardt, D-Mo., have agreed to an Iowa debate July 20 at Drake University's Law School over their contrasting trade policies, aides to both candidates announced Thursday.

Fireworks bill assailed

DES MOINES — A Des Moines man said Thursday if the next session of the state Legislature considers legalizing fireworks in Iowa, he will show lawmakers pictures of his 5-year-old great-grandson, who is swathed in bandages from injuries he received when fireworks exploded in his face.

James Michaels said his great-grandson, Joshua, ignited flash powder poured from at least 10 leftover firecrackers and bottle rockets Tuesday. He was severely burned on his face, arms, chest and hands, and his eyebrows and eyelashes were singed off, Michaels said.

Testimony hurts Bartnick

SIOUX CITY — An acquaintance of Michael Bartnick testified Thursday in Bartnick's first-degree murder trial the defendant had told him in June 1986 he was going to Iowa to "waste some people."

Bartnick is charged with two counts of first-degree murder in the slayings of the wife and daughter of Crawford County Magistrate Arlo Schoenfeld last June 16. Mary Schoenfeld, 53, and Cecilia Schoenfeld, 16, were found shot to death in the family's farm home near Charter Oak, Iowa.

Beer war brews in Iowa

CEDAR RAPIDS — A beer war has broken out between brewers in Iowa and Wisconsin.

Dubuque Star Brewery alleges in a federal lawsuit filed in Cedar Rapids that the G. Heileman Brewing Co. of La Crosse, Wis., is illegally distributing Edelweiss beer.

Dubuque Star says it bought the manufacturing process for Edelweiss for $50,000 from Heileman in 1975 and still retains those rights even though it temporarily stopped making the beer from January 1985 to October 1986.

Proposed local sales tax will aid property owners

By Joseph Levy
The Daily Iowan

A "significant amount" of the extra $1 million generated by the possible implementation of a local sales tax will provide Iowa City residents with property tax relief, Iowa City Manager Stephen Atkins said Thursday.

Atkins, who met Thursday afternoon with his staff formulating ballot wording for the sales tax referendum, said he could not release exact percentages he and his staff will recommend at next week's council meetings.

The 1 percent local tax, if passed by Johnson County voters, would provide Iowa City with $2 million — $1 million of which would cancel a projected deficit in 1989.

"All of the legal lines have to be tackled right now," Atkins said. "I just want to make sure we get it right."

THE REFERENDUM, which could come before Johnson County voters as early as Oct. 6, must specifically earmark how much of the additional revenue will be used for property tax relief — whether zero percent or 100 percent — according to state law.

Atkins said Thursday a first draft of ballot wording will be ready this morning, but added his staff's proposal is still subject to the city council's discretion.

"The council ultimately has the authority to amend it any way it wants to," he said.

Councilor John McDonald said he wasn't certain it made sense to implement a new tax that would lighten the load of another tax.

"I don't know if that's what we want to accomplish," he said, adding he would like to see some of the new revenue utilized to restore items the city has recently cut — such as full transit service.

"I WOULD CERTAINLY be interested in seeing this money allocated to restore some of the things we've cut," he said. "I think it's a possibility."

Greater Iowa City Chamber of Commerce Executive Vice President Patrick Grady said the ballot wording will be quite general.

"I would assume it would be fairly general so as not to tie the hands of the council," Grady said.

The chamber voted June 25 to support increasing the city's property tax rate rather than implement the sales tax.

Grady said neither he nor the chamber will take a position on the sales tax proposal until they can see specific ballot wording.

"The debate on that can only be done after looking at the proposal of where the money is spent," Grady said, adding the chamber will closely study the ramifications of the proposal.

Courts/police

An Iowa City School Board member pleaded innocent Tuesday to charges of assault causing injury and false imprisonment in Johnson County District Court, according to court records.

Orville Townsend, 44, of 713 Whiting Ave., allegedly held a knife at Niambi Webster against her will in her home at 2427 Shady Glen Court on June 14, according to court records.

Townsend's trial is scheduled to begin Sept. 21 in Johnson County District Court, according to court records.

Assault causing injury and false imprisonment are both serious misdemeanors, which are punishable by up to one year in jail and a $1,000 fine.

Townsend also faces a simple assault charge in connection with the June 14 incident that will be handled following the trial, according to court records.

Supervisors vote to privatize care facility

By Craig Sterrett
The Daily Iowan

The Johnson County Board of Supervisors voted Thursday to privatize the Johnson County Care Facility under the supervision of current director Mary Donovan and her newly formed corporation, Chatham Oaks.

The decision to privatize the facility came a week after a report by a committee studying the future status of the facility released a report strongly recommending the action.

The supervisors voted 4-1 to give the care facility contract to Chatham Oaks after Supervisor Don Sehr motioned to tie in Donovan's continued control of the facility with privatization.

"She is the one who has been running the facility, not the Board of Supervisors," Sehr said.

Supervisor Dick Myers also strongly endorsed having Donovan take over the facility.

"THE REAL KEY to the Johnson County Care Facility is the interest of the people of the county," Myers said. "If Mary wasn't doing her job you would have this room filled every day. Privatization under Mary's supervision is a way to keep things much the same but gain money."

But Supervisor Betty Ockenfels opposed the choice of Chatham Oaks. Ockenfels said although she endorsed Mary Donovan as the director, the board should wait for a formal presentation from each of the five organizations interested in running the facility.

"I felt that it was such a monumental decision, I wanted the full board to hear from all the agencies," Ockenfels said. "I think we should have been more careful in selecting the provider."

THE OTHER NON-PROFIT organizations interested in taking over the facility included the Mid-Eastern Council on Chemical Abuse, the Mid-Eastern Community Mental Health Center, Systems Unlimited and Hillcrest Family Services.

Earlier in the meeting, the supervisors rejected by a 3-2 vote a proposal by Supervisor Robert Burns to keep the care facility in the hands of the supervisors.

"If the committee is praising the facility and the people are telling us to leave it alone, I think we ought to," Burns said.

But the supervisors voted to follow the recommendations of the report of the Ad-Hoc Committee to Study Privatization of the Johnson County Care Facility, which stated privatization will enable the Johnson County Care Facility to receive $250,000 in state and federal funds annually.

Donovan said she was pleased by the board's decision and said she was not planning any major changes in the facility when she takes control of it.

But she said she does want to make one improvement.

"We do want to increase staff," Donovan said. "Our goal will always be to get as many residents back into the community as possible."

UI group leaves on 18-day African journey

By James Cahoy
The Daily Iowan

A group of UI administrators and faculty led by UI Vice President of Educational Development Research Duane Spietersbach will leave this morning for an 18-day journey to Africa.

The purpose of the journey, which will include visits to Kenya, Nigeria and the Ivory Coast, is to strengthen ties between the UI and several leading African research institutes and universities, Spietersbach said Thursday.

"We want to formalize some of the relationships which have been developed over the years between the UI and these institutions," Spietersbach said. "This is not just some kind of fishing expedition. It is an opportunity to develop closer ties with these countries."

In addition to Spietersbach, the team from the UI includes UI Associate Dean of Faculties Fred Woodard, UI Geography Professor Michael McNulty and UI Political Science Department Chairman Joel Barkan.

THE FIRST STOP for the group is Kenya, where Spietersbach is scheduled to sign an agreement with the University of Nairobi which will provide an exchange program between the Institute of Development Studies in Nairobi and the UI Center for International and Comparative Studies, which is headed by McNulty.

In addition, proposals for a collaborative research project on rural health in Kenya between the newly established UI Institute of Agricultural Medicine and Occupational Health and the Kenyan Medical Research Institute will be discussed.

Barkan, a former visiting professor at the University of Nairobi, said the ties being established by the UI and the research institutes and universities of Kenya on this journey are unprecedented in their scope.

WHAT THESE AGREEMENTS amount to is an elaboration and formalization of relationships which have been developed with Kenya for the past 15 years," Barkan said.

The itinerary for the group in Nigeria includes a reception for Nigerian writers and poets who were former participants in the UI Writers' Workshop, as well as a visit to UNICEF projects run by former UI students and a meeting with former UI students at the University of Ibadan.

In addition, the group will also discuss linkage programs between the University of Lagos and the University of Ibadan in Nigeria and the UI.

In the Ivory Coast, plans are for the group to speak with officials of the African Development Bank and discuss an exchange of programming and staff between Ivorian Television and the UI Project for International Communication Studies.

To anyone who has spent any time on the UI campus, it is evident that the short skirt is in for summer. Younger women are wearing the skirts above the knee for casual times, to classes and to parties.

But now a more sophisticated set may be raising its hemlines, fashion experts say.

"Usually it's been younger girls wearing them for play or casual. But more prestigious designers are putting them into their lines," said Cheri Cooper, manager at Brauns, Old Capitol Center, adding that short skirts will be considered less trendy and more sophisticated.

Because of the new sophistication, shorter skirts will be appropriate in dressier settings.

"The shorter the dress the more appropriate it is for night-time," Diane Clehane, public relations manager for Liz Claiborne Inc., said.

CLEHANE SAID SHE thinks the more sophisticated skirts will be acceptable to older women.

"It's an attitude, not an age," she said. "It depends on their body types whether women are comfortable in shorter skirts."

Locally, women are beginning to wear the shorter skirts.

"It's not just for younger people anymore," Seifert's fashion consultant Nicole Cerio said. "I've seen ladies around here are starting to wear them."

Designers are working the shorter skirts into their career lines as well.

"We have suits with shorter skirts that are going to be worn by somebody in business," Clehane said.

Shelly Palmer, an employee at King of Jeans in the Old Capitol Center, displays one variety of the short skirt, now more popular than ever.

Local retailers stock career wear with short skirts, too.

"We have shorter skirts for business women and career-oriented people," Cerio said.

THE SKIRTS — called miniskirts in the 1970s — have not changed much from those times.

"Two years ago, they were barely above the knee," said Chip Waite, manager of King of Jeans, Old Capitol Center. "Now those skirts seem longer and we're seeing the shortest skirts."

How short are the "shortest skirts?"

"We're talking about skirts that are barely covering women's thighs," said Mark Simon, manager of Moda Americana, Plaza Centre One.

Lerna May, a sales clerk at Younkers, Old Capitol Center, said styles by Adrienne Vittadini and Liz Claiborne are shorter.

"They probably come to three or four inches above the knee," she said.

Cooper noted that when holiday apparel arrives, skirts will probably be shorter.

"I'M ANXIOUS TO SEE what length they will be," she said.

Holiday time means winter, and designers are putting short skirts into their fall and winter lines this year.

"They've always been a fashion in the spring and summer," Cooper said. "But they've made a big impact on fall and winter."

Simon said the transition from warm weather to cold will be simple.

"We've got different leggings that will provide warmth and a more coordinated look," he said.

But local fashion experts are skeptical about the practicality of short skirts in the winter.

"We'll see how they do in the Midwest with our winters," Cooper said.

Board of Health will review hospitals' waste disposal plan

By Tony Jeffris
The Daily Iowan

The Johnson County Board of Health Thursday agreed to review plans for disposal of infectious wastes generated by the UI Hospitals and Research Laboratories.

The plan would require all wastes defined as potentially infectious under Iowa Department of Natural Resource recommendations to be decontaminated and incinerated before being deposited in landfills.

Under previous policy, these wastes — with the exception of radioactive wastes — were routinely transferred to landfills without decontamination.

The new plans for regulating waste include any tissue culture, all blood and blood products, all disposable laboratory equipment contaminated by blood and blood by-products, animal carcasses and pathological wastes.

"WE ARE GOING to go over the other side in being over-cautious in regard to what is considered infectious," Shirley Lindell of the Iowa Environmental Health and Safety Office said.

The UI decided to initiate the plan because of concern over the remote possibility of infectious bacteria percolating through soil beneath the landfill and affecting groundwater supplies, she said.

"There has been a problem of getting rid of these things not only at the university but all over the country," she said.

As part of the plan, UI Hospitals has made arrangements to purchase two 800 pounds per hour incinerator units for $1.5 million to deal with the problem.

The units, to be located at the Oakdale campus, will incinerate 1.2 million pounds of wastes each year. She estimated that as much as 50 percent of the wastes are generated at the UI Hospitals.

ONE OF THE stipulations of the new plan is that the laboratories which produce the wastes will be responsible for decontaminating them.

"We feel that if we put the responsibility to the generators then that will alleviate some of the problems for the landfill workers and custodians of the waste," she said.

Iowa Health Department representative Ken Choquette said, however, there seems to be no epidemiological evidence that the waste is any more hazardous than ordinary garbage.

"I don't think there is a problem in terms of public health," Choquette said. "I think we ought to focus on hospital employee risk."

Care choices

The decision by the Johnson County Board of Supervisors Thursday to privatize the Johnson County Care Facility was a wise one. Privatization will mean more dollars for the county without lessening the quality of care at the facility.

But unfortunately, the supervisors did not just stop with the decision to privatize the facility. They also voted to give the contract for the facility's operation to the Chatham Oaks Corp.

Chatham Oaks Corp. was formed by care facility Director Mary Donovan for the expressed purpose of bidding for control of the facility if the decision was made to privatize it. Why the supervisors chose it over the more established social service agencies in Johnson County who were vying for the county home, such as the Mid-Eastern Community Mental Health Center, is a mystery.

The supervisors may have been concerned about maintaining the quality of care at the facility, but the current administration would have been maintained no matter which agency acquired it.

Choosing the Chatham Oaks Corp. to run the facility means choosing an inexperienced corporation that will revolve around one person — Mary Donovan.

If the supervisors want to be responsible in their choice of who will take control of the care facility, they should take another look at a decision that may have long-term implications for the future quality of health care in Johnson County.

Against the odds

It was officially decided this week that on March 1, 1989, the first horse track in Iowa will open its gates. The cost: $51.4 million.

Of this, $40 million is in taxpayer-guaranteed bonds. Taxpayer-guaranteed bonds are bonds that the state issues when it wants to provide its equivalent of a loan. If, in the case of the track, success proves elusive, the people of Iowa will then end up footing the bill.

It is for this reason that the track must prosper. A point of no return has been reached in the planning of the complex. After its completion, if people who can afford the sport do not maintain the facility by utilizing it, the entire state will eventually bear the burden.

This possibility is not remote if one considers the decline of horseracing's popularity. In 1971, the U.S. public spent 28 percent of its gambling dollars on horseracing. That figure declined to a mere 10 percent in 1985. Profits from horseracing are still on the decline, and therefore, the success of the new Iowa track is questionable.

It is disheartening to realize that legislators once again have sought out another dubious remedy to a serious problem and in the process seem unable to discover more substantive solutions to Iowa's economic difficulties.

Undoubtedly, all of these options will add something positive to Iowa's fiscal situation, if successful, but at what price?

Unfortunately, Iowans have no real choice at this point. We have already been obliged to commit our leisure time, and if the track flops, our tax dollars, to something which might be enjoyable but is contrary to sound, long-term economic planning.

It is confusing to think that one of the best ways the people of Iowa City can help the people of Iowa is to go to the races and bet against the odds.

Policy particulars

The UI technically has a right to be prosecuting two UI students for protesting the on-campus presence of CIA recruiters last October.

After all, students chaining themselves to furniture in the middle of a UI office certainly interrupts business.

But people taking over buildings, people sleeping on the Pentacrest and even people chanting while classes are in session certainly don't make "business as usual" possible.

The UI has had social protests and dissenting opinions throughout its history. The UI Code of Student Life even states: "These regulations shall be construed so as not to abridge any student's constitutional rights of free expression of thought or opinion, peaceable assembly, or the petition of authorities."

Certainly, those who choose to engage in acts of civil disobedience must pay the price for their actions. But perhaps the intention of the UI's right to refuse admission — even after the case has been to court — was to protect the university from students who are deemed as dangerous to the community.

The Code of Student Life allows the UI many rights. But UI administrators should think long and hard before they decide to use them in particular cases.

Nightmares and waking up to change some light bulbs

I KEEP having this same nightmare. I'm walking down an Iowa City street which is familiar and yet somehow alien to me — building facades are different, there are businesses whose names I don't recognize and trees seem larger and fuller than I remember them being. And the people look odd, too — clothes, hair styles, jewelry all look out of the ordinary.

One young woman, who I assume to be a sophomore or some kindred larval species, emerges from a crowd and approaches me. "Are you Michael Humes who writes for the DI?" she asks. I confirm her suspicions. "Well, I'd just like to tell you how much I like your column," she says. "And so did my parents when they were students here." It is only then that I notice my long, white beard and gnarled, aged hands. Then I awake with a start, a hoarse "Wow!" barely escaping my parched throat.

I've been at this rough-and-tumble, knockabout business of column-writing for a good long time now, including more than 10 years at this address. I now have colleagues here who were 12 years old or younger when the legendary editorial page editor Winston "The Animal" Barclay gave me my first shot here.

THERE WERE NO high-speed computers at our disposal in those days, no video display terminals, no laser printers. There were typewriters, yellow copy paper and cranky teletypes. Vast glaciers covered most of the North American continent. Mighty wooly mammoths battled each other for dominance over their vast herds. The work was hard, the hours were long and it wasn't easy keeping the mammoths out of the parking lot, but I loved it.

But I realize that times, and tastes, change. A few weeks ago I was strolling down the street, minding my own business as much as I ever do, when a passing car slowed down beside me. A young gent with one of those geometrical haircuts that made his head look even square than nature made it thrust his head out the window and scowled at me. "Are you Michael Humes who writes for the DI?" he asked. After checking to make sure that long, white beard hadn't come back, I confessed that I was. "Fuck you!" he ululated and sped off. That confirmed my suspicions that there are some readers out there who take a certain amount of issue with what I say in this space. But it also reassured me that I am reaching a certain portion of the audience in exactly the way I want to reach them.

Which brings me to The Campus Review, a rather square-headed lot themselves. For those aficionados of excellence in journalistic graphics who missed the latest number of The Campus Review, the back page featured a drawing of two seemingly male figures, one of which was bending forward from the waist while the other was drawn up closely, even snugly, behind him. They might have been playing leapfrog, but I don't think so.

SUPERIMPOSED OVER THE happy couple is the familiar red circle with a slanted line across it, indicating that the activity depicted is a no-no. Above the drawing is written "In commemoration of Gay Pride Week, Summer of 1987" and below it is written "STOP AIDS: A public health service announcement from Campus Review."

There are, of course, any number of important comments to be made about AIDS — that it is not now, and in fact never was, an exclusively gay health problem; that it is spreading rapidly through all sections of the population; that ignorance and prejudice concerning the transmission of AIDS will only make the problem worse. But The Campus Review was not making a comment about AIDS. Neither were they making a comment about homosexuality. They were making a comment about ignorant, immature, fearful bigots, and they were making it about themselves. And they made it better than I could, even after 10 years of practice.

Or it could be put this way:

Q: How many people who write for The Campus Review does it take to change a light bulb?

A: Five; one to change the light bulb and four to learn how to comment responsibly, truthfully and accurately about issues of public concern.

Q: How long does this take?

A: No telling yet.

Letters

Off the field

To the Editor:

Iowa Football Coach Hayden Fry's decision as to what to do with Keaton Smiley this fall should warrant the full attention of the university community.

The reputation of the UI and its teams should not be sacrificed on the altar of passivity when it comes to this. If Fry doesn't take some form of punitive action against a man who has a record like Smiley's, what kind of message is that giving his young fans?

Whether Smiley is guilty or not, Fry has to consider Smiley's case very carefully to set a good precedent. We should strongly encourage him to work against uncontrolled, abusive behavior — on the field and off.

Baker defends Bork before NAACP

Washington Post

NEW YORK — White House chief of staff Howard Baker Thursday called on the NAACP not to "precipitously oppose" the Supreme Court nomination of conservative Judge Robert Bork before confirmation hearings begin.

Baker, the highest-ranking member of the Reagan administration to address the civil rights group during its six-day meeting here this week, said that the NAACP should listen to Bork's defenders before they decide to join his detractors.

Baker's defense of Bork here came as White House officials in Washington and Republicans in the Senate continued sparring with Democrats over Bork's confirmation hearings that Judiciary Committee Chairman Joseph Biden, D-Del., said will begin Sept. 15.

PRESIDENTIAL spokesman Marlin Fitzwater, asked about Biden's statement on Wednesday that he would almost certainly oppose the Bork nomination, said, "I think it's regrettable that he has chosen to politicize the hearings in this kind of partisan fashion."

Fitzwater also said it is "regrettable" that the nomination will not be considered by the Senate before the court term opens in October, "though we are hopeful they will reconsider." He noted that Republican congressional leaders are asking that the hearings start sooner.

Despite Baker's appeal, NAACP members had earlier agreed to oppose Bork, and Thursday cheered and rose in standing ovation after Baker said that he was "well aware of the fact that most members of this organization are opposed to the confirmation of Judge Bork to the Supreme Court."

"I ask you today not to judge Robert Bork upon a fragmented record, reflected in newspaper clippings," Baker told the delegates. "I ask you to consider the full record and Judge Bork's views as they emerge during the confirmation process."

Baker said afterward that he was "determined" to defend Bork's record before the NAACP, which has heard speeches from four presidential candidates this week denouncing the U.S. Appeals Court judge as a threat to civil rights of minorities and women and as an ideologue who will alter the balance of the court.

Suing lawmakers condemn Branstad's welfare vetoes

By Scott Sonner

United Press International

DES MOINES — Gov. Terry Branstad either does not understand or does not care that his welfare budget vetoes will deny medical care to Iowa's poor children, one of two lawmakers suing the governor said Thursday.

Rep. Tom Jochum, D-Dubuque, chairman of the House Appropriations Committee, also said the line-item vetoes headed for a court battle likely were designed to appease Branstad's conservative supporters who like to "bash people on welfare."

And Paul Stanfield, a lobbyist for the Iowa Inter-Church Forum, said the governor could have avoided the human service cuts by "shaving $1 million or $2 million" from his $100 million plan to boost teacher salaries.

The latest charges were spurred by comments the Republican Branstad made Tuesday during a Statehouse board meeting of the Health Policy Corporation of Iowa.

BRANSTAD TOLD the board one of the keys to getting Iowans off the welfare rolls is to provide better health care insurance for workers. He said persons on welfare currently receive better health benefits than most Iowans, including state employees — a situation he said serves as a disincentive to find a job.

Jochum, who along with Senate Appropriations Committee Chairman Joe Welsh has filed a lawsuit against Branstad, said expansion of the Medically Needy and Infant Medical Care programs the governor vetoed were designed to help eliminate that disincentive.

"The reason we established the Medically Needy Program was to help the working poor," Jochum said in an interview.

"(Branstad) understands the politics of the situation, but I don't think he understands the impact of his precious policy on social programs," he said.

Jochum said the $35 million Branstad cut from the state's $2.4 billion budget through item vetoes could have been accomplished through a small across-the-board cut "without having a devastating effect on human services."

DENVER (UPI) — Additional money spent on public education will not be sufficient to improve the quality of public schools, unless states set up oversight boards to ensure taxpayers' money will lead to better student performance, Gov. Terry Branstad said Thursday.

Branstad, in a speech to the Education Commission of the States, said most states, including Iowa, have increased spending for public education since a presidential task force warned in 1983 of a "rising tide of mediocrity" in the nation's schools.

But he said states also must take steps to make sure the money promotes educational excellence.

"If we do not establish appropriate monitoring mechanisms, it is likely that the educational system could fall into the same rut that it was in pre-1983," Branstad told the educational leaders.

Branstad said he will appoint a task force this summer to monitor the implementation of a $2.5 million educational excellence program enacted by the Legislature last spring.

THE IOWA PROGRAM, which had the backing of both the Iowa State Education Association and the Iowa Association of School Boards, raises starting teacher salaries from approximately $14,000 a year to $18,000 annually. It also provides $37.5 million to raise the salaries of current teachers and $45 million for performance-based pay for teachers who attain additional training or assume extra duties.

Branstad said his oversight board will not attempt to dictate how school boards should spend the additional state money, but will inform local education officials of programs undertaken in other districts that have improved the quality of instruction and student performance.

SOME OF LEE'S classmates and middle-class supporters were detained. Cab drivers who had been sounding their horns and backfiring their engines in protest were stopped and ticketed. "What are they, machines?" a businessman crouching at the corner of a building early Friday morning grumbled as riot police marched by in step. "They are not even human."

It was the kind of defiant anger shown here in May 1980 when President Chun sent troops into Kwangju to put down an insurrection that had begun simply as demonstrations protesting the coup that brought Chun to power.

Since Lee's death Sunday from the head injuries he suffered during a student demonstration June 9 at Yonsei University, leaders of moderate as well as radical student factions had been insisting that he be venerated as a national hero.

BUT HIS PARENTS had been resisting the idea of a public funeral. Friends and family said that in life, Lee was, at best, a reluctant radical.

Lee was a student of business administration, and fellow students noted that the June 9 protest was the first he had attended. Also, he was struck in the back of the head while running away from a police tear-gas barrage, they said, adding that radical students and protest regulars defiantly face toward such barrages, dodging the tear-gas canisters as they fall.

Moreover, several members of Lee's family work for government institutions. They reportedly were under intense pressure from government officials to bury Lee quietly after a simple ceremony rather than yield to the students' demands.

Marcos coup plot tied to Saudi gold

WASHINGTON — Former Philippine President Ferdinand Marcos plotted to overthrow the current government with money borrowed from a Saudi prince and take President Corazon Aquino hostage, tapes showed Thursday.

Marcos planned to use the money to buy arms for a July 10 invasion of the Philippines and repay the loan with gold on deposit in Swiss banks and secretly stashed in the Philippines.

According to the tapes, Marcos had 1,000 tons of gold — worth an estimated $14 billion — in secret places in the Philippines.

Kidnappers to extend Glass captivity

BEIRUT, Lebanon — The kidnappers of U.S. newsmen Charles Glass said Thursday that they would continue to detain him, and they described a second group that has claimed responsibility for Glass' abduction as belonging to an intelligence service.

The "Organization to Defend the Free People," the shadowy group which Tuesday released a videotape of Glass, in which he said he was a spy, said Thursday that The Good Against the Evil organization was "a name behind which intelligence services hide."

The claim came in a statement delivered to the offices of a Western news agency in Moslem West Beirut. The statement said, "Glass will continue to be subject to interrogation until the truth prevails."

Italian Prime Minister resigns

ROME — Prime Minister Amintore Fanfani resigned Thursday as head of a 12-week-old caretaker government, clearing the way for an attempt to form a new government based on the outcome of June's national elections.

"I expressed the hope to President (Francesco) Cossiga that the choices he makes in the light of the June voting may produce solutions to Italy's most urgent problems," the 79-year-old Christian Democrat elder statesman told reporters.

Cossiga's office announced the head of state will consult representatives of all parties Friday and Saturday. He is expected to name a candidate to try to form the next government — Italy's 47th since World War II — on Monday.

ANC urges whites to end apartheid

DAKAR, Senegal — Leaders of the rebel African National Congress Thursday told white South Africans attending a meeting in Dakar they should join in ending the "tyranny" of apartheid.

"As South Africans, we have to achieve our own liberation," ANC spokesman Thabo Mbeki told the South Africans, mostly members of the ruling Afrikaner group, at the start of a three-day meeting at the Dakar fairground.

"On our shoulders rests the task of abolishing apartheid and turning South Africa into a multi-racial society," he said to about 60 South African academics, clergymen, artists, sportsmen and politicians.

Layoffs, closings require 60 days' notice

WASHINGTON — The Democrat-controlled Senate voted largely along party lines Thursday to approve a provision requiring manufacturers to give 60 days' notice of plant closings or substantial layoffs. Opponents of the provision warned that it would guarantee a presidential veto of the omnibus trade bill.

"The American worker has waited 15 years for this day," declared Ted Kennedy, Sen. D-Mass., chairman of the Senate Labor and Human Resources Committee. "This legislation is a matter of human decency, social justice and economic common sense."

Meese: I have nothing to hide

WASHINGTON — Attorney General Edwin Meese told Congress Thursday his failure to disclose assets in a blind partnership was inadvertent and accused a Democratic senator of distorting the facts for "partisan political purposes."

Meese, appearing before a Senate subcommittee to answer questions about his financial arrangements with a former official of Wedtech, said he had nothing to hide and was willing to provide further information to the Office of Government Ethics if required.

"No senator," he replied when asked if the omission was intentional. "It wasn't clear to me obviously, or I would have provided that information."

PTL says Bakker unaware of misdeeds

FORT MILL, S.C. — The PTL's new information chief said Thursday he thinks the ministry's fallen founder, Jim Bakker, was never aware of the alleged misdeeds that have prompted a federal grand jury probe.

Although the investigation may not absolve Bakker of responsibility in any crimes that may have occurred, it could shed new light on Bakker's role at PTL, said Don Hardister, who resigned last month as Bakker's personal bodyguard after seven years.

"I don't know if it will clear him, because he was the president and ultimately he is going to be responsible," Hardister said. "But I think there are a lot of things that have happened here that he is not aware of and I think that will come out in the hearing."

'Star Trek' episode influenced murderer

FAIRFAX, Va. — A mental patient killed his former supervisor after watching a "Star Trek" television episode to prevent himself and others from being turned "into Spocks" by the government, a psychiatrist said Thursday.

Neil Blumberg, testifying for the defense in the murder trial of Richard Miller, said the defendant believed his former boss had slighted him in some way, making him vulnerable to "Eugenic Demographics," a theory Miller named when he heard "Star Trek" character Mr. Spock say the term.

Miller, 29, of Silver Spring, Md., is charged in the November 1986 shooting death of John Kwarta, 39, of Alexandria, Va. He has pleaded innocent by reason of insanity.

Prosecutor: Deaver lied to protect self

WASHINGTON — Michael Deaver, his perjury scheduled to begin next week, lied to shield himself from ethics charges, protect his lucrative business and hide its true function — capitalizing on connections to the White House, a special prosecutor said Thursday.

Whitney North Seymour, the independent counsel appointed to investigate whether the former White House aide had violated the Ethics in Government Act with his lobbying activities, made the charges in an unusual pre-trial memorandum on the evidence he plans to introduce at Deaver's trial, which begins Monday.

Deaver has pleaded innocent to five counts of lying to a federal grand jury and House subcommittee.

India train derails; 53 die in high river

NEW DELHI, India (UPI) — Fourteen cars of a New Delhi-bound express train derailed on flooded tracks over a swollen river Thursday in a "10-minute nightmare" that left at least 53 people dead, the Press Trust of India said.

The news agency reported that at least 20 people, who were in a car that plunged into the river and was swept downstream, still were missing. Rescue workers also searched cars that overturned on the flooded tracks to look for victims believed trapped inside, the news agency said.

Rescuers recovered 53 bodies after the accident at 4:40 a.m. near Mancherial, about 670 miles south of New Delhi in southern Andhra Pradesh state, the agency said. At least 15 people were injured, it said.

THE AGENCY QUOTED railway officials as saying the Hyderabad-Nizamuddin express was traveling between the towns of Kazipet and Balharshah when it hit flooded tracks.

The locomotive plowed through the water and crossed the bridge, awash with floodwaters, but 14 of the train's 18 cars derailed while the four rear cars stayed on the rails, the Press Trust said. The fourth and fifth cars tumbled off the bridge and plunged into the river.

"It was a 10-minute nightmare," one passenger, M.S. Riniwas, told the agency.

About 700 other passengers were taken to Hyderabad, 150 miles south of the accident, the Press Trust said.

Another passenger, Asif Pasha, said he saw one woman jump into the waters to save her daughter. A man then jumped in to try and rescue the two, but all were swept away, he said.

Dawson sends threat to Show

CHICAGO (UPI) — Chicago Cubs outfielder Andre Dawson said Thursday he wants to ensure San Diego pitcher Eric Show regrets hitting him "for the rest of his life."

Dawson, speaking for the first time since he was beaned by the Padres pitcher Tuesday, declined comment on whether Show was deliberately trying to hit him. The Cubs slugger, holding an ice pack to a swollen left side of his face during a clubhouse news conference, said he will do things in his "own way" to make sure Show doesn't forget the incident.

"It's not important whether I believe him or if he's sorry. He says he is going to regret it for the rest of his life," said Dawson, who hasn't played since the incident. "I'll make sure he does regret it ... Yes, I'm still bitter. I've got I don't know how many stitches and my face is still real swollen."

DAWSON REQUIRED 24 stitches at Northwestern Hospital after the incident, which triggered a brawl and two other beanings in the game. Dawson said he still is woozy when he wakes up but hopes to play before the end of the weekend.

Show issued a statement apologizing to the Cubs and Dawson for the incident. Dawson said he hasn't talked to Show and doesn't expect to face him when the Cubs play at San Diego next weekend.

"They say I was out of it for a couple of minutes," Dawson said. "It didn't seem that long. My reaction, to be honest, was to get him. I don't know what I would have done had I gotten him. I haven't thought about son said, Show had no reason to throw high and inside against him.

"I read a lot about the positive things about him and the negative things," he said. "What concerns me is when you challenge not only a man's livelihood but his life."

WHEN DAWSON WAS hit in the face, he remained motionless for about three minutes. He then got up and charged after Show, but the Padres pitcher had been escorted to the San Diego dugout by that time.

"They say I was out of it for a couple of minutes," Dawson said. "It didn't seem that long. My reaction, to be honest, was to get him. I don't know what I would have done had I gotten him. I haven't thought about PORTRLAND, Ore. (UPI) — Keith Lee wants another physical exam from the Portland Trail Blazers but the team that called off a trade for the Cleveland Cavaliers' 6-9 forward earlier this week appears unwilling to reconsider its decision.

"I know that there isn't anything wrong with my knees," Lee told The Oregonian newspaper Wednesday in a telephone interview from West Memphis, Ark.

"I don't know what they want me to do," he said. "I feel great. I would take another physical if they want me to do it."

Lee was traded to Portland by

Cleveland on draft day, June 22, for Trail Blazers guard Jim Paxson. But he failed a physical performed last week by Dr. Robert Cook, Portland's team physician, who called Lee's knees "a bad risk."

Lee said Wednesday that he did not go all-out on one strength test for his knees, done with a machine called a Cybex, because of the presence of a Blazer videotape crew during the test.

"There was a camera in there and I didn't go all out," he said.

As far as the Trail Blazers are concerned, however, it is a closed issue. Bucky Buckwalter, Portland's vice president of basketball operations, said Wednesday the issue of the trade is dead, I think."

BLAZER OFFICIALS said Lee flunked the physical due to several factors, only one of which was his very low scores on the Cybex scale.

A "calcification problem" was found in one knee and a "serious angular deformity" was found in the right knee, an injury Cook believes will likely lead to ligament or cartilage problems in the future.

"There seem to be some people who think we didn't want the trade to go through," Buckwalter said. "That's not true at all. But he didn't pass the physical, and that's it. I spent a lot of time putting this deal together, and I'm disappointed."

Buckwalter is now exploring the possibilities of a new team for Paxson. He said it is "quite possible" a future trade of the former captain may require a resolution of the salary cap issue, which is being negotiated by the NBA and its players' association.

"It was a factor with a couple of the teams that expressed interest," he said.

Paxson's salary is estimated in the $800,000 range next season, and some teams would have trouble fitting that salary under their cap.

Driesell says Knight's statements warranted

COLLEGE PARK, Md. (UPI) — Former Maryland basketball coach Charles "Lefty" Driesell has defended Bobby Knight after Indiana coach said former Terrapins star Len Bias is to blame for his own drug-induced death.

"He's out trying to tell kids not to use drugs like I did and the media tried to put something in there to make him look bad," Driesell said Thursday from his office on the College Park campus.

At a basketball camp for high-school students in Pittsburgh Tuesday, Knight said, "I don't feel sorry for Len Bias. If some of you are popping pills or smoking dope, those are bad shots you're taking."

Said Driesell: "I wasn't there, but I don't have to be there. He was in same position I was. I'm sure he didn't mean it to come across that way."

Bias, considered Maryland's greatest basketball player ever, died after snorting cocaine June 19, 1986 — two days after being picked second by the Boston Celtics in the NBA draft.

DRIESELL RESIGNED in the wake of Bias's death and was given an administrative job in the athletic department.

Last month, Driesell said during a speech in Rhode Island cocaine could be "performance-enhancing" for athletes. Driesell later said the comment was taken out of context.

Bias thought he was cool," said Knight, who coached the Hoosiers to his third NCAA championship last season. "He was going to impress his peers. He was so cool ... He's cold, colder than hell."

Len Bias had his own mind and his own body to take care of and he didn't do it. He's not sick. He's not hurt. The son of a gun is dead."

Knight said he believed Bias and Chicago Bulls star

"He was going to impress his peers. He was so cool ... He's cold, colder than hell," Indiana Coach Bobby Knight says of the late Maryland basketball standout Len Bias.

Michael Jordan, who played at North Carolina, were the two best college players he has seen in the last 10 years. Jordan, a guard with the Chicago Bulls, was the NBA scoring champion last season.

One of Bias's friends, Brian Tribble, was brought to trial on drug charges related to the 22-year-old All-American's death. Tribble was in the room with Bias when he died and was accused of supplying the cocaine that killed him.

Last month, a jury in Prince George's County, Md., acquitted Tribble on all charges.

Ueberroth, Hooks join forces

NEW YORK (UPI) — Benjamin Hooks, executive director of the NAACP, and baseball commissioner Peter Ueberroth promised Thursday to "mesh our efforts" in expanding employment opportunities to minorities in the sport's front offices.

Hooks, who is attending the NAACP's 78th annual convention, said his local units have met with owners and executives of 20 baseball franchises and have come up with 12 to 15 proposed agreements, which still must be reviewed by the national office.

"The NAACP will be part of this movement, but not a stumbling block to the structure," Hooks said. "Commissioner Ueberroth recognized that baseball had the right and the responsibility to clean its own house. The NAACP will work cooperatively with the commissioner to mesh our efforts."

UEBERROTH AND HOOKS agreed the size of the NAACP, with its numerous local offices, is the most important external organization in making progress with individual clubs. Many other groups — most notably PUSH (People United to Save Humanity), led by Jesse Jackson — have asserted pressure on baseball and the owners to expand minority hiring.

"Not that this is a competitive thing," Ueberroth said. "I'd put the NAACP in first place in terms of help because they have so many field organizations."

McGwire makes All-Star reserves

NEW YORK (UPI) — Mark McGwire, a rookie on a pace to approach Roger Maris' single-season record for home runs, leads 20 players named Thursday to the American League All-Star team.

McGwire, with 31 home runs and 64 RBI entering Thursday's game, joins Kansas City 11-time pick third baseman George Brett.

The National League pitchers and reserves include left-handed pitcher Sid Fernandez and first baseman Keith Hernandez, giving the World Series-champion New York Mets four players in the game scheduled for Oakland July 14. Fans elected New York catcher Gary Carter and outfielder Darryl Strawberry.

ALSO SELECTED BY THE AL in the infield Cleveland first baseman Pat Tabler, second baseman Lou Whitaker and shortstop Alan Trammell of Detroit and Toronto shortstop Tony Fernandez. Minnesota's Kirby Puckett, Texas' Larry Parrish, Chicago's Harold Baines and Boston's Dwight Evans join the team as outfielders.

The nine-man pitching staff consists of Seattle's Mark Langston, Boston's Bruce Hurst, New York's Dave Righetti, Milwaukee's Dan Plesac, Kansas City's Bret Saberhagen, Detroit's Jack Morris, California's Mike Witt, Toronto's Tom Henke and Oakland's Jay Howell. Detroit's Matt Nokes made the team as a backup catcher.

IN THE NL, AN eight-man pitching staff of Fernandez, Philadelphia's Steve Bedrosian, Los Angeles' Orel Hershiser, Cincinnati's John Franco, Pittsburgh's Rick Reuschel, Houston's Mike Scott and Chicago's Lee Smith and Rick Sutcliffe was picked. Cincinnati's Bo Diaz and Atlanta's Ozzie Virgil are back up catchers.

The NL named a reserve infield of Philadelphia second baseman Juan Samuel, and third baseman Tim Wallach and shortstop Hubie Brooks of Montreal. Reserve outfielders are San Diego's Tony Gwynn, Atlanta's Dale Murphy, Montreal's Tim Raines, San Francisco's Jeffrey Leonard, St. Louis' Willie McGee and Los Angeles' Pedro Guerrero.

Besides Carter and Strawberry, fans elected Cincinnati's Eric Davis and Chicago's Andre Dawson to the NL outfit. St. Louis' Ozzie Smith at shortstop, Chicago's Ryne Sandberg at second, St. Louis' Jack Clark at first and Philadelphia's Mike Schmidt at third.

AL fans picked second baseman Willie Randolph, first baseman Don Mattingly and outfielders Rickey Henderson and Dave Winfield. Boston third baseman Wade Boggs, Baltimore shortstop Cal Ripken Jr., Orioles catcher Terry Kennedy and Toronto outfielder George Bell complete the starting lineup.

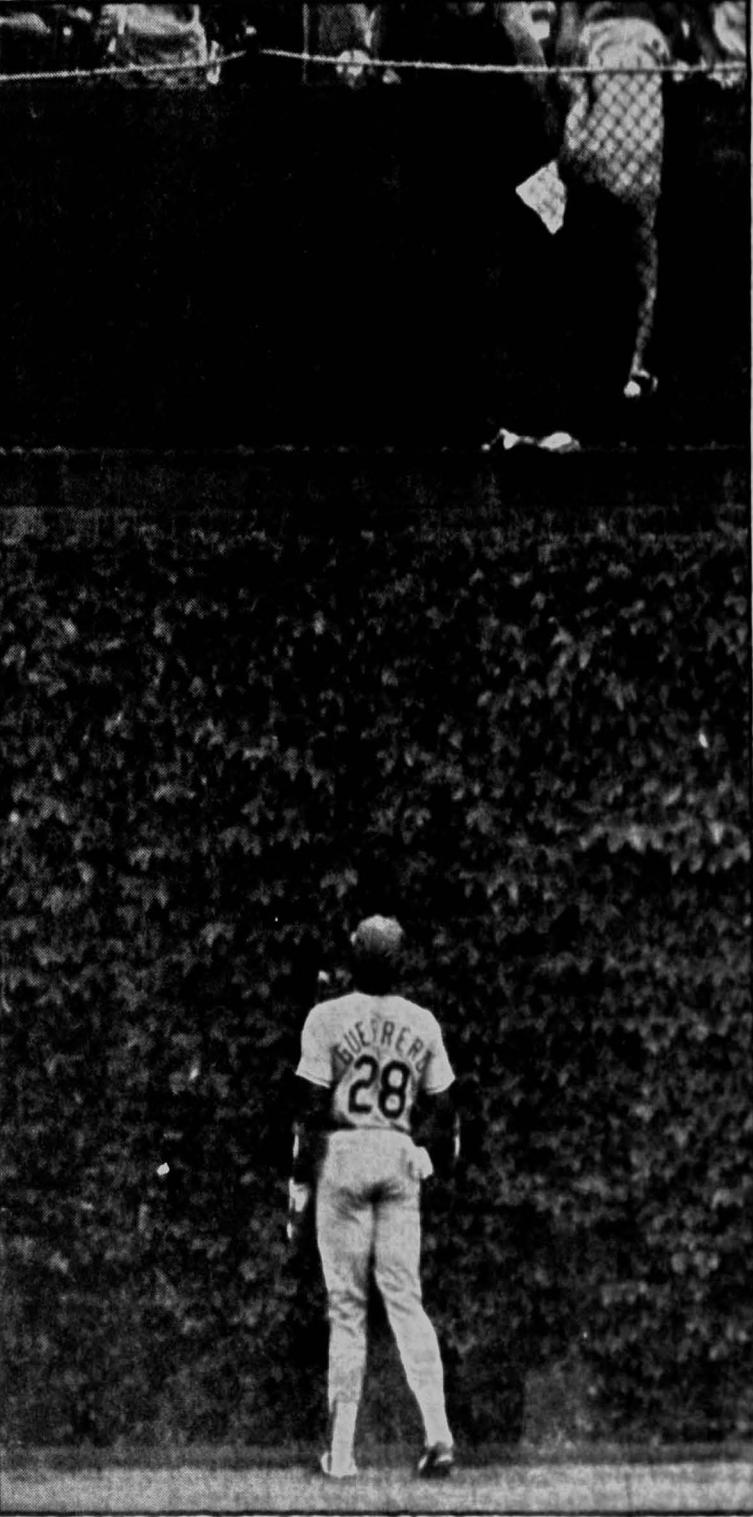

Labor leaders ask players to honor strike

OAKLAND, Calif. (UPI) — Labor leaders asked the Major League Baseball Players Association Thursday to honor planned picket lines that would threaten next week's annual All-Star Game.

Leaders of both Local 28 of the Hotel and Restaurant Workers Union and the union representing 2,800 striking NBC cameramen and technicians separately discussed strategies with players' union head Donald Fehr.

Tuesday night's game is situated in the strong pro-union San Francisco Bay Area. Never in the 53-year history of the All-Star Game has the contest been called off over a labor dispute.

The issue has been further complicated by a threatened strike of food service employees at Oakland-Alameda County Coliseum. Leaders of Local 28 of the Hotel and Restaurant Workers Union, who represent the workers, are scheduled to appear before the Alameda County Labor Council at 8 a.m. today to ask for strike authorization.

Defense doesn't dominate PTL play

By Steve Williams
The Daily Iowan

Prime Time League is now in full gear, but Director Randy Larson has got an idea that will help the league succeed at a new level ... namely defense.

Larson's Sports Column team pumped in 142 points Thursday at the Iowa City High School Gymnasium, only to lose by seven to Fitzpatricks and plummet to 0-8 in the league.

Larson's concern is that the league, originally designed to get players ready for their upcoming season, has turned into little more than a pickup game.

"I really didn't worry much about it at first," Larson said of the lack of defense, "but it's gotten to the point where most of the Iowa players will look for the ball and nothing else."

A GOOD EXAMPLE of Larson's gripe was not hard to find. In that same game won by Fitzpatrick's 149-142, Hawkeye standout Roy Marble set a new league record for scoring with 62 points. Meanwhile, Iowa center Ed Horton — his man on defense — had 55.

"It gets frustrating to watch these players work on the offensive end and then basket hang while their man scores on the other end," Larson said. "About the only time they play at both ends is when Coach (Tom) Davis shows up."

Larson went on to say that not all Iowa players are guilty of this care-free attitude, citing Rodell Davis as one of the harder working Hawkeyes.

But defense aside, Larson has made quite a stir with his new league, which gets its share of fans regularly.

"THIS LEAGUE HAS been good for my game," Horton said. "I need to develop a solid jump shot and already I can see some improvement."

While Marble's shot may not need as much work as Horton's, the 6-foot-5 forward was happy with the work he's gotten out of the league thus far.

"It's good for me to get up and down the court and get into condition," Marble said. "But I'm getting a little upset because we haven't won a game yet this season."

In other Prime Time League action, Ahren's Construction held off The Athlete's Foot for a 125-120 win.

Western Illinois graduate Todd Hutchenson led all scorers for Ahren's with 38 points, followed by Les Jepsen with 36 and 16 rebounds.

Former Iowa star Todd Berkens scored a game-high 39 points and chipped in eight rebounds and Al Lorenzen added 30 points and 12 boards of his own in a losing effort.

Other scores included Hills Bank over Southgate Development 138-114 and Stevens Sand over First National Bank 123-117.

Jim White quits post, named at N.C. State

By Eric J. Hess
The Daily Iowan

Jim White, who left Iowa Sports Promotions in May to become Athletic Director at North Texas State, resigned Wednesday after just more than one month as the Eagles' leader.

On Tuesday, he accepted the position of Assistant Athletic Director for Marketing and Media Relations at North Carolina State, according to the Wolfpack's Sports Information Office.

White, who could not be reached for comment Thursday, accepted the position at North Texas State on April 1. He officially started June 1 and he'll resign effective July 10.

North Texas State Sports Information Director Doug Ray released the following statement from White.

"I HAVE REACHED this decision after much intense deliberation and discussion with my family."

"Although I have received tremendous reception and support in my new position as athletic director, it has become apparent to me that I am not the right individual to lead the North Texas State program at this time. Perhaps I underestimated the size and scope of the challenge."

North Carolina State Assistant Sports Information Director Mark Bockelman said White was named to the newly-created position in the Wolfpack athletic department Tuesday. The North Carolina State job had an application deadline of June 8.

Bockelman said he expected White to fill the job some time during the first week in August after wrapping up last-minute activities at North Texas State in Denton, Tex.

White had been with Iowa for about five years before his departure to Texas. He also held a similar position at the University of Miami.
