U.S. flag hoisted on Kuwaiti ships

By Charles P. Wallace

Los Angeles Times

KUWAIT — The Kuwaiti production towers were taken over by American ships without a fight.

The American flag was raised over the 300,000 barrels per day (bpd) Kuwaiti oil field yesterday, a day after it was reported that the United States had taken control of the field.

The move was announced by the Kuwaiti government, which said that it had decided to accept the terms of the U.S. military presence in the Gulf.

The flag raising was part of a larger operation that involved the deployment of American forces to the region.

In Washington, Pentagon officials said they were pleased with the smooth transition and that the operations were going well.

"This is a positive step in our effort to stabilize the region," said Secretary of Defense Caspar Weinberger.

"We are committed to maintaining a strong presence in the Gulf to deter aggression and to protect our interests."
Deficit may force cutbacks in services at crisis center

April 21 and that the rent was raised in Peoria would not make it possible to keep the center open, according to court records. Revenue also showed a profit of $64.62 in April and May, which was the highest amount ever reported by the center.

Peoria initially pleased public and public institutions charges but later dropped that case due to cost cutting that did not see the center as a priority.

Judge John Kauppi at the 13th Judicial District Court heard the appeal on Aug. 28 and found that Peoria was guilty of violating the city's public building code by adding an "accessibility feature" to a new home.

"I was quite pleased to see the judge and his staff make sure they understood the problem," said Peoria's city attorney, Jim Conley.

"The judge said he would take the case under advisement and that he would not be able to reach a decision for several months," Conley said.

Self-help groups enable people to cope

A veteran who was active in the war, a former high school principal, a police officer, a construction worker and a former nurse have all found that the daily stresses of life can be dealt with more effectively through the sharing of experiences at informal support groups. In these groups, members typically discuss their experiences at regularly scheduled meetings in order to come to terms with their problems.

"We have found that after the initial talking and the sharing of experiences is an important part of the process," said one participant. "It enables people to confront their problems and get support from others who are going through similar experiences." Participants also benefit from the support and encouragement of others who are facing similar challenges.

In one such group, members talk about their experiences with alcoholism or drug abuse. The group is structured to provide a supportive environment where members can share their stories and receive feedback from others who have been through similar experiences.

"We have been able to provide a place where people can come together and share their stories," said a group facilitator. "It is important to know that you are not alone and that others have gone through similar experiences." Participants often find that talking about their experiences helps them to understand their own problems and gain new insights.

"Sharing our experiences has helped us to realize that our problems are not unique," said one member. "It has helped us to feel less isolated and to see that others are also struggling with similar issues." Participants often find that talking about their experiences helps them to understand their own problems and gain new insights.

The reopening of the sand pits in Columbia, Ill. has resulted in a demonstration of the power of business to bring about positive change.

"We are pleased to see the progress that is being made," said one local resident. "It is a testament to the dedication of the business community and the commitment of the local government to develop a sustainable solution for the area.

The sand pits were closed in 1992 due to environmental concerns. However, the new business model has allowed for the safe and responsible extraction of sand, while also providing economic benefits to the community.

"It is important to remember that business can be a force for good," said another resident. "It is encouraging to see the progress that is being made and we look forward to seeing the continued success of this project.

The John B. Hillel Bank, located in Des Moines, is planning to open a new branch in Iowa City.

"We are excited to be expanding into Iowa City," said a bank spokesperson. "It is a great location for our new branch and we are looking forward to serving the community.

The new branch will be located in the heart of downtown Iowa City, providing convenient access to banking services for local residents and businesses.

"We are committed to providing excellent customer service," said the spokesperson. "We are looking forward to meeting the needs of our new customers and building relationships with them.

The John B. Hillel Bank is a full-service bank with a strong commitment to the community. We are proud to be part of the Iowa City landscape and we are excited to be expanding our presence in the area.

During the year, our bank sponsors informal support groups. They are organized by the bank's employee assistance program and are open to all employees. The groups provide a safe and confidential environment for employees to discuss their life challenges and receive support from others who are facing similar experiences.

"It is important for employees to have a place where they can talk about their challenges and receive support," said Meyer. "It is vital for the well-being of our employees and the success of our bank.

The informal support groups are just one example of the programs that our bank has implemented to support the well-being of our employees. We believe that it is important to create a supportive and inclusive environment for all employees.

The John B. Hillel Bank is committed to providing excellent customer service and a supportive work environment.

Great walls

Iowa to be a "great wall" for the nation, according to a letter to the editor in the Des Moines Register.

The letter writer, who goes by the name of "Iowa Voter," argues that Iowa should be a "great wall" for the nation, citing its role as a "swing state" that can tip the balance in presidential elections.

"Iowa is a state that has been pivotal in determining the outcome of presidential elections in recent years," the writer states. "It is time for Iowa to take its rightful place as a "great wall" for the nation, protecting the country from the excesses of the federal government."
France deploys 2 warships in Gulf

Briefly

France has deployed 2 warships in the Persian Gulf, in what was seen as a warning to Iraq and Iran that it was watching the early days of the war closely. The move was also seen as a sign of a growing French military presence in the region.

The deployment was announced by Paris as the US, Britain, and the United Nations were applying diplomatic pressure on Iran, and tensions were rising in the region.

France, along with other European countries, has been trying to mediate between Iran and the US over the nuclear standoff.

FRANKFORT, Ky. - The Environmental Protection Agency has decided to drop its request to discharge raw sewage into Kentucky's Big Sandy River, which flows through the heart of the state's coal country.

The move comes after months of negotiations between the EPA and state officials. The agency had been seeking to impose stricter regulations on the discharge of sewage from coal mining operations into the river.

The decision was welcomed by local officials and environmentalists, who had long been concerned about the pollution in the river.

IOWA CITY, Iowa - The Daily Iowan has announced its decision to offer a new student newspaper, the Daily Iowan Digital, in addition to its print edition.

The Daily Iowan Digital will be available online and on the university's mobile app, providing students with up-to-date news and information.

The Daily Iowan Digital will be edited and managed by current and recent UI students.
Every week a couple, either 20-35, or 40-45, sit on a lawn at Sunset Beach and read the Help Wanted section of the morning newspaper. They work for the same company for years, but they are not married and have no plans to get married. They are cousins who have been best friends since childhood.

Willie and Jeanette have been best friends since they were children. They met at the local park and have been inseparable ever since. They have always shared a love for reading and music, and they often spend their free time together.

When they were young, they used to go on long hikes in the mountains. They would pack a lunch and spend the day exploring the trails. They loved the peace and quiet of the wilderness, and they found it to be a great way to escape the hustle and bustle of their daily lives.

As they grew older, they continued to spend time together. They would go to concerts and plays, and they would often volunteer at local charities. They have always been involved in their community, and they take pride in being able to give back to those around them.

Recently, they have been thinking about retirement. They have saved up a good amount of money, and they are considering what they want to do with their lives once they stop working. They are both interested in traveling, and they are thinking about taking a trip around the world.

Willie and Jeanette are happy and content with their lives. They know that they are lucky to have each other, and they are looking forward to the future. They are excited to see what the next chapter of their lives will bring.

Reaves, Gamble join for PTL win

By Steve Williams
The Daily Iowan
Michael Reaves and Kevin Gamble showed Prime Time League fans what kind of competition could have been left on the sidelines, the duo finishing first Tuesday at Iowa City High School Gymnasium.

Reaves, who ran for 53 points while Todd Lumsden added 37 to the victory effort. Meanwhile, Todd Beckerman and future Iowa guard Steve Williams combined for 33 as the Hawks defeated Fitpatrick's Ed Horton led all Iowa players, representing various schools.
