Every few years or so, as often as they can, the Ironmen get together in Iowa City to tell all the old stories. "You remember how bowlegged old Ham Snider was," Erwin Prasse, the team captain, is saying. "Well, my mom and dad saw me play just once, in our last game against Northwestern. My folks were bakers, and neither of them knew a football from a loaf of bread. Anyway, that Northwestern game was tough. Everybody seemed to get hurt. We were all pretty beat up. So on one play they're helping old Ham off the field, and my mother looks down at him, and she's horrified. 'Oh my God,' she says. 'Look what they've done to his legs.'"

Prasse, Al Couppee, Chuck Tollefson, Wally Bergstrom and George (Red) Frye are having dinner at a restaurant called The Lark. When they were all Ironmen on the UI's legendary 1939 team, the same spot was known as Ken and Fern's, and it was a pretty tough roadhouse where they would get into real trouble from time to time. "Hey, Tolly," says Couppee,

"remember the night the town marshal chased us out of here after we broke that slot machine and we hid in the parking lot of that funeral home?"

THEY ARE MEN in their late 60's or early 70's now, still robust and fun-loving, and they are as close as any old teammates can be. "Some call it love," Couppee says. Al was the quarterback and he still pretty much calls the signals at these casual reunions. Couppee, a semi-retired newspaper columnist and broadcaster, articulates perhaps better than the others their experience together so many years ago.

"It's a shame," he says in his big voice, "but my perception of things as a kid back then was so shallow. I couldn't see beyond the surface of things. There was so much happening at once, such a combination... the Great Depression, people in breadlines... I can remember the desperation in my mom's face when it came time to buy coal. The whole state was in a bad way. Farms were closing down, people were hungry. Then, out of a clear blue sky came this one little group of people with just the right chemistry — our team. There was an almost hysterical relief at having something at last to grab hold of, to believe in. And... we had Nile..."

THE OTHERS NOD, their ruddy faces beaming in the soft blue light of the restaurant. "Yes, Nile," says Prasse. "You know, I think about him all the time. I think of him whenever I get in a conversation about players from our time and the ones now. Everyone says how much better they are today. Sure, but I say Nile could've played anytime. He was so smart, he'd have found a way to play. I was never envious of Nile — he wouldn't let you feel that way — until I saw this big scrapbook his

Report: Hospital costs run high at UI

By Anne Keivin
The Daily Iowan

Among Iowa's large hospitals, UI Hospitals may rank No. 1 — in terms of high cost.

According to a report issued by the Iowa Health Data Association, UI Hospitals had the highest average case charge last year — $5,237. The average cost per case at large hospitals statewide was $4,039, according to the report, which was prepared by the Health Policy Corp. of Iowa.

But high rates reflect the quality of health care and the wide "scope and breadth" of services UI Hospitals offer, Director of Information Services Dean Borg said.

"There is no other hospital in Iowa like this one," he said. "We are unique."

Because the UI Hospitals act as teaching facilities as well as a hospital, Borg said, costs are higher than other large hospitals in the state.

"The patient care charges in major teaching hospitals like ours have included the cost of teaching and clinical research," he said. "There's a cost involved in the education role that a teaching hospital plays."

Another reason for high patient care costs, according to Borg, is the severity of cases the hospital receives.

"Frequently, we hear that the toughest cases come to University of Iowa Hospitals," he said, citing the hospital as "one big intensive-care unit."

"The severity of tertiary-level patients that are cared for at University Hospitals cannot be measured by a case-mix index," he added, referring to the report.

Donald Dunn, president of the Iowa Hospital Association, agreed that UI Hospitals are not easily comparable to other hospitals of equal size in the state. Dunn said he believes the report by the private Health Policy Corp. is accurate but misleading.

Student leaders hope tuition increase can be moderated

By Scott Hauser
The Daily Iowan

UI student leaders said Monday they are hoping they can convince the state Board of Regents not to approve a 7.5 percent tuition increase, but said the recommended increase has a good chance of passing.

"If we're serious about accessibility to this university, we should start critically looking at tuition increases," UI Liberal Arts Student Association President Gordon Fischer said. "We're somewhat hopeful that the full amount Mr. Richey proposed will not be accepted."

Last week regent Executive R.

Wayne Richey indicated he would recommend a 7.5 to 10 percent increase for resident tuition and a slightly larger increase for non-resident tuition when he puts the board's meeting information together this week.

AS THE BOARD office representative, Richey recommends actions to the nine-member board and the board votes on or amends the recommendation.

The board will consider the increase proposal at its Sept. 16 meeting in Iowa City and will vote on a tuition proposal at its October meeting.

The 7.5 percent increase would

School board candidates set for election

By James Cahoy

An announcement for a write-in campaign by an Iowa City man and an endorsement of candidates by the Iowa City Education Association were among the last minute developments in the race for the Iowa City School Board.

Walter Schnelle, 2828 Brookside Drive, said he decided last week to run for the school board as a write-in candidate for the one-year term seat currently held by David Woodrirk.

"A lot of my friends encouraged me to run," Schnelle said. "And the fact is, a lot of things do need to be done in the district."

Schnelle said the fact that there was only one candidate, Frances Malloy, currently running for the seat also encouraged him to enter the race.

Malloy, contacted Monday night, said she had heard of Schnelle's intentions to run for the board, but said she did not know enough about him to make any comment on his decision to enter the race.

SCHNELLE, a former principal at three Iowa City Schools — Longfellow Elementary, Lemme Elementary and Grant Wood Elementary — said he thought the major problem the district had to face was the lack of communication efforts by the board.

"I think the major problem I see with the district is the problems of communication between the board and the teachers," Schnelle said. "Better communication efforts have to be made."

Schnelle admitted he has an uphill battle as a write-in, but said he plans to mount a serious campaign to win.

"You bet I do (want to win)," Schnelle said. "I wouldn't be in the race if I didn't plan to."

If Schnelle wins, he would become the first write-in candidate to join the school board since 1983, when current Iowa City School Board members Ellen Widiss and David Woodrirk both won in the same manner.

THE DECISION BY Schnelle to run brings the total number of announced candidates in this year's school board race to ten.

Two of the candidates, Betsy Hawtrey and Connie Champion, both received the endorsement of the Iowa City Educational Association (ICEA) over the weekend.

Hawtrey and Champion received more than 70 percent of the vote from ICEA members. Figures on the other candidates vote totals were unavailable.

But ICEA President Karen Woolums said the vote was more against the current incumbents than for Hawtrey and Champion.

"Why it was those two who were endorsed I don't really know," Woolums said. "I'm more aware of it being a vote against the incumbents running for re-election."

Three incumbents — Randall Jordison, Craig Gjerde and Kathy Pennigroth — are among the eight candidates running for three three-year term seats up in this year's election.

WOOLUMS SAID THE vote sent a "loud and clear" signal of the teacher's dissatisfaction with the way the district is being run.

"People are not pleased with what is going on in the district," Woolums said. "There is a lot of unhappiness among teachers with the board, and I think the vote shows this."

The ICEA, which is the negotiating union for all Iowa City School District teachers, reviewed all of the candidates individually before deciding on its endorsement, Woolums said.

Woolums said she did not think the ICEA's decision to endorse candidates would hurt the union's position during next year's contract negotiations.

"The candidates we don't endorse may want it to hurt us," Woolums said. "But I think both sides will want to take a positive approach when bargaining begins next year."

Burge plagued by stinking stairwells

By Joseph Levy
The Daily Iowan

A potent stench gripped some of the stairwells of Burge Residence Hall this weekend, forcing some students to grip their noses.

"It reeked," Burge resident Rolie Johns said Monday.

Johns said he first noticed the pungent odor Friday when he was taking luggage down a stairwell to go home for the weekend.

"It got worse as I walked down the stairs," he said. "I took to the elevator then."

The smell was unmistakable, Johns said, adding that it doesn't take an expert to identify the smell of raw sewage.

"It's the only thing that it could be," he said.

A Burge Hall maintenance employee said the weekend fumes weren't a first-time occurrence, and have permeated the first floor of the building on other occasions.

The unidentified employee said the smell sometimes invades the hall when maintenance personnel avoid flushing the building's drains.

"It's a messy job," she said. But Burge Hall Coordinator Corey Farris said he wasn't sure a sewage backup was the correct diagnosis of the smell.

Farris said he hadn't noticed any unusual odors in Burge this weekend, but added sometimes

Hart set to discuss scandal with Koppel on 'Nightline'

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Former Sen. Gary Hart, D-Colo., will say he is sorry for his actions during his disastrous 1988 presidential campaign and will stick to his decision to withdraw from the race, it was reported Monday.

Hart is scheduled to appear on ABC News "Nightline" Tuesday night to discuss his plans. Hart abandoned the race in May after the Miami Herald broke a story that he spent a weekend with model Donna Rice while his wife was out of town.

A comment last month by one of Hart's former campaign leaders kindled speculation Hart would re-enter the presidential race, and Hart cut short a vacation in Ireland and returned home. The prospect of a revived Hart campaign drew negative reaction from political observers.

Cable News Network, citing unnamed sources, reported Hart will not resume his campaign for the Democratic presidential nomination and will make the

Gary Hart announcement "when he appears tomorrow night on a television talk show."

CNN ALSO SAID he will "apologize for his actions while he was still a candidate."

A spokesman at ABC News Nightline said it had not been told what Hart might say. "It hasn't happened yet," he said.

Hart campaign officials could not be reached for comment.

Hart was the front-runner in the race for the Democratic presidential nomination when he withdrew his candidacy. He abruptly halted his campaign May 8, acknowledging it had been severely damaged by the May 3 newspaper report alleging he spent part of the previous weekend at his Washington home with Rice.

Hart denied there was any sexual relationship between himself and the Miami model, maintaining the two were just friends. Subsequent reports and photos revealed Hart had traveled to the island of Bimini with Rice.

The Washington Post said it had evidence of other Hart liaisons, though, citing Hart's withdrawal from the race, it did not report details.

Grassley to endorse Dole

From DI wire services

Sen. Charles Grassley, R-Iowa, is expected to endorse Sen. Robert Dole of Kansas for the Republican presidential nomination later this week, aides said Monday.

Aide Tom Synhorst said Grassley is slated to appear with the Senate minority leader Saturday prior to a Republican gathering in Ames. Grassley and Dole also are scheduled to travel together throughout the state to generate support for the 1988 Iowa caucuses, Synhorst said.

Synhorst said he does not know when Grassley will announce his endorsement but indicated it may occur when the two politicians appear together.

Meanwhile, Vice President George Bush is favored by nearly half the GOP voters in the 14 "Super Tuesday" Southern and border states, but the big winner among the Democrats is "undecided," a Scripps Howard News Service poll showed Monday.

The survey of 1,061 voters in the region conducted Aug. 30 through Sept. 2, showed that among Republicans Bush is the first choice of 48 percent of those who said they planned to vote in the GOP primaries.

Jackson focuses on workers in nomination announcement

By Denise Couture
United Press International

PITTSBURGH — Jesse Jackson announced plans to formally seek the Democratic nomination for president Monday, choosing Labor Day in a traditional blue-collar stronghold to reach out to American workers to help him win the 1988 race.

The Baptist minister and civil rights activist said he chose Pittsburgh as the starting point of a three-city tour so he could participate in its Labor Day celebration and "be with working people who are the heart and soul of this nation."

He also traveled to Cleveland, where he gave a rousing speech calling for jobs, justice and worker solidarity.

Rep. Louis Stokes, D-Ohio, said he was publicly supporting Jackson's presidential bid and predicted he would win the Democratic nomination.

"He looks so good in the polls," said Stokes. "I think that we may be on the verge of seeing a miracle Jesse Jackson in American politics."

Jackson said his presidential candidacy will help to increase the number of black registered voters and the number of blacks holding public offices.

"If I can be president, your child can be a doctor, a lawyer, a judge, a governor, a mayor, a general, a musician, an artist, a scientist," he said. "All of us can be more than what we are."

Jackson also planned a stop in New York City.

The civil rights leader heads the Rainbow Coalition of minority and ethnic groups and has a solid base of black support, especially in his native South.

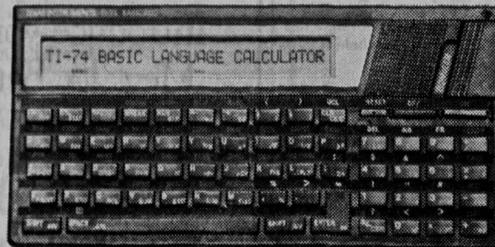

But Jackson said one of the lessons he learned from his unsuccessful bid for the presidency in 1984 was that he must expand his base and build a larger coalition, including blue-collar workers.

"I've learned that by focusing on the issue of economic justice, we can build a coalition sufficient to win," Jackson told a news conference and a group of about 100 supporters at the St. Benedict the Moor Church in Pittsburgh.

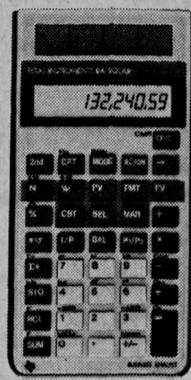

"We're putting a real focus now on broadening the base of the party, expanding the party, which is a key to winning," the Baptist preacher said.

Soviet refusenik gets OK to emigrate

MOSCOW — Jewish dissident Josef Begun, who has been trying to leave the Soviet Union for 16 years, was given permission "in principle" today to depart for Israel, his son said.

Begun, 54, a mathematician and teacher of Hebrew who spent four years in prisons and labor camps, was called to the Ovir Office, which administers visas, early today, Boris Begun said.

"My father was given permission in principle to leave," Begun said.

He was sentenced in 1983 to a 12-year term for anti-Soviet activities, but was released in February after serving four years in a Ural Mountains labor camp and in Chistopol prison.

Lull in Gulf battle tied to U.N. efforts

DUBAI, United Arab Emirates — After one of the most violent weeks to date in the Persian Gulf tanker war, attacks on shipping by Iraq and Iran had ceased by Monday, apparently in conjunction with a United Nations effort to mediate an end to the conflict.

There have been no attacks by Iraq on Iranian shipping since Saturday, while Iran has refrained from hitting civilian ships in the Gulf since Thursday.

The de facto truce in the Gulf came after an upsurge in which Iraq claimed to have hit 15 Iranian tankers in the northern Persian Gulf in one week, while Iran hit seven ships during four days in retaliation for the Iraqi attacks.

The slowdown in fighting is apparently linked with a scheduled visit to the region by U.N. Secretary General Javier Perez de Cuellar.

S. Korean ruling party head to visit U.S.

SEOUL, South Korea — Roh Tae Woo, head of South Korea's ruling party and its presidential nominee in the election planned for December, will visit Washington next week, party sources said Monday.

Roh's trip will be at the invitation of the National Press Club, but Roh also expects to see President Ronald Reagan, Secretary of State George Shultz and other administration and congressional leaders, according to members of the ruling Democratic Justice Party.

Roh is expected to leave Seoul Sunday and spend the early part of the week in Washington.

According to an article in Tuesday's issue of the Korea Times, "Democratic Justice Party officials believe that Roh's meetings with U.S. leaders will help elevate his political stature in the eyes of the electorate at home."

Cockpit checklist increases air safety

SEATTLE — Last month's airliner crash in Michigan that killed 156 people, the second-worst airplane disaster in U.S. aviation history, might have been prevented if a simple cockpit safety checklist had been installed in the plane, the device's manufacturer claims.

Steve Meginnis, executive vice president of the Dexter-Wilson Corp., a Seattle firm specializing in cockpit components and aircraft wiring, said he has repeatedly tried to interest air carriers in equipping their commercial jets with his "mechanical lighted checklist."

"I believe the Northwest crash would not have happened if the mechanical checklist had been in the cockpit," Meginnis said. "One of the critical functions it checks for is the flaps."

Report: Nuclear power safety still poor

WASHINGTON — A consumer group founded by Ralph Nader reported that the safety record of the nuclear power industry was as bad in 1986 as the nearly record bad year in 1985, with nearly 3,000 reported irregularities in nuclear plant operations.

"The total number of mishaps remained virtually unchanged from 1985, suggesting that the industry's poor safety record continues," said the report to be issued Tuesday by Public Citizen, its annual assessment on the nuclear power industry.

"There were approximately 3,000 mishaps at U.S. nuclear reactors in 1986," Public Citizen said.

Exercise may benefit heart patients

DALLAS — Long-term, strenuous exercise lowers blood pressure and heart rates of some coronary patients, a study shows.

Sixteen participants in a yearlong study showed an average 13 percent increase in "cardiac output," the amount of blood the heart pumps a minute, compared to a matched group of patients who did not exercise, according to the report published Monday in Circulation, a journal of the American Heart Association.

The heart patients in the study also generally overcame abnormal blood pressure changes they had experienced in response to exertion, had lower resting heart rates and other indications of improved cardiovascular functioning, the study said.

E. German leader starts visit to West

By William Tuohy
Los Angeles Times

BONN, West Germany — East German leader Erich Honecker began an historic visit to West Germany Monday, declaring that the aim of the two Germanys should be to "live in peace."

The white-haired, 75-year-old Communist leader, making the first such visit by an East German head of government, declared on his arrival, "My most important aim will be to see how both German states can actively work to fulfill their obligation and ensure that war never again emanates from German soil, but only peace."

West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl greeted Honecker at the chancellery as bands played the national anthems of both countries. Nearly identical red, gold and black national flags flew overhead.

HEAVY SECURITY forces were in evidence as Honecker's limousine arrived from the airport. He had flown to Bonn from East Berlin in a jetliner operated by Interflug, the East German airline.

Outside the chancellery, a group of youths who said they were members of Kohl's Christian Democratic Party held banners bearing the words "Germany, United Fatherland." The phrase is from a line in the East German anthem that was banned after the East Germans scrapped plans for reunification in the 1950s.

In Bonn's central Cathedral Square, a score of Roman Catholic demonstrators erected a symbolic replica of the Berlin Wall, which was built under Honecker's supervision in 1961 to keep East Germans from fleeing to West Berlin.

Kohl, in his welcoming remarks, emphasized that the two German states could cooperate, but he urged that improvements be made in the way East Germany observed human rights. In particular, he said, West Germany would like to see the East Germans rescind their order to border guards to shoot anyone trying to escape.

ACCORDING TO KOHL'S spokesman, Friedhelm Ost, Kohl told Honecker, "The use of violence or the threat of violence along the border is not acceptable."

After the meeting with Kohl, Honecker lunched with West German President Richard von Weizsaecker, who declared that Germans in East and West belong to the same country, despite the separation after World War II.

"We belong to one nation, which did not disappear in the ruins of World War II or with Hitler," Von Weizsaecker said. "Our continent is divided but we are united in spirit."

West Germans hope the Honecker visit will improve the lot of East Germans and increase the flow of visitors across the border.

Honecker sees the visit as a significant mark of recognition, at long last, by the West German government. The West German constitution calls specifically for reunification, but Honecker threw cold water on the idea, saying, "It is dangerous and senseless to mourn the German Reich that perished so shamefully."

Kohl, under pressure from conservative supporters, has described Honecker's trip as a "working visit" rather than a state visit.

Schmidt freed after 7 months in Beirut

By Riad Kaj
United Press International

DAMASCUS, Syria — West German hostage Alfred Schmidt was released Monday in Beirut after more than seven months of captivity and the businessman who claims he arranged a $5 million ransom for Schmidt said another German hostage will be freed soon.

"It's wonderful to be free again. At long last," Schmidt, looking tired but clean shaven, said in Damascus. "I was not mistreated."

Rashid Mahroum, a West German businessman of Lebanese origin who had served as an intermediary in negotiations between Bonn officials and the kidnappers, told German television Monday night that he arranged the ransom payment.

A SECURITY SOURCE in Beirut said the $5 million ransom was paid by the West German government and a private company for the release of Schmidt, 47, a biotechnician kidnapped in mostly Moslem west Beirut on Jan. 21.

But officials in Bonn and representatives of Siemens, the electronics firm for which Schmidt works, have denied paying any ransom.

West German officials denied any deal was made for Schmidt and said his release would have no effect on the case of suspected terrorist Mohammed Ali Hamadei, who is being held in a German jail on charges of hijacking a TWA jetliner to Beirut in 1985 and killing an American passenger.

Mahroum also said Rudolf Cordes, the other West German held by the extremist Strugglers of Freedom Organization, would be freed soon. Mahroum last Thursday predicted Schmidt would be freed during the weekend.

SCHMIDT WAS SET free early Monday morning at the entrance to west Beirut's southern suburbs, a caller claiming to speak for the Strugglers of Freedom said in a telephone call to Lebanon's National News Agency.

Schmidt was escorted by Syrian security officers directly to the West German Embassy in Damascus. Sources said he later was driven to the Damascus airport with the West German ambassador and hurried onto a chartered jet for Frankfurt.

But German television reported Schmidt would be taken by a German Air Force plane to the Cologne-Bonn airport, which has a civilian section and a restricted military base.

German officials maintained late Monday night that Schmidt was still at the embassy in Damascus.

Unlike other freed foreign hostages, Schmidt did not hold a news conference.

Pope's visit to bring out the masses

Newsday

Pope John Paul II was touring a West German city in his bullet-proof limousine last year when he tried to open the window and greet crowds along the way. The window had a special lock — but John Paul was determined.

Using the large crucifix he wears around his neck as a wedge, he popped the latch, yanked at the window and triumphantly saluted the faithful.

It was an episode that again revealed John Paul as a folkloric public figure with an ebullient, unpredictable nature and a politician's knack for working a crowd.

But while the pontiff is certain to demonstrate more of the same spunk and star power during his nine-city, 10-day tour of the United States, he may find himself wondering on more than a few occasions if the trip to this contentious corner of the church's realm was such a good idea, after all. Without doubt, millions of American Catholics await the pope's visit with great anticipation.

In Miami, where John Paul begins his tour on Thursday, the event promises to all but shut down the city. Schools will be closed, bank hours curtailed, trials postponed, major thoroughfares designated off-limits. The Miami Herald is assigning 50 reporters and 18 photographers to the story and will have a helicopter standing by to shuttle film from the site of an open-air Mass to Herald offices on Biscayne Bay.

One Herald reporter said, "God knows how many good stories will never see the light of day because there is nobody here to cover them."

French wary over Chad involvement

Los Angeles Times

PARIS—French troops shot down a Libyan bomber over the capital of Chad Monday, prompting more uneasiness in Paris over France's growing involvement against its will in an escalation of the war in Central Africa.

The bomber, a Soviet Tupolev-22, was blasted by an American-made Hawk missile as it joined two other Libyan bombers on a punitive raid of Chad in retaliation for a Chadian invasion and seizure of a military base in Libya two days earlier.

The violent exchange reflected the failure of France to control the military ambitions of President Hissen Habre of Chad. It was sure, in fact, to increase French irritation with the United States. French newspapers reported that French officials believe that American officials, hoping for the humiliation of Col. Moammar Gadhafi of Libya, were encouraging the escapades of Habre.

ACCORDING TO the French Ministry of Defense, French forces fired at the bomber before it could release its bombs over N'Djamena, the capital of Chad. This action, the ministry said, "conforms to the nature of the defensive employment" of French troops in Chad. When the first bomber crashed, a second Tupolev-22 turned back, failing to release its bombs.

But, the Chadian Embassy in Paris said, a third Tupolev-22 dropped five bombs over the crossroads town of Abeche, 440 miles northeast of N'Djamena. One bomb hit Abeche's newly extended military airstrip, killing two civilians and damaging the airstrip extensively.

Although the Libyans caused no damage in N'Djamena, they were bellicose in their statements. Libyan radio warned all civilian aircraft against "approaching or entering Chadian airspace as they will be exposed to danger." The radio urged all foreign diplomats and civilians to leave N'Djamena at once for their own safety.

Siamese twins survive skull-dividing surgery

By Mary Gabriel
United Press International

BALTIMORE—Doctors said Monday they were "slightly encouraged" by the condition of 7-month-old Siamese twins whose skulls were separated in delicate surgery, but they cautioned it is too soon to tell if the twins escaped brain damage.

Mark Rogers, director of pediatric intensive care at Johns Hopkins Hospital, who reviewed the twins' condition Monday, said he was "slightly encouraged they are doing well." But Rogers said it will be several weeks before doctors can determine if the babies will have normal brain function.

Physicians gave the twins a 50-50 chance of surviving the operation. The boys were in critical but stable condition Monday as they rested in separate cribs for the first time since their birth Feb. 2.

Twin brothers Patrick and Benjamin Binder of Ulm, West Germany, were separated in a 22-hour operation that ended early Sunday.

The twins were born joined at the back of the head and sharing a major vein, but they had completely separate brains, doctors said.

"We are very gratified that they survived surgery," said Rogers, noting surgeons, to control bleeding, had to sharply lower the infants' body temperature and deliberately stop their hearts before their heads could be separated.

The parents of the boys, Josef, 36, and Theresia, 20, will not talk to reporters or release photographs of their sons because they have a contract with the West German photo magazine Bunte.

GO FROM COLLEGE TO THE ARMY WITHOUT MISSING A BEAT.

The hardest thing about breaking into professional music is—well, breaking into professional music. So if you're looking for an opportunity to turn your musical talent into a full-time performing career, take a good look at the Army.

It's not all parades and John Philip Sousa. Army bands rock, waltz and boogie as well as march, and they perform before concert audiences as well as spectators. With an average of 40 performances a month, there's also the opportunity for travel—not only across America, but possibly abroad.

Most important, you can expect a first-rate professional environment from your instructors, facilities and fellow musicians. The Army has educational programs that can help you pay for off-duty instruction, and if you qualify, even help you repay your federally-insured student loans. If you can sight-read music, performing in the Army could be your big break. Write: Chief, Army Bands Office, Fort Benjamin Harrison, IN 46216-5005. Or call toll free 1-800-USA-ARMY.

Vote today

Area residents have the opportunity to make an impact on education in the Iowa City community by casting votes in today's school board elections, which involve a record number of candidates. Nine candidates — three of them incumbents — are vying for four district seats.

People should take the time to vote — this election affects everyone, not just those residents with children. Every year the number of voters declines — only 773 of the more than 40,000 registered voters took part in last year's election.

Today's elections involve a variety of issues, many of them critical to the future of local education. School board members will be making decisions on curriculum, facilities and expenditure of the Phase III funds coming to the district from the Iowa Legislature. Perhaps of greatest importance is the widespread concern about teacher morale, staff evaluations and the quality of communication between parents, teachers and administrators.

Voting is a special prerogative in our society and one that should not be taken lightly. At the local level especially, since every vote really does count. In today's elections, voters have the opportunity to choose among a diverse field of candidates and affect a variety of local issues. Take the time to vote.

Great man

The latest college football issue of Sports Illustrated features an article about Iowa football great Nile Kinnick Jr., the 1939 Heisman Trophy winner after whom the UI football stadium is named.

To the people and fans of his time, Kinnick seemed to embody all that was best about the tradition of American college football — as well as the fine traditions America stood for as a whole. Not only was he a brilliantly talented athlete — the star of the "Ironman" squad — he was a proficient student and an articulate, sensitive human being. When Kinnick met his death in 1943 on a training flight in the Caribbean, everyone associated with the football legend, and even those only familiar with the man through his athletic accomplishments, felt the world had lost a truly great man.

And indeed, a truly great man is what the world lost that year. Kinnick was not simply a jock who could talk. He was, in the truest sense of the phrase, a future statesman. Upon completion of his Heisman Trophy acceptance speech, he was credited with delivering one of the most coherent and generally inspiring speeches that many had ever heard — in any field. He was not simply an athlete, but rather a great man with morals, compassion and sound ideals — then he was a great athlete.

The preceding description of Kinnick seems a far cry at best from what football, as well as college athletics in general, now stand for. Present day athletics have been marred by the same wash of cynicism and shoddy ethics that typify all that Americans should not stand for. The lure of professional contracts for big money, under-the-table kickbacks to players and staff, players suspended for drug abuse — have all served to shift the emphasis from ideals that should matter to those that take a backseat to money and big business.

As the fall sports season begins at the UI, we should keep in mind what Nile Kinnick symbolized. We should remember that our sports reflect on us and that winning and losing still aren't as important as how the game is played.

Long way to go

First, the good news: The situation is improving. Now, for the bad news: On average, working women's salaries in 1986 were only 70 percent of their male counterparts' earnings.

According to a new Census Bureau report, women in the workplace narrowed the perpetual wage gap between themselves and men by about 12 percent in the years from 1979 to 1986. This trend is likely to continue, the bureau said, since younger women — those in the 21-29 age group — were found to be earning approximately 83 percent of what men earned.

This encouraging news results from the fact that more and more women are moving into previously male-dominated fields, such as business, accounting and law, which traditionally pay higher salaries.

The lingering wage gap, however, should remind people that some very real inequalities remain deeply ingrained in our society. For instance, the Census Bureau found that anyone — male or female — working in female-dominated fields can expect to earn much less than an individual employed in "integrated or male-dominated occupations."

Furthermore, the bureau's report contains statistical data which seem to substantiate women's claims of sex discrimination. Casting doubt on the argument that lower female wages reflect the tendency of women to have interrupted work histories, the report found even women with continuous work records still only earned 69 percent of their male counterparts' average salary.

As with most other attempts at gaining deserved social justice and equity, the response to this report should be two-fold: Satisfaction with the victories, but also an increased dedication to the inevitable battles yet to be fought.

Drop the point

To the Editor:

I can only shake my head and wonder at Scott Raab's reactionary article on abortion The Daily Iowan, Sept. 1. If private control over the means of production is capitalism, what is private control over the means of reproduction? To me, women's control over their own bodies begins with responsible birth control. Raab himself admits that abortion doesn't "represent responsible birth control." Control ends with pregnancy.

As for the "slaughter of the innocents," Raab's argument, to "... look at the world around you, where the innocent are slaughtered every day, outside of their mothers' wombs ..." is faulty. Please, let's drop this point. The Right to Lifers can just as easily say, "How can you care about impoverished peasants in Central America if you don't even care about the lives of unborn children?"

The real issue is why women don't want the children they've conceived. I will not touch on the specific, but will generalize on two broad reasons. First, for the poor, poverty presents obstacles for providing adequate care for children. For the rich, having an abortion is a matter of convenience.

I account abortion as a sin, but not the sin of murder. The most rabid of Bible thumpers have no grounds to label women who have had abortions as "murderesses." Raab's polemic against the Right to Lifers seems to portray them all as simple-minded fanatics clutching Bibles to their breast in self-righteous outrage. I hardly fit the description.

Gerhardt E. Goeken

Final authority?

To the Editor:

I would like to respond to "The real issues of abortion" by Scott Raab (The Daily Iowan, Sept. 1). I don't consider myself a "pious Christian" or an "embeccle ethicist." I do know that I am not a morally "enlightened screamer" or "clinic bomber" and that I don't print outraged letters to the editor with crayolas.

First, I wonder how you came to be the final arbiter in deciding what the "real issues" of abortion are. The issues as you stated may be the real issues for you; they are not the real issues for everyone. It shouldn't be too difficult to see that there are opposing world views behind the different positions. Among most Christians the value of human life, born and unborn, is indeed a — if not the — central issue in the matter. I'm not absolutely certain when life begins either, but based on the available evidence, I've concluded that it's long before birth. In any event, I prefer to avoid tragic mistakes like genocide and nuclear war. In my opinion, are closely related to feticide to place it in the same category of senseless destruction of human life.

So abortion predates Roe vs. Wade. Homicide and rape predate any known legal decisions regarding them. Are they therefore justifiable also?

In short, some of your assumptions are highly questionable, some of your premises are silly and your entire argument is rather useless — although it may have been of therapeutic value to you personally to spit out such vituperous, pseudo-intellectual nonsense.

I challenge you to discuss the issues with a real, live, reasoning Christian to help you gain some perspective, balance and depth. So, from the products of one woman's conception to that of another ...

Save the 'Hawkeye Shuffle'

Hey sportsfans, here's the solution to the "Save the Field House" movement that has garnered the support of any UI student who has ever touched a basketball.

For the uninitiated, the Field House Armory, home of six of the eight Field House basketball courts, has been scheduled for demolition in 1989 so the UI can build a new psychiatric hospital there.

Bunk.
Bunk again.

When I came to the UI as a freshman, one of the first buildings I visited was the Field House. As the late-evening sunlight filtered through the cathedral-like window at the west end of the facility, highlighting the large hanging Hawkeye, I knew I had entered the Mecca of pick-up basketball.

It was a far cry from the YMCA in Jackson, Mich. Eight games going

By Joseph Levy

Digressions

at once — and full-court games at that. Even my dad was amazed. I was going to like it here, yessir.

I'M NOT THE GREATEST basketball player. I miss more lay-ups than the Hawks do free-throws. But I love to run, and run you can in that facility.

Huff. Puff. Backpeddle. Tear this place down to build a psycho ward? That's crazy.

Most of the people who play at the Field House are a lot like me. Good athletes and mediocre players, all of them trying to relieve tension UI style.

The Field House is usually packed with sweat-covered basketball players during evenings. I can pretty much guarantee each and every one of those drenched guys (and gals in some cases) agrees with my proposal for solving the conflict with UI Hospitals.

Tear down UI Hospitals and construct a multi-million dollar addition to the Field House. That's the ticket.

I CAN SEE IT already. Ten more basketball courts — cheaper and easier to maintain than UI Hospitals — which garbles up more than $200 million annually.

A brilliant move from tertiary health care to tertiary basketball Hawkeye style.

Huff. Puff. Backpeddle. Add some racquetball courts for those who aren't into roundball, some classrooms and offices to keep the ROTC folks happy and some more Nautilus weights for the hefty.

An improved facility like this seems in line for a university that is billed as a liberal arts institution.

Liberal arts?
Backpe— Gasp. Cough.

Take a look at the west side of the Iowa River. It's more expensive than the rest of the UI. It's all medical buildings. It's all newly built. It's all expensive. And it's almost out of control.

IN THE NAME OF liberal arts education I propose that we at the UI consider what course we want to set for our university. If it's new hospitals we want, let's tear down the useless buildings on campus — not the ones we use — and build there. We could start with Jessup Hall.

Huff. Puff. Backpeddle. Don't slow down the Hawkeye shuffle.

Digressions are comments from Daily Iowan staff members. Joseph Levy is a UI staff writer.

Drugs — the American way?

At the movie house this weekend you'll find a new public service announcement, featuring actor James Woods warning you about crack, cocaine's big little buddy.

"If you're listening to me," Woods begs as he fondles the vial of pure evil, "please ... don't even try it." Underneath his mug are the words "The Thrill Can Kill." I tell you, I had goose bumps on top of my goose bumps. It's not everyday that a second-rate actor pleads with me to abstain. But it's getting close.

For decades, America has "solved" its drug problems by having celebrities mouth nonsense and by trying to scare folks away from feeding their heads. You might say that so far the campaign has failed; we spent about $100 billion last year on illegal drugs.

MAYBE WE AREN'T being warned by the right stars. Maybe the "facts" we're presented with aren't sufficiently terrifying.

Or — and this is only wild speculation — maybe deeper reasons exist for this "epidemic" of drug abuse.

Let's start with the most obvious: drugs feel great. People do drugs, and have always done drugs, because drugs enrich our experience of living in the world. If you don't believe me, watch a beer commercial. Let me know if you see anyone who's not grinning like a chimp.

Call me, too, if you come up with a society — any society anywhere anytime — that didn't use mind-altering substances for something like social lubrication, religious ritual or emotional escape from reality.

BUT WHY, IN THE "greatest" nation ever, with the "highest" standard of living ever known on planet Earth and the "best" educational system in the world — tell me, with all this splendid reality around us, why do we still use drugs for fun and escape?

Maybe we're searching for that perfect beer commercial high: effortless ecstasy. We're certainly taught to expect happiness to come from mindlessly swallowing what we're handed. The doctor doesn't explain the "miracle drug"; she prescribes, we ingest.

Sleep problems? High cholesterol? Not horny enough? Don't worry. Don't do anything. They're working on it, a simple blue pill.

We watch TV and learn, over and over, that work stinks, that fun time is Miller Time; the job is misery and joy is getting loaded together after the whistle blows. We learn that happiness is our reward for enduring work. And happiness equals a state wherein the least amount of effort is required — twist on up, pop a cork, cook dinner in a spoon — to get the furthest away from everyday life.

SAY, MAYBE EVERYDAY life isn't what it's cracked up to be. Some segments of U.S. society, the poor and oppressed, have always turned to and died from drug use. Black and native Americans were way ahead of the rest of us in fighting despair with chemicals. But no one cared about drug problems until white boys and girls started using. Why would the children of the privileged do such a thing?

Could it be an educational system that rewards sheepish conformity and rote regurgitation? Not oppressive enough? How about an economic system that preaches getting and staying ahead by any means necessary? Where moral values are a one-day-per-week item detached from the "real world" of profit and war? Supported by a thrill-per-second media that swaddles us from birth in a cocoon of lust, artificial laughter and artificial violence, until reality is only a relative concept?

Nah, these things wouldn't lead anyone to drugs. Anyway, they're too complicated. Maybe if Michael J. Fox told us not to. Or Madonna. Yeah, that's it. Meanwhile, kick back and pop a cold one. Or six. You've earned it.

Besides, it's the American way. You wouldn't want a bunch of clear-headed, clear-eyed citizens questioning the big stuff, would you?

When maintenance employees pour sulfuric acid in drains to clear them, the emitted odor can get intense.

"Sometimes when they pour stuff down an individual student's drain there is a smell," he said.

Residence Services Maintenance Director Wayne Graeve could not be reached Monday.

Burge resident Melissa Palmer said she too has been plugging her nose in certain areas of the building.

"It's pretty easy to notice," she said. "It's not real strong in any one place, it's just kind of lingering."

One Burge resident said the smell does center in one particular area — the men's bathrooms.

"Guys don't know how to flush toilets, I guess," Stacy Smith, a freshman living in Burge, said, adding the smell was "pungent."

"When I'm down there I use the bathroom," she said. "Every toilet in the bathroom smells like when you leave a toilet unflushed for a long time."

Hospitals

"It's very understandable that the average cost at University of Iowa Hospitals is higher than elsewhere," he said.

UI Hospitals have complete teaching and research programs that boost expenses, but also provide better care, Dunn said. Costs are also higher because the hospital specializes in difficult-to-treat cases from around the state.

"The acutely ill patients with the most specialized kinds of health problems are cared for in Iowa City," Dunn said.

Tuition

raise full-time, resident undergraduate tuition to about $1,612 for an academic year and would raise non-resident tuition to about $5,267 per academic year.

Last fall the board approved a 12 percent increase for resident tuition, raising it to about $1,500 for an academic year, and a 20 percent increase for non-resident tuition, raising it to about $4,900 an academic year.

UI Collegiate Associations Council President Mike Reck said the increase has a "very, very good chance" of being approved, but said several of the regents expressed concern about tuition increases when he met with them over the summer.

HE SAID THE 7.5 percent "signals dramatic accessibility" problems for the state's poorer families because the increase comes on top of a series of increases approved by the state which exceed leading economic indicators.

"It exceeds every indicator of a student's ability to pay," Reck said. "At the same time, we've seen no increase in financial aid with the exception of work-study."

According to a report compiled by the CAC last fall, disposable income in Iowa has increased more than 19 percent in the first five years of the 1980s, while resident tuition at the UI has increased 43 percent over the same period.

The figure for disposable income is from the August 1986 issue of the U.S. Department of Commerce's "Survey of Current Business."

Both Reck and Fischer said they planned lobbying efforts with the regents before they vote on the proposal in October.

Ailing Jazz great Herman faces eviction from house

By Robina Luther
United Press International

LOS ANGELES — Jazz great Woody Herman, weakened by emphysema and congestive heart failure, faces eviction today from his Hollywood Hills home, which has been auctioned off by the Internal Revenue Service.

Herman, 74, who has won several Grammy awards, spends most of his days sleeping, unaware of the pending eviction, his daughter, Ingrid Herman Reese, said Monday.

Herman's hillside Hollywood Boulevard home, once owned by Humphrey Bogart and Lauren Bacall, was auctioned by the Internal Revenue Service in 1985 to recover part of $1.6 million in payroll taxes and penalties, which the IRS contends he owes from two decades ago.

The eviction notice ordering the legendary big band leader and clarinetist to leave the home by 5 p.m. today came last Thursday. But Herman's attorney, Kirk Pasich, said he hopes to reach an agreement with the landlord, William Little, or block the eviction in Superior Court.

"Given Woody's contribution to jazz — he put out over 100 albums and received awards and proclama-the best musicians in the business through the years."

Reese said her father, born in Milwaukee, was frustrated by the IRS' sale of his house in 1985, which he found out about by accident, shortly before the auction.

The IRS auctioned the three-bedroom home for $99,800 in 1985 but Reese and others said it and the connecting lot are worth at least $325,000.

In addition to the home, Herman's album royalties have been confiscated by the IRS. The agency contended the money was owed for personal income tax returns not filed for 1964-1966 by Herman's manager.

Herman maintained the IRS wrongly calculated his tax bill, not on those lean times but on his peak years in the 1940s when he earned more than $1 million a year.

Herman, a big band leader who helped pioneer the "bebop" jazz movement in the 1940s and 50s, is known for the jazz hits "Woodchopper's Ball" and "Caldonia."

Herman's band, the hard-swinging Thundering Herds, played a wide spectrum of tunes for five decades, from old hits like "Early Autumn" and "Four Brothers" to works by a range of composers that included John Coltrane, Frank Zappa, Chick Corea and Thad Jones.

tions — you hate to see him basically penniless," said Pasich, who is providing free legal services.

Reese, 46, who lives with Herman, said she has not told her father, who now weighs less than 100 pounds, about the impending eviction. "I don't think it would do him any good to be upset."

"That's no way to treat a legend in American music," said Ed Flynn, 74, a former band leader and friend of Herman's. "He's trained some of

Brooke was shortchanged at Princeton

An Ivy League education is usually prized but critics of Princeton University have devalued the diploma awarded to 1987 graduate Brooke Shields, claiming the actress was shortchanged in the math and science areas. After Life magazine printed Shields' college transcript, showing strong language marks but few math courses, the university was panned by former New York Times sports writer Leonard Koppett in a Times op-ed article. Koppett insisted that Shields should have been required to take more math and science courses. University spokesman Justin Harmon countered that Shields went beyond requirements for her major in French.

Huskies humble Hawkeye spikers

The largest crowd for an Iowa volleyball match in three years — 1,004 — saw the Hawkeyes fall to the Nebraska Cornhuskers in the finals of the Carousel-Mazda Classic at Carver-Hawkeye Arena Saturday night.

To make the finals, Iowa defeated Oregon three games to one on Friday night, all four games being close. Jenny Rees, with 13 kills and a .500 attack percentage, and Ellen Mullarkey, with 21 kills, led the Hawkeyes.

It was a different story in the championship match. It took Nebraska four games to hand Iowa its first loss of the season.

In the first game, the Cornhuskers dominated with 17 kills to the Hawkeyes' nine, winning 15-6. After Iowa went down 15-5 in the second game, Hawkeye Coach Sandy Stewart decided it was time for a change.

"WE PUT KARI HAMEL in as setter," said Stewart, a Nebraska graduate. "We thought that we needed someone to take charge and take control. That wasn't happening with Janet Moylan."

"I know that I have to be patient with Janet because she is a freshman. She needed to take a mental break to concentrate on the game, and she did a much better job when she came in."

Paper plane deadeye sails off with new car

By Marc Bona
The Daily Iowan

They came, they flew and one conquered.

The fans came to Carver-Hawkeye Arena Saturday night in droves, but it was hard to tell whether they came to see the Iowa Hawkeyes face the Nebraska Cornhuskers in the Carousel-Mazda Volleyball Classic's championship match or for a chance to win a car.

And as soon as the Oregon Ducks swept the Miami (Ohio) Redskins in the consolation match, the spotlight fell on the fans and their paper airplanes. Whoever was skillful enough to sail their airplane through the open sunroof of a 1987 Mazda RX-7 automobile stationed on the Arena floor would walk out with the keys.

And with the spotlight came the deluge. Approximately 2,000 paper gliders in an array of colors inundated the car.

After all was said and done and the debris had been cleared, officials from the Iowa sports promotions office counted about 25 planes that sailed through the car's sunroof. Of the 25, the first two "legal" planes (those weighing 1/2 ounce and less) were pulled from the pile.

The winner, with the evening's first aerodynamic toss, was Casey O'Connor, who buried her face in her hands when Iowa Sports Promotions Director Rick Klatt announced her name and fellow spectators cheered.

The 36-year-old O'Connor, an Iowa City resident who is an outreach counselor for United Action for Youth in Iowa City, drives a 1978 Toyota with 100,000 miles on the odometer.

"I'M VERY EXCITED," O'Connor said, still trembling minutes after the announcement. "I couldn't believe it was true; it's got to be a dream."

See Car, Page 4B

The change worked, as Iowa captured the third game, 17-15.

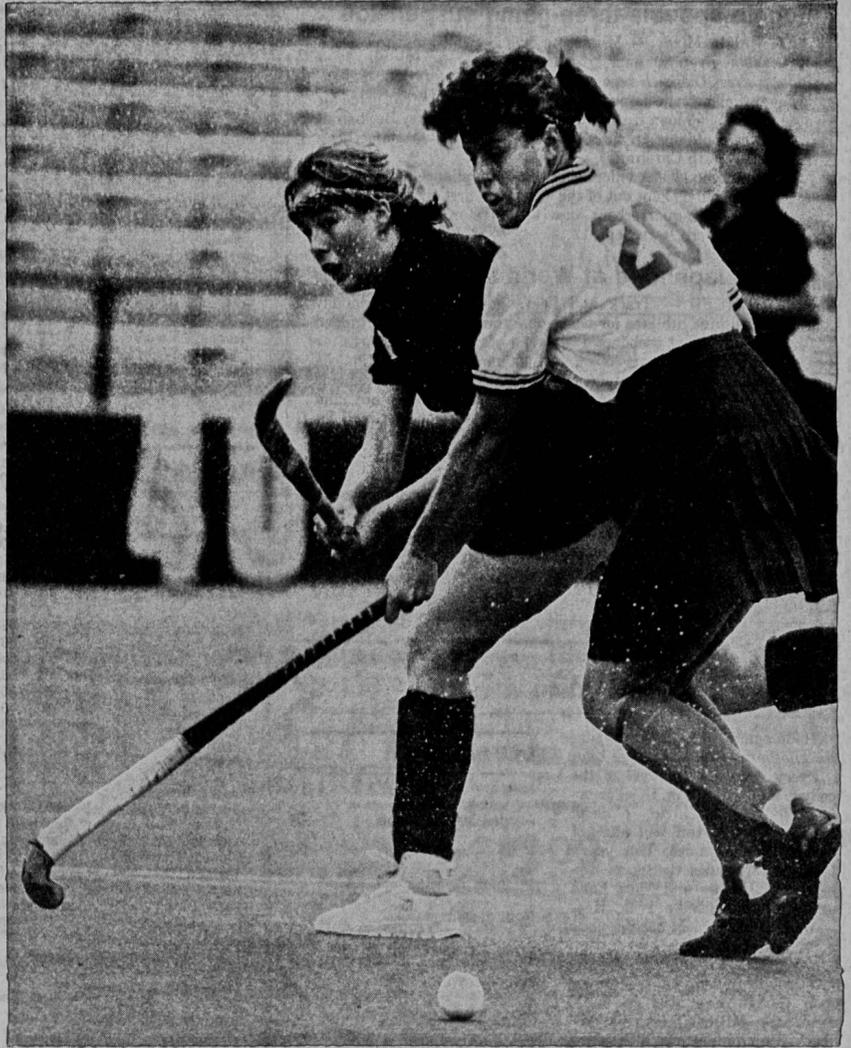

"The team came out aggressive in the third to match Nebraska's aggression," Stewart said.

IN THE FIRST minutes of the fourth game, it looked as if the Hawkeyes were going to stage a comeback. They led by five points, but Nebraska came back stronger to win the game and match, 15-8.

Stewart attributed the loss to the

Michael will be fired today as Cubs' boss, sources say

By Randy Minkoff

CHICAGO — Gene Michael, who earlier Monday said he didn't want to manage the Chicago Cubs next year, will likely be dismissed by the team today, sources said.

Cubs President-General Manager Dallas Green was not told of Michael's decision to go public with a desire not to return.

Sources told United Press International Green was upset about Michael's surprise announcement and that an interim manager would likely be appointed to finish the season. Green had no comment on the report, the Cubs' flagship station, WGN radio, reported.

John Vukovich, bypassed when Michael was hired in the summer of 1986 to replace Jim Frey, is the likely candidate to finish the season. Vukovich, the club's third-base coach, is also a top choice to manage the team next year.

MICHAEL'S CONTRACT expires at the end of the season and he told a local radio reporter after the Cubs' 3-2 loss to Pittsburgh Monday he made up his mind last week not to return. "About a week ago, I decided I didn't want to come back," Michael said. "The players and coaches have been outstanding. They tried hard and battle hard." Green had said he would determine whether he would want Michael back at the end of the season.

"I wanted to judge him on what he did on the final 40 games of the season," Green said late last month. "We haven't made any decisions yet. We'll wait and see what happens at the end of the year."

GREEN CLEARLY HAS been displeased with the output of the Cubs, who stand at 68-68 in fifth place in the National League East. The club is en route to setting an NL record for most home runs but is last in the league in pitching.

Michael and Green have argued privately during the season regarding the playing of certain young players.

Iowa takes twin wins, but coach still irked

By G. Hammond-Kunke
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa field hockey team waltzed past two inferior opponents this weekend, but Coach Judith Davidson was far from satisfied with her team's performance.

Despite thumping Miami of Ohio Friday and Northern Illinois Sunday by identical 6-0 scores, Davidson labeled Iowa's play "very lackadaisical," adding, "at this point, there is no self-discipline. People are just not reacting to each other. We have a lot of shoring up to do before we go out east."

Davidson was also unimpressed with the individual play of her Hawkeyes.

"Liz Tchou is the only real spark on the field, and even her decision-making could be improved," Davidson said.

TCHOU, A SENIOR from Medford Lakes, N.J., was in tune, scoring seven goals while frequently dominating the play in the opponents' end during both games.

"We were really looking forward to just getting out and playing," Tchou said. "I may have scored a lot of goals, but really it was the team that forced the corner shot opportunities."

Against Northern Illinois it was Erica Richards who got the Hawkeyes going when she alertly flicked in a rebound off a Huskies defensive player.

Tchou unleashed a blistering corner shot on a Michelle Murgatroyd pass for Iowa's second goal. Melissa Sanders made the score 3-0 on a feed from Barbara deKanter after moving down the right wing.

THE HAWKEYES continued to dominate the action in the second half as Northern registered its only shot on goal with 10 minutes left.

Iowa took advantage of Northern Illinois' inexperience when freshman Silke Meier scored off a trick play. Tchou purposely missed a corner shot, then Sanders picked up the ball and passed to the open Meier.

Tchou closed out the scoring with the final two goals.

"The team was kind of slow out there today," Tchou said. "The execution was slow. We're just not playing as a unit yet. We've got to work hard this week. We need more intensity in practice, and it'll start showing up in the games."

In the season opener Friday, Miami didn't manage a shot on goal while the Hawkeyes took 26. Iowa's first three goals of the season came from Tchou, the first two on passes from Murgatroyd.

IT LOOKED AS IF the Edmonton Oilers' duo of Wayne Gretzky and Jari Kurri had donned Iowa uniforms on the fourth score. Richards took control of the ball, passed to Sanders, then crossed to her left before getting the ball back on a "give-and-go" and scoring on a hard slap shot.

Richards scored her second goal of the game on another flashy pass from Sanders to close out the onslaught.

"I saw an opening when the defenseman came off and dodged the goalie," Richards said. "Overall, we lacked good passing and we weren't as aggressive to the ball in the second half."

"We were concerned coming into the game whether we'd be able to score. With only one goal in the second half, it's obvious we need to do a better job."

DAVIDSON DID HAVE some positive things to say about her squad. "Missy Sanders played fairly well. She moved well in front of the goal. And, as a team, 80 percent of the time we did take the

Iowa drops from Top 20 poll

By Charlie McCarthy
United Press International

NEW YORK — Following a tough 23-22 defeat to Tennessee last week, the Iowa Hawkeyes dropped out of the Top 20 in the first regular season ratings Monday by United Press International's Board of Coaches.

Oklahoma maintained its position as college football's No. 1 team by securing 744 of a possible 750 votes and 44 of 50 first-place votes.

Nebraska, the Sooners' Big Eight foe, stayed at No. 2 with 646 points and one first-place ballot. No. 3 UCLA and No. 4 Auburn each advanced a spot while No. 5 Ohio State fell two positions.

Louisiana State, on the strength of an opening day victory at Texas A&M, advanced four places to No. 6.

Following LSU was No. 7 Miami, No. 8 Michigan, No. 9 Penn State and No. 10 Clemson.

ROUNDING OUT THE Top 20 were No. 11 Florida State, No. 12 Arkansas, No. 13 Washington, No. 14 Arizona State, No. 15 Tennessee, No. 16 Notre Dame, No. 17 Alabama, No. 18 Pittsburgh, No. 19 North Carolina and No. 20 Southern California.

The final three teams were all new to the Top 20. Texas A&M and Florida also dropped from the rankings.

The Aggies, who shared the pre-season No. 10 ranking with LSU, lost 17-3. They entered last Saturday's game with a 14-game home winning streak — the longest such stretch in Division I-A.

"It was great to win," said LSU's Mike Archer, the youngest coach in Division I-A at 34. "And it was especially nice to win it in a place like Texas A&M where you know you will have a tough game."

"But we beat Texas A&M (in Baton Rouge) to start the season last year and turned around and lost the next week (to Miami of Ohio). We don't want to do that next week (against Fullerton State)."

LSU, UCLA, MIAMI, Penn State and Ohio State also received first-place mention.

Oklahoma routed North Texas State 69-14 and Nebraska blasted Utah State 56-12.

College Football Ratings

NEW YORK (UPI) — The United Press International Board of Coaches' Top 20 college football ratings, with first-place votes and record in parentheses, total points (based on 15 points for first place, 14 for second, etc.), and last week's ranking:

1. Oklahoma (44) (1-0).....	744	1
2. Nebraska (11) (4-0).....	646	2
3. UCLA (1) (1-0).....	543	4

18. Pittsburgh (1-0).....	50	2
19. North Carolina (1-0).....	30	2
20. Southern Cal (0-0).....	17	2

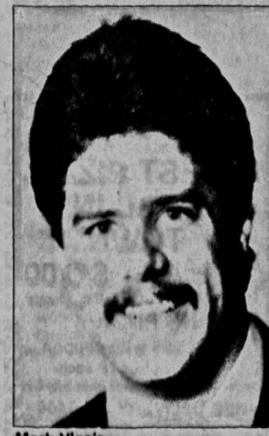

Others receiving votes: Boston College, Colorado, Georgia, Iowa, Michigan State, Oklahoma State, Syracuse, Texas A&M and Wyoming.

"We made our early scores easily," said Coach Barry Switzer, whose squad faces Nebraska Nov. 21 in Lincoln. "Thereafter, we did not play as well as we are capable. We lost our intensity and we made too many physical errors. We could not beat a good football team playing that way."

UCLA downed San Diego State 47-14, and Auburn dropped Texas 31-3 to move ahead of Ohio State, which was idle.

Miami, playing its first game since losing last year's national title to Penn State in the Fiesta Bowl, beat Florida 31-4 to move from ninth to seventh.

Vlasic sticks as Charger QB; other ex-Hawks not as lucky

Mark Vlasic

By Marc Bona
The Daily Iowan

Labor Day was a time for most people to relax, but not for a handful of NFL rookies who anxiously awaited the announcements of final roster cuts.

Former Iowa quarterback Mark Vlasic, a fourth-round choice of the San Diego Chargers, was listed as being in good standing with his club.

"He's fine," a Charger spokesman said. "He's still with the team."

But after the day's transactions were complete, several former Hawkeyes were not among the fortunate ones.

Jeff Drost, an eighth-round selection of the Green Bay Packers, was waived by the team Monday.

Teammate Dave Moritz, an offensive guard, was placed on injured reserve.

"He can't flex his arm all the way, and he can't straighten it," said Scott Berchtold, Packers' assistant public relations director.

Chris Gambol met a similar fate. A third-rounder for the Indianapolis Colts, Gambol has been placed on injured reserve. Sources said a back injury is ailing Gambol.

THE ROSTER AXE also came down on former Hawkeyes who were trying out as free agents with NFL clubs. Jay Norvell was cut by the Chicago Bears Monday, while cornerback Ken Sims (St. Louis) and wide receiver Dave Moritz (Chicago) were dismissed from their respective teams last month.

All but Norvell and Moritz were with the Hawkeyes last season.

Foggie appeals three-game suspension

ST. PAUL, Minn. — Minnesota has appealed a three-game suspension given to quarterback Rickie Foggie, the St. Paul Pioneer Press Dispatch reported.

Foggie had been declared ineligible by the school for one game for accepting a $356 loan from offensive coordinator Larry Beckish in 1985 so he could buy an airline ticket home for his grandmother's funeral in South Carolina.

However, the NCAA enforcement and compliance office recommended Foggie be kept out of the Gophers' first three games.

Back-up junior quarterback Alan Holt will start in place of Foggie against Northern Iowa Sept. 12.

Nine suspended at World track meet

ROME (UPI) — Track and field's governing body Monday suspended nine athletes for using unauthorized drugs and added the masking agent probenecid to its list of banned substances.

Given two-year suspensions were: high jumper Gabriela Mihalcea and sprinter Miheela Chindae of Romania; shot putter Jean-Louis Demarne and hammer thrower Eric De Smedt of France; and Norwegian shot putter Lars Arvid Nilsen. All were detected for steroid use.

Sue Howland, a javelin thrower from Australia, and French sprinter Antoine Richard, were identified as violators last week and also received two-year bans. West German javelin thrower Thomas Menne and Turkish long jumper-triple jumper Temel Erbek received three-month bans for using stimulants.

Under new rules ratified last week by the International Amateur Athletic Federation, these athletes cannot appeal their suspensions.

On The Line

Hello again sports fans, it's time for another season of On The Line. Every week for the rest of the college football season, three members from our fearful, I mean fearless, sports staff will attempt to predict the games. This year's lucky trio includes Co-Sports Editors Eric J. Hess and Marc Bona and staff writer Mike Triik. Hess will undoubtedly win because he's a St. Louis baseball fan. Last year's winner, Dan Millea, will not be defending his crown even though he's still on staff. Evidently Millea feels he has reached his pinnacle as a prognosticator, or he just doesn't care. Every Friday, game picks by Hess, Bona and Triik will be presented along with those from an "extra special" guest picker. Plus the readers' totals will be added. Last year's list of superstar pickers included such notables as ex-football star and "Police Academy" veteran Bubba Smith and Chris "back-back-back-back-back" Berman.

White, McAllister lead Spartan win

By Bob Tripi
United Press International

EAST LANSING, Mich. — Quarterback Bobby McAllister completed 10 of 15 passes for 103 yards and Lorenzo White carried 22 times for 111 yards and two touchdowns Monday night to help Michigan State to a 27-13 non-conference victory over Southern Cal.

It was the season-opener for both schools.

The loss snapped the Trojans' 17-game winning streak over Big Ten teams.

Southern Cal was haunted by two fumbles and three interceptions in the game.

The Spartans took a 17-6 lead at 1:54 of the third quarter when McAllister followed the block of White and ran 9 yards to the end zone. The drive was set up by John Budde's recovery of Trojan quarterback Rodney Peete's fumble at the Southern Cal 25 on the first possession of the second half.

TD at 9:44 of the quarter on a 1-yard dive. The run followed a 44-yard pass from McAllister to Andre Rison.

John Langeloh raised the Spartans' lead to 27-6 with 7:08 left in the game when he kicked a 43-yard field goal.

The Trojans scored their only touchdown on a 26-yard pass from backup quarterback Kevin McLean to Randy Tanner with 4:13 remaining.

Michigan State opened up the scoring when they drove 65 yards in eight plays on the first possession of the game. White, who had 50 yards on the drive, capped the march at 3:49 with a 9-yard scoring off left tackle.

Southern Cal scored its first points off a 23-yard field goal by Quin Rodriguez at 7:56 of the quarter. His kick was set up by Michigan State returnman Todd Krumm's fumble at the Spartan 38.

The Spartans responded on the next drive with a 48-yard march, capped by Langeloh's 27-yard field goal at 4:34.

Upshaw renounces contract proposal

By Will Dunham
United Press International

WASHINGTON — NFL management, facing the imminent prospect of a strike deadline, Monday unveiled a contract offer featuring a roster increase of two players and "liberalized" free agency.

But Gene Upshaw, executive director of the NFL Players Association, said the 11-page proposal, delivered to union headquarters, failed to address the union's concerns. The union is scheduled to announce its strike date today.

"There is nothing in there that I can see that's encouraging whatsoever," Upshaw told United Press International. "This is a framework for settlement? I've looked at it, I've gone through it and I've read it and they didn't even come close to hitting the mark."

JACK DONLAN, executive director of the NFL Management Council, said in an interview with UPI that the proposal "moves a long way toward treating the issues we've heard from them. What it does is it says, 'Fellas, here's the outline, here's the parameters.'"

The offer reduces the draft-choice compensation required of a team signing a free agent. But it denies the players' demand for unrestricted free agency without compensation or a team's right of first refusal. The proposal by management also would:

- Increase NFL team rosters from 45 to 47 players.
- Establish a three-member review board to handle harassment complaints of union representatives.
- Improve player pension benefits and health and life insurance plans.
- Upgrade severance benefits for veterans.

Cornhuskers' superior size and agility. "We were intimidated by their blockers, very intimidated," Stewart said. "With blockers of 6-1 and 5-11. It kept us on our toes."

Nebraska's key performances came from Kathi DeBoer, Virginia Stahr and Lori Endicott. DeBoer, voted the most valuable player of the tournament, led the Cornhuskers with 23 kills. Stahr and Endicott, both named to the all-tournament team, also played outstanding volleyball. Stahr added 18 kills to the Nebraska attack and Endicott supplied the team with numerous sets.

DeBoer offered her insight on Nebraska's strengths in the match. "We really worked on our ball handling and defense and had a good block."

Nebraska Coach Terry Petit was optimistic about the future of Iowa's volleyball team.

"I think that Iowa is doing a nice job with their team," he said. "They have a nice volleyball team."

But it wasn't a dream, and today — after paying the necessary taxes and licensing fees — the car, worth $17,993, will be hers. But what is ironic about O'Connor's prized throw is the fact she used to work for Iowa women's athletics.

In 1978 O'Connor worked on the set-up crew for women's athletic events, according to Linda Hackett, associate director of Iowa women's athletics.

Fans cheered again when O'Connor slipped into the driver's seat of the automobile and hit the horn a couple of times.

Tom Gust of Iowa City won a gift certificate to the Iowa Hawk Shop for being the second person to land a plane through the sunroof.

KEN WILLIAMSON OF Carousel-Motors in Iowa City said he was happy with the outcome of the promotion, which began as his idea.

"I think it went real well," he said. "I was pleased. We won't know how successful it was until we see how the season goes. We hope we get some people here to see volleyball. Here we have a chance to support women's athletics."

"I should point out that those who didn't win, I've got some for sale," Williamson added.

ball to the endline."

However, Davidson is concerned about how Iowa will fare this week against three eastern powers: Connecticut, Boston College and New Hampshire.

"We're still searching for our strongest combination," Davidson said. "We're holding the ball too long in our deep defense."

"We made an awful lot of mistakes, especially with too many soft, diagonal passes. The more experienced teams will know to pick those passes off. Our execution will have to be sharper. If we're satisfied with our play at this point, it's going to be a very painful season."

IOWA NOTES

- Goalies Karen Napolitano and Andrea Wheland were credited with one-half shutout in each game.
- Murgatroyd and deKanter each tallied four assists and Sanders recorded three in the two games.
- Miami of Ohio went home winless after losing 3-0 against Northern Illinois on Saturday afternoon.
- Iowa outshot its opponents 56-1 in the two games.
- RosAnna Salcido, an Iowa all-American last season, was in the stands to cheer on her former teammates.

"The season looks promising," Salcido said. "As a team, we don't want to peak too soon. Next week will be a real test."

Produced, directed and starring Sir Laurence Olivier, RICHARD III is the most perfect translation of a Shakespeare play to film. With the talents of Sir Cedric Hardwicke, Sir John Gielgud and Sir Ralph Richardson, and the distinguished actress Claire Bloom, Olivier created a Technicolor masterpiece that proved his contention that great Shakespeare can be brought to the screen as great entertainment.

Rugby provides chaotic fun

By Hugh Donlan
The Daily Iowan

Rugby is a rough game, played without pads on mud fields and often filled with uninhibited contact.

According to Scott "Scooter" McDonough, vice-president of the Iowa rugby football club, "It's the only sport where teams beat each other up and then go drink beer after the game."

Not only is a rugby player in constant danger of injury, but the game requires strength, speed, finesse, mental toughness and, most importantly, teamwork. Players must also possess an intense desire for competition.

IF YOU HAVE NEVER seen a rugby match or even if you have, there is little chance you will understand the game because it is so confusing.

But once you learn the rules, rugby is a very simple game. Each side attempts to put the ball on the ground beyond the opponent's goal. The opponent tries to stop them by tackling the player with the ball.

Each side has 15 hardy players: Eight burly forwards and seven speedy backs. The forwards try to gain possession of the ball through skill and brute force. The backs advance the ball with speed and cunning, passing the ball to one another or back to the forwards.

WHEN A PLAYER crosses the opponent's goal, he grounds the ball and has scored a "try," worth four points. A conversion kick, worth two points, is then attempted.

Two other types of kicks put points on the scoreboard. A drop kick can be taken from anywhere on the field and is worth three points if it splits the uprights. If the referee rules that an infraction has been made, he awards a penalty kick to the opposition, also worth three points if successful.

PLAY IS CONTINUOUS until someone scores, breaks a rule or propels a ball into touch (which means out-of-bounds in rugby-speak).

To bring a ball back into play, a "line-out" is formed. The forwards line up in single, parallel lines, five yards from the point where the ball was put into touch. The ball is thrown into the line-out by an opponent of the player who last touched the ball or carried it into touch.

CONTRARY TO THE untrained observer's first impression of a chaotic mass of bodies hurling against one another, the game does have rules.

Any player may run with the ball or kick it forward. It is illegal to pass the ball forward, fumble it forward, lie on it or hold on to it after a tackle. Only the player with the ball may be tackled. If he is, the nearest player picks up the ball and continues play.

Minor infractions result in a scrum, and blatant blunders result in a penalty kick for the opponent.

THE SCRUM IS composed of each side's forwards interlocked in formation, groaning and straining to force the other side off the ball. The two packs attempt to gain possession of the ball by hooking it with their feet — there are no hands allowed in a scrum.

Each game begins with a kick-off taken from the halfway line. After the ball travels 10 meters, the first player from either side is free to run, pass or kick the ball. Opponents are free to tackle him, pull the ball from his grasp or immobilize him. The players keep the match going for 40-minute halves, with only a five-minute halftime.

WHAT DRAWS PEOPLE to play this chaotic sport?

"Comradery," McDonough said, "In another town, a rugby player will give you a place to sleep, even if he doesn't know you, just because you are a rugby player."

"The game is fun," said Jim "Slick" Penosky, president of UIRFC, "and I like the social aspect of it. There are a lot of good people that play."

When asked about injuries caused by the sport, McDonough explained there were "a lot of hangovers," and added that he had not had any.

BUT THE SENIOR from Grinnell, Iowa, pointed out that the rest of the club was not injury-free last year, citing one dislocated collarbone and one broken collarbone. Other than that, there was nothing more serious than the aches, pains and muscle soreness that nag all athletes.

Rugby players have a dedication and devotion to their sport that is often overlooked in the world of amateur athletics. "Rugby is a way of life," McDonough said, "kind of like Jimmy Buffett."

Iowa rugby will hold its first home match against Clinton RFC Sept. 27 at 1:30 p.m. on the field near the Hawkeye Apartments.

Gilbert races back to conquer Becker have to serve better than he did Monday to have a chance.

NEW YORK — Brad Gilbert came back from a two-set deficit Monday night to upset Boris Becker and gain the quarterfinals of the U.S. Open.

"This is as good as it gets," said Gilbert, who was down a service break in the third set before rallying for a 2-6, 6-7 (4-7), 7-6 (7-4), 7-5, 6-1 victory over the fourth seed.

Earlier, John McEnroe maintained his composure to advance to the quarterfinals, and feisty Hana Mandlikova allowed her temper to carry her out of the championship.

McEnroe, two days after incurring $17,500 in fines and a possible two-month suspension, was tame and well in control during a 6-4, 7-6 (7-2), 6-3 victory over ninth seed Andres Gomez.

In the quarterfinals, McEnroe, the eighth seed, will face defending champion Ivan Lendl, a 6-2, 7-6 (7-2), 6-4 winner over Anders Jarryd. McEnroe leads their series 14-12 and said he would JIMMY CONNORS, despite a flareup of his foot problem, also reached the quarterfinals for the 14th time in 15 years.

Defending women's champion Martina Navratilova and six-time titlist Chris Evert won in straight sets on the most hectic day of the championship at Flushing Meadow. This is the 17th consecutive year Evert has made it to the quarterfinals, although she was tested for just less than two hours before beating Manuela Maleeva, 7-5, 6-4. Navratilova defeated 14th seed Catarina Lindqvist, 6-0, 6-4.

After Becker led 3-1 in the third set, a pair of double faults helped Gilbert get back the break. Becker then double-faulted twice in the second game of the final set and Gilbert took a 5-0 lead.

"The good thing is I'm 19, not 32, and I will be back," said Becker, who had 15 double faults against only two aces and totaled 50 unforced errors.

Cosby's salary best in show biz

NEW YORK (UPI) — Bill Cosby is the world's highest paid entertainer, earning an estimated two-year total of $84 million in 1986 and 1987, far outdistancing America's highest paid business executive, Lee Iacocca, Forbes Magazine said.

And Forbes, whose Sept. 21 issue contains its first listing of the "top 40" entertainers, said Cosby may make as much as $100 million in 1987 alone if you take into account the discounted value of syndication rights to this year's "The Cosby Show."

Chrysler's Lee Iacocca will take home just slightly less than $21 million, stock options included. Forbes pointed out that only a handful of business executives make more than $5 million a year, whereas nearly 40 entertainers will bank at least $10 million during the 1986-87 period.

They include Sylvester Stallone, Bruce Springsteen, cartoonist Charles Schulz, Eddie Murphy, film maker Steven Spielberg, Madonna, Whitney Houston, Michael Jackson and Johnny Carson. Forbes declared them "more than entertainers — they are businesses."

Not only do they create wealth for the entertainment industry and their business sponsors, they create wealth for the nation in exportable merchandize in the form of TV programming, motion pictures, and videocassette and music recordings.

Zevon shows versatility in 'Sentimental Hygiene'

By Jeff Rynott The Daily Iowan

Warren Zevon has been a recording artist since 1969, but few people would ever know it. Zevon, known mostly as an underground and college success ("Werewolves of London") and a sessions player, seems poised for wider acceptance with the release of his new album, Sentimental Hygiene.

Indeed, were it not for Zevon's outstanding vocals and songwriting ability, Sentimental Hygiene would become an all-star album of popular artists. Neil Young, Bob Dylan, Don Henley, Brian Setzer, Jennifer Warnes and Mike Campbell of the Heartbreakers are all on hand to support Zevon's full-throated vocals, and the nucleus of R.E.M. — Peter Buck on guitar, Mike Mills on bass and Bill Berry on drums — serves as his supporting band throughout the songs.

ZEVON HIMSELF jumps from electric to acoustic guitar, from piano to synthesizer, from lead to rhythm throughout the cuts, emphasizing his versatility.

The songs themselves are bound together by the common theme of reconciliation, whether in the national arena ("Sentimental Hygiene," "Leave My Monkey Alone") or the personal one ("Reconsider Me," "The Heartache"). As Zevon sings in the title track, something needed for reconciliation has been lost in the world: "Everybody's had to hurt about it/No one wants to go without it/It's so hard to find it/Sentimental Hygiene."

Zevon grapples with unlikely topics as well, such as a hard driving ode to Ray "Boom Boom" Mancini and a caustic put-down of the current trend of celebrities checking into rehabilitation centers: "Growin' fond of Detox Mansion/And this quiet life I lead/But I'm just dying to tell my story/For all my friends to read."

THE ALBUM MOVES from hard, driving rockers like "Boom Boom Mancini" and "The Factory," to singles material such as the title track and "Trouble Waiting To Happen," to slower, moving pieces in "Reconsider Me" and "The Heartache."

The album concludes on another musical shift with "Leave My Monkey Alone," arranged by funkmaster George Clinton. Zevon's vocal reflections on the fall of the British Empire in Africa and the Mau Mau uprising have obvious parallels to the modern situation in South Africa, and the eerie, "Biko"-like rhythms and choruses help drive them home.

Altogether, Sentimental Hygiene is one of Zevon's finer efforts, and one of the better efforts by anyone so far this year.

Dalton carries Bond tradition

By Kevin C. Kretschmer
The Daily Iowan

James Bond has received a major facelift with the casting of Shakespearean actor Timothy Dalton in the lead role in The Living Daylights. After seven straight outings by Roger Moore, Dalton carries on the tradition of the world's most suave secret agent in the most financially rewarding series in film history.

The series is celebrating its 25th anniversary with the 15th "official" 007 adventure to hit the screens from producer Albert R. "Cubby" Broccoli. Many of Broccoli's relatives hold key production positions on each of the Bond films. The various changes made for this edition should help keep the "family business" together for another decade.

DALTON MAKES A handsome, muscular Bond with all the class of his predecessors, though without the same tongue-in-cheek acting style. This new Bond has an intense, impatient demeanor that gives the film a more serious tone than previous series entries. Though further films with Dalton should produce a slightly more relaxed Bond than in the current picture, this greater solemnity prevents the series from further decline into the sort of self-parody that it had slid in recent years.

The Ian Fleming short story "The Living Daylights" was about Bond being assigned to protect a Russian defector from a KGB sniper. In the film version, however, the sniper has been changed to a female Czech cellist who is the mistress of the defector. Beyond these similarities the film has little, if anything, in common with the original.

concerning diamond smuggling, an opium deal, a private army run by an egomaniacal American expatriate, and Afghan rebels. None of what takes place makes a lot of sense, but then why should it? The plot of a Bond film is designed to allow ample opportunities for assaults on an audience's optic senses, not as an allegory for late 20th century politics.

The script provides plenty of occasions for the special effects teams and stunt crews to deliver numerous — headshaking, amazing — action sequences. This they do with unrestrained flare and considerable success under the hand of director John Glen, who makes his fourth consecutive film in the series. The teaser sequence alone (that bit that occurs before the opening credits) has more action than entire films that try to imitate the Bond formula. One does get the impression, however, that the Bond films might eventually do away with the story line altogether and just feature one long stunt.

RELATIVE NEWCOMER Maryam d'Abo portrays Kara Milovy, the Czech cellist who causes Bond to disregard his orders and rely on his intuition. D'Abo, a rather ordinary looking actress, is not the type usually cast as the female lead in a Bond film.

Timothy Dalton becomes the fourth actor to portray James Bond, 007, the world's most lasting secret agent in The Living Daylights.

Instead of an exotic, self-possessed beauty that catches the secret agent's eye, a rather slight and unworlly young woman attracts 007. Though d'Abo is adequate, she is a prime candidate to enter into the same obscurity that other "Bond Beauties" have experienced.

The Bond series may not be able to go on forever, but The Living Daylights proves that it is not only alive, but thriving. Perhaps, the Bond team cannot go on indefinitely trying to outdo themselves, but it should be interesting seeing them try.

Writer captivates full house

A lead paragraph in a Daily Iowan story on Friday said: "Looking for something a little wild and on the edge this weekend? Mojo Nixon would like to provide it." The Central was a little wild Friday night.

According to Kevin Gibson, who books the acts at the Central, they turned people away at the door — those inside lined the walls and heard such songs as "Jesus at McDonalds," or "Burnin' Down the Malls." "The crowd loved the act," Gibson said.

I missed Mojo and Skid Roper. Instead, I heard Peter Matthiessen read the first chapter of a novel in progress in Van Allen Hall Lecture Room I. He read to what amounted to a full house.

A good reading ought to be a species of theater. The selective process, however, that places a writer behind a typewriter putting words on paper may not be adequate to produce a person who can stand before a crowd and hold them with the combination of narrative line, voice, and word imagery. Matthiessen held his audience.

THE READINGS ARE one of the oldest traditions at the UI put on by the Writers' Workshop. Clubs founded here in the 1890s such as Tabard, Ivv Lane, or Polygon existed so that local writers might read their works to one another. They also competed in their attempts to persuade visiting writers from either coast to spend the night in Iowa City and read their work.

The audience in Van Allen Hall may have been large Friday because Matthiessen came to campus with well established reputations in three areas — as a naturalist, a novelist, and a student in Zen Buddhism.

From a distance Matthiessen appeared medium in height, jogger thin (because of his association with Eastern religion, the word "ascetic" occurs), appropriately dressed for what one might imagine a world famous writer to wear — blue jeans and a khaki bush jacket, and most of all he seemed possessed by a kind of laid-back intensity.

HE HAS A LOW MELODIC voice that flows connectedly from word to word, punctuated by silence for periods. Parts were lost at times due to the lowness of his voice, but frankly, we are not trained to hear a narrative line read to us.

Yet in reading (Matthiessen's voice played the part of his characters) nuance and interpretation can unfold for the hearer, what someone seeing words on paper may never discover.

Frank Conroy, new director of the Writers' Workshop and the host of these readings, said, "People like to come here to read because they know they will have a very attentive and appreciative audience."
