Freedman takes Dartmouth reins

By Peggy Grodinsky
Special to The Daily Iowan

HANOVER, N.H. — Former UI President James O. Freedman, Dartmouth College's first "outsider" president since 1822, was inaugurated Sunday morning in a solemn ceremony marked by several standing ovations.

In a 15-minute speech, Freedman, the 15th president of the 218-year-old college, emphasized the importance of a liberal arts education as "the very soul of Dartmouth College."

Freedman resigned as UI president to succeed outgoing Dartmouth president David McLaughlin. He said he steps into the office here with "enthusiasm and humility."

The two-hour ceremony on a sunny, breezy morning also included speeches from New Hampshire Gov. John Sununu and New York Public Library President Vartan Gregorian, a friend of Freedman's.

FREEDMAN TOLD the crowd of about 2,800 students, alumni and faculty that Dartmouth, as a liberal arts school, has a special responsibility to prepare "knowledgeable citizens and imaginative, vigorous leaders — men and women who are capable of maintaining and enlarging the democratic values that are this nation's most basic strength.

"As we reaffirm our dedication to educating men and women for the demanding responsibilities of citizenship, we remind ourselves that the foremost commitment of Dartmouth College is to ideas," Freedman said.

He warned against the compartmentalization of knowledge that threatens the "conception of intellectual wholeness that he said lies at the heart of a liberal arts education."

In his speech, Freedman quoted former U.S. Supreme Court Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes Jr., Thomas Jefferson and Oliver Cromwell. He referred to William Shakespeare, the U.S. Constitution, the Holocaust, nuclear war, Socrates and the Roman poet, Catullus.

FREEDMAN MADE two specific recommendations in a mostly general speech. First, he stated that "Dartmouth's primary goal in the years ahead must be to enhance the intellectual distinction of our academic enterprise." Freedman was a popular choice among college faculty largely because of his academic background. The new president

UI students shoulder greater budget load

By Scott Hauser
The Daily Iowan

As state budgets shrink and academic expenses rise, the burden of filling the UI's financial gap has fallen increasingly on students, who now pay nearly 30 percent of the UI's expenses.

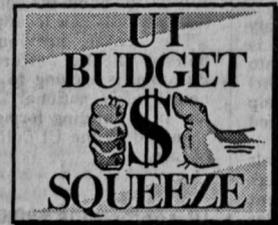

According to a report compiled by the UI Collegiate Associations Council, the percentage covered by students has increased steadily over a 10-year period, with tuition revenue accounting for 18.5 percent of the UI's budget in 1978-79 and 28.9 percent this year.

State appropriations comprised 76.1 percent of the general university budget in 1978-79, but only 65 percent of the budget this year.

"IT'S A FACT of life that tuition has increased faster than appropriations," UI Associate Dean of Academic Affairs Kenneth Moll said, but he added the UI is still considered a bargain education with tuition rates below those of many comparable institutions.

This fiscal year's final budget — covering the period from July 1, 1987, to June 30, 1988 — is an 8.9 percent increase over last year's. The state Board of Regents approved the UI's $410.3 million total budget — of which $212.4 million goes to the non-hospital general university budget — this month.

"Not all, but a great deal of this year's increase came from tuition," Moll said.

This is the first of three stories examining the UI's budget difficulties

In 1980-81, full-time undergraduate resident tuition was $830 for the academic year and non-resident tuition was $1,890. In the 1987-88 academic year, resident tuition has increased to more than $1,500 and non-resident has risen to $4,900.

IN 1978-79, TUITION and fee revenue made up $19.2 million of the UI's $103.4 million general university budget while state appropriations comprised $78.7 million.

This year, the UI's approximately 29,000 students will pay for about $61.1 million of the general university budget. State appropriations will make up $138.1 million.

"Even in a year when we did relatively well in the Legislature, tuition still increased as a substantial portion of the budget," UI CAC President Mike Reck said.

Over the same 10-year period, the percentage of the state budget going to the state Board of Regents appropriation has remained near the 14 percent mark, Glen Dickinson, legislative analyst for the Iowa Legislative Bureau, said.

In 1978-79, the regents total appropriation accounted for 14.55 percent of the state's total budget and in 1986-87 — the last year figures are available — the percentage was 14.34.

UI FACULTY SENATE President and Communications Studies Chairman Bruce Gronbeck said the changing percentages are troublesome to faculty.

"The question is at what point does this university lose its status as a state university and where is it a quasi-public university that's tuition-driven?" he said.

"I don't know what the magic number is," Gronbeck said. "But, boy, when I look at it now — two-thirds, one-third — I think it's coming dangerously close to that quasi-public university."

Although UI students are paying for a higher percentage of their education, UI officials said putting a dollar value on the education students receive is difficult to do.

Many of the crowded classrooms students encounter do not correlate precisely to funding, Moll said, but arise because high student interest in certain programs has strained the UI's scarce resources, physical and financial.

10,000 Iowans hang ten at World's Largest Beach Party

By Lisa Legge
The Daily Iowan

This year's World's Largest Beach Party — Iowa style — was proof you don't need to go to the coasts to have fun in the sand.

A sea of more than 10,000 people flooded a sand-covered alfalfa field south of Williamsburg, Iowa, over the weekend for the celebration, dwarfing the much-advertised "ocean."

The ocean was a 2-foot-deep pool, 33 by 17 feet, full of murky Pacific Ocean water complete with waves created by dozens of 8-year-olds and their floats.

"It was just like a wading pool," said UI junior John Larson, who did not go for a swim. "I thought they were going to have a big lake or something."

BUT THE BANDS at the party, sponsored by Miller Lite, were a hit with the beachgoers, who drew up against the stage and sang along to music from the 50s, 60s, and 70s. Mark Farnor of Grand Funk Railroad, a Pella, Iowa, band called Stepp'n Back, and the Minneapolis band, Hitz, played on Saturday, followed on Sunday by the Buckingham, Tommy Roe and Bobby Vee.

"The music is what made it," UI junior Debbie Cada said. "It really added flavor to what was going on at the beach. I even saw little old ladies dancing to it."

A stagefront crowd of mostly college-age people danced, drank, blocked the view of the families behind them and did whatever they could to attract the attention of television cameras. "This is a great party," UI junior Rodney Day said. "This is just like the Iowa football games."

"This is great," Iowa basketball player Roy Marble said during a break from signing autographs. "We don't have the big waters around here, so it's really different."

PARTYGOERS COULD acquire beach party souvenirs, including computer portraits, beach towels, and T-shirts reading, "I swam in the ocean at Iowa."

Proper attire for the party was a shirt in wild Hawaiian prints with shorts in wild Hawaiian prints that didn't match the shirt, making competition for "craziest beach outfit" intense.

U.S. cleans seabed mines off Kuwait

By Charles P. Wallace
Los Angeles Times

KUWAIT — U.S. Navy demolition experts began clearing seabed mines off Kuwait on Sunday in a prelude to the start of American naval escorts for Kuwaiti oil tankers, scheduled to begin sailing under the Stars and Stripes later this week.

In a new chapter in the nearly seven-year-old Persian Gulf conflict between Iran and Iraq, the 18-member U.S. Navy "mine countermeasures team" was deployed about 30 miles from Kuwait aboard two minesweepers from Saudi Arabia and helicopters and ships from Kuwait's tiny navy, Western diplomats said.

The diplomats said the Navy experts began by removing eight explosive mines detected in a 23-mile-long channel leading from Kuwait's offshore oil terminal at Mina al Ahmadi. Mines in the channel have already damaged four tankers, including a chartered Soviet ship, and they were considered the most serious threat to American shipping in the gulf.

"THE AHMADI CHANNEL has been cleared," the Kuwaiti Defense Ministry said in a communique Sunday night, adding that the clearing was carried out by Kuwaiti naval units with U.S. and Saudi assistance.

The mines, reported to be Soviet-made, were believed to have been planted in recent months by Iranian forces operating from speedboats.

The minesweeping operation came against a backdrop of increased sabre-rattling by Iran, which announced that it was starting military maneuvers in the gulf next month.

The official Iranian news agency said that the maneuvers were intended "as a warning to the superpowers" and to demonstrate the military progress of Iran's Revolutionary Guards.

THE AUGUST MANEUVERS appear timed to coincide with the second phase of the U.S. escort plan. The first Kuwaiti vessel re-registered under the American flag, the 401,000-ton Bridgeton now lying off the port of Khawr Fakkan in the Gulf of Oman, is expected to sail into the Persian Gulf on Tuesday or Wednesday.

A Revolutionary Guards official was quoted as having said that a plan for what he called "encountering" U.S. forces in the Persian Gulf and the Gulf of Oman had already been drawn up by Tehran.

In a related development, Iran's foreign minister, Ali Akbar Velayati, was quoted as saying that Iran would not accept a proposed U.N. Security Council resolution calling for an immediate cease-fire between Iran and Iraq.

The resolution has garnered the support of all five permanent members of the Security Council.

ISU police ask for guns

AMES — The head of the Iowa State University campus police will ask the state Board of Regents to allow his officers to carry guns.

Joe Wehner, chief of the ISU Police Department since April, is proposing the 24-member force be allowed to carry .38-caliber revolvers in addition to the mace and nightsticks they already carry. Wehner said that school security officers have been armed for some time. He said the guns add to the officers' respectability and professionalism.

Ohio governor may run

ADEL, Iowa — Admitting he is at least 80 days behind the declared candidates, Ohio Gov. Richard Celeste met with Democratic activists in Iowa this weekend to see whether it is too late for him to enter the presidential race.

"From the standpoint of decided voters, it's not too late. From the standpoint of being able to build an effective organization, it's getting to be a close call," Celeste said during a stop at Nizzi's Cucina, a cafe visited by four Democratic candidates this year.

"Whether it is the right time for me to pursue a presidential candidacy is the real question," he said.

DES MOINES — Southern blues-rock guitarist Stevie Ray Vaughan and rocker Gregg Allman have been added to the list of entertainers scheduled to perform at the Iowa State Fair.

Vaughan and Allman will appear in the Grandstand Aug. 30, the final night of the fair. The fair begins Aug. 20.

'Ollie' sign greets drivers

OLLIE, Iowa — No, the star witness of the Iran-Contra hearings can't be found in southeast Iowa — the sign just implies he can.

Travelers on Iowa Highway 78 may be surprised to see a sign that reads "Ollie North," but the marker simply means the Keokuk County town of Ollie, population 230, is 2 miles to the north of that spot.

Resident Francis Fye, who replaced the original marker with two homemade signs as North testified before a congressional panel last week, said although the Iran-Contra scandal is "a big mess," he's glad the town of Ollie was able to benefit from it.

Scout's stories doubted

BOONE, Iowa — Boone County Sheriff Hank Wallace said he is continuing his investigation into an alleged assault at a Boone Girl Scout camp last week while camp officials field calls from worried parents.

Three 8-year-old Clearfield girls said knife-wielding masked intruders who entered their tent threatened to kill them Wednesday night at Camp Sacajawea.

But central Iowa Girl Scout officials doubt the incident ever happened. Officials said the girls' stories have changed and other scouts and counselors heard or saw nothing unusual that night.

Davenport men arrested

DAVENPORT — Two Davenport men have been arrested and charged in the death of Danny Cleveland Lowe, who was found unconscious with head injuries at a Davenport intersection early Saturday.

Lowe, 26, died at University Hospitals shortly before 5 p.m. Saturday, said Scott County Medical Examiner R.M. Perkins. An autopsy was scheduled Sunday to determine the cause of Lowe's death.

Police arrested James Smith, 21, and Robert Mastin, 23, both of Davenport, and charged them with willful injury.

Arrest ends national search for local halfway house man

By Anne Kevlin
The Daily Iowan

A nationwide search for a convict who escaped from an Iowa City halfway house ended with his arrest Friday morning by officers from the Coralville Police Department, according to police reports.

Paul Campbell, 33, was arrested without a struggle at 9:25 a.m. at the intersection of Tenth Avenue and Fifth Street in Coralville, according to Coralville Police Department officials.

Campbell pleaded guilty in 1983 to a voluntary manslaughter charge in connection with a brutal 1981 slaying of a Des Moines woman. In February, Campbell received approval to participate in the work release

Paul Campbell program of Project H.O.P.E., a halfway house located at 1916 Waterfront Drive in Iowa City.

Campbell failed to return on July 12 to the halfway house after a weekend furlough, according to police reports. A warrant for his arrest was issued early last week.

When he escaped, Campbell allegedly stole a car which has since been located, according to police. Campbell was a passenger in a pickup truck driven by a female acquaintance at the time of his arrest, according to police, but his whereabouts before his capture are unknown.

"We believe that it's possible that he may have been up in Canada for awhile, and returned," said Sgt. Dave Stoops of the Coralville Police Department.

An Iowa City man was charged with assault with intent to commit sexual abuse in Johnson County District Court Friday in connection with an incident at a house in the 2100 block of Miami Drive early Friday morning.

Craig Scott Kendall, 33, of 1541 Tracy Lane, was released from the Johnson County Jail Friday after posting $5,000 bond, according to officials.

Police were called to the house at about 2:50 a.m. Friday and reported hearing yelling inside the house, according to court records. The victim's 7-year-old son let police into the home and led them to a back bedroom, according to court records.

The victim sustained several bruises to her arms, according to court records.

A preliminary hearing was set for July 27, according to court records.

Assault with intent to commit sexual abuse is a class C felony and may be punished by 10 years in jail and a $5,000 fine.

County: little say in tax vote

By Joseph Levy
The Daily Iowan

Although all Johnson County residents will vote in October on implementing a 1 percent local sales tax — passed by the Iowa City Council this month — local government officials said this weekend that the county will have little say in the matter.

Iowa City Manager Stephen Atkins said the procedure for voting on and implementing a local option tax in Iowa City is confusing, because the council's approval of the tax mandates the issue be presented to all Johnson County voters, not just Iowa City.

Atkins said any vote for a local option tax, by Iowa law, has to be countywide. Atkins said the Johnson County Board of Supervisors must hold elections Oct. 6 on the proposal because Iowa City has already approved it.

Analysis

"A CITY WHICH has the majority population in a county can request an election be called," Atkins said.

Iowa City, whose population represents about 58 percent of Johnson County's total population, simply expressed that right, he explained.

Once the election is held, the tax will only apply to incorporated and unincorporated areas of Johnson County where a majority vote for imposition is received, according to Johnson County Supervisor Robert Burns.

"It may be passed by residents of any of the incorporated cities in Johnson County," Burns said. "If the residents of Oxford, for example, decide to pass it, Oxford will have a 1 percent sales tax no matter what happens in Iowa City."

THE COUNTY IS obligated by law to pass an ordinance implementing the tax in those areas of the county which approve it, according to the Iowa Department of Revenue and Finance.

"Passage of the ordinance is a mandatory ministerial task," a release from the department states. "Failure to pass the ordinance will not delay the imposition of the tax."

Contiguous cities, such as Iowa City, Coralville and University Heights, are treated as one incorporated area, according to the Department of Revenue and Finance. This means that a majority of the people in these three cities must pass the tax for it to become law in any one of them.

Atkins added each of the incorporated areas in Johnson County has the authority to construct its own ballot for the sales tax proposal.

AREAS MUST HAVE their ballots worded and prepared by July 23. If an area fails to adhere, the Iowa City version of the ballot will be utilized.

Iowa City's ballot states $1 million, or 50 percent of revenue received — whichever is least — shall be earmarked for property tax relief. The remaining money will go to the maintenance and improvement of the city's program of services.

Estimates from Iowa City administrators indicate the 1 percent tax on sales and services would raise $3.4 million for Johnson County if it were passed countywide. Iowa City alone would receive $2.07 million if the sales tax were passed.

The Johnson County Board of Supervisors is sponsoring a work session on the tax Tuesday during its regular meeting for members of the public interested in finding out more about the tax.

Study aids healthy, ill siblings

By John Bartenhagen
The Daily Iowan

Although peer pressure among family members is often cited as a contributing cause of many teenage problems, researchers at the UI College of Nursing hope to show that children can have a positive effect on their chronically ill brothers and sisters.

Professor Martha Craft of the UI College of Nursing is directing a one-year research project called Siblings Inspiring Brothers or Sisters, or SIBS, that will measure how healthy siblings can help improve the daily living skills of a brother or sister with cerebral palsy.

Craft will be assisted in her study by UI Nursing Professor Jean Lakin and UI College of Nursing staff members Robert Oppliger and Greg Clancy.

CEREBRAL PALSY, a chronic illness for which there is no known cure, is caused by damage to brain nerve cells, Craft said. The improper functioning of these nerve cells results in weak, uncoordinated muscles that make it difficult for cerebral palsy patients to engage in everyday activities like dressing themselves, walking and eating.

Craft said nearly 10 years of research involving more than 300 siblings of ill or hospitalized children helped her formulate the idea for this project.

"We found that when the siblings weren't involved or informed about the illness or handicap, they did much worse in coping with the situation," she said.

Healthy children and cerebral palsy victims are taught behavior modification strategies such as role-modeling and praise and reward techniques that make use of the natural competition between siblings, she said.

"SIBLING RIVALRY isn't necessarily a bad thing — it can motivate a child with cerebral palsy to help themselves and to adapt to reality," she said. "Plus, by involving the other children in the daily routine, it takes some of the pressure off the parents."

The study began in March and will measure the changes in the functional abilities of 15 afflicted children, according to project statistician Oppliger. Healthy siblings will be asked to spend varying amounts of time engaged in therapeutic play activities with the cerebral palsy victims, he said.

"In order to make accurate measurements of the effect siblings have, we have to adjust the time schedules for each family because we have children in the study ranging from moderately to severely handicapped," he said.

CRAFT SAID if the project proves that brothers and sisters of cerebral palsy victims benefit from taking part in the therapy process, such techniques should be useful to all families with handicapped children.

"We see this project as a model for testing the effect of sibling involvement for all chronic disability and illness," she said. "So far, the results have been very encouraging."

The project is funded by a $113,755 grant from the Robert Wood Johnson Foundation's Research and Development Program to Improve Patient Functional Status. The program subsidizes research projects that attempt to assist disabled or chronically ill people regain or maintain mobility, mental alertness and daily living skills.

Expert advocates use of Channel 26

By Franc Contreras
The Daily Iowan

While some Iowa City residents are using the local community access channel to produce their own programs on cable television, a communications expert in the UI College of Law said, area organizations should also use cable Channel 26 as a tool for exercising their right to free speech.

"One of my frustrations has been the failure of Iowa City organizations of all kinds to use access channels," UI Visiting Professor of Law Nicholas Johnson said. "I think every organization in Iowa City — churches, unions, business and civic associations — should have no less than one person responsible for regular video productions on Channel 26."

Johnson, who served as a commissioner on the Federal Communications Commission from 1963 to 1966, said citizens and community organizations could use the local access channel to get their message to others.

"A LOT OF people know about the channel and they are using it," Johnson said. "Iowa City is recognized as one of the more active access television users in the nation. But there is so much more we can do, we haven't begun to scratch the surface yet."

Johnson, who during his tenure on the FCC was instrumental in making access television a requirement for cable television companies in 1972, encourages local organizations to utilize the television channel which citizens can use to produce shows free of charge.

While Heritage Cablevision is no longer required to provide an access channel, the company agreed to provide one for the community to use as a tool for practicing its right to freedom of speech, Heritage Director of Community Programming Paul LeValley said.

THE COMPANY decided to take that action because "the people of Iowa City demanded it," he said.

"The people of Iowa City were aware of the access television issue when Heritage first came here," LeValley said. "It happened because people like Nick Johnson and Robert Pepper, a top aid to the FCC in Washington, D.C., were up on it."

LeValley, whose job involves keeping the community aware of the free services the station provides, said the station offers Iowa City residents with a flare for personal expression or creativity the opportunity to reach others through television.

Contra killing

At a time when more Americans than ever before are beginning to get a glimpse into the sordid — yet supposedly necessary — methods of securing funds for the U.S.-supported and trained Contra rebels, the Contras themselves are behaving in their typical manner.

In the same week that President Reagan announced that, "The American people want . . . aid to continue" for the Nicaraguan Contras, three children under the age of 13 and a pregnant woman were killed by Contra soldiers storming the peasant village of San Jose de Bocay, Nicaragua.

Reports indicate the attack lasted for seven or eight hours. The people of the village had to tend to the injured rather than defend their property.

Nearly 50 homes and food cooperatives were burned to the ground while such people as Dr. Miguel Garcia, a local physician, were tending to the wounded — including a 12-year-old girl with shrapnel lodged in her throat — in a makeshift field hospital.

The attack on the remote village this past Thursday by approximately 100 Contras left over 30 people injured. The majority of injuries consisted of unsuspecting civilians whose only crime was to be in the wrong place at the wrong time.

The last time the Contra forces struck this isolated northern region was immediately following the Congressional allocation of $100 million to the Contras in 1986. Obviously money brings results.

Despite the fact that Contra spokesman Bosco Mataros called this attack "the most important military action we have carried out in the northern part of the country," reports indicate that the Contra soldiers inflicted no damage to the town's airstrip or the small collection of shacks serving as headquarters for the Nicaraguan army.

They failed in their objective yet cry "victory" in an attempt to elicit and receive further American aid.

According to Reagan, "The more people know about the Sandinista Communists, the more they support the freedom fighters. The American people want the aid to continue."

This is ironic due to the fact that a recent New York Times/CBS News poll shows that only slightly more than 30 percent of Americans favor continued aid to this organization. Since when does 30 percent constitute a majority?

Currently, White House and State Department officials are working out the details for Reagan's Congressional request for continued aid to the Contras. Ergo, we see acts such as this brutal terrorism hyped to the hilt as part of a successful anti-communistic rebellion and commendable behavior.

While on the other hand, truly heroic behavior — such as the efforts of Ben Linder, a 27-year-old American engineer who was executed for trying to bring electricity to an impoverished village in Nicaragua — are written off as the regretful incidents of a country at war.

In October Congress will decide whether or not to continue aid to the Contras. They must take into account the murders of these people and others and question themselves as to what the majority of Americans believe is really a moral stance in Nicaragua.

Personal privacy

During the perjury trial of former White House Aid, Michael Deaver, the conflict of the citizen's right to privacy and the public's right to information has arisen.

Recently, in response to a legal appeal by television and press organizations, the presiding judge has had to dismiss the jury pool and delay the trial until at least October.

Acting on an agreement between the defense and the prosecutor — the judge had been holding jury selection in private. Reportedly prospective jurors were being asked pointed questions about their private lives, particularly about drug use and alcoholism.

But lawyers persuaded an appeals court that the closed procedure was a violation of First Amendment rights. And, Micheal Deaver's lawyer resolved to appeal the appeal to the U.S. Supreme Court, which does not meet again until October. Over the objections of the prosecutor, the judge ruled that the trial must begin anew after the high court's ruling.

For better or worse the private lives of politicians and celebrities are now public domain. But it hardly seems justifiable to burden those private citizens who are called to jury duty with the same sort of scrutiny. The public's right to know does not always supersede the individual's right to privacy.

The purple haze of the '60s

J. L. McClure

I'm getting old. This immutable fact of life was brought painfully home for me the other day while I was browsing through the paper and came across an article which reported that some adolescents on the East Coast — admittedly a limited sample, but one that wields undue influence on national trends — have decided that the 1960s are worth nostalgic resurrection.

Sixteen-year-olds are dressing in tie-dyed T-shirts, moccasins, peace symbols and ripped-in-revealing-places blue jeans; putting on resuscitated recordings of Jimi Hendrix, the Doors and the Grateful Dead; slipping video cassettes of Alice's Restaurant, Easy Rider and Woodstock into their parents' VCRs — all in order to get a taste of what one of the nouveau hippies describes as "an extremely interesting culture."

That "extremely interesting culture" was the extremely interesting culture of my own youth, though for me the only "extremely interesting" thing about the "culture" of the 1960s now is that I somehow survived it.

THE SUMMER OF 1967 — referred to as the "summer of love" — was an important summer in my life. On June 3, I finished my last day of high school and was arrested for reckless driving (I ran into two parked cars on my way from school to our McDonald's hangout). The following week I graduated (though the principal threatened to keep me out of the ceremonies because I had grown a beard in the interim), and the day after that I moved into my own apartment and smoked marijuana for the first time.

I played guitar in a rock 'n' roll band that summer. We wore tie-dyed T-shirts, moccasins, peace symbols, etc. We played in one club or another most nights of the week and arranged for some sort of debauchery following each gig. On the nights when we weren't playing, we just debauched.

The band broke up in August after we had driven our van to Denver to play a week's gig there, only to have all our equipment stolen the first night. A week later I was arrested for possession of marijuana. My lawyer suggested it would look much better to the judge if I cut my hair and enrolled in college, so I did. The charges were dropped due to lack of evidence (I possessed no marijuana at the time of my arrest). Four years after that I graduated from college — with honors.

I CONFESS THIS litany of youthful offenses not as atonement for past sins, but rather as an explanation of why I find the current fascination for the "culture" of the '60s a bit baffling, if not troubling. Mine was, admittedly, a somewhat extreme version of the "summer of love," but it was at the same time emblematic.

Today's teenage revisionists of the '60s look back to those years as a time of "commitment to social and political activism," of "ideological commitment and a sense of purpose." We said that was what we were about — and we believed it at the time — but as is so often the case with history, the proclaimed motivation, however honestly felt, was not necessarily the actual driving force.

Consider the given cultural artifacts of that time. The movies have not so much a concern for "social and political activism" in common as they have a concern in having a good time.

Woodstock, the quintessential documentary of the period, is little more than a two-hour condensed version of a three-day party in the rain. And the scratchy records from that time still in my collection seem much more focused on sex and drugs (not necessarily in that order) than on "ideological commitment." When I think of Hendrix, I think of "Purple Haze;" of the Doors, "Light my Fire;" and of the Dead, "Truckin'."

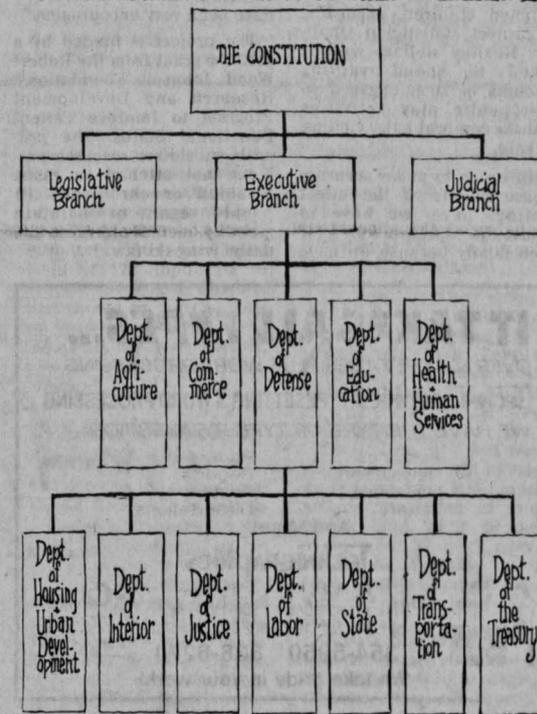

WHAT BOTHERS ME most about this nostalgia for the '60s is not the misconstrued image of that time, but rather the implicit denial of the current generation to mount its own rebellion against what it finds oppressive in the conservative constraints of the '80s.

For the youth of today to yearn for the mythic "social concerns" of the '60s is not very different than President Ronald Reagan yearning for the "security" of the '50s. Neither existed then, and can't be "revived" now.

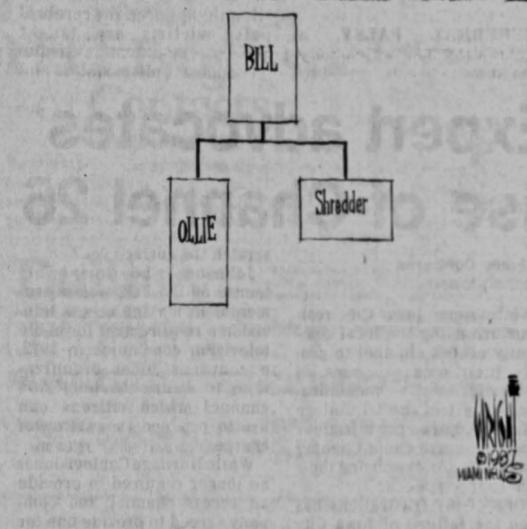

Besides, what is so bad about the Beastie Boys?

But then I guess that's just one more sign that I'm getting old. DI Columnist J.L. McClure's column appears on Mondays.

UI shredder saga

To the Editor:
We were surprised to see, of all people, Steve Grubbs, former UI Student Senate President, rationalize Lt. Col. Oliver North's action in regard to the funding of the Nicaraguan Contras.

While we need not quibble over whether the spirit of the law expressed by the Boland Amendment was intended to be upheld by all Americans or only a few, we will take issue with Grubbs' contention that no co-mingling of funds between the private Contra supply network and the U.S. government occurred.

To cite the case against the student organization New Wave, brought by Grubbs and one Mike Ketchmark during the 1985-86 Tory reign in Student Senate, co-mingling of funds may occur even when no actual monies are involved.

In the New Wave case, it was alleged that New Wave had committed such nefarious deeds as allowing the Progressive Student Network to use its ruler and typewriter to produce the Progressive Student News. The Progressive Student Network was found to be guilty of engaging in political activity in violation of Student Senate budgetary constraints, and New Wave was denied funding because of the alleged co-mingling of funds. Far be it from us to ask Grubbs, or any other dotting president, to engage in acts of memory recall, but we must ask our former comrade, "If the taxpayers did not purchase Ollie's shredder, typewriter, spiral notebooks, plane fare and time, then who did?" Was it . . . uh, Satan, Steve? In fact, the taxpayers did purchase Ollie's tools and, ultimately, it is the taxpayer who will bear the burden of this administration's escapades in Central America and the Middle East. The American people have borne the burden of right wing doublespeak for too long.

Democracy?

To the Editor:
The latest media spectacle of the Lt. Col. Oliver North hearings must be interpreted by someone for what it is, as opposed to what it appears to be.

Few people seem to notice that the power structure, which is out of the people's control, is telling the people that it will fix everything for them!

The widespread dissemination of information regarding the North scandal and hearings produces images of "democracy," "justice" and the "truth" by means of a false contest — a lawbreaker vs. a law-abiding committee.

In this manner the pertinent questions of state power (law) itself and the glaring lie of "democratic control by the public" over the state's actions is diverted as the TV images say directly to the populace: "Everything is taken care of for you, so don't worry, go back to your everyday lives."

We must be constantly aware that everything disseminated by the media is advertising, not just the ads with prices listed.

The problem of government elites being independent from popular control is not going to be solved by other elites — and yet this is precisely what the images of democracy presented by the media are telling the public. This is, indeed, the real scandal.

'Insult to injury'

To the Editor:
I wanted to join in the sentiment of other readers and ask for the return of Scott Raab to the editorial page. I continue to be impressed with many of the quality writers on the Viewpoints page of the DI. With the loss of Raab's column you have lost one of your best writers. I think it is especially important that an editorial page express opinions that challenge the readership and promote thinking. I know Raab's opinions were often the source of letters to the editor. This helps support my premise. To add insult to injury, I have heard that he may now be paid for a column in Madison, Wis. I hope you will reconsider, and make attempts to return him to the paper.

Irreplaceable picture

To the Editor:
Last Sunday, my husband's billfold and checkbook were lost between our house on Oakcrest and our father's house on Highland in Iowa City.

I would like to ask the person who found it to please return our family pictures. One of the pictures is of our deceased son and cannot be replaced. We can live without the credit cards and the driver's license, but we sure do feel bad about losing the picture of our son. There aren't many pictures of him any more. Please won't you drop the picture in an envelope and drop it in our mailbox?

Texas flood death count reaches 9

COMFORT, Texas — Searchers poking through waterlogged rubbish Sunday recovered the body of a ninth church camper killed by flooding along the Guadalupe River, leaving one more teenager missing and presumed dead.

The body of Leslie Gossett, 14, was located at 12:25 p.m. near a railroad trestle 5 1/2 miles downstream from the spot where a 30-foot surge of floodwater engulfed a bus and an evacuating 43 campers and counselors from the Pot O Gold camp Friday.

"Citizen volunteers found her body beneath debris," state trooper Tom Mobley said. "They had to use a tractor to pull the debris off the body."

The discovery of the body brought the official death toll in the flooding to nine. Only one teenager, John Bankston, 17, of Dallas, remained unaccounted for.

Heavy rains in Italy kill at least 30

SONDRIO, Italy — At least 30 people have been killed and hundreds of others trapped on rooftops in northern Italy after three days of torrential rains that flooded rivers over their banks and caused widespread flooding, police said Sunday.

In the tiny village of Tartano, 45 miles north of Milan, 12 bodies were pulled out of the rubble of an apartment house and an adjacent hotel that had collapsed under the force of the floods.

Rescue workers were sifting through the wreckage of La Grande Baita hotel in search of 10 more victims, most of them believed to be children, feared trapped under the debris.

Dozens of injured were rushed to hospitals in Bormio and Sondrio, the biggest town in the mountainous region, as more than 3,000 rescue workers searched for survivors buried under mud slides.

No solution in Paris, Iran embassy war

PARIS — French Foreign Minister Jean-Bernard Raimond said Sunday breaking diplomatic ties with Iran could make it more difficult to secure the release of six French hostages believed held by pro-Iranian groups in Lebanon.

In a nationwide television interview, Raimond offered no solution to the crisis that has led both countries to seal off the other's missions and raised fears the French Embassy would be overrun like the U.S. Embassy in 1979.

Raimond, speaking publicly for the first time on the crisis, said France is still trying to negotiate the release of French Embassy staff in Iran and the departure of Iranian diplomats from Iran.

Within hours of the announcement Friday that France had broken ties with Iran, Islamic Jihad, a pro-Iranian group in Lebanon, threatened to kill two French hostages.

Sandinistas celebrate 8th year in power

MATAGALPA, Nicaragua — President Daniel Ortega, marking the Sandinista government's eighth year in power, said Sunday congressional hearings probing the Iran-Contra scandal have exposed the "decomposition of the so-called American democracy."

Speaking at a political rally in the north-central city of Matagalpa, Ortega warned Congress against "serving as accomplices to (President) Ronald Reagan's terrorist policies against Nicaragua" by approving more aid for the U.S.-backed Contra rebels.

Ortega, dressed in his customary green military uniform, led the ceremonies marking the eighth anniversary of the Sandinista-led revolution that ousted right-wing dictator Anastasio Somoza and brought the Sandinistas to power.

Agents say Marcos seeks to sell gold

WASHINGTON — Two self-described agents of Ferdinand Marcos say a network of Philippine army, government and banking officials still loyal to the exiled president has been seeking to sell secret stashes of gold bullion and securities worth billions of dollars.

The two intermediaries said Marcos also is employing a small group of Americans, led by a former U.S. Air Force officer who piloted Air Force One, to help sell the gold on the London Metal Exchange.

State Department officials have said Marcos funneled billions of dollars of Philippine national assets out of the country for years prior to his ouster in 1986.

NBC strikers may resume talks soon

NEW YORK — Both sides in the strike by behind-the-scenes news employees at NBC were optimistic Sunday about a settlement in the 22-day-old dispute, saying they would respond to a call by federal mediators to resume negotiations this week.

NBC and the National Association of Broadcast Employees and Technicians said the sessions scheduled for Monday morning with mediators would not necessarily include face-to-face discussions between the two sides but marked the best chance for movement since the strike began on June 29.

"We would like to see a labor agreement and maybe this is the way of getting one," said NBC spokeswoman McClain Ramsey.

First black wins Miss Mississippi title

VICKSBURG, Miss. — Toni Seawright was crowned Miss Mississippi Saturday night, becoming the first black to win the title.

"Thank you, Jesus," Seawright said with her eyes closed before she bent her head to receive the crown of Miss Mississippi 1987 from last year's winner, Kim McGuffee.

"We made history but we're not through making history," Seawright, a native of Moss Point, said after the pageant. Black contestants from the South in the Miss America pageant have been rare. The most recent was Lencola Sullivan, who won the Miss Arkansas title in 1980 and finished fourth runner-up in the Miss America contest.

Typhoon death toll rises in Korea

SEOUL, South Korea — The toll from Typhoon Thelma's onslaught through southern South Korea rose to 117 dead and 214 missing Sunday, while casualty reports from flooded areas continued to trickle in, officials said.

Three days after Thelma smashed into the southern and southeastern parts of the country, more than 29,000 people were still homeless, according to government officials. They estimated property damage at $222 million.

The government said 8,753 houses and buildings were damaged or destroyed and 3,879 vessels sunk or damaged in the storm.

Meanwhile, officials said heavy rains pounded Cheju island off the south coast Saturday and Sunday, leaving hundreds more families homeless.

Rudman rips Justice officials

By Dana Walker
United Press International

WASHINGTON — Iran-Contra committee members said Sunday they believe John Poindexter's testimony that he did not tell President Ronald Reagan about the Contra diversion and Sen. Warren Rudman blamed Justice Department incompetence for heightening the nation's "agony" over the affair.

Both Republicans and Democrats appearing on network television news shows conceded the build-up to the question of whether Reagan knew about the Iran arms profit diversion to the Contra rebels has fizzled.

Some members also predicted no criminal charges would be filed against the former national security adviser or his deputy, Lt. Col. Oliver North, and said for special prosecutor Lawrence Walsh to do so would be "absurd."

Rudman, R-N.H., blamed the Justice Department for failing to ask Poindexter and North what authority they had in selling arms to Iran and diverting the profits for the

John Poindexter
Nicaraguan rebels before the two left their White House jobs Nov. 25.

IT WAS Attorney General Edwin Meese's announcement of the discovery of the diversion that day that set off the scandal that has engulfed the White House for eight months.

"What I still don't understand," Rudman said on ABC's "This Week With David Brinkley," "is how in the world they (the Justice Department) allowed Poindexter and North to leave the White House without bringing them in and finding out what was their authority, what did they do, how did they do it."

"Had he (Meese) done that, we would not have had hearings of the length we had," Rudman said. "The country would not have had the agony we've gone through."

Asked if he felt that was an intentional cover-up, Rudman said, "I think it was incompetence."

Rudman and others said the question of what Reagan knew was painted by the White House as the chief question the select House and Senate panels were seeking to answer and that other important issues remain to be addressed.

"I THINK IT'S over" as far as the Reagan question is concerned, Rudman said. "I find Poindexter astonishing and yet I believe him because I think he did not realize the enormity of what he was doing."

Poindexter will be questioned for a fourth day when the hearings resume today. Rep. Thomas Foley, D-Wash.,

House Democratic leader, said he also accepts Poindexter's testimony that he did not tell Reagan of the diversion of profits from the Iran arms sales to the Contras and Rep. Henry Hyde, R-Ill., agreed.

"They've shifted the question," Hyde said. "It used to be, 'Did the president know of the diversion?' Now that that has sputtered out and no smoking gun, not even a holster's been found, they've moved the issue around that the president ought to have known. I think the president has won a victory."

Foley added, "There's a myth that this committee was set up to decide whether the president was involved in the diversion knowledge. Now that it's been established that he isn't guilty of knowledge, I'm glad because I think it does give the president an opportunity to function in the last 18 months of his administration."

"The evidence shows that the president did not know of the diversion and that takes some of the air out of the balloon," Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, told NBC's "Meet the Press."

Yard targets Bork nomination

By Joe B. Warrick
United Press International

PHILADELPHIA — Molly Yard, the fiery president-elect of the National Organization for Women, Sunday described federal judge Robert Bork as "a neanderthal" and said her first priority would be to torpedo his nomination to the Supreme Court.

Yard, in her first appearance as leader of the 21-year-old feminist organization, said she would "hit the deck running," concentrating on Bork and a campaign to preserve abortion rights.

Yard, elected Saturday at NOW's national convention to succeed Eleanor Smeal, also vowed to press the fight for an equal rights amendment to the Constitution and to help forge a greater role for women in politics.

ASKED IF SHE planned to endorse a candidate in the 1988 presidential election, Yard said NOW was solidly behind Rep. Patricia Schroeder, D-Col., an undecided candidate.

Schroeder was welcomed with a thunderous ovation when she spoke to NOW convention delegates Saturday, and NOW officials said the organization had raised $351,000 for her campaign.

"We are going to keep saying to Representative Schroeder, 'Run, Pat, Run,'" Yard said.

Yard, the daughter of Methodist missionaries to China, said launching a campaign to block Bork's Supreme Court nomination would be the first order of business when she officially assumes the presidency Aug. 18.

She accused Bork of being anti-abortion and anti-birth control, and said NOW would not back a presidential candidate who supported Bork's nomination.

"BORK IS A neanderthal. I don't quite know why he's still around," said Yard, a diminutive, tough-talking grandmother from Ligonier, Pa. "We're going to fight every inch of the way to keep him from being confirmed."

"We aren't going to stand for having someone on the Supreme Court who wants to reverse Roe vs. Wade, the decision which legalized abortion," Yard said. "We want to keep birth control and abortion safe and legal in this country."

Yard said she also planned to organize demonstrations outside the Vatican's embassy in Washington, D.C., because NOW "doesn't want to be told by the pope about birth control and abortion."

Yard, a national NOW officer since 1978, made the comments at a news conference hours after being elected overwhelmingly to succeed Smeal, who had been president seven of the past 10 years and did not seek re-election.

Yard defeated Noreen Connell, president of the New York NOW chapter, by a 2-1 margin in what was described as a resounding endorsement of Smeal's efforts to thrust abortion rights and the ERA into the forefront of national debate.

Freedman

taught law at the universities of Pennsylvania, Iowa, Michigan, Georgetown and Cambridge, England. He was the unanimous choice of the college's search committee, which originally considered 615 applicants.

Freedman also made a pitch for programs that "hold the special promise of enlarging the global dimension of the college." Dartmouth should encourage foreign students to enroll, foreign professors to visit and teach, the study of foreign languages (he doesn't speak any, he told reporters at a press conference after the ceremony), and, he said, "infuse our curriculum with an international perspective." While at the UI, Freedman established several programs to promote international understanding.

IN AN ASSESSMENT of the new president given by Gregorian, his friend of 15 years, Freedman is a "scholar, teacher, meticulous organizer and administrator, optimistic, great listener, curious, both educated and cultured... an honorable person, quiet but forceful, believer in shared government and shared values... and a great reader."

Freedman is the college's first president in 165 years with no ties to the school — he is not a former student, professor or trustee. But despite the marked departure in tradition Dartmouth showed in choosing him, much else in the ceremony resembled other inaugurations.

In place of a podium, speakers rested on a fat pine tree stump that represents the Old Pine Tree, which, until struck by lightning about 100 years ago, was the highest point on the campus. As were his predecessors, Freedman was presented the college's most precious objects — the original charter, the Flude Medal (given to the college's second president by a London broker) and the silver Wentworth Bowl (a gift from New Hampshire's last royal governor during its first commencement). Freedman beamed throughout the presentation.

THE AUDIENCE included two former Dartmouth presidents; Freedman's wife and two children; representatives of about 35 other colleges; and television actress Meredith Baxter Birney (of "Family Ties"), who is rehearsing for a Hanover theater production.

Several dogs wandered near the outdoor stage in front of the school's library, oblivious to the pomp and ceremony.

According to faculty members, the number of professors who marched in the ceremony was greater than at recent graduations and the last inauguration because, they said, the faculty was pleased with the choice of a president from academia.

During the press conference, Freedman said he is a sports fan and that he'll miss games at the UI. His move to Dartmouth is at least in one sense a homecoming. Freedman grew up in Manchester, N.H.,

about 85 miles from Hanover.

One issue facing Freedman was shown at the inauguration when about 25 protesters carrying banners said the singing of the school song, "Men of Darthmouth," was sexist, even after it was changed to "We of Darthmouth." The program listed both versions of the song, but protesters said that Freedman "ought to be aware" of the difference. Freedman said later that he had sung the "We" version, but admitted he had not formed an opinion on the issue.

Dartmouth started admitting women in 1972.

Tuition

quality and cost is whether students enrolled in crowded programs receive an excellent education from their professors — which he said the UI still provides at a relatively low cost.

Gronbeck said the UI's system of separating credit hours — the number of hours students enroll in and pay for — from contact hours — the actual hours spent with a professor — makes assessing the value of a UI education difficult.

He said students should assess the quality of time they get with their instructors and not the ratio of dollars to credit hours.

"That's the bottom line — how much contact are you getting and is it quality time?" he said.

He said the overall quality of UI faculty, equipment and facilities has risen throughout the 10-year period along with enrollment and the costs of tuition.

BUT RECK SAID if state appropriations had continued at their 1979 level, the quality of the UI's educational programs would not be an issue.

He said in 1979 every one dollar of tuition was matched by $4.11 in appropriations. This year the ratio has dropped to $2.26.

Increasing tuition gives the state Legislature an excuse not to increase appropriations, Reck said.

But Moll said the decisions concerning tuition increases are not simple either/or decisions.

"I think if you're going to ask the state Legislature for more money, you're going to have to show you're willing to do what you can to help," Moll said, but added the UI administration shares student concerns about higher tuition.

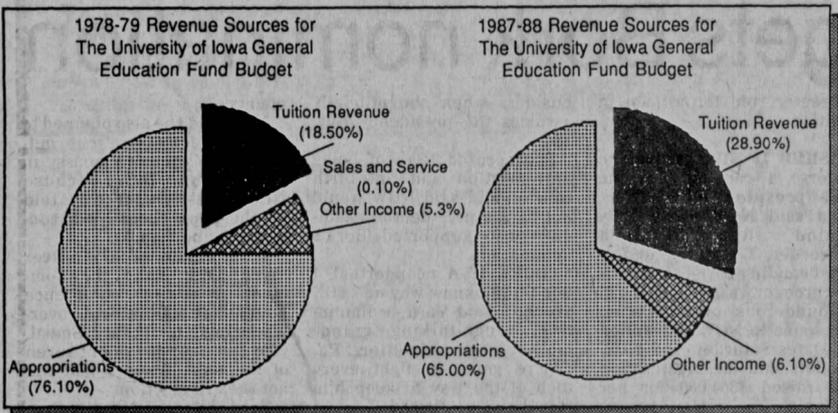

"WE ARE NOT for higher and higher tuition," he said.

Sen. Rich Varn, D-Solon, said part of the reason funds for higher education do not increase regularly is because the state does not have a formula or target growth percentage for higher education like it has for primary and secondary education.

Although he said some state lawmakers are concerned about the trend of tuition, Varn added the "level of concern and level of response is not sufficient."

Beach

 "These people are definitely not shy," junior Dana Williams said. She may have been referring to the disqualified "hunka hunka" contestants who attempted to win by displaying their bare backsides to the audience, who chose the winners by applause.

Besides watching the contests and listening to the bands, beachgoers could play horseshoes, volleyball, tug-of-war and enter a two-day mechanical surfboard competition.

"THERE WAS ONE person who was a really good surfer," said Cada, who watched the competition for a while. "I was surprised. I didn't think Iowans would be able to surf that well."

Some participants thought the quality of the beach party was as good as any on the coast.

"This is better than Padre or Galveston because the sand is cleaner and the people are great," said San Antonio, Texas, native Sandra Townsend, adding she decided driving 17 hours in one day was worth staying longer so she could attend the party.

"I came because I had to see if they could do it the same as they do it in Florida," Andy Tiernan from Atlanta said, "and they do."

The weather, hot both days but overcast Saturday, was ideal for the beach party. Wind conditions prevented the hot air balloon ascension Saturday evening.

Gold collection increases for diver Louganis

DURHAM, N.C. (UPI) — Diver Greg Louganis increased his record gold-medal haul at the U.S. Olympic Festival Sunday by winning his sixth consecutive 10-meter platform title.

With the two-week Festival reaching its halfway mark, Louganis provided the diving highlights at Raleigh.

The double winner at the 1984 Olympics captured his record 12th gold overall. Louganis, 27, of Malibu, Calif., won his sixth three-meter springboard Festival gold Saturday.

Following the eighth round Sunday, Louganis led by less than six points over silver medalist Bruce Kimball. But using dives of greater degrees of difficulty he pulled away on his final two dives. He received a 97.92 in the final round on a reverse 3 1/2 tuck.

Kimball, of Ann Arbor, Mich., kept on the pressure with high scores on his final three dives, including straight 9.5s on his final effort, a backward 2 1/2 pike.

"GOING INTO THAT last dive, you're standing on the tower and you hear that rip (from Kimball's dive), and you know there's no splash at all," Louganis said. "It's difficult to follow that. You know you can't do better than that. But I just told myself my mother will still love me no matter what, and it helped me to relax."

Kimball, who survived a near-fatal auto accident in 1981, said he thought he had a shot at Louganis.

"I could see the door was open and I had the chance to put the pressure on," he said. "Knowing what dives Greg had left, though, I wasn't counting on anything."

On Sunday night, the finals in the women's 10-meter platform were scheduled as were 12 boxing semifinals.

The basketball competition featured college standouts J.R. Reid of North Carolina and Terry Mills of Michigan. Four basketball games were scheduled with the night-cap marked by a head-to-head meeting of Reid for the South squad and Mills for the North.

IN THE FIRST basketball game, Dawn Bryant of the University of Virginia had 15 points and 10 rebounds to lead the East to a 68-55 victory over the West in a women's game.

"I thought we would have to make adjustments and get away from our low-post game if we were going to win," East Coach Ceal Barry said. "We had to make adjustments for their height advantage and that meant we had to play good defense."

"They were just ready to play today and we weren't," West player Jennifer Azzi said. "We were up from yesterday's win (over the South) and just took the game too lightly."

In archery, Jay Barra of Mesa, Ariz., raised his leading total to three rounds to 954 by scoring 322 out of a possible 360 at 50 meters.

In smallbore rifle prone, Mary Godlove of Savannah, Ga., won her second gold medal when she set her second shooting record in two days by scoring 597 x 600.

U.S. Marine Gary Andrade of Quantico took the men's gold in that shooting event with 695 x 700. Jim McNally, who commands a marksman unit at Fort Benning, Ga., won the gold in men's rapid fire pistol, also with 695 x 700.

Driesell leads Eastern squad to Festival win

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (UPI) — Coach Lefty Driesell registered his first victory since the 1986 NCAA Tournament Sunday when the East team at the U.S. Olympic Festival defeated the West 100-82 behind 18 points apiece from Elander Lewis and Dennis Scott.

Scott, a 6-foot-6 swingman from Reston, Va., bound for Georgia Tech, scored 14 points in the second half, including two three-pointers, as the East outscored the West 37-36 in the half to offset a three-point halftime deficit. Lewis, a guard from New York, will be a St. John's sophomore in the fall.

Driesell's team lost its opening game Saturday to the North. The veteran coach had been idle since being forced to resign during the scandal that followed the cocaine death of his star player, Len Bias, June 19, 1986.

"Well, I had never been out of the swing of things really," Driesell said. "I've been coaching for 32 years, so one year off is nothing and besides when I was doing the television, I was coaching both teams. If I had been selling insurance for cars, it would be different."

DRIESSELL HAS compiled a 524-224 college record in 17 years at Maryland and nine at Davidson. His last victory came against Pepperdine in the first round of the '86 tournament.

Driesell's East team had five players in double figures. The West, 0-2, was paced by forward Tom Lewis of Garden Grove, Calif., who scored 17 points. Lewis will be a Pepperdine sophomore.

In women's play, Dawn Bryant of Philadelphia scored 15 points and cleared 10 rebounds to lead the East to a 68-55 victory over the West, coached by her college coach, Deborah Ryan of Virginia. Both teams are 1-1.

Homers cease for Yankees' Mattingly

ARLINGTON, Texas (UPI) — Greg Harris and Jeff Russell ended Don Mattingly's record setting home run streak Sunday night and Steve Buechele's two homers helped power the Texas Rangers to a 20-3 thrashing of the New York Yankees.

Mattingly entered the game having hit a homer in a major league record equalling eight straight games, but Harris limited him to a single in three at-bats. Mattingly hit a bloop double in the eighth inning off Russell, after which the crowd of 30,875 gave Mattingly a standing ovation.

Mattingly had only one good swing against Harris and Russell in his four at-bats. He took a hard cut at an 0-2 pitch in the third and produced a solid single. In the eighth, he took a home run cut at a Russell fastball but failed to connect.

In his other at-bats, Mattingly grounded out in the first and hit a soft liner to first base in the fifth. Keith Creel pitched the ninth for Texas.

Faldo perfect in British win

MUIRFIELD, Scotland (UPI) — Nick Faldo, completing his round without a single birdie, stole the British Open Championship Sunday when American Paul Azinger bogeyed the final two holes.

Faldo parred his way through all 18 holes on a cold, fog-shrouded afternoon for a 71 that gave him a 72-hole total of 5-under-par 279. He trailed by a shot with two holes to play, and wound up the winner by a shot when Azinger found his way into bunkers on the closing two holes.

"Don't anyone feel sorry for me," said Azinger, who held a three-shot lead with nine holes to play before bogeying three holes coming home. "I had a great year. I'm obviously disappointed, but it isn't the end of the world. I learned a lot out there.

"I LOST A CHANCE to win a great title but I've proven I can play with anybody in the world, I've proven I'm one of the better wind players and I feel I've proven a lot to myself, that I'm a contender. I'm going to benefit from everything that happened to me today, I guarantee it."

The lanky American, bidding to become the first player since Tom Watson in 1975 to capture the British crown on his first attempt, closed with a 73 for 280. He tied for second place with Australian Rodger Davis, the opening round leader who finished with a 69. Davis made a strong run with three birdies in four holes midway through the round, but bogeyed 15 and 16.

Tied for fourth place at 281 were Americans Ben Crenshaw and Payne Stewart. Crenshaw, with four birdies on the final eight holes, had a final round 68 and Stewart, in and out of trouble all day, shot 72.

South African David Frost was alone in sixth place with a 74-282, followed at 283 by Tom Watson, the only other man to beat par for four rounds.

WATSON STARTED the final round only two shots behind Azinger and seemed poised to make a strong run at what would have been a record-equalling sixth British Open championship, but he bogeyed the second and third holes when he missed short putts and never could challenge, finishing with a 74.

"It's been difficult the last few years," said Watson, winless since 1984. "I have a love-hate relationship with the game."

Faldo becomes the second Briton in three years to win the Open, following Sandy Lyle's triumph two years ago at Sandwich. The victory was worth $120,000 of the record total purse of $1,040,000.

Azinger, winner of three tournaments in the United States this year, and the PGA's top money earner, seemed well in control of his nerves when he teed off in the final group Sunday.

Azinger nursed his one-shot lead to the 17th, missing excellent birdie opportunities on Nos. 12, 14 and 16 before his closing collapse.

Craig Stadler, with a 75, fell into a tie for eighth place at 284 with Ian Woosnam (72) and Nick Price (73).

Knox logs PGA victory at Hardee's

By Eric J. Hess
The Daily Iowan

COAL VALLEY, Ill. — Kenny Knox sank a four-foot putt for par on the final hole to win the $500,000 Hardee's Golf Classic at Oakwood Country Club Sunday.

Knox, in winning his second PGA Tour event, walked away with a $90,000 check, finishing with a tournament record 15-under-par 265 after consistent rounds of 67-66-66-66.

"I guess I let up the first day," Knox said after finishing the come-from-behind victory.

Gil Morgan, the golfing optometrist, made a successful comeback from a career-threatening shoulder injury to take second after leading Knox by one stroke after three rounds.

Mark McCumber, winner of last week's Anheuser-Busch Classic, took third with a 13-under-par 267. Two-time Hardee's champion Scott Hoch finished fourth at 12-under. And second-round leader Brad Fabel stumbled to fifth place.

WEST BRANCH'S Dave Rummels, the former Iowa golfer who lead the tournament after a first-round 63, tied for 14th at 8-under with Dan Pohl and Tom Purtzer.

Knox and Morgan, playing in a threesome with Fred Wadsworth who settled for a six-way tie for eighth, made it a two-way duel down the stretch.

Morgan drove his way to 14-under after five holes and parred out the rest of the way. It was a frustrating final 18 holes for the doctor after leaving two birdie putts on the lip of the hole, and a number of other birdie chances were lost.

"I don't feel I was unaggressive," Morgan said. "I hit the ball at the hole."

"Control was my game plan," he added. "So I was kind of happy about that."

Control was essential, but the breaks belonged to the 30-year-old Knox.

KNOX, WHO WON his first tournament last year at the Honda Classic, started slow with five consecutive pars. He birdied the par 5 sixth with a two-putt after reaching the green in two shots. He repeated the process for his second birdie on the par 5 10th hole.

"From tee to green, I two-putted the first 11 greens and made two birdies," he said.

While the putter wasn't working so well, his Ping-brand golden pitching wedge, however, was golden.

Knox chipped in for birdie on No. 13, and a miraculous chip from 125 yards out on No. 15 set up the go-ahead stroke.

"My concentration was so good this week that I could block out all of the negative thoughts in my mind," he said.

Going in No. 16 Knox held the one-stroke lead, the eventual winning margin. Both finished with three pars but getting there was half the fun.

"I FIGURED ONE of us would make a mistake," Morgan said. "I was just trying to keep from making a mistake."

A sizeable crowd of the estimated more than 20,000 people for the final day corralled around the 18th after both Knox and Morgan missed the green.

Morgan put his in the sand, about 45 feet from the pin. His blast out, however, was unsuccessful.

"My bunker play is not as good as I'd like," Morgan said. "I can't seem to get the pace I want."
