Incumbents defeated in election

Christianson-Szalanski, Hawtrey, Champion win

By James Cahoy
The Daily Iowan

The next Iowa City School Board meeting will see a majority of new members after all of the incumbents running for re-election were defeated in Tuesday's school board race.

Connie Champion, with 2,179 votes, Betsy Hawtrey, with 2,149 votes and Jay Christensen-Szalanski, with 1,249 votes, were the top vote-getters for the three seats with three-year terms up for grabs Tuesday night, according to figures released from the Johnson County Auditor's office.

The losers for the three-year seats included current Iowa City School Board President Randall Jordison, with 996 votes, and board incumbents Kathy Penningroth and Craig Gjerde, with 1,022 votes and 707 votes respectively.

Other vote totals from candidates for the three-year seats included Gary Fischer, with 275 votes, and Linda Dellsperger, with 217 votes. There were 193 write-in votes cast for the seats.

FRANCIS MALLOY, the only name on the ballot for the board seat with a one-year term, won with 1,637 of the votes cast. The auditor's office reported only 889 write-in votes for the seat, despite a write-in campaign by former Iowa City Schools principal Walter Schnelle.

The auditor's office reported that 3,332 people voted in Tuesday's election, or about 7.2 percent of the total registered voters in Iowa City. This represents a large increase over last year's school board election, in which only 775 voted.

Champion, the top vote getter in this year's race, said she was "thrilled" by her win.

"This means that the voters heard my message of more teacher support and better staff morale in our schools," Champion said.

While she said she was sorry none of the incumbents were reelected, she was critical of their past performance on the board.

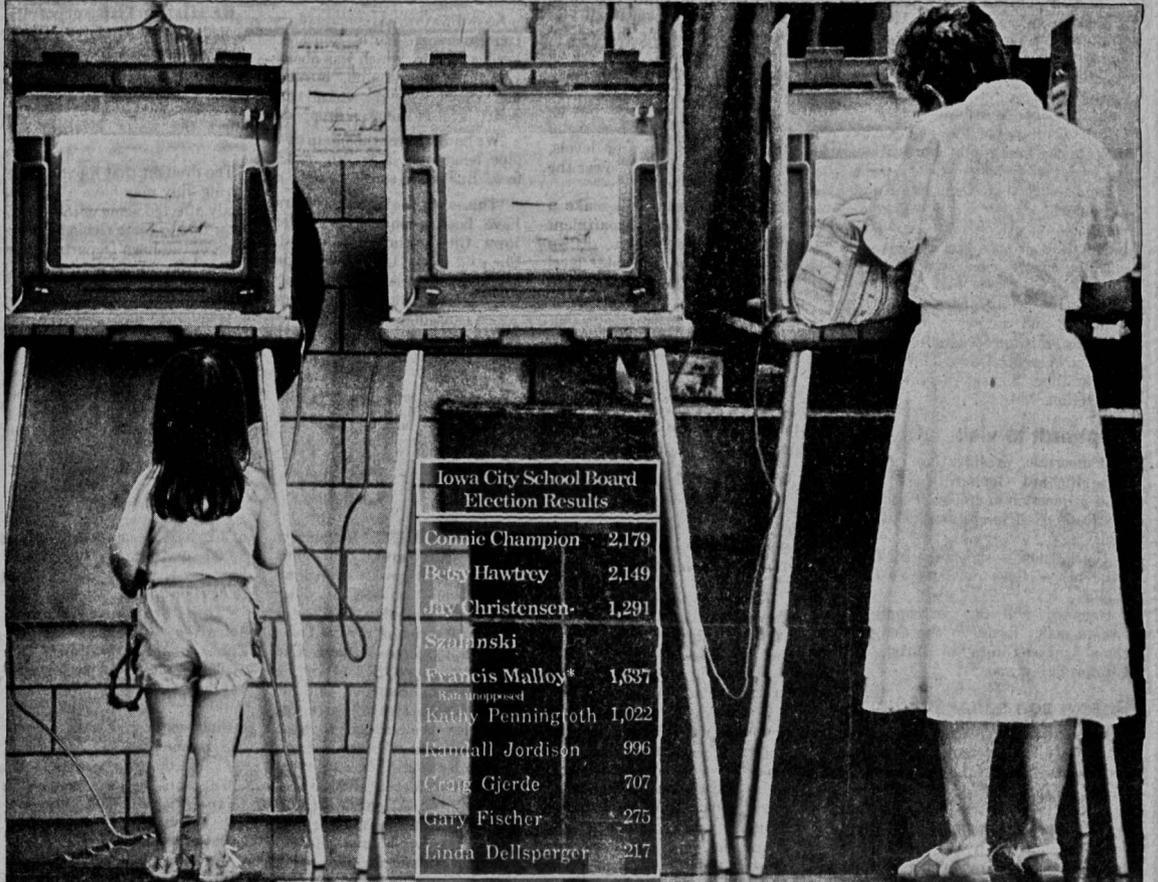

"THEY SIMPLY weren't doing their job," Champion said. "They put in a lot of hard work, but they forgot that 50 percent of their job is people."

Hawtrey said the incumbent's loss was due to the teachers of the district. Both Champion and Hawtrey received the endorsement of the Iowa City Educational Association before the election.

"Teachers were very dissatisfied with the support they were receiving from the board," Hawtrey said. "My number one priority is to turn this communication problem between district employees and the board around."

Hawtrey said she thinks the new board will change some of the old board's policies.

Nile Clarke Kinnick Jr. would have turned 69 this past July 9. He was that rarest of beings — rarer now, lamentably, that ever before — a scholar-athlete, a Heisman Trophy winner and a Phi Beta Kappa. He was a truly humble and compassionate man. "One of the few athletes who could rise to the top without making enemies," teammate Bill Green once said. And he had the soul of a poet. "I flew up in the clouds today — tall, voluminous cumulus clouds," he wrote in his World War II diary. "They were like snow-covered mountains, range after range of them. I felt like an alpine adventurer, climbing up their canyons, winding my way between their peaks — a billowy fastness, a celestial citadel."

KINNICK'S HEISMAN acceptance speech after the 1939 season was so eloquent and touching that the audience at the Downtown Athletic Club in New York was too stunned at first to respond. But then, as Whitney Martin of the Associated Press described the scene, "seven hundred men and women rose and cheered and whistled . . . You realized the ovation wasn't alone for Nile Kinick, the outstanding college football player of the year. It was also for Nile Kinnick, typifying everything admirable in American youth." Wrote Bill Cunningham of the Boston Post, "This country's O.K. as long as it produces Nile Kinnicks. The football part is incidental."

Today, of course, the football part is never incidental with Heisman winners; it's pretty much all there is. And Nile Kinnicks are getting awfully few and far between.

Iowa football in the 1930s kept pace with the national economy. It, too, was in a Great Depression. Under Howard Jones in the early '20s the school fielded some of its finest teams, including the back-to-back undefeated Big Ten champions in 1921 and 1922 that featured such stars as Duke Slater, Gordon Locke and Aubrey Devine. But following a bitter quarrel with members of the Athletic Control Board, Jones left Iowa after the 1923 season and moved first to Trinity College (now Duke University) and then to the University of Southern California where his famous "Thundering Herds" won five Rose Bowl games. With Jones' departure, Iowa football declined. When the school built a new 53,000-seat stadium for the 1929 season, it soon became a monument to bad timing.

IN JANUARY 1930, just before members of the Big Ten were to meet to arrange the schedule for the following season, Iowa was suspended from the conference for alleged recruiting violations. It was reinstated only a month later, but by then 11 members of the team had been declared ineligible and only one Big Ten school, Purdue, agreed to change its schedule to accommodate the Hawkeyes.

High school athletes were shunning the UI, and its teams quickly became an embarrassment to a conference that considered itself the best in the country. Between 1930 and 1938, Iowa won only 22 games, and in five of those seasons the Hawkeyes did not beat a single Big Ten opponent. The teams coached by the unfortunate Irl Tubbs in 1937 and 1938 were 2-13-1. The 1938 team was out scored 135-46 and did not score a touchdown in its last five games.

NILE KINNICK, THEN a junior, had played the 1938 season with what was quite probably a broken ankle. No one knew for certain, because, as a practicing Christian Scientist, he would not allow the injury to be examined or treated. "I used to watch him wince in pain when he punted," says Coupee, a freshman that year. "It was amazing what he put himself through." Kinnick had been all Big Ten as a sophomore in 1937 and broken ankle notwithstanding, the following year he completed 43 percent of his passes (a respectable ratio in the era of unsophisticated passing attacks) and averaged 41.1 yards on 41 punts, fourth-best in the nation. He was healthy again for his senior year, and in a letter to his family just before the start of spring practice he wrote with uncharacteristic bravado, "For three years, nay for fifteen years, I have been preparing for this last year of football. I anticipate becoming the roughest, toughest all-around back yet to hit this conference."

A NEW COACH AND a new system would give him the chance to fulfill the boast. Tubbs had resigned after his 1-6-1 1938 season. His team had gone scoreless against Colgate, Purdue, Minnesota and Nebraska and had just a field goal against Indiana. Football gate receipts had been only $65,000, and the athletic department was in the hole by more than $10,000 — big figures in the Depression. Still, the school was prepared to spend whatever was necessary to hire someone able to reverse the sorry descent of Iowa football.

The choice — for a three-year contract at $10,000 per — was the 38-year-old Dr. Edward N. (Eddie) Anderson, a native Iowan who had coached Holy Cross to a 47-7-4 record the six previous seasons.

Hart won't run for president; admits unfaithfulness to wife

By Steve Gerstel
United Press International

WASHINGTON — Gary Hart announced Tuesday he will not renew his campaign for the Democratic presidential nomination and acknowledged he has cheated on his wife in their 29-year marriage.

Hart also said on ABC News' "Nightline" he made a "very, very bad mistake" in spending a weekend and an overnight boat trip with actress Donna Rice but refused to say whether he had a sexual affair with the honey-blond model from Miami.

"I'm not a candidate for president and I'm not making any plans," Hart said in his first public appearance since shutting down his front-running campaign for the 1988 Democratic presidential nomination.

"I'm not running for president. I have no plans to run for president. I want to be part of the debate," Hart said. "I think it would be silly to go back to Troublesome Gulch (his Colorado home) and hide. I'm not going to do that."

ASKED BY "Nightline" anchor Ted Koppel whether he was leaving the door slightly open, Hart replied, "I'm out."

"I've been given some talent," said the former Colorado senator. "I can't waste those talents. I've got to figure out a way to use those talents. There's one higher office than president and that's patriot. I'm going to make speeches and I'm going to try to have an impact."

He added, "I can make that contribution. That's all I want to do."

Hart, 50, acknowledged for the first time that he had been unfaithful to his wife Lee in their 29-year marriage, which was interrupted by two separations, but flatly refused to say whether he had an affair with Rice.

Koppel asked a grim-faced Hart if he had an affair with Rice, a 29-year-old bit-part actress.

HART SAID HE has refused to answer questions about sexual relationships with Rice and an "outrageous number" of women, most of whom he said he had never met.

But Hart said, "If the question is, if in 29 years I have been totally faithful . . . I regret to say no."

"But I am not going to answer on any specific individual," Hart said.

Extended forecast calls for a chance of showers Friday, no rain with highs in the 60s on Saturday and Sunday.

LASA to fight Bork presence on court

By Paula Roesler
The Daily Iowan

The UI Liberal Arts Student Association voted Tuesday to take measures protesting the approval of Judge Robert Bork's nomination to the U.S. Supreme Court.

LASA will sponsor a petition table at the Union today through Friday and a "Block Bork" rally on the UI Pentacrest Sept. 14 at 12:20 p.m.

LASA wants to educate people about what may happen if Bork's nomination is approved, LASA Executive Associate Tiffany Stimson said.

"Bork would occupy the swing-vote position," Stimson said, adding many key issues could be decided by his vote.

"The U.S. Supreme Court's decision on pro-choice (for women seeking abortions) was only passed by one vote," Stimson said.

LASA PRESIDENT Gordon Fischer, UI Law Professor Burns Weston, a representative from the UI Gay People's Union and a representative from the Emma Goldman Clinic for Women, 227 N. Dubuque St., are scheduled to speak at the rally Monday.

"I don't think there's any question that if Bork's nomination is approved, Roe vs. Wade (the decision to legalize abortion) will be overturned," LASA President Gordon Fischer said Tuesday.

Fischer said LASA also adamantly opposes Bork's stand on civil rights issues.

In 1963 Bork voted that the law banning racial discrimination by

UI professor dies

The flag over the Old Capitol will be flying at half-mast today in honor of UI Fixed Prosthodontics Professor Emeritus Percy Herrick, who died Sept. 3 after a brief illness.

Herrick was a member of the UI Dental College from 1942 until his retirement from active teaching in 1967. He was appointed professor emeritus after his retirement.

Horowitz to run for council

Iowa City resident Susan Horowitz, 1129 Kirkwood Ave., announced she will be running for the District A seat in the Nov. 3 Iowa City Council elections.

"My goal is to contribute to Iowa City's growth through positive leadership on the council," she said in a press release issued Tuesday afternoon. "I want to increase the level of cooperation among neighborhoods, other local governments, chambers of commerce and our industrial business sector, as well as with our many boards and commissions."

Horowitz, a member of the city's planning and zoning commission, is the only announced candidate for the District A seat. Current seat holder Ernest Zuber has said he will not seek re-election.

Gephardt to visit Iowa City

Democratic presidential candidate Rep. Richard Gephardt, D-Mo., will hold a question-and-answer session in Macbride Hall on Thursday at 11:15 a.m.

The session is sponsored by United Students of Iowa and is open to the public.

Gephardt will also participate in a foreign policy forum at the Congregational United Church of Christ, 30 N. Clinton St., at noon.

Bush's son speaks today

As part of a four-day trip through Iowa, Neil Bush, son of Vice President George Bush, will be in Iowa City today.

Bush will be at the Phi Delta Theta house, 729 N. Dubuque St., at 5 p.m. for a cookout. Bush will speak on the topic of student involvement in the 1988 elections.

Bush will also be the featured speaker at 7:45 p.m. in an educational program sponsored by UI Residence Services in the Rehder Lounge of Quadrangle Residence Hall. A reception will follow the program.

UI holds law conference

The Iowa Commission on the Status of Women, in conjunction with the Iowa Humanities Board and the UI, will sponsor a conference on women and the law titled, "Women and the Constitution: Life," from 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. on Sept. 19 at the Boyd Law Building.

The conference will focus on the impact of judicial decisions on women's rights, and the ways in which laws might be used in meeting women's future needs.

Keynote speaker at the conference will be Elizabeth Holtzman, district attorney for Brooklyn, New York. Prior to becoming the first woman district attorney in the history of New York City, Holtzman was the youngest woman ever elected to the U.S. House of Representatives.

Following Holtzman's speech, which is scheduled for 9:10 a.m., the conference will feature workshops under the headings of life, liberty and property, in which specific constitutional issues will be addressed.

Other conference speakers will include Iowa Lieutenant Governor JoAnne Zimmerman; Linda Neuman, the first woman justice on the Iowa Supreme Court; Mary Louise Smith, former national chairwoman of the Republican Party; and Inga Bumbary-Langston, executive director of the Iowa Civil Rights Commission.

The conference is free and open to the public. All conference sessions will be held in the Boyd Law Building, and pre-registration for the conference is encouraged. To register, contact the UI Center for Conferences and Institutes.

Residents face dry wells as local water level falls

By Craig Sterrett
The Daily Iowan

A representative of the Iowa Geological Survey reported to the Johnson County Board of Supervisors Tuesday that residents north of Iowa City who get water from wells will be forced to make some changes.

Iowa Geological Survey Section Supervisor Donovan Gordon said at the meeting that the residents, who have been having trouble getting water because of low underground water levels, may have to redrill or lower the pump for their wells.

The supervisors will make a request to the Iowa Department of Natural Resources to drill a well to monitor the water level in the area, which is referred to as "the north corridor area," on Thursday.

About 15 people who live in the area, located between Iowa City and North Liberty, have already modified their wells to cope with the lower water levels, Supervisor Dick Myers said.

RESIDENTS SAID they had to take the steps to ensure they receive water.

According to area resident Mary Lou Buchanan, Rural Route 6, her well pump, which was about 160 feet underground, burned out this summer when the water level in the area dropped.

"We had to lower the pump two pipe lengths — a length of 42 feet," Buchanan said.

"This is not the first time there have been problems north of Iowa City," Buchanan added. She said in the 1970s there was some experimental pumping done by an area rock quarry which caused similar problems.

New wells drilled in the area have been part of the reason why water levels have been lower, according to Gordon.

"Every time you stick a new well out there it's like sticking a straw in a glass and someone taking a sip out of it," Gordon said.

BESIDES THE privately owned wells in the area, a rock quarry owned by River Products Inc., of Iowa City, water usage by the city of Coralville, and housing developments also affect the water level in the area.

The drought that hit the state during July may have also indirectly affected some of the wells, according to State Geologist Don Koch of the Iowa Department of Natural Resources.

He said that increased watering of lawns may have caused some of the lowering of the water level.

Iowa City Council selects new assistant city attorney

By Joseph Levy
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa City Council approved the appointment of a new assistant city attorney at its formal meeting Tuesday night.

William Sueppel, who served for two years as the assistant city attorney in Waterloo, was unanimously selected by the council to assume the position here.

"He had the best credentials," Iowa City Attorney Terrence Timmins said. Timmins and four other city administrators chose Sueppel from a group of 44 applicants.

Sueppel will replace outgoing Assistant City Attorney David Brown, who left the city attorney's office July 3 to go into private practice. Sueppel will earn an annual salary of $28,912.

Timmins said the duties of his two assistants include city ordinance enforcement, liaison work, prosecution and some civil litigation.

"I'M ANXIOUS to get back to the Iowa City area," said Sueppel, who is originally from Iowa City. "I plan on settling down here and probably will work here for the rest of my life."

A 1985 graduate of the Hamlin University Law School in St. Paul, Minn., Sueppel said he hopes this position will give him the experience he needs to eventually get into private practice.

In other council business, the council considered and eventually deferred action on an item amending interpretation of the city's intensive commercial zone.

The amendment would legalize light manufacturing in parts of the city zoned CI-1.

The largest section of Iowa City affected by the proposed change would include most of the area between Kirkwood Avenue and Prentiss Street, which is currently heavily commercial.

COUNCIL MEMBERS voiced objections to the proposal, approved by the Iowa City Planning and Zoning Commission by a 3-2 vote, because it places a 5,000-square-foot floor space limit on each business seeking to develop there.

"This ordinance is self-defeating," Councilor Ernest Zuber said, adding a 10,000-square-foot limit would be more realistic and would make it possible for more businesses to take advantage of the zoning law.

"Three-thousand square-foot or 2,000 square-foot and you're talking about a basement operation," he said.

Iowa City Senior Planner Karin Franklin said the Planning and Zoning Commission wanted to limit the square footage so the area would not become too industrial.

"The impact would not be as great if it were a larger corporation (locating there)," she said.

The council decided to reconfer with the Planning and Zoning Commission on the square-footage clause of the proposal and tabled the item until its Sept. 28 meeting.

Courts

The Daily Iowan

An Iowa City man was charged with assault causing injury Tuesday in connection with an incident involving a minor, according to Johnson County District Court records.

Clinton Wilbur Walker, 2 Hilltop Trailer Court, allegedly physically abused the victim after becoming involved with her in a verbal argument. Walker struck the woman with his fists several times on her back, sides and stomach, according to court records.

The 17-year-old victim was taken to Mercy Hospital, where she was treated for undisclosed injuries she suffered as a result of the incident. She was released Monday night, according to Iowa City police reports.

A preliminary hearing was set for Sept. 22, according to court records.

A Coralville man was charged in Johnson County District Court Tuesday with assault causing injury in connection with an incident which occurred in his home Friday.

John Jacq Seeman, 42 Second St., Coralville, allegedly struck the victim in the face, causing bruising. In addition, the victim reported that Seeman prevented her from phoning police from the residence at the time of the incident, according to court reports.

A preliminary hearing in the case is set for Sept. 25, according to court reports.

A Coralville man was charged in Johnson County District Court Tuesday with assault causing injury in connection with an incident which occurred Sunday in his home.

Michael Lee Craven, 7B Western Hills, Coralville, allegedly struck the victim twice, knocking her down both times, according to court records.

A preliminary hearing is set for Sept. 25 in the case, according to court records.

Police

By Franc Contreras
The Daily Iowan

Iowa City police received a complaint from a woman Monday who said a man attempted to sexually assault her early Monday morning in the 200 block of Myrtle Avenue, according to police reports.

The suspect, who was described as a tall black male wearing a sweater and long pants, allegedly forced his way into the woman's apartment but fled when the woman began screaming, according to the report.

Police searched the area, but were unable to locate anyone who fit the description given by the woman, according to the report.

Report: A man posing as a Roman Catholic priest was reportedly asking for handouts Monday in the emergency room of Mercy Hospital, 500 Market St., according to police reports.

A Mercy Hospital spokeswoman said that Gerald J. Michael, 31, address unknown, was apparently a patient at Mercy Hospital in Davenport, and left the hospital Monday without being discharged.

He was last seen taking a taxi to Motel 6 on 810 First Avenue in Coralville, where he planned to spend the night. Michael said he was going to Cedar Rapids Tuesday for drug and alcohol rehabilitation, according to police reports.

No charges were filed against Michael, according to the reports.

Report: Water dripping from an air conditioner in the UI Biology Building caused a potential radiation hazard Monday, according to Campus Security reports.

Campus Security discovered a large puddle of water on the floor of Room 223, a research laboratory where radioactive materials are used. Upon discovering the incident, police called UI Director of Radiation Protection Bill Twaler.

Twaler said water from the air conditioning unit got into barrels containing vials of a radioactive material. No radiation hazards were found after the room was tested for possible contamination, according to the report.

Report: A personal computer valued at $1,900 was stolen Monday from an office in North Hall, according to Campus Security reports.

Nile Kinnick

Kinnick

Anderson had been a star end at Notre Dame, captain of the 1921 team, a Rockne pupil and a George Gipp teammate. He had played professionally with the Chicago Cardinals while at the same time earning his M.D. from Rush Medical College. He was a urologist, but as Ironman Frye has said, "He's the only physician I've ever known who thought the cure for everything from a hangnail to appendicitis was 'running it off.'"

Anderson was indeed a fanatic for physical conditioning, and his spring practices were so arduous that from an original turnout of 80 or more candidates, only 35 survived into the season. Of these only about 20 would play regularly, and 12 would play the full 60 minutes in at least one of the eight games.

Anderson brought with him to Iowa City two fellow Notre Dame alums, backfield coach Frank Carideo, an all-America quarterback for Rockne in 1929 and 1930, and line coach Jim Harris. Both shared the good doctor's obsession with conditioning. Carideo had the additional distinction of being an expert at punting and drop-kicking, and Kinnick, who had learned both skills from his father, became his star pupil. Before and after every practice — Kinnick was always the first on the field and the last to leave it — the coach and player would kick to each other from various points on the gridiron. "They were so accurate," Couppee recalls, "it was like watching two guys playing catch."

FROM CARIDEO, Kinnick mastered the technique of "coffin corner" punting, and he refined his skills as perhaps the last serious practitioner of the then out-dated, now lost art of drop-kicking field goals and points after.

Anderson's offensive system was the Notre Dame Box, with variations. The T-formation revolution, led by Clark Shaughnessy's Stanford Wow Boys, was a year away, and in 1939 the dominant formation was the single wing. In the Notre Dame system, the team first lined up with the backfield in a tight T, from which the quarterback called the play and the snap count. Only in an emergency would the Iowa team huddle before a play. On the quarterback's signal, the backs shifted into the box formation, which differed from the single wing only in that the line remained balanced.

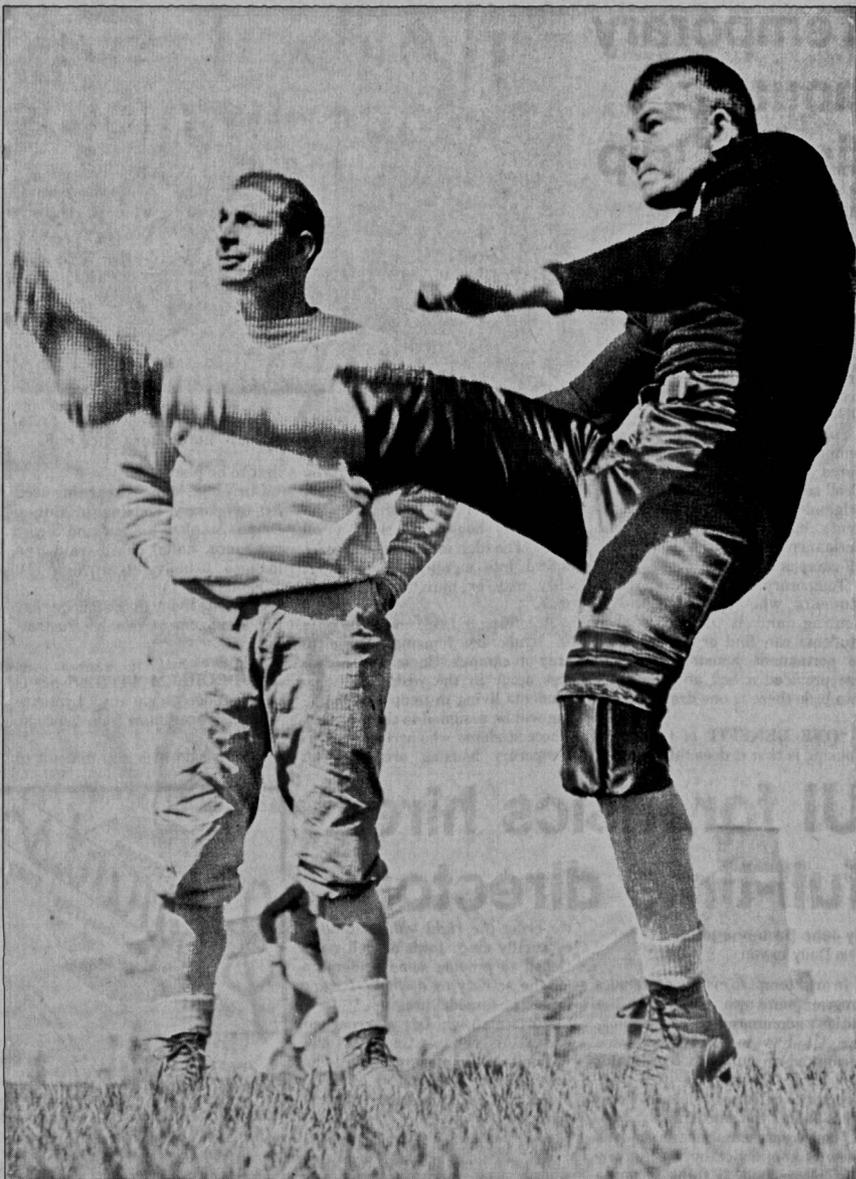

No more than 20 times during the 1939 season, and then merely for shock value, did Iowa run a play from the T. The tailback (usually the left halfback) and the fullback were the deep backs in the box. The quarterback played close to the line and was the principal blocking back. The right halfback, or wingback, was flanked outside or directly behind the end on his side. The tailback was the workhorse. He was the triple-threat man — a runner, passer and kicker. Kinnick was Anderson's tailback.

THE 1939 IOWA team was relatively small in stature even at a time when 200-pound linemen were considered "behemoths." Anderson did start the season with three "big" men — 260-pound guard Henry Luebecke, 212-pound tackle Mike Enich and 202-pound tackle Jim Walker. But Luebecke suffered an abdominal hernia in the second game and Walker went out with a bad knee in the third. With those big men gone, Iowa averaged 191 pounds on the line and 181 in the backfield. If the team had any advantage, it was in age. Three players — guard Tollefson, tackle Bergstrom and guard Max Hawkins — were approaching their middle 20s. Tollefson had dropped out of school for three years to "go on the bum," Bergstrom had shipped out on a South American banana boat and Hawkins had done a tour of duty in the Navy before starting school as a 22-year-old freshman.

Preseason polls picked Iowa to finish at the bottom of the Big Ten. Bill Osmanski, the Chicago Bears fullback who had played for Anderson at Holy Cross, had no illusions about the team's potential after helping coach at spring practice. "Among 5,000 male students at the University of Iowa," Osmanski said, "there are only five real football players." But Anderson's confidence was unshaken. In Kinnick, he said, he had potentially the best back in the country. "All of which sounds quite rosy," Kinnick wrote home, "but I shan't be put off my base or guard the least bit. However, I can't deny that I was happy to hear him say this for the simple reason that I have practiced all my life to learn to run, throw and kick and haven't, as yet in college, had the opportunity to show myself a good single wing back."

Temporary housing figures dip

By Rebecca Himschoot
The Daily Iowan

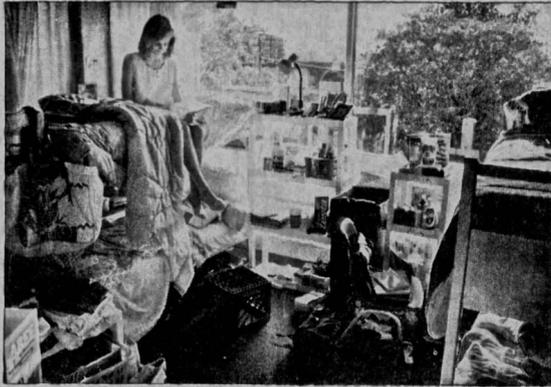

The lounges of some UI residence halls are what 169 UI students call home as they wait for permanent placement in campus housing.

But the number of students living in temporary housing has significantly declined from previous years, according to UI Residence Services Director George Droll.

Only 290 students were placed in temporary housing this year, compared to 522 students last year, Droll said, adding 121 of this year's original temporary housing residents have already moved into permanent residence hall rooms or off-campus housing.

Temporary housing is offered to students who applied late for housing, and is available until students can find or are assigned to permanent housing. Students are provided a bed and for every two beds there is one dresser.

"ONE BENEFIT" of temporary housing is that it does take some of the pressure off students who arrive late in town, so that they don't have to jump right into the Iowa City housing market," Droll said. "The idea is that they are not forced into signing a lease that they may or may not be happy with."

According to Droll, most students in temporary housing choose to stay on campus. He said as vacancies occur in the residence halls, students living in temporary housing will be assigned to those rooms. Those students who arrived first in temporary housing are also the first to be placed.

Currently, lounges are being used for temporary housing in Burge, Daum, Stanley, Rienow and Slater residence halls. Droll said the lounges usually house 6 to 10 students.

Students living in the lounges say the arrangement can be frustrating.

"A PROBLEM WITH privacy is that you don't have any," Lynnette Wright, a freshman from Chicago, said.

Wright said it is also difficult to study in temporary housing. "You can't study here because there are so many people here doing different things," she said. "Sometimes you just want to put on your nightgown and kick back with your books, but everyone here keeps different hours so you have to go to the lounge to study."

"The worst part for me is trying to get some sleep," Ann Keil, a freshman from Bellevue, Iowa, said.

"I like to be organized and neat, and with eight other people in the room you can't have that," Wright said.

Students in temporary housing have a community telephone in the lounge, mail service and private use of the floor kitchenette.

"THE PHONE CAN be a problem, especially if your parents are trying to get through and someone's on the phone a long time," Wright said.

Sometimes lasting friendships are formed in temporary housing, Droll said.

"Students in temporary housing have proven to be extremely adaptive," he said. "It's amazing how well they do work it out."

Droll said a group of men in temporary housing last year petitioned residence services to remain in temporary housing, but the request was denied.

UI forensics hires full-time director

By John Bartenhagen
The Daily Iowan

In an attempt to make its forensics program more competitive with the nation's dominant debate teams, the UI has for the first time appointed an outreach coordinator for forensics and a full-time director of debate, Director of Forensics John Lyne said Tuesday.

"This represents a tremendous show of confidence by the university," Lyne said. "I think it was a very smart investment in education. We should soon be on the map with schools like Dartmouth, Harvard and Northwestern as a center of debate."

David Hingstman, former director of debate at Baylor University was named as the UI head debate coach, and Paul Slappey has been named outreach coordinator for forensics, Lyne said.

Lyne said Hingstman's duties will include overseeing research, training and travel for the debate program and building up a more visible program of public debates. Slappey's responsibilities will include encouraging the development of forensics activities at the UI and in Iowa high schools.

Lyne said improved debate teams will also benefit other aspects of the forensics program, such as public debates. Five public debates have already been scheduled this semester by the Iowa Forensics Union, he said, including an initial discussion over whether the presidential caucuses help or hurt Iowa, scheduled for Sept. 9, at 7 p.m. in Shambaugh Auditorium.

"The personnel we now have are as qualified and able as any in the country," Lyne said. "Just as important, though, they approach this as an educational activity, not just a sport. I think it's crucial that we bring the right values to this, especially since Iowa is well positioned to provide some leadership for the activity as a whole. I want this to be a model program."

Hingstman, who last year coached a Baylor debate team to the national championship, said he accepted the position at the UI because of the challenge it presents.

"For a number of years, this university has shown a great deal of interest in forensics but has never established itself as having a consistent program," he said. "I think there is great potential to having a more permanent commitment to a strong program."

Although the UI debate program has had sporadic successes, including a team last year that qualified for the National Debate Tournament, Hingstman said too many talented debaters from Iowa high schools have been lured away to more prominent programs.

"This program can be consistently successful if we can continue to attract academically solid students that can handle the demands of debate," he said. "I think those students come out of Iowa high schools, but because of this program's low visibility, they go elsewhere."

Depending on the dedication of current debate team members, Hingstman said he believes the UI can begin competing closely with the nation's top forensics programs as early as this year.

"It's pretty much up to the debaters we have now and how hard they want to work," he said. "People never know what to expect from Iowa — some years they have been very successful and other years nobody has heard from them at all."

WHY OUR FIVE STAR MEATS ARE A NOTCH ABOVE.

These days, people are always talking about trimming the fat. Well at Eagle, we're doing something about it. Trimming that unwanted fat and unsightly bulges from our meat. Presenting the Eagle Five Star Trim Key...our way to measure the fat on our Five Star Meat.

We're making sure there's never more than a quarter inch on any of it. Any of our steaks, chops or roasts. That means you always get just the right amount of fat for the meat to be tender, flavorful, and juicy. Without paying for any extra that you don't really want.

But perhaps the only way to fully appreciate this is to come into Eagle, and pick up your own Five Star Trim Key at our meat counter. Then try it yourself. In fact, you may want to conduct a little experiment of your own. If you don't already shop at Eagle, check the meat you're currently buying and see how it measures up to ours. You'll see why our Five Star Meats are clearly a notch above the rest.

Hunt continues for Burge odor origin

By Joseph Levy
The Daily Iowan

UI maintenance employees are looking into possible causes of the odor that permeated Burge Residence Hall this weekend, but have ruled out a sewage back-up as the cause, a UI Residence Services official said Tuesday.

"There are a couple of possibilities," UI Residence Services Maintenance Director Wayne Graeve said. "We're investigating both of them."

Graeve said the smell probably came from the building's drain-pipes after workers used drain cleaners Friday to clear some of them.

"This sometimes creates a problem if there is an open trap," Graeve said.

He added the other possibility is that pipe odors could have been released through a vent in the roof and drawn back into the building by another ventilation fan.

"IT COULD HAPPEN from the roof," he said, adding he suspected the smell originated from the drain cleaners.

Several Burge residents complained the smell in some of the stairwells this weekend was overwhelming, and one maintenance employee said the stench has occurred before.

Burge Hall Coordinator Corey Faris said Monday he wasn't aware the smell had gripped his building.

Graeve said the drain cleaners only worked on Friday so they may not explain the odor.

"I don't know what was happening over the weekend," he said.

He said residents who smelled the odor may have noticed it Friday and been super-sensitive to it the whole weekend.

Gable film will be pure Iowa

By Paula Roesler
The Daily Iowan

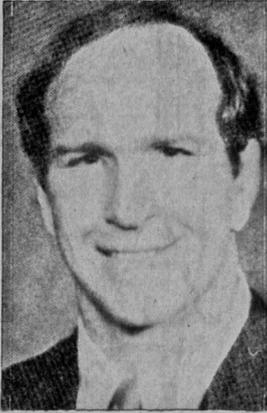

A movie about the life of Iowa Wrestling Coach Dan Gable which is scheduled to begin filming in February will be filmed "100 percent in Iowa," a promoter for the project said Tuesday.

"The movie is still in its beginning stages, so we don't know what city it will be in Iowa," promoter Michael Seyfer said.

Seyfer is president of the Des Moines banking firm of Seyfer, Starbuck and Co., which is cooperating with TAG Entertainment of Los Angeles in the estimated $5 million movie venture.

CBS and Universal Studios set out on a similar venture several years ago, but abandoned plans for a movie about Gable.

"I guess the timing was not right," Seyfer said. "Sports films haven't always had the success they've had

Dan Gable in the last five to six years.

GABLE'S STORY will be comparable to movies such as The Natural and Rocky, Seyfer said.

It will be a factual account of Gable's bout with tragedy and success in athletics, he said.

In 1964, when Gable was 15, his sister Diane Kay was raped and murdered by a neighbor in the family's Waterloo home, Seyfer said.

"It was something that Dan will tell you was very much a catalyst to his wrestling career," he said. "He dedicated his career to his sister."

Gable, who is recognized as probably the greatest amateur wrestler ever in the United States, won a gold medal in the 1972 Olympics in Munich, West Germany, in the 149.5-pound weight class. As a high-school wrestler at Waterloo High School, Gable went undefeated in 64 matches during three years.

Gable only loss in college was in the 1970 NCAA championships when he lost one match while at Iowa State his senior year.

He coached the UI wrestling team to nine consecutive national titles and was an assistant coach for the U.S. Olympic wrestling team in 1976. He also coached U.S. teams from 1977 to 1979.

"GABLE'S STORY is extremely inspirational," Seyfer said. "He's a hero."

Promoters are unsure who will play the part of Gable, but they are vying for a "big name," Seyfer said.

Gable will assist as a technical adviser for the wrestling scenes, he said.

"Dan is very unassuming, very modest. But he's very excited about the movie," Seyfer said.

Gable declined comment on the movie Tuesday, saying he will wait until its release late next summer.

Contra memo haunts Bush

Vice president denies any prior knowledge

By Judi Hasson
United Press International

WASHINGTON — A memo prepared for Vice President George Bush released Tuesday shows that he was scheduled to meet with a former CIA agent to discuss efforts to resupply the Nicaraguan Contras months before the Iran-Contra scandal erupted.

Bush, the front-runner for the Republican presidential nomination, has acknowledged he had a relationship with the former agent, Felix Rodriguez, but has steadfastly denied knowing anything about private efforts to arm the Contras after Congress banned military aid to the rebels.

A brief meeting between Bush and Rodriguez took place May 1, 1986, nearly seven months before stunning disclosures about the secret

U.S. arms sale to Iran and diversion of sales profits to the Nicaraguan rebels.

Rodriguez and Bush aides have denied that resupply efforts were discussed at the session.

STEVE HART, a spokesman for Bush, said it was "entirely possible" the vice president never saw the memo and added "the important point" was that the Contra resupply issue "was never discussed" in the meeting with Rodriguez.

"The vice president from the onset has said that's the case and others have supported him on that," Hart said.

A memo from the vice president's office dated April 30, 1986, said Rodriguez, "a counterinsurgency expert who is visiting from El Salvador, will provide a briefing on the status of the war in El Salvador and resupply of the Contras."

The memo was released by the congressional Iran-Contra committees with a deposition by Bush's national security adviser, Donald Gregg, who said he did not know why the Contra resupply topic was listed on the memo. He said the issue was not discussed at the May 1 meeting.

"THE SUBJECT of resupply of the Contras was not, repeat not, mentioned at all by anyone in the meeting with the vice president on May 1, nor had there been any intention to discuss that subject," Gregg said in a May 14, 1987, memo to the congressional panels.

It is not known if Bush ever saw the memo, and members of the Iran-Contra panels did not question the vice president in their investigation. However, the memo raises new questions about exactly what the vice president was told.

Gregg was questioned by the congressional committees May 18, two weeks after the committees began public hearings into the worst scandal of the Reagan presidency.

His deposition, declassified and blacked out in parts, was released Tuesday by the congressional panels, which now are completing a final report expected to be released next month.

The panels also released depositions of Gregg's secretary, Phyllis Byrne, and Samuel Watson, Bush's deputy assistant for national security affairs.

When he testified at the public hearings in May, Rodriguez said he met with Bush for 15 to 25 minutes May 1, 1986, to brief him on his efforts in El Salvador where he was helping the government fight communist guerrillas.

Reagan defends Bork views, predicts Senate confirmation

By Norman D. Sandler
United Press International

WASHINGTON — President Ronald Reagan asserted Tuesday that Supreme Court nominee Robert Bork has been unfairly branded "some kind of right-wing ideologue" and predicted eventual victory in the bruising Senate battle for confirmation.

Voicing determination to make history in the last 16 months of his presidency, Reagan told a group of senior political appointees his agenda contains "no more important task" than seating Bork on the high court.

"I'm convinced that in the end, he will be confirmed," Reagan said. "But there's no denying that it's going to be a tough fight."

With the Senate Judiciary Committee confirmation hearings set to begin Sept. 15, the Senate is evenly divided on the nomination, according to the office of Assistant Senate Democratic leader Alan Cranston.

CRANSTON'S SPOKESMAN said the latest head count, made public Tuesday, showed 46 opposing or leaning against Bork, 45 favoring or leaning toward confirmation and 9 undecided. The original count, taken shortly after Reagan nominated Bork, was 45-45-10.

Bork, a federal appeals court judge, has been targeted for opposition by interest groups that view him as an extremist whose conservative views would tip the court's ideological balance to the right for years to come.

The Nation Institute, a New York civil liberties group, joined the American Civil Liberties Union and liberal groups Tuesday in concluding that Bork's record shows his judicial philosophy to be "extreme, inflexible, doctrinaire and unacceptable."

THE ADMINISTRATION counterattack has been that Bork, ideology aside, is a practitioner of judicial restraint, the principle that personal views are subordinate to legal precedent and congressional intent in interpreting the law.

"We all know that since his nomination, Judge Bork has come under attack for being some kind of right-wing ideologue. We also know those charges are wrong," Reagan said. "Judge Bork believes in judicial restraint, and this means reading laws in the way intended by elected officials that passed them and not reshaping them by judicial whim."

"So, consider that irony," he added. "Some legislators are organizing opposition to a judge who believes in deferring to them and in faithfully abiding by the intent of the laws they pass."

The reference to Bork brought a burst of applause, punctuating the silence that otherwise prevailed as Reagan laid out his priorities in terms aimed to rebut suggestions the Iran-Contra scandal has left his presidency adrift.

"I know these past several months haven't been easy — believe me, I know," Reagan said. "Maybe the worst of it has been that at times, it seemed as though events were simply happening to us."

Reagan's frequent vacations very costly to U.S. taxpayers

By Bob Sipchen
Los Angeles Times

LOS ANGELES — The presidential chain saw has fallen silent, the meatloaf pans have been washed, and Rawhide and Rainbow, as the Secret Service refers to President and Nancy Reagan, are back in the White House after a 25-day working vacation on the West Coast.

Life at the Reagans' Rancho del Cielo, 29 miles north of Santa Barbara, Calif., was reportedly slow-paced and simple this year. But, as anyone who watched Air Force One leave the Point Mugu Naval Air Station near Oxnard on Sunday morning could see, the logistics of the First Family's vacations are enormous. Clearly their vacation budget is a bit bigger and more complex than that of the average American.

THE PRESIDENT has spent about one year of his 6½ years in office vacationing in California. And those 356 days — the unofficial estimate of the White House transportation office — haven't been cheap.

The White House, federal agency officials and many of the California business people who serve the presidential entourage cite security considerations in refusing to discuss the particulars and costs of the latest presidential R & R. But an unofficial and very conservative estimate based on knowledgeable sources puts the taxpayers' share of the 25-day rest at $600,298 — excluding such items as food and toiletries, which come out of the Reagans' pockets.

CONSIDERING THAT the Reagans visit the ranch at least three times a year and Palm Springs each New Year's — expenses for the presidential vacations in California have easily topped $8 million since they moved into the White House.

All presidents take vacations, and, in terms of frequency, Reagan ranks somewhat lower than John F. Kennedy, who took one day of vacation for every 3½ days in office, and a lot higher than Jimmy Carter, whose vacations took up only one of every 18 days he was in office, according to an estimate by Congressional Quarterly.

Here is a breakdown of the First Couple's latest trip and a rough estimate of its costs:

On Aug. 13, the Reagans boarded Air Force One at Andrews Air Force Base in Maryland, flew west, made a brief working stop in North Platte, Neb., and arrived that evening at Point Mugu. There, they boarded the Marine One helicopter, which passed uncomfortably close to a small private plane as it approached their 688-acre retreat in the Santa Ynez Mountains.

Accompanying them was an entourage whose official numbers the White House wouldn't reveal. But, said Mark Weinberg of the White House press office, about a dozen staff members stayed in Santa Barbara, among them National Security Adviser Frank Carlucci and White House Chief of Staff Howard C. Baker Jr.

Wearing seat belts saves lives. And in Iowa, it's our law.

Governor rips primary plan

By Scott Sonner
United Press International

DES MOINES — Southern Democrats' plan to throw their support behind a conservative candidate in the "Super Tuesday" primaries has backfired and the region may end up backing Jesse Jackson, Iowa Gov. Terry Branstad said Tuesday.

Branstad, a Republican, also said the GOP is "looking for a winner like Ronald Reagan," but he said he will not endorse a candidate until after the Iowa Caucuses Feb. 8.

In his weekly news conference at the Statehouse, Branstad said the Democratic Party designed the series of March primaries in the South — a traditional party stronghold — in hopes of reducing the impact of the Iowa Caucuses and New Hampshire Primary.

"I think if you look at it, the Southern states, which tend to be the more conservative states in the country, came up with this humongous mega-primary to wrestle party control away from the more liberal parts of the party ...," he said.

"THE PROBLEM WITH that is just the opposite happened. What they thought would give them a better chance, backfired," he said.

"They may actually end up helping Jesse Jackson, which is not exactly what the southern Democrats had in mind," Branstad added.

Branstad said the development is further evidence of Democrats' inability to pull together in support of a candidate. He said Republicans should be able to support any candidate who wins the GOP nomination.

"We are looking for a winner like Ronald Reagan. Ronald Reagan won two landslide victories and carried the Republican Party to control of the White House twice and (the Senate) once by landslides," he said.

"In terms of policies and philosophies, all the candidates who have announced their intentions to run have philosophies in tune with the Republican Party so I don't think there is a problem as far as that goes," he said.

"AS A PARTY, we've got to pull together ... We've had a pretty good track record of being able to do that. The Democrats have not been quite as successful," he said.

Bennett: Education to be top campaign issue

By Tamara Henry
United Press International

WASHINGTON — Education Secretary William Bennett, saying people are more quickly punished for "serving up a single rotten hamburger" than for being bad teachers, called on presidential candidates Tuesday to make education reform a top campaign issue.

The education secretary also said education reform of any kind must stress accountability, or "the giving and taking of responsibility for results," because that quality "is the linchpin, the keystone, the sine qua non of the reform movement."

Bennett told a National Press Club luncheon, "Put accountability in, and other needed reforms will follow."

Bennett's remarks set the tone for a national debate on education scheduled for Friday at the University of North Carolina. Seven Democratic candidates are scheduled to attend: Former Arizona Gov. Bruce Babbitt, Sen. Joseph Biden of Delaware, Sen. Albert Gore of Tennessee, Sen. Paul Simon of Illinois, Massachusetts Gov. Michael Dukakis, Rep. Richard Gephardt of Missouri and civil rights leader Jesse Jackson.

ONLY TWO GOP candidates — Rep. Jack Kemp of New York and former Delaware Gov. Pete DuPont — are scheduled to participate.

He insisted most Americans view education as a top domestic priority and urged Democratic and Republican presidential candidates to learn about the subject so they can "propose concrete and credible policies" to improve schools.

William Bennett

"Indeed, too often in our political discourse, education has been used as an opportunity for candidates simply to market mawkishness," he said. "We need more than platitudes and more than promises of more money and deep concern."

In increasing accountability, Bennett said, candidates should support rewards for principals who boost performance, additional pay for good teachers, regular assessment of student performance, emphasize basic subjects of math, English, history and science and giving parents more choice — "specifically the choice to send their children to a school that does a good job."

"THERE ARE GREATER, more certain and more immediate penalties in this country for serving up a single rotten hamburger than for furnishing a thousand schoolchildren with a rotten education," Bennett said. "This must change."

Candidates split on survey

By Bill Brewer
United Press International

DES MOINES — Six of the seven Democratic presidential candidates favor a combination of farm-production limits and higher minimum prices, while Republicans favor a phase-out of government farm subsidies, an Iowa Farm Unity Coalition survey showed Tuesday.

Dixon Terry, spokesman for the coalition of 15 farm, labor and religious groups, said he was surprised Jesse Jackson, Michael Dukakis, Joseph Biden, Paul Simon, Bruce Babbitt and Richard Gephardt all support the coalition's call for an expanded government role in agriculture.

"There was a clear consensus among the great majority of Democrats that there will be a greater need in the future for higher prices and supply management," Terry said at a news conference.

SEN. ALBERT GORE JR. of Tennessee was the only Democrat to stop short of endorsing the coalition's call for commodity price floors, although Terry said Gore favors more government incentives to reduce crop production.

Only three Republicans, Vice President George Bush, Sen. Robert Dole of Kansas and former Delaware Gov. Pierre du Pont responded to the survey.

Terry said none of the three supports the coalition's position, noting all three favor President Ronald Reagan's proposal to phase out farm subsidies world-wide.

"That's not surprising, since it was a Republican president who proposed it," Terry said.

He noted du Pont favors eliminating U.S. farm subsidies within five years, regardless of what other nations do.

Bush and Dole favor continuing current farm programs until the United States convinces its trading partners to end their farm subsidies.

"AT LEAST SENATOR Dole and Vice President Bush realize there's going to be a continued reliance on farm programs.

Iowa physician makes presidential bid

READLYN, Iowa (UPI) — A Readlyn physician who lost a four-way primary for the 1986 Democratic gubernatorial nomination Tuesday announced his candidacy for president and predicted he will capture the support of 38 percent of Iowa Democrats.

Clinton Berryhill, who captured only 2.6 percent of the vote in the November 1986 primary, said he decided to enter the race because the other candidates have insulted conservative Democrats, who oppose homosexuality and abortion.

"We need a northern candidate to advocate the politics of southern Democrats," Berryhill said.

"I believe I can win 38 percent of the Iowa caucus vote. This is the fraction which is not impressed with any of the other seven candidates, the fraction which was insulted by the behavior of Gary Hart and Ted Kennedy," he said, referring to allegations of womanizing by Hart and Kennedy.

"I'M CLEAN ON the character issue," the 30-year physician said. "The questions which embarrassed Gary Hart will not embarrass me."

Berryhill said liberal Lowell Junkins' victory in the gubernatorial primary was the reason the Democrats lost the general election to Republican Terry Branstad.

A conservative nominee would give the Democrats their best chance of winning the White House in 1988, he said.

If elected, Berryhill said he would "eliminate the welfare state" within eight years by forcing absentee fathers to pay for the care of their children and by a progressive reduction of $200 billion of domestic spending.

"The care of women and children is the responsibility of men, not of government," Berryhill said.

He also said he would "come down hard" on carriers of the AIDS virus by forcing known prostitutes and drug addicts to submit to blood tests.

Harkin visits Nicaragua; activists released

By Douglas Farah
United Press International

MANAGUA, Nicaragua — The government Tuesday freed two jailed human rights activists during a visit by Iowa Sen. Tom Harkin, a staunch opponent of U.S. aid to Contra rebels fighting Nicaragua's leftist government.

"I have received orders from the minister of interior to turn over to you Lino Hernandez and Alberto Saborio, now in complete freedom, as recognition of your efforts to improve the situation in our country," said Javier Lopez, second in command of the Enrique Schmidt prison in the capital visited by Harkin.

Hernandez, secretary general of the Permanent Human Rights Commission, and Saborio, head of the Nicaraguan Bar Association, were arrested Aug. 15 for participating in an unauthorized anti-government demonstration. They were sentenced to 30 days in jail, and began a hunger strike to protest their incarceration on Aug. 26.

THE TWO MEN'S release took place after Harkin, D-Iowa, met for more than an hour with President Daniel Ortega and asked for a chance to visit the prisoners.

Harkin, a staunch opponent of U.S. aid to Contra rebels battling Nicaragua's leftist government, is touring Central America to review a regional peace plan.

"Please convey to the minister of interior my deep appreciation for his willingness not only to honor my request to visit the prisoners but for also honoring my request that they be released as soon as possible," Harkin said after the two men were released.

"I must say I wish the arrests had never taken place in the beginning, and that is what I expressed to President Ortega," Harkin said. "But I understand the difficulties of a nation at war, with attacks from the Contras and war against the country."

HERNANDEZ TOLD the senator, "We are deeply grateful for your efforts on our behalf. We now assume our freedom, which is our right, and will continue with our struggle to insure human rights are respected in Nicaragua and the peace accords are fulfilled."

The prisoner release came one day after Ortega tentatively accepted an invitation for a trip to the Soviet Union in November to celebrate the 70th anniversary of that nation's revolution.

Miami prepares for papal tour; NOW stages protest

From DI Wire Services

MIAMI — Hundreds of workers Tuesday prepared for Pope John Paul II's arrival in the United States later this week, and one archdiocese called the situation "a general zoo."

About 4,000 security officers will provide protection for the pope's 23-hour visit Thursday and Friday. He will leave Friday afternoon for Columbia, S.C., the second of nine cities on his 10-day U.S. visit.

Other stops on his visit include New Orleans, San Antonio, Phoenix, Los Angeles, Monterey, Calif., San Francisco and Detroit.

A 20,000-square-foot altar, featuring a 100-foot cross and 112 sections for up to 500,000 worshipers, was completed Friday. Construction crews secured 850 portable toilets, 11 first-aid stations and two dozen concession stands.

WORKERS AT THE Tamiami Youth Fairgrounds 13 miles west of Miami prepared to unload and set up 12,000 chairs. Also expected were 8,000 chrysanthemums and 1,100 National Guardsmen bringing 30 to 50 400-gallon water trucks — known as water buffalo. "It's a general zoo," said Rev. Anthony Mulderry.

White sails hanging from the altar obstructing the view had to be adjusted, but construction of the site for this week's papal mass has gone well, organizers said.

"Everything that's humanly possible has been done," said Monsignor Jude O'Doherty, the chief organizer. "You just go with the tide. It happens."

In Washington, "The Last Lunch" in hand, NOW President Molly Yard was arrested Tuesday at the Vatican Embassy after leading a rain-soaked march in opposition to the "betrayal of women's rights" by the Roman Catholic Church.

YARD AND JEANNE Clark, spokeswoman for the National Organization for Women, were handcuffed and put in a District of Columbia police wagon after approaching the embassy door and delivering a symbolic lunch for Pope John Paul II, who begins a tour of the United States this week.

In a heavy downpour, Yard led about a dozen chanting protesters to the embassy in a protest titled "The Last Lunch."

Yard said the lunch was "a symbol of the betrayal of women's rights by the Roman Catholic Hierarchy, which is led by the Pope and carried out by the Catholic leaders in the United States."

Workers elsewhere were sprucing up other sites. After his arrival in Miami, the pope's itinerary calls for a visit at St. Mary's Cathedral, a meeting with more than 500 priests at St. Martha's church and a visit with President and Mrs. Reagan at Vizcaya museum and gardens. An evening 3.1-mile parade follows.

ON FRIDAY, John Paul will meet with 196 Jewish leaders. The huge outdoor mass follows.

"I feel really high about it all," said Ed Ryan of Albany, N.Y., who came to Miami early for his winter visit to help out at St. Martha's. "There's a lot of anticipation. There's real reverence for what's going to happen."

Protesters seeking more money for AIDS research and Haitian exiles advocating attention for the plight of their homeland were mobilizing for the pope's visit, but O'Doherty said the demonstrations will not affect the pope, O'Doherty said.

"He's not in a popularity contest with anybody. He does not mind stating the truth of the church," O'Doherty said.

Organizers credited cooperation between the archdiocese, security officers and political leaders for the apparent success of the preparations.

Rev. Jose Nickse noted the priests had little experience preparing for the event and credited divine help.

"Everything that has been accomplished has been by the grace of God," he said.

Transcendental Meditation SUCCESS WITHOUT STRESS

The Transcendental Meditation technique of Maharishi Mahesh Yogi is a simple, natural procedure to develop full potential of the individual. Over 700 scientific studies done at more than 200 universities and research institutions have verified both the physiological changes during the practice and the benefits meditators report in daily activities.

To date, there are nearly 3 million people who practice this effortless mental technique. Their experience as well as objective research show that TM meditators enjoy improved memory, faster reaction time, higher grade point average, greater creativity, clearer perception, reduced anxiety, better health and more harmonious social relationships.

Scientists consider this to be related to the TM technique's effectiveness in systematically reducing stress in the body and increasing coherence in brain functioning.

 These five youngsters from a Manila slum are among the estimated 25,000 children who must take to the streets and become beggar masters or even prostitutes in order to survive.

Filipino children: Caught in a deadly, dirty trap

By Mark Fineman
 Los Angeles Times

MANILA, Philippines — Night was coming on, and Saturnina Peralta was again preparing to send her two sons back into the streets, but 11-year-old Miguel decided he simply could not take it anymore.

For years, Miguel and his 6-year-old brother, Ricky, had been forced by their mother — at 30, a veteran prostitute — to beg, to steal and to solicit pedophiles in the seamy streets of Manila's Ermita tourist district.

Their bodies were covered with hundreds of sores, their heads were deeply scarred, their digestive tracts were infested with parasites from their years of living on — and off of — the streets. Ricky's face was permanently twisted into a grimace; his mother had taught him that this would bring extra pesos. Miguel's body was wracked by a venereal disease.

BUT NOW MIGUEL had had enough. He escaped. He bundled up his sickly brother and fled. He made his way through the city to a center for street children opened last year by President Corazon Aquino's government as part of a campaign to deal with what experts say is the world's fastest-growing population of abused, abandoned and neglected children.

For Miguel, it was just one more twist in a life-and-death war with the streets. He knew exactly where the center was located. He and his brother had been there before — for nearly three months, until his mother "kidnapped" them last April and took them back to the streets.

Officials at the center say that the two boys will probably be kidnapped again. Their mother, like many impoverished Filipino parents, looks on her offspring as economic assets.

One young Filipino street beggar seeking money stops for a smoke and peers over the window of a taxi stopped at a traffic light.

MIGUEL AND RICKY Peralta — their names have been changed — exemplify one of the most acute and most alarming social problems in the Philippines. The authorities estimate that there are 10 million children from impoverished, abusive or exploitative families either living in the streets of this troubled nation or likely to end up there.

Already, more than 100,000 children nationwide have become the street soldiers of beggar masters, pimps, prostitute mothers and unemployed fathers. These children beg from gutters and garbage heaps on street corners where four years ago there were no beggars.

The problem dates from the regime of former President Ferdinand Marcos, whose 20-year rule left the country $28 billion in debt, its treasury empty, and the average Filipino with an annual income of $656, the lowest level in two decades. When the street corners of Manila and other major Philippine cities began to fill with beggars, Marcos and his wife, Imelda, who was governor of metropolitan Manila, virtually ignored the problem, except for ordering the beggars arrested.

AQUINO HAS recognized the growing problem. Through a series of radical but little-known decrees, she has promised to rehabilitate the street children. Last December, for example, she issued a decree that empowers the government to seize the children of parents who physically abuse them or force them into prostitution.

Government-financed centers for such children are appearing throughout Manila.

But limited government resources and an ineffective government bureaucracy have kept social workers from even scratching the surface of the problem. And sociologists regard the growing number of street children as a frightening sign that the institution of the family — perhaps the last barrier to anarchy here — is beginning to give way.

"IF THE GOVERNMENT figures are correct that ... we will not return to our economic level of 1981 until 1991, the problem will definitely become worse," said Leopoldo Moselina, staff director of the U.N. Children's Fund in Manila, which is attempting to coordinate a large-scale project to help the street children.

Given that harsh economic reality, Moselina added, "It is very unrealistic to think we will be able to get these kids off the streets. The most that can be done through the street children project is basic survival — to help the child survive while he is on the streets."

Moselina said that to understand the crisis of the street children is to understand the economic crisis facing the Filipino family and the nation as a whole.

Sociologist Roselle Leah Rivera, an expert on the problem of street children, said: "Why are thousands of children splattered on the city streets? Over the past years, poverty has grown to massive proportions and more and more Filipino families have been sucked into economic crisis."

Lack of trust

In an extremely questionable move to reduce government spending, the Reagan administration has proposed ending more than eight decades of public support for food safety and inspection by allowing private companies to inspect their own meat and poultry products.

This "company-financed" food inspection proposal will shift the responsibility of quality control from government to private industry. According to Donald Houston, administrator of the USDA's Food Safety and Inspection Service, allowing industry to provide product quality control "will help reduce the deficit without imposing a significant burden on the industry as a whole or consumers."

Houston is only half right. There is no doubt that a fee system of inspection for meat and poultry companies in which they inspect, and hopefully report, quality inadequacies will impose no serious burdens on industry. Quite the opposite. It will make it difficult, if not impossible, for companies to be reprimanded for inferior products and practices. No financial or quality maintenance burden there.

But as to the other part of his statement, yes, the public will be burdened by this system of inspection. Burdened by products that don't meet the quality standards they should, yet are still on supermarket shelves waiting to be taken home by trusting consumers. Would we as consumers have been so enlightened in recent months to the detestable quality of chickens if industries, and not the USDA, were responsible for informing the public about problems with food products? Not likely.

Further, the fact that the administration is attempting to cut a program which has only increased in cost by about 60 percent over the last 10 years as compared to the entire budget, which has risen by 147 percent, makes little sense. Add to this the fact that current inspectors have repeatedly voiced concerns over industry cover-ups and violations — practices which are extremely hard to detect with their current budget.

By putting the responsibility of quality control in the hands of those who stand the most to lose from sanctions and reprimands for inferior products, the Reagan administration is in effect saying: "Although you may be tempted to cut corners on the quality of your food, don't. But if you do, please report yourself."

That's asking the American public to place a lot of trust in the administration's recommendation, as well as the meat and poultry industry. And trust is the virtue most lacking in the minds of the American public at this time.

Local boosts needed

For many people, Labor Day was one of those rare and welcome occasions when spending a Monday away from the workplace is given official sanction — one of our beloved three-day weekends. For others, however, there wasn't so much to be happy about. To the worker who is out of work, the farmer who wonders how to keep the farm and those who reported to their minimum wage jobs, Labor Day was not cause for celebration.

These times are not the best for organized labor, either. Here in Iowa many union workers are laid off, carrying the modest hope that eventually they will be rehired, probably at reduced wages. The Iowa Federation of Labor has lost over one-third of its members since 1980.

There are no easy solutions. Setting trade barriers sounds like an easy answer, but doubtfully a good one. Those who point to our trade deficit with Japan apparently fail to consider that U.S. exports to Japan — agricultural products especially — are quite sizeable. What will we have gained when barriers are put up at their end? And do we really want to force American consumers to buy what is oftentimes the inferior product?

There may be other ways to help Iowans in the labor force. State grants and tax benefits designed to lure corporations to Iowa might be better spent helping existing businesses carry on. The $500,000 just given to Excel Corp. to facilitate their purchase of Hormel's Ottumwa plant might have helped keep the plant open in the first place, perhaps financing a worker buy-out scheme.

One good idea — to be implemented with a $2 million federal grant — is the state international trade center. With existing office space and personnel, Iowa State University and the Des Moines Chamber of Commerce will set up an information base for use by small and large businesses throughout the state. Through computer hook-ups, the trade center will provide data on foreign market potential. At the same time, the center will share information with overseas markets on Iowa products.

More emphasis needs to be put on boosting business already located in the state, with small firms and farmers getting special assistance. And improvements in productivity and marketing should take precedence over trade restrictions.

Is vision of success reality?

That's the American way. If little kids don't aspire to make money like I did, what the hell good is this country? — Lee Iacocca's characteristically brash remark on receiving $20 million in salary, bonuses and stock options for 1986 rings a little differently on the mean streets of Detroit than in Chrysler's corporate headquarters in suburban Highland Park.

In his career and in the artful shape of his best-selling autobiography, Iacocca has embodied the American way with a vengeance. A poor immigrant's son, he rose by "hard work and big dreams" to the presidency of Ford Motor Co. There, as he tells it, "King Henry" himself — the man whose name was on the building — struck down this peasant pretender to the throne. Humiliated and angry, Iacocca guided a no less wounded Chrysler Corp. back into the black. Now Chrysler has bought Lamborghini and American Motors, and Iacocca's story has not ended yet.

IACOCCA DRAWS an uplifting moral from his experience: "There are times when things seem so bad that you've got to grab your fate by the shoulders and shake it . . . If you keep your nose to the grindstone and work at it, it's amazing how in a free society you can become as great as you want to be." This is the exhilarating gospel of American success, and Iacocca has certainly earned the right to preach it.

Success has two faces, however, and one is failure. Success is the bitch goddess, as William James called it, not only because it betrays those who have won its favors but because it also torments those who cannot do so.

The fact remains that a multitude of people inhabit Detroit (and every other big city) who will never be "great," or even middling, and for whom the rhetoric of success is nothing more than a taunting reproach for their insecure spells on the line and on the dole.

FOR THIS UNDERCLASS (as it is now called), Detroit is not a city of proud towers like the Renaissance Center erected by Henry Ford II, but what Joyce Carol Oates in her novel "them" calls "a nightmare of a city . . . a kind of stretched-out hole, a hole with a horizon."

The lower-class and lower-case "them" of her story are the city's dispossessed, always craving a standard of living beyond their reach and indulging in violent satisfactions. "All of Detroit is melodrama, and most lives in Detroit fated to be melodramatic," Oates writes.

Iacocca is an exception to this rule. Despite his attempt to portray himself as just another victim clobbered by the boss, nobody would ever mistake this Promethean entrepreneur for one of "them." He has performed wonders, and now, like any culture hero, he bears the responsibility of leading his city — and perhaps his country — into a golden age of prosperity.

IN FACT, these are not the worst of times for Detroit. A high-tech "second industrial revolution" promises to restore some of the city's status and image. White-collar opportunities are expanding and a riverfront complex increasingly attracts convention, tourist and suburban dollars. But nobody can overlook the fact that the Detroit area will lose half a million automotive jobs in the 1980s, and that since 1970 people have been leaving the city at an average rate of 30,000 a year.

The Reckoning, as David Halberstam calls it in his recent book on the Japanese challenge, must be paid disproportionately by the blue-collar unemployed and the (mostly black) unemployed. For Iacocca and the new sycophants of Detroit, incredible bonuses. For the masses, more reminders of the good life that they must covet from afar.

FOR SOME OF THE poor, crime is a way of grabbing their fate by the shoulders. Without suggesting a glib cause-and-effect relation, it's impossible not to make some connection between Motor City and Murder City as manifestations of the bitch goddess. The automobile has always been an American symbol of success and the mystique of Detroit in the national imagination derives from its association with a product of such immense power and beauty. . . .

There is a statue in front of the City-County Building called "The Spirit of Detroit." It depicts a titanic figure with a family in one hand and the sun in the other. Iacocca has tried to make himself into The Spirit of Detroit, a hopeful symbol of how muscular leadership can bring astonishing cash rewards in a capitalistic society. He deserves our gratitude for his achievements. But he needs to be aware that children reared on envy and greed can grow up to be desperate and dangerous citizens.

Biden shows candor

Next week, the Senate Judiciary committee will begin its hearings on the merits of appointing federal judge Robert Bork to the U.S. Supreme Court. It's bound to be interesting for a couple of reasons.

Those whose hobby is presidential politics will be closely watching Sen. Joseph Biden, D-DeI., whose campaign was slow to catch fire in Iowa but has rebounded to double-digit percentages in recent polls.

Biden is the chair of the judiciary committee, and thus will control the proceedings. He's been criticized by many for coming to a conclusion on Bork before the hearings, in effect making his mind up before he's heard the facts. This has caused Biden to look like a waffler, recanting his anti-Bork position and saying he "probably" wouldn't support him, which is what he says he really meant all along.

FIRST, LET ME remind you that as a registered independent, I won't be voting in the caucuses and therefore don't care as much who wins, as long as the process is done correctly and cleanly.

Second, let me note that those very people who are slamming Biden for making up his mind before he's heard all the facts have done the very same thing themselves: presuming not only that Bork should be confirmed, but also that Biden hasn't done any homework on the topic.

And third, some of us find it refreshing to see someone shoot from the hip and be candid.

Bork is not a stranger to those who have been around politics for more than a few years. As an official in the Nixon administration, he was an integral part of the "Saturday Night Massacre" which led to the firing of special prosecutor Archibald Cox. Whether that was right or wrong is not important to my point: the fact is that Bork is a known entity to many in Congress.

HE HAS ALSO BEEN a federal judge for some time, a position he was able to get only after confirmation proceedings in Congress. Bork was a leading candidate for the open seat which eventually went to Justice Antonin Scalia last year, with much focus placed on him then as well. And now, senators are receiving thick briefing books from their own staffs, the judiciary committee and the White House as well as materials from other partisan groups.

The point is that Biden and the others who have read this material likely have a good idea in their minds about Bork and the hearings are there to either confirm that feeling or shatter misconceptions. But to think that one would come to the hearings without any feeling on the topic is not only improbable, but likely impossible. And that leads me to my third point.

IT'S TRUE THAT when Biden has made his leanings known, he has sometimes been a bit too forceful. Biden is a great orator, and like many (most?) politicians he loves to hear himself speak. Sometimes he gets caught up in the rhetoric of it all, and sometimes people take what he says as unconditional when he didn't mean it to be so.

Regardless, in the Bork matter as in many other situations, Biden says what he thinks. Often, this is unwise politically and gets him into trouble. But there is something different about the approach.

POLLS SHOW THAT MOST of you are looking for a candidate who will be honest with you, with a degree of confidence. Issues aside, talking with Biden the past couple of years, I have been impressed with the sense of honesty that he conveys. Not to suggest that the rest of the lot are liars, but that Biden answers questions directly, isn't afraid to take his stand and seems genuine about it. The current degree of waffling has been brought on by "advisers" who panic at the thought of alienating any segment of the voting populace.

Biden himself realizes that sometimes his earnestness gets out of hand. But if you want a straight-shooter, you've got to expect some misfires on occasion. Whether those misfires would strike the wrong people the wrong way too often is a judgement Iowa's Democrats will have to make in February.

I like Joe Biden personally. He's a dedicated, sincere individual. He deserves better than he's gotten in the past few weeks. But lest you think this is an endorsement, I refer you to point one.

P.E. not needed

To the Editor:
It was encouraging to read of the UI Liberal Arts Student Association's proposal to end the university's archaic physical education requirement for liberal arts students (The Daily Iowan, Sept. 3). Doubtless the institutional forces that have kept such a requirement in place long after most universities have dropped it will be great if not insurmountable. Nonetheless, it is not fair to require students with double-digit tuition increases and a now standard five years of undergraduate study to attend 30 weeks of physical education classes teaching skills that most people could pick up in an afternoon at a tennis court or reading an article in a fitness magazine.

To argue that the private sector demands fitness-conscious, young Reebok-wearers to fill its ranks ignores other more glaring inadequacies of the UI liberal arts education, namely computer illiteracy; lack of required coursework in art, art history and music; and overcrowded classrooms. Future employers will likely be unimpressed by UI graduates who never learned how to use a word processor but can recite the principles of canoeing and dance the fox trot.

Welfare farce?

To the Editor:
With regard to the article concerning the welfare reform meeting (The Daily Iowan, Aug. 28) would like to make it known that as an ADC recipient, I had been told that it was cancelled. I received a letter on Aug. 26 informing me of the statewide teleconference meeting and this letter invited me to attend. I was led to believe that this meeting was to give me the chance to express my ideas and feelings. I quote "Welfare reform must have input from the people affected by welfare — you."

When I arrived the morning of the meeting, I was informed that the meeting was cancelled and there was no rescheduling date. As a consolation prize, I was given my very own copy of Gov. Terry Branstad's welfare reform bill and encouraged to write to Rep. Herr, the chief of the Bureau of Economic Assistance and chair of the Welfare Reform Committee.

In your article I saw an indication that any welfare recipients had been included in the meeting at all. Was this just a statewide farce? Is there any chance we will ever see our chance?

"I LOOK ON it as a new opportunity," Hawtrely said. "There certainly will be some modification in what the board tells the administration."

While admitting some concern that the new board members would take some time to "get a hold" of their positions, Hawtrely said she was optimistic about the future of the board.

"On certain items, such as Phase III funds, I think the board might be slowed down by its need to be informed," Hawtrely said. "But I think that's good, because it will allow us to get more input from the teachers and the community. I'm delighted by the results and ready to work."

Johnson County Auditor Tom Slockett said he was pleased with the number of voters who turned out this year.

"I think you have to put it in perspective," Slockett said. "Last year we had the lowest turnout ever for a school board election, so I think this year's totals showed a marked improvement."

"I would say this was a normal turnout this year."

Hart's front-running campaign for the Democratic presidential nomination ended May 8 after disclosures that he spent a weekend with Rice in his Washington, D.C., townhouse and took an overnight boat trip to Bimini in the Bahamas with Rice and another couple.

In response to a question about the now-famous weekend, Hart said, "I made a serious mistake. I should not have been in the company of a woman not my wife except with my wife present. I should not have been with Miss Rice. That was a mistake."

PRESSED BY Koppel about the widely printed photograph showing Rice sitting on Hart's lap in Bimini, Hart said, "It was a very, very bad mistake. I will have to live with that for the rest of my life. I was relaxing, I was not on watch, I let my guard down."

"I'm not a perfect man. I'm a human being. I commit sins," Hart said.

Hart publicly apologized for his actions and said, "I assume total responsibility. I do not blame anybody else."

Although his remarks were far milder than during the angry speech that marked the end of his campaign, Hart still criticized the media's role in investigating the private lives of candidates and public officials.

Saying he wanted to debate this issue as part of the campaign, Hart said he was concerned that if an "invasion of privacy" becomes so great — as it was in his case — "they will choose not to run."

Schools plan use of Phase III funds

By Craig Sterrett
The Daily Iowan

Members of the Iowa City School Board decided Tuesday night that they will negotiate with the Iowa City Education Association and reach a decision over the distribution of Phase III funds.

The $847,000 in funds for which the district is eligible is part of a three-part, $92.5 million pay plan passed by the Iowa Legislature to improve the overall quality of education in the state of Iowa.

"Clearly the intent is to be flexible and to provide for as many changes as possible rather than to limit it," Iowa City School Superintendent David Cronin said.

The proposal of how to distribute the funds will soon be sent to the teachers in the district.

topic, Cronin said. The proposals include:

• No. 1 — $100,000 to pay for teachers to travel to and attend professional meetings.

• No. 2 — $205,000 to support sabbaticals or professional leaves lasting less than a year.

• No. 3 — $250,000 in funds to provide for planning, presenting and attending summer institutes during the summer.

• No. 4 — $125,000 to support curriculum writing.

• No. 5 — $50,000 to support secondary chair positions and elementary leadership positions in Iowa City Schools.

• No. 6 — $100,000 to provide money for support of teachers in the district who serve in coordination roles.

• No. 7 — $12,000 to be added to the $4000 currently given in the form of teacher awards.

There are two other parts to the educational improvement law: Phase I, which has already been implemented, raised starting salaries for teachers in the state from $15,000 to $18,000.

Phase II will raise experienced teachers' salaries across-the-board. Iowa City teachers will receive an average $900-$1300 in Phase II raises.

THE STATE will begin distribution of the Phase III funds on Feb. 1, 1988, but the board has attempted to get details of the proposal worked out quickly.

The plan could be submitted (to the Iowa Department of Education) as early as October and approval could be as early as Thanksgiving," Cronin said.

The seven proposals for distributing the funds are the result of 22 discussions by the board on the LASA plans to send the petitions to Sen. Charles Grassley, R-Iowa, and Sen. Tom Harkin, D-Iowa.

LASA chose to hold the rally

Fischer said his speech at the rally will focus on educational issues that could be affected by the new Supreme Court justice.

Fischer said he expects a large crowd to turn out for the rally.

Varn wants state laws to improve UI parking

By Monica Seigel
The Daily Iowan

If Sen. Rich Varn, D-Solon, had his way, UI and Iowa City parking officials would be required by state law to improve the parking situation in the area.

Varn, speaking to the UI Liberal Arts Student Association Tuesday night about the effects of the Iowa Legislature's last session on state public higher education, questioned students about the parking situation and joked that the problem should be dealt with by the state.

"Is everyone else pissed off about the parking problems here?" Varn, who is also a UI law student, said.

"I hope you folks are going to lobby to try to get more spaces replaced than they take away from you because this is crazy and it's costing all of us a lot of money," he said. "I've been harping at them for three years now and I don't seem to be getting anywhere, so I'm going to start introducing laws rather than just threatening to do that and try to get them to do something about it because I'm sick of it."

VARN SAID he was glad to be able to bring good news to UI students from the state Legislature, something he said does not often happen.

He cited the passage of a $2 million college work-study plan — $1 million of which was earmarked for Iowa's three state universities — as the biggest success for education from the last legislative session and one of the things he had to fight hardest for.

"I had to sell my soul for it," he said. "Faust would be proud."

Varn is chairman of an interim committee appointed to look into the feasibility of a trust fund tuition payment plan. According to such a plan, parents would prepay a portion of their child's college tuition to guarantee that child access to higher education in the state.

Admitting there are many details to be worked out in the plan, Varn said about 30 states are currently looking into similar trust fund programs.

During the upcoming session, the Legislature will also look into putting a cap on tuition, Varn said.

Iowa City police search for missing samples

The Daily Iowan

Iowa City Police Tuesday night were looking for vials intended for testing at the UI Medical Laboratory after a canvas mail bag containing vials was found at Creekside Park in Iowa City.

According to a release issued Tuesday, the bag was found at about 3 p.m. and had been opened and its contents apparently rummaged through.

In addition to the mail, containers and vials with samples were found in the bag. The statement said they were apparently intended for analysis at the UI Medical Laboratories.

The report did not say what materials were in the samples.

None of the containers found in the bag appeared to be opened, according to the police release, but it was unknown if any vials had been removed before the bag was discovered.

Police are asking residents in the area of Creekside Park who have information about the mailbag or who find additional containers or vials to notify the Iowa City Police Department immediately.

Players threaten Sept. 22 strike

From DI wire services

The NFL players' union, saying its members "will not accept the servitude" demanded by management, Tuesday set a Sept. 22 strike deadline with both sides far apart in talks for a new contract.

The strike date, approved 24-4 by the union's Board of Player Representatives, would come following the second week of the season and would throw the league into its second strike in five years.

The union is demanding unfettered free agency, improved pension benefits and more guaranteed contracts. The owners seek mandatory random drug-testing and a restrictive rookie salary scale.

"Management really left us no choice but to set a strike date," Gene Upshaw, executive director of the NFL Players Association, said at a news conference Tuesday in Washington. "These guys want to play football; that's all they want to do. But they will not accept the servitude they want us to accept."

BUT JACK DONLAN, executive director of the NFL Management Council, the league's bargaining arm, accused the union of trying to hurl the labor talks into a crisis atmosphere by announcing such a close strike date.

"The history of this union is to put negotiations in a crisis. They've never had a negotiations without a strike," Donlan said.

In New York, NFL Commissioner Rozelle said he was ready to enter the talks at any time but preferred to do so when Gene Upshaw and Donlan were closer to an agreement on some key issues.

One major stumbling block in the negotiations is free agency. The players want to be able to move more freely between the teams

Lineup remains puzzle for Iowa's Fry

By Mike Trilk
The Daily Iowan

Things haven't changed much as far as the lineup goes for the Iowa football team heading into Saturday's game against Arizona.

But something is very different in the camp this week in that the Hawkeyes are 0-1 for the first time since 1982 and a win at Tucson is not a sure thing.

"Obviously we are extremely disappointed in regards to the outcome of the football game," Iowa Coach Hayden Fry said at his weekly press conference Tuesday.

Football

"Tennessee moved the ball when they had to, they made the play when they had to. It has been a very difficult time for us knowing that we certainly could have won the ball game. The biggest difference in opening up this year from recent years is the quality of the opposition. We certainly have to consider that in evaluating our football team and also projecting what this football team can become."

IN EVALUATING HIS team, Fry noticed a particular problem — conditioning. Fry said his Hawkeyes just plain ran out of gas against Tennessee, and he is taking measures to prevent a reoccurrence in Arizona's humid playing conditions.

"That is a very big concern of ours," Fry said of the southwestern climate. "I called down there the other day and the temperature was 106 degrees. Against Tennessee we just ran out of gas. That is one of the first games since I've been here that we weren't in superior condition.

"We changed up this year for the first time," Fry added. "We really put an emphasis on speed. We went with speed and quickness and as a result we ran a lot of short sprints, just as fast as we could run and obviously you can't run very far at top speed. We did increase our speed, but little did we know that from an endurance standpoint it would be that noticeable in the fourth quarter."

IOWA NOTES

• Fry played all three quarterbacks, as promised, in the opening loss to the Volunteers but said that he won't make a similar promise this week for the Arizona contest.

"I can't make that statement this week because I just don't know if all three of them will play," Fry said. "We don't even know who will start as of yet. Obviously rotating three quarterbacks is not a utopia situation. The reason we play all three is that right now we don't know who is No. 1. All three had some good spots but all three had some weaknesses, too. We will start the Big Ten season with a No. 1 quarterback."

Keith Spengel returns a shot during a first round game Tuesday afternoon in the Derby Days Volleyball Tournament

Big Ten moves into full swing this weekend

By Mike Trilk
The Daily Iowan

There is an adage common to football coaches around the Big Ten: A football team makes the most improvement between games one and two.

Should the adage prove true it would come as good news to Hayden Fry of Iowa and Mike White of Illinois, as both coaches are at the helm of teams that sport 0-1 records.

Michigan State Coach George Perles has the Spartans standing at 1-0 but improvement would be welcome in East Lansing as the Spartans are headed into four straight games against quality opposition.

As for the other seven coaches in the Big Ten, they won't think about that adage until next week because Saturday is the first day their teams get to tee it up.

One thing is for sure, though—all seven coaches are eager to see where they stand.

Notre Dame at Michigan

The unranked Fighting Irish visit Ann Arbor, Mich., this weekend for a game that will be filled with as much tradition as talent. Bo Schembechler vs. Lou Holtz, Heisman Trophy candidates Tim Brown vs. Jamie Morris, The Michigan Band vs. The Notre Dame Band. Two rookie quarterbacks squaring off against each other. This game has so many angles that not even usually outspoken Schembechler will predict a win for his highly touted, and favored, Wolverines.

"I don't know what will happen," Schembechler said during the Big Ten teleconference Tuesday. "I do think there will be some scoring. It won't be a defensive battle like people are predicting because neither defense is capable of dominating either offense."

Notre Dame could be Michigan's toughest opponent until the Wolverines meet up with Michigan State in the Big Ten opener, and the fact that the Irish come to town, with a backfield sporting Brown, in the opener has Schembechler on the edge of his seat.

"We will make a few mistakes but we hope they aren't mistakes that could cost us the game," Schembechler said. "The way to defense a guy like Brown is to know where he is at all times."

West Virginia at Ohio State

As far as Earle Bruce is concerned, all the preseason hype the Buckeyes are attracting is just that ... hype.

"We have to go out and play someone to know where we stand," Bruce said. "Everything up till now is just predictions. We do have good football players. Now all we have to do is go out and prove it on Saturday afternoon."

The Buckeyes may have the best defense in the nation led by senior linebacker Chris Spielman but offense could be a problem. Ohio State will enter Saturday's game

NEW YORK — In a 53-minute match that lasted 5 hours and 22 minutes amid raindrops, Helena Sukova beat Claudia Kohde-Kilsch, 6-1, 6-3, Tuesday to become the first semifinalist at the U.S. Open.

The match was the only one completed because of almost steady rain throughout the day. Despite the conditions, officials waited nine hours, until 7:02 p.m., before calling off further play.

In the only other matches started, both men's fourth-rounders, second seed Stefan Edberg was leading fellow Swede Jonas B. Svensson, 6-2, 5-5, and No. 3 Mats Wilander was ahead of unseeded American Ken Flach, 6-3, 6-3.

AMONG THE MATCHES postponed was a quarterfinal between defending women's champion Martina Navratilova and No. 8 Gabriela Sabatini.

Two rain delays, totaling 4:29, occurred during the Sukova-Kohde-Kilsch match on a dark, dreary afternoon, which followed one of the more hectic days ever witnessed at the Open.

Kohde-Kilsch, the beneficiary of Hana Mandlikova's temper tantrum Monday, expressed displeasure at the conditions Tuesday.

"It was the toughest conditions I ever played," the ninth-seeded West German said. "We were on and off the court. We waited four hours. It was really tough. I don't know if they would have done that with other players, the No. 1 or No. 2 players."

SUKOVA, THE LOSING finalist last year to Navratilova, was more tolerant of the conditions, saying, "It was bad for both of us. You just kind of wait and don't know what's going to happen next. I had the advantage because I had won the first set (before the first delay of 4:11). It was better for me than for her."

Sukova, the No. 6 seed, had five aces and only one double fault. The tall Czechoslovakian broke service in the second and fourth games to win the first set handily from her doubles partner. After an early exchange of breaks in the second set, Sukova broke again in the

Cubs tab Lucchesi as interim manager

By Kent McDill
United Press International

CHICAGO — Gene Michael wanted his predicted departure from Chicago to be as classy as possible, so he left before things could become ugly.

Michael resigned as manager of the Chicago Cubs Monday and 111s general manager Dallas Green accepted the resignation Tuesday morning. Green then named Cubs Coach Frank Lucchesi as interim manager for the rest of the 1987 season.

Michael was expected to be fired at the end of the 1987 season, his first complete season as the Cubs' manager. He has argued privately with Green about on-field maneuvers and off-field trades all season.

AFTER THE CUBS LOST to Pittsburgh 3-2 Monday, a local freelance radio network correspondent asked Michael if he wanted to manage the club in 1988.

"I decided to quit a week ago," Michael told Bruce Levine. "I don't want to come back." From that point, Michael was out as manager. He and Green talked Monday night and again Tuesday before Green announced he accepted Michael's resignation.

Michael, whose overall record with the Cubs was 114-124, said there would be no point waiting until the season was over to end

Tracksters move from Rome to Rieti

RIETI, Italy (UPI) — Sprinters Ben Johnson and Carl Lewis won separate 100-meter heats Tuesday at an international track and field meet.

Johnson, who set a world record of 9.83 seconds in the event last week at the World Track and Field Championships in Rome, used a fast start to win his heat easily.

The Canadian was timed in 10.35 seconds after slowing considerably near the finish. Harvey Glance of the United States was second in 10.41 followed by compatriot Mark Witherspoon in 10.44.

Lewis, who ran second to Johnson in the World Championships, was timed in 10.05. He finished a meter ahead of Jamaican Ray Stewart, the Rome bronze medalist. Henry Thomas of the United States was third in 10.44.

The Rieti meet, scheduled only 48 hours after the World Championships concluded, featured 13 stars from the Rome event. Many were using Rieti as a final tuneup for the Mobil-IAAF final Friday at Brussels, Belgium.

Rome gold medalists Stefka Kostadinova of Bulgaria (women's high jump), Khristo Markov of Bulgaria (triple jump) and Soviet pole vaulter Sergei Bubka all won their specialties Tuesday.

Kostadinova and Tamara Bykova of the Soviet Union repeated their Rome placings, with the Bulgarian clearing 6 feet, 9 inches, short of the world record mark of 6-10 1-4 she established in Rome.

Bubka, two-time winner of the World Championships title in the vault, cleared 18-8 1/2 to beat Atanas Tarve of Bulgaria.

On The Line

It's that time again, time for On The Line. Our games this week are relatively easy.

For example, take the first game. We all know who will, or who should, win. I believe the team's name starts with, oh let's say, the letter L. Now if any of our wonderful readers can predict the most outcomes of the 10 games correctly, he or she will win the grand prize and become the parent and guardian of a beautiful bouncing baby keg.

Now don't get so excited by those last three glorious letters that you fill out the ballot incorrectly. First, circle the winners of the top nine games, second, make your most intelligent guess for the tiebreaker game, third, include your name and phone number and please write legibly. Now this last part can be tricky: deposit your entry by noon on Thursday at 111 Communications Center, The Daily Iowan's business office.

The happy little keg has been generously contributed by the folks at Sports Column, 12 S. Dubuque St. A spot to kick back, relax, watch the game and enjoy your favorite beverage. It's a place where staff writer Tom Dickerson could hopefully recognize a familiar face and co-sports editor Eric Hess could possibly find a fragile woman, something he still hopes the tooth fairy will bring him. Well, maybe not.

White Sox escape Minnesota surge

United Press International

MINNEAPOLIS — Center fielder Ken Williams threw out the potential game-tying run at the plate with a throw in the ninth inning Tuesday night, helping the Chicago White Sox to a 4-3 victory over the Minnesota Twins.

Floyd Bannister, 12-10, won his fourth consecutive start, yielding three runs on seven hits while striking out five and walking one. Bobby Thigpen worked two innings to get his ninth save. Bert Blyleven, 13-11, was the loser.

The Twins loaded the bases with one out in the ninth. Roy Smalley flew to medium center, where Williams caught the ball and threw a one-hopper to catcher Ron Hassey, who tagged out a sliding Al Newman trying to score from third.

Minnesota, which lost for the second time in seven games, started the day three games in front of Oakland in the American League West.

Gary Redus put Chicago ahead 4-3 in the seventh with his 10th homer, a two-run shot to left that came after Ken Williams doubled.

Minnesota took a 1-0 lead in the second when Gary Gaetti doubled and scored on Don Baylor's RBI single.

Mariners 7, Indians 0

CLEVELAND — Jim Presley and Domingo Ramos hit two-out, two-run homers in the second inning Tuesday night to back Mike Morgan's seven-hit shutout, pacing the Seattle Mariners to a 7-0 victory over the Cleveland Indians.

Presley added a run-scoring double to finish with three RBIs and boost Morgan, 11-15. The right-hander matched his career high in victories set last year as he won for the first time in five starts. Morgan struck out two and walked two in pitching his second shutout and seventh complete game. Only two Cleveland runners reached third base: Joe Carter in the second inning and Cory Snyder in the fifth.

Rich Yett, 3-7, uncorked three wild pitches and absorbed Cleveland's 12th loss in 17 games. Seattle stranded 15 runners.

Alvin Davis led off the second with a double down the right-field line. With two out, Presley sent Yett's 2-1 pitch 400 feet to right-center for his 22nd homer.

After Rey Quinones singled to left, Ramos lined a 3-2 pitch to left field for his second homer and a 4-0 lead. Ramos's previous homer this season was an inside-the-parker at Seattle's Kingdome. Ramos went 4 for 5 with three singles for the first four-hit game of his career.

Presley's RBI double knocked out Yett in the fifth. Quinones and Mickey Brantley greeted Don Gordon with run-scoring singles to make it 7-0.

Brewers 6, Blue Jays 4

MILWAUKEE — Juan Castillo doubled home two runs and scored

American League

once in a three-run Milwaukee second inning Tuesday night and the Brewers went on to a 6-4 victory over Toronto that snapped a six-game Blue Jays' winning streak.

The loss dropped Toronto into a virtual tie for first in the American League East with Detroit, which was rained out against Baltimore. The Tigers lead the division by .002 percentage points.

Chris Bosio, 10-5, allowed seven hits in 6 2-3 innings, walking three and striking out two. Chuck Crim, the third Milwaukee pitcher, earned his ninth save. He induced Tony Fernandez to bounce into a double play with one out in the ninth to end the game.

In the Milwaukee second, Ernest Riles drew a one-out walk off Dave Stieb, 13-8, and Dale Sveum singled. Both runners scored when Castillo lined a double into the left-field corner.

Paul Molitor struck out but Robin Yount, hitless in his previous 19 at-bats, blooped a triple just inside the right-field line to give Milwaukee a 3-0 lead.

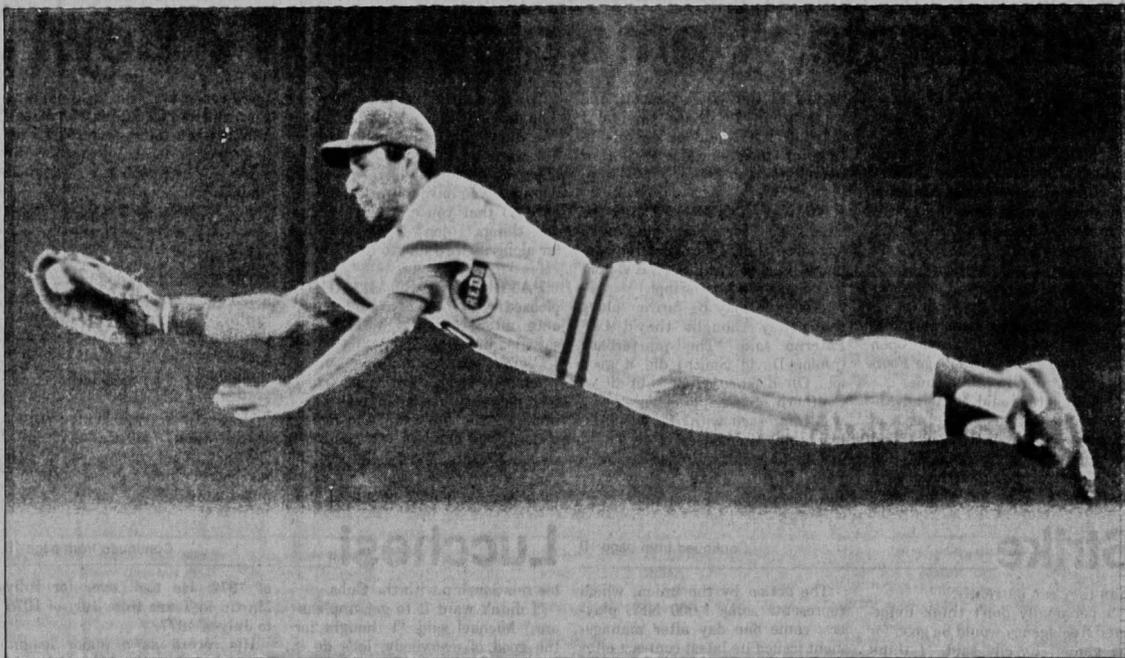

George Bell, whose nose was broken Monday night when he was hit by a pitch thrown by Bill Wegman, doubled twice and scored each time for Toronto.

Bell doubled to lead off the fourth and scored on a single to left by Jesse Barfield to cut the lead to 3-1.

The Brewers increased their lead to 4-1 in the fifth when Glenn Braggs opened with a double, went to third on a groundout by Greg Brock and scored on a squeeze bunt by B.J. Surhoff.

Bell doubled leading off the fifth, took third on a one-out wild pitch and scored on Barfield's groundout to second, making it 4-2.

Milwaukee went ahead 5-2 in the sixth as Sveum beat out a bunt and continued to second on third baseman Rance Mulliniks' throwing error. Castillo sacrificed him to third and Yount singled him home.

Cincinnati's Terry Francona dives for and grabs ball by Los Angeles' John Shelby in second inning of play at Riverfront Stadium. Shelby was out at first base on the play. Los Angeles defeated its National League West foe 5-3 before a crowd of 14,759.

Stubbs, Dodgers down Reds

United Press International

CINCINNATI — Franklin Stubbs broke a 0 for 33 slump with two hits and three RBIs and Orel Hershiser yielded seven hits over seven innings Tuesday night, pacing the Los Angeles Dodgers to a 5-3 triumph over the Cincinnati Reds.

Hershiser, 14-13, who had lost four of his previous five decisions, struck out one and walked three before being relieved in the eighth by Alejandro Pena, who struck out the side in the ninth in earning his third save.

Stubbs powered the Dodgers' 10-hit attack with a two-run triple and an RBI single. Steve Sax had a triple and two singles and scored twice.

Ron Robinson, 6-4, surrendered 10 hits and three earned runs over 6 2/3 innings.

The Dodgers erupted for four runs in the third inning to go ahead 4-2. Hershiser reached on second baseman Jeff Treadway's fielding error, Sax singled and Stubbs cracked a two-run triple that bounded past charging center fielder Leo Garcia and rolled to the wall.

Pirates 4, Cubs 1

CHICAGO — Vicente Palacios pitched a six-hitter over eight innings for his first major-league start Tuesday, carrying the Pittsburgh Pirates past Chicago 4-1 in the debut of Cubs interim manager Frank Lucchesi.

Palacios, 1-0, was backed by pinch-hitter Mike Diaz, who singled in Andy Van Slyke from second base with the winning run in the eighth inning. The victory was the Pirates' eighth in 12 games against the Cubs this season.

Palacios recorded his first major-league victory in his second appearance. He struck out four and walked one. Jim Gott pitched the ninth for his eighth save. Rick Sutcliffe, 15-8, failed to win for the seventh straight time. He yielded nine hits with nine strikeouts and two walks in 7 1/3 innings.

Braves 4, Padres 2

ATLANTA — Pete Smith scattered six hits over 8 2/3 innings in his major-league debut and Dale Murphy cracked his career-high 38th homer Tuesday night, powering the Atlanta Braves to a 4-2 victory over the San Diego Padres.

Smith, recalled from Greenville of the Double-A Southern League on Sept. 1, retired the first 11 batters he faced before John Kruk reached on an infield single. The right-hander struck out four and walked two.

He weakened in the ninth, surrendering three hits, and was replaced by Jim Acker, who record the final out for his ninth save. Just 2,701 people attended the game, a season low for the Braves.

Expos 4, Cardinals 1

MONTREAL — Bryn Smith and Andy McGaffigan combined on a four-hitter and Mitch Webster scored twice Tuesday night, helping the Montreal Expos to their 10th victory in 13 games, a 4-1 decision over the St. Louis Cardinals.

Montreal closed within three games of the first-place Cardinals in the National League East. The New York Mets started the day 3 1-2 games behind St. Louis.

Smith scattered three hits over six innings to improve to 9-6. McGaffigan yielded one hit in three innings for his 10th save. Bob Forsch, 10-5, was the loser.

The Cardinals, who lead the NL in runs scored and batting average, have just three runs and 12 hits in the first two games of the three-game series with Montreal.

Penn State, 'Bama clash in 'TV Bowl'

By Joe Cialini
United Press International

UNIVERSITY PARK, Pa. — Penn State Coach Joe Paterno Tuesday said he may have placed his team at a disadvantage when he agreed to move up the ninth-ranked Nittany Lions' game against No. 17 Alabama.

The Crimson Tide was originally scheduled to visit Penn State on Oct. 24 but the game was moved to Saturday so that it could open CBS' coverage of the College Football Association in prime time.

"I felt there would be no advantage to them or us," Paterno said Tuesday. "I felt both teams had lost a lot of key personnel. We had lost a quarterback and they lost a quarterback. They lost a fine linebacker in Cornelius Bennett and we lost one in Shane Conlan. I didn't feel it would be an advantage or disadvantage to either team."

NOW, PATERNO FEELS the Crimson Tide may be more advanced than expected after Alabama's season-opening 38-6 victory over Southern Mississippi.

"Alabama may be further along than they thought they'd be," Paterno said. "The quarterback (junior David Smith) did a good job. On defense, they shut down Southern Mississippi completely. I was impressed with the way Alabama played defense."

Paterno was not impressed with Penn State's 45-19 victory over Bowling Green.

"We're a little behind where I thought we'd be," Paterno said. "We didn't play well on Saturday. We were a little tired and that happens when you have a young team and you have to work them so hard so that you can teach them new things. I don't think we're as far along as we'd like to be."

PATERNO IS RARELY pleased with his team's performance after a game but nothing satisfied him Saturday.

"We've got to improve everywhere," he said. "Our pass rush was not very good. Our coverage broke down and we had some missed assignments. Offensively, we were jittery. We didn't come off the ball well. We were not very cohesive. We had 11 penalties and three turnovers. Our kicking game showed it can be decent, but there's a lot of work to be done. We've got to be better in every area of our game to be competitive against Alabama."

To anyone besides Paterno, there were some positives in the Nittany Lions' victory.

The Penn State defense surrendered only three net yards rushing, junior tailback Blair Thomas gained 94 yards on 18 carries and senior quarterback Matt Knizner completed 9 of 13 passes for 165 yards and two touchdowns.

"But we weren't good at anything last week," Paterno said. "Whether that means we're just not good or not, I guess we'll find out this week."

than they can currently.

"I personally don't think unfettered free agency would be good for the game," Rozelle said. "I think you have to realize that the National Football League has been very, very successful with its present system. I think the players would like to have it modified, to have it changed and I think the owners should make some changes in it."

THE FIVE-YEAR collective bargaining agreement that settled the 1982 strike expired Aug. 31, leaving the NFL players without a contract. The union and management have bargained only once since Aug. 14. The union broke off talks Thursday after management refused to protect the roster spots of player representatives.

"The players felt this was the time we had the most leverage," Upshaw said. "If we delayed any longer, that would just prolong the talks."

The action by the union, which represents some 1,600 NFL players, came one day after management issued its latest contract offer to the union, including a "liberalized" free-agency system, a two-man roster increase and improved benefits for players.

"The whole proposal was a $45 million take-back," Upshaw said. Donlan called the proposal "a significant offer" that made "across-the-board improvements in every major economic area."

UPSHAW ADDED HE rejects the suggestion by the Management Council that a federal mediator be called. He said no new talks are planned, but would speak to Donlan Thursday after a meeting of the NFL owners in suburban Chicago about arranging future sessions.

Upshaw also said the union has contacted several lending institutions about arranging loans for players to help defray costs during a strike.

a final decision today. It is doubtful Foggie will play, making junior Alan Holt the starter on Saturday.

"The Foggie thing is real frustrating," Gutekunst said. "Here is a good kid, who has done nothing wrong and now he is being punished."

"That's all I can say about it now," Gutekunst added. "Holt was more of a passer in high school, but he was also a triple jumper so he can run. He doesn't have the explosiveness that Foggie has."

UNI will bring a 1-0 record with them that bothers Gutekunst for several reasons.

"The UNI win was away from home, in 88-degree weather, and it his relationship with the Cubs.

"I didn't want it to get unpleasant," Michael said. "I thought for the good of everybody, let's do it right now. I think it frees up Dallas to think about next year."

"It wasn't any fun reading about whether I was going to be resigned," Michael said. "I could handle it. I just didn't enjoy it."

Michael was well-liked by the Cubs' players. "I thought he was one of the better managers I have played for," said veteran catcher Jim Sundberg, who has had 16 managers in 14 major league seasons. "He is a learner, and I think he worked hard."

"IF HE WAS TRULY not happy here and not comfortable with his situation, then it's good he did it," pitcher Scott Sanderson said. "I respect him for being honest."

Lucchesi, 59, will manage for the third time in his career. He managed the Philadelphia Phillies from the start of the 1970 season to July of 1972. He took over for Billy Martin in Texas from July of 1975 to July of 1977.

His record as a major league manager is 341-429. He said he did not plan to apply for the permanent managerial job.

The leading candidate to be named manager in 1988 is third base coach John Vukovich, who managed the team for two games when Jim Frey was fired in 1986.

There are two other names being discussed as possible Cubs' managers. Hall of Fame outfielder Billy Williams has been named manager of one of Chicago's Instructional League teams and has expressed interest in a major league managerial post.

Former Cleveland manager Pat Corrales is also a possibility. He is a good friend of Green's who took over at Philadelphia on Green's recommendation after Green left the Phillies to become GM at Chicago.

happened in the fourth quarter after they ran off 17 unanswered points," Gutekunst said. "That tells me two things about them. They are veteran team, and they are well coached. We are going to have our hands full with them."

Other games in the Big Ten this week will bring Rose Bowl champion Arizona State to Illinois, Iowa goes to Arizona, Wisconsin hosts Minnesota with Badger quarterback Bud Keyes recovering from a recent sprained knee. First-year Purdue Coach Fred Akers will take the Boilermakers to Washington while Northwestern travels to Duke. And Indiana opens at home against Rice.

seventh and ninth games.

For many, it was a welcome day of rest and helped place focus on the much anticipated quarterfinal matchup between defending champion Ivan Lendl and John McEnroe scheduled for today.

THE LULL CAUSED BY the rain came one day after a session in which Boris Becker squandered a two-set deficit and was eliminated by Brad Gilbert. Jimmy Connors, a five-time Open champion, also gained the quarterfinals along with Lendl and McEnroe, while the women played all eight of their fourth-round matches.

This will be the fifth meeting between McEnroe and Lendl in the Open, with each man winning twice. McEnroe won in the 1980 quarterfinals and 1984 final, and Lendl in the 1982 semis and 1985 final. McEnroe leads the series between the two, 14-12.

"I would prefer to play him later on, but I guess I don't have a choice," McEnroe said.

McENROE, A three-time Open champion, advanced to the quarterfinals Monday with a 6-4, 7-6 (7-2), 6-2 victory over Andres Gomez and immediately set his sights on Lendl, his old antagonist.

"I'm looking forward to it," McEnroe said following the Gomez victory. "I feel I need to pick up a couple of areas in my game, and I need to serve quite a bit better. My first serve let me down today."

"I need to serve a bit better. I can't give him quite as many chances. I'm not going to be able to break his serve as much as I did with Andres'."

Lendl said it could be difficult for him and McEnroe to get up mentally for one of their wars so early in the competition.

"It doesn't matter when or where you play him; it is always difficult to play McEnroe, but playing him in the quarters will be something unusual," said Lendl, who has won his last 18 matches at the Open.

"We're used to playing each other in the semis or finals, so I'm sure it's going to be a new experience."

Fry

On Iowa's latest edition of the two-deep chart, the only major change was in the secondary where Kickoff Classic starter Anthony Wright is not listed at all. Wright left the Tennessee game with an ankle problem, but Fry says mum is the word on injuries this year.

Wide receiver Jim Mauro was also deleted from the two-deep roster due to a broken leg suffered in the opener. It is unknown if Mauro will return this season.

Quinn Early and Kevin Harmon were named Iowa's offensive MVPs by the coaching staff for their efforts against the Volunteers. Early caught nine passes for 131 yards while Harmon collected 165 all-purpose yards. Marv Cook was the runner-up. Joe Schuster and Dwight Sistrunk were the defensive MVPs and Rob Houghtlin was the specialty team winner. Ed Marshall and Jon Filloon were defensive and offensive scout team MVPs, respectively, for the opening week.

Geraldo vaults into TV with daily talk show

By Diane Halthman
Los Angeles Times

NEW YORK — A television critic's nightmare has become reality: Beginning this week, Geraldo Rivera will appear five days a week on the small screen.

Rivera — a highly theatrical journalist adored by the public and despised by much of the press, whose recent live specials include "Sons of Scarface: The New Mafia," "American Vice: The Doping of America" and "The Mystery of Al Capone's Vaults" — turns talk-show host with "Geraldo," a syndicated hour blending topical reportage with studio-audience discussion.

Like "Oprah" and "Donahue," "Geraldo" is launching himself in the talk-personality game using only one of his names. But there, Rivera said, the similarity ends.

Rivera said that his style will more resemble newsman Ted Koppel's on "Nightline" than the cozy studio approach of Oprah Winfrey and Phil Donahue. Using news footage and occasional on-location shooting, Rivera wants things hot, controversial, visual.

"THE DANGER of a pure studio show is that it becomes like broadcast radio," Rivera said in an interview here. His show "takes advantage of the fact that pictures speak louder than words."

Subjects of the first week of shows: the handicapped and their families; Marla Hanson, the New York model whose face was slashed with a razor; high-tech dating; the medical procedure of using fetal material to treat Parkinson's disease and its implications for the abortion issue; and "AIDS Assassins," about carriers of the HIV virus who do not inform their sex partners. "It should be considered a felonious assault, or at least attempted murder," Rivera said.

LONG ASSOCIATED with ABC News and its "20-20" news magazine, Rivera is excited about the prospect of a daily talk show.

"Being on television every day allows you the chance to influence the national dialogue, to have some influence on the way people think about the issues, maybe give them an alternative choice," he said.

He has big plans for the show. One story he wants to do is on "the AIDS kids" of Arcadia, Fla., who contracted the HIV virus through blood transfusions and were rejected by neighbors and schoolmates. The family made recent headlines when their home mysteriously burned to the ground.

"When we take the show on the road, I'm going to try to have a studio audience also, even if I have to put up a tent and do a tent show," Rivera said. "If we go to Arcadia, we could do it right in front of the burned-out house. Cameras, a studio audience of neighbors and others... that's not a bad idea! Maybe we'll do it."

"I'VE LIVED most of my life as a newsman traveling around, doing shows on the road. I want to get closer to the story," Rivera said.

Rivera will not get quite as close to the story as in his recent live specials, however. The new show will be taped, mostly because stations want the flexibility to air the program at various times on their schedules. Still, Rivera said the show will have the capacity to go live if necessary.

He insists that the show will not be edited.

Most critics will not miss having Rivera a little less close to the story than in the past. Despite the former "20-20" reporter's 10 Emmy Awards, few of his highly rated specials have won critical support.

TV ready to celebrate Constitution's birthday

By Jay Sharbutt
Los Angeles Times

NEW YORK — Despite the lack of striking visual images that made last year's celebration of the Statue of Liberty's birthday such a major television event, this month's observance of the Constitution's 200th anniversary also will bring an outpouring of special TV programs.

They range from parades and entertainment shows to network documentaries about the effect of the Constitution and a four-part series on PBS.

Only NBC lacks a major constitutional program. Its planned special was dropped in July because of a strike, now in its 11th week, against the network by 2,800 members of the National Association of Broadcast Employees and Technicians.

The halcyon Fourth of July celebration was a fairly easy affair for the networks to acknowledge. The hoopla attending the 100th anniversary of the Statue of Liberty here offered what they call "great visuals." Majestic sailing ships and warships passed in review by day. The night was filled with the rockets' red glare and bombs bursting in air.

But this time, television's task boils down to trying to interest viewers in what essentially is a video version of a high school essay, the kind that usually bears the title, "What the Constitution Means to Me."

Cheap desk turns out top secret

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — An executive who paid only $39.95 for a used desk because its drawers were locked later discovered the bargain contained classified documents and specifications for a planned Army attack helicopter, authorities said Tuesday.

Mark White bought the desk last week at a Monrovia office supply store and trucked it to his San Dimas office, where he used a screwdriver to open the drawers and found a Hughes Aircraft Co. technical library services directory, which was marked "classified," FBI spokesman Jim Nielson said.

White also discovered documents on the Army LHX helicopter being developed by Hughes Helicopter and other aerospace companies.

The document listed the helicopter's maximum take-off weight, top speed, weaponry and "reduced radar signature," or its ability to evade detection by an enemy, the Los Angeles Times reported. The helicopter is scheduled to be in operation in 1992.

"It's under investigation," Army Lt. Col. John Shapla said in Washington, D.C. "We're trying to check the details."

White, 35, a former Navy technician who is now an advertising man, told the Times he bought the used desk at a bargain price because its drawers were locked shut and the key lost, but "one little click (with the screwdriver) and the whole thing popped open."

Jazz great Herman starts fight to prevent eviction from home

By Michael D. Harris
United Press International

LOS ANGELES — A lawyer for Woody Herman, who is ailing and broke, sought a court order Tuesday to prevent the jazz great from being evicted from his home of more than 40 years for failing to pay the rent.

Attorney Kirk Pasich was scheduled to try to block the eviction at a 1:30 p.m. PDT Superior Court hearing. Herman was ordered last Thursday by his landlord William Little to leave his Hollywood Hills home by 5 p.m. Tuesday.

"Given Woody's contribution to jazz — he put out over 100 albums and received awards and proclamations — you hate to see him basically penniless," said Pasich, who has waived his attorney's fee.

The 74-year-old bandleader and clarinetist, who helped pioneer the "bebop" jazz movement in the 1940s and 1950s, toured regularly until March, when emphysema and congestive heart disease forced him to remain in bed, his daughter, Ingrid Herman Reese, said.

She said her father, who is unaware of the eviction order, is lucid but can speak only a few words at a time.

"He sleeps most of the time because his heart is so weak... He has a serious lung disease and congestive heart failure and he has to have 24-hour nursing," she said.

Herman's home, once owned by Humphrey Bogart and Lauren Bacall, was auctioned by the Internal Revenue Service in 1985 for $99,800 to recover part of $1.6 million in payroll taxes and penalties that the IRS contends he owes from the mid-1960s.

Struggling with her father's meager Social Security payments and donations from friends, Reese said she has been unable to make his $1,150 monthly rent payments for the past several months.

"It's the only home that he's ever owned," she said. "He and my mother lived there since 1946 when they bought it." Herman's wife, Charlotte, died in 1982.

In addition to the home, Herman's album royalties have been confiscated by the IRS.

A/E Briefs

The Legion Works Exhibition in the Iowa City/Johnson County Arts Center, 129 E. Washington St., is a retrospective, multimedia exhibition containing more than 60 artworks by 35 artists associated with the Drawing Legion. The exhibit includes set and costume designs, set pieces and props, performance-related artworks, posters, programs and photographs. The exhibition is open from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. Monday through Friday. An opening reception will be held from 5 to 7 p.m. Friday.

The International Writing Program draws poets, playwrights and novelists from around the world. These writers are available to speak before interested groups. The writers, representing 27 countries, will spend a semester working on their own projects, meeting other writers and participating in seminars. For information on how to schedule a writer call the International Writing Program at 335-0541.

The Iowa City Boys' Choir will hold auditions tonight at 7 p.m. in the Parkway Evangelical Free Church, 15 Foster Road. All interested boys in fourth through seventh grades are invited to attend. The director of the

'The Big Easy' mixes romance and action

By Kevin C. Kretschmer
The Daily Iowan

The sexual chemistry of stars Dennis Quaid and Ellen Barkin along with colorful Cajun locations highlight The Big Easy. Controversial director Jim McBride (who remade Breathless in 1983) weaves an unconventional love story amidst a tale of drug dealing and police corruption in New Orleans.

The easygoing charm of Quaid and the nervous energy of Barkin create a striking contrast that works well in the film. McBride uses their differences to generate some of the most erotic love scenes in recent memory and the movie is most enjoyable when it stays concentrated on their relationship. Unfortunately, a standard police corruption yarn lies just below the surface, waiting to rear its ugly head. Apparently, McBride has narrowed the gap between himself and more conventional filmmakers, though the differences are what make this movie an entertaining diversion.

QUAID PORTRAYS Lt. Remy McSwain, an affable homicide detective who does not let the nasty side of the job ruin his social life. McSwain, who is from a large family of police officers, does not play by the written rules, but by the accepted procedures. Those procedures include taking free meals from the finest restaurants, collecting "contributions" from local merchants for the "widows and orphans fund" and condoning mob-related murders of undesirable citizens.

"Folks have a way of doing things down here. People like to show their appreciation," he tells strait-laced Assistant District Attorney Anne Osborne (Barkin) in an attempt to explain the perks officers receive. Osborne, a no-nonsense Northerner new to the city, is intent on exposing and prosecuting any public servants involved in corruption.

IT IS NOT exactly love at first sight, but the unbridled bravado of McSwain and the tentative sensuality of Osborne create an attraction between the two that is at odds with their respective on-duty interests. Complications ensue when McSwain is caught in a sting operation aimed at the police slush fund and is faced in court by the uncompromising Osborne.

Though McSwain manages to escape that investigation, he eventually realizes that Osborne is on to something bigger, and he believes that he may be involved. Her consistent interest in a drug war between black and Italian factions causes him to rethink his position and lose his carefree attitude to what he feels does not really concern him.

THE SCRIPT is by Daniel Petrie Jr., whose only previous credit was Beverly Hills Cop, which was written as a hard-boiled thriller to star Sylvester Stallone. The Big Easy was set originally in Chicago, but was moved to New Orleans by the director. Considering these facts, it appears that Petrie has been lucky to have been surrounded by others that have had the sense to change his original conceptions. Credit McBride, the two leads and an outstanding supporting cast for preventing this film from being just another run-of-the-mill action pic.

Lisa Jane Persky as sharp-witted detective McCabe and the late Charles Ludlam as eccentric but crafty defense attorney Lamar Par-mentel add spice to the proceedings. The 18 tunes on the soundtrack, most of which are written and performed by authentic Cajun musicians, provide further local flavor.

The Big Easy should finally establish Quaid and Barkin as stars after several fine performances in films that misfired. Even if the film does eventually settle into a standard action plot, it makes the trip a surprisingly engaging and pleasurable one.

Black group says 'Biko' inaccurate

By Michael Parks
Los Angeles Times

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa — A militant black anti-apartheid group demanded that film director Richard Attenborough allow it to censor his forthcoming film, Cry Freedom, which tells the story of Steve Biko, the founder of South Africa's black consciousness movement who was killed while in police custody.

The Azanian People's Organization, which considers itself the only true heir of Biko's political legacy, threatened to launch an international campaign against the film if Attenborough refuses.

Muntu Myeza, the group's spokesman, said that from what had been seen of the script and early scenes, the film grossly distorts black consciousness and Biko's politics and that its focus — white South African newspaper editor Donald Woods — is "a liberal non-entity."

MYEZA SAID that a "black consciousness delegation" had already made a number of objections and won some concessions during discussions earlier this year with Attenborough, director of the Oscar-winning film Gandhi.

The group would now try to see Attenborough again, Myeza added, to seek further changes before the film is released in the United States and Britain in early November.

"What the black consciousness movement is saying exactly is that no one can make a movie on Steve Biko without our blessing," Myeza told a press conference. "The content of the movie must have our sanction where it refers to or purports to represent what Steve Biko thought and what he did."

Attenborough could not be reached immediately for comment, though he said earlier this year that he welcomed constructive suggestions from Biko's associates.

BIKO, ONE OF the most charismatic black leaders to emerge in South Africa in the past three decades, died Sept. 12, 1977, of head injuries sustained while in police custody. He had apparently been beaten and tortured while detained without charge under South Africa's security laws and had been driven 700 miles from Port Elizabeth to Pretoria, naked and manacled, in the back of a police car. A government magistrate found that no one was responsible for his death.

His emphasis on black self-reliance, summed up in the slogan "Black man, you are on your own," encouraged the resurgence of the anti-apartheid movement in the 1970s, and the students he recruited are now among the most influential leaders of the anti-apartheid movement.
