Smiley claims self-defense

By John Gilardi
The Daily Iowan

Lawyers for Iowa football player Keaton Smiley filed a notice of self-defense Friday in Johnson County District Court, along with a motion to dismiss one charge and sever two of the five charges from the trial information and try them as separate matters.

Smiley, a 6-foot, 175-pound sophomore from Duncanville, Texas, is charged with five counts stemming from three incidents involving two female UI students — assault with intent to commit sexual abuse, aggravated assault and false imprisonment after allegedly assaulting UI sophomore Cheryl Zemaitis June 9 at his apartment.

Smiley is also charged with two counts of assault — one stemming from another incident with Zemaitis Oct. 27, 1986, and one involving UI junior Jennifer Lee on May 17, 1986.

Smiley has decided to withdraw from the Iowa football team for the 1987-88 season and retain three years of eligibility. UI Interim President Richard D. Remington has said the UI will not take action on the Smiley incident until court proceedings have been concluded.

Smiley's trial is scheduled to begin Oct. 12 in Johnson County District Court.

"WE WILL OFFER self-defense as a defense to the charges," said James Thomas, of Anamosa, Iowa, one of two lawyers representing Smiley. The notice of self-defense is required by state law within 40 days of charges being filed, if self-defense is going to be used as a defense.

According to court records, Smiley will testify he acted in self-defense when he allegedly hit Zemaitis repeatedly, threatened to cut her with a knife and held her against her will, because Zemaitis allegedly "first struck Smiley in the eye with her fist thereby causing Smiley's contact lens to be broken in his eye."

Smiley was "defending verbal assaults, slapping, kicking and hitting" by Zemaitis on June 9, the notice of self-defense states.

COURT RECORDS indicate a motion was filed to have the charges stemming from the Oct. 27, 1986, and May 17, 1986, incidents severed from the case since they "have no connection whatsoever" with the charges from the June 9 incident.

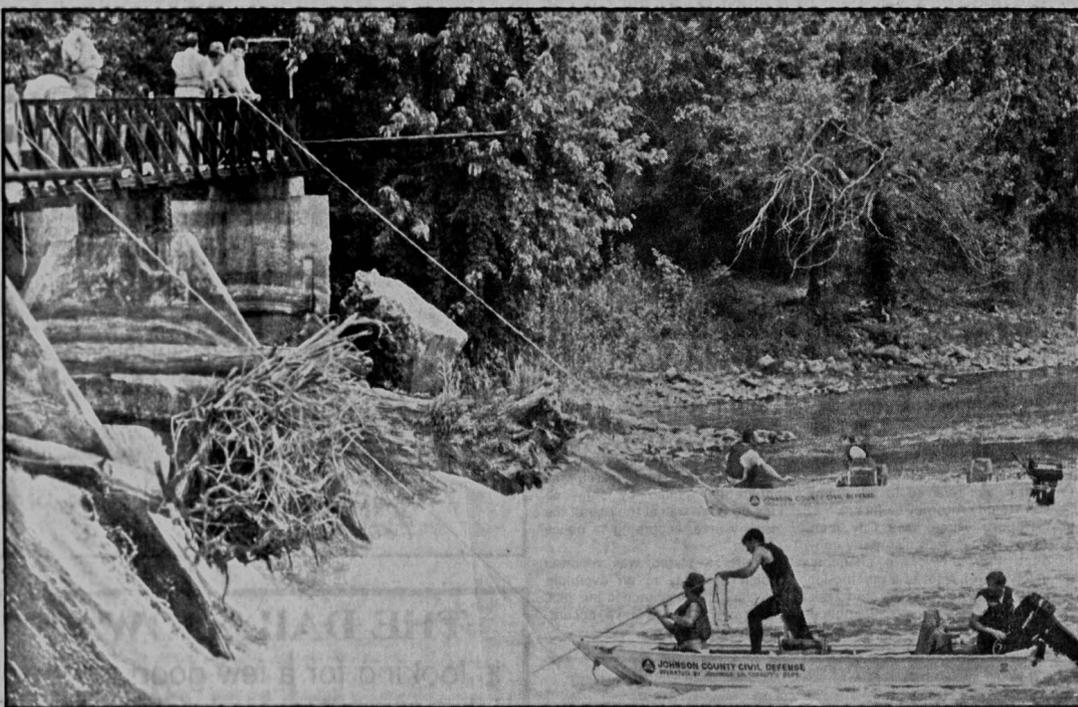

The motion also stated that it is "prejudicial to (Smiley's) case to stack charges which do not arise out of the same transaction or occurrence."

Johnson County Sheriff's Department rescue workers search for the body of 11-year-old Andrew Lepic who drowned Saturday in the Iowa

River in Coralville after stepping off a rock ledge while fishing with friends below the dam near the Iowa River Power Company.

Youth drowns in Iowa River

By John Gilardi
The Daily Iowan

Authorities Sunday recovered the body of an Iowa City boy believed to have drowned in a swirling section of the Iowa River Saturday just below the old power dam.

Johnson County Sheriff Gary Hughes said Andrew Lepic, 11, apparently was fishing in the river near a power dam when he was pulled under by a "very dangerous" current.

Lepic is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Steven Lepic of Iowa City. Hughes said the boy's body surfaced from time to time after search efforts began Saturday, but the swirling waters below the dam made the recovery effort extremely difficult. Efforts were suspended late Saturday and resumed Sunday, when the body was retrieved about 1:30 p.m.

Lepic and two other Coralville youths were fishing from a rock ledge about mid-stream below the dam Saturday morning when two of the boys waded into the water and Lepic apparently fell into a hole and was swept back by the current of the dam.

One of the surviving boys was rescued from the rock ledge by rescue boats, while the other was able to reach safety and managed to phone authorities at 11:30 a.m. Neither boy was injured in the incident.

Visitation will be held today from 5 to 8 p.m. at Gay's Funeral Home, 2720 Muscatine Ave. A service will be held Tuesday at 2 p.m. at the funeral home.

Weinberger: U.S. prepared for retaliation

By Don Irwin
Los Angeles Times

WASHINGTON — Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger said Sunday the United States has "a very real capability" for sweeping mines in the Persian Gulf which "can be increased and will be increased."

Weinberger added that there are "all kinds of things" that might be done in retaliation for the explosion that ripped the hull of the reflagged Kuwaiti supertanker Bridgeton while it was under U.S. escort in the northern Persian Gulf Friday. But he declined to suggest when, where, how or whether such action might be taken, noting that the explosion's cause has yet to be finally determined.

"It has not been firmly established that this was a mine," Weinberger said. "We are just now getting down into the bottom of an internal explosion. I don't think it was. I think it was a mine, but it hasn't been firmly established."

"VERY HEAVY PRESSURE" builds up inside tankers running empty, as was the U.S.-flagged, Kuwaiti-owned Bridgeton when the explosion struck the huge vessel, Weinberger said on ABC's televised "This Week with David Brinkley." He indicated that the cause will be determined in Kuwait, where a survey of a "very big gash" that has damaged four of the ship's oil chambers is under way.

Iran's United Nations ambassador, Said Rajaie Khorassani, interviewed on the same program before Weinberger appeared, said Iran was "pleased to see that the tanker was hit," but did not accept responsibility for the mine because "there are mines floating all over the Persian Gulf."

Asked what would happen if the United States determines that an Iranian mine damaged the tanker and seeks to retaliate, the ambassador replied that Iran is "prepared for the worst."

REP. LES ASPIN, D-Wis., chairman of the House Armed Services committee and another guest on the ABC panel show, faulted the Reagan administration for embarking on its plan to reflag and escort Kuwaiti tankers without first lining up a united front of Western allies in support of the plan.

Calling chances that the exercise will lead to a shooting war "possible but not likely," Aspin said that he was more concerned that it will lead to a "major attack" like the 1983 bombing of the U.S. Marine barracks in Beirut, in which 241 servicemen died.

Weinberger did not respond directly when he was asked why the United States has assigned none of its small fleet of mine sweepers to the gulf, but replied that "we have a minesweeping capability ... and it can be increased," in apparent reference to minesweeping helicopters.

HE OFFERED no specifics on these plans, but recalled that the Minutes show Reagan attempt to hide facts

By Doyle McManus
Los Angeles Times

WASHINGTON — President Ronald Reagan led a White House effort to conceal the facts about his secret arms deals with Iran last November, overruling arguments from both Secretary of State George Shultz and then-White House chief of staff Donald Regan that details of the deals should be disclosed, according to minutes of a White House meeting.

The minutes, part of a two-inch sheaf of documents released last week by Congress' Iran-Contra committees, describe an apparently heated confrontation between Reagan and Shultz during the meeting last Nov. 10.

By that time reports of the arms shipments to Iran had surfaced publicly, and Reagan met with his top Cabinet and White House staff to discuss how to deal with the controversy.

Shultz warned that the scheme had left U.S. anti-terrorism efforts in "a state of total disintegration" and noted reports that "the Israelis suckered us" in the arms deals, according to notes taken at the session by Alton Keel Jr., then deputy national security adviser.

BUT REAGAN was unmoved — and fought to keep his arms-and-hostages deals going forward, the minutes show. "The rumors have endangered what we're doing (and) endangered our contacts" with Iran, he told Shultz. When an American citizen is taken hostage, he added, "(a) purpose of government is to go to his or her support."

"I agree (that a) purpose of government is to protect citizens," Shultz replied — "but (the) whole purpose is to protect (them) by discouraging terrorism."

Reagan and other top officials made it clear in November that they wanted to keep the details of the arms deals secret, in hopes of winning the release of more of the American hostages held by pro-Iranian terrorists in Lebanon.

In a nationally televised speech three days after the Nov. 10 meeting, for example, Reagan decried "wildly speculative and false stories about arms for hostages and alleged ransom payments," refused to provide any details of the arms sales which had already occurred, and indicated that he intended the hostage talks with Iran to continue.

IN HIS congressional testimony last week, Shultz identified the late CIA Director William Casey and then-national security adviser John Poindexter, both of whom attended the Nov. 10 meeting, as his principal opponents in the "battle royal" over White House policy on the issue.

But the handwritten minutes of the meeting show that Reagan himself was the most forceful proponent of keeping the arms deals going. The minutes thus provide an extraordinary inside look at the clashes at the very top of Reagan's administration.

Shultz and Regan argued that the weapons shipments had to be explained, and Secretary of Defense Caspar Weinberger joined Shultz in complaining that the negotiations had turned into arms-for-hostage deals without the Cabinet's being consulted.

But Reagan, supported by Poindexter, Casey and Attorney General Edwin Meese III, remained adamant.

"We were getting (the) influence of Iran, not ransom," he explained to Shultz.

"(I'm) not sure what's (the) difference," Shultz shot back, according to Keel's notes.

Iowa Survival Games cause injured troops to see 'red'

By Tony Jeffris
The Daily Iowan

ELY, Iowa — Troop leaders here reported heavy casualties on the battlefronts Sunday, as paramilitary battalions from across the Midwest clashed once again in the 5-year-old regional war for military supremacy.

Despite the losses, however, morale among the troops remained high and leaders from losing battalions even went as far as to say they would "rather be red than dead."

Red — that is — with red paint from .62-caliber carbon-dioxide cartridge paint guns.

Receiving a symbolic paint wound was just another part of the action

Sunday during the fifth annual gathering of the Iowa Survival Games.

The weekend battles, under 96-degree morning heat, were this year's version of the wars which originated in New London, N.H., in 1982. The original dispute was between a forest ranger and his friend, an investment banker. The ranger won the battle without firing a shot. Since then, other team battles have sprung up around the country, including a national championship held each year.

FOR SUNDAY'S event, six 10-member, co-ed teams clad in infantry boots, camouflage fatigues, face masks and goggles spent the day — from 7:30 a.m. to 5:00 p.m. — beneath ground cover exchanging shots with other teams from the region.

The game is really a modified form of the children's game "Capture the Flag." The team members, identified only by colored armbands, crawl through wooded hills to ambush the opposing team and try to steal its flag.

Participants who take a hit with the harmless gelatinous paint balls are out of the game. In a tournament, teams are awarded 10 points per hit and 20 points for a captured flag. The team with the most points at the end of the day wins.

Dole wins 5th straw poll

DES MOINES — Senate Minority Leader Robert Dole, R-Kan., claimed 46 percent of the vote and Vice President George Bush 29 percent in a straw poll of about 200 Republicans at a rural county fundraiser.

Evangelist Pat Robertson finished a surprising third with 17 percent in the unscientific poll conducted Friday night at the Jones County fundraiser in Monticello, Iowa.

Next were former Delaware Gov. Pierre du Pont, 5 percent, and Rep. Jack Kemp, R-N.Y., 3 percent. Others received a total of 6 percent.

Of seven GOP straw polls conducted in Iowa this year, Dole now has won five, Bush one and Kemp one, Dole staffers said Saturday.

Teenager killed in crash

WIOTA, Iowa — A Minneapolis teenager was killed Saturday and four members of his family were seriously injured in a head-on collision on Interstate 80 near Wiota, authorities said.

Phillip Hollins, 17, was dead at the scene. David Hollins, 39, his wife, Dawn, 24, and two children, ages four and seven, were taken by helicopter to an Omaha hospital. Damien Hollins, 4, was in critical condition and the other three were listed in serious.

Cass County authorities said David Hollins apparently fell asleep at the wheel as the westbound car travelled on a two-lane section of the interstate that was under construction. The car collided head-on with a semi-tractor truck driven by Don Brooks of Ladonia, Mo. Brooks was not injured.

Business failure on increase

NEW YORK — Business failures in Iowa increased 62.8 percent through the first five months of this year compared to the same period a year ago, analysts at Dun & Bradstreet reported.

The study shows 508 Iowa businesses failed between January and May of this year, compared to 312 in 1986. Iowa's failure rate during the period is the sixth worst in the nation and the worst in the Midwest.

Dukakis assails Gephardt

DES MOINES — Massachusetts Gov. Michael Dukakis, responding to criticism from fellow Democratic presidential hopeful Rep. Richard Gephardt, said farmers would be the first casualty of the Missouri's trade plan.

Dukakis, in an interview with the Des Moines Register editorial board published Saturday, said improvement in his state's economy began in 1976, "long before the Reagan build-up" of defense spending.

He said in his nine years as governor he has played an important role in Massachusetts economic success. He said only about 5 percent of the state's 600,000 new jobs are tied to the military.

On the Gephardt trade amendment, which could result in the president placing mandatory tariffs on countries with huge American trade deficits, Dukakis said such a plan would lead to a trade war and endanger American workers' jobs.

Jackson avoids feud

CARROLL, Iowa — The Rev. Jesse Jackson refused during the weekend to take sides in the increasingly bitter feud between fellow Democratic presidential candidates Michael Dukakis and Richard Gephardt, saying both are missing the point.

Gephardt, a Missouri congressman, and Dukakis, the Massachusetts governor, are taking swipes at each other's trade policies. Gephardt supports retaliation against unfair trading practices while Dukakis says that will start a trade war. The two will meet in Des Moines for a debate Aug. 8 and Jackson said he will be on hand to "monitor" their conversations.

Jackson, seeking support for Iowa's first-in-the-nation precinct caucuses, spoke to a gathering of 5th District Democrats Saturday night.

Burst steam pipe closes art museum until October

By Scott Hauser
The Daily Iowan

The UI Museum of Art's reopening has been postponed until October 6 because of damage caused when a steam pipe burst last month — including minor damage to three paintings, the museum's acting director said Sunday.

The museum has been closed since June 1 to renovate the walls of its public galleries and was scheduled to reopen Saturday, August 1.

A steam pipe burst in a crawl space underneath the museum's main gallery June 19, blowing a hole in the floor and sending a cloud of moisture through the nearly empty museum.

"In a sense it was kind of fortunate that the occurrence came when it did," UI Museum of Art Acting Director Charles Davidson said.

"There were a lot of things that might have been on the walls that weren't," he said.

THE DAMAGE TO the art works included damage to the varnish on one panel of a 1943 painting by Max Beckmann titled "Karneval," and a 1915 painting by Mardsen Hartley titled "E" will have to be restretched on its canvas.

An undated still life by Pierre Hode titled "The Pink Bowl" also was damaged.

Most of the museum's paintings were sealed and in storage during the renovation and were not affected by the explosion, Davidson said.

He said the damaged paintings will be restored to their original condition.

"All the damage is remediable," he said.

He said he had no estimate of the costs of the damage, but said all the costs of the restoration will be covered by insurance.

DAVIDSON SAID a number of paper works were curled by the moisture but said all of the works appear to be returning to their normal, flat condition.

UI Physical Plant Assistant Director James Howard said the steam pipe explosion caused an estimated $30,000 to $40,000 in damage to the steam distribution system.

He said the steam system has been repaired and workers will spend the next two months repairing the lighting system, replacing ceiling tiles, reinsulating and painting the walls of the gallery.

The walls of the galleries for the African collections were also damaged by the steam, which caused paint to peel, ceiling tiles to fall and plaster and lighting fixtures to loosen from the ceiling.

Davidson said when the museum reopens everything will be "ship-shape."

The museum will reopen on October 6 at 10 a.m. with a full schedule of exhibitions, including a symposium on the work of Edward Hopper on the weekend of October 9-11.

A gas valve broken by a falling can opener caused a kitchen fire at the Rodeway Inn, Route 965, Coralville, Saturday about 8:30 p.m., according to Johnson County Sheriff's reports.

A male employee was injured in the fire and taken to UI Hospitals, but was released and returned to work Sunday, according to a Rodeway Inn employee.

Jeff Duffy, a distribution manager at Iowa-Illinois Gas and Electric Co. said the falling can opener broke the valve off of a gas line and caused gas to blow into the kitchen before it was ignited by a pilot light on one of the stoves in the kitchen.

Damage estimates were unavailable Sunday.

Girl softball player backs up the boys

By Lisa Legge
The Daily Iowan

When 8-year-old Pee Wee softball player Emily Burmeister comes to bat, the other team steps back a few feet.

"I mostly made home runs this year," the Coralville Central third-grader said. "I just wait until the ball is in the right place and then I hit it. It goes way outfield."

"She's one of our best players," Pee Wee softball coach Jayme Skay said.

Burmeister and about 100 other children played softball in Coralville Parks and Recreation Department Midget Softball League this summer. The league's season ended Friday.

The Pee Wee league is for any child — boy or girl — aged 6-8 who wants to learn the basics of baseball or softball before playing in more competitive leagues.

IOWA CITY HAS a tee-ball league for boys Emily's age, but there is no other league for girls her age. Burmeister, who will probably play with Iowa City Girls Softball Association next year, has played since she was 6.

"We felt some of our little league kids weren't getting skills they needed: how to catch a ball and how to throw a ball," Gwen Sheeley, Coralville Parks and Recreation Department Assistant Director said. "They needed a non-competitive learning opportunity before they went into little league."

Judy Houghton of Iowa City watched her son, David, 6, play.

"The kids are always asking, 'Who's winning?'" she said, "and the coaches always say 'I think it's a tie.'"

COACHES DON'T keep score during the game and every player bats each inning. Competition between girls and boys isn't intense, either, Skay said.

"The kids in the games I'm involved with don't notice or make a big deal out of it. They don't act like there's a difference at all," Skay said, but added coaches at times act like there is a difference in ability between girls and boys and pitch more softly to girls.

Johnson County Fair offers food, exhibits, ferris wheels

By Joseph Levy
The Daily Iowan

Young and old will both be on hand this week at the Johnson County 4-H and Future Farmers of America Fair.

That's the way it should be, Johnson County Fair board member Gerry Lackender said at the fairgrounds Sunday while more than 100 men, women and children worked busily around her preparing for the fair's opening today.

"We have something for people of all ages," Lackender said.

The four-day fair, running today through Thursday, will feature a ferris wheel, thrill rides, animals, shows and exhibits of all kinds, Lackender said.

But all that is only in addition to the fair food that really brings people out, she said.

All activities at the fair are free of charge. "The only thing you'll pay for is what you eat," Lackender said. Local cattlemen, pork producers and dairy groups are providing the food for the fair.

THE BIGGEST attraction for the fair, Lackender said, will be the Variety Theater, set up in a tent on the fairgrounds. "That is what really draws the people," she said.

Several variety acts, magic shows and vocalists have been booked to perform in the tent all four nights this week and Tuesday and Wednesday afternoons. Lackender said she is particularly excited about the Hermalee Show, scheduled for Wednesday evening.

Hermalee is the niece of country singer Loretta Lynn and is scheduled for performances at 6:30 p.m. and 8:30 p.m. Wednesday.

"That tent is a wonderful attraction to our fair," Lackender said. "We have people who just like to come and sit in the tent."

Sitting in the tent, she says, gives people a chance to rest up from visiting the exhibition and animal halls.

MORE THAN 100 groups and businesses from Johnson County are setting up booths in the exhibition halls this year, she said.

"This is more than we've ever had," she said. "It keeps growing. We're getting the community exposed."

Animal exhibits, which will include poultry and rabbits this year in addition to cattle, sheep, pigs and other farm animals, will conclude Friday morning with a livestock auction, fair manager Fremont Isaacs said.

Beef and swine judging on Wednesday and Thursday mornings highlight the week's animal events, he said.

BUT MUCH WORK remained to be done Sunday afternoon as exhibitors battled the heat to get their booths ready for business today.

Leona Swartzendruber of Leona's Candles Plus, a business she runs out of her home, said all the work involved with putting together a booth is worthwhile.

"It's a good experience for us," she said. "You get to visit with the people. Everyone is real nice."

Dorothy Tesdell, a member of Iowa State University's Johnson County Master Gardeners group, said this is her first year working in a fair booth, but she is looking forward to interacting with people.

"You can learn from everybody," she said.

Perilous water

The placid water of the Iowa River is deceiving. Where it seems so calm, natural, a bit dirty and scenic, the Iowa River can be a silent killer, a threat to life and a ferocious force of nature that at times is not respected. It takes a tragedy such as the one that occurred Saturday morning when 11-year-old Andy Lepic of Iowa City drowned just below the old power dam in Coralville to remember how dangerous it is. Then, and only then, does it seem we understand how dangerous such a river can be.

Areas on the water near the Coralville and Iowa City power dams should be better marked — caution signs and buoys are not enough. The waters in these areas have a frightening undertow.

County officials should consider putting fences in the water at least 100 yards on either side of the dams. No trespassing signs, buoys and other visible warning signals should be placed at least 500 yards upstream and downstream.

Better yet, people who use the Iowa River — whether it be for sailing, canoeing, boating, fishing, swimming or tubing — must be aware of the dangers and take better precautions near these areas.

Accidents such as the one Saturday have become too familiar over the past years in the Iowa City area, said one police officer at the accident site Saturday. Public knowledge and better marking of the dangers of these two areas on the Iowa River can help to prevent such tragedies in the future.

Dangerous decision

Iowa State University Police and Parking Director Joseph Wehner has recently expressed the desire to arm his officers with .38-caliber pistols — but has failed to provide a valid reason for such a move.

Sporting considerations aside, it seems obvious that it is best to have the lowest number of weapons possible in any community. Unfortunately, the heavily armed police officer is a necessary evil in almost all American cities. But if there is any haven where firearms should not be required, surely it is the enlightened confines of the university.

The urban setting of many of our universities makes this ideal unrealistic, but nobody has argued that this is the case with ISU. Wehner has not given statistics or mentioned any increased danger which alone could justify the proposed measure.

As is often the case with armaments large and small, the perceived need seems to be largely a matter of symbolism. Wehner feels that guns will lend his officers "professionalism and respectability." Also he expresses a curious need for league parity: "Iowa State is the only school in the Big Eight not to have gone this route."

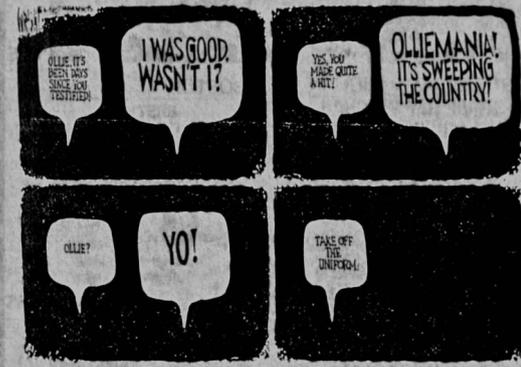

In the absence of clear and present danger, public order should never be kept with the threat of deadly force. Unfortunately, a trace of this lingers in the most harmless encounter between the citizen and the armed policeman. Where it is avoidable, interactions should not be colored by the presence of a weapon.

And there is a completely practical reason for not arming the policeman where it is not warranted. It is surprisingly common for an officer to be shot, in the course of a scuffle and arrest, with his own gun.

Regents Board Office Personnel and Employment Relation Director Charles Wright has said that approval for ISU security officers to carry guns would not necessarily mean similar arrangements for officers at the University of Northern Iowa and the UI.

But certainly the Board's approval would have some unsettling implications for all the state universities. It would be a dangerous precedent.

Airlines need more control

John Gilardi

In a time when the Reagan Administration has been 'getting off the backs of people,' it's time for the government to get on the backs of the airlines.

Every time I hear a plane overhead, it troubles me to think that it might be a Delta Airlines flight mistaking Iowa City for Kansas City International Airport.

Delta is displaying the problems and committing the errors that are plaguing the airline industry after deregulation and overcrowding of the skies, problems that were thought to have been solved very easily — slash comfort and repair for better fares, shoddy service and dangerous aircraft.

When will Delta's luck run out — over 10 incidents in one month?

I DECIDED TO call the airline headquarters in Atlanta to see what danger they pose for Iowans on the ground. Delta spokesperson Molly O'Donnell reinforced my fears that the airline claiming to "get you there with care" has forgotten its advertising slogan.

"I don't see how we can avoid flying over Iowa," said O'Donnell.

I'm scared. Let's take a look back at some of the highlights of Delta this month, as compiled by United Press International:

July 5 — The right wing of a Delta jet carrying 113 passengers struck an empty van while arriving at National Airport outside Washington, D.C., knocking over the van.

July 6 — A Delta flight from Dallas to Lexington, Ky., carrying 27 passengers flew out of a thunderstorm and landed at a small municipal airport at Frankfort, Ky., mistaking it for Blue Grass Airport 20 miles away.

July 8 — A Delta jet carrying 164 people from London to Cincinnati strayed 60 miles off course over the Atlantic Ocean and came within 100 feet of a Continental jet with 424 people aboard. The Delta crew attempted to persuade the Continental crew not to report the incident. The same Delta plane about 90 minutes later steered into the airspace of a British Airways jet, 18 miles off the coast of Newfoundland.

July 12 — A malfunction of a Delta jet's automatic pilot device forced it to return to Cincinnati. Also, a Delta flight headed for New York returned to the Cincinnati airport 10 minutes after takeoff when an oil pressure light flashed in the cockpit and the pilot had to shut down one engine.

In another July 12 incident, a Delta jet landed on the wrong runway at Boston's Logan International Airport.

July 23 — A Delta jet had to return to Houston Hobby Airport after a tire fell off after takeoff from another Houston airport, while another Delta jet had problems with wing flaps and had to land on a longer runway at Kennedy Airport in New York.

July 22 — A Delta baggage handler was somehow locked in a baggage compartment. As the plane began to taxi away from the gate, a woman passenger notified a flight attendant after hearing muffled screams and "Help" from under her seat.

July 23 — Delta Airlines' earnings nearly tripled in the last quarter, aided by the acquisition of Western Air. Delta's profits were listed at $58.8 million.

In a time when the Reagan Administration has been "getting off the backs of the people," it's time for the government to get on the backs of the airlines. It's time for more regulators to climb inside planes and make sure they are working properly, instead of fining Eastern Airlines for ridiculous lax repair records. Better yet, why not ground the major carriers after such incidents?

MANY IOWA CITY residents may not remember last December's incident with a Federal Express jet that mistook the Iowa City airport for Cedar Rapids. Maybe it could happen again.

And I bet people are starting to think twice about getting into a commercial jet. I think I'll stick to getting in the big old Cadillac and ripping down the highway with the cruise control set and an eye peeled to the sky — and I'm not looking for the Iowa State Patrol helicopter.

So if you hear a thunderous roar in the sky — duck. It's probably a Delta jet getting their passengers somewhere with care.

Ollie's book 'takes a stand'

J. L. McClure

A recurrent, obsessive theme in the book is the defense offered by Ollie that he was 'only following orders.'

O liver North's first novel, Taking the Stand, is an engrossing, postmodern American updating of Franz Kafka's The Trial. Like Kafka's work, North's is an absurd, at times frightening exploration of one man's labyrinthine struggle against an incomprehensible and incongruous system of morality and law.

"Ollie," the central character of North's novel (as in Kafka's novel, the character's name is a not-too-veiled allusion to the author's own), is brought before a congressional tribunal of 26 inquisitors who, for no apparent reason, consider him a social and political malefactor. A decorated Marine and former low-level White House official, Ollie is vaguely accused of a host of indiscretions and illegalities. Presented in the form of a trial transcript — a sort of "docu-fiction" — the novel details the confrontation between the nefarious court of justice and our hero.

EARLY IN the book a member of the inquisition confronts Ollie with a summary list of the charges against him:

- "You altered... and shredded documents shortly after you heard representatives of the U.S. Attorney General were coming to your office to review them."
- "You wrote false and misleading letters to the Congress of the United States."
- "You received personal financial benefits... $8 million in operating funds were handled in a manner where you didn't know what happened."

But Ollie, forever the naive, all-American victim of authoritarian abuse, maintains his purity of motive throughout his ordeal. At one point in his inquisition, he responds defiantly, "It was my view then, and it continues to be my view now, that we were not breaking the law."

This is where North's Ollie goes beyond the chaste fawning of Kafka's existential anti-hero "K." Where K remains bewildered and ultimately defeated by the indefinite charges brought against him, Ollie mounts a passionate, angry assault on his accusers.

"I NEVER in my wildest dreams or nightmares," he declares dramatically, "envisioned that we would end up with criminal charges." Later, he proclaims, "I did a lot of things and I want to stand up and say that I'm proud of them." Where K is baffled and submissive, Ollie is baffled but aggressive.

While never denying — indeed admitting — the specifics of the accusations, he cleverly manipulates them, striking the resonant American chords of Boy Scout patriotism, military honor and mindless obedience.

A particularly dramatic and representative scene in the novel is when Ollie — asked about a $13,900 security system installed at his home that he did not pay for — proudly explains that Abu Nidal, a well-known terrorist, had threatened to assassinate him. This is the same terrorist, he points out, who masterminded a massacre at the Rome airport that killed, among others, an 11-year-old American girl. "I have," Ollie poignantly confesses, "an 11-year-old daughter," and concludes: "I'll be glad to meet Abu Nidal on equal terms anywhere in the world, OK? But I am not willing to have my wife (evocatively named Betsy) and my four children meet Abu Nidal or his organization on his terms."

BUT THE POWER of this novel is not simply in the good-guys-versus-bad-guys plot, though that is a compelling element. In a time when contemporary fiction — especially American fiction — shies away from philosophical and political questions, North's Taking the Stand confronts them head-on.

The most demanding of such questions raised in the novel is that of the individual's responsibility to authority. A recurrent, almost obsessive theme in the book is the defense offered by Ollie that he was "only following orders."

If our recent history has held to account an individual's responsibility in moral obligation (e.g., the Nuremberg trials), North's hero contests such personal responsibility. Repeatedly, Ollie defends his actions by claiming that he was only following what he thought were the dictates of his superiors.

"I haven't," he states dramatically, "in the 23 years that I have been in the uniformed services of the United States of America ever violated an order, not one."

AND LATER: "If the Commander in Chief tells this lieutenant colonel to go stand in the corner and sit on his head, I will do so."

Moreover, Ollie reminds us, "It's a dangerous world, and we must act accordingly, despite any opposition from an ill-informed public, inconsistent Congress or the traditional dictates of moral constraint. I want you to know, Ollie confesses to his inquisitors, "that lying does not come easy to me."

The multiple story lines involving a simple-minded, out-of-touch president; a Machiavellian CIA director; and a gullible American public, swayed by Ollie's story are deftly interwoven — but not all develop as promised.

Still, especially for a first attempt, this novel shows promise for its young author. We can only wait with hope for his next effort. DI Columnist J.L. McClure's column appears on Mondays.

Briefly

from DI wire services

Weinberger supports Shultz testimony

WASHINGTON — Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger Sunday supported the testimony of George Shultz in the Iran-Contra hearings, saying he objected vigorously about the potentially disastrous policy to sell arms to Iran — a "fanatical, virtually insane country."

Weinberger, appearing on ABC's "This Week With David Brinkley," gave a clue as to what his testimony will be when he appears before the House and Senate select committees investigating the Iran arms sales and the diversion of profits for the Contra rebels in Nicaragua.

The next administration official to testify, beginning Tuesday, is Attorney General Edwin Meese, who set off the public controversy in the affair when he revealed the diversion last Nov. 25.

Meese has come under sharp criticism for the way he conducted a "fact-finding inquiry" of the activities of the National Security Council in the secret Iran policy and the covert Contra resupply effort.

Aquino surrenders power to Congress

MANILA, Philippines — President Corazon Aquino, one day before losing her legislative powers to the new Congress, Sunday issued decrees establishing a citizens army and stipulating penalties of up to six months imprisonment for membership in the Communist Party.

She also rescheduled local elections for Nov. 9, pushing them back from the previously scheduled date of Aug. 24.

The presidential press office released 42 decrees on the eve of today's formal opening of the Congress. Executive Secretary Joker Arroyo said Aquino signed "the last presidential issuance in the exercise of her legislative powers" at 11 a.m. Sunday.

Today's session will be the first time the 24-member Senate and the 200-seat House of Representatives have convened since they were shut down in 1972 upon the proclamation of martial law by the now-deposed government of President Ferdinand Marcos.

Tatars promised meeting with Gromyko

MOSCOW — About 150 Crimean Tatars demanding to be returned to a homeland abolished by Joseph Stalin during World War II ended an all-night vigil in Red Square Sunday and said they were promised a meeting with President Andrei Gromyko.

The largely Sunni Moslem Tatars, who had camped out since Saturday night by the Kremlin wall and the onion-domed St. Basil's Cathedral, dispersed peacefully over a bridge leading away from Red Square.

Sofina Djemileva, 35, the wife of long-time Crimean Tatar activist Mustafa Djemilev, 45, who was released from prison this year, said the all-night sit-in — a rare sight in Moscow — achieved its aim.

"We have won a meeting with Gromyko and the government commission (which Gromyko heads) that was set up to decide our national question, and that is why we decided to disperse," Djemileva said. She said the meeting will be today at the presidium of the Supreme Soviet, or parliament.

Nashua, N.H., chosen best place to live

NEW YORK — Once again, someone has taken the trouble to determine the best places to live in America, and the city elders of Nashua, N.H., are pleased by the results.

Nashua, which enjoys rustic New England charm, a booming economy and nearness to such desirable places as Atlantic Ocean resorts, Boston and the White Mountains, was selected as the top place to live in the United States in a survey released in the August edition of Money magazine.

Norwalk, Conn., was second; Wheeling, W.Va., was third; followed by fourth-place Beaver County, Pa.; fifth-place Danbury, Conn.; sixth-place Long Island, N.Y.; and seventh-place Oxnard-Ventura, Calif.

Boston's North Shore suburbs, the Scranton Wilkes-Barre area of Pennsylvania and Anaheim-Santa Ana, Calif., completed the top 10.

Boston mayor saves man from fire

BOSTON — Mayor Raymond Flynn — not faster than a speeding bullet but whose heroics of late have made him a super visible candidate for re-election — charged into a burning house to rescue a 68-year-old disabled man.

Only hours after formally announcing Saturday his candidacy for a second term, Flynn helped break down the door of a burning South Boston house and rescued Manuel Rose, who was preoccupied watching a Red Sox game.

"I was watching television . . . heard the front door crash in — and all of a sudden Mayor Flynn is standing in my parlor," said Rose. "I said, 'What the hell are you doing here?'"

Flynn hustled Rose, who has a wooden leg, down the three flights of stairs and out of the building, one of seven structures damaged in a 7-alarm fire.

Government may help AIDS education

WASHINGTON — Surgeon General Everett Koop said Sunday the estimated 15,000 school systems that have not begun adequate AIDS instruction soon may get government help in tailoring programs for their children.

The education plan of the Public Health Service, said Koop, is to "establish cooperative agreements with state education departments and local school districts to support their efforts in mounting programs that teach about" acquired immune deficiency syndrome.

As of June 15, 1987, the Centers for Disease Control reported just over 500 children have been diagnosed with AIDS, about 1.4 percent of all victims. Koop said 21 percent of all AIDS cases occur in the 20-29 age group, meaning the infection took place during the teenage years.

CIA says Soviet space lasers not ready

WASHINGTON — The Central Intelligence Agency has backed away from a previous estimate of Soviet space laser weapons development, triggering a dispute with the Pentagon, U.S. officials say.

The Pentagon's Defense Intelligence Agency has projected the Soviets could have a prototype weapon in space by the end of the decade for killing surveillance and communication satellites.

Its position was reflected in the latest annual edition of Soviet Military Power issued by the Pentagon in March. Until recently, the CIA shared this estimate.

But the CIA has changed its position, U.S. government officials said last week, because laser scientists now believe the technology needed for a space laser is not as advanced as they previously had thought.

The CIA has looked for — but failed to find — what officials referred to as "structural preparations" for placing such a prototype weapon in space.

Commerce adjusts to Baldrige death

By Anthony O. Miller
United Press International

WASHINGTON — Clarence Brown, deputy secretary of commerce, was at his desk Sunday boning up on details and preparing to reassure agency heads that there will be no straying from the path set by the late Secretary Malcolm Baldrige.

Brown, reached by telephone in his department office Sunday, told United Press International, "There are certain responsibilities that have to be exercised at a time like this, including officially notifying all the agency heads in the department . . . of the secretary's death."

Brown dismissed speculation about the significance of a 9 a.m. meeting he has called for today, saying: "We obviously had other routines and schedules," set up before the death Saturday of Baldrige in a freak horseback accident at a Northern California ranch.

THOSE ROUTINES INCLUDE "considerations of the fiscal 1989 budget," said Brown, adding he also is requesting department staff "to advise me of any emergency problems that I may not have been aware of, if there are any."

"The meeting on Monday will be to reassure all agency heads that the department will proceed routinely in its operation as the secretary would have wanted it to."

Malcolm Baldrige

Baldrige died Saturday from massive internal injuries caused when the 1,200-pound sorrel gelding he had been riding reared and fell on him. He had successfully roped both hind legs of a steer while practicing for a county fair calf-roping event at a friend's ranch. The horse was unhurt in the accident.

As to what caused the fatal accident, B.J. Cooper, Commerce Department spokesman, said: "They don't know. The horse just bucked. He (Baldrige) yanked up on the reins and it flipped over. And it was a good horse. The fellow I talked to said he was a good roping horse."

IBP strike ends after 7 months

SIoux CITY (UPI) — The bitter seven-month IBP strike ended Sunday as union workers overwhelmingly voted to accept a new four-year contract offer from the giant meatpacker.

On a final tally of 752-108, United Food and Commercial Workers Local 222 agreed to return to work within the next two weeks. Union business agent Bill Schmitz said the long dispute was worth the financial gains made in the contract.

"I believe it was well worth the members' trouble. We had no choice, we were originally locked out. They wanted wage concessions . . . and tried to destroy the seniority language. . . . We got that stopped," Schmitz said after the vote.

Company spokesman Gary Mikelson said the company is satisfied with the settlement and will work for "a new era of cooperation."

The settlement maintains the wage levels previously in effect for employees hired before Dec. 14, 1986, and provides them with a 15-cent an hour increase in the third year of the contract. It also establishes a new employee wage tier which will maintain salaries at competitive levels in the industry, the company said.

All employees will be eligible for company-paid retirement savings plans which will go into effect in 1990. The new contract also improves medical and dental coverage. A prescription drug program will go into effect in the second year of the contract.

allegedly punched Lee in the face at The Fieldhouse, 111 E. College St., a motion was filed to dismiss the charge since "more than 12 months elapsed from the date of the incident until prosecution was initiated" and that this would be in "violation of defendants' right to speedy indictment and/or trial," according to court records.

The motion also contended Smiley was assaulted by Lee and a friend after they had thrown ice cubes at him from close range and that Smiley reacted in self-defense.

Smiley was originally charged by Iowa City police June 10 and was held on $10,000 bond. He was released the next day to the custody of the state Sixth Judicial District Department of Corrections and his travel was restricted to Iowa.

Smiley pled innocent to the five counts filed against him June 25 while his lawyers said a change of venue may be considered.

U.S. Navy had helped in 1985 to clear the Red Sea of mines planted by "Iran, Libya and various other people," and had done so "very successfully." In addition, he said, tiny Kuwait's one harbor had been swept "very successfully" and "nine or 10" mines found there had been detonated.

"You don't need a mine sweeper to do this. We exploded the mines without mine sweepers, detonated and destroyed them in the Kuwait harbor," Weinberger said without specifying how it was done. It appeared, he said, that these mines were World War I vintage.

Noting that convoys also face attack by aircraft and small boats, Weinberger said the operation was planned with all three risks in mind. But he said there had been no mines found in the northern gulf area until the Bridgeton was damaged there.

Games

Squires, the game has a therapeutic effect on participants.

"It's good to get your aggression out — if you have a complaint about your wife or your boss you can take it out on the guy in the woods," Squires said.

ROD "DIGGER" Joseph, a member of a team from Williamsburg, Iowa, and one of a few former U.S. servicemen participating in the games, agreed with Squires' assessment.

"We're not out to kill anybody. We're just out to have a good time," Joseph said.

He added, however, that from his experiences in the military, the games seemed fairly realistic.

"If anything really happened, it'd give you a good idea of what it'd be like," he said.

Although the survival games are realistic in some aspects, organizers say they try to emphasize good sportsmanship and the fact that it's only a game.

"We try to play down this Rambo, machoism element," Wendy Gerard, whose husband Jerry organizes the event, said.

While Sunday's games were billed as a special event, Gerard said the games are generally open each weekend to anyone who can round up a team.

"WE GET PEOPLE from all walks of life," Gerard said.

"Doctors, lawyers, students, everybody. Everything usually goes pretty smoothly except for when the real psychos arrive — just kidding," she added.

"It's not really that violent of a game," Squires said.

"The guys who think they can survive World War III come out here and usually think it's a joke," he added. "You can stand up and yell to your buddies, 'Hey, your mother wears combat boots,' if you want to, and the only real supply you have to worry about is making sure the beer is cold for after the game."

Opera performance powerful

Special to The Daily Iowan

Powerful singing and beautiful music highlighted the opening performance of Giuseppe Verdi's La Traviata Thursday night at Hancher Auditorium.

With UI graduate student Michelle Crider singing the role of Violetta, the UI Opera Theater and Symphony Orchestra continued its succession of strong productions. Performing one of the most demanding roles, both vocally and dramatically, in all of opera, one that requires almost constant presence on stage, Crider displayed the qualities that many predict will lead her to a successful career in professional opera.

Most evident in Crider's performance was the power of her voice. On several occasions Hancher Auditorium seemed too small to contain it. The echoes resonated high overhead, lingering on and blending in with what was currently being sung, creating a very rich and layered effect. This power, however, was at times too strong, as Crider had a tendency to force her singing a bit.

DENNIS PETERSEN (Alfredo) and David Hamilton (Germont), returning UI graduates who are both pursuing professional opera careers, turned in strong performances. Petersen matched Violetta's singing with clarity and vitality. Particularly effective was Petersen's ability to step forward and sing directly to the audience, further heightening the impact of Verdi's realistic and intimate opera.

Hamilton, who just completed his first season with the Metropolitan Opera, displayed a rich baritone voice, particularly evident in the beautiful duets with Violetta in the second act.

As effective and colorful as the singing was, the dramatic characterization of the performers was lacking. The primary relationship and motivating circumstance of the opera is the passionate, ill-conceived love affair between Violetta and Alfredo. Established in the first act, it serves as the springboard for all the action and emotions thereafter. Crider and Petersen simply did not establish a relationship of sufficient excitement and passion.

PETERSEN, effective when playing the dashing suitor when Violetta was not present, did not convincingly bring across the strong infatuation Alfredo feels. For example, his "love-at-first-sight" in the first act was conveyed in his words but not emphatically demonstrated in his actions.

Hamilton, playing a less active and excitable character, and being saddled with the long narrative scene in the second act, also failed to communicate a moment of dramatic import — his realization upon encountering Violetta that she is an admirable and well-intentioned person. His staging was static and boring, too often standing motionless.

While the production as a whole moved along at an admirably brisk pace, the lack of dramatic realization was compounded by the occasionally awkward staging. This was particularly noticeable in the use of the chorus — whose singing throughout the evening was superb — in the first and third acts.

IN ACT I, the party at Violetta's is supposed to be a festive occasion, but the chorus members did not act in this spirit, merely standing around passively and exiting en masse when given their dinner cue. The party in Act III is again a festive occasion, but this time the chorus members warmed to the task and acted like they were having a good time. Helpful in creating this spirit of gaiety and liveliness was the dancing of the "gypsies" and "matador."

As is often the case on an opening night, the production started stiffly but proceeded to pick up momentum.

From the delightful yet haunting opening strains of the overture it was apparent that the orchestra was on the mark. Conductor Tamara Brooks exercised confident restraint, rarely, if ever, drowning out the singing, yet providing excitement when called for.

Director Beaumont Glass is to be commended for his English translation of Verdi's Italian text. The language was direct and easily understandable. Any sincere and qualitative effort made to make opera more accessible and contemporary is laudable.

Candidates' wives debate

By Bill Brewer
United Press International

DES MOINES — The wives of six Democratic presidential hopefuls said Sunday the next first lady should be an activist for social change, but one cautioned she must not attempt to set policy from the White House dinner table.

Hattie Babbitt, Jill Biden, Kitty Dukakis, Jane Gephart, Tipper Gore and Jeanne Simon, appearing at a first-of-its-kind first ladies forum at Drake University, said the wife of the next president will have a powerful "bully pulpit" to push for needed programs ranging from day care to shelter for the homeless.

However, Gore, an outspoken proponent of warning labels for recorded music containing sexually explicit lyrics, said the next first lady must remember she has no authority to develop public policy.

"THE POSITION HAS been used to bring issues to the forefront of the nation's attention... I think we have come to expect that," Gore, the wife of Tennessee Sen. Albert Gore, Jr. said.

"Yet, at the same time, we are not going to tolerate unelected representatives running government policy from either the White House dinner table or the White House basement."

Gore's sentiments were echoed by Jeanne Simon, wife of Illinois Sen. Paul Simon, who said she would use the post to become an "ombudsman for the American people."

"I want to earn that title by visiting Americans at home and work. I want to seek solutions and relate my findings — not to a press conference or committee — but to Paul for his use," she said.

SIMON ADDED she dislikes the term first lady, saying she would prefer to be called "the president's wife."

Babbitt, who referred to herself and the other candidates' wives as "dwarfettes" said she would like to use the first lady's "bully pulpit" to crusade for an end to illiteracy and for the establishment of affordable child day care programs.

"I would launch a campaign to start a reading program in every day care in America," she said.

Dukakis, wife of Massachusetts Gov. Michael Dukakis, said she also has placed education at the top of her agenda.

"It's a sad truth that as we celebrate the 200th anniversary of our Constitution, 21 million plus Americans cannot even read its preamble," Dukakis said.

"WE CANNOT EXPECT much help from the present administration — not from a government that tells school children ketchup is a vegetable," she said.

Biden, wife of Delaware Sen. Joe Biden and a teacher of mentally disturbed children in Delaware, said she too plans to crusade for the elimination of illiteracy, but does not believe she should have to set aside her own career if she becomes the next first lady.

Iowa tennis courts officially named

An official ceremony which named the Donald D. Klotz Tennis Courts was held Sunday at the courts — formerly known as the Kinnick Stadium Courts.

The naming, approved by the State Board of Regents in February, honors Klotz — Iowa men's tennis coach for 25 years — for his contributions as a teacher, scholar, coach and innovator in tennis instruction and court construction and maintenance.

Klotz, who has written many articles on tennis technique, strategy and tactics, developed the revolutionary Volley Method of tennis instruction. His research has led to improvements in the sport, a patent in court construction and maintenance and several awards.

Former Hawkeyes sign contracts

Former Iowa football players — Chris Gambol (Indianapolis Colts), Jeff Drost, Dave Croston (Green Bay Packers) have signed contracts with their respective NFL teams.

Gambol, an offensive lineman who was a third round selection, signed a three-year contract reportedly worth an estimated $600,000. Croston's contract is worth $350,000 for two years while terms for Drost's contract were unavailable.

Also, defensive end John Hartly, who played for Iowa from 1977-80, retired after six, injury-plagued years with the San Francisco 49ers.

QB George may transfer — again

MIAMI (UPI) — Jeff George, the Purdue quarterback who said in January he would transfer to the University of Miami, may change his mind and enroll at the University of Illinois, The Miami Herald reported Sunday.

A source close to Illinois Coach Mike White said George, 19, was "virtually signed, sealed and delivered," the newspaper reported.

"I've talked to Jeff a couple of times in the last few weeks and he hasn't said for sure if he has changed his mind or not," Miami Coach Jimmy Johnson said. "He said he was 100 percent sure when he committed to us, but that was quite some time ago. It's a matter of if he wants to fight the competition."

A source told the newspaper a relative of George's contacted White about six weeks ago to express George's interest in Illinois. George has visited the Champaign, Ill., campus and is scheduled to visit again Tuesday or Wednesday. The source said White wants to announce George's decision to attend Illinois before leaving Thursday for the Big Ten meetings in Chicago.

Vikings' Kramer arrested for DUI

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. (UPI) — Minnesota Vikings quarterback Tommy Kramer was arrested for driving under the influence, police said Saturday.

Kramer, 32, of Bloomington, was arrested just before midnight Friday by Bloomington city police. He was taken by the arresting officer to Fairview Detoxification Center in Eden Prairie.

Kramer, an 11-year veteran with a history of chemical-abuse problems, helped the Vikings to a 9-7 record last year. He was the NFL's top-rated quarterback and the NFC's starting quarterback in the Pro Bowl. Last season, he completed 208 of 372 passes for 3,000 yards, 24 touchdowns and 10 interceptions. The Vikings open their preseason camp Aug. 3.

Trappers set consecutive-wins record

SALT LAKE CITY (UPI) — The Salt Lake Trappers have broken the professional baseball record for most consecutive victories and gained a following.

The Trappers, a Rookie League team, defeated the Pocatello Giants 8-6 Sunday night in a Pioneer League game for their 29th consecutive triumph.

The record of 27 straight was set by the Corsicana (Texas) Oilers of the Texas League in 1902 and matched in 1921 by the Baltimore Orioles of the International League.

"This feels like your honeymoon night," Trappers Manager Jim Gilligan said after win No. 28 Saturday. "Every game that we've had a lot of people here watching, we've played super. In fact, we've played our best games going for a record."

The Trappers tied the 1916 New York Giants, who own the major-league record with 26 consecutive wins, before 8,800 spectators at Derks Field June 23 in a 14-4 romp over the Idaho Falls Giants.

ing between Chandler and Rickey in Kentucky when they decided to break the color line with Robinson.

"IT HAD NOTHING to do with the color of his skin, but it had all to do with his ability to play the game," Williams said.

Williams, an outfielder most of his career, broke Stan Musial's National League consecutive game record by playing in 1,117 straight from Sept. 22, 1963 to Sept. 2, 1970.

Williams had a career average of .290 with 426 homers and 1,476 RBI. A six-time All-Star and the 1961 Rookie of the Year, Williams led the league in hitting in 1972 at .333. In 1970, he established career highs with 42 homers, 129 RBI, 205 hits and 137 runs scored.

Hunter, a durable right-hander who participated on World Series champions for the 1972, 1973 and 1974 Oakland Athletics and the 1977 and 1978 New York Yankees, spent less time with history and more time recounting memories from his playing days.

IN ATTENDANCE were the two owners for whom he played, Charlie Finley of Oakland and George Steinbrenner of New York, both among the most controversial owners in recent baseball history.

"Mr. Finley gave me the opportunity to play in the big leagues, and Mr. Steinbrenner gave me enough money to retire after five years," Hunter said.

In 1974, Hunter won the Cy Young Award, leading the American League in victories when he went 25-12 and also led the league with a 2.49 ERA.

In 1975, Hunter joined the Yankees as a free agent after an extensive bidding war and led the league in victories again at 23-14 and also was tops in complete games with 30 and innings pitched with 328. Hunter was 224-166 for his career and pitched a perfect game in 1968.

Dandridge, 73, is considered among the greatest third basemen never to play in the majors. Dandridge played in the Negro League, Puerto Rico, the Dominican Republic, Venezuela, Cuba and Mexico and finally the minor leagues.

In ending his speech, Dandridge said, "I love the game of baseball and today it looks like the game loves me."

nastic scores in Festival history and won three gold medals in women's individual apparatus. Wilborn, 16, earned gold medals in the floor exercise and vault and shared first place in the balance beam with Danna Lister of Tulsa, Okla.

At Greensboro Coliseum, defense man Brian Johnson of Silver Bay, Minn., a sixth-round pick by Hartford in the 1983 NHL draft, broke a tie at 8:56 of the third period and Ed Lowney scored twice to lift the North. Following the game, U.S. Olympic Coach Dave Peterson announced the approximately 30 invitees to the Olympic training camp at Lake Placid, N.Y., Aug. 7-14.

Despite being greeted with early-evening temperatures of 110 degrees on the track, competitors at Wallace Wade Stadium continued to set Festival records. Brisco, who had already earned gold medals and set Festival marks in the 200 and 400 during the first two nights of track and field, ran the third leg of the women's 4 x 400 relay. Brisco's West team won in Festival-record time of 3:24.89.

Storm halts final round at U.S. Women's Open

EDISON, N.J. (UPI) — A sudden thunderstorm postponed the final round of the U.S. Women's Open Sunday, forcing play to be carried over until today.

None of the leaders had teed off when play was suspended at 10:46 a.m., and only eight pairs had reached nine holes. There were 40 players on the Fairmont course when play was abandoned.

Japan's Ayako Okamoto, at 3-under-par 213, is the leader by one shot entering the final round over Briton Lauren Davies, Martha Nause, at 215, is the only other player under-par for 54 holes.

Tied for fourth place at 216 are 48-year-old JoAnne Carner, a two-time Open champion, and Deedee Roberts. Grouped at 217 were Judy Rosenthal, Rosie Jones and Sally Quinlan.

NANCY LOPEZ, SEEKING the one major title to elude her, will begin the final round at 221.

All the players who started their round Sunday are scheduled to resume at 10:23 a.m. from the point where they stopped. Davies and Okamoto, in the last group, are due to go off at 12:20 p.m. ABC Sports will televise the final round from 3-4:30 p.m.

If there is a tie for the lead following the fourth round, an 18-hole playoff would be held the following day.

This could present a problem for Davies, who is scheduled to begin defense of her British Open championship starting Thursday at St.

Mellion in Cornwall.

"I don't mind missing a practice round," said Davies, who was scheduled to fly home this morning. "I think I can cope."

A SOAKED COURSE could prove favorable for Davies, the longest hitter among women, although Okamoto, playing in the same group as the 23-year-old Briton, insists she won't be intimidated.

"Unfortunately, I'm too old to feel that," said Okamoto, 36, of Japan, through an interpreter. "If I was in my prime that would have put more pressure on."

"Strength-wise, I don't have the power I used to have, but mentally I have improved."

Two weeks ago, in the du Maurier Classic, also a major on the LPGA Tour, Okamoto took a six-shot lead into the final round and lost to Rosenthal.

Asked if the extra day of waiting would add to the pressure here, Okamoto said, "If I can avoid answering questions about it in the next 24 hours, that would reduce the pressure."

OKAMOTO AND DAVIES planned to rest Sunday, with Davies hoping to do some shopping.

Defending champion Jane Geddes, 10 shots off the lead at 223, had just hit her tee shot on the first hole when play was stopped. She was disappointed when the round was officially suspended at 12:05 p.m.

Ireland's Roche barely wins Tour

PARIS (UPI) — Stephen Roche Sunday won the 74th Tour de France by the second slimmest margin in history to become the first champion from Ireland of the world's most prestigious bicycle race.

Roche, 27, leader of the Italy-based Carrera team, completed the 25 stages covering more than 2,547 miles with a total time of 115 hours, 27 minutes, 42 seconds — only 40 seconds better than Spain's Pedro Delgado and 2:13 ahead of Frenchman Jean-Francois Bernard.

Dutchman Jan Janssen's victory by 38 seconds over Belgium's Herman Van Springel in 1968 was the only closer contest since the Tour was first held in 1903.

Jeff Pierce of the United States, who finished 88th overall at more than 2½ hours behind Roche, won the 119.3-mile final stage into the capital from Creteil by one second over Canada's Steve Bauer.

ROCHE, DELGADO and Bernard all stayed in the pack on the final stage that ended with the traditional six laps around the Avenue des Champs Elysees in central Paris, fringed with thousands of spectators.

"I knew I had the Tour won when I won the time trial at Dijon Saturday, but it still hasn't sunk in what it means," said Roche, a Dublin native who lives in the Paris suburb of Sargy with his French wife and son.

"It will take some time to comprehend, but there is no question that winning the Giro and the Tour is the greatest event of my career."

Roche became the fifth rider to win the tours of Italy and France. Last year's champion was American Greg Lemond, who was unable to compete this year because of injuries.

That marks two straight years that members outside the sport's traditional powers of France, Italy, Spain, Switzerland, Holland, Belgium and Luxembourg, whose riders won the previous two Tours, failed to win the event.

Roche's victory also gave Ireland, until recently a minor cycling nation, the world's top two riders. Sean Kelly, ranked No. 1 for more than three years, abandoned midway through the Tour after fracturing his left collarbone in a fall

And the winner is . . .

Kenyan Joseph Nzau crosses the finish line Saturday in 33 minutes, 24 seconds to win the 15th Quad City Times Bix-7 road race in Davenport. Francie Larrieu Smith ran away with the women's title.

U.S. demoted in Davis Cup

HARTFORD, Conn. (UPI) — Boris Becker turned back Tim Mayotte's comeback bid Sunday, earning a 6-2, 6-3, 5-7, 4-6, 6-2 triumph to give West Germany a 3-2 victory in Davis Cup competition and render the United States ineligible for the 1988 Cup.

"Emotionally, it was one of the hardest matches of my life," said Becker, referring to the 12,887 fans at the Hartford Civic Center who cheered wildly for Mayotte.

The American team drops from the World Group and will play only zone competition next year, in hopes of requalifying for the elite 16-nation division. The United States and West Germany each lost its first-round match for the 1987 Davis Cup.

After Mayotte netted an approach shot on match point, Becker threw his racquet high in the air. It fell 11 rows into the stands upon an elderly spectator who said she was "fine but shaky."

MINUTES LATER, Becker

climbed into the stands and apologized to the woman, inviting her to attend the U.S. Open as his guest.

"I'm sorry, I didn't know what I was doing," he told her. After receiving Becker's invitation to the U.S. Open, the woman replied, "It's almost worth getting hit in the head."

Mayotte, 2-4 in career meetings against Becker, seemed helpless against the powerful West German, who needed only 62 minutes to take a 2-0 lead in sets. But the American, from nearby Springfield, Mass., began to respond to the cheers, flag-waving and chants of "U.S.A."

"For 2½ sets, I played almost a perfect match," Becker said. "It could have been three sets easy and then he just played like I haven't seen him play — ever."

The demotion to zonal competition is a first for the United States since Davis Cup play was divided in 1981.

U.S. Olympic Festival tops all expectations

DURHAM, N.C. (UPI) — Joyce Wilborn treated a record gymnastics crowd to a record-breaking performance Sunday and joined sprinter Valerie Brisco in highlighting a busy concluding session of the U.S. Olympic Festival.

The two-week Festival, which shattered the attendance record set last year in Houston, ended with closing ceremonies at steamy Wallace Wade Stadium following the track and field competition. In the ice hockey gold-medal game, the North beat the South 6-4.

Two days after an embarrassing fall off the uneven parallel bars, Wilborn, of Paterson, N.J., received the first perfect gym-
