Regents to consider tuition hike

By Scott Hauser
The Daily Iowan

The state Board of Regents will consider a 9.1 percent tuition increase for resident students and a 12 percent increase for non-state residents — $71 more per year for residents and $294 more for non-residents — at its meeting Wednesday in Iowa City.

According to regents documents released Monday, the proposal will raise yearly tuition, effective the summer of 1988, to $1,706 for residents and $5,488 for non-residents.

Last week, regents Executive Secretary R. Wayne Richey indicated the increase would be from about 7.5 to 10 percent for residents and slightly higher for non-residents. The board is expected to discuss the proposal Wednesday and vote on it at its October meeting.

In his proposal to the nine-member board, Richey said, "If the universities are to continue their progress toward competitive faculty salaries and an appropriate level of educational services to students, an increase in tuition of the magnitude proposed is essential."

"EVEN WITH THIS increase in tuition income, major internal reallocations will be necessary to offset price inflation and to improve quality," Richey said. "Regent universities will remain as great bargains to students and parents as compared to comparable institutions and states in the Midwestern region."

As part of the recommendation, Richey included figures which show that the UI's 1987-88 undergraduate tuition is near the bottom of the Big Ten's public universities and near the middle of the 10 universities the UI compares itself to.

UI undergraduate tuition is currently $1,564 for residents and $4,900 for non-residents.

The percentage of the UI's $211 million general university budget paid for by tuition is expected to increase to 28.9 percent, the highest percentage since 1969-70, but is expected to drop in next year's budget, according to the recommendation.

UI COLLEGIATE Associations Council President Mike Reck said comparing the UI to the rest of the Big Ten is misleading because the conference has high tuition nationally. "It's like living in a wealthy neighborhood and having a small house," he said. "You look around and complain because you have such a small house and everybody else has a really big house."

He said the UI's percentage of tuition revenue going to the general budget is also high nationally, and said when the percentage reached 30 percent in 1970 the regents froze tuition for about five years.

According to regents documents, in 1969-70 tuition increased 60 percent from 1968-69 but did not increase again until 1975-76.

"Based on all four-year public institutions, we are relatively high," Reck said, citing a report compiled by the CAC which shows

Bork rally focuses on rights

Nomination may crumble precedents

By John Bartenhagen
The Daily Iowan

About 250 people gathered on the UI Pentacrest Monday to listen to speeches during a rally opposing the confirmation of Judge Robert Bork to the U.S. Supreme Court.

"This man is anti-everything that guarantees the civil rights of this country's citizens," said UI Black Student Union President Rodney Sturgeon in a speech at the rally. "Why is this man being nominated?"

The rally, sponsored by the UI Liberal Arts Student Association, New Wave and the Emma Goldman Clinic for Women, was sparked by concern that the conservative Bork will change the Supreme Court's interpretation of the U.S. Constitution.

Representatives of the groups fear Bork's interpretation will be instrumental in undoing much of the work accomplished by the civil rights movement of the 1960s.

"TODAY IS A sad day," Sturgeon said. "It now appears that 30 years of blood, sweat and tears will go down the drain."

If the Senate Judiciary Committee hearings — which begin today — result in a confirmation of Bork's nomination, the personal freedoms of U.S. citizens will be endangered, Sturgeon said.

"This appointment will be a cold slap in the face of the civil rights movement and we will be back to the days when the right to vote was limited to a select few, when Jim Crow was still kicking, when women were bare-foot and pregnant," he said. "Surely somewhere in this great land there is a better man for this office. The Senate must come to its senses and nominate a true man of justice."

LASA President Gordon Fischer urged students to take a stand on Bork's appointment, defending student government's attention to such issues.

"We don't live in a cocoon," he said. "We have to learn that Supreme Court decisions affect the students at this university and at universities across the country. Every person here is and has been affected by Supreme Court decisions and we

Bork set to explain his views

By David Lauter and Ronald J. Ostrow

WASHINGTON — When he appears before the Senate Judiciary Committee today, Supreme Court nominee Robert Bork plans to go further in his willingness to discuss legal philosophy and reasoning than any other candidate in the 60 years that the committee has questioned potential Supreme Court justices.

Bork will go "right up to the point of saying 'I will vote to repeal' or 'I will vote against repealing' specific high court precedents, a close associate who has helped Bork prepare for the hearings said Monday.

Supreme Court nominees have almost universally refused to answer such questions, saying that their replies would compromise their independence as judges. Bork, however, does not have the luxury of declining to respond.

CAC supports student seat for regents

By Paula Roesler
The Daily Iowan

The UI Collegiate Associations Council passed a proposal Monday night supporting the creation of a mandated student seat on the state Board of Regents.

"A student would be able to give a very university-oriented perspective (to the regents)," CAC State Relations Chairwoman Maureen Edwards said.

UI Law Student Jacklyn Van Ekeren is currently on the nine-member board, but she was not appointed to the position in a student capacity. The CAC proposal would require at least one regent to be a student from the UI, Iowa State University or the University of Northern Iowa.

CAC President Mike Reck said the proposal is not an affront to Van Ekeren.

"She's a fine regent," Reck said.

VAN EKEREN SAID she supports having a student serve on the Board of Regents, but doesn't support a mandated student position on the board.

"The State Board of Regents is defined in the Iowa Code as a board of citizens," she said.

If the Board has a mandated student position, it should also have mandated positions for educators, scientists and other professions, she said.

"That's where you get into trouble. Each member will have a vested interest," she said.

Jacklyn Van Ekeren

"Even though I'm a student, I need to take a look at the bigger picture," she said. "I need to look at things from the taxpayers' perspective."

Van Ekeren also said the suggested two-year term for the student regent is too short for the student to get oriented, but said most students wouldn't want to be a regent for four years.

The council wants to ensure there will be a student position on the board when Van Ekeren's six-year term is completed, Edwards said.

Van Ekeren has about three years of her term remaining.

Edwards said the CAC has pursued the student regent issue for several years.

UI wants regents to OK armory plan

By Scott Hauser
The Daily Iowan

UI Hospitals and Clinics officials will ask the state Board of Regents Wednesday to authorize planning for a $7.5 million Psychiatric Pavilion — a three-phase project to be built on the site of the UI Field House Armory by 1990.

The UI will also ask the board to allow its planning office to search for an architect to assist in planning replacement facilities for the Armory.

According to regents documents released Monday, the new Psychiatric Pavilion is the final phase of the hospitals' 20-year Capital Replacement Program and will house adult and child psychiatry patient care facilities, the departments of internal medicine, surgery and radiology and a sports medicine clinic and spine center.

UI HOSPITALS AND Clinics Director of Public Affairs Dean Borg announced this month the hospitals would ask the regents to authorize construction on the site of the 35,000-square-foot Armory because the current psychiatric hospital no longer meets teaching and patient accreditation.

The 168,000-square-foot hospital facility will be built adjacent to the south side of the John W. Colloton Pavilion and will not require state

Students get a 'bang' out of class

By Jay Casini
The Daily Iowan

An exploding firecracker in Seashore Hall Monday night cleared the building of students, professors and teaching assistants for about 15 minutes around 7 p.m.

The firecracker, which went off near Room E105 in Seashore Hall, resulted in the evacuation of the building as four trucks responded from the Iowa City Fire Department.

UI Sociology Associate Professor

Steve Wieting was teaching an Introduction to Sociology course in E105 Seashore when the firecracker exploded outside in the hallway.

"There was a very large explosion that stunned everyone in the classroom," Wieting said. "I went out into the hall and another instructor came out of his classroom. Evidently there had been some kind of explosion in the hall."

"THERE DID NOT seem to be any perceivable residue and there wasn't a lot of smoke," Wieting said. "It sounded a lot like a 20 millimeter mortar shot going off."

The firecracker made most teaching assistants in both basement and third floor offices rush out of the building.

"I heard somebody say there was smoke on the second floor," said UI Teaching Assistant Cindy Fobian, who was in her basement office. "We thought it was just a drill that was part of fire prevention week."

"I was on the E wing of the third floor," UI Teaching Assistant Ramesh Bhatt said. "I heard a loud noise and immediately the fire alarm went off and I left."

Campus Security Lt. Ralph Moody said the alarm went off at 7:18 p.m. and that the Iowa City Police Department, Iowa City Fire Department and Campus Security responded to the call.

"A firecracker was set off on the second floor of the building that caused a large bang and someone thought it was an explosion and pulled the alarm," Moody said. "There was no damage and we do not know who set off the firecracker."

Lt. Ron Stutzman of the Iowa City Fire Department said firefighters initially had difficulty finding where the alarm had been set off because of the way the floors are numbered at Seashore Hall.

"Apparently someone heard a firecracker in the halls and the alarm went off immediately," Stutzman said. "Someone leaving on the first floor pulled the fire alarm but the firecracker remains were found on the second floor."

Metro briefs

from DI staff reports

Training program honored

A World War II training program instituted 45 years ago on the UI campus by the U.S. Navy will be honored in a ceremony on Sept. 25 at 10 a.m.

The ceremony honors the Pre-Flight program, a naval training program which emphasized a balanced curriculum of athletics, academics and military. Former astronaut and current U.S. Sen. John Glenn, D-Ohio, was among the 20,000 trainees who passed through the Iowa Pre-Flight training program.

The formal ceremony will be held at a granite boulder marker with a plaque at the site of the one-time Iowa Pre-Flight Administration Building, which is now the South Quadrangle Residence Hall.

The dedication of the granite boulder is being sponsored by the U.S. Navy Pre-Flight Reunion group, comprised of former officers, enlisted, aviation cadet and civilian personnel of the wartime base. Guests at the ceremony will be Cmdr. Michael Leppert of the U.S. Naval Recruitment Office, Omaha District, UI Athletic Director Bump Elliott and Iowa City Mayor William Ambrisco.

A reunion of local residents who participated in the program will coincide with the dedication ceremonies.

Library sponsors showing

The Iowa City Public Library will sponsor a special demonstration of its new low-vision reading aid, Vtek, on Thursday, Sept. 24 from 10:30 a.m. to 12 noon in Room 117 of the library.

The Vtek can adjust and magnify the size of print up to 60 times the original size.

Dan Hoerl, of Edutec, Inc., the manufacturer's representative, will be at the library for individual assistance for those interested in trying out the new machine.

The machine was acquired with a $3,000 Federal Library Services and Construction Act grant and is currently available for public use.

Peace group holds vigil

The Iowa City Peace Alliance will sponsor a noon vigil at the Ground Wave Emergency Network tower on U.S. Highway 30 two miles east of Mechanicsville on Saturday, Sept. 19.

The vigil will be followed by a video program in the meeting room of Doc and Jo's Cafe on Highway 30 in Mechanicsville. A videotape titled "The Secret Team: Behind the Iran-Contra Scandal" will be shown, and coffee will be served. The program is free and open to the public.

Local care seminar given

The Iowa Coalition for Comprehensive School Health Education will sponsor a two day conference focusing on health care and health education for students from kindergarten through college titled "Caring For Youth."

The conference is scheduled for Oct. 12-13 in the Holiday Inn, 210 S. Dubuque St., and is being co-sponsored by the North Central College Health and the American College Health Association.

The conference will feature 20 workshops on topics ranging from allergies to AIDS. About 200 people are expected to attend the conference.

Tutor sessions held

The Johnson County chapter of the Association for Children and Adults with Learning Disabilities will hold a meeting today for parents interested in participating in training sessions to learn how to tutor their children in reading.

The meeting will be held at 7:30 p.m. at Hoover Elementary School, 220 E. Court St.

The association recently was awarded a grant from the Foundation for Children with Learning Disabilities in New York City to conduct sessions in tutoring.

The training sessions will include general information and discussion of learning and reading difficulties, tips on behavior management and activities to upgrade reading comprehension and word vocabulary skills.

West side residents join to boost athletic programs

By Craig Sterrett
The Daily Iowan

West side residents of the Iowa City School District are taking matters into their own hands to improve support for their athletic programs.

This year, Iowa City West High's 20th anniversary, the West Side Athletic Advisory Council was founded to revive spirit and develop unity among west side schools, council co-chairs Stan and Jane Zukin said.

"There are so many things we would like to do including recognition of athletes, spirit activities, student events and keeping track of alumni," West High Athletic Director Julie Ostrander said.

"I think we are trying to bring people in who are excited about coming to games at Northwest and West before attending one of the secondary schools," Ostrander said.

THE FIRST THING the council did after its formation was to make available, for the first time, athletic clothes in the West High and Northwest Junior High school colors — green and gold.

The Zukins said they were surprised at the way sales of the green and gold outfits have taken off.

"Six dozen sets have sold out at each school already," Stan Zukin said, adding the council plans to purchase more. He said the council was cautious not to purchase too many sets because under state law a district cannot force students to wear uniforms in physical education classes.

He attributed the success of the uniform sales to their design.

"It looks like a piece of clothing they would wear in today's style," Stan Zukin said.

PROVIDING GYM clothes is not the only thing the council will do to help west side students and parents, according to the Zukins.

Another problem in the area, cited by the Zukins, is that five cities and seven elementary schools feed into Iowa City Northwest Junior High and West High.

"The parents and kids are just thrown together," Stan Zukin said.

"These kids never really play anything together until they get into junior high," Jane Zukin said.

The council is planning an event to get the schools together. This year's kick-off event is a spirit run at West High Sunday at 1:30.

KIDS FROM THE elementary schools that feed into Northwest Junior High will be able to get together through an elementary basketball program the group is putting together, the Zukins added.

Other things the west side council plans to address include better preparation of elementary students for secondary school, getting families from different elementary schools together before the pupil attends junior high, keeping track of Iowa City West alumni and announcing game scores.

The council is also considering providing bussing to and from extracurricular activities and establishing a hall of fame for West High athletes.

Members of the West Side Athletic Advisory Council include the principal and athletic director at West High, the assistant principal of Northwest Junior High and most coaches of west-side athletic teams.

Courts

By Sheryl L. Cohen
The Daily Iowan

An Iowa City man was charged in Johnson County District Court Monday with second degree criminal mischief after being charged with shooting out windows at the Iowa City Schools physical plant Friday.

David Douglas Buck, 520 Ernest Street, allegedly damaged school vehicles and a plate glass window while causing more than $850 in damages, according to court records.

Iowa City police confiscated two high-powered slingshots from Buck, according to court records.

An Iowa City man was charged in Johnson County District Court on Monday with assault causing injury without intent in connection with an incident which occurred Sunday.

Harold Charles Hueholt, 17 S. Governor St., reportedly sprayed engine starting fluid at another man, on the 800 block of E. Washington, according to court records.

Hueholt was released on his own recognizance. A preliminary hearing is set for Sept. 29.

Two Iowa City residents filed suit in Johnson County District Court Monday against a manufacturing company after being injured by a molding machine made by the company, according to court records.

Daniel and Jeanine Yeager, Rural Route 4, filed a civil suit against the Simplotomatic Manufacturing Co., after Daniel Yeager was injured while operating a Hydro "I" Plastic Injection Molding Machine produced by the firm, according to court records.

The suit claimed the machine was defective and lacked warning or directions to avoid injury when it was purchased on or about July 14, 1982, according to court records.

Yeager suffered permanent injury as a result of the accident, which resulted in a loss of ability to provide support, services, companionship, society and consortium to his wife and daughter, according to court records.

The suit requested compensation for the effects of the injury as well as health care expenses incurred, according to court records.

Two Coralville residents filed suit in Johnson County District Court Monday claiming that a Wisconsin company's modular motels were defective in design, according to court records.

Nicholas and Delores Baxter filed suit against Wausau Homes, Inc., after one of the modular motel units Nicholas Baxter was setting on Dec. 5, 1985 collapsed, causing injury and damages to him.

The suit claimed that Wausau Homes, Wausau, Wis., which designed, manufactured and sold the motels, was negligent in the design of the modular motel, in its plans, instructions and specifications and in failing to provide warning of dangers, according to court records.

In addition, the suit alleged when the units were purchased, the company was aware of the particular purpose intended by Nicholas Baxter. However, the goods and services provided by Wausau were not fit for the particular purpose, and this was the direct and proximate cause of the plaintiffs' injuries and damages, according to court records.

The suit also alleges the negligence was the direct cause of the loss of Nicholas Baxter's means of support for himself, his wife and her children, according to court records.

The suit asks for damages to compensate the Baxters for the physical and emotional damage they suffered as a result of the accident, according to court records.

Police

By Franc Contreras
The Daily Iowan

A 57-year-old man was charged with fifth-degree theft Sunday after he allegedly stole a videotape from K-Mart, 901 Hollywood Blvd., according to Iowa City police reports.

Ferdinand O'Hara, 1724 Wilson St., was arrested at 4:05 p.m. Sunday after he allegedly stole an $18.96 tape from the discount department store.

Report: An unidentified man has been exposing himself and peeing into resident's windows on Emerald Street, according to Iowa City police reports.

Police received two reports — one Sunday evening and one Monday afternoon — from females who said the subject was exposing himself and peeing into windows. One of the complainants claimed the man was nude when he looked into her apartment window.

The subject was described as a white male with dark hair and glasses, according to the report.

Report: An Iowa City female was taken to UI Hospitals early Monday morning after she was found lying unconscious in the 400 block of Crest View Avenue, according to police reports.

The female apparently was suffering from a medical problem and apparently fell off her bicycle and was knocked unconscious according to Johnson County Ambulance officials.

Excitement peaks at Robertson camp

CHESAPEAKE, Va. (UPI) — Evangelist Pat Robertson, pleased by a surprise victory in a poll, said Monday he will announce Tuesday whether he received the hoped-for 3 million signatures needed to pursue a presidential bid.

During a Washington rally last year, Robertson told the nation he would seek the GOP presidential nomination if he could collect 3 million signatures by Sept. 17.

"If we meet that goal, then he is expected to announce the date that he will formally enter the race for the Republican nomination," said Scott Hatch, spokesman for Americans for Robertson.

"If he falls short of the goal, then he will not enter the race," he said.

Robertson, 57, fresh from a surprise Republican straw poll victory in Iowa, has scheduled a news conference at 10 a.m. EDT today, to announce how many of petition signatures have been collected, Hatch said.

Court will soon get additional facilities

By Anne-Marie Halloran
The Daily Iowan

Construction of two new courtrooms for the Johnson County Courthouse is now in progress as part of the $397,700 courthouse renovation project begun last August.

Dwight Dobberstein, of Neumann Monson PC architecture firm, 226 S. Clinton St., said a lack of space for court sessions — currently held in Coralville and the Iowa City Civic Center — presented a need for the new courtrooms, just one part of the renovation project.

Johnson County Supervisor Don Sehr agreed more space is needed for courtrooms and court-related offices.

"Ours is one of the most outdated courts around," Sehr said. "We needed at least one more courtroom and privacy rooms for clients to talk to their lawyers."

Dobberstein said the smaller courtroom, when completed, will be used for the magistrate courts, involving traffic and small cases. The other courtroom, which will seat about 60 people, will be used for larger trials.

THE RENOVATION PROJECT will also move the county auditor's and county treasurer's offices, currently housed in the courthouse, to the Johnson County Administration Office, 913 S.

The Johnson County Courthouse is in the midst of a $397,700 renovation project begun last August.

Dubouque St. Offices for court reporters, court attendants and the county district attorney, and judges' chambers, will be added to the courthouse.

Sehr, who was involved with the decision to renovate, said he is glad the district attorney will soon have an office in the courthouse, which, according to Dobberstein, should be completed by January 1. "It would be nice to have the county attorney in the office, as most counties do," Sehr said.

Sehr, who has been involved in the renovation for more than a year, said the renovation was essential yet difficult to carry out.

"It was a long and drawn-out process," Sehr said.

The courthouse renovation projects will be completed by the contract date, March 31, Dobberstein said.

Johnson County sales tax proposal faces opposition

By Joseph Levy
The Daily Iowan

The local sales tax referendum scheduled to be put to Johnson County voters in November will not pass if an area committee has its way.

The Committee Opposed to Unfair New Tax, formed to fight the idea of a 1 percent local sales tax, is trying to appeal to voters and emphasize other options to solve the city's budget woes, COUNTY President G.L. Husby said Monday.

"As a Coralville businessman, I really resent that the Iowa City Council can ram this down my throat," Husby said.

The council, according to state law, can initiate an option tax referendum because Iowa City represents more than half of the county's population. The council exercised that option in July to alleviate a projected $900,000 deficit for fiscal year 1989.

IF APPROVED, the 1 percent addition to the 4 percent state sales tax would raise more than $3 million for Johnson County, $2.1 million of which would go into Iowa City coffers. But the tax would only apply to contiguous areas of the county that passes it.

The tax, according to Husby, president of Ralston Creek Stove and Tool Inc. in Coralville, will devastate the local economy and drive shoppers to the Cedar Rapids area.

"There's already a tendency for people to do that anyway," he said, adding a survey of 173 cities with the local sales tax indicated the cities suffered between a 1.6 and 10.9 percent decrease in overall retail sales.

But Iowa City Manager Stephen Atkins pointed to the referendum's "point of delivery clause." According to Atkins, any item purchased in another city delivered to an area in Johnson County that passed the local tax would be subject to taxation.

Automobile sales would not be subject to the tax, Atkins said.

Husby also said he thought city administrators are hiding the alternatives that would balance the books and instead considered a property tax increase as the only alternative to the sales tax.

"THAT'S WHAT the city would have people believe," Husby said. Husby also said he wondered why Iowa City needed $2 million to cancel a $900,000 debt.

Atkins said with a $700,000 cut in federal aid to the city coupled with the recent passage of the $500,000 City Park and Mercer Park pool referendum, the city faces $1.2 million in new expenditures.

"You're talking about a 10 percent hole in your budget, and you haven't even started preparing your budget," he said.

Husby said the council could look at making cuts to balance the budget, but Atkins said no citizens or city officials ever expressed a desire to cut the city's package of services during budgetary hearings.

"Certainly services can be cut," Atkins said. "People just have to be aware of the consequences."

Husby said about 50 area businessmen and women are involved with COUNT, adding every business he approached was opposed to the sales tax.

Iowa City woman files suit against 2 men, local tavern

By Sheryl L. Cohen
The Daily Iowan

An Iowa City woman filed a wrongful death suit Monday against two Iowa City men and a local tavern in connection with an accident which killed her fiancé in 1986, according to Johnson County District Court records.

Mary K. Panther, 1231 Melrose Ave., as administrator of the estate of Michael A. Panther, filed a suit against Timothy M. Hill, 608 Westgate St., alleging Hill was negligent, reckless and legally intoxicated when a vehicle he was driving collided with a vehicle Michael Panther was driving on Dec. 27, 1986, according to court records.

Mary Panther legally changed her last name to Panther following the accident, according to a family relative.

The suit also named as co-defendants Robert C. Hesselstine, 914 Benton Drive, who owned the vehicle Hill was driving at the time of the accident, and Michelle Ltd., the parent company of R.T. Grunts, 826 S. Clinton St., which allegedly served liquor to Hill on the night of the accident, according to court records.

Michael Panther died from injuries sustained in the accident when his vehicle was struck head-on by Hill's vehicle on South Riverside Drive after Hill's vehicle allegedly crossed the centerline of the road, according to court records.

Hill was operating the vehicle at the time while legally intoxicated with a blood-alcohol level of .10 or more, at excessive speeds and in a reckless manner, according to court records.

THE SUIT ASKS for punitive damages from Hill, as well as damages resulting from Mary Panther's dependence on Michael Panther for support, according to court records.

Hesselstine is being sued for owner's liability for damages, and R.T. Grunts is being sued for damages under Iowa's "dram shop" law, which allows plaintiffs to collect damages from establishments that serve alcohol to persons they have reason to believe are intoxicated or may become intoxicated.

Panther's lawyers are asking for "reasonable and proper damages as a result" of the incident, according to court records.

Derby Days rakes in $6,000

By Jay Casini
The Daily Iowan

The UI chapter of Sigma Chi fraternity raised about $6,000 for charities during their annual Derby Days philanthropy event last weekend, with more than 2,000 UI students participating.

UI Campus Programs and Student Activities Coordinator Mary Peterson said Derby Days is annually one of the most successful philanthropies in terms of money raised and participation.

"The guys are really organized and they work really hard for Derby Days," Peterson said.

Sigma Chi president John Moulton said the fraternity won an award for the philanthropy.

Derby Days Chairman Joe Marchese said although exact figures for this year's philanthropy have not yet been calculated, he expected this year's event to match or surpass last year's total of $6,000.

"This year we pulled in at least as much as last year, if not more," Marchese said.

The week's events included a day of work at homes of local elderly residents, a volleyball tournament for fraternities and a point competition for sororities featuring a variety of daily events.

THE ANNUAL SIGMA CHI "Run For Your Life" road race was held Saturday afternoon with a 1K fun run for sororities and a 5K race for about 100 runners. The Derby Days Backyard Classic, featuring the finals of the men's volleyball competition, was held Saturday evening at the Sigma Chi house.

Sigma Alpha Epsilon fraternity beat Lambda Chi Alpha fraternity to win the volleyball tournament and Gamma Phi Beta and Kappa Kappa Gamma were the winning sororities.

Peterson said last year's Derby Days money was divided among the American Cancer Society, the National Center on Missing Children and Wallace Village, a national Sigma Chi charity.

No voice

The UI's announced plan to demolish the Field House Armory in order to erect a new psychiatric pavilion makes many wonder what voice students have. Although administrators say that replacement sites for the basketball courts have already been determined, many students and faculty members have reservations.

When will the new basketball courts and classrooms be built? The Recreation Building has been under construction since 1985 and many wonder if it will ever be finished.

Where will the new facilities be? Whatever merits the new locations might have, they have one crucial drawback: they're not at the Field House. What is now a familiar student landmark and gathering place will become just another tiny, dimly-lit place to sneak in a few unsatisfying games of basketball.

And what will these new facilities be like? There are those who say that no matter what they're like, they'll be an improvement over the Field House's drippy ceiling and slippery courts. But if even half the money to be spent on building facilities were to be used on improving the existing ones, the drippy ceiling could be easily fixed.

And why will the Armory be demolished in the first place? That one's easy: because the UI administration says so, and that's all there is to it. The decision was made years ago and has been approved despite any amount of student outcry.

The UI administration ought to remember that if it weren't for the students who come here and pay their ever-increasing tuition, there wouldn't be a new psychiatric pavilion — it would be attached to some other hospital at some better-attended university. The administration ought to immediately reconsider its plans to remodel the Field House.

Frightful forerunners

Sometimes it's best to be blunt: The Republican presidential hopefuls are frightening.

By now, nearly everyone has heard about the strong showing of the Rev. Pat Robertson in Saturday's straw poll in Des Moines. Riding a wave of evangelical enthusiasm, the TV preacher outpaced the other GOP contenders, leading to speculation that his organization may be a force to be reckoned with.

As if the prospect of a formidable Robertson candidacy weren't scary enough, the remarks of the fundamentalist minister along with the comments of Sen. Robert Dole, R-Kan., Rep. Jack Kemp, R-N.Y., Vice President George Bush and Pierre DuPont as they campaigned in Iowa this past weekend further established the GOP field as a collection of right-wing extremists.

Addressing the anti-abortion group Iowans for Life, the GOP candidates voiced their unequivocal opposition to the Supreme Court's 1973 decision legalizing abortion and spelled out strategies for its reversal. Robertson and Bush called for a constitutional amendment outlawing abortion while Kemp plainly admitted that he would appoint only "pro-life, pro-family, conservative judges to all the courts in America."

Such uncompromising approaches to complex problems are not, of course, unprecedented among the Republican candidates. For instance, Kemp has contended that a U.S. military response to political turmoil in Central America would be justified; DuPont has called for AIDS testing of all school children; and Bush's continuing affections for his former colleagues at the CIA are well-documented.

With these facts in mind, one comes to realize that the 22nd Amendment, which prohibits a president from serving more than two terms, is no guarantee of a change in national direction. Judging from the candidates' campaign speeches, a Republican victory in 1988 would simply continue President Ronald Reagan's disastrous policies.

Ideology is important

Today the Senate Judiciary Committee formally begins the "advise and consent" process by interviewing President Ronald Reagan's controversial nominee to the Supreme Court, Judge Robert Bork.

Many people — the Bork supporters, coincidentally — are saying that the judge's political and judicial philosophy should not be considered in the confirmation process. Ideology should be left out of it, they say, and the Senate's job is simply to find out whether he knows the legal system.

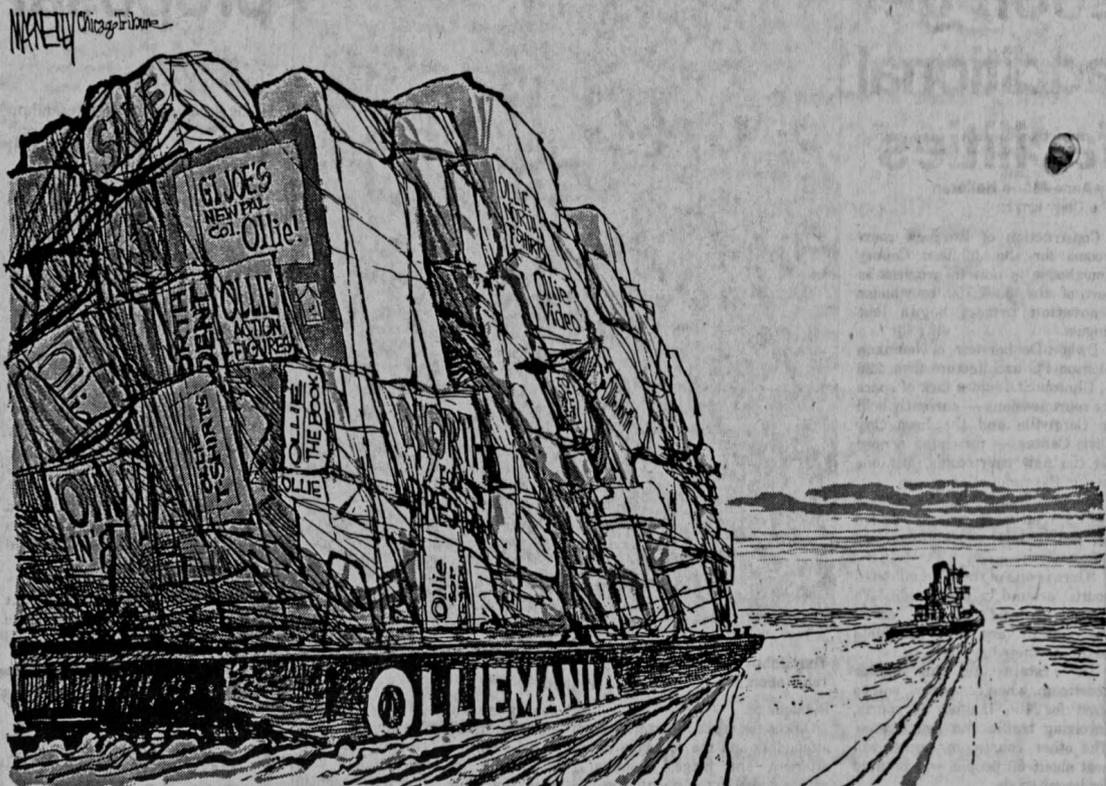

Curiously enough, supporters of Bork know that he was nominated for ideological reasons and most of them support his nomination on those very grounds. Reagan's chief of staff, Howard Baker Jr., was one of the senators who blocked former President Lyndon Johnson's nomination of Justice Abe Fortas to succeed Chief Justice Earl Warren in 1968. At that time Baker said: "In resolving questions on confirmation, the Senate must consider... their social, economic and legal philosophies; and the wisdom and desirability of the appointments at this particular time."

Bork's ideology is not irrelevant to this debate. And the social agenda of the Reagan administration is not a matter to be ignored on this occasion either — nor is the fact that the man appointed by the president as the nation's highest enforcement officer, Attorney General Edwin Meese, recently interpreted the Constitution as really meaning "guilty until proven innocent."

The Senate, as well as the American public, expects a Supreme Court nominee to be intelligent and learned. But that is not the final test. Bork needs to explain his controversial opinions and America needs to listen.

Filipinos work for democracy

A visitor to the Philippines today is reminded of Alexis de Tocqueville's account of his visit to the United States after our first generation democracy. He likened the body politic of the new republic to a lifeboat filled with people. There were oarsmen — pulling in different directions. Two or three people were contending for control of the tiller, and the boat was pursuing an erratic course. Frantic bailers worked as water poured in. But De Tocqueville declared that this ship of state would not sink, for too many people were determined to keep it afloat.

It is standard for the euphoria of a democratic revolution to be followed by disillusionment, when great expectations are not fulfilled at once, and then by a measure of violence and uncertainty, change and trial and error.

The Philippines are going through that now after the heady days of 1986 when people power brought down the dictatorship of Ferdinand Marcos and replaced it with the democracy of Corazon Aquino.

AMERICA HAD a like experience. After the stirring days of 1776 and the failure of the Articles of Confederation, a new constitution had to be formed which, in turn, had to be bolstered by the Bill of Rights. Later came our Civil War and, more recently, the deep disensions of Vietnam and the strains of Watergate and Irangate.

Our democracy has survived all this and more. Philippine democracy gives promise of doing likewise, despite severe problems, including the attempted coup August 28 — the fifth in its young history — and the Communist and Moslem insurgencies.

I was struck during my visit to Manila by residual signs of violence — a few burned-out military buildings, bullet-riddled windows, ships loaded with captured rebels, armed sentries in the street, all accompanied by wild rumors of worse soon to come.

ON THE OTHER hand, I found in meetings with Aquino and members of her government that none of them felt under siege. Without exception, they were confident and purposeful about their nation's future.

The top civilian leaders are proud and pleased that the top military leaders responded loyally and effectively. Those in command of the military take pride in their success and in the fact that their rank and file obeyed orders even though many of them share the rebels' unhappiness over benefits, conditions, administration policy toward the insurgents and corruption. They take satisfaction, too, in the fact that the rapid growth of the Communist Party seems to have slowed.

They have good reason to be gratified by other gains. Since the 1986 revolution, the Filipinos have written and put into effect a new constitution, created and elected a free congress, launched preparations for local elections, witnessed the birth of 28 independent newspapers in Manila and, this year, seen an increase in investments, a sharp rise in the gross national product and growth in trade with the United States.

GREAT PROBLEMS remain, however. Unemployment and poverty are high. Housing for many is appalling. Plans for land reform are in formulation and expectations are high — but few democracies have achieved rapid success on the land-reform front.

It is vitally important that the Filipinos' remarkable revolution succeed and that we Americans help it do so through our private and public sectors. I gather that American business concerns already investing in the Philippines are staying and expanding. Unfortunately, their confidence is not matched by those who haven't tested the waters and who are concerned by the attempted coups and the insurgencies.

THIS SITUATION offers great economic opportunity for those who dare. Business is held back by uncertainty. Yet it's that same uncertainty that keeps down costs. Those who get in now can get a significant advantage over those who may come in later. There is no threat of expropriation under any foreseeable circumstances.

The Filipino people are more literate and better educated than most people in a similar state of underdevelopment. They offer the potential of a skilled labor force and a significant consumer market. There could be the makings in the Philippines of another economic miracle like that of South Korea and Taiwan.

THE U.S. government is deeply committed to the survival and success of the new government. But we are giving it little, if any, more economic and military assistance than we gave to Marcos. To the degree that it is possible given our own severe economic and budgetary problems, I believe we should give substantially more, using a Marshall Plan-type approach.

If we contribute significantly to Philippine stability and progress, the prospect will be enhanced that — in the interest of our mutual security — we will work out arrangements to stay on in our important Clark and Subic Bay military bases.

In view of our historic ties with these islands, we will benefit internationally if the Philippines can cope effectively with insurgency and become a show place for democracy. A great success story in the Philippines would strengthen the momentum of democracy, not only in East Asia but throughout the world.

Leavin' on a jet plane

My days are numbered: I've got a ticket to fly to Los Angeles on Continental Airlines. December 17, 1987, — 94 days. You can bet that my life insurance will be paid up and that I'll start the morning drinking something stronger than Tang. And I won't stop until the plane does, wherever it does.

I've always been afraid to fly, but it's never felt so right before. People use to call me silly; now it turns out that I was ahead of my time. I was scared of airplanes back when it was irrational.

Once upon a time, there were almost enough fully trained and experienced air traffic controllers. And the federal government regulated the airlines. And airlines gave pilots time to rest between flights.

BUT THAT'S another column, about the Reagan legacy, eight years of national government by a handsome buffoon and his crew of slime, about how they perfected through practice the empty, stupid and symbolic gesture. Like firing 5,000 air traffic controllers, deregulating commercial airlines and castrating the federal Aviation Administration.

Actually, what frightens me the most about the issue of air travel is the absence of media attention to the real causes of the chaos that reigns in the once-friendly skies. We live in the age of Gannettitis, of news McNuggets. A plane crashes in Detroit and 156 people burn and die; for a month we're fed the story of little Cecilia Cichan, sole survivor.

Do we read about the details of pilot fatigue and human error? About cockpit shortcuts at safety's expense? Do we hear howls of outrage about an industry and administration doing next to nothing to solve a terrifying set of near-disasters and, finally, a catastrophe? Does anyone say anything about the strange and silent absence of collision-avoidance systems after years of development.

NO, BUT WE know when Cecilia got her little doll back. And that's the only thing that seems to hold our attention. Look at the pretty picture everybody. Ignore that man behind the curtain. Read a nice weather map.

Out of all the charlatans and liars running for president so far, George Bush is my weevil of choice. They find a memo in Bush's office about a meeting Bush and two aides had with one of Ollie North's henchmen in April of 1986. Right on the memo it says that Bush was briefed on "resupply of the Contras."

But wait. The two aides to the vice president say they can't remember any such thing being discussed. Yes, they knew about the weapons being shipped to murder Nicaraguans in defiance of the U.S. Congress, but both aides "decided on their own to withhold the information from Bush."

SOUND FAMILIAR? It's the Reagan defense: the nearest lizards fall on their swords to protect the idiot king. Truth? Law? yeah, right.

Bush's office has no comment on his aides' testimony. Bush, a former CIA director, promised Iowans just this weekend that "a Bush administration will be known for its integrity." Sort of like Northwestern University being known for its football team.

Enough parking now

To the Editor:

I read with some interest the anguished cries of students about the "parking problem" (The Daily Iowan, Sept. 10). My solution is quite simple; some might even consider it radical. Students should be prohibited from having cars. When I was in school in the 1930s, not more than one in 10 did. We all got around quite well and I remember walking frequently from the Field House to 830 N. Dubuque St.

Nor did we have student loans. We worked. It might be an interesting research project for The Daily Iowan to determine how many students who have a parking problem also have a student loan. To me, they seem incompatible.

U.N. leader, Iraq meet; 2 convoys pass

MANAMA, Bahrain — Iraq told U.N. Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar Monday that Iran should be punished for rejecting a U.N. cease-fire resolution and said Iraqi troops beat back a new Iranian offensive at the central warfront.

The Iraqi position was outlined by Iraqi President Saddam Hussein and Foreign Minister Tareq Aziz to the U.N. leader.

In Washington the Pentagon said two Navy-escorted convoys of re-flagged Kuwaiti tankers were underway simultaneously for the first time in the gulf, crossing each other's paths early Monday. The convoys said the eighth convoy, moving south from Kuwait, was heading for the Strait of Hormuz and the end of its journey.

Director of AIDS commission fired

WASHINGTON — The executive director of the presidential advisory commission on AIDS has been fired after panel members complained to the chairman, Eugene Mayberry, that a lack of leadership and direction undermined the commission's first meeting here last week.

Linda Sheaffer, hired several weeks ago as chief staff member of the commission, was asked by Mayberry last Friday to leave the post. Sheaffer, who will return to her job as acting director of the federal Office of Organ Transplantation, said Monday that she was "not surprised" by Mayberry's action, which came one day after the 13-member commission concluded a two-day meeting in Washington.

Mayberry said Monday that he has "a great deal of admiration and respect" for Sheaffer but that "under the circumstances it seemed best" that she leave. No successor has been named.

Child pornography probe nets 100

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Two government sting operations that used phony foreign companies offering child pornography through the mail have led to more than 100 indictments nationwide, Attorney General Edwin Meese announced Monday.

"The one place where we as a society must draw the figurative line in the sand is with the abomination of child pornography," Meese said at a news conference.

The operation rounded up doctors, lawyers, teachers and others, Meese said, who bought obscene magazines and videotapes produced and distributed by the undercover agents. Evidence collected included sexually explicit photographs of minors — often related to suspects, spokesmen said.

Tape shows no warning in plane crash

WASHINGTON — The Aug. 16 crash of Northwest Airlines Flight 255 was so sudden that the pilot did not radio any warning to air traffic controllers that he had trouble with the jetliner, government documents showed Monday.

The Federal Aviation Administration released a recording of the conversation between the cockpit crew and controllers that showed there was less than 90 seconds between the time the jetliner took off from Detroit Metropolitan Airport in Romulus, Mich., and it crashed in a ball of fire.

The crash of the McDonnell Douglas MD80 killed 156 people in the second worst tragedy in American aviation history. Only Cecilia Cichan, 4, survived.

Aquino dares coup leader to surrender

MANILA, Philippines — President Corazon Aquino's government Monday challenged fugitive coup leader Col. Gregorio "Gringo" Honasan to prove he is "man enough" to surrender and face a court martial.

The challenge came one day after Honasan warned Aquino from his hiding place that discontent within the armed forces is worse than ever and that he planned further, unspecified action against the government.

Executive Secretary Joker Arroyo told reporters Aquino will not back down from her earlier stand that there can be no negotiations with Honasan, who led the Aug. 28 coup attempt — the bloodiest and gravest challenge to her government.

S. Korean candidate talks with Reagan

WASHINGTON — South Korean presidential candidate Roh Tae-woo, risking possible political fallout at home, met Monday with President Ronald Reagan to open a visit intended to underscore his government's commitment to democratic reform.

Roh, the candidate of the ruling Democratic Justice Party, paid a brief courtesy call on Reagan to discuss steps he said would lead to "a very successful transition and growth into a more mature democracy" in South Korea.

"I told him a political miracle is now happening in Korea," Roh told reporters through an interpreter. "Beginning with the agreement on the constitutional revision, we are going to have a very fair and open election in December and, after that, the schedule for peaceful transition will happen."

Auto talks stalled at midnight deadline

DEARBORN, Mich. — Facing a midnight strike deadline, bargainers for United Auto Workers and Ford Motor Co. were stalled Monday over the major issue of job security in efforts to reach agreement on a new contract for 104,000 autoworkers.

The current pact covering Ford's 104,000 U.S. hourly workers expired at 11:59 p.m. EDT Monday, and employees at virtually all of Ford's 85 assembly, manufacturing and engineering plants were set to strike the nation's second-largest carmaker, a UAW spokesman said.

But UAW President Owen Bieber stopped short of saying that he would order his members to walk out of Ford's plants at the stroke of midnight if no agreement was announced.

Elizabeth Dole resigns post Cabinet member will aid husband's campaign

Elizabeth Dole

By James Gerstenzang
Los Angeles Times

WASHINGTON — Elizabeth Dole, the highest-ranking woman in the Reagan administration, Monday announced her resignation as secretary of transportation to work full-time on the presidential campaign of her husband, Sen. Bob Dole, R-Kan.

The secretary and White House officials said she had not been pressured to leave, but her departure has been expected for some time.

The Dole campaign for the Republican presidential nomination has been placing increasing demands on her time, and she was becoming more vulnerable to possible questions about her attentiveness to the agency at a time when it is embroiled in controversies over aviation safety and flight delays.

"THERE IS NO WAY that I can put the Department of Transportation first and get all of that (her campaign schedule) done," she said. "I have always put the department first. Now, I want to put the campaign first."

Mrs. Dole's resignation is effective Oct. 1. She said after meeting briefly with President Ronald Reagan in the Oval Office Monday morning that she felt it was time to respond to "pressure from major supporters and people in the campaign" to get on board full-time.

Sen. Dole is expected to formally announce his candidacy within the next two months. He and Vice President George Bush are widely considered the front-runners for the 1988 Republican presidential nomination.

The 51-year-old transportation secretary leaves her post after nearly five years, the longest tenure of anyone in that post since it was created by President Lyndon Johnson in 1967.

SHE HAS OVERSEEN the federal sale of Conrail, the government's freight railroad, and has played a high-profile role in the examination of aviation safety and airline service complaints in the wake of the industry's deregulation.

A highly regarded campaigner, she will now shift her attention to a campaign trip through 12 Southern states and the opening of a regional campaign office in Charlotte, N.C., to promote her husband's efforts in anticipation of the March 8 "Super Tuesday" primary elections in the South.

Sen. Dole said "she is probably the greatest resource in my campaign, and it's going to be very helpful to me, and I appreciate what she's done."

Soviet, U.S. officials predict new arms pact

Washington Post

WASHINGTON — American and Soviet officials, preparing for long-awaited talks that begin Tuesday morning between Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze and senior Reagan administration officials, predicted Monday in similar terms that Shevardnadze's visit should pave the way for agreement on a new arms control treaty and a U.S.-Soviet summit later this year.

President Ronald Reagan announced Monday that the United States had introduced a draft of the arms control treaty in Geneva, but warned that "difficult issues" need to be resolved before the superpowers can sign the pact, which would eliminate all their land-based medium- and shorter-range nuclear missiles.

Echoing Reagan's caution, Soviet and American officials said yesterday that final agreement on the treaty and a summit is not likely to be completed this week.

At the same time, they said that agreement seems within reach, and that a summit between Reagan and Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev could be held as early as late November.

In a statement issued on the eve of his meeting with Shevardnadze, the president said the new U.S. draft of an arms treaty that was presented in Geneva Monday would contain "the most stringent verification regime of any arms control agreement in history."

John Paul: 'Forget mistakes'

Asks Indians to recognize church efforts

By David Maraniss and Loren Jenkins
Washington Post

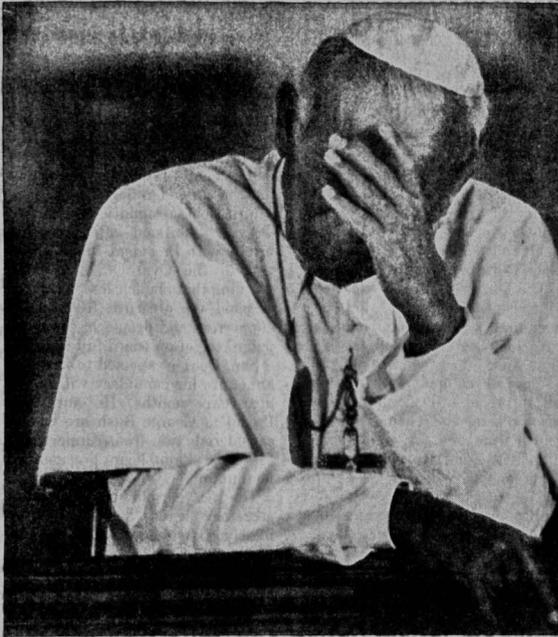

PHOENIX — Pope John Paul II Monday urged Indian leaders to forget his church's past "mistakes and wrongs" and look to its current efforts for Indians' rights. But a spokeswoman for Indian Roman Catholics told him there was still much to be done in his church, and in America.

Addressing a three-day conference of about 1,600 Indian leaders from around the United States, the pope described the initial encounter between Europeans and American natives as a "painful reality" for the natives' descendants.

"The cultural oppression, the injustices, the disruption of your life and your traditional societies must be acknowledged," he said, while specifically praising Friar Junipero Serra, the early Franciscan missionary who embodied, for Indians, all the ancient abuses of the church.

"Unfortunately, not all the members of the church lived up to their Christian responsibilities," he said. "But let us not dwell excessively on mistakes and wrongs, even as we commit ourselves to overcoming their present effects."

IT WAS NOT the strong response sought by Alfretha Antone

Pope John Paul II prays at St. Mary's Basilica in Phoenix, Ariz., Monday afternoon before addressing a crowd of more than 100,000.

of the Pima-Maricopa tribe's Salt River Reservation, in her welcoming remarks. She had asked the pope to intercede on behalf of the Indians' threatened lands and culture. She also urged that the church open its doors to more Indian clerics and the greater use of Indian language and culture in its sacramental life. "Today, little remains of the gifts and richness which our Creator shared with us, the original peoples of these lands," Antone said. "We ask you to intervene with all people of good will to preserve our homelands for our families, our children and the generations to follow us." The conference was named for Kateri Tekakwitha, a 17th century Mohawk woman who was beatified in 1980. Native Americans had hoped the pope might canonize her during this visit, but the Vatican has said the review is not complete.

TEKAWITHA WAS baptized in 1676, and her vow to remain a virgin inspired so much contempt in her tribe that she fled to preach among other tribes. She died of smallpox at the age of 24, and legend has it that her scars vanished the moment she died.

The unfortunate past to which the pope referred involved the zealotry of many Roman Catholic priests who accompanied the Spanish conquistadors colonizing the West in the 17th and 18th centuries, proselytizing among the native Indians they encountered and, often, killing those who would not convert.

To the Indians, the chief representative of that dark era of Spanish Catholic colonization was Serra, who helped found the Catholic missions of California. Catholic history records him as a staunch defender of the Indians, whom he worked zealously to convert. Indian history remembers him for the deaths of Indians who resisted his efforts.

"The church still has much to answer for to us," said Sacheen Little Feather, an Apache delegate to the Indian conference. "It is a matter of the church's cultural genocide against the Indians that must still be addressed by the missions."

ISU's Eaton talks to Midwest leaders

By Rod Boshart
United Press International

GALENA, Ill. — An Iowa college president told Midwest governors Monday that the time is ripe to revitalize the rural economy, but the transformation may entail some political courage in reshaping traditional farm communities.

"If we are to accept and embrace the cold fact that rural change is part of a natural, evolutionary process, we must modify some tightly held perceptions based on the nostalgia of previous realities," Gordon Eaton, president of Iowa State University, told the 26th Midwestern Governors' Conference.

"One of these is the notion of economic development as a means of restoring and maintaining rural America to some previous, greatly enjoyed and widely admired bucolic condition," Eaton said. "Our national and international economic environments have changed to such an extent that we can no longer expect many of our small family farms and self-sufficient communities to dominate the rural scene successfully."

EATON WAS ONE of 10 speakers to address the governors, who are meeting for two days to discuss cooperative ways to help the Midwest shake off the effects of the worst agricultural credit crisis since the Great Depression.

The chief executives opened the meeting by pledging to work together to lobby the federal government to locate its proposed $4.4 billion Superconducting Super Collider project in the nation's heartland, and were slated to discuss ways to jointly market the Midwest to prospective new businesses during today's session.

While Eaton was not sounding the death knell for the family farm, his message was clear that future focus and funding for rural development should be directed toward a diversified, broad-based mix of industries and small businesses related to, but not totally reliant on, agriculture.

TO ACHIEVE THAT end, Eaton said the governors must define their short-term and long-term priorities and have a clear consensus on goals for development. That consensus may be elusive, however, he said, in light of controversial issues such as reorganizing school districts or choosing whether to target regions that show the greatest potential growth versus those with the greatest need for outside assistance.

"It is not a time for a wistful look backward at what once was, for it is no more. While these freestanding units represent an important part of mid-America's heritage and will always remain a part of us, they are most decidedly not the wave of the future," the ISU president said.

"It is, therefore, inadvisable, I believe, to use rural economic development as a tool to regain a lost past, except in those few instances where such restoration serves as the basis for an expanding tourism industry," he added.

Panel criticizes proposed space station

By John M. Broder
Los Angeles Times

WASHINGTON — NASA's plans for a permanent orbiting space station are threatened by unrealistic cost estimates, a shortage of adequate launch vehicles and serious management shortcomings, a prestigious scientific advisory panel said Monday.

The special committee of the National Research Council said that NASA's cost estimates of building the space station may be as much as $4.7 billion — or 30 percent — too low. It also said that the current fleet of space shuttles is "barely adequate" to build the orbiting station and "clearly inadequate to meet broader national needs in space." The shuttle will be used to transport workers and materials to build and operate the space platform.

"Deploying the space station with the current shuttle, while not infeasible, will be difficult and risky," said Robert Seamans Jr., chairman of the advisory group and a Massachusetts Institute of Technology professor of aeronautics and astronautics.

THE 12-MEMBER panel was created four months ago by the White House to study the cost and progress of the space station project, which is scheduled for construction in 1994.

The group endorsed the overall goal of creating the permanent orbiting platform for scientific and commercial research, but called into question some key aspects of the ambitious project.

H&R Block Income Tax Course Begins Sept. 21st

Thousands of people with spare time are earning money as tax preparers in the growing field of Income Tax Service. H & R BLOCK is offering a Basic Income Tax Course starting September 21st. Classes will be held at the H & R BLOCK offices in Iowa City, at 109 E. Burlington.

For 12 weeks students will study all areas of tax preparation and receive actual experience in preparing individual returns. Experienced Block personnel will teach current laws, theory and application as practiced in their offices coast to coast. There is a classroom lecture on each subject and practice problems at every level. The course is programmed to teach students increasingly complex tax problems as study progresses. Students find this course interesting and challenging.

Anyone may enroll. There are no restrictions or qualifications of any kind. The course is ideally suited for housewives, retired persons, teachers or anyone wanting to increase his tax knowledge. While qualified graduates of the course may be offered job interviews they are under no obligation to accept employment with H & R BLOCK. There are franchises available to residents of small cities as well as job opportunities locally. The modest fee charged for this course includes all textbooks, supplies and tax forms necessary for completion of the school. Certificates are awarded to all graduates. Registration forms and brochures for the Income Tax Course may be obtained by contacting the H & R BLOCK office at 109 E. Burlington, Iowa City. Phone 354-1750.

Internal strife, famine plague Mozambique

Civil war leaves country with millions of starving, homeless

By Scott Kraft
Los Angeles Times

VILA DE SENA, Mozambique — Madih Asmani had a straw bed mat on his head and his legs were swollen from two nights of hiking when he first laid tired eyes on this oasis. Power lines hung limply over a highway turned to weeds, coconuts rotted beside trees felled out of spite and sunlight poured into hundreds of roofless stores and houses.

But the sight of government soldiers in a ring of bunkers, shouldering AK-47 rifles to protect what little was left here, lifted his spirits.

"We came because we are suffering, now we are finding a home," the 12-year-old boy said as he played with a small, wishbone-shaped stick. A girl's blouse was his only piece of clothing.

EVERY DAY, 10 TO 20 more people trudge in from the scrubby bush of central Mozambique, and they find refuge in this plundered village surrounded by guerrilla activity.

Mozambique has more than 1.5 million of these "deslocados" — dislocated people who have left behind houses, farms, cooking pots, blankets and clothing in their rush to escape areas infested with bands of the right-wing Mozambique National Resistance, or Renamo.

A massive international relief effort, the likes of which has not been seen on this continent since the 1983-85 famine in Ethiopia, has begun to help the dislocated Mozambicans, as well as 3 million people the government says are unable to feed themselves because of drought or the decade-old civil war.

Large-scale starvation is no longer imminent but relief officials say the margin of safety remains very small for this war-ravaged country on the southeast edge of Africa. Mozambique has one of the highest infant mortality rates in the world; two of every 10 children die before their first birthday.

"THE RELIEF WORK here requires more than just feeding people," said Richard Morgan, program director for the U.N. Children's Fund in Mozambique. "We must try to rebuild a society."

The Renamo insurgents, known locally as "banditos," have ravaged the countryside, attacking and terrorizing civilians, stealing food and clothing, burning fields and destroying everything from factories to relief projects.

Most of the rail lines, roads and rivers are unsafe for travel, a quarter of the nation's meager health system has been wiped out by the rebels in the last year and half of the schools have been destroyed since 1982.

Renamo land mines, planted on beaches and near watering holes, have maimed or killed dozens of children and mothers. Renamo soldiers routinely hold up rural buses, killing dozens of civilians in the process. They were blamed for the July massacre of several hundred people in the southeastern town of Homoine and the August attack on Manjacaze, which left more than 80 villagers dead.

RENAMO'S GOAL, military analysts say, is to destabilize this Marxist country of 14 million people, not rule it. Most analysts and diplomats believe that Renamo receives substantial support from South Africa, Mozambique's neighbor, but South Africa denies it.

Vila de Sena was a tidy, flourishing town of 12,000 people when Renamo guerrillas seized it more than a year ago. The army of Mozambique's ruling party, known as Frelimo, retook it last February with the help of forces from Zimbabwe but found only 600 people here.

Fields of maize and other food crops had been burned, and even the coconut trees had been chopped down to deny the invading government troops any scrap of food. Every structure in town had been looted, then damaged or destroyed. Goats and cows, even dogs and cats, had been slaughtered by the departing guerrillas.

THE POPULATION OF Sena has risen to 2,400 in recent months. Newcomers to this settlement along the southern bank of the Zambezi River are given a small plot of land and a hoe, but no seeds are available.

Los Angeles Times graphic

Daily rations of food here have been cut in half since relief flights stopped a month ago. Clothing and blankets are scarce. When three boxes of medicine arrived, it was the first time the nurse had seen so much as an aspirin in six months.

Maria Jairo, her husband and three children left an area controlled by Renamo last month and walked 12 miles to get here. The guerrillas took their food and clothing and forced the men to carry heavy loads of supplies from camp to camp, she said. Women and young girls, she said, were raped.

"We finally got away," Jairo said. "But if we ever return, we will be killed."

PEOPLE SUSPECTED OF collaborating with government troops have had ears and noses cut off by the guerrillas as a warning to others. Such atrocities have long characterized this war on both sides. Allegations of torture and other atrocities have also been made against government soldiers.

Sena, guarded by nearly 100 government troops, is still not immune to Renamo's attacks. A few months ago, Renamo blew up a section of the three-mile-long Zambezi River bridge, which links the Indian Ocean port of Beira to the south with the inland province of Tete to the north.

Then, a few weeks ago, a band of 20 guerrillas slipped past the sentries about sunset. Inacio Dinga and his young wife, a basket of clothing on her head and their 18-month-old daughter on her back, made a run for the cover of the bush.

"We thought they were taking over the town; we thought it was time to leave again," said Dinga, the town nurse, who had brought his family here from Renamo-held areas north of the river.

THE REBELS FIRED. A bullet stuck Dinga's wife in the back, barely missing the infant. She died in the twilight as the guerrillas disappeared back into the countryside.

The guerrillas seem never to be very far away. Manuel Pires, a charter pilot who ferries soldiers to Sena and nearby Caia, says he always makes a pass high over a town before deciding whether to land.

"Only if I see people moving do I know it's safe," he said.

Caia is 35 miles southeast of Sena, on a major trucking route that is now too dangerous to travel. It was a bustling trading center of 29,000 people when it was overrun by guerrilla forces in 1985.

When Mozambique and Zimbabwean troops forced Renamo out of Caia last February, they found a ghost town. About all that was left unscathed by the departing guerrillas were the rows of thorny acacia trees along an empty main street.

NOW MORE THAN 5,000 people have moved into Caia, and the population grows by 40 or so a day. Grain is distributed only to children and the sick these days, and even so the stock will last only about a week.

New arrivals, like Luciana Fundisie, build houses out of pieces of tin and rubber salvaged from the burned-out buildings in town. A Mozambican soldier, bazooka slung over his shoulder, stood near the Fundisie family construction project one recent afternoon, watching the tall brush on the outskirts of town.

Since their arrival two days earlier, Fundisie and her family had been living on "masanica," a wild fruit that resembles a miniature green apple. Her husband was out foraging for wild sweet potatoes.

"We're not sure what we're going to eat," said Fundisie, who, like the rest of her family, wore a grain sack wrapped around her waist. "Unless food comes in time, we will have to move on."

BEHIND THE CITY'S administrative office, about 10 orphans and half a dozen elderly widows live in a two-room shack. Eight-year-old Mboi Paulino showed up in Caia one day last March, all alone. Her father had been killed by the guerrillas, and her mother had disappeared.

Dealing with these people on the run, in a country where the ground transportation network has all but collapsed, has been the biggest challenge for relief agencies in Mozambique. More than half a million people cannot be reached by road; half of those are inaccessible by air as well.

the UI as 12th highest nationally in its percentage of tuition going to the general budget.

THE PROPOSED increase is expected to generate about $9.3 million for the regents institutions general fund, with about $1.7 million intended for financial aid programs and the remaining $7.6 million intended for increases in faculty salaries.

Former UI President James O. Freedman told the board last year that three years of 13 percent salary increases are needed to make the UI competitive in the higher-education market.

This year's salaries increased about 11 percent.

UI Student Senate President Joe Hansen disputed the need for a tuition increase, saying it would harm accessibility even though UI enrollment remains relatively steady.

"We know it's hurting accessibility," he said. "The reason we're not seeing a decrease in enrollment is because people who were going to private schools are now going to the University of Iowa and people who were going to the University of Iowa are choosing to go to community colleges.

"It's a different type of student we have here," he said.

UI Vice President for Academic Affairs Kenneth Moll said an increase is necessary, and would not harm accessibility because it would be offset by increases in financial aid.

Bork

BECAUSE OF HIS long and contentious record of public statements on controversial issues, members of the committee have been spending weeks preparing to ask him in detail about his views. And, because he will go into the hearings with a public and Senate evenly divided on his nomination, Bork's handling of the sensitive questions is likely to be the deciding factor in whether he becomes the next justice to sit on the highest court in the land.

"Washington is, I hope, about to have a great debate," President Ronald Reagan said Monday in a speech to the National Alliance of Business.

Confirmation of Bork, which would reshape the ideological balance of the court by giving it a strong conservative majority, would represent an enormous White House achievement whose impact could last into the next century. Moreover, it would hand Reagan a significant victory that would help offset devastating losses from the Iran-Contra affair at a crucial time when his advisers are trying to shape his historical image in the waning months of his presidency.

FOR NOW, ACTIVISTS on both sides rate the Bork debate a tossup. But they believe that, by the time Bork's testimony concludes Thursday as expected, the fight may have been decided.

Not only will senators be watching Bork's explanations, they also will be watching his demeanor, trying to decide for themselves whether he is a fair and open-minded conservative legal scholar, as his supporters say, or the ideological zealot his opponents depict.

"It all depends on how he handles himself," a senior adviser said to one key undecided senator. "There's a fine line between a smart man and a smart ass."

Friends of Bork, who will be introduced by former President Gerald Ford, are confident that he will be able to defuse the potential dangers of the interrogation. He is "his own best advocate," Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, said. Another close associate agreed, saying that Bork is "our secret weapon. When he starts talking, people will see he doesn't rant."

OPPOSITIONERS ARE equally confident that Bork's testimony will carry the day for them. "The more the people hear about the record of Robert Bork, the more they understand and the more they don't like it," said Kate Michel-man, executive director of the National Abortion Rights Action League, which has played a major role in opposing the nomination.

Caught in the middle of the debate is the American public, which has been subjected to a media blitz that will reach its peak today when several television networks air large parts of Bork's testimony. CBS, NBC and ABC plan to broadcast the afternoon session live, beginning about 2 p.m. PBS and National Public Radio both plan gavel-to-gavel coverage of the hearings, Judiciary Committee spokesman Pete Smith said.

"What is such a historic occasion about this is that people for the first time are going to hear a prospective Supreme Court justice explain his reasoning — and not in legal, technical words," said a source who has helped Bork prepare.

SO IMPORTANT IS the issue to the White House that administration officials have held three informal strategy discussions with Bork and one mock committee session to help prepare him for the hearings, including one meeting at the White House attended by presidential chief of staff Howard Baker.

But the sessions "weren't the usual 'murder boards' that we've done for other (nominees) but were more like bull sessions," said one participant who helped prepare Chief Justice William Rehnquist for his hearings last year. "After all, this was not some guy from Salt Lake who has never been here before and says, 'What's a hearing?" Besides, he knows a lot more than those of us who could ask questions."

MOSTLY, BORK has been staying home, reading his papers and reviewing details of the main events in his life — like his firing of Watergate special prosecutor Archibald Cox. Along with extensive questioning on his civil rights views and his positions on the constitutional protections of privacy, Watergate is expected to be one of the chief areas of questioning in the hearings.

Bork and the committee have plowed the Watergate ground twice before: In November 1973, only two weeks after Cox's discharge, and again in 1982, when the panel approved Bork's nomination to the U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals, where he now sits.

Rally

believe they will be adversely affected by Supreme Court decisions if Bork is named a justice on that court."

BORK'S RECORD indicates he is opposed to civil rights most Americans take for granted, Fischer said. Bork has said the Constitution makes no provision for a general right to privacy, or for the rights of women and minorities, he said.

"Say no to discrimination, say no to sexual harassment — just say no to Robert Bork," he said. "No justice is better than this justice. It's a right and duty of everyone to get involved in this debate."

Gale Sands, associate director of the Emma Goldman Clinic for Women, 227 N. Dubuque St., said she is concerned Bork would overturn the 1973 Supreme Court Roe vs. Wade decision declaring that individual states could not limit women's right to abortion.

Prior to 1973, women seeking abortions in many states were forced to resort to illegal clinics where lack of sanitation and improper techniques were often fatal, she said.

"We believe that if Bork's nomination is confirmed, Roe vs. Wade would be overturned or significantly changed and what would happen to the 1.5 million women who yearly seek safe, sanitary abortion?" she said. "They would still seek abortion, but if Roe vs. Wade is overturned, then women seeking abortion may be seeking death."

ALTHOUGH SANDS agreed Bork's confirmation will threaten the rights of minorities and homosexuals, she said women will be hurt most.

"Many groups feel his nomination is the greatest threat to civil liberties in the last three decades and women stand to lose a lot. We will lose on birth control, abortion and sexual harassment, which is President Reagan's fantasy of women," she said. "Will Reagan's fantasy of women be the one we must live with for the next 40 years? I fervently hope not."

UI Law Professor Burns Weston said his resistance to Bork's nomination is not based on political beliefs.

"I primarily object on the grounds that I don't believe he understands the Constitution of the United States," he said.

Because Supreme Court justices are appointed for life tenures, Bork will have a negative, long-lasting effect on civil rights in this country, he said.

"The perversion of the work done in the last 40 years would be a perversion of what this country should stand for as we enter the 21st century," he said.

LASA EXECUTIVE Associate Tiffany Stimson, who organized the rally, said students could help stop Bork's nomination by signing a petition to be sent to Iowa Senators Harkin and Grassley.

"The time for rhetoric is over," she said. "It is the time for action — sign the petition."

Not all in attendance at the rally agreed with the speakers. Pro-life activists and campus conservatives distributed literature supporting Bork's confirmation.

One flyer stated UI law professors who signed a petition against Bork's nomination are "frustrated academicians who are intellectually too weak to serve on the faculty of Yale Law School or be nominated for a position on the Supreme Court."

The flyer also stated the rally was organized due to "partisan politics from disgruntled Democrats, abortionists, homosexuals and left-wing radicals."

Armory

appropriations.

"With all the replacement facilities the university hospitals have built over the last 15 years, there have been no state budget capital appropriations," Borg said.

He said the project will be paid through UI Hospitals reserves, money that was set aside as part of the fee patients pay when they use the hospitals.

If the reserves do not cover the entire cost, hospital officials said they will ask the regents to sell bonds which the hospitals will repay.

THE PLANS CALL for the facility to be built to the south of Colleton Pavilion — the area occupied by the Armory — because it would make UI Hospitals more efficient, Borg said. If the new facility is not built, the psychiatric hospital would continue to be isolated to the north of the rest of the hospitals.

The Armory — the western addition to the Field House — houses six of the Field House's 10 basketball courts and the classrooms, offices and facilities of the more than 500 UI students enrolled in U.S. Army and Air Force Reserved Officer Training Corps.

UI Interim President Richard Remington announced last week the Armory space would be replaced before the hospital construction required the Armory's demolition in 1989.

Two preliminary alternative sites have been named by UI Recreational Services officials. One site is an addition to the south side of the Field House and the other is in a parking ramp planned in connection with the new UI Laser Science and Engineering Facility.

UI Planning and Administrative Services Director Richard Gibson said approval by the regents would allow the UI to search for an architectural firm to assist in planning the facility.

UI Director of University Relations and Assistant to the President Carla Cooper said user's fees have been ruled out as a source of funding for the Armory replacement, and said the cost, location and sources of funding for the project are expected to be finalized by November.

The UI must publicly solicit bids for any architectural project costing more than $1 million, according to the documents.

The selection of an architect should be completed by November, Gibson said.

New Floyd album: OK, but not great

By Jeff Rynott
The Daily Iowan

It is hard to remember, in the wake of such albums as The Dark Side Of The Moon and The Wall, that Roger Waters has not always been the leader of Pink Floyd. When it was formed in the 60s, the Floyd was the vehicle for chief songwriter/guitarist Syd Barrett, and after his drug-induced breakdown and exile from the band, group members Waters, Nick Mason, Richard Wright and newcomer David Gilmour shared responsibility for the band's material.

Now that Waters has left for good, Pink Floyd is back to its early 70s state on its new release, A Momentary Lapse Of Reason. However, there is a certain sense of inequality among the band's survivors: On the band's inner sieve only Gilmour and Mason are pictured and Wright, voted out of the band after The Wall, has returned to second-billing status in the album credits.

IT IS GILMOUR WHO seems to have the most control; along with producing the album (with Bob Ezrin, who did The Wall), he is credited as chief songwriter on each of the LP's 11 cuts. Nevertheless, Gilmour does not seem to have the total control Waters enjoyed. Wright often shares vocal responsibilities, and musically the album has more in common with Mason's solo effort, Profiles, than Gilmour's Blue Light.

But how is the "new" Pink Floyd? How does it sound? What is it doing? Well, A Momentary Lapse Of Reason does share quite a bit with the other Floyd LPs. It does seem to be a concept album. It brings in the dominant Floydian theme of interpersonal isolation in the story of a man whose title revelation shows him what a failure his life has turned out to be. It is interspersed with attacks on the pro-war mentality but turns a blind eye to the plight of the needy.

THE TRADITIONAL sound effects run throughout the album and at times the band approaches its old orchestral grandeur, especially on "One Slip," "Yet Another Movie" and "Sorrow." The opening instrumental, "Signs Of Life," could have been a movement from 1975's "Shine On You Crazy Diamond." And Gilmour does cut loose with a few of the distortion-tinged solos that made songs like "Money" classics.

But the album is missing some of the old Floyd as well. Mostly, it is missing Waters' emotional, tortured vocals and bleak songwriting ability. Gilmour is a decent enough writer, and he and Wright are fine vocalists, but the vocals are too clean, too distanced from their subject matter. Outside influences have crept in as well to the once-unique Floyd mix. Parts of A Momentary Lapse Of Reason sound very much like Roxy Music, perhaps not surprising considering Gilmour's work with that group's ex-leader, Bryan Ferry, and the fact that ex-Roxy keyboardist Phil Manzanera co-wrote "One Slip" on the new LP.

All of which leads to a very skewed review. A Momentary Lapse Of Reason is a good album with standout musicianship (really only faltering on the two-part "A New Machine") and worth recommending on that score. However, it is not a Pink Floyd album. There will never be a "Pink Floyd" album ever again and that makes listening to the new LP a saddening experience in the end.

A/E Briefs

UI Hospitals is holding a multiple exhibit of photography, painting and a group exhibit from Iowa Artisans Gallery through September. Iowa City photographer Joan Liffing-Zug has an exhibit of photos entitled "Men, 1950-1980" in Boyd Tower East Lobby. Michael B. Canas' watercolors are on display in Boyd Tower West Lobby. A variety of works from the Iowa Artisan's Gallery can be seen in the hospital's Main Lobby.

'Paris' good catalog of recent black sentiment

By Robin Rutan
Special to The Daily Iowan

Paris Without Regret explores the motivations of four prominent blacks who chose to leave the United States and live in Paris. The four are writers James Baldwin and Chester Himes, and the jazz musicians Kenny Clarke and Donald Byrd.

The book is written by Ursula Broshke Davis, who devotes a section of her study to each man. She has the good grace to allow readers to make comparisons on their own.

Despite the success these men enjoyed as artists, each felt that the American way of life denied them dignity as people. Byrd and Clarke could not stay in the same hotel with the whites in their band. Baldwin and Himes, forced to live off-campus at their universities because of segregation, were appalled by the hypocritical academia entrusted to educate them.

FOR SIMILAR REASONS each man found his way to Paris in his own time. All enjoyed success there. All felt they were accorded more dignity abroad than at home. Yet, each man returned to America.

Baldwin felt he had to be involved in the struggle for civil rights. So did Byrd. For Clarke, the need to keep pace with his profession meant keeping in touch with his black roots. Himes came home to the United States periodically, but always returned to Paris again.

The book's interest lies in the density of biographical facts given by its author: Baldwin's feud with Richard Wright; Himes' life in prison; Clarke's innovations on the drums and how they came about. All make absorbing reading. The impressive academic credentials of Byrd will surprise many readers.

The book is informative, readable and written with considerable sensitivity. It is a good catalog of black sentiment during the middle of the this century. These four men faced harsh internal and external conflicts in response to their strong personal feelings and they voluntarily exiled themselves to another country.

Paris Without Regret is published by UI Press.

Hancher Auditorium box office had its largest single-day ticket sales in its history with the announcement of an added performance of Cats. Sales for Sept. 8, (the day of the announcement) totaled more than $24,000. The sale for Cats plus the strong response to performances by cellist Yo-Yo Ma, the Warsaw Ballet and the Joffrey Ballet produced the record sales day.

Peterson, Dawson, Welk win Triathalon

David Peterson, 23, of Oak Park, Ill., won the seventh annual Iowa Triathalon Sunday on the International course at Lake Macbride State Park. Peterson had a time of two hours, seven minutes and 10 seconds.

Bridget Dawson, a professional triathlete from Portland, Oregon, won the women's international course in an impressive 2:15:49.

The international course consists of a three-quarter mile swim, a 26-mile bike ride and a 10K run.

Gregory Welk, 23, of Iowa City, won the short course, which is for triathletes competing in their initial triathalons, in 1:16:15.

Schnell, White win Big Ten honors

CHICAGO (UPI) — Indiana quarterback Dave Schnell, who threw for two touchdowns and rushed for another in his club's opening win Saturday, was named Monday as UPI's Big Ten offensive player of the week.

Schnell, a junior, was 12 of 16 for 224 yards and two touchdowns in the Hoosiers' 35-13 win over Rice. He also rushed for 36 yards in nine carries including a 1-yard TD run.

William White of Ohio State was tabbed as the UPI Big Ten defensive player of the week.

The senior defensive back had three interceptions in the Buckeyes' 24-3 season opening win over West Virginia. White returned one of the interceptions 29 yards for a touchdown.

Ripken's innings streak stopped

TORONTO (UPI) — Baltimore shortstop Cal Ripken, Jr. was lifted in the bottom of the eighth inning of the Toronto Blue Jays' 18-3 rout of the Orioles Monday, snapping his 8,233 consecutive innings streak in his 908th game.

Driver Guerrero's condition improves

INDIANAPOLIS (UPI) — The condition of race car driver Roberto Guerrero improved slightly Monday but he remained in critical condition with head injuries suffered during a practice crash.

"He has shown a slight improvement," said Methodist Hospital spokeswoman Kathryn Walsh-Miller. "He is moving more spontaneously and responding to stimulation by moving his legs and opening his eyes. It is encouraging but they (doctors) don't want to be too encouraging."

The announcement of Guerrero's condition came at the end of a 72-hour period doctors deemed crucial to his recovery. He suffered a closed head injury from a crash last Thursday at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway during tire testing.

Baseball Almanac

Today is Tuesday, Sept. 15. It is the 163rd day of the season. The playoffs begin in 21 days. The Pirates are to complete their two-game series with Montreal and then face N. East contenders St. Louis and New York in three-game series.

Today's Matchup
 Boston right-hander Al Nipper, 9-11, meets Detroit left-hander Frank Tanana, 13-10, in a match-up between the defending A.L. East champion Red Sox and the contending Tigers. Game starts at 7:30 p.m. EDT at Tiger Stadium.

Quick Quiz
 —Cleveland has the best record in the major leagues since the All-Star break in '82. Which team, 15-27-21, has the second best mark? (answer below)

Who's Hot
 —The Pirates have won seven consecutive games.
 —Cleveland's Mel Hall hit four homers in three games against the Twins.
 —In a four-game series against the A's, Kansas City's Steve Baltwon was 5 for 12 with three homers and nine RBI.

Who's Not
 —The Angels lost for the ninth time in their last 11 games.
 —Cleveland lost for the ninth time in 12 games.
 —Steve Trout, 46 since joining the Yankees, pitched one mark at home inning against the Blue Jays allowing three hits, three runs and two walks before being bounced.

Hot Seat
 Oakland's Alfredo Griffin, who attempted to steal second base with two out in the ninth inning and the Athletics trailing by a run, was thrown out to end the game.

Stretch Drive
 Rick Honeycutt, acquired by Oakland from the Dodgers in Aug. '82, extended his personal losing streak to 13 games. Kansas City battered Honeycutt, 0-2, for five runs in 2 1-3 innings in his first Oakland start.

NL Numbers
 The Cubs' Rick Sutcliffe pitched Chicago's first complete game since July 22 when he hurled nine innings against the Padres. The Cubs and Reds have the fewest complete games in the NL since the All-Star break with no apiece. The Pirates and Giants lead the NL with 10 each.

Different Worlds
 Detroit's Walt Terrell has a 3-8 road record, but an 11-2 mark at home.

Quick Quiz Answer
 The Brewers.

All And Nothing
 The Pirates' Brian Fisher allowed a homer to Philadelphia's Juan Samuel on his first pitch of the game but then yielded only four singles and 9 runs the rest of the way.

Still Serving 'Em Up
 Minnesota's Bert Blyleven yielded his major league-leading 40th homer of the season against the Indians' Mel Hall.

Stop...Go...Stop
 Rain delayed the start of the Mets-Cardinals game 1 hour and 43 minutes. After five pitches were thrown, a delay of 1:41 began.

Phillies rehire Elia to lead club in '88

By Joe Ciolini United Press International

PHILADELPHIA—Lee Elia, who replaced John Felske as the Philadelphia Phillies' manager June 18, has been rehired for the 1988 season, President Bill Giles announced Monday.

Giles also said pitching coach Claude Osteen, bullpen coach Mike Ryan and hitting instructor Del Unser would return next season, but third-base coach Jim Davenport would not be back.

"Lee is a smart guy," Giles said. "He's tough, he communicates well, he runs a ballgame well. He's from Philadelphia. And he and I communicate well. We think along the same wavelength."

Before Monday night's game against St. Louis, the Phillies had a 42-39 record under Elia but had lost five straight and 14 of their last 19 games.

"We fought so hard to get within 6 1/2 games of first place (in the National League East) and then we fell back again," Elia said. "That had an adverse effect on us."

FELSKO WAS FIRED with the Phillies at 29-32 and in fifth place in the NL East. They were expected to be contenders.

Elia, who formerly managed the Chicago Cubs, said he was looking forward to the opportunity to go through spring training with the Phillies.

"We will be mentally and physically prepared to start the championship season, which has been a void in our organization for the last few years," he said.

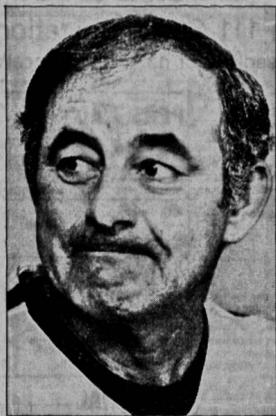

Elia said the Phillies must improve their pitching if they are to contend in 1988 and he said he would also like to improve the team's depth.

He and Giles, however, said they did not want to trade a starting pitcher to get a pitcher.

"I really don't want to change the nucleus of the team," Giles said.

GILES SAID DAVENPORT had been offered a position as the Phillies' major-league scout and might accept it if he cannot find another coaching job.

Giles also said the team would hire two or three more coaches for next season. Among the leading candidates for those jobs are former Phillies player Tony Taylor, who managed the club's Class-A team in Utica this year, and Chicago Cubs Coach John Vukovich, who might like to work for Elia, a close friend, if he is passed over for the job as Cubs manager.

Giles said he decided to announce Elia's return before the end of the season so that he could better prepare for next year.

"He felt that if he was coming back, it would help if the players knew it," Giles said. "He plans to have several one-on-one meetings with the players over the last few weeks of the season and he felt he could talk with more authority and more respect if they knew he was coming back next season."

Schultz: Schools should vote on football playoff system

GREENSBORO, N.C. (UPI) — Dick Schultz, the incoming executive director of the NCAA, Monday called for Division I-A football schools to vote on whether to adopt a playoff system.

"I do think it's time that the membership vote on it and decide it one way or another," Schultz said prior to speaking at an athletic banquet. "We've been talking about it for a long, long time. Maybe it's time to vote on it and either get rid of it, or get on with it."

But Schultz said he believes that if the coaches had an opportunity to vote, they'd spurn the idea of deciding a true national champion.

"Most of the I-A coaches I've talked to like the bowl system," Schultz said. "They feel like the bowls have done a good job, and they feel like the playoff system would destroy the bowls."

SCHULTZ NOTED THAT there are about 18 bowls now and thus 36 teams get to participate in a bowl game.

Schultz said his top priority as executive director will be to restore integrity to college athletics.

"I do think it's time that the membership vote on it and decide it one way or another," NCAA Executive Director Dick Schultz says of a Division I football playoff system.

"I sense that the average person feels that everything is wrong in college athletics, that every school cheats, has drug problems and that no one is graduating their athletes," Schultz said. "We really have to attack that."

"We see and read a lot about the problems in college athletics but from my position, I think we are in pretty good shape. I think there are far more positives in intercollegiate athletics than negatives," he said. "The problems that everyone is concerned about are really no more than a microcosm of society today."

Schultz is scheduled to succeed Walter Byers in the NCAA post Oct. 1.

SCHULTZ SAID DRUG testing has been a positive development in intercollegiate athletics.

"When you think that only 1.5 percent of the hundreds of athletes who were tested over the past year tested positive, I don't think you could take any segment of society today and test them and come anywhere close to that percentage. I think it speaks well for our athletes."

"The thing I want to do is see athletes and athletics return to their proper role. I want athletes to be the real role models for America today. I think most athletes are."

"I think we need to spend a lot of time talking about those people and those programs that are outstanding."

As a second major goal, Schultz said he thinks much work needs to be done toward improving the perception of the NCAA among member institutions.

Suns' Edwards to play following drug program

PHOENIX (UPI)—Facing trial on drug charges, Phoenix Suns center James Edwards has entered a plea agreement that will allow him to play this season in the NBA, his attorney said Sunday.

Under the agreement, announced by his attorney Larry Debus and deputy Maricopa County attorney James Keppel, Edwards will enter a drug-counseling program in exchange for the dismissal of the charges against him.

Edwards was charged with conspiracy to transfer a narcotic drug and conspiracy to transfer or possess cocaine. In a statement released by Debus, Edwards admits using marijuana once but denies trafficking in narcotics.

"James Edwards does not deny that sometime in the past he smoked marijuana with (Suns guard) Walter Davis," the statement said. "He has, however, never participated in a conspiracy nor did any conspiracy exist among pro athletes to traffic in narcotics."

DAVIS, A SIX-TIME NBA all-star, testified under grant of immunity before the grand jury that indicted three of his teammates but was not charged in the case.

The day the indictments were announced, Davis admitted a relapse of cocaine addiction and entered a southern California drug treatment center for the second time.

Edwards is the last of three current Sun players indicted on drug charges following a police probe of the ballclub to plea bargain his case.

Granese added: "I'm definitely impressed with Melissa Sanders.

Davidson's career record improved to 199-65-16. Fifth-year New Hampshire Coach Marisa Didio's mark is 61-14-8.

By collecting $306,413 for her three titles, Navratilova became the first player to exceed $1 million in earnings at the Open with a total of $1,135,446 since her first appearance in 1973. Her career earnings stand at $12,606,656.

Navratilova and Shriver overcame Kathy Jordan and Elizabeth Smylie, 5-7, 6-4, 6-2, the 18th Grand Slam title for the pair. Navratilova and Sanchez then edged Betsy Nagelsen and Paul Annacone, 6-4, 6-7 (6-8), 7-6 (14-12), in the mixed doubles final.

After fighting off two match points in the tie-break, Navratilova and Sanchez won it on their seventh match point.

"The older you get the more it means," the 30-year-old Navratilova said. "Time was running out for the triple, not so much for the singles. With the triple you don't get that many chances to do it. To do it here in New York City is great."

Negotiations

they respond we'll have to wait and see."

Management Council Executive Director Jack Donlan was hopeful about the union's new offer.

"This is the first time we'll see something that's different from their April 20th (offer). In that respect, it's good news," Donlan said after talks ended Sunday night.

Staff experts from both sides met Monday to discuss insurance, severance and pension issues.

Allen repeated the union's claims that management has given no indication that it is willing to bargain for a new three-year agreement. The old collective bargaining agreement expired Aug. 31, leaving some 1,600 players without a contract. The league's owners voted last week to field teams of free agents during a strike.

"WE'RE TRYING TO give the process every opportunity to avert a strike, but we're not getting a lot of help from the other side," Allen said.

"Part of the reason, we believe, is because there is nobody over there with the authority to make the deal," Allen added, questioning whether Donlan has been authorized to compromise.

"It's not a function of time, it's a function of willingness on each side and authority on each side," Allen said. "You can meet forever and not get anything done or you could meet for a very short period of time and make substantial progress."

The key issues in the talks are management's demands for an entry level salary scale and mandatory random drug testing and the players' demands for unrestricted free agency, more guaranteed contracts and protection for union representatives on the 28 teams.

Big bikers bear toys for charity

AUGUSTA, Maine (UPI) — Like Marlon Brando in 'The Wild One', they came roaring into town on their big bikes — some 2,500 leather-clad motorcyclists, many with teddy bears propped up on their handlebars.

Teddy bears? It was the annual Maine Toy Run, sponsored by the United Bikers of Maine, whose members Sunday each carried a toy with them to Augusta for the Salvation Army.

The gang of bikers included Willie G. Davidson, grandson of one of the founders of the Harley Davidson Motorcycle Corp., and Miss Harley, also known as Jacqueline McCue, 23, of Deland, Fla.

"I've got to tell you there's nothing like standing in the living room window of the governor's mansion and watching 2,000 bikes with stuffed teddy bears on the front cruise by," Gov. John McKernan told the bikers, who gathered in a parking lot near the Statehouse after riding in from all over the state.

DAVIDSON, WHO described himself as being "past 50" and who rode a Harley from Lewiston to Augusta for the rally, said: "There should be a message here that comes out to people. We're really a generous bunch of good people here, and we're doing our share to help people in general."

The United Bikers of Maine started the toy run several years ago, and the first run was so successful that it has been held every year since.

Club turns game hunting into a 'luxury experience'

By Angus Phillips
Washington Post

KEARNEYSVILLE, Va. — The latest L.L. Bean catalog just came in the mail, sporting an evocative outdoor scene on the cover.

It's the sort of picture that would appeal to anyone who hunts: a shotgunner and his setter traipsing along a dirt road through stands of fiery birches, orange maples and yellow grass.

That's what bird-hunting is all about: clear eyes, clear skies, cool air, comfortable old boots and a familiar patch of natural, game-rich land to work.

But if you believe the fellows behind Prospect Hall Shooting Club here, the picture is an anachronism, a relic of a fast-disappearing past.

ACCORDING TO Bob Jantzen, former director of the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service and co-founder of Prospect Hall, the present is bleak and the future even bleaker for urban Easterners who want to hunt quail, grouse or other wild birds on private land.

He blames the press of civilization, as farms and forests are gobbled up by housing developers and the remaining land increasingly is put off-limits to hunters.

Jantzen and three partners think they've found an answer with Prospect Hall, one of the Washington area's first private shooting clubs.

Here, on a 400-acre patch of a large farm 90 minutes from Washington, gunners can take a day off work, don their hunting togs and tramp the fields, assured of plenty of pen-raised quail, partridge and pheasant to shoot at and good dogs to work over.

SHOOTING CLUBS ALREADY abound around New York, according to a story a couple of years ago in The Wall Street Journal. Now the trend is moving south.

Prospect Hall is looking for 30 or 40 members to join the 14 already enrolled. For $1,000 initiation, $750 per year dues and a hefty use fee each time they come out, club members are guaranteed a "hunting experience" with plenty of game, as Jantzen's partner, Steve Boynton, put it.

Recently, Boynton organized a bus trip from Washington for a dozen prospective members, who were treated to sweet corn and barbecued chicken at the club's elegant, 200-year-old farmhouse.

Later they shot box after box of shells on skeet, trap and other shooting ranges. They also toured the hunting fields, though no live game was released, because game-farm season doesn't open until Oct. 1.

THESE WERE GENTLEMAN GUNNERS, just the sort Boynton and Jantzen hoped to attract: lawyers, real-estate developers, government officials and well-fixed retirees.

But almost to a man, they expressed reservations about the shooting-club concept. "This is very hard for me," said real-estate man John Willey, who grew up hunting wild quail on farms around Memphis, Tenn.

"I love to hunt, and I'd like to hunt the way we did it as a boy, but I don't know if it's possible anymore. This might be the next best thing."

He and lawyer John Stinson were locked in deep conversation on the bus ride here, discussing the merits of pen-raised birds versus the real thing. Stinson said pen-raised birds don't fly right. "You have your 10-foot-high birds, that only fly as high as the pen they were kept in," he said. Other birds grow so tame they won't fly at all, he said.

ONE PROSPECTIVE MEMBER recollected a game-farm shoot for ducks in which a released mallard was winged and slipped off into thick cover. When the gunners were walking back to the clubhouse, they were startled to find the injured duck walking up the hill alongside them, heading for the barn and its evening meal, he said.

Boynton and other club organizers were attentive to these stories. They intend to run a high-class operation in which the birds act wild, and the experience more closely approximates the real thing.

They've hired three full-time hands to run the club, and have been touring corporate shooting clubs around the country to catch up on the latest game farm philosophies. Top-flight bird dogs are being trained, and every hunt will be overseen by a guide.

IN THE YEAR SINCE THE IDEA was hatched, the Prospect Hall fields have been planted in game-holding grain crops and clay-pigeon "shooting-game" courses have been built, including a quail walk where clay pigeons shoot off through the trees as the gunner tramps a woods trail.

It's all very much like hunting, as much like hunting as you probably can get without actually hunting. But is it good enough?

Boynton cited three justifications for shooting clubs: loss of wild habitat; reluctance of landowners to permit hunting because of bad experiences with "slob" hunters; and time pressures on the modern urban professional, which sounds like the real clincher.

"People are pressed for time," he said. At a place like Prospect Hall, he said, they can go out for a couple of hours and get guaranteed shooting. There's no driving around, talking to farmers, getting permission, training dogs, finding the good cover.

UCLA penalized for violations

By Jeff Hasen
United Press International

LOS ANGELES — The NCAA Monday stripped UCLA of two men's basketball scholarships for the 1988-89 season because of violations involving players over recruiting, rent and transportation.

The Committee on Infractions in Mission, Kan. announced in a four-page statement that, until the end of the 1988-89 academic year, no more than four men's basketball scholarships will be awarded to the school. UCLA was entitled to six scholarship awards during that period.

The Bruins, who have won 10 national titles and are one of the titans in college basketball history, were not placed on probation and will be allowed to participate in postseason play and appear on television. The NCAA said UCLA must explain why additional penalties should not be imposed.

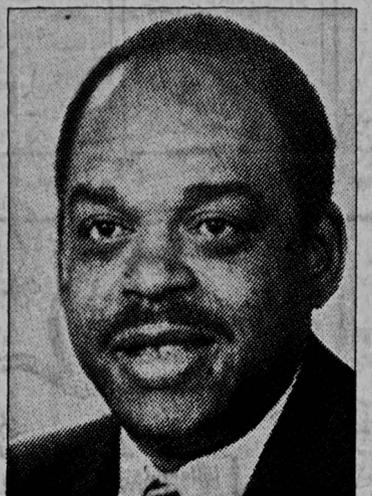

"I'M RELIEVED, BUT we have to work harder to tighten the ship," said UCLA Coach Walt Hazzard, whose conduct was cited by the committee. "The NCAA was fair in dealing with us. I have no denial of anything. We regret the mistakes we made."

The Pacific Ten Conference, the league to which UCLA belongs, also investigated the Bruins' basketball program.

"It's important to note that most of the violations were self-reported," UCLA Athletic Director Peter Dalis said.

The NCAA said its case primarily arose from two incidents: a university booster who provided rent for a recruit during the spring of 1985; and improprieties concerning a top recruit — believed to be Sean Higgins — who signed, and was released from, a letter of intent. Higgins later signed with Michigan.

The NCAA did not name the recruit and said the school must cut all ties with the unidentified booster. The governing body of college sports said Hazzard "placed himself in circumstances he should have avoided."

"MOREOVER," THE NCAA report added, "once these violations were revealed, the head coach's inconsistent statements concerning some of the events in question almost turned the minor violations into serious matters."

The NCAA said Hazzard lent a family car to one of his players to help transport a recruit. The committee also reported the coach visited a high school all-star team on the UCLA campus.

ONE PROSPECTIVE MEMBER collected a game-farm shoot for ducks in which a released mallard was winged and slipped off into thick cover. When the gunners were walking back to the clubhouse, they were startled to find the injured duck walking up the hill alongside them, heading for the barn and its evening meal, he said.

Boynton and other club organizers were attentive to these stories. They intend to run a high-class operation in which the birds act wild, and the experience more closely approximates the real thing.

They've hired three full-time hands to run the club, and have been touring corporate shooting clubs around the country to catch up on the latest game farm philosophies. Top-flight bird dogs are being trained, and every hunt will be overseen by a guide.

IN THE YEAR SINCE THE IDEA was hatched, the Prospect Hall fields have been planted in game-holding grain crops and clay-pigeon "shooting-game" courses have been built, including a quail walk where clay pigeons shoot off through the trees as the gunner tramps a woods trail.

It's all very much like hunting, as much like hunting as you probably can get without actually hunting. But is it good enough?

Boynton cited three justifications for shooting clubs: loss of wild habitat; reluctance of landowners to permit hunting because of bad experiences with "slob" hunters; and time pressures on the modern urban professional, which sounds like the real clincher.

"People are pressed for time," he said. At a place like Prospect Hall, he said, they can go out for a couple of hours and get guaranteed shooting. There's no driving around, talking to farmers, getting permission, training dogs, finding the good cover.

Players will offer new plan to owners

By Will Dunham
United Press International

WASHINGTON — The NFL players' union will present a new contract proposal to league management today that will be "very useful in reaching an agreement" to avert a threatened Sept. 22 strike, a union official said Monday.

The NFL Players Association will present the new offer, written as a response to a rejected Sept. 7 management offer, when contract talks resume Tuesday.

Union official Doug Allen also said the NFLPA leadership was "heartened" at the solidarity handshakes held around the league before kickoff at Sunday's 13 season opening games. Allen said fan booing during the handshakes was a symptom of frustration over the possibility of a strike.

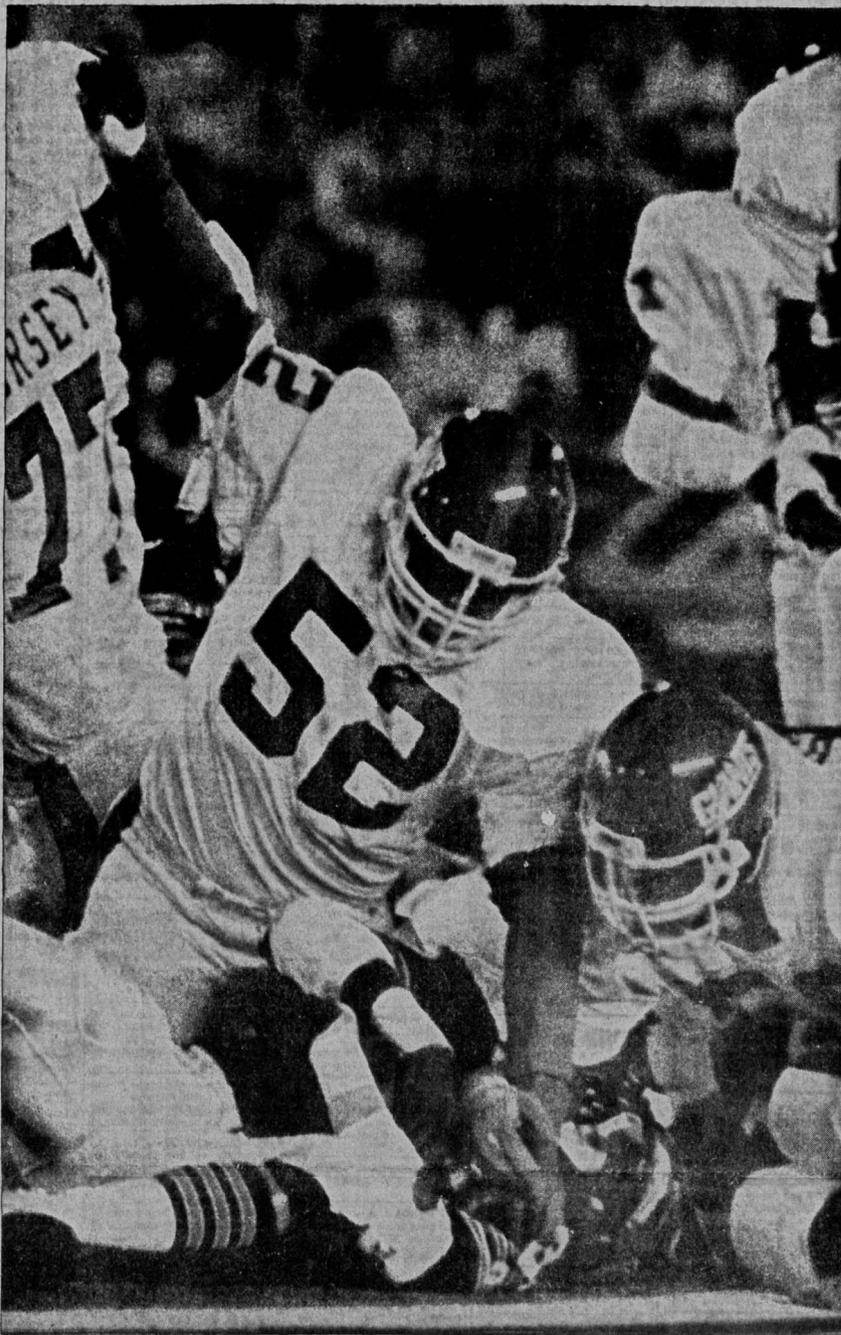

"WE HOPE THE fans understand that the players shaking hands is not a repudiation of the fans," said Allen, the union's assistant executive director. "It is just a statement of support for what we're doing and an expression that there are two sides to professional football — the game side and the business side."

Union officials would not talk about the details of the forthcoming contract proposal, but said they were optimistic it could bring about a settlement. The offer will be "somewhat similar in form" to the 11-page offer from management submitted to the union on Labor Day, which was turned down as a $90 million "takeback" over three years.

The NFLPA already has a 123-page offer on the table, which was presented April 20.

"WE BELIEVE THAT what we will present them should answer any questions that they have, and respond to their concerns," Allen said. "We believe it will be something that will be very useful in reaching an agreement, but how

Bears bury Giants with eight sacks

By Mike Rabun
United Press International

CHICAGO — Quarterback Mike Tomczak accounted for three touchdowns and Chicago's defense played up to its ferocious Super Bowl form Monday night to down the defending NFL champion New York Giants, 34-19.

The Bears ended New York's 12-game winning streak in a battle of the two previous Super Bowl winners, limiting the Giants' offense to one touchdown and producing a rash of big plays that included the longest punt return in club history.

Tomczak scored on a 1-yard quarterback sneak with 28 seconds left in the first half to put the Bears in front for the first time and then broke the game open with third-quarter touchdown throws of 42 yards to rookie Ron Morris and 56 yards to Willie Gault.

DENNIS MCKINNON added to the thorough beating with a 94-yard punt return early in the final quarter, breaking away from three would-be tacklers near midfield and running the rest of the way untouched to break a 45-year-old Chicago record.

The longest previous Bears' punt return was of 89 yards by Ray McLean in 1942.

Chicago's first points came on a field goal of 24 yards by Kevin Butler in the first period and Butler added a 25-yard field goal with 65 seconds remaining, accounting for the final score.

New York scored on a blocked punt which Tom Flynn fell on in the end zone for the first points of the game, on a 70-yard interception return in the third quarter by safety Terry Kinard to cut the Giants' deficit to 34-13. A 4-yard throw from Phil Simms to Stacy Robinson in the fourth period made the score 31-19.

THE CHICAGO PASS rush, led by end Richard Dent and middle linebacker Mike Singletary, accounted for eight quarterback sacks for 53 yards and briefly knocked Simms out of the game.

Dent smacked Simms in the second quarter and sent the Super Bowl XXI Most Valuable Player to the sidelines.

Simms returned after one play but then left for one more series later in the first half complaining of dizziness.

Tomczak completed 20 of 34 throws for 292 yards and the two touchdowns — doubling the number of scoring tosses he had produced in his two previous years with the Bears.

HE BECAME THE starting Chicago quarterback when Jim McMahon was placed on the injured reserve list with a shoulder still tender following surgery. McMahon stood on the sidelines Monday night signaling in the plays.

Simms was 14 of 28 for 175 yards with no interceptions and one TD throw.

The Bears turned the game around after experiencing a dismal opening few minutes.

New York drove to the Chicago 10 the first time it had the ball, only to lose it on a fumble by Simms.

That was quickly followed by the blocked punt for the New York touchdown and moments later the Bears failed to pick up a first down when they went for it on 4th-and-1 at the Giants' 46.

From that point, however, the Bears' defense took charge — even preventing a score when the Giants came up with an interception at the Chicago 34 midway through the second period.

A quarterback sack took New York out of field goal range on that possession and when the Bears regained the ball after a New York punt they marched to their go-ahead touchdown.

Walsh shutout lifts hurting Hawks, 1-0

By G. Hammond-Kunke
The Daily Iowan

Iowa gutted out a 1-0 win over New Hampshire's field hockey team under a beautiful blue sky Monday afternoon at Alumni Field in Boston, Mass.

Erin Walsh, usually a defensive player, registered her first shutout in only her second game as a collegiate goalkeeper for the 3-1 Hawkeyes. The Wildcats' record slips to 1-1.

Iowa Coach Judith Davidson was delighted with Walsh's performance.

"She was the story of the game," Davidson said. "She played magnificently for somebody who's minutes left in the match. Forward Peggy Halinski drove a hard shot off a penalty corner and the ball deflected into the net. But umpires ruled the ball was too high and dangerous.

Walsh, a sophomore from Monterey, Calif., was tested early in the game when she dove for a save that caromed off her chest. In all, she stopped 10 New Hampshire shots. Iowa had nine shots on goal compared to 13 for New Hampshire.

In the second half, the game was a battle of the Wildcats' offense against the Hawkeyes' defense. Iowa successfully bottled up New Hampshire mid-fielder Kim Zifcak, who scored a three-goal hat trick in their season-opener against Maine.

IOWA NOTES
• Iowa heads to St. Louis next for games against San Jose State (Friday), Toledo (Saturday) and Ball State (Sunday).

only been doing it since Friday. I can't say enough about her courage, her mental toughness and her competitiveness."

Walsh was inserted at goalkeeper because Iowa's two regulars, Karen Napolitano (knee) and Andrea Wieland (mononucleosis), are sidelined for indefinite periods of time.

Despite numerous scoring chances for both squads, the match remained scoreless until sophomore Erica Richards blasted home a rebound shot with 20 minutes left to play. New Hampshire goalkeeper Michele Slannell kicked out a shot by Melissa Sanders, but couldn't stop Richards' fourth goal of the season before a pileup just in front of the goal.

NEW HAMPSHIRE, which dominated the play much of the second half, had an apparent score called back with seven

Lendl wins third Open crown

Navratilova sweeps; takes singles, doubles, mixed doubles

By Martin Lader
United Press International

NEW YORK — Ivan Lendl went a marathon distance to outlast Mats Wilander in four sets Monday, using a service break in the final game to win the U.S. Open championship for the third consecutive year.

Women's champion Martina Navratilova shared honors with Lendl when she completed the first triple of her career at a Grand Slam championship by winning the women's doubles with Pam Shriver and the mixed doubles with Emilio Sanchez.

Navratilova's performance was the first sweep of the singles and two doubles at the Open since Australian Margaret Court in 1970, and the first by anyone at a Grand Slam event since Billie Jean King did it at Wimbledon in 1973.

IN A MATCH featuring many long baseline rallies, Lendl required 4 hours and 47 minutes and a pair of tie-breakers to subdue Wilander, 6-7 (7-9), 6-0, 7-6 (7-4), 6-4. Lendl also beat Wilander in four sets in the French Open final.

No official records are kept, but this is believed to be the longest title match at the U.S. championship during the Open era.

The only service break of the deciding set came in the 10th game, minutes after the sun had set behind the stadium, and Lendl converted his second match point with a backhand pass off service return on which Wilander never made a move.

Wilander, the third-seeded player from Sweden, had set up the first match point with only his fourth double fault of the day, but Lendl wasted this when he was wide on a service return.

THIS WAS THE first time Lendl was extended to four sets in his three championship successes, and Top-seeded Ivan Lendl raises his racket in victory after winning his third U.S. Open title by beating Sweden's Mats Wilander.

he dropped his first set in U.S. Open competition after winning 25 in a row.

Wilander, completely out of touch in the second set when he managed a mere five points, reached double set point in the 12th game of the third set before succumbing to a powerful series of serves from Lendl to force a tie-breaker.

In each of the last three years, Lendl has conceded a single set, and he now has won his last 21 matches at the Open since losing to John McEnroe in the 1984 final.

MCENROE WAS THE last man to win the title three years in a row, reigning from 1979-81.

"I really can't believe I've won this match," Lendl said. "I was out of juice pretty much from the first set. I was just hanging in there."

The combatants duelled for an hour and 29 minutes before Wilander took the opening set tie-break on a forehand by Lendl that was barely wide. Lendl had a set point at 7-6 in the tie-break and thought he won the set, but a forehand from Wilander fell just inside the baseline.

As intense as the opening set was, Lendl breezed through the second almost unopposed in 28 minutes. Wilander managed a mere five points, one of them coming off Lendl's serve.

LENDL CONTINUED HIS momentum into the third set by breaking in the opening game, running his string to seven games. Wilander, though, converted his fourth break point in the next game.

There were four more service breaks before Wilander achieved double set point in the 12th game. Lendl saved them with a backhand pass and ace, and followed with a pair of service winners to bring about the second tie-break.

Lendl jumped off to a 4-0 lead, and although Wilander closed the margin to 5-4, Lendl ended the one-hour and 40-minute match with his 11th ace of the match.

Wilander had break points in the first and third games of the fourth set, but was unable to take advantage, and he never got to deuce again on Lendl's serve.

"I PLAYED THE way I wanted to play," Wilander said. "I can't attack any more than I did today. I just have to do it better."

Lendl, with his $250,000 top prize, became the first man to reach $11 million in earnings with a total of $11,114,700.
