

Attack kills 3, nabs 26 Iranians

By John M. Broder and Michael Ross
Los Angeles Times

WASHINGTON — The U.S. helicopter attack on an Iranian mine-laying vessel in the Persian Gulf Monday left three crewmen dead and two missing, and 10 mines were captured by Navy commandos who boarded the ship, the Pentagon said Tuesday.

Iran, warning that it will make America regret its "wicked acts," demanded that the United States hand over the remainder of the ship's crew. According to the Pentagon, 26 sailors, four of them wounded, were rescued from the water and transferred to various Navy ships in the area.

Secretary of Defense Caspar Weinberger, in a television interview, said that the United States intended to return the crewmen to Iran by handing them over to the International Red Crescent Society, the Moslem equivalent of the Red Cross, in Oman.

IN A NEW INCIDENT, the U.S. frigate whose helicopters made Monday's attack fired warning shots at an Iranian hovercraft Tuesday after it ignored warnings and closed to less than a mile from the American ship, U.S. defense officials said. The hovercraft departed without further incident.

The U.S. military had the Iranian mine-laying ship, the Iran Ajr, under surveillance for some time and suspected that it was one of several Iranian craft sowing mines in the gulf, Pentagon sources said. They would not discuss the U.S. surveillance methods, but it is known that sophisticated radar planes, including Saudi Arabia-based AWACS, make frequent flights over the region. U.S. warships also carry advanced electronics and helicopters with night-vision devices.

Iran denied that the vessel was planting mines. However, Weinberger, interviewed Tuesday evening on the McNeil-Lehrer PBS news program, said that the evidence of mine-laying was "absolutely incontrovertible." It was based, he said, on extended surveillance of the Iranian ship that began hours before the attack and was confirmed by Iranian crewmen captured afterward.

"THESE THINGS certainly weren't vegetables and fruits," Weinberger said. The ship was under observation "long enough to satisfy us that they were committing hostile acts."

Pentagon spokesman Fred Hoffman, in a briefing for reporters Tuesday, said that the U.S. servicemen aboard the helicopters had no doubt that those aboard the Iran Ajr were planting mines.

"They were very sure of what they saw," Hoffman said. "This is the first time we caught them." See Gulf, Page 7A

UI asks industry for biotech money

By Lisa Legge
The Daily Iowan

UI officials Tuesday hosted industry leaders from the United States and abroad for "A Clear Case for Iowa: A Biotechnology Showcase" in an effort to entice corporate investment in biotechnology research in Iowa universities.

About 75 representatives from companies such as Dow Chemical Co., Cargill, Inc., and Phillips Petroleum Co. attended the three-day conference focusing on the research facilities of the UI and Iowa State University.

"I think that this has been the philosophy of the state, as has been the philosophy with any state: that a lot of new ideas are generated in the university," said UI College of Medicine Associate Dean for Academic Affairs Rex Montgomery, a speaker at the conference. "But because of the basic nature of interest of many of the faculty at the university, they sometimes don't think about what this research could do if it were to be developed into a commercial product."

"THIS IS WHERE we need the

est to the UI. "They certainly had the opportunity to see a representative group of faculty researchers and their laboratories," he said. "They had a chance to make some choices. I believe they found it interesting and we'll see what develops as a consequence of their visits."

The industry representatives toured research facilities at the UI and ISU and heard panel discussions and lectures by biotechnology researchers. The representatives took a dinner train, called the "Biotech Express," Monday from Des Moines to Iowa City.

UI Vice President for Educational Development and Research Duane Spriestersbach said Tuesday's tour of UI research labs attracted interest to the UI. "They certainly had the opportunity to see a representative group of faculty researchers and their laboratories," he said. "They had a chance to make some choices. I believe they found it interesting and we'll see what develops as a consequence of their visits."

TUESDAY MORNING Montgomery gave an overview of the UI's credentials as a research institute, including its generation of $100 million in research grants last fiscal year, $61 million of which was generated by the UI College of Medicine alone; the UI's human biology research facility, to be completed in 1988; the UI-sponsored Technology Innovation Center and examples of research currently being conducted by UI faculty.

"We have probably four or five colleges in the university that are involved in the broad sense of what I would call biotechnology," Montgomery said. "The disciplines are biology and its subdisciplines of human biology, engineering and — because of the need for drug delivery — the pharmaceutical department." See Biotech, Page 7A

Faculty senate voices support for job terms

By Scott Hauser
The Daily Iowan

The UI Faculty Senate reaffirmed its support of specified term appointments Tuesday and voted to inform the presidential search committee and the state Board of Regents of their position on the issue.

In debate on how the senate should respond to UI Interim President Richard Remington's rejection of the term proposal passed by the senate last spring, the senate approved a resolution stating "the Faculty Senate reaffirms its April 28, 1987 motions on renewable term appointments for administrators."

"The faculty has reaffirmed its position, I think clearly," UI Faculty Senate President Bruce Gronbeck said.

The motion passed 33-26.

The senate defeated a motion asking its officers to present the motions to the next UI president as soon as it is practicable, but approved a motion asking the senate officers to appoint a committee to study the UI's academic review policies.

REMINGTON URGED THE senate to come to a resolution quickly so a new president will not meet a "divisive" atmosphere, while Gronbeck told the senate they had the entire year to decide on their next step.

The senate has been considering, formulating and debating the issue since the spring of 1985.

Saying the senate should persist in pushing the issue because it has become a matter of faculty governance, UI Pharmacology Professor Michael Brody introduced the motion to inform the 17-member UI presidential search committee and the regents of the faculty's support of term appointments.

"The motion doesn't mean that we recommend to them adoption," Brody said. "It's only to inform them and the search committee of our continued interest in this issue."

At the April meeting the senate approved four motions requiring all UI administrators — including the president, vice presidents, deans, and departmental executive officers — be subject to specified renewable terms.

PROPOSERS OF THE motions

said they would ensure a system of accountability for UI administrators, but opponents said they would dissuade young faculty from coming to the UI.

On Sept. 3, Remington issued a letter to all UI faculty, explaining his opposition to the proposal.

Senate officers met with Remington this week to discuss areas of disagreement on the issue.

In an address to the senate, Remington reiterated his opposition, saying the proposal would hamper efforts to recruit a new president, violated the UI's system of letting individual colleges choose a review system, and is not typical of university appointments.

"I urge you — and hope you will — attempt a prompt resolution to this issue," he said, adding the "divisive" environment faculty and administrators are facing is "not one to greet a new president."

The senate debated several procedural options, introduced by Gronbeck, including taking no action, reviewing the current review process, reconsidering the four motions, sponsoring public meetings on the issue, approaching the regents and approaching the new president with the issue.

Remington said the issue could have been on the regents docket for its October meeting, but said he doesn't think there is a precedent for its decision.

The motion on academic review states, "That the Faculty Senate President appoint an ad hoc committee to recommend changes in the Operations Manual's section on 'Academic Review' (70.090)."

Union construction makes lunchroom seating a hassle

By Anne Kevlin
The Daily Iowan

With a soggy slice of pepperoni pizza in one hand and a UI student ID in the other, the famished student takes a charge slip and takes a deep breath.

The exit doors of Union Station are but a few steps away, and the coast is clear. Moving quickly, the student darts into the hallway, alert, avoiding passers-by and intently searching for an empty seat.

And one is spotted. Across the room by the TV. An empty table. The opportunity of a lifetime.

The student wastes no time. Pushing aside those in the way, the student negotiates curves and detours around tables and chairs until finally, with a gasp of relief, the student has a place to eat.

ASK ANYONE WHO tries — leaving Union Station at lunchtime these days can be hazardous.

"It's just kinda crowded, and it just kinda sucks," UI freshman Mark McCormick said.

"I wish I had a chair," he said.

Limited seating in the ground floor area of Union Station is causing more grumbling than hungry stomachs, but Union officials say the situation is temporary. Much of the Union is still in the midst of reconstruction, according to Mike Skinner, student body representative for Union renovation.

Skinner said students recognize the overcrowded condition as being temporary. "More than anything, people just understand the building's in renovation and seating will be opened up when renovation is completed," he said.

Skinner said tables and chairs on the ground floor are close together to maximize seating there until two other major eating areas reopen. Tables and chairs will then be spread out more, allowing easier access.

EATING AREAS IN the Wheel-room and the Hawkeye Room are closed for renovation but are scheduled to reopen in mid-October, according to a secretary for the Union's Building Facilities Coordinator Kevin Fetzer.

U2 changes plans, slates UI concert

By Jeff Rynott
The Daily Iowan

Instead of thousands of local U2 fans having to drive 90 miles to Cedar Falls for a U2 concert, the Irish rock group has decided to save them a trip and come to Iowa City for an Oct. 20 show at Carver-Hawkeye Arena.

Tickets for the concert will go on sale Saturday at 8 a.m. at the University Box Office, Campus Programs and Student Activities Director Kevin Taylor said Tuesday.

The venue was changed from the UNI-Dome to Carver-Hawkeye Arena. Tickets for the 7:30 p.m. performance, presented by the Student Commission on Programming and Entertainment, will cost $16.50 per ticket.

Taylor said students should not plan on "camping out" Friday night in an effort to get priority seating for the concert.

"People aren't allowed to camp out Friday night," Taylor said of the common practice among concert-goers.

The ticket distribution will involve "line cards" in an effort to shorten lines; each person in line will be given a card denoting a time to return and purchase their tickets, Taylor said.

SCOPE members and Taylor said they were surprised as anyone over the band's change in plans to come to Iowa City.

Board to vote on storage

The Johnson County Board of Supervisors will vote Thursday on whether to spend more than $35,000 to get new file storage items for the county attorney's office.

The project, discussed at the board's informal meeting on Tuesday, would allot $20,600 for bookshelves and $15,000 for a new filing system for the attorney's office as part of the $400,000 courthouse remodeling project.

Several of the supervisors questioned whether funds should be appropriated for the shelves and filing system because of the county's tight budget.

"I think it would be nice," Supervisor Betty Ockenfels said, "but people have been telling me to watch my spending of money."

But County Attorney J. Patrick White said the filing system and the bookshelves were needed. The present bookshelves are "junk," White said, and the attorney's office files are currently scattered around the existing office and in what used to be the computer room of the courthouse.

Some of them are also stored across town at the secondary roads department and still more are in the courthouse attic, White said.

Property taxes due soon

All Johnson County residents must pay property taxes for the first half of the 1987-88 fiscal year by Sept. 30 in order to avoid paying a penalty of 1 percent of the tax per month or a minimum penalty of $1, Johnson County Treasurer Cletus Redlinger said Tuesday.

Taxes on mobile homes for the second half of the 1987-88 fiscal year must be also paid by Sept. 30, with a penalty of 1 percent per month for lateness.

Taxes may be paid in person at the Johnson County Treasurer's Office in the Johnson County Administration Building, 913 S. Dubuque St., from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. Monday through Friday. Residents unsure of their taxes can call the treasurer's office at 356-6087.

USI selections approved

The UI Student Senate and the UI Collegiate Association Council approved the appointment of 13 UI students to serve on United Students of Iowa Legislative Assembly Tuesday.

The USI Legislative Assembly meets three times a year at the three regents universities to set policies for the general organization of UI.

Those appointed included the following UI students: Maureen Edwards, Gordon Fischer, Keith Fortmann, Linda Groven, Melinda Hess, Kristi Holcomb, Jeff Kriv, Laura Oberbroeckling, Lynn Raue, Pepe Rojas-Cardona, Amy Saxton, Gregg Schoultz and Alan Tribble.

CEC given $36,000 grant

The Iowa Department of Human Services has awarded $36,300 to the Iowa City School District's Community Education Center, 509 S. Dubuque St., to fund its new day care center for high-school mothers.

The day care center, which opened this month, is currently located in St. Patrick's Parish Hall on 421 S. Linn St. and cares for 11 infants.

Iowa City Council passes Scott Boulevard extension

By Joseph Levy
The Daily Iowan

An additional route from northern to southern Iowa City may result if Iowa City government officials attempt to extend Scott Boulevard next week after a resolution was passed during a seven-minute-long meeting.

The Iowa City Council passed five resolutions Tuesday morning in a special formal meeting, clearing the way for a $985,000 extension to Scott Boulevard.

If the council gives final approval to the action at its Sept. 29 meeting, Scott Boulevard, located near the eastern limit of Iowa City, would be extended to meet with Rochester Avenue, Iowa City Civil Engineer Rick Fosse said.

The effort would be the third part of a three-phase project to create a route from Interstate 80 northeast of town to Highway 6. The Scott Boulevard paving project was initially undertaken early in the 1980s.

THE PROPOSED extension would cover parts of an existing dirt drive that Iowa City Manger Stephen Atkins said is in disrepair.

Stephen Atkins

"To the best of my knowledge, they had been talking about the project for years and years," Atkins said.

The new route will open economic development possibilities for the city, he added.

"You have a major interstate highway system hooked directly with Highway 6," Atkins said, adding he believes the hook-up will make Iowa City more attractive to industrial firms seeking a location.

"They will pick up tremendous travel time opportunities," he said.

Fosse said the special council meeting was scheduled to ensure certain final approval of the project could be granted by the council at its regularly-scheduled Sept. 29 meeting.

THE PURPOSE OF the council's special meeting was to give first consideration to the resolutions, which established mutual agreements with abutting landowners of the project.

Some land was attained by the city under right-of-way laws, Atkins said.

"We're obligated to pay people market value for the land," he said.

Fosse said the meeting was scheduled so construction can begin at the earliest possible date.

"We would like to take bids for this project by Oct. 1," Fosse said, adding he thought the extension should be completed by August, 1988.

County ambulance plans VA Hospital contract bid

By Craig Sterrett
The Daily Iowan

The Johnson County Ambulance Service plans to bid for a contract this fall to make medical assistance runs for the Veterans Administration Hospital in Iowa City.

"The contract calls for advanced ambulance service," Johnson County Ambulance Director David Cole said. "If we were to receive the contract, we would be entitled to all of their advanced emergency runs."

An advanced emergency run is one requiring medical attention by a paramedic at the scene or during transport, Cole said.

Cole told the Johnson County Board of Supervisors Tuesday the VA Hospital uses the ambulance service for many runs but has never established a formal contract between them.

"We are interested in this contract because we are currently doing some business with the VA on a per call basis," Cole said. "We feel very able to provide the contract requirements."

COLE SAID ALL THE employees of Johnson County Ambulance are certified state paramedics, and 40 percent of them are nationally certified.

The proposed three-year contract, which would go into effect Nov. 1, states that the ambulance service contractor must be able to provide 24-hour coverage and be able to respond within 45 minutes of a call.

The proposal also states the contractor would be required to have more than two ambulances in service at one time, Cole said.

The contract also would require the contractor to transfer patients from their homes to the VA Hospital and to transfer patients to and from other hospitals.

Cole said getting the contract would generate money for the county.

"We really don't have any dollar figures at this time," Cole said. "We just received some information and are putting it together at this time."

"It is going to provide us for a few more calls a year which is going to provide more revenue for Johnson County," he added. "At $115 a call we would be bringing in a lot of revenue."

A juvenile was chased for three blocks Monday from the Old Capitol Mall to the 300 block of East Washington Street before Iowa City police caught him and arrested him for possession of a stolen black leather jacket, according to police reports.

The teenager was seen near an arcade in the mall when someone reported that the juvenile was wearing a stolen jacket. He left the mall and ran down Washington Street, where police caught him, according to the report.

The juvenile was taken to the Linn County Juvenile Detention Center in Cedar Rapids where he was held and later released to probation officers in Fayette County, Iowa, according to a detention center official.

Report: A Mississippi magazine salesman was held in the Johnson County Tuesday afternoon after being charged by Iowa City police for soliciting without a permit, according to jail officials.

Michael W. Ellis, 21, Greenwood, Miss., was arrested while selling magazines in the 600 block of South Dubuque Street for Summit Publishing Co. of Paris, Texas. Ellis was taken to the Johnson County Jail and posted $100 bond Tuesday afternoon, according to a jail official.

Meanwhile, a UI student living in the 10 block of East Burlington St. told Iowa City police that two "very pushy" magazine salesmen almost forced their way into her apartment

Monday afternoon while asking personal questions about her roommate, according to police reports.

The two left before police arrived. Police did not say whether Ellis was involved in the incident on East Burlington St.

Report: Parking meters were spray painted in Lot 46 of the Law Building early Monday morning, according to Campus Security reports. Damage to the meters was listed at $20.

Theft: UI freshman Anri Greenwood reported a 10-speed bicycle stolen outside of Daum residence hall, according to Campus Security. The bicycle was valued at $40.

Warning: An employee at KRUI-FM was warned by Campus Security about loud music at 1 a.m. Tuesday following a complaint by someone living in South Quad, where the radio station is located.

Courts

An Oxford, Iowa, man was charged Tuesday with obtaining a prescription drug with a false or forged prescription, according to Johnson County District Court records.

Eric Russell Wistrom allegedly presented a prescription made out with a fictitious name to Medicap Pharmacy, 423 10th Ave., Coralville, and tried to get the prescription filled, according to court records.

The drug Wistrom tried to obtain, called Dilaudid, is used most commonly as a pain killer, according to an Iowa City pharmacist.

Wistrom was released on his own recognizance, and a preliminary hearing was set for Oct. 6.

Cannon elected city school board president

By Craig Sterrett
The Daily Iowan

Taking their seats for the 1987-88 school year last night, members of the new Iowa City School Board reviewed plans for softball practice facilities, discussed setting up an athletic issues committee and asked for more teacher input on the distribution of Phase III funds. In other business, the board elected this year's officers, including Lynne Cannon as president and newly-elected board member

Betsy Hawtrey as vice president. The new board decided to solicit the advice of coaches, principals and athletic directors before approving plans for softball practice facilities at West and City High Schools.

DICK BUSS, an engineer from Hall Engineering, 218 E. Market, who presented the plans to the board, did not say how much the projects would cost.

According to the plans, the facilities at West High would be located in the same general vicinity as the present softball field, and City High's field could be located directly east of the school's tennis courts.

The school board decided to delay work mainly because the proposed site of City High's field. The field is "very tightly constrained," Buss said.

"It looked like we could skew the field to get it in there," Buss said. But he said some coaches and players may be opposed to the direction the field would face, because some players may be forced to look into the sun.

Buss said the district should begin work on the fields as soon as possible because the schools will practice on the fields this spring.

"I WOULD LIKE to start the grading within 10 days," Buss said.

The fields would be built in stages, Buss said.

"The scope of the work is to develop the fields at a practice grade level," he said, adding they could be upgraded later for game use if the UI stops letting Iowa City Schools use the UI softball complex, Buss said.

The first stage of development of the softball facilities would include excavating, grading and assuring proper drainage. Batting cages, backstops and fences would add to costs.

The board decided to nominate and appoint 18 people at its Oct. 28 meeting to serve on a committee to discuss athletic issues.

"The reason this came about was because we have had a lot of input when we talked about facilities," Cannon said.

Schools Superintendent David Cronin expressed the need for a committee in a letter to the school board. Cronin said there was an immediate need for the board to decide whether the two high schools should have separate or shared athletic facilities.

UI boasts 65,000 rare books

Collection includes Bible dating to 1455

By Rebecca Himschoot
The Daily Iowan

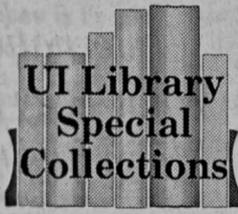

Of all the books in the UI Main Library, about 65,000 belong to a special collection of rare books, primarily used to help students and faculty with research.

"Rarity is a matter of scarcity, value — monetarily and intellectually, or both — condition, interest, particularly for academic departments and historical or literary value," UI Libraries Curator of Rare Books David Schoonover said.

The Rare Books Collection is located on the third floor of Main Library, in a temperature- and humidity-controlled room. It is one part of the UI Special Collections Department, which also contains a section of manuscripts, one of maps and one of university archives.

"Most university libraries have either a rare book room or a special collections library," Special Collections Department Chairman Bob McCown said.

"THE UI COLLECTION of rare

This is the second of four stories on the UI Library special collections.

books ranges in dates from 1455 to 1987," Schoonover said. The oldest piece in the collection is a page from the Gutenberg Bible from 1455, and the earliest printed piece is a book from 1473, Schoonover said.

A major part of the collection is books by Iowa authors, Schoonover said. He said there are about 10,000 works in the collection by "people who were either born in Iowa or who spent at least 20 years here." The Rare Books Collection has its own card catalog, but all materials are also listed in the main card catalog on the first floor of the Main Library, according to McCown.

"This is a library within a library, with the same subjects found in the same stacks," Schoonover said. He said the books are arranged by U.S. Library of Congress subjects, and the books in foreign languages in the collection are shelved according to subject, not the language in which they are written.

"THERE ARE A FEW restricted collections, but the books are generally available to anyone who wants to use them," Schoonover said. He added the books must be used inside the Rare Books Library, and that the library is reserved for use only by those using materials from the collection. The books come from various sources, Schoonover said. "Some were given as collections, some have been purchased for particular subjects and some are bought at auctions," he said.

"We buy in a number of subjects," Schoonover said. "English and American Literature, travel, fine-printing, history of printing and papermaking, and bookbinding, among others."

Schoonover said the Rare Books Collection is also interested in preserving books, and has an excellent conservation studio.

"We try to save the book, the binding, the pages and the information — that's the difference between conservation and preservation," Schoonover said.

The Rare Books Collection displays six to eight exhibitions of books from the collection each year. Currently the display features several of the books in the Iowa authors collection.

The Rare Books Library is not open during regular Main Library hours, but can be used weekdays from 9 a.m. to noon, and 1 p.m. to 5 p.m.

EAP may help workers in crisis

By Anne Kevlin
The Daily Iowan

After a recent recommendation by the state Board of Regents, personnel experts at the UI will push for starting an Employee Assistance Program here.

According to UI Associate Vice President for Finance and University Services Mary Jo Small, Employee Assistance Programs, or EAPs, are confidential services for employees with personal problems.

"It's an effort to provide referrals to employees who may be feeling any number of pressures or difficulties within their life," she said.

EAPs DEAL with a wide array of personal problems, Small said, such as substance abuse, marital problems, financial problems, depression and illness.

"People who have those problems are less able to work productively," she said.

Most EAPs work by defining the problem an employee has and then referring that employee to a local resource that is equipped to counsel or otherwise help the employee, Small said.

EAPs are advantageous for both the employer and the employee, UI Personnel Program Assistant Nancy Tomkovicz said.

"It strengthens the relationship between the institution and the employees," she said. "In addition to focusing on the human being as a professional person, the employer is looking at the human being as a human being."

Greater employee satisfaction also saves money for the employer, according to Tomkovicz.

"It certainly, in the long run, would lower costs of hiring and training a new employee," she said. "The concept is definitely to try to restore the employee to the most productive level."

SMALL SAID a task force will determine the details of an EAP at the UI. She said the UI has never had a formal EAP. An EAP at a university institution would ideally make use of local resources, including faculty and staff experts in certain areas, Small added.

Tomkovicz, who is helping in the development of a UI EAP, stressed the service is confidential and broad-based, with the capability of helping employees in a number of ways.

"It has been very successful at quite a few other academic institutions," she said.

Small said administrators plan to have a formal recommendation for an EAP sometime early next year.

DuPont addresses students

Candidate skeptical of arms treaty

By James Cahoy
The Daily Iowan

Republican presidential candidate and former Delaware Gov. Pete DuPont strongly criticized the proposed Intermediate Nuclear Forces (INF) treaty with the Soviet Union agreed upon last week by the United States and the Soviet Union before a class of about 40 UI law students Tuesday.

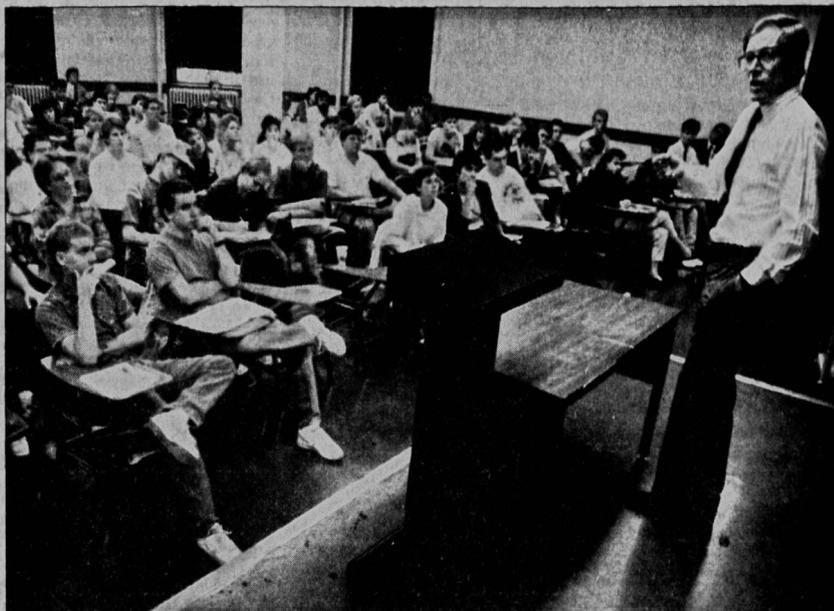

"I am very skeptical of the treaty," DuPont said. "It does not address the imbalance of our conventional forces with the Soviet forces in Europe. The verification of this treaty will not be easy, either."

Questioning whether the Soviets would follow the provisions of the treaty, DuPont cited past treaties he said the Soviets have broken.

"When I look at the treaties they have broken in the past — the Helsinki Accords, the ABM treaty, SALT II — I have to question whether such a treaty is workable," DuPont said.

DuPont also told the audience he was in favor of a system of tax credits which would allow parents to send their children to private schools rather than public.

"We have to restore some sense of competition within our educational system," DuPont said. "We are shortchanging our children if we allow our educational system to remain the way it is."

Former Delaware Gov. Pete DuPont addresses a group of UI students during his stop Tuesday in Iowa City

DuPont also visited a UI political science class Tuesday, where he lectured on the presidential nominating process.

Speaking before a crowd of about 70 students for a UI American Presidency class, DuPont defended Iowa's first-in-the-nation caucus.

"States like Iowa are small enough so you can talk to one voter at a time," DuPont said. "If we had primaries in bigger states, an unknown wouldn't have a chance of winning."

DuPont also engaged in a heated debate with several students in the class who were critical of his proposal for mandatory drug testing for all high-school students.

Several students in the class claimed DuPont's proposal would infringe on the civil rights of high school students, and a majority of the class opposed the proposal when DuPont asked for a hand count on the issue.

"The Constitution forbids unreasonable search and seizure," DuPont said in defense of the proposal. "I don't see drug-testing high-school students as unreasonable. We treat kids differently in America than we do adults, and the drug abuse among high-school students is a serious national problem."

DuPont also said drug education programs are not working, citing the fact that drug use has increased since the 1960s despite the implementation of drug education programs in several states, including his home state of Delaware.

Biden pondering his options

Senator has to reconsider campaign

By George Lobsenz
United Press International

WASHINGTON — Sen. Joseph Biden, D-Del., fearing multiple blunders may have "overwhelmed" his candidacy, said Tuesday he may be forced to divide his time between his campaign and the Bork hearings but was in the presidential race "at this point."

At the same time, another tape recording of Biden stump remarks emerged that showed he at least twice embellished his academic achievements.

Although he is chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee, the Delaware Democrat was seen only intermittently at the confirmation hearings for Supreme Court nominee Robert Bork as he met throughout the day with supporters to discuss strategies for pulling his campaign out of its nosedive.

"WE'RE MEETING WITH all the people who have been my supporters and just asking their views and assessing what all this means," he told United Press International after meeting with about a dozen members of Congress who support him.

"We banged around a lot of questions, tactical questions about what

Joseph Biden

I do in terms of going out (to campaign) or do I deal with the Bork nomination.

"You see, I had agreed, to my own mind, to do nothing in my campaign except Bork," he said. "Now, we discussed whether this means I should go out and get involved in campaigning and do other things. It's going to be hard to do."

A spokesman, Larry Raskey, said, "He may add campaigning to his schedule. He might take time on the weekends to campaign, but in no way is he going to not lead the Bork hearings."

Biden said his congressional supporters had been "very encouraging." When he was asked whether he would continue in the race, Biden said, "At this point, yes."

HOWEVER, WHEN ASKED the same question a short time later, Biden said, "I don't know. I think so. We are going to see whether I am going to get a chance to make my case or whether events have overwhelmed it."

Biden's assessment contrasted starkly with his statement last week that, "I'm in the race to stay. I'm in this race to win and here I come."

While Biden struggled to save his candidacy, another tape recording of Biden remarks surfaced and threatened to intensify the controversy that erupted this week when Biden admitted embellishing his academic record during a campaign coffee klatch in New Hampshire in April.

On a tape recording of Biden's Aug. 27 remarks at Franklin Pierce Law Center in Concord, N.H., the Delaware Democrat repeated an earlier — and unsubstantiated — claim that he attended law school class on a full academic scholarship. Biden said he was "one of three students" to receive that honor.

IN REMINISCING about his law school days, Biden says on the tape, "I was one of the three students in our law school class who was on a full academic scholarship."

Biden made a similar — but slightly different — claim at the April 7 coffee klatch in Claremont when a man asked him about his academic record. A videotape of the coffee klatch showed Biden saying he was "the only student" in his law school class to receive a full academic scholarship.

In response to questions raised about his Claremont remarks, Biden issued a statement Monday saying he received "a scholarship based in part on academics" from Syracuse University College of Law and a grant from the Delaware's Higher Education Scholarship Fund.

Biden's statement also noted the law school arranged for his first year room and board expenses by placing him as an assistant resident adviser in the undergraduate school.

Biden released academic records last week that showed he received a half scholarship.

Terrorist arrested at sea denied bond

WASHINGTON — An accused Lebanese terrorist charged in a 1985 hijacking and arrested at sea by FBI agents was denied bond Tuesday for fear he would flee the United States. Officials also revealed that both his wrists were broken while he was in U.S. custody.

Fawaz Younis, appearing under heavy security before U.S. Magistrate Jean Dwyer with both his wrists in casts almost up to his elbows, sat patiently through a lengthy hearing during which an 18-minute videotape of the end of the hijacking ordeal two years ago was played.

U.S. won't raze embassy in Moscow

WASHINGTON — The United States has decided against tearing down any of the bug-riddled new U.S. Embassy in Moscow for at least a year, Rep. Dan Mica, D-Fla., said after a meeting Tuesday with State Department and CIA officials.

Mica also said U.S. embassy officials in Moscow "will continue to remain in the old building for at least five years," keeping the Soviets from moving into their new embassy complex in Washington.

The U.S. Embassy in Moscow was found to be wired with hidden microphones and other spying devices planted by Soviet intelligence.

Soviets say Gorbachev is in good health

MOSCOW — Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev, who has not been seen publicly since Aug. 7, is still on vacation and in excellent health, a Foreign Ministry spokesman said Tuesday.

Deputy information director Boris Pyadyshyev denied rumors now circulating in Moscow that Gorbachev, 56, is recovering from an undisclosed ailment. He gave no date for the leader's return to work, saying the Kremlin does not release such information in advance. This year, for the first time, the Soviet press did not announce when the general secretary went on holiday.

Soviets may redraft criminal code

MOSCOW — A proposed redrafting of the Soviet criminal code would scrap a law frequently used to jail political dissidents and social critics, according to a member of the review commission.

Alexander Yakovlev of the Institute for State and Law said article 190-1, which bans the "systematic spreading . . . of deliberately false fabrications defaming the Soviet state and social system," is "outdated." Such well-known dissidents as Anatoly Marchenko and Andrei Amalrik were among hundreds sentenced to labor camps under that law.

Article 190-1 of the criminal code "contradicts the whole spirit of glasnost," said Yakovlev, referring to Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev's call for more openness in Soviet society.

Solidarity urges Walesa to get tough

WARSAW, Poland — Solidarity leaders, in the first open criticism of Lech Walesa, are demanding that the founder of the outlawed union spearhead a more militant action against the communist authorities.

The demand, contained in an open letter to Walesa, echoed the discontent of workers who have stepped up pressure on the banned union's leadership in recent months to fight for more democracy in the socialist country.

In the first open attack on Walesa since the union was formed in 1980, the 22 maverick leaders signed a letter Sunday criticizing Solidarity's lack of "a clearly defined program" and citing "a real danger Solidarity can lose its prestige in the eyes of the workers at home and among Western foreign labor organizations."

Liz Taylor: I would have the AIDS test

WASHINGTON — Elizabeth Taylor, movie star and one of America's most eligible singles, said Tuesday she would have herself tested for exposure to the AIDS virus before embarking on an "intimate relationship" and would insist her partner be tested, too.

Taylor, chairman of the American Foundation for AIDS Research, also told a House subcommittee "the mores of morality today simply have to change" to prevent further spread of the AIDS virus through casual sexual activity.

"Things like singles bars, massage parlors, are going to have to be a thing of the past," she said. "There have got to be ways of careful sex. We have to be more inventive, I guess, and have more fun finding them (new ways)."

Ortega declares cease-fire

By Oswaldo Bonilla
United Press International

MANAGUA, Nicaragua — President Daniel Ortega Tuesday reopened a Catholic radio station and said Sandinista troops would postpone military operations against Contra rebels in order to explore a possible cease-fire.

U.S. officials welcomed the reopening of the radio station, but said Ortega's announcement on the postponement was unclear and that all combatants must be involved in any cease-fire.

Ortega announced the measures after meeting Tuesday with Nicaraguan Cardinal Miguel Obando y Bravo, head of the National Commission of Reconciliation.

After the meeting, Information Minister Manuel Espinoza, reading from a statement, said the steps toward a cease-fire included the postponement "for a determined period of time (of military) operations" in Nicaragua.

ESPINOZA SAID the postponement would allow members of the commission to travel to areas of conflict "to inform the Nicaraguan people and the counter-revolutionary forces" about the peace plan, signed by the five Central American presidents on Aug. 7 in Guatemala.

Espinoza said the visit by the commission would allow the government "to explore the willingness of the counter-revolutionary leaders to accept the cease-fire, and if this is positive, to proceed to prolong it."

Ortega asked Obando y Bravo to begin "verifying that these first steps" toward a unilateral cease-fire are being taken by the Sandinistas.

Obando y Bravo said no date was set for a meeting with the Contra rebel leaders and that this "must be determined by the Nicaraguan government."

THE STATEMENT said military operations would be suspended in areas of the country that "will be made known by the government" and that Sandinista troops would "take up positions in certain areas of the designated zones."

But Ortega warned that "if we are attacked, all our troops will defend themselves."

The National Commission of Reconciliation monitors the compliance with the major points of the peace plan — including a cease-fire in the region's civil wars, amnesty for combatants, an end to outside aid to anti-government guerrillas, freedom of the press, democratization, amnesty and free elections.

In announcing the reopening of Radio Catolica — closed last year for refusing to broadcast a presidential message, Ortega said he informed Obando y Bravo that the radio could begin broadcasting immediately and "send out your pastoral message . . . to the Nicaraguan people."

THE REOPENING of Radio Catolica comes two days after Ortega decided to allow the opposition La Prensa newspaper to resume publication in compliance with the Central American peace agreement.

White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater greeted the reopening of the Catholic radio station by saying "openness and freedom of speech is a good move," but added, "A unilateral cease-fire is meaningless without negotiated conditions." He said there have to be arrangements "to make it stick . . . to see that it isn't disobeyed."

Earlier, a senior administration official closely involved with U.S. policy in Central America said Reagan and Costa Rican President Oscar Arias agreed that a unilateral cease-fire would be unacceptable because it would not protect the Contras.

Air Force to begin 'Star Wars' testing

From DI Wire Services

ANCHORAGE, Alaska — The Air Force plans to launch a rocket carrying an atmospheric telescope 160 miles above Alaska as part of research into a Star Wars missile defense, officials said Tuesday.

Researchers hope to learn enough about atmospheric disturbances to develop a system capable of distinguishing targets from naturally occurring clutter above Earth, said Dick Nadle, project scientist at Hanscom Air Force Base, Massachusetts.

Code-named SPIRIT — for Spatial Spectral Infrared Rocketborne Interferometric Telescope — the $20 million project is being designed at Utah State University in Logan, said Lt. Therese Martin, program manager at Hanscom.

In Washington, Vice President George Bush cast a rare tie-breaking vote Tuesday, saving the Star Wars program from an $800 million cut critics sought to make in the controversial defense system.

WITH THE SENATE deadlocked 50-50 on a move to kill the amendment, written by Sen. Bennett Johnston, D-La., Bush voted with Reagan administration allies to defeat the proposal.

The Senate's version of the 1988 defense bill set aside $4.5 billion for the Strategic Defense Initiative, and Bennett wanted to cut it back to $3.7 billion.

The telescope is scheduled for launch in October 1990 from little-known Poker Flat Research Range, between Fairbanks and the Arctic Circle, the officials told United Press International.

DEFENSE SECRETARY Caspar Weinberger launched the Star Wars system Friday by giving the go-ahead for work on space-based interceptors as the first phase of a far-reaching system to cost tens of billions of dollars.

By the time SPIRIT is launched, there will have been an undisclosed number of other launches related to the Strategic Defense Initiative, as Star Wars is known officially. But information about those launches is classified, said a Pentagon spokesman, Maj. Alan Freitag.

"The SPIRIT program is very important, very critical," Freitag said. "The SPIRIT program is unique to Alaska and the study of the aurora borealis."

The rocket will release its payload shortly after launch, sending the telescope up 160 miles to peer across and down at the disturbed atmosphere, viewing "Earthlimb auroras" occurring between 62 miles and 93 miles above the planet, Martin said.

Artists fear Bork being on Court

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Writer William Styron and artist Robert Rauschenberg told the Senate Judiciary Committee Tuesday they feared Robert Bork's view of the First Amendment was so narrow that he would not protect artistic freedom if seated on the Supreme Court.

The two men joined a parade of supporters and opponents on the seventh day of Bork's confirmation hearing and pointed to his record on free speech issues to say they were not sure the nominee has the "conviction and faith" to protect artistic and literary work.

Meanwhile, a Supreme Court spokeswoman confirmed that Justice Byron White recently remarked casually that he would not mind having Bork on the court.

Harvard Law Professor Laurence Tribe, a possible Supreme Court nominee himself, testified that Bork "will remain hostile to individual rights, despite the nominee's assurances that his views have 'evolved.'"

"It is crucial to remember that Judge Bork is not on trial before the Senate; at stake is not simply his future, but the Constitution's future," said Tribe.

Styron, best known for Sophie's Choice, said in a statement that Bork's views have long "placed literature outside First Amendment protection or . . . failed to recognize the necessity for such protection."

Give peace a chance

Iowa Senator Charles Grassley says he may cast his first vote against aid to the Contras when the Reagan administration's new $270 million request reaches the Senate floor. As the impetus for reconsidering his position, Grassley credits changing circumstances in Central America.

The fact that a regional peace plan is currently being implemented seems to have made the difference. In a recent form letter to constituents, Grassley explains that now "there is more of a possibility of a peaceful settlement than ever before and hence less need for aid in the future."

Grassley's letter does go to some lengths to justify his voting record on Contra aid. The senator details the human rights violations of the Nicaraguan government, including press censorship and harassment of the opposition, and dismisses charges of Contra crimes. The letter even suggests that rebel atrocities were committed by Sandinistas in disguise.

In spite of this equivocation, Grassley should be commended for realizing that continuing to finance the war won't do anything to improve the human rights record on either side. And the senator seems to understand that giving the Contras more military aid at this time may not do much to promote peace.

Unfortunately, the Reagan administration continues to find these insights beyond comprehension. The president's recent speech to the U.N. General Assembly did not acknowledge any of Nicaragua's positive moves, like allowing La Prensa to resume publication. Instead, the administration seems bent on telling the Sandinistas that they really should be preparing for war, not peace.

Grassley concludes his letter by saying he is still undecided on the issue of more military aid for the Contras and he invites Iowans to send their opinions. Let the senator know that Iowa wants to give peace a chance. Send your thoughts to Sen. Grassley at 135 Hart Senate Office Bldg., Washington, D.C. 20510.

Wrong answer

In reiterating a position which can only be considered ludicrous by anyone enjoying and defending the guaranteed right to privacy, presidential candidate Pete Du Pont has continued to defend his controversial proposal which advocates randomly testing high schoolers for drug use. Under his proposal, teenagers testing positive for drug use would lose their driving privileges for two years.

Du Pont, seeking the Republican presidential nomination, has continually expressed his view that the way to stop drug use is to go after the users as opposed to the suppliers. This statement makes little sense and would certainly not work in the very unlikely event that his ideas were ever implemented.

In a country such as ours where individual freedoms are rightfully considered the guaranteed and established norm, random drug testing would only serve to undermine the very precepts of our constitution. Testing such as this should never be condoned in a nation which prides itself on the fact that our behavior is not up for public inspection and judgement unless that behavior infringes on the rights and well-being of others.

Granted, there is drug use and abuse among this nation's teenage population as well the general adult sector of our society. But this problem is hyped out of proportion and will simply not be solved in a any fashion resembling Du Pont's line of reasoning. To imply that this country has the resources or the shortsightedness to try to stop drug use at the grass roots level is preposterous.

In subjecting students to random drug testing at the high school level, this nation would instill distorted and totally contradictory messages in the minds of America's future leaders. Unless a student is obviously demonstrating that he or she has a substance abuse problem, that student should not be insulted and berated by being required to submit to a useless, arbitrary invasion of their privacy.

No end in sight

Seven years ago Tuesday Iraq invaded Iran, unsuspectingly inaugurating what would become one of this century's longest wars. President Saddam Hussein had it in mind to grab a piece of his neighbor's territory on the cheap while Iran was preoccupied with its Islamic revolution. His miscalculation has cost Iraq a generation of progress. . . . The survival of Iran's leaders despite enormous battle casualties and growing domestic deprivations appears, conversely, to reflect genuine popular support for their insistence on continuing the war. It is for these reasons that the fighting could go on for years to come.

Another recent round of international political efforts to end the war seems predictably headed for failure. The U.N. Security Council, though it has talked of cutting off weapons to the belligerents, shows no stomach for trying to enforce an arms embargo. The Soviet Union, for one, now argues that more consultations are needed before any action is taken — a sure prescription for inactivity. . . .

The most significant recent development in the long war has come with the more or less uncoordinated emergence of an international naval presence in the Persian Gulf. The purpose is to protect freedom of shipping. The risks of confrontation inherent in this effort were demonstrated Monday, when a U.S. helicopter fired on an Iranian vessel allegedly seen laying mines. . . . The willingness of Iranians to continue sacrificing tens of thousands of their young men in fruitless battles is surely one of the more remarkable facets of this war. Without doubt, it is also the most appalling.

Curriculum change needed

In the spring of 1987, the UI Liberal Arts Student Association published an exploration about the question, "Why are many students at the University of Iowa not graduating in four years?" The article raised many questions and possible solutions to the UI's curriculum problem. Whatever good this debate on the four-course curriculum has done, the fact remains that the problem simply has not gone away nor will it without more serious inquiry and action.

Most faculty members and administrators would agree that students who wish to complete their education in four years should be able to do so. More than being just the accepted norm, a four year education is all that is allowed for by many scholarships. Yet statistics compiled by the Office of the Registrar show that only 40 percent of UI students are able to complete an undergraduate degree in four years.

THERE ARE A HOST of reasons for this delay. The demands of a full- or part-time job, a change in major or a decision to set aside time for extracurricular activities are all reasons why many students do not graduate in four years.

 and Melissa Zymboly

However, even a student with no such restraints is oftentimes unable to obtain a four year degree by the UI's current curriculum structure. The disproportionate number of three semester hour courses over four semester hour courses, in particular, works to make the average semester's course load a burden of five or more classes.

The solution LASA advocates is a four-course curriculum. Under this system, a course load of four classes per semester would allow students to graduate in four years. There are many benefits to this proposal, but the essential motivation is that it allows a student more time to concentrate in each subject area. The extra fifth or sixth course that a student is forced to take under the UI's current curriculum often becomes a "blow-off course." Students select an "easy" course in which they never intend to spend much time, just so that they can adequately cover their other classes while still acquiring enough credit hours each semester.

THIS STRUCTURE HELPS create a mediocre education. It is unfair to the professors and the other students in the chosen "blow-off course." But more importantly, it is contradictory to the very nature of higher education. The fewer subjects a student studies, the more of the subject matter the student can comprehend and retain.

The problem of students not graduating is oftentimes exacerbated by financial needs as students are not able to carry a full course load and work at the same time. However, the student who is a full-time student should be able to graduate in four years. The problem is one of structure in this case, not financial resources. This is where a four-course curriculum can provide an answer.

MANY STUDENTS ARE already aware of this problem, but they must voice their needs and concerns to faculty and administration. The UI administration is very receptive to changes which will benefit students' overall education. However, the administration feels it is the responsibility of the students and faculty to examine the issue and proposes changes.

The four-course system is one pursued by the most academically prestigious schools in the nation. The UI should not realistically expect to become Harvard, but the system does work for large public institutions like Northwestern University and University of Michigan.

Students must become aware of the problem and they must voice their concerns and needs to faculty and administration. If changes are to be made the words "four-course curriculum" must creep into every department and office, be on every student's mind and on the tip of every administrator's tongue. The approaches to achieving a four-course curriculum remain yet untouched. What is more important for the moment is that the issue itself be approached.

This column is the first in a two-part series. UI juniors Randy Ries and Melissa Zymboly are members of LASA.

Eight steps to the presidency

I recently received a copy of a magazine called Campaigns and Elections, published as near as I can tell by a non-partisan group in Washington, D.C. One of the feature articles in the September/October edition is called "Lessons for Candidates and Consultants Campaigning in a Multicandidate Field." It lists a series of things which those running for office in a crowded primary field should do in order to be successful, according to a survey of "Political Professionals" who manage campaigns. The titles of the categories are theirs; the descriptions are of what I think they're talking about.

1. "Define the race for the voters." The idea is for a candidate to separate him/herself from the others in the race. Dick Gephardt did this early on with a strong stand on trade; on the Republican side, Pete Du Pont was the first to call for an end to farm subsidies. Some pros think that the candidate who sets the tone, "defining the race" first, has the best chance of winning.

2. "Trust hard facts, not established truisms." Campaign strategists suggest questioning "conventional wisdom" if the candidate has some facts to prove that the "wisdom" is no longer valid. Again, this is important so as to separate candidate A from B and C.

3. "Don't rest on your laurels." I would also call this the "What have you done for me lately?" category. This is especially true in the case of one-time office-holders who retire and then decide to run again a few years later. For example, Bob Ray coming out of retirement in 1990 would be fine, except that he last won an election in 1978, and that 12-year absence cannot be ignored even with his record of landslide victories in the past.

4. "Don't hesitate to counter a serious attack." I presume this has to do with the "agenda setting" factor named in point one. If an opponent comes out with an accusation, wild or not, the candidate who confronts it squarely and honestly will net more respect from the voters than the candidate who dodges questions on the topic or covers it up. This also shows a "fighting spirit" which, it seems, many voters like.

5. "Emphasize a fresh image." Certainly this is the key for a challenger's efforts to unseat an incumbent. It also works in a crowded field with little differences between the candidates. It also can work to show a "new" image for an old face: witness Nixon in 1968 (vs. 1960) and Dole in 1988 (vs. his vice presidential nominee act in 1976).

6. "Shoot for a Plurality, not a consensus." As the saying goes, "You can't please everyone," and in politics it can be suicide trying. The suggestion is to tie up enough groups to win, but this is dangerous. No "group" votes 100 percent on an issue, and counting on this with too little margin of error can be fatal.

7. "Don't play the heavy." Coming out swinging hard is fine, but coming out with too much negativity turns people off. And in a related vein:

8. "Don't ask people to vote against someone else until you've given them a reason to vote for you." If a candidate establishes a base of positive points for him/herself, it's easier to point to another candidate's negatives later on.

It's interesting to look at this list and see how many of the items have already been used by many of the candidates, and will continue to be used by many more. I'm becoming a firm believer that every statement is made for a reason . . . and it's not to hurt the person making it.

Letters

Misleading term

To the Editor:

I am writing this letter to clarify a misunderstanding that seems to be had by a large number of people, including those within The Daily Iowan.

An article recently published entitled "Drinking law fails to deter students" (The Daily Iowan, Sept. 4) contained a legally incorrect and offensive colloquialism.

In a number of instances the article referred to persons under the legal drinking age as "minors." Under the new law that the state of Iowa was forced to implement at the treat of federal highway fund withholdings, the drinking age is 21. The drinking age, however, has absolutely nothing to do with the age of majority. The age of majority, that is, the age at which one becomes an adult, is 18.

Iowa law concerning this matter is quite clear. Iowa Code Volume III, Chapter 599, Sect. 599.1 states "The period of minority extends to the drinking age of 18 years . . ."

The drinking age be as it may, persons aged 18 years and over, are not minors. They are adults. The use of this misunderstood colloquialism is condescending, prejudicial and offensive. . . .

ment." Montgomery said the UI faculty often consults ISU faculty and vice versa on research questions, which makes the state an attractive investment. He said collaboration between different departments is also a strong point of the UI.

"I DON'T THINK it's possible to do research in the modern world if you stay within one discipline such as biochemistry or microbiology," Montgomery said. "Very soon you find yourself moving out to discuss problems with other people within the university."

Iowa City Area Development Group President Ron Muston said the state's efforts have received a good reception from the industry representatives.

"They had a very positive response to the state," Muston said. "Interest varied along a broad continuum of biotechnology, both at the University of Iowa and at Iowa State. They now know more about the quality of our state.

"A number of things that were demonstrated at the UI and also at ISU have already triggered some interest with a number of people," he added. "I would not be surprised to see some of them coming back to us now."

"We had originally put in for a U2 date last April," he said. "But for some reason they decided to change their mind and come here."

Taylor said he had no details on why U2 and its promotion company chose to make the move, but added SCOPE members had been trying to bring them to Iowa City since the band began playing in the United States.

Taylor ruled out any effort by SCOPE members to try and "steal" the show from the UNI-Dome, adding "in fact, I asked them not to tell me why."

UNI-Dome officials were unavailable for comment Tuesday. SCOPE Director Chris Werner was also unavailable.

The concert is expected to sell out quickly.

Currently at the peak of its popularity, U2 is touring in support of its latest album, The Joshua Tree, which has already launched two hit singles in "With Or Without You" and "Still Haven't Found What I'm Looking For."

The album itself has been at the top of pop album charts since its release; tickets for the current tour have been some of the most sought-after tickets of the 1987 concert season.

led-handed."

Reporters in a Pentagon press pool in the gulf who were allowed aboard the crippled Iranian vessel said that there were three large gashes in the hull and deck and that it was pocked by machine-gun fire and stained with blood. They quoted sources as saying that it appeared that the crew had destroyed documents before abandoning the ship.

Rear Adm. Harold Bernsen, the commander of the Navy's Middle East Force, told reporters aboard his command ship, the La Salle, that the attack occurred in two stages.

THE FIRST ATTACK, he said, was "insufficient to deter the continuation of mining," and the helicopters moved in again, this time disabling the craft and leaving it burning.

Of the four wounded Iranians, three are being treated aboard the amphibious assault ship Guadalcanal and one is on the La Salle, defense officials said.

The remaining 22 detainees — the Pentagon says that they are not "prisoners" because the United States is not at war with Iran — were being held aboard the La Salle.

The Pentagon identified the Iran-

Ajr as a 750-ton, 213-foot amphibious landing craft, built in Holland in 1984.

Military sources said that the helicopters involved were probably Hughes Aircraft 500MDs or 500MGs — lightweight, quiet, high-speed attack copters used by the Army's Special Operations Forces. They carry the weapons used in the Iran Ajr attack — 7.62-millimeter machine guns and 2.75-inch rockets — as well as a modern night-vision scope known as FLIR, or forward-looking infrared imaging system.

Iranian President Khamenei threatens retaliation on U.S.

By Norman Kempster
Los Angeles Times

UNITED NATIONS — Iranian President Ali Khamenei, in a long and vitriolic speech to the U.N. General Assembly, threatened Tuesday to retaliate for the U.S. attack on what he said was an unarmed Iranian freighter in the Persian Gulf by striking at U.S. interests anywhere in the world.

"This is a beginning for a series of events, the bitter consequences of which shall not be restricted to the Persian Gulf, and the United States as the instigator of the trouble shall bear responsibility for all ensuing events," Khamenei said. "I declare here very unequivocally that the United States shall receive a proper response for this abominable act."

In his hour-and-15-minute speech, Khamenei left no doubt that Iran rejected the U.N. Security Council's resolution ordering a cease-fire in the 7-year-old Persian Gulf war.

AFTER THE IRANIAN'S speech, Secretary of State George Shultz said the United States would "proceed with consultations" to drum up support on the Security Council for an arms embargo against Iran as the "intransigent party" in the war.

There was no indication, however, of when the United States would put an arms embargo before the 15-member council. Although Shultz said he was optimistic that the measure would pass, Security Council sources said the outcome was far from certain.

Iraq has announced that it will abide by the cease-fire if Iran will, and so the United States considers Iraq to be in compliance with the resolution.

KHAMENEI, AN IMPOSING figure with a bushy salt-and-pepper

beard and wearing a black turban over his hair, said Iran would never agree to a cease-fire because a truce would only allow Iraq to rebuild its military might and renew the war.

"The only guarantee for the future is the punishment of the aggressor," he said. He declared punishing Iraq to be Iran's highest priority.

Khamenei described as "a pack of lies" the U.S. explanation that American helicopters attacked an Iranian ship that it found laying mines in international waters. Although the United States displayed photographs showing mines on the deck of the ship, Khamenei insisted that it was a commercial ship.

"Yesterday, U.S. battleships attacked Iran Ajr, an Iranian merchant ship," he said. "They murdered four and wounded three people. The ship has been seized, and the crew detained."

Campus search committee continues hunt for president

By Scott Hauser
The Daily Iowan

The search for a new UI president is still in the screening phase, but the UI campus search committee is still planning to submit a handful of names to the state Board of Regents by the end of the semester, a member of the committee said Tuesday.

In a brief report to the UI Faculty Senate, UI Professor of Internal Medicine Donald Heistad said the committee plans to begin interviewing candidates within the next few months.

He said the committee has not interviewed any candidates yet.

The list of candidates has decreased slightly, Heistad said, but is still large.

Earlier this semester, UI Communication Studies Professor Sam Becker, chairman of the 17-member on-campus committee said more than 200 people have expressed interest in the position.

THE REGENTS HIRED the Chicago firm of Heidrick and Struggles to assist the committee in locating and identifying possible candidates.

Heistad said most of the nominated candidates were nominated by faculty members and urged the senate to continue nominating people for the UI's chief administrative position.

The regents approved the on-campus search committee at its May meeting after former UI President James O. Freedman announced in April he would step down to become president of Dartmouth College in Hanover, N.H.

The committee is expected to narrow the list of candidates to about six by the end of the semester.

The regents will interview the finalists and make the selection of the new UI president.

Upshaw, Donlan plan negotiations

By Will Dunham
United Press International

WASHINGTON — Union leader Gene Upshaw met privately with league negotiator Jack Donlan Tuesday, setting the stage for "intensive" contract talks, while players marked the first day of the NFL strike by picketing across the country.

The two chief negotiators, in a meeting arranged by an unnamed management official "with some clout among owners," met for 90 minutes in New York. The NFL Players Association late Tuesday announced the two sides had agreed to return to the bargaining table today in Philadelphia, a city chosen as a "neutral site" between the league's New York offices and the union's Washington offices.

THE SECRET NEW York meeting marked the first contact between the two chief negotiators since Friday. The meeting followed Upshaw's session with an NFL official referred to in the union statement as a "mystery person."

"It set the stage for the meeting of the principals," union spokesman Frank Woschitz said. "We're going to bring in as many executive committee members as we can for this intensive bargaining."

Dick Berthelsen, general counsel of the NFLPA, said the individual was not Commissioner Pete Rozelle.

The resumption of contract talks will take place at the Four Seasons Hotel in Philadelphia. Woschitz said the two sides had reserved rooms for several days in anticipation of prolonged bargaining.

EARLIER TUESDAY, the union also filed charges of unfair labor practice with the National Labor Relations Board, protesting $1,000 bonus payments to dissident players and guarantees of 1988 roster spots. The charges singled out the New England Patriots for trading Brian Holloway as retaliation for union activities.

The Management Council last week filed an unfair labor practice charge against the union for failure to negotiate.

Berthelsen said the meeting with the unidentified official was substantive.

"I don't think it's a matter of procedure being discussed. I think it's a matter of issues being discussed," he said.

"We need somebody with some clout among the owners' group that will make them see that the hard-line stance that (Dallas Cowboys President Tex) Schramm and others want to take is going to be destructive and won't bring a settlement."

UPSHAW WAS NOT available for comment but said Monday night Donlan was restrained during bargaining by the Management Council's six-member executive committee, led by Tampa Bay owner Hugh Culverhouse.

"Obviously, Donlan does not have authority because if he did, we would have had a deal months ago," Upshaw said. "His hands are tied by a committee of strong owners that are out to bust the union and not negotiate with us."

The strike started late Monday

Fan feeling mixed about football rift

By Tom Dickerson
The Daily Iowan

The issue surrounding the strike between the NFL owners and Players' Association concerns a third party — the fans.

For the second time this decade, National Football League Players went on strike following Monday night's game between the New England Patriots and the New York Jets at East Rutherford, N.J.

The fans came back more supportive than ever following the 1982 strike but may not be as supportive this year.

"I'm not watching the Monday Night game," former Iowa student Ted Nordquist said in a telephone interview during the Patriots-Jets game. "I'm on strike."

Nordquist, now living in Denver, home of the American Football Conference champions, said all the Denver fans he's talked to are opposed to the strike.

"ALL THE BRONCO fans are against it," he said. "There are a couple fans trying to start up their own strikes once the players get back. They have phone numbers in the paper if anyone is interested."

Asked if he favored the owners' or players' side in the issue, Nordquist said, "The owners' side. They seem more realistic and the players are overpaid to start with."

Iowa senior Molly Cashman feels money shouldn't be the important topic in the strike.

"I think the players deserve a lot because of their profession," Cashman said. "They risk a serious

Former Hawks will cross picket lines

By Marc Bona
The Daily Iowan

Several former Iowa football players have signed contracts with NFL teams to cross picket lines during the players strike, according to Jim Foster, an Iowa graduate who founded the Arena Football League.

Foster has special interest in the strike because many of the players who competed in Arenaball are currently being signed by NFL teams.

"Our official position is we really don't have a position," Foster said from his suburban Chicago office Tuesday night. "We have a good relation with the NFL. We're taking a neutral position at this point. Obviously, it was up to them to contact the players (from Arenaball) individually." Foster said all contracts of Arenaball players ran through the middle of August.

"WHAT WE'RE hearing from the NFL is the fact that they played both ways and are in good shape puts them in a prime situation.

Guys like Mike Stoops are being signed to play with teams — he went to the Chicago Bears."

In addition to Stoops, Foster said former Iowa running back Eddie Phillips (Chicago) and defensive back Nate Creer (Minnesota Vikings) have been signed to play football without the walkout players.

Former Hawkeye Jon Roehlk has been contacted by Detroit, Chicago and Minnesota, Foster said.

Former Minnesota quarterback Mike Hohensee has also signed with the Bears, according to Foster.

"A LOT OF OUR players are being signed into the league, and that's good for them. As far as the strike goes, I think it's unfortunate. It would be nice for the two parties to sit down and work it out.

"I think you're going to see a smaller athlete out there," Foster said. Foster, who said he's "not favoring either side" in the strike, said he sees "pros and cons" for both owners and players.

Stoops, who earned letters at Iowa in 1981, '83 and '84, played for the Pittsburgh Gladiators in the four-team Arenaball league. He earned the "Ironman" of the week award twice, named because players compete on offense and defense.

Phillips is third on the Iowa all-time rushing leaders' list, racking up 2,177 yards from 1980 to 1983.

Fry looks for improvement against 'Cats

By Tom Dickerson
The Daily Iowan

Iowa Coach Hayden Fry finally got a chance to relax a little following the Hawkeyes' easy 48-9 victory over rival Iowa State Saturday, and he demonstrated that mood at his weekly press conference Tuesday by talking about everything from injuries to the NFL strike.

"This is a different week from a coaching standpoint," Fry said. "Last week was a challenge taking on Iowa State and a new coaching staff."

This week the emphasis will be on the "necessity to keep improving," according to Fry, as the Hawkeyes return home for the first time in five games dating back to last year. The Kansas State Wildcats are next for the 2-1 Hawkeyes.

About returning home, Fry joked, "We're 4-1 (in the those five road games) and lost the other game by a point, so maybe we should stay on the road."

"AT THIS POINT, we have a pretty good football team," Fry said. "But we still have plenty to work on."

Some of the Hawkeyes were banged up in the Iowa State game, most notably senior running back and last year's team most valuable player Rick Bayless, who hurt his knee when he tried to make a cut on the artificial turf.

"Rick will definitely be out — I don't know how many games — to give his knee a chance to heal," Fry said. He added that Bayless is in the same situation that last year's quarterback, Mark Vlasic, was in last season. The injured Bayless, like Vlasic at the time, was a fifth-year senior. Fry said Bayless may be back by the middle of the Big Ten season.

That raises Tony Stewart to the No. 2 running back position on the depth chart behind Kevin Harmon. Fry noted that Harmon is battered and bruised but will be ready to go Saturday.

FRY SAID the running back position was "established" with

Harmon speaks to Iowa media

By Marc Bona
The Daily Iowan

Iowa running back Kevin Harmon, who Saturday had the best game of his career against Iowa State, broke a self-imposed period of silence toward the media after Iowa football Coach Hayden Fry's press conference at the Iowa Football Complex Tuesday.

"I just don't want nobody to read anything into it," Harmon said of the silence he declared the week before Iowa's season opener Aug. 30. "I don't want people to think I have something (against) the media. I don't. I think it's a no-win situation."

"For me, it's too many distractions," Harmon said when asked why he made the original decision to shun the press. "I don't want to be distracted this year."

Harmon said the change-of-heart interview is the "first of many" to come.

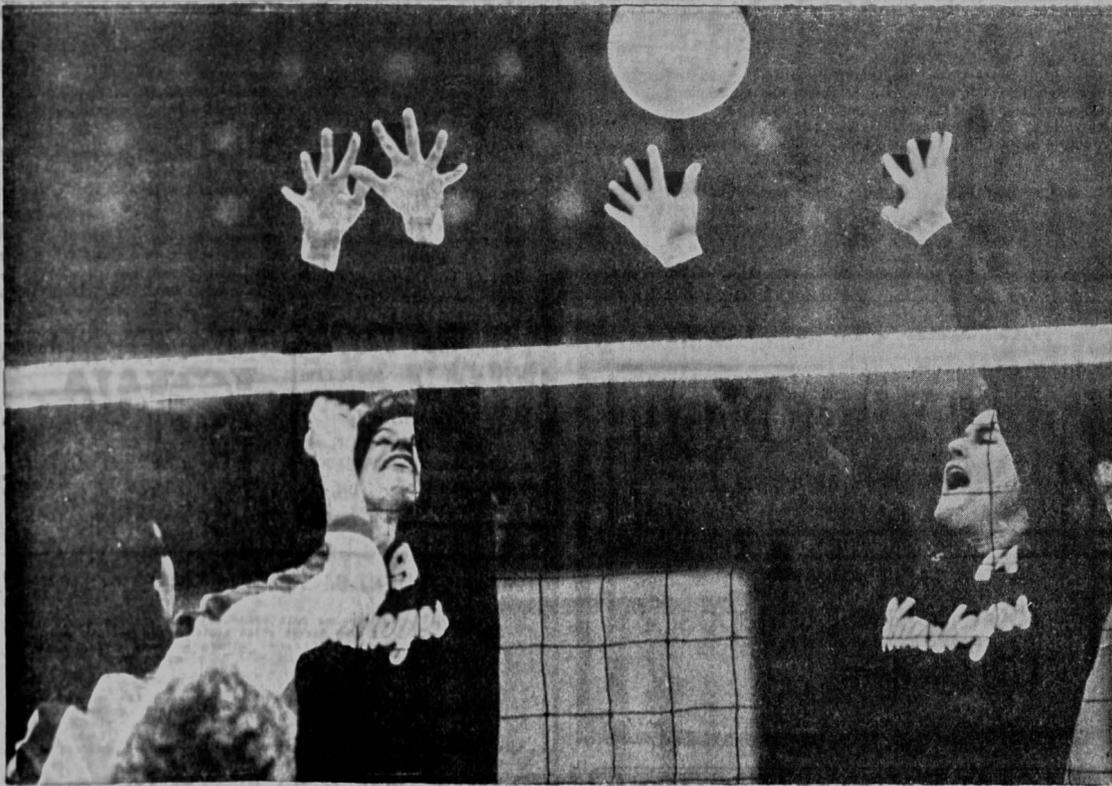

HARMON PRAISED THE work of the offensive line in the Iowa State game and said while he was pleased with his performance he hasn't reached the peak of his game yet.

"They opened the holes for me," Harmon said. "I just ran through them ... big holes — anybody could have run through them."

"I've got a lot of improvement to do. Hopefully I can improve each week and get better by working harder, not taking anything for granted and trying my best on every play."

Harmon said he had hoped and anticipated a game like Saturday's when he scored three touchdowns while running for 182

It took the Iowa Hawkeyes five games to defeat the Western Illinois Westerwinds 15-8, 13-15, 15-4, 11-15, 15-11, Tuesday night at Carver-Hawkeye Arena.

"Everyone pulled together in the final game," said Iowa volleyball Coach Sandy Stewart. "Ellen's (Mullarkey) spark of energy came up in game five with her intensified block."

Stewart said the match should not have gone to five games.

"We should have taken them in three games, but there was miscommunication on the floor," Stewart said.

Westerwinds Coach Juli Kartel said the inexperience of the team was a cause of its downfall.

"OUR YOUTH showed up, and we lost points off our serves,"

Volleyball

Kartel, a former volleyball player with the Hawkeyes, said.

Kartel also said the cause of their loss was "inconsistency on the court and a height loss," she said.

In the beginning of the fourth game Western Illinois lead by six points, but Iowa, 5-2, closed the gap, 14-11. The winning point of the game came from a kill by the Westerwinds' Edie Renick.

"We relied on our strong running offense," said Kartel.

With the loss in the second game the Hawkeyes came out fighting the third game to lead by 11 points.

"Stacey Diehl played a great backcourt," said Stewart.

In the second game "too many changes were made causing the loss," Stewart said. "We rotated too many players. It gave everyone a chance to play, but there was confusion on the floor."

THE KEY PLAYERS in the second game for the Westerwinds were senior Sue Orstrom and sophomore Renick. Both hitters, performed excellent blocking.

Kartel also commented positively about Mullarkey's playing ability: "Ellen is a consistent, intense player. She plays a heads-up match," said Kartel.

In the first game the two teams played closely until Iowa pulled ahead with strong blocking by Mullarkey, a middle hitter.

Changes which Stewart said she intends to make for this weekend's Big Ten competition are to "maintain intensity, consistency and work on concentration."

Hockey club announces meeting

Iowa's hockey club, the Ice Hawks will hold a meeting Friday in the Union Princeton Room at 6 p.m. Those interested in playing for the club, which finished runner-up in the Midwest Collegiate Hockey Association to Palmer last season, should attend the meeting.

Big Ten honors Harmon, Davis

SCHAUMBURG, Ill. (UPI) — Iowa running back Kevin Harmon and Illinois defensive end Scott Davis were named the UPI Big Ten offensive and defensive Players of the Week.

Harmon ran for a career-high 179 yards and scored three touchdowns as the Hawkeyes defeated intra-state rival Iowa State 48-9. Harmon had 130 yards in the first half alone. He scored on runs of 11, 3 and 3 yards out.

Davis, a senior, had 10 tackles, five solo, and four sacks for 24 yards as the Illini defeated East Carolina 20-10.

Ederberg scores open round victory

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Top seed Stefan Ederberg of Sweden registered an easy opening-round victory, but No. 4 seed Scott Davis was upset by South African Gary Muller Tuesday at the $315,000 Volvo Tennis-Los Angeles tournament.

In scheduled night matches, No. 2 seed Brad Gilbert played Todd Witsken and third seed David Pate met 15-year-old Michael Chang in the tournament played on the UCLA campus.

Ederberg, runner-up the last two years, captured seven straight games in eliminating Marc Flur of Durham, N.C., 6-3, 6-2, in 69 minutes. Muller, a 22-year-old ranked 64th in the world, used a powerful serve-and-volley attack and crisp passing shots to eliminate Davis, 7-6 (7-1), 6-2.

Baseball Almanac

Today is Wednesday, Sept. 23. It is the 171st day of the season. The playoffs begin in 14 days. Five of the seven teams in the AL West are below 500. San Francisco is the only team in the NL West above 500.

Today's Matchup

Doyle Alexander, 7-0 since joining the Tigers, faces Boston's Bruce Hurst, 15-11, at Fenway Park, 7:35 p.m. EDT.

Quick Quiz

What was the starting outfield for the Minnesota Twins in 1970, the last time the Twins won the AL West? (Answer below.)

Quote of the Day

"Maybe they're going to check his bat for cork." — St. Louis Manager Whitey Herzog after Vince Coleman hit his second homer in two days.

Major Numbers Entering Tuesday

AL East: Toronto 13
AL West: Minnesota 9
NL East: St. Louis 11
NL West: San Francisco 6

Up and Down

Baltimore became the first major-league team to both hit and allow 200 home runs in a season.

Doug Drabek of the Pirates is 7-2 in his last 10 starts.

Kansas City rookie reliever John Davis did not allow a homer in 38 2-3 innings this season entering Tuesday's games.

Who's Not
Montreal's Bob Sebra is winless since July 12.
Seattle designated hitter Gary Matthews did not have a hit in 22 at-bats beginning July 29.

Back to Back
In the first 34 games in which Chuck Finley appeared this year, the Angels were 2-32.

Who's Answer

30-30's
Darryl Strawberry stole his 30th base of the season to join baseball's 30-30 club. Earlier this season teammate Howard Johnson reached the 30-homer, 30-steal plateau, making the 1987 Mets the first team to have two 30-30 players in the same season.

Noteworthy
Detroit has set a club record with 211 home runs this season.

Cleveland reliever Doug Jones struck out seven of the 10 Oakland batters he faced Monday.

Alan Trammell became the first Detroit shortstop since Billy Rogien in 1934 to drive in 100 runs.

David Green of the Cardinals hit his first homer since Aug. 17, 1985, when he was a member of the San Francisco Giants.

Boo Birds
Entering Tuesday, the Orioles were 7-46 against teams ahead of them in the AL East standings.

RIP Big's Record
Howard Johnson hit his 36th homer of the season to surpass the NL mark for switch-hitters, set by Rip Collins of the St. Louis Cardinals in 1934.

First to Last
Entering Tuesday's games, the defending AL West champion Angels had lost five straight games and were just 1/3 games ahead of the last-place White Sox in the division.

Board focuses on improving minority hiring

By Dan Mlynski
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa Board In Control of Athletics approved the spirit and intent of an athletic department affirmative action proposal Tuesday, which includes provisions intended to better focus recruiting efforts on minorities in traditionally non-minority sports.

The proposal will almost certainly be approved next month but was sent back to the board's staff committee to be reworked in accordance with substantive suggestions made by members of the board Tuesday.

The university has an affirmative action policy in place, but the board's proposal is intended to go beyond the current regulation.

Bump Elliott

INCLUDED IN THE plan are affirmative action efforts in hiring of head coaches, assistant coaches and athletic department staff in addition to the athletes.

"We want the athletic departments to make special efforts to go out and identify minority and women candidates for positions in the athletic department," Board Member Nancy Hauserman said. "We want this to be a positive effort. I think that's what is meant by affirmative action."

In its revised form the proposal will call for coaches of sports traditionally lacking in minority participation to seek out and give consideration to such athletes.

Tennis, swimming and wrestling were mentioned by board members as sports that have lacked minority representation. Football and basketball were indicated as sports not greatly affected by the proposal.

MEN'S ATHLETIC Director Bump Elliott said the department's coaches are currently making an effort to locate and recruit minority athletes and assistants.

"Our coaches are well aware of student athletes in the minority area," Elliott said. "They are certainly making a double effort to search for those people."

Much of the practical importance of the affirmative action proposal centers on the board's ability to monitor the athletic department's compliance with minority hiring regulations.

"What we really want is something in place to monitor the system," Board Chair Leo Davis said. "We would not lose a great deal by a trial effort intended to inform us of what's going on."

U.N. eyes safe Olympics

By John Gittelsohn
United Press International

PANMUNJOM, Korea — The United Nations Command will thwart any plot by North Korea to stir tensions with South Korea that could disrupt the 1988 Olympics, a U.S. military official said Tuesday.

U.S. Rear Admiral William Pendley, senior member of the United Nations Command, charged North Korea with inflating charges of truce violations in its plan to discourage participation in the Games.

"The UNC, while working extra hard to ensure that tension is not increased, remains ready to defeat any acts of aggression that you may try," Pendley told his North Korean counterpart, Maj. Gen. Li Tae Ho, in the truce village of Panmunjom, 35 miles north of Seoul.

"THAT INCLUDES acts of terrorism... or any other hostile acts," Pendley said across the meeting table that straddles the dividing line between the hostile neighbors.

"We know what you are up to, setting the stage for serious incidents you hope will undermine the 1988 Seoul Olympics," Pendley said.

The strongly worded statement from the UNC officials came as the two Koreas faced a deadlock in negotiations over sharing the 1988 Summer Games, which have been awarded to Seoul.

North Korea called today's meeting — the 439th of the Military Armistice Command — to complain of UNC violations of the truce that has kept a fragile peace on this peninsula since the end of the Korean War on July 27, 1953.

The North Koreans said South Korean ships and American spy planes had intruded on their territory in September. In a report released to the United Nations in New York last week, North Korea alleged UNC forces had committed 44,000 truce violations between July 1, 1986, and June 30, 1987.

Maryland appoints former SMU official

COLLEGE PARK, Md. (UPI) — Maryland appointed a Southern Methodist University official Tuesday to oversee the troubled athletic department's academic support unit.

Athletic Director Lew Perkins said Gerald Gurney, credited with increasing the graduation rate of SMU football players despite the Dallas school's pay-for-play scandal, will be charged with improving Maryland's academic programs for athletes.

Gurney has been SMU's assistant athletic director for academic affairs since 1984. His appointment is effective Oct. 1.

"I strongly believe that student athletes should be capable of graduating," Gurney told a news conference. "That's what I'm interested in doing."

MARYLAND'S ATHLETIC department came under harsh criticism following revelations of widespread academic shortcomings of athletes following the June 1986 death of basketball star Len Bias. The criticism spurred tougher admissions and academic performance standards for Maryland athletes.

"Dr. Gurney is recognized by his peers as a builder of programs," Perkins said. "I feel that this is one of the most important positions that we have in our academic program today."

In the new post of assistant athletic director in charge of athletes' academic programs, Gurney said he will form an academic support unit to "increase the academic endeavors of our student-athletes and to bring them more closely into the academic mission of this institution."

"I expect we will have a state of the art academic support program facility quite shortly," said Gurney.

Strike

following the game between the New England Patriots and New York Jets.

Five months of contract talks failed to produce a three-year collective bargaining agreement to replace the five-year pact that expired Aug. 31.

THE STRIKE MARKS the fifth in the past two decades. Players also struck in 1968, 1970, 1974 and 1982. The 57-day strike in 1982 was the only work stoppage to affect a regular season, wiping out seven weeks of play.

The owners vow to field teams during the strike. Teams plan to practice today with whatever players they can assemble. Games are to resume Oct. 4 although this weekend's play has not yet formally been postponed.

"I don't like to paint a strike as a positive thing, but I think the owners had to see empty locker rooms before they would be willing to compromise," Berthelsen said. "Today, they're seeing them. That's not to say we're going to be 100 percent effective."

Management Council spokesman Peter Ruocco denied the executive committee was the stumbling block in negotiations.

"That's a pretty good cross-section of the ownership in this league," he said.

The 1982 agreement came after the union bypassed Donlan and a federal mediator, dealing directly for three days with Steelers President Dan Rooney and management official Paul Martha.

Asked how long it would take to tentatively settle once serious bargaining begins, Berthelsen said, "You could talk across the table for 24 hours and reach agreement in principle and then sit down to draft it all out. Gene said it possibly could take place over a four-day period. There might not be a lot of sleep gained by all the people, but it could be done."

Fry

Harmon's performance against Iowa State and that the fullback position (David Hudson) and quarterback position (Chuck Hartlieb) have also been established — for now.

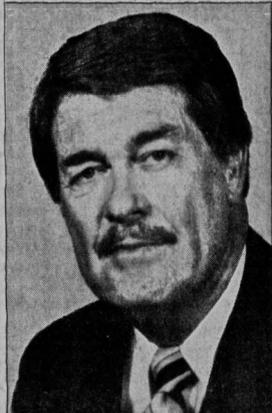

"We wanted to see if he could run 30 times in a game," Fry said about Harmon. Revised statistics from Iowa State show Harmon carried 31 times for 182 yards.

Fry said every starter on the team will remain a starter until they're beaten out in practice or can't play because of an injury. That includes the quarterback spot.

"Our starters are very flexible," Fry said.

IOWA NOTES

● Fry said that there's an "outside chance" that linebacker Brad Quast will play this week. Quast said Tuesday that he will "definitely" play against Kansas State. The first medical prognosis on

Hayden Fry

Quast's injured neck was that his football career was over. In the past week Quast has been working out without pads and his neck is getting stronger, according to Fry.

"When they first noticed my problem, they came out and said I'd never be able to play again," Quast said. "That really shocked me."

● Defensive back Anthony Wright is "50-50" for Kansas State, Fry said. Defensive back Jerome Pipkins is doubtful, but he may be ready for Michigan State. Defensive left tackle Tim Anderson may not play because of an injury.

● Quarterback Dan McGwire may miss the Kansas State game because of a bad leg and could possibly be redshirted for medical reasons.

Fry said he anticipates McGwire working hard to get his leg back in shape.

"Knowing Dan, he'll want to keep competing for that No. 1 (quarterback) position," Fry said. "The big guy could win some games for us, there's no question in my mind."

● Fry announced offensive linemen Dave Turner, George Hawthorne and Mike Miller will be redshirted.

● While discussing how Bayless got injured on the artificial turf at Iowa State, Fry said he hopes to change Kinnick Stadium's artificial turf to grass someday.

"My knees feel much better on grass just walking around," Fry said.

He added that playing on grass may eventually benefit Iowa, like on a Jan. 1 game.

"Everytime we go out West, we have to play on grass, especially the Rose Bowl," Fry commented.

● On Iowa State Coach Jim Walden's comment that Iowa's starting offensive lineman "eat eight bales of hay a day", Fry said, "It hasn't been in the dining hall... Those guys could put at least 20 bales away."

injury every time they step on the field."

Cashman is against the idea of unrestricted free agency for players with at least four years experience, something the players association have wanted for a long time.

"The quality of football would be better without free agency," she said.

IOWA SENIOR TOM McClean is bitter about another strike. "They all make plenty of money. I think it's a bunch of shit."

Asked with which side he agreed, McClean said, "I'm on my side, the fan. I refuse to be on any side."

McClean, a longtime St. Louis

Cardinal fan, said there's only one good thing about the strike: "This will be the first time the Cardinals tied for the conference lead," he said as St. Louis stands 1-1 in the NFC East. "They should go to the Super Bowl."

The last time the Cardinals made the playoffs was, ironically, during the strike-shortened 1982 season.

Other Iowa students couldn't care less about the NFL strike.

"I don't even know what it's all about," nursing major John Mortensen said. "I'm basically passive when it comes to professional sports, I like the college sports a lot more."

Harmon

yards on 31 carries.

"I was hoping for it," he said. "I was just waiting, waiting for it to come."

THE COMPARISONS between Kevin and older brother and former Hawkeye Ronnie, who is now with the Buffalo Bills, cropped up Tuesday. Harmon said he didn't mind being compared with Ronnie but said the two are different.

"I like it," he said. "He's my brother, but actually I'm my own person. I like to be judged for what I do."

With last season's most valuable player Rick Bayless out with a knee injury, the brunt of the running game will again fall on Harmon.

"I don't think it has to go my way," he said. "Everybody's capable of doing their job and doing a good job. If everybody does their job it will make it easier on everyone else."

Fry said Bayless definitely will not play against Kansas State this Saturday.

NFL fans look for alternate outlets

By Mary Lader
United Press International

Football fans took out their wrath on owners and players Tuesday and began making alternate plans for the long autumn weekends.

For the second time in five years, fans were being asked to do without their National Football League games while management and players tried to settle their labor grievances. Whichever side they took — and much of the public was critical of everyone involved — the fans were decidedly unhappy.

"I just think the whole thing is so ridiculous," Rob Davis, 52, of Rockaway Beach, N.Y., said Monday night when he attended the Jets-Patriots game at East Rutherford, N.J., the last game before the start of the strike. "They all make enough money. The big issue is free agency. Well, how much money do the players want to make anyway?"

ADDED JERRY Maniscalco, a 53-year-old court aide from Brooklyn, N.Y.: "It's so sad. I feel bad about it. I look forward to coming out all year to the ball games. Then the season is over before it begins."

Near Busch Stadium in St. Louis, where members of the Cardinals were picketing, fans expressed Buffalo fans Bill Thompson, of Hamburg, N.Y., and Frank Schultz, of Buffalo, N.Y., are on strike to protest the owners and the players.

mixed feelings. "They go through this every year, so I think most players have enough money," said Robert Palmer, 19, who was handing out mimeographed restaurant menus. "Why get greedy? They're going to be out a few games, and both of them are going to lose."

James Moore, 38, a maintenance worker in St. Louis, said: "I've got some sympathy. Everybody needs more money, including me." "Only a certain amount of people can afford to go to the games," complained Frank Schultz, 33, a Buffalo accountant, as he and Bill Thompson, 33, of Hamburg, N.Y., walked in front of Rich Stadium carrying picket signs which read: "Ticket Prices up 45 Percent Since '82 Strike. Time 4 Fan Unity."

'Angry people' form pickets in first day of NFL walkout

By Jim Luttrell
United Press International

Striking NFL players replaced practices and team meetings with picket lines "of angry people" Tuesday in the first day of their walkout.

Picket lines, which were originally scheduled to begin today, were set up in eight cities, while the remaining players were set to begin picketing by Thursday.

Non-union players were expected to start arriving for physicals and orientation on today and the union members say they will be waiting for them.

Cincinnati player representative Boomer Esiason said he hopes the "scabs" "don't think that the guys who are going out are going to take this thing lying down. I hope management hasn't induced them to think anything but that they are crossing a picket line, crossing a line of angry people, and they have to take that into account."

"(TODAY) WE'RE GOING to go out and meet the scabs," Miami's player rep William Judson said. "We anticipate the whole team coming out to picket with us, along with various other labor friends. Well over 100 people will be picketing."

While a majority of the players support the union, some believe the strike could have been averted.

"None of this should be happening," Cincinnati defensive back Robert Jackson said. "Both sides are wrong to have let it come to this. This thing is no different than the negotiations on an individual contract."

THREE OF THE top-paid players in the league, Los Angeles Raiders quarterback Marc Wilson, Indianapolis quarterback Gary Hogeboom and New York Jets defensive end Mark Gastineau, said they would cross the picket lines.

Wilson was informed by his attorney his $5 million guaranteed contract could be voided if he strikes. Hogeboom says he would lose over $1.5 million in salary, annuities and bonuses if he participated in the strike.

Rooney says union wrong

By Mike Barnes
United Press International

Pittsburgh owner Art Rooney Sr., who three decades ago helped push for a players union, says the players have gone too far and should reconsider their demand for free agency.

Rooney, 86, was one of 28 owners whose teams Tuesday were attempting to round up free agents to replace regulars who went on strike following Monday night's Jets-Patriots game. Many replacement players were set to cross picket lines today to begin taking physicals and practicing for games Oct. 4.

"I am alarmed about the future of the league," Rooney said. "Free agency is a great word. I realize it's a great word, but I don't think it's good for the NFL. And what's not good for the NFL is not good for the Players' Association."

PHILADELPHIA OWNER Norman Braman has not been around the league nearly as long as Rooney but shares the views of the longtime Steeler owner in regard to not permitting unlimited player movement.

"We have a system that works, that works for the players, works for the fans and works to make the game a lot better," Braman said. "It gives all 28 clubs the opportunity on any given Sunday to go out and beat another club."

"If we give players the right to select the teams they wish to play for, the balance we have created, and that has made football the success that it is, would be jeopardized."

"If we do get into free agency, it will lead to the demise of the National Football League and the demise of the players as well."

Jessica bares body in Playboy

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (UPI) — The November issue of Playboy magazine appeared in Charlotte Tuesday, six days ahead of schedule, and featured Jessica Hahn in the buff and revealing all about her sexual encounter with Jim Bakker.

The 28-year-old former church secretary said that doing the magazine interview and photo layout helped restore her sense of self-esteem, which she said was destroyed in the 1980 encounter with Bakker.

"To do this in Playboy — which is probably the most ironic, the most farfetched idea for a church secretary — is probably unbelievable to people," Hahn said. "But I fought a long time to start feeling good about my body again. I fought a long time to feel like a woman."

The 13-page article includes 15 photographs of Hahn, 10 of them in various states of undress and see-through clothing.

"I DON'T SEE THESE pictures as being filthy," Hahn said. "I see what they (Bakker and evangelist John Wesley Fletcher) did as being filthy. I think a woman or man should be looked at as something beautiful."

In the Playboy interview, Hahn contends she was used by Bakker, evangelist John Wesley Fletcher and, later, by the Rev. Jerry Falwell, who gained control of the ministry after Bakker admitted to the liaison with Hahn.

Carson eyes 25th anniversary as host of the 'Tonight Show'

By Russell Kishi
United Press International

LOS ANGELES — In a matter of days, Johnny Carson will be observing the 25th anniversary of his ascension to a throne — or better put, a hot seat — that would give third-degree burns to a lesser man.

It was on Oct. 1, 1962, that Carson officially inherited the host's job on the already-successful "Tonight Show" — a job that, in fact, presented an almost perverse appeal in the form of the host Carson succeeded, the intensely emotional Jack Paar.

During "Tonight's" B.C. (Before Carson) era, audiences were initially won over by the manic energy of Steve Allen and an equally manic supporting cast. When Paar took over, millions of people watched in anticipation that he might suffer a nervous breakdown on the air, the way some folks are attracted to auto races in anticipation of a collision.

Paar's heart-on-his-sleeve style lasted only three years before NBC officials decided he had to go, in favor of the relaxed-yet-acerbic style they saw in the young comic and game show host, Carson.

AND IN MANY WAYS, Oct. 1, 1962, stands out as one of the most profound, if not curious days in the collective American psyche.

It was on that date 25 years ago that a black student, James Meredith, was secretly enrolled at the University of Mississippi, an event that triggered a violent revolt by 16,000 students that saw two people killed and three more wounded.

It was on that date that baseball fans in Los Angeles began learning the hard way that history does indeed have a way of repeating itself, as the Dodgers were belted around in the opening game of what would become a disastrous three-game pennant playoff with the hated San Francisco Giants. The two teams played an eerily similar series 11 years earlier in New York.

BUT ANYONE FAMILIAR with the vagaries of show business would wager history will not repeat itself once Carson decides once and for all he's had enough of his role on "The Tonight Show," which is growing smaller each year by his own choice, even though the ratings indicate that Carson is more popular than ever.

One of Carson's closest confidantes,

David Tebet — who, as senior vice president in charge of talent, lobbied hard to acquire Carson from ABC in 1962 — said Carson's latest NBC contract calls for him to host just three nights a week, Wednesday through Friday.

"I guarantee you, there's only one person who could get a contract like that," said Tebet, who left his NBC job in the late 1970s to become executive vice president of Carson Productions, which now owns the "Tonight Show" outright.

"HE'S INDISPENSABLE, I would say. Absolutely indispensable. Do you realize how many millionaires he's made for the NBC stations? He's made them millions of dollars in station breaks alone. Do you think they would give anyone else three days a week? Absolutely not.

"In those first years alone he generated maybe 15 or 16 percent of NBC's profit. And I'm not just talking NBC network. I'm talking the entire company," Tebet said.

That Carson will be celebrating a 25th anniversary in an arena where a long stay might be 26 weeks could only be called a miracle of scripture or even a fluke of the universe. Without a doubt, it represents a sheer triumph of will.

The iconoclastic Carson is handling the milestone in his own way, without fanfare and definitely without interviews, other than a routine NBC handout that for veteran "Tonight Show" followers would be filed under "Remedial Johnny 101."

IN THE INTERVIEW, Carson reiterates the influence of radio comedians, including Jack Benny, Fred Allen and Red Skelton. He also rehashes his own notion of what makes the format work.

"The trick is knowing when to put yourself into it, and the other trick is knowing when to lay back and let the show flow," he says.

But the 25th anniversary show will see no flow of in-studio guest stars. As it now stands, a studio audience will watch Johnny reminisce with his ever-faithful announcer, Ed McMahon, and his orchestra leader of close to two decades, Doc Severinsen, between select moments starting in 1964 and continuing through 1987.

The greatest intrigue revolves around the long-lost videotape of Carson's opening night, which featured Mel Brooks, Joan Crawford and Rudy Vallee.

"WE HAVE GONE TO lengths you wouldn't believe (to find the tape)," Tebet said. "We know someone has got it. We're prepared to pay a ransom for it. I wish they would demand a ransom for it."

"We have an idea that someone at the network has a hold of the tape — someone who's still working there who's afraid that if he comes up with it, he'll be fired," Tebet said.

There's a statement to be made about the day-to-day chaos of network television when one considers that relatively few highlights of Carson's first five seasons have been preserved for posterity.

Compound the problem of finding genuine highlights among thousands of guests who simply can't find a sympathetic wavelength with their host, and one begins to understand Carson's insistence on making this anniversary a strictly no-frills operation.

"I THINK SOME OF our major problems on the show come from people whose only intent on the show is to maintain an image, rather than have a conversation with Johnny," said Fred DeCordova, who for 17 years has been Carson's virtual equal off-camera as the executive producer of "The Tonight Show."

"That can make for a rather long seven or eight minutes on the air," DeCordova added, "if, no matter what you ask them, their answers are channelled into a firmament of I must remember that what I am is what I'm supposed to be on the screen."

From a guest's point of view, perhaps the most succinct answer came from Robert Blake, who made it a point not to fall into the trap of living through his screen images.

"THERE'S A CERTAIN enjoyment in facing death, periodically," Blake once told a Playboy magazine interviewer about his fascination with being interrogated by Carson.

Tebet said Carson himself easily conquered the trepidation stage not long after gaining the throne, but chronicles of Carson's off-camera difficulties are exhaustive. Paul Corkery, a Los Angeles journalist, has just published an "unauthorized biography" of Carson that gives a warts-and-all account of Carson's three previous marriages.

in the ensuing melee.

This political incident sets all the rest of the plot in motion. Otto Struedel, the cafe owner who continually glances up at the portrait of Hitler over his desk for approval, fires Margot and demands that Tiger do something about him. Max decides to seduce and then dump Ludmilla for revenge, but she is two steps ahead of him with ambitions of her own. Meanwhile, Brazil tries to stay afloat as the European turmoil reenacts itself within her borders.

THE BLEND OF POLITICS, love story and Brazilian samba may initially seem strange to U.S. viewers, but Malandro is so deftly put together it never loses hold. Simplicity with verve is the keynote for the film's visual structure.

Especially memorable is a men's room duet between Max and Tiger reflected in dozens of very unusual mirrors, a dance-off between Max's competing girlfriends filmed from above, and a brief moment where Max absently caresses a cut-out of Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers as he walks out of a cheap movie theater.

Malandro is excellent, but is not for all tastes. It is a film for people who like their oranges tart instead of sweet, who enjoy seeing an answer turned on its head into a question.

'Malandro' pays homage to U.S.

By B. Gordon
The Daily Iowan

He's got blue eyes and thick black hair slicked back. He's a crooner and a smooth dancer, with a cocky grin and tall tale for every emergency. He wears a white linen suit and a Panama hat as he leads his boys down the alley to the local pool hall.

No, he's not Nathan Detroit from Guys and Dolls. He's Max Overseas, a.k.a. Sebastian Pinto. And the alley isn't in Brooklyn, it's in Rio de Janeiro. This is Malandro, a Brazilian movie musical that makes fascinating hay of all things mythological American.

Far from nodding to this peculiarly American art form of singing and dancing cinema, Malandro takes a deep bow to it. The deliberate artificiality of the sets and theatrical lighting, the stock characters — beautiful rogue, sweet young thing and rich doddering daddy, evil chief of police, and cabaret dancer with a heart of gold — all pay homage to American tradition.

IN FACT, ONE OF the film's main goals is to confront American culture, in all its glitzy sentimental appeal and heartlessness. Malandro's strength lies in the sophistication of its world view — something that could never be said about the movies it consciously apes.

Max, the beautiful rogue, may be nothing more than a petty scoundrel. Ludmilla, the sweet young thing, has a mind like a steel trap and her dotting father is a Nazi. The chief of police, Tiger — read "paper" as a modifier — is oddly pathetic because he's married to Margot the cabaret dancer, who is in love with Max, who is Tiger's childhood playmate. . . . There is much more here than immediately greets the eye.

The film opens on December 7, 1941 — a date every North American will recognize. Brazil has declared solidarity with Hitler despite popular sentiment favoring the Allies. Max rifles Margot's purse for a wad of bills and writes her a lipstick message on the mirror before taking to the streets for an "important meeting."

THE MEETING IS WITH a couple of U.S. sailors bearing the latest gringo invention: ball-point pens. Max is amazed and delighted, and waltzes back to the cafe where his lover is the star attraction of an uninhibited floor show.

There he stands and proposes a toast to America and freedom, striking both fear and sympathy into the hearts of his listeners. One German in the group challenges him, and the cafe is trashed

UI students interested in writing are invited to attend an informal writing session conducted by four members of the UI International Writing Program on Thursdays from 7 to 9 p.m. in EPB Room 469. Marc Bloch, from France; Dan Tsalka, from Israel; Wayne Vincent Brown, from Trinidad; and Hernan Larazavala, from Mexico, will hold the writing sessions.

dren's Theatre Company of Minneapolis is designed for ages 9 to adult. The audience is invited to meet once again the four March girls — Jo, Meg, Beth and Amy. The sisters encounter both joys and hardships in the process of growing up in 19th century New England. By the time their father returns from the Civil War, the close-knit family has gained a new maturity and strength.

Andre Previn will conduct London's Royal Philharmonic Orchestra in works by Berlioz, Debussy and Elgar at 8 p.m. Sept. 25 in Hancher Auditorium. The concert will feature the overture to the opera Beatrice and Benedict by Berlioz, Debussy's popular tone poem "La Mer" and Elgar's "Symphony No. 1 in A-flat Major, Op. 55."

Douglas Reed, renowned organist and harpsichordist, will present a free organ recital at 8 p.m. Sept. 27 in Clapp Recital Hall. Reed will open the program with Buxtehude's "Praeludium in G Minor." He will then be joined by Percussionist Michael Geary, a UI graduate student, in William Albricht's "Symphony for Organ." The second half of the program will feature "The Last Rose of Summer" by Dudley Buck, selections from Brahms' "Eleven Chorale Preludes" and Bach's "Passacaglia et Fuga cum subjectis."

Little Women will be performed in the Hancher Auditorium at 3 p.m. Sept. 27. This production of the Chil-

"Herbert Migdoli: Dance Images," an exhibition of photographs by the official photographer of the Joffrey Ballet, are on display in the lobby of Hancher Auditorium through Nov. 15. The exhibition features studio and performance photos of the Joffrey Ballet.

Earthwords, the original undergraduate creative arts magazine, is looking for fiction, poetry, line art and black-and-white photography. Submissions must be typed with name, address and phone number on a separate sheet of paper. Submission deadline is Oct. 9.

The Eve Drewelowe Gallery is holding a jewelry and sculpture exhibit. Jocelyn Chateaufort has a selection of her jewelry creations on exhibit titled "Societal Objects and Body Harmonics." J. C. Myerly is exhibiting functional steel sculptures.

Yo-Yo Ma dazzles Hancher audience

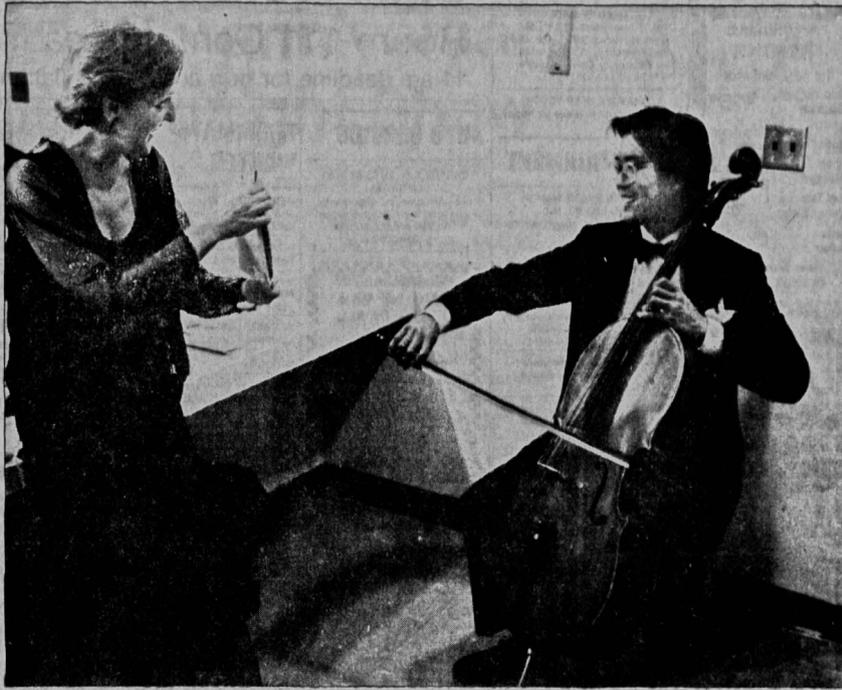

By Laura Chadima
The Daily Iowan

Highly acclaimed cellist Yo-Yo Ma dazzled a Hancher audience Monday night. Accompanied by pianist Patricia Zander, Ma excited the audience to a standing ovation as he manipulated the 1712 Stradivari cello known as the Davidoff.

The program's opening work was the "Bach Sonata No. 2 in D Major for Viola da Gamba, BWV 1028." Ma's bow strokes were as smooth as glass, and from the first liquid notes of the Adagio, to the final, resonant chord, he played with great style, full of joy and grace.

A dynamic performance of Beethoven's "Sonata No. 5 in D Major, opus 102, no. 2" followed. The Davidoff spoke in contrasting terms, sometimes fiery, sometimes rich and mellow, as Ma attacked the first movement. The beautiful, nostalgic Adagio second movement was followed by an intense dialogue between cello and piano as the Beethoven came to its finale.

THE HINDEMITH "Sonata for Solo Cello, opus 25 no. 3" took a step from tradition toward non-tonal composition. Its five very short movements demand enormous virtuosity from the cellist, but the technical difficulties were triumphantly overcome by Ma. His prowess was immediately apparent as he maneuvered through the opening movement, rich in multiple stops. A moderately fast little second movement was followed by a rhapsodic third, which Ma performed with gentle, flowing style.

Patricia Zander, pianist, points out an article in a program as Yo-Yo Ma practices in his dressing room at Hancher Auditorium Monday night. Ma dazzled a near-capacity crowd with his virtuosity.

A very light interlude preceded the final movement, which, like the first, was heavily chordal. Ma's fiery playing was well-suited to the dissonant texture, resulting in an incredibly exciting conclusion.

THE FINAL PIECE on the program was the Brahms "Sonata No. 3 in D Minor, opus 108." Written for violin by Brahms, Ma has transcribed the work for his own instrument, giving the listener new perspective. He performed the dreamlike creation with freedom and flexibility, mastering the rhythmic twists with subtlety and strength. Ma's transcription allowed him to bring a rich, dark gusto to Brahms's passionate, melodic lines.

The first three movements culminated in the final Presto agitato. As the Sonata reached its climax, Ma played the rolling melody with intensity and raw power, bringing the audience to its feet. Two short, sweet encores, including a condensed version of Faure's "Après un Rive," relaxed the mood as Ma played the crowd almost as brilliantly as he played the cello.

Aaron Copland's suite, "Appalachian Spring," written in 1944, was third in a series of ballet scores written for the Martha Graham Dance Company. Although it was originally scored for only 13 instruments, its successful premiere inspired Copland to compose this orchestral suite, which was first performed in the next year by the New York Philharmonic under the direction of Artur Rodzinsky. Copland was awarded the Pulitzer Prize for the suite in 1945.

Copland is known for incorporating American folk melodies into his works. "Appalachian Spring" borrows the Shaker melody "Tis the Gift to Be Simple," which Copland used to create the mood of the open countryside of rural Pennsylvania. Tonight's opening work will be "Overture: Benvenuto Cellini, opus 23" by Hector Berlioz. This vigorous and varied work was written in 1938 as the opening to Berlioz's third opera, a portrayal of the 16th-century sculptor and goldsmith Benvenuto Cellini. Berlioz adapted episodes from Cellini's autobiography, Vita, written in 1566.

Tonight's concert is free, beginning at 8 in Hancher Auditorium.

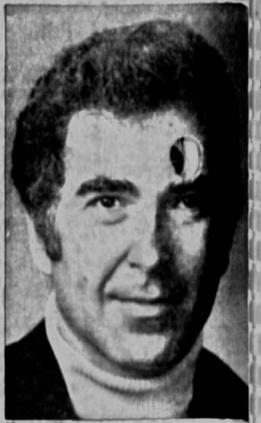

UI Symphony set to perform tonight

By Laura Chadima
The Daily Iowan

UI Music Professor Kenneth Amada will be featured in tonight's UI Symphony performance of Sergei Rachmaninoff's "Concerto No. 2 in C Minor, opus 18 for Piano and Orchestra."

Amada, who has been on the UI School of Music faculty since 1967, began studying piano at the age of three. He graduated from Rutgers University at 19, giving his New York debut recital in the same year. He currently chairs the Piano Department in the School of Music.

The piano concerto, composed in 1900, is the best-known of Rachmaninoff's four piano concertos. Written after a two-year period of depression and inactivity, the concerto is dedicated to Dr. Nikolai Dahl, the psychiatrist and amateur musician who helped Rachmaninoff overcome his creative block. The resulting work is a combination of nationalism and romanticism and remains immensely popular.
