Aquino survives attempted coup

By Daniela Deane
United Press International

MANILA, Philippines — Renegade soldiers attacked television stations, military bases and the presidential palace in a pre-dawn coup attempt against President Corason Aquino this morning, leaving at least 29 people dead and 91 wounded in violent street fighting.

A spokesman for the rebels said in a radio interview the rebels had seized control of military headquarters at Camp Aguinaldo, four regional commands on the main island of Luzon and military camps in at least three southern cities.

"The idealistic young officers have taken over from senior officers the responsibility in the fight for equality, justice and freedom," the rebel spokesman said, reading from a prepared statement.

The rebels apparently were led by Col. Gregorio Honasan, a leading figure in the Reformed Armed Forces Movement, a group of young officers disgruntled over Aquino's handling of a communist insurgency.

"LET US NOW set a new direction," the rebel spokesman said, adding the rebel officers were "committed to die for our country."

It was the bloodiest and most serious of five coup attempts Aquino has faced since she took power 18 months ago.

Aquino, interviewed on independent radio shortly after loyal troops repulsed the initial attack on the presidential palace, said she was safe and was being fully protected by the presidential security guards.

But she later called an emergency Cabinet meeting as fighting continued around the capital.

After the initial attack on the palace was repulsed, hundreds of rebel troops led by Honasan moved into armed forces headquarters at Camp Aguinaldo, about 6 miles northeast of the palace, where they seized major portions of the suburban base.

THE REBELS and reporters inside the base said the rebels were in control of the facility and that armed forces chief Fidel Ramos was trapped inside neighboring Camp Crame.

Isleta said Honasan was negotiating with deputy military chief Maj. Gen. Eduardo Ermita and had told him he wanted to take over respon-

Gorbachev sets week aside for possible summit meeting

By Gary Lee
Washington Post

MOSCOW — Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev has set aside the last week in October for a possible summit meeting with President Ronald Reagan in the United States, according to diplomatic sources here, and left the second half of November open as an alternative time.

The summit dates are tentative and not due to be set until Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze and Secretary of State George Shultz meet in Washington Sept. 15 to 17, the diplomats said.

Soviet officials have avoided answering public questions on the summit plans and are instead concentrating on preparations for the Shevardnadze-Shultz meeting.

WHITE HOUSE SOURCES, however, said the Reagan Administration is now operating on the "working assumption" that a summit will take place in the United States in late November.

The fast-moving preparations and a statement Wednesday by West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl have helped clear both atmospheric and substantive obstacles to a U.S.-Soviet arms agreement and summit meeting, Soviet officials said Thursday.

Kohl announced that Bonn is willing to scrap the 72 obsolescent

Pershing IA nuclear missiles based in West Germany, whose warheads are under U.S. control. The issue for weeks has clouded negotiations for a U.S.-Soviet treaty on removing medium- and short-range nuclear missiles and the outlook for a summit this year to sign the treaty.

"Of course, after Kohl's statement, the situation has changed for the better," Soviet Foreign Ministry spokesman Gennadi Gerasimov said in a briefing here Thursday.

BUT GERASIMOV also criticized a speech Reagan made Wednesday, saying it doused U.S.-Soviet relations with "a heavy cold down-

UI to conduct fire drills for safety campaign

By John Bartenhagen
The Daily Iowan

A campaign to educate students who live in UI residence halls about fire safety procedures will officially begin next week with the evacuation of two of the halls during fire drills sponsored by UI Residence Services and the Iowa City Fire Department.

UI Residence Services Assistant Director Dave Coleman said the drills are part of a larger fire safety campaign continuing throughout the year which may include experimental fire drills at the rest of the UI's 10 residence halls.

A special Fire Safety Week, scheduled for September 14-18, will also be used to focus residents' attention on fire safety, he said.

The first drill will take place in Hillcrest Sept. 1 at 7 p.m. Burge, the UI's largest residence hall, will be evacuated during a second drill scheduled for Sept. 2 at 7 p.m.

COLEMAN SAID he believes student response to fire alarms will be improved by the drills.

"We've long noticed that students just don't respond to fire alarms appropriately," he said. "We must change that thought pattern. The idea is to get the message across that an alarm should be dealt with seriously."

Iowa City Fire Chief Larry Donner said the program is designed to decrease the number of false fire alarms in the residence halls while increasing resident participation in fire drill evacuations.

Donner said there were only about 30 actual fires in the residence halls during the 1986-87 academic year, adding that most of the 1200 fire alarms recorded last year were deliberately sounded false alarms or the result of vandalism and malfunctioning alarms. Donner hopes to reduce the total number of alarms by 80 percent, a goal he believes is within reach.

THE LARGE NUMBER of false fire alarms in residence halls has helped create a "design for disaster," Donner said, by conditioning students to treat all fire alarms as false.

"I don't think it's an educational problem, I think the problem is a matter of attitude," he said. "People aren't going to respond until there is a tragedy and then they'll try to blame someone else."

In the event of a fire, the first priority of the fire crews will be to contain the fire, he said. If building residents do not evacuate themselves, the fire crews may not be able to help them for up to 30 minutes after fire trucks arrive on the scene.

"It's a very serious problem," he said. "We're talking about the potential for a half-dozen to a dozen students being killed in what would be considered a relatively minor fire."

Study: Iowa's poor pay high taxes, get little daycare aid

By Scott Sonner
United Press International

DES MOINES — Iowa's poor families pay the highest state income taxes while receiving the lowest per capita daycare subsidies in the seven-state Midwest region, a state panel studying welfare reform was told Thursday.

Annual state daycare subsidies in Iowa total 55 cents per person, with the next lowest levels among the surrounding states reported by South Dakota at 69 cents, Kansas paid $1.60, Wisconsin $2.38 and Illinois paid the most at $4.10, Senate Charles Bruner, D-Ames, said.

Bruner is chairman of the Senate Ways and Means Committee and heads an interim task force on tax reform.

Families of four at the poverty level pay an average of $358 in state income taxes in Iowa, followed by $202 in Illinois and $201 in Kansas, he said, citing a study by Citizens For Tax Justice.

BRUNER WAS one of several welfare experts to give presentations Thursday to the interim Legislative Study Committee on Welfare Reform.

He said the underlying problem of the state's welfare system is that recipients cannot afford to take a minimum wage job because they will lose free child care and medical services.

Persons making $8,000 annually bring home only $496 more than a person making $5,000 annually, due to the cuts in state and federal daycare and medical aid, Bruner said.

"Of that extra $3,000 in earned income, they get to keep 18 cents per dollar," he said.

Bruner said Aid to Families of Dependent Children benefits used to be regarded as generous in Iowa, but have increased only twice over the past 10 years and now rank in the middle of the Midwest region

For many, allergies are nothing to sneeze at

By Anne Kevlin
The Daily Iowan

Just ask anyone who has it: It's hell.

You can't taste food for days. Your apartment becomes a sea of Kleenex. You wish you had a dollar for every sneeze and you hope no one thinks you're doing coke.

You fantasize about being able to scratch, really scratch, your itchy throat and eyes. You wake up in the morning unable to breathe, and you know it's a warm, humid day outside.

Then your roommates insist on opening the windows "to let in the fresh air."

It's hell.

It's allergy to pollen — hay fever. And if you have the symptoms, just try to escape it — especially this time of year.

"MOST PEOPLE USE 'hay fever' to describe an allergy to ragweed," UI Internal Medicine Assistant Professor Thomas Casale said.

Pollenation of ragweed normally occurs between July and September, according to Casale. During that period the breeze carries particles of pollen from plant to plant,

Gilroy's appeal rejected

In a unanimous decision, the Iowa Court of Appeals upheld Wednesday the conviction of Michael Gilroy in the 1979 murder of Vincent Lalla at the Iowa City Moose Lodge.

Noting the Iowa Supreme Court has allowed the testimony of hypnotized people, the court rejected Gilroy's contention that a witness should not have been allowed to testify against him because she had been hypnotized before the trial.

The court also rejected Gilroy's claim he was denied effective legal counsel in the case.

ARH Fall Kick-off boasting live bands, food Saturday

By Paula Roesler
 The Daily Iowan

Bands, booths and a bevy of other attractions will be featured at the UI Association of Residence Hall's Annual Fall Kick-off this Saturday at the Union Field.

"The purpose is to have people from all over the UI community and Iowa City get together to start the year off," ARH Kick-off Chairman Mike Bennett said. "Just because it's ARH running it doesn't mean it's solely a residence hall thing."

"People from the fraternities, sororities, apartments and even non-students are more than welcome," he added.

Bennett said the festival will include game booths and food and beverage tents run by different UI residence hall associations, but the main attraction will be the music.

THE KICK-OFF WILL start at 11 a.m. and will close at 5 p.m. Tickets are $1.

Local bands Happenstance and The Dang Trippers will be playing their original material and some covers, ARH Vice President Tim Anderson said.

"The bands are both pretty good," he said. "And in case of rain we have tents so we can go under cover."

Bennett said the atmosphere of this year's Kick-off — formerly co-sponsored by Delta Chi fraternity — will be different than in past years.

County Board of Health to control Child Health Clinic

By Craig Sterrett
 The Daily Iowan

In an effort to save money and better coordinate county health programs, the Johnson County Board of Health will assume responsibility for the Child Health Clinic on Oct. 1.

During Thursday's formal meeting of the Johnson County Board of Supervisors, the board unanimously approved removing the clinic from the control of the Visiting Nurses Association, a private, non-profit organization which receives county funding.

With the transfer of funds, the county's allocation to the Visiting Nurses Association will be reduced from $139,216 in 1987 to about $110,000 in 1989, Health Department Director

Graham Dameron said.

"I would hope we could deliver more services to the clients of the clinic by lowering our costs," Supervisor Betty Ockenfels said.

IN ADDITION to saving money, the change in responsibility will make it easier for the health department to coordinate health awareness programs. The clinic is located in the Health Center, 1105 Gilbert Court, which houses the health department and Women, Infants and Children, a county health program.

The Child Health Clinic is a "well-child clinic," Clinic Coordinator Pat Randall said. Services provided by the clinic include immunizations and the screening of heights, weights, eyesight and hearing for "well" children.

The clinic had about 500 clients this year while under the direction of the Visiting Nurses Association, Randall said.

The Visiting Nurses Association is a community health agency served by Medicare and partially funded by the county, Executive Director of the Visiting Nurses Association Rosalie Rose said.

The Visiting Nurses Association provides nurses and therapy for people with in-home care needs. The association also runs the Eldercare program at the Johnson County Senior Center, 28 S. Linn St., an adult day-program for frail and elderly persons who need additional companionship, Rose said.

Monopoly spin-off features UI, Iowa City

By Rebecca Himschoot
The Daily Iowan

Is Jessup Hall worth $400? That's exactly what the UI building with most players of Iowaopoly, a spin-off of the famous Parker Brothers' game Monopoly.

Iowaopoly comes in a black box the size of the regular Monopoly game box, with "Iowaopoly" in gold letters on the front. The game board features many Iowa City businesses and landmarks, as well as several UI buildings.

The game is a simulation of life at the UI. Where "Start" is located on regular Monopoly boards, players are welcomed by the UI logo. And in Iowaopoly, "Jail" is a student's hometown, "No Parking" is UI student parking and "Go Directly to Jail" means academic suspension, which causes a student to be dropped from the UI and sent home.

THE GAME has been a hit in Iowa City since it was introduced last month, according to Lorie Bateman, manager of Buc's, 112 E. College St.

"We've gone through about three dozen in about a month," Bateman said. "When we got our first shipment in we sold a dozen in four days. A lot of people bought them for friends who had moved out of Iowa City or as graduation gifts."

"Monopoly has been one of the No. 1-selling games of the past 20 years, so Iowaopoly gives it kind of a twist," said Patty Dautremont, manager of Thingsville, Old Capitol Center. "It's a little more student-oriented."

"People have been buying it for themselves and students, and a lot of people have been buying it to send out-of-state to alumni," Dautremont said.

THE IDEA for the variation of Monopoly originated in 1984 at Miami University in Oxford, Ohio. It was created by Robyn Wilson, a 1980 Miami University graduate.

According to Wilson, there are 30 different versions of the game, most of them at Southern colleges. She said a version of the game will be at all Big Ten universities, except Northwestern, by October.

Wilson said she plays a part in the creation of all the games at the different universities where it has been introduced.

"I do all the traveling and talk with students, faculty and alumni while I'm there," Wilson said. "Usually I try to talk to about 100 people."

"From what I find out we put a game together," she said. "We try to make each game unique."

Wilson said after visiting Iowa in January she found the card "10 degrees below zero in Iowa and this token is frozen for two plays" very fitting.

Area facility fights stray animal battle

By Joseph Levy
The Daily Iowan

Iowa City and Coralville animal control facility personnel said Thursday they are doing their best to find homes for stray animals, but admit the problem is an uphill battle.

Annually, 55 percent of animals brought to the facilities are eventually destroyed, according to a report compiled by Iowa City and Coralville city administrators. Another 35 percent of the animals are reclaimed by their owners, but only 10 percent are adopted and given a new home.

"Of course it is upsetting," Coralville Animal Control Facility Officer Becky McLaughlin said. "You do get attached to the animals."

ACCORDING TO THE report, in 1986 the Coralville Animal Control Facility picked up 274 animals and the Iowa City Animal Control Facility picked up 1,148 animals.

Stray animals picked up without license tags are kept for five days at the Coralville facility and for four days at the Iowa City facility. After that time they are either euthanized or considered for adoption.

McLaughlin said she wishes there were a feasible alternative to killing the animals.

"But who's going to pay for it?" she said. "We've got such limited space. We do the best we can."

Iowa City Animal Control Facility Officer Beverly Horton said part of the solution lies in education.

Horton has spearheaded an effort to educate the public on proper pet-owner practices, speaking to groups on the subject whenever possible.

"THERE'S A LOT of teachers in the school system that I have a regular schedule with," she said, adding she also speaks to area service agencies.

Having pets spayed or neutered is the first step to controlling the pet population, Horton explained.

"But it's real depressing talking to some of the adults," she said, explaining many older people stay set in their ways and miss the message.

Her goal, she says, is to eliminate the thought of abandoning pets from people's minds — especially from children's minds.

"Dumping is the cruelest thing we see," she said.

According to Horton, the average length of time people own a pet before it is hit by a car, given away or dumped is only 1 1/2 years.

"WHAT WE'RE LOOKING for are permanent, life-time owners," she said. "Occasionally people come in and see a pet they think they want, but it's just the wrong one."

People who end up with an inappropriate pet often turn to dumping it, she said.

"People have a cheap attitude toward pets," she said. "They think, 'Easy come, easy go.' Owning a pet is a lifetime commitment."

Often, Horton added, when people move, they dump their pets because they don't know what else to do with them.

"Moving is not a reason (to dump your pets), it's an excuse," she said. "You don't get rid of your kids when you move."

Hispanic fraternity finds success at UI

By Jay Casini
Special to The Daily Iowan

On April 4, 1986, the first national Hispanic fraternity, Sigma Lambda Beta, was officially founded at the UI.

Less than a month earlier, UI senior Baltazar Mendoza had called a special meeting for members of the UI's Hispanic community to discuss the need for a culturally based Hispanic fraternity.

"It was a group of guys who wanted to create an organization that would represent different cultures on our campus," UI and national Sigma Lambda Beta President Pepe Rojas-Cardona said.

"Since we were all Hispanic, we decided that we would concentrate on a new image of Hispanics in America," Rojas-Cardona said. "The word 'Hispanic' often has some negative connotations — like poor, uneducated migrant workers. We want to present another side — a long history of culture."

THE PROSPECTIVE members contacted UI Campus Programs and Student Activities Coordinator Mary Peterson and told her they wanted to form a new national fraternity.

Peterson liked the idea. "It is exciting to have a new national fraternity at the UI," she said. "It had been about 80 years since a new national fraternity was founded," she said.

Peterson currently acts as vice president of Sigma Lambda Beta's board of trustees. UI Assistant Dean of Academic Affairs Nancy Barcelo is also a member of the trustee board.

Honorary members of the fraternity include former UI president James O. Freedman; Cesar Chavez; Sen. Joseph P. Kennedy II, D-Mass.; Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass.; and the Rev. Jesse Jackson.

TWO OTHER HONORARY members, architect Richard Meier and author Carlos Fuentes, have planned direct contributions to the fraternity. Meier has agreed to design the fraternity house and cultural center and Fuentes is scheduled to appear at a UI Hispanic cultural event in April sponsored by Sigma Lambda Beta.

Rojas-Cardona said the rock band Los Lobos has also made a verbal commitment to appear at a fundraiser for the new fraternity sometime this year.

Since its inception, according to Rojas-Cardona, Sigma Lambda Beta has enjoyed great success and is rapidly expanding. Besides the UI chapter, Sigma Lambda Beta now has colonies at Western Illinois University, Illinois State University and in Puerto Rico.

THE UI CHAPTER has received letters of interest for expansion from eight other universities, and Rojas-Cardona said nationwide expansion is definitely in the future.

"We started out as an organization designed for expansion through the fraternity system," Rojas-Cardona said. "We are going to try to meet the needs of young individuals, both Hispanic and other minorities, with a variety of cultural and educational events," Rojas-Cardona said.

As national interest continues to grow, the original Sigma Lambda Beta chapter is solidifying itself in the UI Greek system.

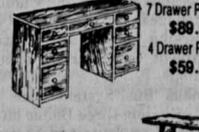

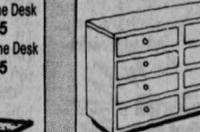

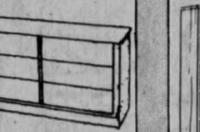

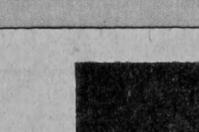

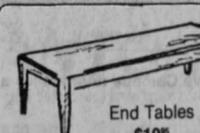

"The UI has been great," Rojas-Cardona said. "Mary Peterson has been a valuable asset for the nitty-gritty of how fraternities really work."

Iowa City attorney Ron Johnson has donated his services for the fraternity, Rojas-Cardona said.

"And all of the fraternities and sororities have been really good to us," Rojas-Cardona added. "We've been really well-received on campus."

Cambus donations increase

An appreciative Cambus rider makes a donation.

Advertising pays off as riders make on-board contributions

By Lisa Legge
The Daily Iowan

A small advertising effort has begun to pay off for Cambus.

Since installing bright "Donations Always Accepted" signs last spring on the donation boxes near the entrance of the buses, donations have risen from approximately $20 per semester to about that same amount per month.

"We'd like people to be aware of the donation boxes," Cambus Coordinator Brian McClatchey said. "If non-students or students who are heavy users feel so inclined to give, that would be helpful. But we don't want anyone to feel obligated to donate."

"We didn't want to cause any alarm," UI Parking and Transportation Director David Ricketts said, adding that when the donation boxes were installed two years ago people panicked, thinking Cambus would soon charge bus fare. "We just decided to enhance the response."

EACH SEMESTER a portion of mandatory student fees goes to Cambus and covers 55 percent of its $791,000 budget. Federal and state funds make up much of the rest. These sources cover day-to-day costs of operating the buses.

To cover capital costs Cambus relies on federal- and state-matched grants, which are always tenuous, Ricketts said.

Contributions, usually solicited through optional contribution cards given to all students at registration time, totalled $3,416, down from last year's $8,710.

"Donations really do make a difference," McClatchey said. "The donation box is another little area that can help out."

"If donations were to keep growing," he added, "they could keep any future increases down."

Ricketts said many of the donations come from employees and hospital visitors.

"WE GET CALLS from people who want to know how they can donate to Cambus," Ricketts said. "We decided to make it easier for people to contribute."

University employees who park their cars in university lots and then take a Cambus to work are indirectly paying for Cambus service, because parking and Cambus are managed together under the UI Parking and Transportation Department. Some parking fees go to Cambus.

Cambus Bus System owns 17 buses, including three Bionic buses for disabled students and 14 regular buses. It employs approximately 110 students, all on a part-time basis. During fall and spring semesters Cambuses run from 6 a.m. to midnight Monday through Thursday. On Friday and Saturday "Safe Ride" extends regular service from midnight to 3 a.m. Sunday Cambus service runs from 11 a.m. to midnight.

Reagan pledges Contra aid until cease-fire is reached

By Lou Cannon
Washington Post

Ronald Reagan

LOS ANGELES — President Ronald Reagan Thursday assured leaders of the Nicaraguan Contras that "we intend to see that you have adequate funding until a cease-fire is in place and a verifiable process of democratization is under way" in Nicaragua.

Reagan gave his pledge of continued support for the Contra cause in a prepared statement read at a photo-taking session here with leaders of the rebels, who have been seeking to overthrow Nicaragua's leftist Sandinista regime.

He then met for an hour with the six political leaders of the Contras and their military commander, Enrique Bermudez, to hear their proposal for continued U.S. assistance.

THE CONTRAS ASKED that they continue to receive "humanitarian aid" of foodstuffs and other supplies when their present appropriation expires Sept. 30 and that military aid be appropriated but placed in escrow until the Sandinistas carry out their promised democratic reforms.

White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater and Alfredo Cesar, one of the six Contra leaders who met with Reagan, said the president reacted favorably to the proposal but did not make a final decision. A senior White House official said Reagan likes the idea of an escrow account, but also intends to abide of Nicaragua, and if we achieve peace, which is what the resistance wants, we would ask the United States to use the (escrow) money to feed the Nicaraguan people . . ." Cesar said at a news conference after the meeting with Reagan.

In advance of the meeting, White House officials told reporters that the president intends to honor his commitments to Wright, the Contras and the pending Central American peace plan initiated by Costa Rican President Oscar Arias, which Reagan has praised without formally endorsing it. One senior official agreed this was "a balancing act," but "we haven't lost our balance."

IN HIS PUBLIC photo session with the Contra leaders, Reagan praised them for forcing the Sandinistas to the bargaining table.

"We have much to thank you for," Reagan said. "The political and military pressure you apply I think is showing results. The Sandinistas have now signed a peace agreement based on democracy and we'll be watching carefully to see if they really comply."

The president said that, without the pressure exerted by "the freedom fighters," the Sandinistas would have "no incentives to implement the measures they've said they will implement."

Contra leaders said at their news conference that they had sufficient arms and ammunition to continue the struggle until Nov. 7, the date a cease-fire would take effect under the Arias plan.

Nunn, hope of Democrats, will not run

ATLANTA — Sen. Sam Nunn of Georgia, the politically moderate, highly respected defense expert many Democrats believed was the party's best hope of winning the White House in 1988, announced Thursday he would not run.

He said Senate and family responsibilities led him to decide against entering the race, and the rest of the contenders for the Democratic nomination breathed easier.

Nunn, 48, ended months of speculation about his ambitions in a letter released to the Atlanta news media and supporters.

"My new responsibility as chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee weighed heavily in this decision," Nunn said in his letter. "With a son in high school and a daughter in college, I am also concerned about the impact of a presidential campaign on my family."

"I have been surprised and honored by the many sincere offers of political and financial support that I have received from both old and new friends throughout the nation," the letter said. But, "I have decided not to run in the 1988 presidential race."

Proxmire won't seek sixth Senate term

WASHINGTON — Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis., the third most senior member of the Senate, chairman of its banking committee and a maverick who reveled in the role of penny-pinching custodian of the public purse, announced Thursday that he will not seek a sixth term next year.

Describing a senator's life as "the best job in the world," he told reporters at the Wisconsin State Capitol in Madison that he was nonetheless abandoning it because he would be 79 when a new term ends.

"I think that's too old," he said later in a telephone interview. "Too many people stay too long . . . It's better to leave early than stay too late."

The announcement by the 71-year-old lawmaker, whose career was marked by crusades on issues ranging from government waste to arms control and human rights, was made on the 30th anniversary of his upset victory in a special election to succeed the late senator Joseph McCarthy, R-Wis.

Poindexter intends to retire from Navy

WASHINGTON — Former national security adviser Rear Adm. John Poindexter, a central figure in the Iran-Contra scandal, has informed Navy officials that he intends to retire this fall, sources said Thursday.

But Poindexter, who told congressional committees "the buck stops" with him over responsibility for not informing President Ronald Reagan of the diversion of money from Iranian arms sales to the Nicaraguan rebels, has indicated he wishes to retire at the higher three-star rank he held as a vice admiral before leaving the White House last November.

Sources said that on Wednesday, Poindexter wrote Vice Adm. Dudley Carlson, the Navy's chief of personnel, that he intended to retire Oct. 1. Both the Navy and the Defense Department declined comment.

Space shuttle rocket test postponed

BRIGHAM CITY, Utah — The long-awaited firing of the first redesigned space shuttle rocket booster with new O-ring joints to prevent a repeat of the Challenger disaster was postponed 48 hours Thursday because of last-minute problems with test equipment.

The big rocket was within 10 seconds of ignition during a fourth attempt to conduct the test when the countdown was aborted for the final time Thursday.

"We have aborted the test. We will resume our count Saturday for a (12 p.m. CDT) firing," said test director Roger Williams.

A broken water pipe, which caused the first of three earlier delays, could be seen thrashing about the base of the rocket spewing cooling water moments after Williams aborted the countdown.

EPA reports improvement in air quality

WASHINGTON — The Environmental Protection Agency reported an overall improvement Thursday in air quality in 1986 but warned cities violating ozone and carbon monoxide laws to conform to standards or face sanctions.

The agency released the data covering air quality tests for 1984 to 1986 and noted there were 14 fewer areas in the country having an atmosphere that violates the national standard for ozone pollution.

Ozone pollution, which causes breathing problems, is a component of smog. It forms when sunlight strikes exhaust fumes, gasoline vapors and other air pollutants emitted by some factories, power plants and municipal burners.

The EPA warned cities still violating ozone and carbon monoxide laws by Dec. 31 that they will be sanctioned by the agency, possibly getting a construction ban and a cutoff of federal funds for some pollution projects.

S. Korean 'leftists' face crackdown

SEOUL, South Korea — The government announced a massive crackdown Thursday on "radical leftist forces" that it said have infiltrated hundreds of South Korea's strike-bound factories and college campuses in a plot to overthrow President Chun Doo Hwan's regime before presidential elections are held later this year.

"We are now standing at a grave crossroads," Prime Minister Kim Chung Yul said in announcing the government's renewed hard-line stand against dissidents. He spoke out after an emergency Cabinet meeting on the eve of a planned protest for a laborer killed Saturday by a police tear-gas grenade.

"The voice of seditious, subversive forces is growing, while that of sound conservative groups is diminishing," the prime minister said. "The leftist forces will not be allowed to find a foothold in this society."

U.S. mine-sweeping boats arrive in Gulf

WASHINGTON — The Navy is expected soon to begin using surface craft to sweep mines deterring the convoy of oil tankers from Kuwait with the arrival of its first mine sweeping boats in the Persian Gulf, administration sources said Thursday.

Two of the 30-ton, 57-foot-long boats are aboard the St. Louis, a troop landing craft that has arrived in the gulf, the sources said. The St. Louis is also carrying two small patrol boats.

U.S. warships until now have had to rely on eight Sea Stallion mine sweeping helicopters from the amphibious assault ship Guadalcanal to help clear a path for the tankers, which have been reregistered to carry the American flag.

Chernobyl could cause 28,000 deaths

DAVIS, Calif. — Up to 28,000 people in the Northern Hemisphere could die of cancer related to the April 1986 accident at the Chernobyl nuclear power plant in the Soviet Union, a University of California researcher estimated Thursday.

Researcher Marvin Goldman said the projection is surprisingly low, given that 3.5 billion people live in the northern half of the world. However, he said, radiation that reached other countries was lower than he expected.

"I was rather surprised that the radiation (circulating into the atmosphere throughout the hemisphere) was that small and the consequences for health effects amount to a few thousandths of a percent," Goldman said at a news conference to release the results of his study.

New York woman survives live burial

ALPINE, N.J. (UPI) — A woman beaten beyond recognition and buried alive in a 5-foot-deep pit for up to 60 hours struggled for life Thursday as police sought the kidnapers who attacked her in order to steal her car.

Two suspects — a young couple — were in custody. A nationwide alert was out for their alleged accomplices, a young husband and wife. The critically injured woman, Cheryl Ickson, 22, of Stony Point, N.Y., was revived by paramedics who found her at 2 a.m. Wednesday at a construction site 1,000 feet off Route 9W, just 8 miles from the George Washington Bridge to New York City.

"IT WAS ONE of the worst beatings I had ever seen," said Stony Point Police Lt. Frank Tinelli. "We were totally amazed she survived." Police Wednesday arrested Lori Ann Mitchell, 18, of West Haverstraw, N.Y., and her boyfriend, Dwayne Johnson, 24, of Stony Point, on charges they abducted Ickson in her car from a Stony Point shopping center Sunday.

Striking South African workers evicted from a gold recovery plant near Johannesburg gather in a church Thursday to discuss nationwide strikes which have resulted in more than 22,000 firings.

S. African tensions mount as mining companies fire 22,000

By Michael Parks
Los Angeles Times

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa — More than 22,000 black miners were fired Thursday as South Africa's major mining companies attempted to break a strike that has halted production at a third of the country's gold and coal mines for nearly three weeks.

Anglo American Corp., hit hardest by the strike, said that it had dismissed more than 20,000 miners at five gold mines and four collieries when they refused to return to work and warned that it would fire another 20,000 over the weekend if they also refuse.

Similar moves appear to be planned by two other companies, General Mining Union Corp. and Johannesburg Consolidated Investments Co., and the number of dismissed workers could total more than 80,000 within a few days as companies take an even tougher stand.

THE MASS firings brought a warning from the Congress of South African Trade Unions of a nationwide general strike in support of the miners, an action that would deepen the prolonged political crisis here and perhaps bring direct government intervention.

Jay Naidoo, general secretary of the 712,000-member congress, declared: "Black workers in this country have very few weapons, but withdrawal of our labor is one of them. A general strike is not a last resort — it is one of the weapons that we have."

More than 300,000 of South Africa's 600,000 black miners have been on strike since Aug. 9 to support their demands for higher pay, improved fringe benefits and better working conditions. From the outset their action has been widely interpreted as a power struggle between black labor and white capital.

The companies have proposed compromises on many of the miners' demands, but they have refused to increase their offers on wages, the main issue of the strike. To yield to the strikers, the companies believe, would only bring greater demands and larger work stoppages in the future.

ALTHOUGH THE mining companies have already unilaterally implemented pay increases of 15 to 23 percent, the union has been seeking an across-the-board increase of 30 percent, which it reduced this week to 27 percent in hope of a company counteroffer.

Members of the National Union of Mineworkers voted overwhelmingly Wednesday to reject an industry take-it-or-leave-it offer, which included increased death benefits and greater vacation pay, because it did not include a new wage proposal.

Although Anglo American had said there was a "substantial return" to work by the miners this week and implied that the strike was collapsing, it acknowledged in announcing the mass firings that more than 80 percent of the workers had accepted dismissal rather than go back to work.

Gephardt, Kemp clash over U.S. foreign policy in debate

By John M. Broder
Los Angeles Times

NASHUA, N.H. — In a presidential campaign debate Thursday that crystallized sharp foreign policy differences between the two political parties, Republican Rep. Jack Kemp and Democrat Rep. Richard Gephardt clashed over the use of power to further American interests abroad.

Kemp, declaring himself a "heavily-armed dove," charged that the Democrats stand for "appeasement, isolationism and unilateral disarmament."

Gephardt responded that the Republican approach to international affairs is to try to "wipe out anyone who disagrees with us."

The hourlong debate at Rivier College, a small Catholic women's school, was the second of two confrontations between the two candidates early in the 1988 presidential campaign. The first, held five weeks ago in Iowa, concentrated on domestic issues, particularly trade.

THE TELEVISED sessions between the two Congressmen put in crisp contrast the policy questions that will be at the center of the 1988 presidential contest.

Kemp presented himself as the ideological heir of President Ronald Reagan, advocating a muscular, force-based foreign policy. On international affairs, Gephardt mirrors the views of the liberal wing of the Democratic party, in most instances favoring diplomacy over confrontation.

The candidates disagreed on nearly every foreign policy issue facing the country today. Gephardt attacked Reagan's Star Wars strategic defense initiative as unworkable and impossibly expensive.

The St. Louis Democrat said that while the nation must maintain a strong defense, the United States must first seek accommodation with the Soviets through arms-control talks.

"DOVES WHO ARE too heavily armed cannot fly," he jabbed.

Kemp shot back, "Don't you realize, Dick, that the Soviet Union is a Marxist-Leninist government that can only be negotiated with from a position of strength? Not trepidation or timidity, but strength."

Kemp, a nine-term Congressman from Buffalo, N.Y., and a former professional football star, seemed to reflect the views of the 100 or so voters in the audience more closely than did Gephardt.

NSC aide: CIA director knew about arms profits diversion

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Months before the Iran-Contra scandal broke, Oliver North confided to an aide that CIA Director William Casey knew Iran arms sales money had been diverted to Nicaraguan rebels and designated North the scapegoat if the scheme were exposed, according to testimony released Thursday.

Lt. Col. Robert Earl's statements, in private depositions before the Senate Iran-Contra committee staff, appeared to support parts of public testimony by North, the Marine lieutenant colonel who was Earl's supervisor at the National Security Council.

Earl, answering questions under limited immunity from prosecution, appeared four times before the committee staff attorneys in May, six weeks before North testified publicly in July. The full text of Earl's statements was released Thursday.

HE BACKED UP the substance of North's contention that he acted with the full authority of his superiors, including diverting the arms sales profits to the Contras, and North was prepared to resign if the scheme were uncovered.

But Earl repeated statements made public earlier that appeared to dispute North's claim that President Ronald Reagan did not know of the diversion.

He said North told him Reagan telephoned North to express his regrets about North's firing Nov.

25 and said: "It's important that I not know, something like that." That statement has not been corroborated by any other testimony.

Earl said North told him as far back as June 1986 that he had informed Casey about the diversion. The scandal did not explode until Nov. 25 when the diversion was revealed by Attorney General Edwin Meese.

Casey died in May, before he could answer questions about his role, after a long bout with brain cancer. North testified that Casey had approved of the diversion from the start and thought it "a neat idea." However, Meese testified in late July that on the morning of Nov. 25, Casey told the attorney general he knew nothing of the diversion.

Economist gains influence

Glasnost campaign makes 61-year-old woman a celebrity

By Michael Dobbs
Washington Post

CHAUTAQUA, N.Y. — One of the answers to the question "How has the Soviet Union changed under Gorbachev?" sat in a wicker chair in the Victorian splendor of the Atheneum hotel here Thursday, apparently unfazed by her new-found celebrity status.

Just five years ago, Tatiana Zaslavskaya was a relatively obscure economist working for an economic research institute in Siberia. Her views on the need for major economic reform in the Soviet Union were considered so radical that they were kept secret from the Soviet population.

Today, judging from the high profile she has assumed at this week's conference on U.S.-Soviet relations, Zaslavskaya has become a respected member of the Soviet establishment. She has been spreading the Gorbachev gospel of glasnost (openness) and perestroika (restructuring) to a sympathetic American audience at the Chautauqua Institute, a kind of intellectual holiday camp in upstate New York.

HER FORMER BOSS at the Siberian branch of the Soviet Academy of Sciences, Abel Aganbeyan, has become the top economic adviser to Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev. The team of economists that he put together in the distant Siberian city of Novosibirsk has fanned out across the country to occupy key Communist party positions.

"In the past, we were all regarded as heretics... Today, we occupy the commanding heights (of economic policy-making in the Soviet Union)," Zaslavskaya commented with a smile.

Zaslavskaya's name came to the attention of the west in 1983 after The Washington Post published a secret report in which she called for sweeping reforms of the Soviet Union's command economy.

THE SOVIET UNION'S most celebrated radical economist turns out to be a friendly 60-year-old woman who could pass for a fairly typical Russian babushka (grandmother). Her career since joining the Communist party in 1954 is almost a parable for the hopes and frustrations of Soviet reformers.

A U.S. Soviet specialist said the Kremlin had apparently decided to include Zaslavskaya in its official Chautauqua delegation because she is an attractive spokesperson for perestroika. The extensive round of interviews she has granted in the last few days mark her first exposure to the western public.

ZASLAVSKAYA'S message has been that economic reform is an urgent necessity if the Soviet Union wants to remain a world-class power. But she also noted what she describes as significant "latent opposition" to Gorbachev in the vast middle-layer of the Soviet bureaucracy.

"Of course there is a possibility that it (perestroika) will fail, but, if it does, it will mean that our country is giving up the race and is headed toward becoming a second-class power," she said.

Zaslavskaya described Aganbeyan, five years younger than she, as an intellectual mentor who succeeded in putting together a team of progressive economists in Novosibirsk in the middle 1960s. She recalled how bitterly disappointed the group was after the failure of a half-hearted attempt at economic reform by then prime minister Alexei Kosygin.

THE OFFICIAL reason for suspension of the reform known as Libermanism — after its architect, economist Yevsei Liberman — was the uncontrolled rise in wages. But Zaslavskaya said that equally important was the realization that economic power would shift away from the bureaucratic class if the reforms succeeded.

By the early 1980s, the Soviet economy had deteriorated to the point where Zaslavskaya and her Novosibirsk colleagues felt sure that reforms were inevitable. Their response was to organize a seminar in 1983 attended by 100 like-minded economists and sociologists.

"We were quite convinced that the time for changes was very near — if not tomorrow, then the day after tomorrow. We felt that the new political leadership (following Brezhnev) would ask us how we had got into this situation and what we should do about it," she said.

Zaslavskaya said she and other members of the institute experienced "some unpleasantness" when an account appeared in the Post four months later. But no attempt was made to remove her as head of the department of social problems at the institute of Economics and Industrial Engineering in Novosibirsk.

Welfare

at $322 per month for a family of two. The largest payments are in Wisconsin, $443, and Minnesota, $422, he said.

THE PERCEPTION is burgeoning welfare costs have scrapped the state budget. That certainly isn't the case at all," he said.

AFDC program costs accounted for 2.5 percent of the state's $2.4 billion state budget, compared to 2.95 percent of the state's 1983 budget, he said.

Bruner said any welfare reform must address the changing face of the Iowa family, especially the dramatic increase in single-parent families headed by women, from 30,000 in 1970 to 55,000 in 1985.

"Fourteen percent of all Iowa families with children now are headed by single mothers, an increase of nearly 85 percent since 1970," he said.

About 44 percent of those families are living below the poverty level, he said.

BRUNER SAID another key problem with Iowa's welfare system is a "substantial" income tax on low-income families.

Based on a married, one wage-earner family with two dependents and an income of $12,090, Iowa's average state income tax of $353 is nearly 75 percent higher than the second-place state, Illinois at $202. Other averages are Kansas $201, Wisconsin $135, Missouri $127, Nebraska $90, Minnesota $29 and South Dakota with no income tax.

Other annual daycare subsidies per capita are $2.54 in Nebraska and $3.53 in Minnesota.

Committee co-chairman Rep. Mark Haverland, D-Polk City, said welfare reform is a "very topical subject."

"I think the time is right to do some reform in our welfare system.

We need to work to move people from dependency to being independent," he said.

Evelyn Davis, a panel member and director of a Des Moines daycare center, said she has worked with welfare recipients for 20 years.

"I hope that whatever we do is a smooth transition from the life they are living to a future life. We should not push them around and make them just another piece of paper," she said.

"They have feelings and some of them are in a position they don't want to be in anymore than we would want to be," Davis said.

pour" and "does not accord with the spirit of the times."

In the speech, Reagan called on the Kremlin to change its stand in negotiations for the treaty and to extend its policy of glasnost, or openness, to the area of military affairs.

"The statement was made out of the old baggage of anti-Soviet rhetoric," Gerasimov told Moscow-based journalists.

Despite the sharp exchange of words, western diplomats here said that Kohl's offer to scrap the Pershings gave the United States and the Soviet Union a way out of their dispute over the missiles.

Moscow has insisted that the Pershing IAs be included in the treaty under negotiation to scrap all U.S. and Soviet medium- and short-range missiles, but Washington objected, saying the missiles are West German property and should not be included in a superpower arms deal.

GERASIMOV INDICATED that remaining squabbles will be on the agenda in preparatory sessions as well as the Shevardnadze-Shultz talks. Soviet officials have told Moscow-based diplomats that the meeting could continue well beyond the fixed closing date of Sept. 17.

Quarry blast damages roof

By Franc Contreras
The Daily Iowan

A dynamite blast at a Coralville quarry dislodged a rock Thursday afternoon and sent it flying approximately one mile into the air, landing on the Ironmen Inn roof, Interstate 80, and leaving a two-foot hole while settling in the lobby, according to hotel workers.

When a charge was detonated at an unidentified quarry owned by River Products Inc., of Coralville, chunks of rock were blown out of the quarry. Another piece of rock damaged a car, while other pieces of rock damaged the roof, according to hotel desk clerk Mike Winke.

No damage estimates were available, said Winke.

Avert a crisis

The Iowa City Crisis Center, which provides various services to local residents as well as anyone else needing assistance, is in serious financial trouble.

The trouble began last year when center officials made plans to move from their current residence in Old Brick, 26 E. Market St., to a new location at 321 First St. The Crisis Center reportedly underestimated the cost involved in purchasing and renovating the building and now contends with the possibility of having to reduce or eliminate some of the vital services it offers area residents.

For those not familiar with the many noteworthy services the center provides, here is a list of some of their daily community services: short term counseling, suicide prevention and intervention, a referral service, maintenance of a food bank, relaying messages for the deaf and providing clothing. Further, Crisis Center volunteers are available 24 hours a day.

The center began planning the move primarily because of cramped conditions and limited space due to the thousands of people who utilize the facility each year. The center has contact with approximately 25,000 to 30,000 people each year, according to Mary Martinez, Assistant Crisis Center Director.

This figure becomes even more impressive when broken down in terms of weeks and days. According to Martinez, the center provides services to between 150 and 200 clients per week. Even if the center only helped one-tenth of those people, the nature of the services themselves render this organization highly desirable and valuable to a community.

In order to combat the possibility of having to reduce services, an outdoor benefit has been planned for this Sunday at the Johnson County Fairgrounds. The benefit will begin at 1 p.m., with free shuttle buses leaving from the Pentacrest every hour beginning at 12:30 p.m. Tickets, which can be purchased at B.J. Records, Prairie Lights Books, That's Rentertainment and the Crisis Center, are $5 in advance and $6 the day of the show. (Children's tickets are $2.50; those under five are admitted free.)

The benefit is scheduled to include many performers, all of which have donated their time and talent to this worthy cause. Various area businesses are also helping in the fund-raising effort by donating concessions to the benefit organizers.

One need look only as far as the proceeding list of services and opportunities which the Crisis Center provides in order to understand the importance of this local organization. Those interested in the welfare of the people utilizing the center, as well as the community on the whole, should make an effort to attend this important event.

Poor planning

"There is nothing more terrifying than ignorance in action."
 —Goethe

Frequently, shortsightedness obscures the truly important issues of the day. This is not news. It happens all the time, especially in "heat-of-the-moment" situations. People lose sight of the danger present in an unbridled arms race when high-paying jobs in weapons production are available; manufacturers skirt regulations designed to protect the environment if such cheating reduces costs; governments operating outside the bounds of law run amok and pursue policies which ultimately undermine the national interest.

Today, the American people are face-to-face with yet another shortsighted policy. This time the setting is the Persian Gulf. The decision of the Reagan administration to step up American involvement in the troubled region is disturbing both for its apparent lack of forethought and its recklessness once the policy was implemented.

Recent press investigations indicate President Ronald Reagan made the decision to escort Kuwaiti oil tankers through the war-torn gulf under the assumption that little or no increase in American naval strength would be required. Such alarming disregard for reality might be surprising if the Reagan administration hadn't shown itself completely ignorant of crucial information so many times before.

The facts of the Persian Gulf buildup speak for themselves: The Navy, which originally had only four ships in the gulf, now stations 41 combat vessels in the area. Further, the extra operating expenses incurred during the first month of U.S. protection for Kuwait totaled more than $30 million, according to administration figures. The recent Pentagon decision to give "imminent danger" pay to some 10,000 military personnel in the Persian Gulf area will add another $1.1 million to the cost of the operation. Of course, the cost in terms of lives lost cannot be itemized.

Quite obviously, the Reagan administration has chosen to embark on a deadly serious mission without considering the consequences, risks or potential losses which accompany such an operation. Realizing that the Navy is locked into the escort business for an indefinite period, one can only hope that more serious thought will be given to the next American move in the region. If not, the disaster which befell the USS Stark may not be so unique.

Welcome back to no parking

Say there, little one... it's good to have you back. Oh, I can't say we at The Daily Iowan's Michael Humes Department didn't have some good times while you were gone. In fact, we had as much fun as you can have without needing arthroscopic surgery afterwards. Our grizzled bull goose looney, the Big Mick himself, sure knows how to throw a combination all-night luau-sock hop-chocolate syrup party and, hey, sorry you weren't around to attend. But I have some pictures to show you, later maybe, after I clean them off. But let's not think about all that now. Let me tell you about my summer instead.

I'm surprised I didn't see you down at Graceland a couple of weeks ago. It doesn't seem like he's been dead for ten years, does it? I can still remember one of his last shows in Vegas, I can still see him there, bloated, puffy, sweating by the litre, his eyes glazed, mumbling the lyrics, barely able to drag his bulk around the stage. I mean, he was so full of life!

Michael Humes

BUT THE GATHERING! Oh, the gathering was beautiful, what with all the guitar-shaped floral arrangements, the impersonators dressed in mourning, their black sequins glinting in the sporadic glare of the flashcubes, his 37 illegitimate daughters autographing their books and making sure a tear fell on every title page. It was such a magic night, a rare combination of rock 'n' roll and morbidity, youthful rebellion and death worship, rather like a collaboration between Chuck Berry and Ingmar Bergman. Sorry you couldn't be there.

And what sacred little corner of the world did you actualize in during the Harmonic Convergence? I'm afraid I made my arrangements a bit late, and the good holy places — the Great Pyramid at Giza, Macchu Picchu, Stonehenge, Angkor Wat, the set of The Cosby Show, Gabe's — were all taken. But remembering that holiness is all around me, I attuned myself to the vibrations of the earth and the wind, I turned my third eye to the glowing lines of energy that circle and bind the world to see where they converge, I listened to the ancient wisdom of my inner voice, which gently told me, "You look for Yoda, take you to him I can." So I wound up at the mall. I guess I'm not a Jedi yet.

BUT EVEN THERE, it was clear a new age was dawning. Peace and understanding shown on every face, every gesture was imbued with a newfound grace and gentleness, horrid ratty children with names like Starpuppie weren't screaming and throwing food at passersby, sales were up and I wasn't shortchanged all day. The management was a little confused, though, and thought the day was a celebration of Harmonica Virgins.

So they had a bunch of 12-year-old girls dressed in frilly white frocks playing some real gutbucket blues harp in the foyer. Some of those kids could really wail, too; one of them who called herself Howlin' Care Bear got signed to record deal on the spot.

BUT THAT IS in the past. Now you're back, you've got a clean slate, all's forgiven, you've paid your debt to society, your room is just like you left it, your cat was mad that you left and made a big mess, your phone should be installed by mid-November and you're already behind in your reading. See, nothing's changed, except for campus parking fines. They're more expensive now, and if your meter's run out in a handicapped parking space, you don't have a UI registration sticker and its your twentieth violation, they can put you to death. I'd take the bus if I were you.

A time of crucial decisions

Women gather in Oregon to make plans for 1988 election

Portland, Ore. — From its beginning 16 years ago, the National Women's Political Caucus has been pro-choice. On the issues of reproductive freedom, including the abortion option, the caucus and the women's movement remain single-minded and strong.

But the biennial convention here last week showed the 1,000 or so delegates — and presumably the 77,000 other activist women who belong to NWPC's state affiliates — are struggling with other choices.

The Republicans in the caucus, who call themselves moderates or progressives, are weighing whether they can remain both feminists and loyal Republicans.

Democratic women members, almost all of whom fall on the liberal end of the spectrum, are torn between the emotional appeal of the prospective presidential candidacy of Rep. Patricia Schroeder, D-Colo., and the practical considerations that have taken many of them into leadership roles in the campaigns of the seven male contenders.

THE MOOD OF THE Republican women was captured in the button worn by Sharon Hageman of Riverside, Ca., head of the NWPC resolutions committee. Between an elephant and an equal-rights symbol were the words, "It ain't easy."

Republican women of the NWPC feel they are being shunned by their party. Kay Orr of Nebraska, the only new woman governor elected last year and the head of the 1988 Republican platform committee, did not come here to discuss the issues. Nor did Maureen Reagan, an avowed feminist who is co-chair of the national Republican Party.

David Broder

All the prospective presidential candidates were invited; five Democrats and no Republicans accepted. The GOP gentlemen, said Mary Stanley of Fresno, Ca., co-head of the GOP women's task force, "are afraid to come here because word might get out to the New Right, Ronnie-come-lately Republicans that they said something we liked."

NOR DID ANY of the prominent Republican women attend: not the widely admired Elizabeth Dole, one of the "founding mothers" of NWPC, nor the much-loved Mary Louise Smith, former Republican national chair and leading supporter of George Bush.

Tanya Melich of New York, a founder of NWPC and veteran Rockefeller Republican, told fellow-partisans that after years with "a split personality, I have decided the stress and strain of being effective both as a Republican and a feminist are too difficult."

For now, Melich said, she is going to subordinate feminism, "support the nominee, be a good loser and then move in." In time, she said, she and like-minded people may be able to wrest control of the GOP from conservatives and even "elect a woman Republican president by the year 2000."

OTHERS ARE discouraged that not one Republican presidential contender is running on a pro-choice, pro-Equal Rights Amendment platform. They are either planning to sit it out in 1988 or put their feminism first by supporting Schroeder. Martha Ezzard, who made a credible losing run for the 1986 Republican senatorial nomination in Colorado, quit the legislature last month and switched parties. Several other GOP women, from Washington, D.C., to Marin County, Ca., said they were contemplating enlisting for Schroeder.

IRONICALLY, many of the Democratic women flinch from the choice presented by the possible Schroeder candidacy. She drew cheers here, but party activists and public officials, up to the level of Vermont Democratic Gov. Madeleine Kunin, who have endorsed other candidates, made it clear in interviews that their previous commitments would stand.

Ann Lewis, the head of the Democratic women's task force and an adviser to presidential hopeful Jesse Jackson, said, "There's a strong feeling Pat ought to be running, that the field would be better with her in it. But the women with power bases and commitments of their own are not saying, 'I will be there.'"

Irene Natividad, head of NWPC, told me that endorsement of Schroeder by the caucus would not be automatic. "If Pat runs, we'd go through the same process we would with any other candidate," she said. "We'd look at the viability of her race, her funding, how she stacked up against the other candidates. We've reached that state of maturity."

ON ISSUES AS well as candidates, the women activists have moved beyond symbolism. When convention speakers mentioned the ERA, there was none of the fervent shouting of those initials one heard at earlier NWPC conventions. "It doesn't have the same emotional intensity," Lewis said. "It remains an important symbol, but people are much more focused on electing more women to office at all levels, making our impact felt on the presidential platforms and campaigns and defeating the (Robert) Bork nomination."

In a similar vein, Republican Hageman said she found this year's NWPC resolutions debates (from which the pro-choice was excluded) "less strident, more focused than ever before." A proposed constitutional amendment to allocate half the House and Senate seats to women got short shrift in her committee.

"I simply asked the sponsor if she wanted me to work against Pete Wilson (the Republican senator from California) at the same time I'm lobbying him on the Bork nomination, or did she propose to double the size of the Senate," Hageman said.

ability for the armed forces "in unifying the people and rendering justice and maintaining real freedom." Honasan has close ties to Sen. Juan Ponce Enrile, Aquino's former defense minister and now her chief political rival. Armed forces spokesman Col. Honesto Isleta said air force chief Maj. Gen. Antonio Sotelo also was being held by rebel soldiers in his office at Villamor Air Base, about five miles south of the palace, adjacent to Manila International Airport. Yet another rebel force armed with three tanks seized the headquarters of the national police in San Fernando, 50 miles north of Manila and took hostage regional commander Brig. Gen. Eduardo Tadviran. Aquino had been scheduled to visit the city this morning. THE REBELS also claimed to be in control of all four military regions on the island of Luzon. A radio station reported about 100 rebel soldiers repulsed from government television Channel 4 after dawn had entered three nearby houses and taken the residents hostage. Fighting raged from about 2 a.m. until after 7 a.m. around Channel 4, which went on the air at dawn, run by staff who had been trapped all night. An employee said four people were wounded inside during the battle. The rebels were repelled earlier from the streets around the downtown Malacanang Palace, where troops, trucks and a tank were seen emerging into the street to engage the attackers. U.S. Ambassador Nicholas Platt, who arrived Sunday, said in an embassy statement he "expressed this morning the U.S. government's continued and unequivocal support for President Corazon C. Aquino and her administration." PLATT "STRONGLY deplored the malicious acts perpetrated during the night and meant to destabilize the Aquino government. The ambassador further expressed his great relief that President Aquino is safe." Witnesses reported seeing at least 10 dead bodies in one blood-spattered street near the palace, where a number of civilians were caught in a vicious cross-fire between loyalist and rebel troops.

One witness said the rebel forces sprayed the civilians with gunfire when they began chanting "Cory, Cory," and "Surrender, surrender," in support of Aquino. Radio reporters said they saw another five dead soldiers in another street near the palace and two dead soldiers in a street near Channel 4. Local hospitals reported another 12 dead, including one rebel soldier and 91 wounded. Other bodies were taken directly to funeral parlors or remained in the streets. Press photographers said New Zealander Robert McDonald, 26, of the Melbourne-based magazine Pacific Defense Reporter was shot and killed near Channel 4 when government snipers mistook the flash from his camera for gunfire.

under more unfortunate circumstances, to the mucous membranes of a poor, unsuspecting human. "As far as ragweed is concerned, we're living in the hotbed," Casale said about Iowa. "What's good for the corn is good for the ragweed." People who are allergic to pollen react with cold-like symptoms when their bodies produce histamine, a chemical that swells nasal passages. "Some people have asthma attacks, too," Casale said.

HAY FEVER SUFFERERS say they know when a large amount of pollen is wafting through the air, but there is a more scientific method. A pollen count — the number of pollen grains per cubic meter of air — lets allergy sufferers determine if they want to even get out of bed on a particular day. With a pollen count above 200, Casale said, symptoms of hay fever set in. "Some years my hay fever is worse than other years," UI senior Michelle Hulsing said. This year, she said, her symptoms haven't been too strong. "This is actually a pretty good year," Casale said. "We're having a very wet period during pollination. That tends to keep the pollen counts very low." ACCORDING TO CASALE, pollen counts before this week's downpours were reaching 300. But wet weather does not completely alleviate the allergy problem. "Molds are very high, and some people are allergic to mold," he said.

UI senior Robi Scudder said her allergies have gotten better since she was in high school, but sinus and sometimes respiratory problems still occasionally plague her at night. "It was worse in July than it was in August," she said. About 20 to 25 percent of Americans suffer from hay fever, according to Casale, who also said over-the-counter and prescription drugs and allergy shots are the most common methods of relieving the symptoms.

Fire

Farris said he welcomes the approaching fire drill as an opportunity to familiarize Burge residents with building fire procedures and to better prepare his staff for an emergency situation. "I think it's a good idea," Farris said. "If nothing else, we hope it will get students to think about the possibility that an alarm could mean there's a fire." But Hillcrest Hall Coordinator Mary Carstens said although she hopes the drills will decrease the number of fire alarms, she is not optimistic that resident response to the evacuations will be high. "I'm not sure that the program will have a major effect," she said.

"But I'd like to think the residents will at least have some idea of how to get out of the building in the event of a real fire." HILLCREST Resident Assistant Gary Paul said few residents respond to fire alarms because of the frequency of false alarms. "A few people will get up and take a look to see if there really is a fire," he said. "But most people just turn over and put a pillow over their head." Carstens said no goals have been set for resident participation or evacuation time for the initial fire drills, adding they are designed to identify major problems in the evacuation procedure.

Norby Walters and Lloyd Bloom, the agents accused of signing several collegiate athletes before the completion of their eligibility, may be unscrupulous snakes, but much of what they say about the NCAA and college sports deserves attention.

The two men, who apparently signed former Iowa running back Ronnie Harmon and ex-Ohio State wide receiver Cris Carter among others, have been painted by the NCAA and the media as greedy bloodsuckers. While that description may or may not be accurate, it has been accepted by the general public, and in turn comments by Walters and Bloom have been dismissed as the rantings of criminals on the run.

THE AGENTS HAVE been depicted as the bad guys while the NCAA is seen as the good guy. The athletes are in sort of a neutral corner: they did a bad thing, but they're young and those agents are awfully slick.

But what's been lost in the midst of the controversy are some insightful comments by the agents. They point to the huge amounts of money flowing throughout major sports at the college level and criticize the NCAA for its hypocrisy.

From the point of view of Bloom and Walters, they were doing the athletes a favor by compensating them for being exploited by the collegiate establishment.

Of course, Walters and Bloom weren't acting out of some higher concern to end exploitation of athletes. They did it for the money. But their retrospective reasoning attacking the NCAA deserves consideration.

IN THE OPINION of the two agents, the NCAA and the college football establishment thrive and survive by using athletes. That's very similar to what Walters and Bloom are accused of, and while the NCAA compensates its athletes with scholarships, the agents gave their clients cash up-front. So, Walters and Bloom ask, why are we the villains and the NCAA the chaste hero?

Somewhere in the agents' reasoning there is a valid point. Not only

Iowa ready for Classic showdown

By Marc Bona
The Daily Iowan

For the second consecutive year teams from the Big Ten and Southeastern Conference will clash in the nation's first college football game, the Kickoff Classic, in East Rutherford, N.J., Sunday.

The Iowa Hawkeyes and Tennessee Volunteers — teams which have met only once before — will clash in the fifth annual game, which is scheduled for a 12:15 p.m. start and will be televised by ABC.

Alabama beat Ohio State 16-10 in last year's Kickoff Classic.

Les Unger, director of college athletics for the 77,000-seat Meadowslands complex and public relations director for the Kickoff Classic, said Iowa and Tennessee were chosen for their fan support, explosive offenses and strong national exposure.

"Both have been in bowls, they're visible teams with attractive players and solid representation," Unger said.

UNGER SAID HE'S expecting an offensive battle: "It should be high-scoring but sometimes we get surprised. Both coaches have a wide-open style. I think they'll gamble a little bit, too, since it's not a conference game, and it gives them an opportunity to see what they've got.

"I would like it to be a one-point, high-scoring game," Unger added.

Each school, guaranteed $550,000 for its participation, was allotted an "almost unlimited amount of tickets," Unger said. Tickets are $22.50, and according to Unger, sales have been "reasonably good but could be better. I clearly would like to see more Iowa and Tennessee fans going."

The only time Iowa and Tennessee met on the gridiron was in the 1982 Peach Bowl, with the Hawkeyes pulling out a 28-22 victory.

AT MEDIA DAY Aug. 10, Iowa

Iowa vs. Tennessee

Time and place — 12:15 p.m., Sunday, August 30, Giants Stadium, E. Rutherford, N.J.
Television — The game will be televised nationally by ABC.

Radio — (Originating Iowa Stations) WHO Des Moines, WMT and KXAK Cedar Rapids, KSTT Davenport, KGRN Grinnell.

Attendance — 55,000 expected (Stadium capacity is 77,000).

Series — This is the second game in the series. The only other meeting came in the 1982 Peach Bowl where Iowa was a 28-22 winner.

Coaching records — Iowa's Hayden Fry is now 150-122-5 in his career and 61-33-1 at Iowa. Fry, now in his ninth year at Iowa, is 44-21-1 in Big Ten games and 29-19 in road games. Fry is 2-1 vs. Tennessee (1-0 at Iowa) and 1-0 vs. Johnny Majors. Majors has a career record of 124-66-7 (19 years) and is 67-45-5 (10 years) at Tennessee. He was at Iowa State from 1968 thru 1972.

Next game — Iowa at Arizona, 8:30 p.m., Sept. 12 football Coach Hayden Fry pointed out the traditional strength of Tennessee teams — speed.

"Tennessee, in our opinion, is the fastest team we'll play," Fry said. "They have three people — two wide receivers and one running back — that supposedly have Willie Gault speed," referring to the former Tennessee wide receiver now with the Chicago Bears. "That means they could possibly qualify for the Olympic Games."

The Volunteers have four players who also run track — Terry McDaniel (defensive back), Vando Davis (running back), Anthony Miller (wide receiver) and Victor Peppers (defensive back).

"Tennessee knows who we have returning or who's not returning, so we're going to be tested right off the bat. So we'll quickly find out how good or how poor we are," Fry said.

SPECIFICALLY, Fry praised the Volunteers' kicking game: "Tennessee... has done an excep-

Kansas City fires Gardner; tabs Wathan new skipper

By John Hendel
United Press International

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — The Kansas City Royals, mired in fourth place in the American League West, Thursday fired manager Billy Gardner and replaced him with former catcher John Wathan.

Kansas City General Manager John Schuerholz said he felt the move "was necessary for a leadership change."

Schuerholz said Royals hitting coach Hal McRae, who recently was taken off the active roster as a player, was the team's first choice but "turned the job down for reasons Hal will have to give you."

McRae would have become the fourth black manager in baseball history, following Frank Robinson, Maury Wills and Larry Doby. Robinson was the last black manager, with San Francisco in 1984.

IT WAS THE THIRD managerial change in the majors this season. John Felske was fired in Philadelphia and replaced by Lee Elia, and Pat Corrales was dismissed in Cleveland and succeeded by Doc Edwards.

Under Gardner, the Royals were 62-64. Gardner was hired in spring training when former manager Dick Howser was unable to continue because of a brain tumor.

Wathan, whose only managerial experience came this season at Omaha of the Triple-A American Association, is the ninth manager in franchise history.

Wathan was given a contract as manager through the end of the season. His contract with the organization, originally signed when he was playing, runs through the close of next season.

WATHAN, WHO HAS been in the Royals' organization for 17 years, does not believe his lack of experience will hurt.

"It's been brief, but I've learned a lot the last six months," Wathan said.

Spikers open '87 campaign with scrimmage at DePaul

By Marc Bona
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa Hawkeyes will face the DePaul Blue Demons today in a scrimmage at Oak Park-River Forest (Ill.) High School.

Iowa looks to improve on its third-place finish in the Big Ten (25-9 overall, 12-6 conference) and to gain an NCAA berth.

"I feel pretty good," Coach Sandy Stewart said of opening the 1987 season. "After two weeks of preseason we've accomplished a lot of things. It will be a good opener for us."

But sixth-year DePaul Coach Jim Fitzgerald is expecting somewhat of a shock.

"I'm expecting to get my eyes opened," he said.

The Blue Demons, coming off a 10-23 season, are a little like the Iowa football team last year — battered and bruised.

"Three seniors are injured," said

Volleyball

Fitzgerald, sounding faintly like Iowa football Coach Hayden Fry: "When they're healthy we do all right. When they're not, it could be embarrassing."

DEPAUL RETURNS five players from a team that finished second in the North Star Conference. Two of those players — Dana Kalvaitas and Michelle Barrett were all-conference but are coming off injuries.

On the other side, Iowa appears healthy. Stewart is heading into today's match with DePaul confident of her team, especially the play of all her first-year players. But she said now is a good time to use several lineups.

"We're doing real well," Stewart said. "We don't know much about

Wisconsin's Morton tries to halt losing skid

Don Morton

By Mike Triik
The Daily Iowan

CHICAGO — The recent up and downs of Wisconsin football have been enough to make any Badger fan seasick.

After putting together four straight seasons of winning records, the Badgers will enter the 1987 campaign coming off two losing seasons, including a dismal 3-9 showing just a year ago.

There is still hope, however, in Badgerland as the Wisconsin Athletic Department has undergone a facelift over the summer, and the Badgers will enter the season with a new athletic director and a new football staff.

THE MAN CHARGED with

This is the fifth of a nine-part series previewing the Big Ten. Today: Wisconsin turning the football program around is Don Morton. Morton comes to Wisconsin after eight years of head coaching experience, the first six at North Dakota State and the last two at Tulsa. Though Morton has never had a losing record he'll be the first to say that things won't happen overnight at Wisconsin.

"We realize that there are no short cuts or no silver bullets," Morton said. "When I interviewed for the job I told them 'a search committee that is looking for a messiah is a search committee looking for short cuts and there are none. Find a person that can fit in with the University of Wisconsin and you'll have a step towards a winning football program. We feel very good about being at Wisconsin.'"

Morton brings with him a young staff that averages only 32 years in age. But Morton said he doesn't think that age will matter.

"I DON'T THINK AGE has that much to do with it," Morton said.

"We do have a relatively young staff, but yet we do have a lot of collegiate experience within our staff. I think we have a group of people that gives this staff great chemistry. We've been together for a long time. We've been through some tough times and some tough losses. They love their jobs; they're great people. I don't think you get a Big Ten job until you've proven yourself. The Big Ten is not a place to prove yourself."

No matter who Morton has on his staff things will be difficult in 1987 as the Badgers only return one starter on defense.

"We have some areas of concern," Morton said. "We only return one defensive starter so we are looking at a young, immature defense yet they are eager."

"WHAT CONCERNS US as coaches is when we talk about inexperience, we are talking about a certain physical immaturity, but we are also talking more about the mental approach," Morton added. "Young players think they're working hard but they're not. Learning to compete play after play and down after down and start after start is something that the players have to learn. And that's our greatest concern."

Offensively, the Badgers return seven starters and 18 letter winners, including quarterback Bud Keyes. Morton's offensive scheme is simple.

"We will basically be an option team, but we will do anything we have to to get the ball in the end zone," Morton said.

Purdue hoopster Lewis out for six weeks

WEST LAFAYETTE, Ind. (UPI) — Purdue basketball guard Troy Lewis has broken his left foot, school officials said Thursday. Lewis broke the foot Tuesday in a pickup game and will be out at least six weeks. He might be able to begin practice Oct. 15, officials said. Lewis was voted all-Big Ten last year by United Press International, when he averaged 18.8 points and 4.4 rebounds per game. He has led Purdue in scoring the past two seasons.

Letters show Davis to blame for delays

LOS ANGELES (LAT) — Los Angeles Coliseum Commission President Alexander Haagen has given his fellow commissioners documents which he says show that Los Angeles Raiders owner Al Davis and not Haagen or the Coliseum Commission is to blame for the collapse of the Coliseum renovation plan last spring. Haagen in a closed commission session Wednesday supplied the other commissioners with copies of letters from three banks that show the banks would not make loans for renovating the Coliseum unless the Raiders provided broad repayment guarantees. "It was Davis' refusal to agree either to post a cash repayment guarantee or, as suggested by two of the banks, extend the team's Coliseum lease beyond its 1991 termination date that was primarily responsible for the loans not being made and the work not going forward, Haagen told his colleagues, according to commission sources. When Davis announced last Friday that he was moving the Raiders, he said that he began to explore such a move only after the Coliseum Commission reneged on its renovation promises to him. He said nothing about refusing to meet any requested bank guarantees.

Leach apologizes for disappearance

TORONTO (UPI) — Toronto Blue Jays outfielder Rick Leach apologized to his teammates for missing a game earlier this week against Seattle, blaming his disappearance on a "strong disagreement" with his wife. Leach appeared at a news conference with his wife and explained their disagreement had been resolved. "It's something that we feel is taken care of. Everything is all right," Leach said. "It was a problem that needed taking care of, and I didn't do it in a very manly or professional manner." Leach's whereabouts were unknown for about 16 hours until he showed up Wednesday morning at a Seattle airport hotel after disappearing Tuesday afternoon from a downtown Seattle hotel. Leach sent his luggage to the hotel lobby Tuesday afternoon and talked to his wife by phone, but never checked out. When he failed to show at the ballpark, Blue Jays officials notified the Seattle police. He missed Tuesday night's game against the Mariners and the American League team's charter flight to Toronto. Leach called his father Wednesday morning and then called his wife at the Seattle hotel to report he was OK and had spent the night at a motel near the airport. "I'm truly, truly sorry that it happened," Leach said. "We both regret what happened. I'm just glad to be back with my family and the Blue Jay family. Leach said theories of his disappearance involving playing time or the release of pitcher Gary Lavelle were off base.

tional job on the kicking game," he said. "If you are a historian of football, you'll find out that early in the season more games are determined by having or not having a good kicking game than anything else. A kicking game normally determines early-season games, and we will place a priority on developing all phases of the kicking game. Tennessee does a great job on it each year."

Not to be outdone, Tennessee Coach Johnny Majors — calling Iowa's traditional strength is a balanced attack.

"They've got a good balance overall, and they play very good defense," Majors said. "They're good against the run, and they're very versatile on offense. That's the mark of a good football team — a good balance."

Majors agreed with Fry on the importance of a solid kicking game.

"IT DETERMINES many games, definitely a lot of them," the 10-year Tennessee coach said. "Winning builds confidence — it's a factor in every ball game. It's something you call 'hidden yar-

Vols' Francis has Iowa ties

By Dan Millea
The Daily Iowan

The family of Tennessee quarterback Jeff Francis has several connections past and present to Iowa, but they say they'll have no mixed emotions when the two schools meet in the Kickoff Classic Sunday.

Francis' brother, Scott, a former defensive tackle at Augustana (Ill.) College, is a second-year graduate student in chemistry at Iowa. The brothers' parents also attended the Big Ten school and first met while in Iowa City. But despite those connections, the family members say they'll be cheering wholeheartedly for Jeff. "I've got to go with the blood," Scott said. "I'm going for Tennessee all the way."

Scott's father, Charles, also said he and his wife, Carol, will have no trouble deciding who to root for in New Jersey.

"THAT'S A STUPID question," Charles Francis said when asked who he hoped to see win the Kickoff Classic. "I'll give you two guesses."

Charles and Carol Francis will be watching the game at Giants Stadium. "They go to all the games," Scott Francis said. "I'll be watching the game on TV here."

The Francis family doesn't put too much emphasis on the Iowa connection. Scott did say he'd like to see the Hawkeyes win all but one game this year, but Charles said he's more of a Cyclone fan than a Hawkeye backer. "I hate to tell you the truth,"

Charles laughed, "But I'm an Iowa State man."

Charles earned his undergraduate degree at Iowa State before getting his masters degree in mathematics at Iowa, and he said he never lost his loyalty for the Cyclones.

In fact, Charles said the fact Iowa didn't heavily recruit his son didn't bother the family. "We looked at what would be best for the kid," he said.

Jeff nearly went to Illinois but ended up at Tennessee due in part to the help of yet another family member.

"My twin brother Chet lives in Tennessee, and he tipped them off (about Jeff's potential)," Charles said. "It really worked out well."

The Hawkeyes have never played in East Rutherford.

Majors and Fry are 17th and 18th, respectively, on the all-time college football coaches' winning percentage chart. In 19 years of coaching, Majors has compiled a .582 percentage (124-88-7), while Fry has registered a .551 mark (150-122-5) in 25 years.

because the NCAA may be guilty of the same type of indiscretion it charges Walters and Bloom with, but for a larger reason.

The NCAA has a huge problem on its hands with major college sports, football in particular. It's gotten out of control, mainly because of the huge amounts of money involved and a human trait called greed.

Scandal after scandal has ripped through the NCAA in the 1980s, from ticket sales for profit at Nebraska to financial payoffs to athletes at Southern Methodist.

The NCAA and the media continually place the blame in these instances on the dishonest individuals involved, but the individuals aren't the problem; the system is the problem.

By laying the blame in this particular scandal on the agents, the NCAA is once again ignoring the true problem. Walters and Bloom are not the disease, they're a symptom, and until the NCAA, coaches and college presidents can come together and agree to reassess the role of sports in collegiate life, more of those embarrassing symptoms will flare up.

them, and I don't want to overlook them, but it's a good time for us to experiment with lineups. They haven't got the support of a Division I program that they should have been getting, but they are able to recruit the Chicago area."

THE HAWKEYES return six players, including co-captains Stacey Diehl and Ellen Mullarkey. Diehl was named a Big Ten all-academic honorable mention last year, while Mullarkey led the team in kills, blocks and service aces. "Ellen and Stacey are two great seniors," Stewart said. "Ellen is a real leader in practice and Stacey, by her virtue of being a walk-on and working very hard and sticking with us for four years, has really earned the respect of her teammates."

One question, though, is whether the players on either team can get mentally up for a scrimmage. But Fitzgerald discarded any notion of lackadaisical play.

"It's not going to make a damn bit of difference to the players," he said. "They'll play hard, and they'll want to win."

Alternative tunes highlight weekend

By Jeff Rynott
The Daily Iowan

Those looking for a chance to experience the Iowa alternative music movement will get their wish this weekend when the Iowa Alternative Music Festival strikes at Gabe's, 330 E. Washington St., on Friday night and at The Central, 201 N. Linn St., on Saturday night.

The performances feature many of the bands who recorded on The Iowa Compilation album on the local Southeast Records label. The bands come from Iowa's college towns, according to guitarist Doug Roberson, one of the performers on the album and the prime force behind drawing the album and festival together.

"IT WAS JUST an idea... I started talking to other bands," Roberson said about gathering interest in the project.

According to Roberson, last summer was a good one for the alternative scene that resulted in a good following being built up throughout the state. The bands were able to raise the money to record The Iowa Compilation, after which Roberson brought up the idea of the festival to feature those bands that had performed on the LP.

"We'll use the album for promotional purposes," Roberson said. "We'll make money from both (album and concerts), but the idea is mainly to showcase the bands."

The national spotlight has crept slowly towards the Iowa music scene: Full Fathom Five, one of the bands involved in the album/festival, has recently been signed to a New York City label to release a full-length LP, while bands such as The Hollowmen and Swinging Teens are gaining more popular acceptance.

Roberson's own band, The Shy Strangers, had been a local success and was moving towards a wider audience before it disbanded after a final concert performance in Iowa City this week.

THE END OF The Shy Strangers is not the end for Roberson, however; he and a few other of the band members have reformed as The Dangtrippers and will play at The Central on Saturday night. Both bands have recordings on the compilation LP as well.

As for the album itself, The Iowa Compilation is a good overview of Iowa alternative music. There are large doses of psychedelia and Replacements-style garage sounds, as well as genuine goofiness in The Eclectics' musings on children speaking back to their elders in "When I Was Young," while David Brooks' "Music Boy" features backing instrumentation by "Dog Boy" and "Dish Pig." Highlights include Full Fathom Five's psychedelic "Why Their Faces Are So Worn" and Jenny Lystrup's vocals on Cursing Birds' "Popsy Sally," about a life going to waste.

The LP is usually interesting and a good showcase for some real talent. If the live performances are as good, the Iowa Alternative Music Festival should likewise prove a success.

Live music scene looks good for fall

By Jeff Rynott
The Daily Iowan

Live music will once again be an integral part of the local bar/club scene, and a variety of styles and sounds will be available to match the tastes of Iowa City patrons.

Gabe's, 330 E. Washington St., offers mainly alternative music but also features live jazz on Thursday nights and will present acts ranging from blues to reggae throughout the semester.

Coming highlights at Gabe's include the first night of the Iowa Alternative Music Festival tonight, Flaming Lips, a popular Oklahoma City alternative band, Sept. 2 and The Slugz and The Service, Sept. 5.

Highlights at the Dubuque Street Brewing Company, a Midwest band-oriented nightclub, located at 313 S. Dubuque St., include visits by the popular Minneapolis group The Wallets on Aug. 29, the perennial Iowa City favorites Kool Ray and the Polaroids Sept. 4-5.

National acts with regional openers are the mainstay at The Central, 201 N. Linn St.

Coming highlights include the second night of the Iowa Alternative Music Festival Aug. 29, Nixon and Skid Roper, Sept. 4.
