Anti-Bork momentum gains

GOP's Specter joins Democrats in opposing judge

Arlen Specter

By Judi Hasson
United Press International

WASHINGTON—Democrats, with a surge of opposition that included GOP Sen. Arlen Specter, said Thursday Robert Bork's Supreme Court nomination is in the jaws of defeat, and one suggested the White House withdraw the selection.

But a subdued President Ronald Reagan brushed off the latest vote counts and said if there is anti-Bork momentum, "I'm going to interrupt it."

"I'm working my head off to make sure we don't lose," he said. "I think the process of confirming a Supreme Court justice has been reduced to a partisan political struggle."

Assistant Senate Democratic leader Alan Cranston of California said his latest head count showed 50 senators opposed Bork with "more to come."

"It looks more and more" like the Senate will deny confirmation to Bork, Cranston said. "The general momentum is continuing to grow."

TRIGGERING THURSDAY'S momentum was the announcement by three Southern Democrats that they will vote against Bork's nomination to the high court, and one of the three, Sen. Bennett Johnston, D-La., even suggested Reagan withdraw the nomination.

"I believe that Judge Bork will not make it," said the conservative Johnston.

But Will Ball, chief White House legislative lobbyist, said the administration's count is 40 senators for Bork, 42 against and 18 undecided.

Reagan was pale and seemed beaten when he answered questions before departing by motorcade for The George Washington University Hospital to visit FBI director-designate William Sessions, who was suffering from an ulcer.

THE PRESIDENT SAID he has not given any thought to withdrawing the nomination and revealed that he had met briefly Thursday with Bork, who is "just waiting on the decision," Reagan said.

Two die as quake rattles L.A. area

By Eric Malnic
Los Angeles Times

LOS ANGELES—A major earthquake, rocked the Los Angeles metropolitan area Thursday morning, killing at least two people, injuring scores of others, severely damaging dozens of buildings and forcing the closure of two freeways.

Seismologists at the California Institute of Technology said the quake, which struck at 9:42 a.m. CDT measured 6.0 on the Richter Scale, considerably less than the devastating Sylmar quake in 1971, which killed more than 60 people. Thursday's quake was centered in the Montebello-Whittier Narrows area.

The quake was felt as far away as San Diego, San Luis Obispo and even Las Vegas, more than 200 miles to the northeast.

Walls crumbled, windows shattered and ceilings collapsed in scattered locations throughout the metropolitan area. Telephone, radio and television systems were momentarily knocked out of service by the quake.

POWER OUTAGES trapped scores of workers in stalled elevators and thousands of early morning workers were ordered to evacuate downtown office buildings.

Los Angeles City Fire Department officials said a woman was killed when the wall of a building collapsed at the California State University Los Angeles campus. A man was buried under 7 feet of earth in a tunnel being dug in the Eaton Canyon area above Pasadena and was presumed dead, according to the Pasadena Fire Department. Neither victim was identified further.

A 35-year-old man sustained severe head injuries and was reported near death at the Los Angeles County-University of Southern California Medical Center after the earthquake reportedly threw him through a second-floor window in the Commerce area.

AT LEAST one person was seriously injured when a 3-foot by 4-foot boulder rolled down a steep hillside, crushing a vehicle on the Golden State Freeway transition road to the Harbor Freeway.

Debate rages over sales tax as vote nears

Big turnout expected for election

By James Cahoy
The Daily Iowan

Proponents and opponents of the proposed 1 percent local options tax up for a vote Oct. 6 in Johnson County agree on at least one thing — the vote will be close.

Johnson County Auditor Tom Slockett predicts a heavy turnout for the election, based on the number of absentee ballots he has received so far.

"We've received about 90 absentee ballots, which is about what we get in a normal city general election," Slockett said. "If we get that kind of turnout for this election, I'd say that would be a pretty heavy turnout for a ballot election."

Slockett attributes this potentially large turnout to the publicity given to the issue by both sides.

"It seems like there has been quite a bit of interest," Slockett said. "Some very large issues have been raised by both sides."

THE ISSUE of the sales tax has divided the Iowa City business community straight down the middle, according to Iowa City Greater Chamber of Commerce President Bob Sierk.

"We have people on both sides of the issue," Sierk said. "Most of the

Wilhelm: Hike will burden the poor

By John Bartenhagen
The Daily Iowan

If Johnson County residents vote to pass the 1 percent sales tax increase referendum on Oct. 6, they will be placing a financial burden on those least able to afford it, according to former Executive Director of Citizens for Tax Justice David Wilhelm.

"A sales tax is a regressive tax. It places unfair burden on those in the lower income brackets," Wilhelm said in a speech Thursday night in the Union Terrace Room. "If you live below the poverty line in Iowa, which is $8,000 a year, then 63 percent of your income goes to items that are subject to sales tax."

Both proponents and opponents of the proposed 1 percent sales tax hike in Iowa City have cited a report written by Wilhelm called "The Sorry State of State Taxes" to support their arguments.

BUT WILHELM, whose speech was sponsored by the UI Student Senate, said neither a property tax nor a sales tax is the answer to relieving municipal government deficits.

"While less fair than income tax, a property tax is probably more fair

Reck lobbies for more student aid

By Monica Seigel
The Daily Iowan

UI Collegiate Associations Council President Mike Reck told an Iowa Legislature interim committee on financial aid Thursday student leaders will lobby for $5.15 million for state-funded college work-study programs next year — $3 million more than was allocated this year.

Speaking before the Joint Education Trust Fund Committee, Reck said increased tuition and cutbacks in federally-funded financial aid programs are restricting accessibility to higher education.

"We believe students in the state of Iowa have a right to higher public education despite their economic situations," Reck said. "Unfortunately, some are being restricted."

COMMENDING THE Legislature for allocating $2.15 million to work-study this year, Reck said the state will need to commit itself even further to make up for the shortfall in student financial aid caused by federal cuts.

"Federal financial aid, plain and simply, is not keeping up with the skyrocketing costs of a higher education," he said.

The UI was funded only 16 percent of what it needed in federal work-study money this year, Reck said, adding he would like to see the state assume some of the shortfall.

Reck said student leaders will lobby for gradually increased allocations for the state-funded work-study programs during the next 15 years, asking for $5.15 million next year, $8 million the following year and $11 million the year after that.

Iowa State University Financial Aid Director Earl Dowling said last year's $2.15 million work-study allocation from the state — $1.5 million of which was earmarked for the UI, ISU and the University of Northern Iowa — was used to create more work-study jobs for ISU students.

"THE COLLEGE work-study program has to be my most favorite program," Dowling said, adding the state funding is allowing the universities to become more "creative in the financial aid environment."

Sen. Rich Varn, D-Solon, asked Dowling about the feasibility of using additional state work-study funding to expand the cooperative education and internship programs already established at the universi-

Robertson begins journey for GOP presidential nomination

By Dan Jacobsen
United Press International

NEW YORK — Evangelist Pat Robertson Thursday officially kicked off his campaign for the Republican presidential nomination in one of the nation's largest black communities, declaring his concern for "people in the inner city" to a mostly white crowd of supporters.

His speech from a platform in front a brownstone building in the Bedford-Stuyvesant section of Brooklyn where he lived when he first joined the southern Baptist ministry, was proceeded by a crescendo of gospel music and an introduction from former pro football linebacker Rosie Grier.

"I came here to show that I care about the people in the inner city," Robertson said, declaring his candidacy with his wife, Dede, standing by his side.

"I WANT AN AMERICA where there's hope for the black people, for the Hispanic people, for the women."

Robertson was greeted by cheers from some 75 supporters, mostly white, who sat on folding chairs set up on the tidy street.

But others watched with scorn, anger or bewilderment registered on their faces. Among them were some 40 Robertson opponents, also mostly white, who shouted "Pat go home!" and "Bigot!" as he spoke.

from DI staff reports

UI solicits nominations

The UI is now soliciting nominations for the 1988 Presidential Scholarship Program, its highest scholastic award for entering freshmen.

Twenty Presidential Scholarships are awarded each year. The scholarships provide $2,500 per year for four years, totaling $10,000 each, subject to maintaining a B grade point average.

Dean's Scholarships will be awarded to the 50 top-ranking finalists in the Presidential Scholarship competition. These awards include a freshman-year stipend equal to full-time resident tuition.

The scholarships are awarded on the basis of academic merit, not financial need. Depending upon individual financial need, recipients of both scholarships may be eligible for additional financial aid. Application materials must be on file by Oct. 31. Winners will be notified by Jan. 1, 1988.

To be eligible for the Presidential Scholarship Program, students must rank in the top 5 percent of their high school class, have an ACT composite score of 29 (SAT score of 1,200) or better, apply for admission to the UI and submit an official transcript for grades 9-11.

Law society sponsors talks

The UI International Law Society will sponsor two brown bag lunches in the next two weeks. The lunches are free and open to the public.

Robert E. Hudec, a faculty member at the University of Minnesota and a leading authority on international trade, will speak on "The Crisis in the World Trading System: General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade" at a brown bag lunch today from 11:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m., in Boyd Law Building Room 245.

Members of the faculty of the UI College of Law will offer advice on careers in international law on Thursday, Oct. 8, from 11:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m., in the Boyd Law Building, fourth floor student lounge.

Museum holds field trip

The UI Museum of Natural History will sponsor an eight-part series of public field trips, lectures and demonstrations during the 1987-88 academic year, beginning with a bird banding field trip on Sunday, Oct. 4, in Cedar Rapids. Participants are asked to meet in the parking lot north of the museum at 1:30 p.m.

Bird banding, which aids wildlife experts in the tracking of migratory birds, will be demonstrated by amateur ornithologists Rob Bradley and Weir Nelson at Nelson's home, located on the south side of Cedar Rapids. Both Bradley and Nelson are active in the Iowa Ornithological Union and the Audubon Society.

Other 1987-88 programs will include an Oct. 18 hike at the Amana nature trail, a Nov. 22 slide and lecture presentation on the "Bats of Iowa," a Feb. 14 program and demonstration on "Iowa Birds of Prey," an April 24 geode hunt, a May 8 spring flowers and birds hike, a June 19 hike at Big Sand Mound Nature Preserve, Muscatine, Iowa and a July 15 demonstration by the Explorer Scout Indian Dancers.

All programs are free and open to the public. Further information may be obtained by calling the Museum of Natural History at 335-0482 between 9:30 a.m. and 4:30 p.m.

WRAC shows film

The UI Women's Resource and Action Center 130 N. Madison St., will show the film Being a Prisoner Thursday, Oct. 8, at 7:30 p.m. at the center.

In the film, women in prison speak about their crimes, their lives and the injustice of the system that incarcerates them.

WRAC will also sponsor a brown bag lunch on "Women in Social Services: Historical Perspective and Current Day Realities," on Oct. 7 at 12:10 p.m. at the center.

Library forum examines censorship, free speech

By Anne-Marie Halloran
The Daily Iowan

More than 125 people joined six panelists in a freedom of speech forum at the Iowa City Public Library Wednesday, as panel members discussed how censorship of children's literature stunts children's desire to learn.

"If we do not take care, our students will find libraries bland," UI Professor of Library Sciences Gerald Hodges said. "Then we will find out why Johnny won't read."

Speaking at the first of four National Issues Forums scheduled at the library, the panel members discussed the effects of such censorship and discussed pornography's relationship to freedom of speech.

UI Hospitals and Clinics Director of Public Information Dean Borg moderated the discussion which began with a video tape on the topic, entitled,

"Freedom of Speech: Where to draw the line."

HODGES SAID activist groups are attempting to censor a wide variety of material including books written by homosexuals like Hans Christian Anderson and Emily Dickenson.

Panel member Donna Rae MacCann, a librarian, agreed censorship of children's books damages older children's learning opportunities because books are being censored to protect younger children.

"How can we treat a 15-year-old the same way we treat a 4-year-old?" she asked.

Panel member Susan Buckley, UI Women's Resource and Action Center coordinator, said children's books should not be censored, but pornography should.

She defined pornography as sexually explicit materials that create injury to women and said it threatens the social status of women and increases violence against them.

"Porn increases men's discriminatory attitude against women," Buckley said.

Buckley said civil rights ordinances, an approach which has sparked interest from feminist groups, is one way to combat pornography.

Panel member David Hingsman, an attorney, said although he is a freedom-of-speech advocate, he agreed with the feminist approach.

"You should protect freedom of speech but you should protect yourself," Hingsman said.

But Hingsman said freedom of speech should have few restrictions.

Panel member Hanna Weston, a faculty member at Kirkwood Community College, agreed, saying the solution to freedom of speech questions is more speech and not laws restricting it.

Reynoldson steps down as Iowa's high court boss

By Bill Brewer
United Press International

DES MOINES — W. Ward Reynoldson Thursday ended 16½ years on the Iowa Supreme Court — including 9 years as chief justice — confident the state's judicial system is stronger and more honest than when he arrived.

However, Reynoldson also said the past 16½ years has been frustrating at times because of Legislatures and governors who, at times, have overlooked the Judicial Branch's role as an equal partner in government.

In his typically modest fashion, Reynoldson downplayed his own role in several major court reforms that have taken place during his tenure, preferring to characterize them as accomplishments of the entire court.

AMONG THOSE reforms are the reorganization of Iowa's 99 county trial courts into a single state judicial department under the supervision of the Supreme Court, the establishment of funds to cover the legal costs for indigent Iowans to take their grievances to civil courts and one of the nation's toughest attorney discipline records.

"We have a national reputation for having a good and ethical bar. We do not flinch in disciplining the very small minority of lawyers who do not follow the Iowa Code of Professional Responsibility," he said.

However, he said he also has been frustrated by the slow workings of a Legislature and Executive Branch that often neglect to recognize the judiciary as "co-equal partner" in government.

"I've learned that reforms that depend upon the political process come slow," said Reynoldson.

HE SAID DURING his nearly 25 years in private practice before joining the Supreme Court the outcome of problems generally depended upon the amount of time he spent working on them.

"In government, no matter how much time we put in, it didn't necessarily follow that our suggestions would be followed up by the Legislature," he said.

Also frustrating have been attempts to cut budgets for the courts, notably an attempt by the governor's office last year to trim Reynoldson's budget request by $7 million before sending the proposal to the Legislature. A non-binding attorney general's opinion last August held the attempted budget cut was unconstitutional.

"Too frequently we've been caught in the crossfire between the executive and legislative branches," he said.

Reynoldson at times has become angry with the other branches of government, especially over occasional suggestion that the court vacate its "hallowed ground" in the Statehouse and move to another building. Most recently, lawmakers have suggested the court take over the old state Historical Museum, which will be relocated in a new building west of the Capitol in December.

New armory dispute opens

Committee claims it wasn't formally consulted

By Scott Hauser
The Daily Iowan

The UI Recreational Services Committee was not apprised of the UI's plan to replace the UI Field House Armory because the committee did not meet over the summer — the time when the plan was formulated, a UI official said Thursday.

"To say there's been no formal discussion with rec services is not right," June Davis, assistant to UI Vice President for Finance Susan Phillips, said in response to a resolution saying the UI had not properly consulted with the committee during the preliminary plans to replace the armory.

She admitted the committee had not been consulted, but said UI Recreational Services Director

Harry Ostrander was involved in the process.

Speaking at the committee's first meeting of the year, Davis explained how the decision to replace the armory was made and responded to charges the committee was not informed of the project.

"WHO DO WE ADVISE about what when a major decision is made within the university?" UI College of Medicine Program Associate Tom Taylor said. "What is our role?"

He said the UI charter to the committee — which was reviewed at the meeting — required the UI to keep the committee informed of all decisions affecting recreational services.

"I am disappointed in the way this was resolved," UI Research Assistant Barb Robb said. "That's my concern as a committee member."

She introduced the resolution, which also asked that a subcommittee be formed to keep the committee advised of the armory's progress.

Early last month UI Hospitals announced plans to replace the current UI Psychiatric Hospital will require the demolition of the armory — the southern addition of the UI Field House which houses six of the Field House's 10 basketball courts — in 1989.

UI INTERIM President Richard Remington and the state Board of Regents have said the UI will replace the armory before the current one is torn down, will replace any parking lost to the project and will not fund the project with student activity or user fees.

Davis said UI Recreational Services Director Harry Ostrander was told of the UI's plans and was involved in the preliminary stages of the project and said the committee was not informed because they did not meet over the summer.

Ostrander said he met with former UI Vice President for Finance Dorsey Ellis and UI Planning and Administrative Services Director Richard Gibson in June to discuss the project.

The UI Campus Planning Committee approved a site south of the current Field House as a replacement for the armory.

Implants pose breakthrough

New procedure gives 2 Iowa children first chance to hear

By Joseph Levy
The Daily Iowan

Doctors at UI Hospitals and Clinics call the procedure a cochlear implant, but to 3-year-old Tim Brandau and 7-year-old Toni Whitmore the name isn't as important as the fact that they can now hear the doctors when they say it.

The procedure has given the two young Iowans the chance to hear sounds for the first time in their lives.

The two became the first children in Iowa — and among only 20 children in the world — who have the implants when UI College of Medicine Associate Professor of Otolaryngology Bruce Gantz implanted the devices in the two youths at UI Hospitals in August.

"We thank the Lord, that he has given Tim some ears," Sue Brandau, Tim's mother, said. "This has given Tim a piece of the hearing world."

ACCORDING TO GANTZ, the devices correct the ear's signal transformation process by bypassing the patient's inner ear, allowing sound waves to travel properly through the ear.

"In patients that are deaf the ability of the inner ear to change an acoustical signal into an electrical signal isn't functioning correctly," he said.

Each device has two main components: one part implanted in the head that connects with the cochlear nerve and one part which, similar to a portable radio, attaches by a cord to the patient's head.

This component serves as a speech processor, which converts the sound waves to electrical signals.

Both Brandau and Whitmore wear the device in a small pouch strapped around their necks.

WHITMORE'S MOTHER, Tami, said her daughter's first hearing experience was momentous.

"We turned the radio on and she wanted to know where the sound was coming from," she said. "She's quite aware now that there is sound in the air."

Gantz said he hopes the implants will allow the two to live more normal lives.

"Without hearing and without speech, the career choices of an individual are significantly diminished," he said. "We're hoping these children will now be able to develop speech."

Because the two are among the first to receive the implants, doctors say they aren't certain how efforts to educate them will turn out.

"New ground is being plowed here," UI College of Medicine Department of Otolaryngology Chairman Brian McCabe said. "We don't know the right way (to train the children)."

But McCabe said progress has been made in the short period of time the children have had the implants.

"These children, with just a few days training, have already learned some (sound) discrimination," he said.

Eighteen children are on a waiting list to receive the implants at UI Hospitals, McCabe said.

CIA actions draw fire from activists

By Paula Roesler
The Daily Iowan

The Central Intelligence Agency has had a debilitating effect on the people and economies of Central America and United States citizens should understand the role the CIA has in the region, four anti-CIA activists said Thursday.

Speaking at the first program of New Wave/Progressive Student Network's weeklong series of events titled, "CIA Around the World," the speakers opened the seventh semester of anti-CIA activities at the UI.

The speakers criticized the CIA's effect on the region's economy — particularly health care — and the agency's undermining of Central American peace plans.

"If you want to crush a people, crush their access to education, crush their access to health care," New Wave member Anne Johnstone, who returned from her second visit to Nicaragua in January, said.

SHE SAID the CIA-backed Contra rebels in Nicaragua continue to lessen the attainability of health care, education and economic stability for peasant societies.

The Contras have focused many of their attacks on health care facilities, Johnstone said.

"More than 61 health facilities have been leveled," she said, adding such attacks hit peasant societies the hardest because the next nearest facility may be several miles away.

Newly educated persons are also common targets of the Contras, she said.

In 1986, the Nicaraguan Ministry of Education reported a loss of 300 literary educators to Contra rebels, she said.

About 50 percent of the Nicaraguan government's budget is needed for defense and about 20 percent of the work force is used in defense, she said.

Johnstone said the work force has lost 13,000 people to the war in the last three years.

"THE ECONOMIC CRUNCH is really bad because of the war," she said.

Central American Solidarity Committee members Raphael Dubon and Pat MacNamara said the CIA discourages peace negotiations in Central American countries.

"Time and time again the United States has undermined attempts at a Central American peace plan," Dubon said.

MacNamara said if Central American countries agree on a peace plan, the United States should not interfere.

"It is important that we support (a peace plan) even though it won't solve all problems," Dubon said. "It will be important to start a dialogue in Central America."

Central American Solidarity Committee member Rose Hayslet said women's movements are a prominent part of the working class struggle in El Salvador, Nicaragua and Guatemala.

"THEY HAVE A history of speaking out," Hayslet said, adding several women's organizations have been started so secretaries, teachers and nurses could get into labor movements.

"They continue to be very visible marching in the streets of San Salvador," she said, adding women may be subject to murder, rape, torture and harassment by the military for their involvement.

"The more repressed people are, the greater is their power to resist," she said.

The New Wave/Progressive Student Network will hold a candlelight vigil for people killed in Central American wars Monday at 6 p.m. on the Pentacrest.

On Tuesday it will sponsor a rice and beans dinner at the Hillel House, 122 E. Market St., at 5:30 p.m. and will sponsor a talk by John Stockwell, the highest-level CIA official to speak out against CIA policies, at 7:30 p.m. in Macbride Hall.

On Wednesday, it will hold a rally protesting CIA recruitment on campus at 12:20 p.m. on the Pentacrest.

U.N. considers embargo against Iran

UNITED NATIONS—Secretary of State George Shultz said Thursday the U.N. Security Council will soon begin work on a resolution that could impose an arms embargo against Iran for balking at a cease-fire with Iraq.

Shultz said representatives of the five permanent Security Council members may begin the drafting process on cease-fire enforcement measures "as early as next week."

"However, getting agreement on an enforcement measure is going to be a great challenge to our diplomatic efforts," Shultz said.

220 believed dead in S. Africa floods

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa—Floods triggered by torrential rain in the province of Natal have killed as many as 220 people in the country's "biggest natural disaster," Government officials said Thursday. More rain and flooding was expected.

National Health Minister Willie Van Niekerk said that 145 people have died and 75 others were missing in the six-day downpour. "I have no doubt this is the biggest natural disaster this country has ever encountered," Van Niekerk said.

Woman gives birth to daughter's triplets

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa—A 48-year-old grandmother acting as surrogate mother for her daughter gave birth Thursday to triplets in a "soap opera" delivery filmed by television cameras and celebrated with champagne toasts.

Pat Anthony, who gave birth to two boys and a girl, was believed to be the first surrogate mother to carry a baby for her own daughter and the first surrogate mother to carry triplets.

Long censorship of La Prensa ends

MANAGUA, Nicaragua—With a hiss of its 19-year-old printing press, the opposition newspaper La Prensa Thursday resumed publication after 15 months of government-imposed silence.

Publisher Violeta Barrios de Chamorro pulled the first uncensored issue of La Prensa in more than four years off the press and held up a banner headline that read: "La Prensa without censorship... the people have triumphed."

Nicaragua's leftist Sandinista government closed La Prensa on June 26, 1986, saying the newspaper was a mouthpiece for the Reagan administration's support of Contra rebels fighting to overthrow the Managua government.

Soviets test missiles off Hawaii coast

WASHINGTON—The Soviet Union launched two long-range missiles north of Hawaii this week despite U.S. protests, changing one's course after the United States expressed "serious concern" the dummy warheads would fly over the island, the Pentagon said Thursday.

The Soviets conducted the test flights of an SS-18-type intercontinental ballistic missile Wednesday and Thursday time. They first notified the United States through diplomatic channels that the second missile's re-entry vehicles would fall on opposite sides of the islands, Pentagon spokesman Fred Hoffman said.

Gorbachev predicts further arms cuts

MOSCOW—Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev said Thursday a summit meeting with President Ronald Reagan later this year could create "a peaceful chain reaction" leading to a reduction in strategic nuclear arms and a curtailment of the U.S. "Star Wars" program.

It marked the first time Gorbachev publicly addressed prospects of the scheduled summit with Reagan since the two nations last month reached an agreement in principle to eliminate all medium- and short-range nuclear weapons.

"The road to this mutual Soviet-American decision was difficult. But there are rays of hope not only on intermediate-range and shorter-range missiles. There are signs of progress in the question of banning nuclear tests," the Soviet leader said.

Premarital AIDS testing 'ineffective'

CHICAGO—Mandatory premarital AIDS testing nationwide would cost more than $100 million annually and at best would detect fewer than one out of every thousand people in the United States now carrying the virus, researchers reported Thursday.

Scientists from the Harvard School of Public Health called compulsory screening of people at low risk for AIDS an "ineffective and inefficient use of resources."

Filipino rebels set to stage new coup

MANILA, Philippines—Col. Gregorio "Gringo" Honasan, fugitive leader of the bloody Aug. 28 attempt to overthrow President Corazon Aquino, says his rebel forces have "no more time" and are ready to stage a new coup.

"We have given ourselves no more than a month and a half after that initial step last Aug. 28," Honasan said in an interview published in Friday's edition of the Bulletin, Manila's largest-circulation daily. "We have no more time. We cannot afford to dilly dally anymore."

Ulcer problem halts Session swearing-in

By Lori Santos
United Press International

WASHINGTON—FBI Director-designate William Sessions, incapacitated by a bleeding ulcer on his way to Washington for his swearing-in, will remain hospitalized for a few days but is "feeling fine," doctors said Thursday.

President Ronald Reagan visited Sessions at the hospital to wish his new FBI chief well.

Allen Ginsberg, professor of medicine in the division of gastroenterology at the George Washington University Hospital, said Sessions was hospitalized early Thursday for a duodenal ulcer, "a superficial erosion in the first portion of the small intestine."

Ginsberg said the ulcer, discovered on the day Sessions was to be sworn in as the fourth director of the FBI, was "entirely benign" and aspirin induced. The National Institutes of Health said the ulcer is the type that one of every 10 Americans will have sooner or later.

FROM A MEDICAL point of view, Ginsberg said Sessions could "be sworn in as early as tomorrow or Saturday" but will be hospitalized for two to three days to ensure no further bleeding occurs.

"He's feeling fine," the physician said, and his condition was good.

Attorney General Edwin Meese and Sessions' wife, Alice, met with the conservative Texan, and Meese said he was "in good spirits."

Sessions, 57, was unanimously approved by the Senate last week to be director of the FBI and was to have been given the oath of office by former Chief Justice Warren

William Sessions

Burger.

The aborted ceremony robbed Reagan of his plans to defend his embattled nominee for the Supreme Court, Robert Bork.

BUT WHEN REAGAN visited Sessions at the hospital for nine minutes, Sessions, still bed-ridden, asked the president right away, "How are things going with Bork?" reported spokesman Marlin Fitzwater.

He said Reagan and Attorney General Edwin Meese responded positively.

Reagan told Sessions, "You look good," Fitzwater said, and Sessions replied that he felt fine.

The two spent some time talking about their families. Mrs. Sessions and their daughter, Sarah, a San Francisco dancer, were in the room at the time, Fitzwater said.

Gulf area shipping takes Iranian blows

By Patrick E. Tyler
Washington Post

DUBAI, United Arab Emirates—Over the past two days, Iran has stepped up its attacks on shipping in and near the Strait of Hormuz, striking at times under the noses of Western and Soviet naval forces in the area.

An Iraqi warplane fired a missile Thursday morning at an Australian shrimp trawler in Iranian waters, killing its captain and heavily damaging the 85-foot vessel, the Shenton Bluff.

Early Thursday, an unescorted Pakistani oil tanker, the Johar, was attacked by two suspected Iranian gunboats in the Strait of Hormuz, in close proximity to French and Soviet warships on unrelated escort patrols.

The attacks appear to be a direct challenge, shipping sources said Thursday, to the limited mission of the foreign fleets, each of which has justified its Persian Gulf presence in different terms and narrowed its operations to protecting its national flag carriers or hunting for mines.

WEDNESDAY, IRANIAN gunboats raked two other tankers, the Nichiharu Maru and the Western City, as they steamed about three miles apart in the strait not long after a U.S. naval flotilla had passed through.

The Western City had loaded crude oil at a Saudi Arabian port and was on its way to the Iranian oil terminal at Hormuz to take on additional oil when it was struck.

A similar attack against a Greek-registered tanker, the Koriana, was staged early Wednesday near the area where British and American warships and British mine sweepers were conducting mine hunting operations off the coast of Dubai Tuesday afternoon.

Each attack produced little more than puncture holes in the hulls and crew areas of the tankers, but the open strikes by Iranian gunboats, in daylight and in the vicinity of western and Soviet warships, have driven home the contradictions inherent in the foreign fleet missions here.

In the wake of Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger's visit to the region last week, a number of Arab leaders had expressed the hope that American military power, as exercised in the Sept. 21 attack on an Iranian mine-laying vessel, would deter Iran and would further extend the umbrella of protection over this vital waterway.

Third official named in Biden video scandal

Dukakis reveals participation of field director Corrigan

Michael Dukakis

By Jerry Berger
United Press International

BOSTON (UPI) — Democratic presidential candidate Michael Dukakis said Thursday a third top-ranking campaign official was involved in distributing a videotape that helped torpedo Delaware Sen. Joseph Biden's White House bid.

Dukakis said field director Jack Corrigan, a key deputy to former campaign manager John Sasso, mailed a copy of the damaging videotape to NBC News.

"He told me that although he had no prior knowledge of the tapes which went to the (New York) Times and the (Des Moines) Register, he did, at John Sasso's direction, mail a tape to NBC.

"He came to me and told me that. That was a mistake but in my judgment not a mistake that warrants dismissal from the campaign," Dukakis said, failing to say if Corrigan was disciplined.

SASSO AND NATIONAL political director Paul Tully resigned Wednesday following Dukakis' disclosure that Sasso prepared the "attack video" contrasting Biden's speeches with those of British Labor Party chief Neil Kinnock.

Tully submitted his resignation after admitting he lied in response to a Time magazine story pinning the tape on the Dukakis camp.

The disclosures dramatically slowed the momentum of a campaign that had been picking up both name recognition and financial support since it formally began in April.

Dukakis — who has portrayed himself as a strong, decisive manager — sought to restore an image tarnished by his initial refusal to accept the resignation of Sasso, a long-time political confidant who successfully guided his 1982 and 1986 gubernatorial campaigns.

"ALL OF THIS happened in the space of less than one full day," Dukakis said. "I think that's pretty rapid action. John and I have known each other for 7 1/2 years. It is a very, very close personal bond."

"You don't make decisions like this in half an hour," Dukakis said. "It took into account that I'm somebody who knows what it is like to be hurt and is sensitive to him, to his family."

Interim campaign manager Leslie Dach said the decision to accept Sasso's resignation was timely.

"When people see Michael Dukakis, they know what kind of guy he is," said Dach, 34, who joined the campaign last month as communications coordinator. "He acted decisively in a painful decision and is moving forward. People will respect his actions and the emotions."

But some newspaper editorials Thursday suggested Dukakis will have problems restoring his image.

"Mr. Clean, Michael the Good, the candidate who remained above it all is wiping the mud off his shoes," The Boston Herald wrote in a rare front-page editorial. "He has lost the moral high ground in his quest for the presidency."

Gore concerned over party's course

By Jack Nelson
Los Angeles Times

WASHINGTON — Sen. Al Gore Jr., D-Tenn., declaring that other presidential candidates are feeding "negative tidbits" about their opponents to the news media, called Thursday for the Democratic presidential campaign to focus more on issues facing the country and less on "relatively trivial" matters.

The Democratic leader warned about the course of the party's presidential campaign after the two top officials of Massachusetts Gov. Michael Dukakis' campaign resigned following the disclosure of their part in supplying the news media with an "attack video" that set off a chain of events leading to Delaware Sen. Joseph Biden Jr.'s withdrawal from the campaign. The video documented that in one of his own speeches Biden had used — without attribution — significant segments of a speech by British Labor Party Leader Neil Kinnock.

Earlier, Sen. Gary Hart decided against running for the Democratic presidential nomination after the press published stories suggesting that he had spent the night in his Washington townhouse with Miami model Donna Rice.

GORE, IN A lengthy breakfast session with the Los Angeles Times Washington Bureau, suggested that news stories of relatively trivial matters have obscured campaign dialogue about important issues facing the country.

He also emphasized that he differed sharply with other Democratic hopefuls in his more conservative approach to arms control and vowed that he would deliver "a series of hard-hitting messages on issues that involve differences between myself and the other five candidates in the race."

Gore, saying his campaign may be the only one not sending out negative information, declared: "Apparently, it is politics as usual to have an agenda of little negative tidbits that are fed out."

GORE LASHED OUT at four of his opponents — Dukakis, the Rev. Jesse Jackson, Missouri Rep. Richard A. Gephardt and Illinois Sen. Paul Simon — for endorsing a missile flight test ban, which he called "one of the truly bad ideas" to emerge during a debate among the candidates on national security.

Although he said he favored pursuing a formula for a test ban, endorsing one at this time would inject new uncertainty in a precarious balance of power between the superpowers and would be "an extremely irresponsible thing to do."

Gore and his wife, Mary "Tipper" Elizabeth, an author and political activist who co-founded an organization to educate parents and consumers about sexually explicit and violent lyrical content in music, both were interviewed during the Times breakfast session. The session was taped by C-SPAN (Cable Satellite Public Affairs Network) and will be broadcast Sunday.

Al Gore

Byrd: 'Back-alley' campaigns will 'bury Democratic party'

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Senate Democratic leader Robert Byrd of West Virginia warned his party's presidential candidates Thursday that "back-alley" campaigns can "only bury the Democratic Party" in the 1988 election.

He also cautioned the news media that by spotlighting too narrowly the faults of candidates, they deny them a "fair and objective portrait of their character and their campaigns."

"The entirety of a candidate's record and character should not be overwhelmed by one mistake on the campaign trail that may be captured on video," Byrd said in Senate remarks.

Byrd said the campaign before and during the 1988 primaries "sets a tone" and added it is time for candidates to "reaffirm a commitment to campaigns of integrity — campaigns with a positive message."

Byrd said the role of the media has changed "dramatically," becoming part of the process "to such an extent that journalists believe that they have a responsibility to be 'character cops.'"

A bomb is born again

It comes as no great surprise, really. We've always known that "bigger is better" in the minds of those Pentagon pundits. Especially when it comes to budget requests and cost overruns.

But it is interesting that after decades of perfecting the nuclear weapon — making it streamlined and deadly accurate — the U.S. Air Force is calling the old B53 hydrogen bomb back to duty. Apparently, there may be a use for the nine-megaton monster after all.

The B53 is a gravity bomb the size of a Toyota, with the destructive yield of 30 MX missile warheads or 750 of the bombs that were dropped on Hiroshima. Twenty years after it was retired, the Air Force is bringing the B53 out of storage and up to date.

Though they aren't saying why the bomb is being reactivated, some view the B53 as a way to destroy Soviet underground command centers. Robert Norris of the Natural Resources Defense Council — a Washington, D.C. research firm — contends, "They couldn't come up with a bomb that penetrates the surface of the earth deeply enough so they are bringing this bomb back ... Everyone thought it was being dismantled."

Of particular interest to Iowans is the fact that B53 bombs were assembled at the Iowa Army Ammunition Plant near Burlington. The Burlington plant was one of two final assembly plants for America's nuclear weapons between 1947 and 1975, its years of operation. It is estimated that one-third of the 60,000 nuclear weapons this country has produced were put together here in Iowa.

Even more disturbing than this distinction — of which most Iowans are probably none too proud — is the deep concern of the bomb's opponents that the government will test the B53 to ensure its reliability.

A nuclear test ban treaty should be the next matter of business for U.S. arms-control negotiators. Unfortunately, we are not likely to see such a step from this administration.

Consistently insensitive

On the final day of the Senate confirmation hearings on Robert Bork's nomination, Senate Judiciary Committee Chairman Joseph Biden read a statement from former President Jimmy Carter, denouncing the judge's views on racial discrimination.

Carter said that with respect to civil rights he found Bork's "... impressively consistent opinions to be particularly obnoxious." The former president did not — and would have been hard pressed to — add anything substantially new to the record. Many of the 110 witnesses had already said essentially the same thing. But because several members of his administration had supported Bork, Carter felt called upon to lend his voice to the opposition.

The objection that Carter and so many others have raised to Bork's elevation to the Supreme Court, seems to almost entirely sidestep the question of the nominee's intellectual qualifications. Almost all are agreed that Bork is an intelligent and well-versed reader of the law. But many have misgivings about the "wisdom" the judge brings to his deliberations. Bork regards the high court's workings as an "intellectual feast," but he seems to forget that rulings have a non-intellectual component. Some of his own actions and rulings suggest an insensitivity to consequences, as if the end of law were not justice, but mere logical consistency.

Some of Bork's detractors object to the nomination on the grounds that the Judge Bork actual lacks consistency, that he professes different ideologies at different times. Frequently Bork's assertions seem to contradict one another. But as Carter correctly observed, whatever rationale Bork claims, his views and rulings are all too often inhumane.

Coming undone

Like a good ball of twine, the field of Democratic presidential hopefuls is beginning to unravel. The failed candidacy of Sen. Gary Hart, D-Colo., was the first strand to come loose and the disintegration gathered momentum as it unwound the campaign of Sen. Joe Biden, D-Del., last week. Now, the bid of Massachusetts Gov. Michael Dukakis looks like it could snap.

The phenomena of the abortive Democratic candidacies is an interesting one to observe. From the outset, it was clear that none of the candidates had outstanding qualifications. Hart appeared to have the kind of broad-based support necessary to win the White House in 1988, but extensive press coverage of the unsavory side of his personal life sealed his fate. Biden's tendency to exaggerate his own importance brought his campaign to an early end. The appearance of serious problems in the chain of command within the Dukakis campaign may be enough to call the Massachusetts governor into question.

Is this series of failed campaigns the result of increased scrutiny from the press? Or are the candidates simply self-destructing under pressure? In all likelihood, it's a combination of both. Amidst all the questions, the one thing that appears clear is this: The only true beneficiaries of the Democratic in-fighting are a group of men wearing navy blue suits and red ties and promising to extend the Reagan revolution into the 1990s.

Gephardt from Missouri?

Oh, great! Oh, fine! First Gary Hart has ants in his pants and is more than happy to share them, then Joe Biden turns out to have all the creativity of a ream of tracing paper, then somebody takes a closer look at Pat Schroeder and gasps, "Hey, look, Schroeder's a tomato! No contributions for her, she'll just use 'em to go shopping!" And now, to top it all off, it turns out Mike Dukakis' chief toady was the sonuvagun who finked on Biden. Where'd the Democratic Party find these yahoos, in a high school detention hall?

And when is the other shoe going to drop where the rest of the candidates are concerned? Can any member of this flawed congregation long associate with his own kind and emerge with their escutcheons unstained? What vices lurk within them? Could Paul Simon harbor grudges? Does Jesse Jackson have a place for everything and keep everything in its place? Might Bruce Babbitt check payphones to see if someone left their change in the coin return slot? Would Albert Gore give his pets obscene or mocking names? Is Richard hurrucane in Pat's direction in the first place, so it must have been God's will at the time that Pat's broadcasting facility be blown to state-of-the-art smithereens. Let me hear an "Oops!"

BUT GOD listens to Pat, so the hurricane turned away from Pat's broadcasting facility and went north, right into New York City and western Long Island. Millions of dollars worth of property was damaged, but that didn't stop Pat from taking credit for the hurricane going in that direction so he could go on talking to people so they could send money.

And now Pat is running for president. One of the places he will have to run, and where, in fact, he is formally announcing his candidacy, is in the Big Apple. Let me hear a last-place finish in the New York primary.

So in this dance of vice and virtue, the self-admitted forces of depravity as represented by Hart, Biden, et al., have done little more than shot themselves, and themselves alone, in the toe while the self-proclaimed forces of piety as represented by Robertson claim responsibility for sending one of the most destructive forces in nature into one of the most densely populated areas on the globe. Just imagine what would happen to Democrats after a domestic exchange like this came to light:

MRS. GEPHARDT: "Dick, Dick, the New Madrid fault just went kerblooey and there's one tooth-rattler of a quake a'headin' this way!"

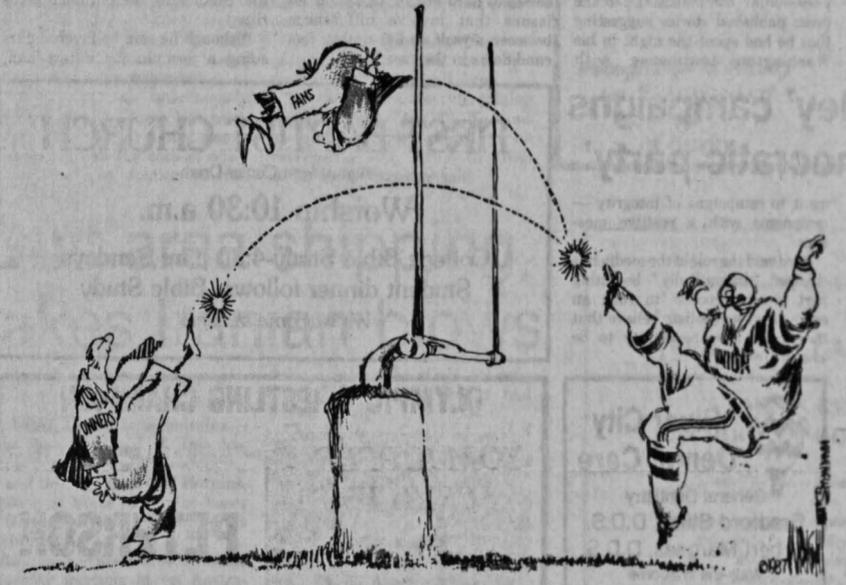

Mr. Gephardt: "Jehosephat! And we just put in that new fangled satellite dish, too! Quick, nestle your knees in the carpeting and pray to the Almighty to rebuke this here destructive force. (Pause) Hey, I don't feel nothin'! Turn on the radio and see what's up."

Mrs. Gephardt: "The announcer feller says the quake got rerouted to Chicago, leveled the place, and there ain't nothin' thereabouts standin' high enough to cast a six-inch shadow!"

Mr. Gephardt: "Well, at least we uns won't have to go back to watchin' cable."

Talk about selfish! Isn't that a vice, too?

Political polls tell all

David Broder

Washington — Until now, the Democrats have held the spotlight in the maneuvering for the 1988 presidential election. But that is about to change. The two leading Republican contenders, Vice President George Bush and Senate Minority Leader Bob Dole, are announcing their candidacies in the next few weeks. And the recognition is growing in the political community that odds favor the Republicans' nominating the next president.

One important psychological factor — the "time for change" theme — could help the Democrats. But "objective conditions," as Marxists like to say, give Republicans the edge.

The nation is at peace, no vital interests of the United States appear to be in jeopardy and President Ronald Reagan is on the verge of signing the first arms-control agreement in eight years. The summit meeting with Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev, to be held in this country, cannot help but boost Reagan's standing in the polls.

THE NATION is also in its fifth year of steady economic growth without inflation. The president has just approved a bipartisan congressional mechanism for deficit-reduction which may ease the largest threat to the future of the economy.

Nothing is certain 13 months before an election, but trends are moving in the GOP direction. Between June and September, the number of people in The Washington Post-ABC News poll saying that things in this country "have gotten pretty seriously off on the wrong track" declined from a record 62 percent to 54 percent. That's still not terrific, but it probably reflects a rise in economic confidence and the easing of gloom induced by the Iran-Contra affair and its disillusioning effect on Reagan's leadership.

The impact of these changes is reflected in the poll question about which party has the best chance of winning the White House next year. Voters give Republicans a 10-point edge, 52-42 percent.

ONE ADDITIONAL reason Republicans enjoy that early favorites' role is that Bush and Dole are the only people among the expected candidates of both parties that a majority of all voters consider "basically qualified" to be president of the United States.

Bush has earned that degree of confidence from 80 percent of the registered voters in the survey; Dole, from 74 percent. Seven out of 10 Democrats in the sample give them that accolade.

Only 54 percent of the Democrats (and 44 percent of all registered voters) put the "basically qualified" label on the leading Democratic contender, Jesse Jackson. As time goes on and the field is winnowed, the "leadership gap" will diminish. The majorities who now say they don't know enough about the other Democratic contenders to judge their qualifications will almost certainly develop positive impressions of the survivors.

BUT ALL THE reporting I've done for the past year underlines the importance voters attach to competence and professionalism in the next president. And history shows how difficult it is for newcomers to the national scene to get over that barrier of credibility and confidence.

Of the seven presidents since Franklin Roosevelt, only Jimmy Carter was not well-known to the American people a year before his election. And Carter lingers in many voters' minds as a warning of the risks of putting an untested stranger in the Oval Office.

Aside from the ever-present danger of the economy or the world situation turning sour, the main reason for caution about predicting a Republican victory is the evidence of a "time for change" psychology developing in the country. The Post-ABC poll asked respondents to choose between these statements: "After eight years of Ronald Reagan, we need a president who can set the nation in a new direction" or "We need to keep the country moving in the direction Ronald Reagan has been taking us."

BY A 55-41 percent margin, registered voters opted for a "new direction." Three out of 10 Republicans chose that answer, as did eight out of 10 Democrats.

One key question for the next few months, therefore, is whether Republican candidates can plausibly suggest ways in which their administrations might differ from, or go beyond, the Reagan agenda. Such trailing GOP hopefuls as former Delaware Gov. Pete Du Pont and Rep. Jack Kemp, R-N.Y., have been far bolder than Bush or Dole in drawing their own designs.

But Bush and Dole have started to try. The vice president has suggested he sees a more active role for government in the education and environmental areas. And the Kansas senator talks about programs that would bring help to Americans who are not sharing in the general prosperity.

These are tentative moves, and both men told me in recent interviews they thought Reagan had essentially set the nation on the right course. If they appear as status quo figures, they could lose.

Dispelling myths

To the Editor:

As a member of the Iowa City Council-appointed citizens committee that recommended against instituting a sales tax by a vote of 10-5, I felt it necessary to dispel some myths I have heard about the proposed sales tax.

1. Having a one percent local sales tax will prevent property tax increases. False. Because we are not at our maximum property tax limit, the council can raise taxes in coming years and still collect sales taxes. No one has made any promises about the future stability of property taxes. It is also important to remember that property taxes are deductible from your income taxes, while sales taxes are not.

2. The money collected from the proposed sales tax will be used to restore library and transit services. False. No service restorations have been promised.

3. The proposed sales tax is less of a burden to low income individuals than an increase in property taxes because food and medicine are exempt. False. Low income individuals purchase many kinds of goods which are not exempt such as, but not limited to, heat, electricity, water and sewer, telephone, clothing, non-prescription drugs such as allergy medication or aspirin and non-foods such as toilet paper or shampoo.

4. Without a sales tax we will experience further cuts in city services. False. Further service cuts are one possibility, but they are not the only possibility. Citizen opinion will determine which budget balancing avenue the city will pursue.

Some individuals would like to scare us into believing that the only way to preserve the quality of life we enjoy in Iowa City is to impose a sales tax. Before you vote on Oct. 6 consider the facts. Vote no to the sales tax.

Anne Rawland

Best option

To the Editor:

A number of our state legislators fought for years to give municipalities the flexibility to solve their financial problems through local option taxes. The only one we could pass was the local sales tax.

I plan to vote for the sales tax referendum. As more communities adopt the one cent increase, the less likely it becomes that the state legislature will impose a state-wide increase.

This is the best mechanism available for capturing some local revenue from the use of city services, but it will pay local property taxes.

Poor parking

To the Editor:
During the football game Saturday, cars were parked on eight of the 16 tennis courts to the south of Kinnick Stadium.

The cars reportedly belonged to members of the press corps covering the game. Regardless of who owns them, cars don't belong on tennis courts. In the fall these courts are heavily used. And even if there are only a few players using the courts on a football Saturday, the cars do serious damage.

Saturday's damage, I was told, was light — just some grease spills that were washed off Sunday morning. Nevertheless, the grinding of front wheels being turned can tear up the surface of the courts badly. When the ground is wet and soft the cars' weight can crack and deform it.

The convenience of a few privileged fans or reporters is not worth the tens of thousands of dollars it costs to repair these courts. Yes, some of the courts already need resurfacing, but in the meantime why make them worse?

Warped priorities

To the Editor:
The Daily Iowan reported Monday that the UI plans to put a "temporary" parking lot on the field south of the Union. Given the perennial parking problem at the UI, I'm extremely skeptical that it will be temporary. It's more likely that the UI will eventually give in to pressure to make it a permanent lot.

I noticed the article made no mention of the consideration of alternative transportation. Who are the people who currently park in the lot north of the Union where the Laser Center is to be built? Do most of them live in Iowa City or Coralville? If so, why can't they take the bus until the new Bloomington Street parking ramp is built? Those who commute from out of town could use the smaller proposed lot on Market Street.

The current plan seems an example of warped priorities. The field south of the Union is an integral part of the UI's aesthetic environment. Alleviation of parking problems doesn't justify its destruction. Finally, there's the cost element. It seems foolish to spend $300,000 to $500,000 on a lot supposed that is supposed to last "about a year" — unless, of course, it's really expected to last longer.

Michael W. Chapin

A proposal

To the Editor:
I am very much opposed to the decision to pave temporarily parts of Union Field, as well as the lots west of Old Brick and south of the Main Library. And I believe we have another option.

The project to pave Union Field will cost between $300,000 and $500,000, but will only create 200 spaces. That's at least $1,500 per space for a little more than a year. I'm sure there are 200 members of the UI faculty and staff who would give up their parking spaces for a year or two for $500 to $1,000. Let's pay drivers to give up their spaces and save the university a lot of money while we're at it.

I have sent this proposal to UI Interim President Richard Remington and UI Parking and Transportation Director David Ricketts. Hopefully, they will seriously consider it. Many people consider Union Field an important part of campus.

Robert M. Hogg

Scalp them

To the Editor:
Recent actions by so called "fans" of the band U2 have led me to believe the band's words and messages are falling on deaf ears.

The band has consistently spoken for oppressed people of the world — lashing out at injustice everywhere. Anyone who has been a U2 fan for more than a week realizes that the band's message is that of helping your fellow human beings, not of getting rich quickly.

But greed is exactly what drove hundreds of people into a shoving, pushing, mob last Friday, just so they could get a number in order to buy tickets. These tickets will mostly be sold for a substantial profit later on.

It would be reasonable to assume that if the band members knew what was going on and of the extent to which people are making money off their work, they would have no interest in playing here.

Fortunately, there is something we can do about these scalpers; boycott them. The only way to get to these people is through their pocketbooks. By waiting until the show draws nearer, those wishing to buy tickets will find these scalpers selling the tickets much cheaper than if you buy now. You can possibly send the money you will save by doing this to Amnesty International.

Mob of fans

To the Editor:
I was one of the 1,100 people who waited in line Friday at the Union to receive a line number for the U2 concert. The DI headline Monday morning claiming we "stormed the Union" was misleading and false.

In fact, we couldn't have stormed anything even if we had wanted to. For nine hours concert officials kept us waiting outside the Union doors and offered no information as to when we could receive numbers. The line was allowed to grow in size throughout the day until it became a mob and those near the front could hardly breathe. The Union Terrace was packed as tight as a sardine can and more than one reference was made to The Who concert in Cincinnati where several people were crushed to death trying to get good seats.

I'm wondering just what the point was in letting the crowd grow to such an unmanageable size? Why didn't officials open the ticket office at noon when some semblance of an orderly line remained? Instead, officials like Kevin Taylor risked the safety of hundreds of us by letting the situation get so far out of hand and asking us to form an "orderly line" before we would be allowed in. This was an impossible request by that point. In my opinion, UI concert officials need to re-examine their system of "safe" ticket distribution and find a way to deal with concert goers as human beings, not as cattle crowded into a ring until they care to open the gate.

Poor judgment

To the Editor:
The photo of Young Americans for Freedom members which adorns the front page of The Daily Iowan on Wednesday is misleading and reflects poor editorial judgment. It gives the impression that YAF had a large presence at the rally against U.S. policy in Central America. In fact, only six or seven YAF members attended the rally. The photo emphasizes their presence and ignores the crowd of perhaps 200 which attended the rally to call for an end to U.S. oppression in Central America.

Broad support for the liberation of Central America is the major story of the rally. The minuscule right-wing reaction is not. Also misleading is Jeff Hart's claim that denial of his access to the microphone was similar to abridgement of free speech in Nicaragua. That is not true. Rather, it was inappropriate for him to speak — just as it would be inappropriate for Republicans to seize the microphone at a Democratic fund raiser.

If YAF wants a public forum, they should put time, effort and money into arranging their own rally and not parasitize the efforts of groups they oppose.

Get it right

To the Editor:
I have two major complaints regarding your coverage of the "Days of Decision" rally held to protest further aid to the Contras and U.S. intervention in Central America.

First, though the article by Lisa Legge and John Bartenhagen accurately reported what was said by the three activists from Central America and the UI students who spoke, what was not reported was the fact that Jeff Hart of Young Americans for Freedom did speak. Either the two reporters failed to stay to the end of the rally to hear his ridiculous comments or they chose to misrepresent what occurred. It is unfortunately true that attempts were made to keep him from speaking, but he did speak. I heard his hypocritical words as well as the apt rebuttal from a speaker who followed him on the podium.

Secondly, if it was a "small group of counter protesters" (and it was) that was present, why did their photograph make the front page of the DI? What is the message this sends? How about a photo of the brave Central Americans who came to speak? How about a picture of their supporters who composed the vast majority of the crowd? Photos used in such a way create a false impression that the majority of people support Contra aid. Poll after poll confirms the majority of the people of the United States do not support further aid to the Contras — do not support the murder and torture of a people who dare to try to choose their own form of government.

As journalists and editors, I think you have a responsibility to accurately report the news. Know that your failure in this regard is blatantly obvious and I am sure you will hear about it until you get the story straight.

Balanced education

To the Editor:
This is a reply to the letters written by Dean Witford (The Daily Iowan, Sept. 29) and Gary Beck (The Daily Iowan, Sept. 29). The "tirade" of articles against Rev. Taylor are important to fully inform the public about all the issues involved. If Taylor and home schooling are wonderful as you proclaim, they will stand on their own merits. If they do not, we may see and be able to correct some of the pitfalls of home schooling.

Beck alludes to current public schooling as being a place where children commit suicide, take drugs and learn about explicit sex. Those of us who are well-educated know that teen pregnancy, suicide and drug abuse never occurred when "children were taught Christian principles at home and there were fewer problems in society."

The naivete displayed by both authors is frightening. There are no easy answers to this issue. Most parents do not feel qualified to teach their children, especially in subjects as calculus, physics, chemistry, advanced literature and higher composition. These parents do not feel their children are receiving an inferior education because they attend public schools. I have a teaching degree, yet I would hesitate to deprive my children of the benefits of a variety of teachers and teaching styles, involvement in sports, theatre, student government and other areas that I would be unable to provide in a home school.

Finally, I would like to pose a question. What do we do about parents who have raised their children with "integrity, character and a healthy respect for authority" but do not meet Iowa's teaching standards? There must be minimum guidelines and standards for all to follow in order to ensure balanced education for children.

Religion and morality

To the Editor:
I was quite stunned at the assertions made by Craig Payne in his guest opinion (The Daily Iowan, Sept. 30). I vehemently oppose his claim that the "religious person" (whom he defines by the narrow constraints of the PTL) is the only person capable of strengthening and raising society's morals and that those who criticize the PTL affair "have no morals." According to Payne, this religious person is also the only one with the ability to contribute positively to society.

It follows from these assertions that every person's moral code is determined exclusively by his religious beliefs. It is impossible to reasonably hold that view. Most often religion is not even a determining force, much less a dictation of morality. It is just as ridiculous to believe that religion has anything to do with a person's ability to contribute to society. What does this narrow, American conception of religion have to do with a person's ability to become a successful engineer or his decision not to murder and rape? Not a thing.

According to his opinion, we are also to believe that the men who wrote our constitution and created a "workable democratic society" had a moral view just like that of the PTL and thought adultery wrong. Well, here again he is mistaken. Thomas Jefferson, who was one of the greatest inventors (and therefore contributors) of our time as well as a writer of the constitution, is well known to have had affairs with his slaves. George Washington was also an open adulterer. Having the views of the PTL, or any religion, is totally independent of beliefs in democracy, freedom or justice.

We're out to win you over.

Hardee's is more than simply a good place to eat. It's also a great place to work.

More than 73,000 students work at Hardee's across the nation. And they're doing a lot more than flipping burgers and sweeping floors. They're also learning. Learning about business and people. Learning about working together as a team. And learning a sense of responsibility and a strong sense of values... two very important tools that can help open doors to future possibilities, no matter what career they choose.

They're building a job history and gaining valuable experience, and they're earning money for things like their college educations and their futures.

So you see, burgers aren't everything at Hardee's. We're out to win you over in more ways than one.

retailers I have spoken to are opposed to the sales tax on the grounds that it will hurt their ability to be competitive with retailers in other areas.

"On the other hand, land developers and other companies with interest in land are concerned about the property tax increase that may follow if the sales tax fails," Sierk added. "It's a really difficult issue to take a position on."

Opponents and proponents of the sales tax are gearing up for the final days before the vote by trying to educate people on their side of the issue.

IOWA CITY Citizens Committee on City Revenues Chairman Craig Willis, a strong supporter of the sales tax, said pro-tax forces are trying to get their side out through speeches and informational pamphlets.

"Aside from speaking, we're mostly utilizing a person-to-person kind of program to get the word out," Willis said. "We also are taking out newspaper advertisements and distributing pamphlets on the issue."

Willis said he and other supporters of the tax are making an all-out effort because of concern over what will happen if the tax fails.

"I really do worry that if the tax isn't passed, there will be some kind of compromise worked out which will result in the cutting of city services," he said.

BUT WILLIS SAID he can't predict whether the tax would pass. "There is no way I would make that kind of prediction," Willis said. "It's hard to tell which way it will go right now."

Iowa City developer Mace Braverman, an opponent of the tax, said anti-tax groups have also made an effort to inform voters on what they see as the negative aspects of the tax.

"I think there's been a general distribution of literature and information," Braverman said. "I really can't answer how extensive the effort has been."

Braverman also predicts a close vote on Oct. 6.

"I'd say the chances it will pass are about 50-50," Braverman said. "I would hope it would fail, but it's hard to predict what will happen."

than a sales tax," he said. "Sales tax is absolutely the wrong way to go."

Wilhelm's report examined sales taxes and homeowners' property taxes, he said, while excluding taxes on commercial, industrial and multi-unit dwelling properties. The resulting statistics could be used in support of either side of the sales tax issue, he said.

"I could easily see where someone would pick up the study and come to that conclusion (in favor of a sales tax). But that conclusion is erroneous," he said.

UI Student Senate President Joe Hansen also spoke out during the lecture against the sales tax, saying he opposes the sales tax because it will unfairly burden students.

"I THINK THE community is looking at the 30,000 students in this university as a means of paying their bills," he said.

One reasonable alternative to the sales tax might be a two-year increase in property taxes, Hansen said, that would give citizens time to pressure the state Legislature into reforming state income tax.

Wilhelm said a sales tax increase would not be necessary if the state Legislature would follow the federal government's lead in reforming the tax structure.

"The Sorry State of State Taxes" report included a listing of 15 states, called "The Filthy Fifteen," with the highest combined sales and property taxes, he said, adding that Iowa was on the list.

Iowa's state income tax rate ceiling of 13 percent is among the highest in the nation because it provides loopholes for upper-income citizens that make 40 percent of their total incomes tax exempt, Wilhelm said.

"It's an outrage — It's not consistent with this state's politics," he said. "It's something the people need to stand up and get mad about."

Following the New York stop on the first official day of the campaign, Robertson moved his campaign to New Hampshire and Texas.

Later Thursday in Manchester, N.H., Robertson said he was unruffled by the New York hecklers. "The group that was doing the heckling down there," he said, "was apparently a gay-lesbian group from what I understand. Any group that would heckle the Star Spangled Banner ... I don't really have any problem about them heckling me." ROBERTSON, WHO surrendered his multimillion-dollar evangelical broadcast empire to run for president, sounded familiar themes in decrying the nation's high divorce rate and high drop-out rates among high-school students.

ties. Dowling said such a plan would be workable, adding cooperative education programs — in which students earn both a salary and academic credit while working at jobs in their field — should be explored as a means of student aid.

Reck and Dowling — speaking to the committee on behalf of United Students of Iowa — also briefly addressed a trust fund plan for the prepayment of tuition, saying such a plan should be explored, but not instituted until its problems are worked out.

Reck said the trust fund plan, in which parents would begin paying on their child's college tuition while the child is still young, should not be used as a replacement for financial aid, because low-income families would not be able to participate since it is an investment program.

"When you have no money to put into a program, you simply don't put it in," he said.

"I believe there is substantial question as to how he (Bork) would apply fundamental principles of constitutional law," said Specter.

Nevertheless, the fiery rhetoric from the White House over the last two weeks seemed to burn cooler as undecided senators got off the fence Thursday to stand on the anti-Bork side.

WHITE HOUSE spokesman Mar-

Wednesday, Baker teased Cranston, calling him "the worst counter in the United States Senate today."

Thursday, Cranston sent a telegram to Baker: "Johnston, Pryor, Sanford — all Democrats from the South and all against Bork. That's what I expected. Specter, a Republican from the North, also against Bork. I'm now up to 50. What are you down to?"

running back and Heisman Trophy candidate Lorenzo White.

THIS SEASON, WHITE has had a less than phenomenal year for a Heisman hopeful. He gained 84 yards rushing last week against the Seminoles, roughly his season average, and will be looking for a repeat of his performance, in Iowa City two years ago.

In that game, White tore apart the Iowa defense, rushing for 233 yards, primarily on end-around sweeps.

Last year in East Lansing, Mich., White left the game with a knee injury that forced him to miss the Spartans' next two contests. He gained only 41 yards, his lowest rushing total in 19 starts.

Iowa's counters with Kevin Harmon and David Hudson, a compatible duo of backs who have been running consistently all season. Harmon, well on his way to a 1,000-yard season, has tallied 397 yards on 76 carries for one TD and a 5.2 average. Hudson is averaging 5.1 yards a carry, most of which has been gained straight through the middle.

LEADING THE IOWA offense

will be sophomore quarterback Dan McGwire. Iowa Coach Hayden Fry stopped playing the quarterback shell game and decided to settle on one signal-caller.

"Dan has reached maturity now, obviously, or we wouldn't have (played) him in the Kansas State game," Fry said. "He's chompin' at the bit; he wants to play a full game."

McGwire will be countered by Michigan State's Bobby McAllister, a senior whose best performance this season came against the Fighting Irish when he passed for 208 yards and one touchdown while completing 10 of 18 passes.

In doubles competition, two Hawkeye teams remain in the winner's bracket.

Willard and Elizabeth Canzoneri handily defeated Sullivan-Uhll of Notre Dame, 6-3, 6-0, in the first round. They advanced to the third round with an afternoon victory over Nagle-Circle of Tennessee, 6-3, 4-6, 6-0.

Stewart hopes to reverse her spikers' luck

By Anne Upson
The Daily Iowan

After suffering a loss against Minnesota Wednesday night the Iowa volleyball team faces competition on the road against Western Michigan Friday and Notre Dame Saturday.

Iowa Coach Sandy Stewart doesn't want the Hawkeyes' recent loss to affect their playing ability.

"We need to bounce back mentally and to have a positive attitude. The team should not get depressed and let the recent loss get to them," Stewart said.

Western Michigan, who qualified for tournament last season, has two top returning players in Lise Martin and Lynda McLean.

MARTIN, A SENIOR left side-hitter, was the 1986 Mid-American Conference's Player-of-the-Year. She ranks among the nation's top 15 hitters for the second consecutive season in a row.

McLean, also a senior left side-hitter, was named to the Mid-

American Conference all-academic team for the second straight season.

Stewart said the Broncos' program is impressive.

"Their program is up and coming. They have done very well," Stewart said.

The Hawkeyes' next opponent this weekend is 11-3 Notre Dame.

Fightin' Irish Coach Art Lambert was vague about his team's performance.

"I am unclear as what to expect from the team. We seem to play in spurts. We play well then we play poorly then we play well again," Lambert said.

Lambert attributes his team's inconsistency to its lack of a big star.

"No one is truly outstanding. We are a collective team. This sometimes leads to our failure," Lambert said.

Cards drop Expos for NL East crown

By Mike Tully
United Press International

ST. LOUIS (UPI) — The St. Louis Cardinals clinched their third National League East title in six years Thursday night, riding Danny Cox's five-hitter and Dan Driessen's two-run double to a 8-2 victory over the Montreal Expos.

The Cardinals not only eliminated Montreal but also dethroned the champion New York Mets, some of whom watched at Busch Stadium.

Before a crowd of 48,763, Driessen doubled into the right-center gap in the fourth inning, snapping a 1-1 tie and sending the Cardinals to the NL playoffs against the San Francisco Giants.

Cox, 11-9, pitched his second complete game and tied Bob Forsch and Greg Mathews for most wins on the staff. Jay Tibbs, 4-5, lasted only three innings and took the loss.

With the score 1-1 in the fourth, St. Louis strung three hits together to swing the game its way. Ozzie Smith doubled off the glove of third baseman Tim Lincecum and advanced on Tom Herr's single.

DRIESSEN, ACQUIRED from the minor leagues Aug. 31, then drove a 1-0 pitch between center fielder Herm Winningham and right fielder Mitch Webster, scoring both runners. Driessen added a sacrifice fly in a five-run seventh inning and made three good plays in the field.

In the seventh, the fans began to wave the white shirts they received on T-shirt night. They also extended some hospitality to their guests, chanting "Go home Mets."

Most of the sellout crowd, virtually all wearing Cardinal red, stood in the ninth. Its enthusiasm was not diminished by Tim Lincecum's solo homer, his 25th.

Thus ended one of the most rigorous pennant chases in St. Louis history. The Cardinals wasted most of a 10 1/2-game bulge, but never relinquished the lead they took 134 days ago.

Iowa defends Big Ten title

By G. Hammond-Kunke
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa Hawkeyes begin defense of their Big Ten field hockey championship when they play Purdue today and No. 20 Michigan on Saturday. Both games will be held at Orchard Field in West Lafayette, Indiana.

Iowa, currently ranked No. 8 nationally, has won or shared the Big Ten field hockey championship four of the last five years. In 1983 and 1985 Iowa shared the title with Northwestern.

"We're ready to play," Iowa Coach Judith Davidson said. "After being embarrassed last weekend, we're out to get back on our winning way."

The Hawkeyes are coming off a disappointing trip to Norfolk, Va., last weekend, where they beat James Madison College 1-0 but lost to North Carolina and Old Dominion by a combined score of 10-1.

LAST YEAR IOWA nipped Purdue, 1-0 in West Lafayette. Orchard Field has a grass surface.

"They are always tough on their home field," Davidson said. "It's always hard (because) it's a different kind of game. We have to run differently. We have to hit the ball harder and our team does not hit the ball hard. Purdue is always tough against us."

Judith Davidson

Purdue, 4-3, is undefeated at home, beating St. Louis (4-0), Kent State (2-0), Notre Dame (5-0) and Southern Illinois (3-0). However, on the road is another story for the Boilermakers. They are losers to Penn State (2-0), Villanova (4-2) and Temple (4-1).

"We've played better at home this year," seven-year Coach Nancy Cross said. "We're a real young team but we're not going to be in total awe of Iowa. We have to be concerned with our game and can't be flustered with whoever we're playing."

LAST SEASON THE Boilermakers were 12-6-2 and finished in a second-place tie in the Big Ten standings with powerful Northwestern, but it was the Wildcats who got the second NCAA tournament bid. Despite a 1-12 career record against Iowa Coach Judith Davidson, Cross has confidence that Purdue can upend the Hawkeyes.

"We respect Iowa, but of course we have a chance of beating them. At the same time I'd have to say our chances of winning the Big Ten would be a longshot at best," Cross said.

Purdue, which lost seven starters from last year's team, is led by senior forward Karen Andrews (5 goals, 4 assists) and sophomore mid-fielder Kate Foley (6 goals). First-year player Louise Hendershott (3 goals, 3 assists) and junior mid-fielder Leah Finkbinder (1 goal, 6 assists) have provided the Boilermakers with ample scoring.

MICHIGAN HAS BEEN the biggest surprise in the Big Ten with its 8-0-1 mark and first-ever appearance in the Top 20. Last season the Wolverines finished last in the Big Ten with a 1-8-1 record, 9-11-1 overall.

Senior Tricia Mondul (7 goals, 2 assists) is the top scorer and team leader, according to fourth-year Michigan Coach Karen Collins. Mondul, who has great game sense and is extremely dangerous in the open field, was the recipient of this week's Big Ten field hockey Player-of-the-Week.

Sophomore Judy Burinskas (4 goals, 4 assists) is a fine stick-handler and is the defensive anchor of the Wolverines.

IOWA NOTES

• Davidson has a 23-1 record against Purdue and Michigan. Last season Iowa defeated Purdue 3-0 and 1-0 (in West Lafayette). The Hawkeyes beat Michigan 2-0 and Want a little 'pizzazz' with your morning breakfast?

No, not pizza. 'pizzazz.' Want it or not, we have it for you with this week's On The Line guest picker.

There is no logic involved here but straight to you from Raleigh, N.C., is North Carolina State Athletic Director and Head Basketball Coach James "Jimmy" Valvano.

Valvano, 41, is one of those guys with a sexy eastern-southern accent who puts spunky life into the word effervescence. The likeable native of The Bronx put North Carolina State basketball back on the top of the world (The Wolfpack also won the NCAA title in 1974 with a 30-1 slate under the guidance of Norm Sloan) with his rendition of cardiac kids. North Carolina State won four of the six NCAA tourney games by two points or less.

VALVANO, WHO HAS a career record of 282-183, (145-85 at State) was honored nationally four times as 1983 Coach-of-the-Year. Coach "V," as he came to be known, performed a coaching clinic throughout the 1983 tournament as the Wolfpack pulled upset after upset — nurtured by the confidence of Valvano.

Valvano displayed his knack for being confident, cocky, overture of himself, if not downright arrogant, in regard to this week's On The Line contest.

Valvano said he didn't need to pick

Actually, Valvano, who is entering his eighth year at State, came home two days early from his recruiting trip just so he could study the games and be the best picker in the history of the contest.

The eclectic Valvano not only doubles as athletic director and basketball coach, he's been a broadcaster and an author. After the 1983 season, Valvano wrote "Too Soon To Quit," printed by Coman Publishing Company, Durham, NC. The book contains some of Valvano's best one-liners.

Another honor for the rapid-talking New York native includes selection to the exclusive 45-member Statue of Liberty Centennial Commission. Valvano is one of only two sports figures to be so appointed — the other being Baseball Commissioner Peter Ueberroth.

VALVANO, WHO IS a hair-raising speaker, is also one of just two sports figures who is available for booking through the elite Washington Speakers Bureau. The other is Notre Dame football coach Lou Holtz.

"I ask our young people to be three things," Valvano said. "I ask them to be the best students they can be, to be the best athletes they can be, and to be the best people they can be. If we can accomplish these three goals, then we're going to be successful, regardless of the outcome of a basketball game."

Valvano is married to the former Pamela Levine of New York City. They have three daughters, Nicole, Jamie, and Lee Ann.

Bills players deny report

ORCHARD PARK, N.Y. (UPI) — The striking Buffalo Bills denied a published report Thursday that said the players voted this week to end their walkout.

"Not the 45 guys I'm working with," veteran nose tackle Fred Smerlas said. "It's misinformation. It never happened and it's never been discussed."

The report, in Thursday's Rochester Times-Union, quoted a source close to striking Bills as saying they had voted Tuesday to end their walkout. The newspaper said it was not known when the players would return.

Intramural golf, flag football winners, results announced

By Hugh Donlan
The Daily Iowan

Last Sunday proved to be an ideal day for the coed golf tournament at Finkbine.

"Everybody who played had a great time," Recreational Services graduate assistant Jim Anderson said.

The nine-hole event was won by the team of Jim Nemmers and Sara Nemmers with a score of 45. Tom Brewer and Lisa Rozenboom were two shots behind the champions at 47. Lee Van Donselaar and Joy Morrison finished third with a score of 48.

The greatest distance after two shots was won by Colleen Peterson and Bill Riker. Laurie Hartstock and Gary Idle had the fewest putts.

Here is a roundup of other intramural action and a look at some upcoming events:

• We've all been waiting for them and here they are — the rankings for flag football. In men's independent play, Imprinted Sports Wear holds the top ranking, followed by BSD and the Franchise, No. 2 and No. 3. The remainder of the top ten is Unit, Speed, the Sophists, Ten Dips and Dad, Empyemas, Old Mill and Neon Knights.

The top residence hall teams are The Quad Squad, Stallions, Currier W100, Flip Flops and White Snake. Coed rankings have Dionysus on top followed by Choppin' Broccoli (the leading contender for the all-name team), Cow Tipper, DSD and Team Xerox. In women's action Delta Zeta holds the top spot while Chi Omega, Gamma Phi and Alpha Phi trail close behind.

Again, Recreational Services would like to inform those teams that are having trouble making scheduled games to please inform Recreational Services 24 hours in advance. Games can be rescheduled or a default can be issued rather than a forfeit.

• The canoe race results are in. In social fraternity competition, the team of John Spesia and Jay Ennis of Phi Kappa Psi took first. Brian Smith and Greg Christensen of Lambda Chi Alpha followed in second and Bern Hoffman and Troy Johnson, also of Phi Kappa Psi, finished in third.

The women's races were won by Colleen Flanagan and Theresa Rhomberg, the Penthouse Playthings. The Chi Omega team of Michelle Lindler and Shelly Milehanun ended in second and the Main Rejects, Terry Osborne and Leah Soukup, finished third.

The most exciting race was in the men's all-U paddle-off where Brian Smith and Greg Christensen won the championship in a last-second surge. Kelly's Heroes, Ian McClellan and Bryan Gregory, took second and the Phi Kappa Psi duo of Hoffman and Johnson finished third.

• The entries for inner-tube water polo are due Oct. 9. "It's a blast," Recreational Services graduate assistant Dave Hall said. "One of the most fun events we run," he added. There will be a practice session Oct. 11 and action will begin Oct. 18.

• Entries for coed volleyball are due Oct. 5 at 4 p.m. and the tournament begins Oct. 7. There is a $10 entry fee and a $10 forfeit fee.

• Sign-up for the men's field goal contest is underway and will continue until Oct. 14. The kicking contest will be held at Kinnick Stadium Oct. 18. All eligibility rules apply.

• If you would like more information on any of these events contact Recreational Services at 335-9292 or stop by Field House Room E216.

Intramurals is a weekly feature in The Daily Iowan. If you would like information published contact Hugh Donlan at the DI sports desk, 335-5848.

Harriers head for Minnesota

By Eric J. Hess
The Daily Iowan

Before the season began for the women's cross country team, Iowa Coach Jerry Hassard had an Oct. 3 meet at Stanford on his calendar.

Hassard indicated a wish to move up to a new level in national competition with the meet in Stanford and a meet two weeks later in Virginia. But now the 20th-ranked Hawkeyes have opted for a twist in the schedule.

Iowa, which will keep its commitment to the Virginia meet, travels to Minnesota for a 21-team meet Saturday, the Minnesota-GBS Invitational at the Les Bolstad University of Minnesota Golf Course on a 5,000-meter course. Starting time is set for 11:45 a.m.

"The No. 1 reason," Hassard said of the change, "was that I don't feel our team is at full strength."

HASSARD SAID THE Hawkeyes may have run into an "ambush

Cross Country

situation" if they had attended the Stanford meet in which several of the top 20 teams are expected to be in attendance.

Hassard said he fears many of West Coast teams may have overcome the Hawkeyes on essentially their home turf and then disallow any chance for the Hawkeyes to challenge them again. Instead those teams would choose to lay low and flourish in the rankings.

"With us not at full strength, I think it's a big gamble," Hassard said, noting that two or three runners are not at their peak conditioning level.

The Hawkeyes are looking for an at-large bid to the NCAA cross country meet in November. Only one team per region gains an automatic berth, and No. 1-ranked Wisconsin figures to win the honor in Iowa's region of the country.

JOINING 17TH-RANKED Minnesota and Iowa at the meet is 18th-ranked Nebraska, Iowa State, Eastern Michigan, Missouri, Northern Iowa, St. Thomas (Minn.), Wisconsin-LaCrosse, North Dakota, North Dakota State, Southwest Missouri, Wisconsin-Milwaukee, Wisconsin-Stevens Point, St. Cloud, Virginia Tech, Marquette, Wisconsin-Eau Claire, Wisconsin-Parkside and Mankato State.

Sophomore Kim Schneckloth, who did not run in Iowa's fourth-place finish last meet at Iowa State, said she'll be ready for the meet after recovering from an injury to her right ankle during a practice at Finkbine Golf Course.

Schneckloth also said the change in the schedule from the Stanford meet to the Minnesota meet was made early this past week.

"We just thought that would be the smart move to make," she said.

If either quarterback elects to put the ball in the air, both will have a deep threat in the form of Michigan State's Andre Rison and Iowa's Quinn Early.

Rison, who has 11 receptions for 224 yards and one touchdown, will definitely be on Fry's mind.

"HE RUNS REAL fast," Fry said. "Rison is in the same class as some Tennessee players. He's a speed merchant; he can fly."

Another player who can fly is Early, who has a knack for getting open deep — as any fast receiver should — but he also hangs onto the ball after catching it. His 33-yard TD reception against Northwestern year is the longest scoring pass in school history.

Defensively, Michigan State linebacker Percy Snow is averaging just under 13 tackles a game, fourth in the Big Ten.

"They run the Pittsburgh Steelers defense, and from looking at scores the past couple of years, they do a better job than the Steelers," Fry quipped.

well and this is a tough course. You get into a string of bad luck, I think. It's just hard to mentally get out of that."

THOMASON SAID the difficult greens on New Mexico Golf Course gave her golfers plenty of problems, and added to their frustration.

"We thought Ohio State's greens were tough, but these are really tough," Thomason said. "They're very undulating. It's like putting in a funhouse. You think the ball is going to go one way and then it slopes the other way. It's frustrating."

Eight strokes ahead of the Hawkeyes is Iowa State (14th place), a team Iowa has outplayed throughout the fall season. But Thomason said her team can catch the Cyclones, and a few other clubs.

"We made all our mistakes today," Thomason said. "These next two days we really have to make no mistakes if we're going to get back into it, but I think we can get back into it."

THOMASON SAID going into the meet that because of the quality of the opposition Iowa's goal was an upper-division finish. The Hawkeyes are currently 12 strokes out of ninth place.

Individually, Shirley Trier led Iowa Thursday with a 79, followed by Amy Butzer (81), Stacey Arnold (82), Kelley Brooke (83) and Kris Heatherly (83).

Complete team scores after the first round are: New Mexico (297), Florida (297), Southern California (299), Brigham Young (304), Tulsa (307), Arizona (308), Louisiana State (310), New Mexico State (312), San Diego State (313), Texas Christian (316), Long Beach State (316), Texas Tech (316), Southern Methodist (317), Iowa State (317), Furman (318), Iowa (325), Wyoming (327) and Colorado State (354).

Upshaw says owners racist

By Will Dunham
United Press International

WASHINGTON — Union leader Gene Upshaw said Thursday the racist attitude of NFL management has stifled the negotiating process to end the players' strike but a chief strategist for the owners called Upshaw "a drowning man."

Upshaw's remarks came as the momentum in the strike showed signs of tilting toward the owners. Nine more players, including star running backs Tony Dorsett of the Dallas Cowboys and Tony Collins of the New England Patriots, crossed picket lines and returned to their teams.

Upshaw said unnamed management officials have tried to cast him as a black militant who has misled the 1,600-member union.

"I didn't want to say this, but I think they also have a lot of trouble with me. I was wondering when it would ever get to me and it has," Upshaw said at a news conference.

"IT'S GOTTEN TO the point now that they look at me as being a black. I'm militant, I'm hostile, I'm going to stop the stadiums, I'm going to do all of those things. When all else fails, that's the next avenue that they'll take — try to divide us along the lines of black versus white. That's something that I'm sure that the players are aware of," Upshaw said.

Tex Schramm, president of the Dallas Cowboys and a member of the owners' Management Council, said Upshaw's comments showed the union was weakening.

"Well, that's certainly grasping at straws," Schramm said. "It sounds like a drowning man in his own pool or something. Because I've known Gene Upshaw for 20 years and there's a lot of people who have known him for 20 years and have had high regard for him. I'm really surprised that he would relate a racial issue to himself, because that just isn't the Gene Upshaw that I have known."

Management Council also issued a prepared statement.

"THIS IS A labor dispute. Race has never been a factor in these negotiations," said Management Council spokesman John Jones. "Suggesting that this is anything more is an attempt to obscure the difficult economic issues, including free agency. The Management Council has always been willing to negotiate with the union."

Thursday's defections brought to at least 45 the number of union players defying the strike, 24 in the past two days.

UPSHAW, 42, IS the highest ranking black union official in the nation. The former Oakland Raiders offensive guard was inducted into the Pro Football Hall of Fame in August. He refused to identify which owners or league officials were making race an issue in the strike.

"I would much rather keep that confidential," said Upshaw, who departed the news conference to attend the funeral of his grandmother, who died earlier in the day.

The two sides have not met since last Friday, when a three-day bargaining session stalemated. The owners' negotiator, Jack Donlan, said no agreement could be reached on the players' demand for unrestricted free agency for players with more than four years of NFL experience.

FIVE MONTHS OF contract talks have failed to produce a new three-year collective bargaining agreement to replace the pact that expired Aug. 31. The players struck the league on Sept. 22 — the fifth strike in the past two decades and the first since the 57-day work stoppage in 1982. The owners will resume play starting Sunday with teams of free agents and dissident union players.

The other players who returned to work were: Denver center Billy Bryan and tackle Dave Studdard, New Orleans safety Antonio Gibson and rookie cornerback Gene Atkins, St. Louis running back Broderick Sargent and Los Angeles Rams quarterback Steve Dils and running back Charles White.

Dorsett reported to camp Thursday after receiving a letter from club owner Tex Schramm threatening a cutoff of a lucrative annuity from his contract.

'Real' Saints file suit to stop scab team

By Steven Watsky
United Press International

NEW ORLEANS — An attorney representing 13 starters of the striking New Orleans Saints filed suit Thursday alleging the team and management have hurt his clients by fielding a squad composed of "bogus imitators."

"The Saints will not be playing the (Los Angeles) Rams on Sunday," said John D. Rawls, who represents the 13 starters and nine other striking members of the team. "Somebody pretending to be the Saints will be trying to play somebody pretending to be the Rams. We consider that to be a travesty."

The plaintiffs in the suit include kicker Morten Andersen, line-backer Rickey Jackson, quarterback Bobby Hebert and running back Rueben Mayes.

RAWLS SPOKE AT a news conference after filing the suit in Orleans Civil District Court. He said he was seeking a temporary or permanent injunction to force team management to refrain from advertising the Saints would be playing — if the players continue their strike.

Team management should be forced "to issue disclaimers at all performances, in all advertising and on all tickets to the effect that 'the New Orleans Saints' will not be appearing," the players said in the suit.

The team also should be forced to refund all ticket money, according to the suit.

"It's just a classic example of 'bait and switch' — you have people buy tickets to see one group of people and then you stick in another group of people," Rawls said.

The suit claims Saints management has used the names and pictures of striking team members to sell tickets to Sunday's game against the Rams.

"The defendant has disparaged and continues to disparage the petitioners, alleging that certain bogus imitators and not the petitioners and their fellow local team members are 'the New Orleans Saints,'" the suit said.

Rawls suggested non-union and non-striking members of the Saints could be called the "New Orleans Scabbers," or some other name.

"They've (management) been saying 'come see the Saints play the Rams' but the real Saints are on strike," he said.

Gastineau scuffles with picketing teammates

HEMPSTEAD, N.Y. (UPI) — New York Jets defensive end Mark Gastineau, the lone strikebreaker from the regular team, scuffled with several of his striking teammates Thursday morning after he claimed they spit on him.

The incident took place at about 9:30 a.m. at an entrance to Hofstra University, site of the Jets practice facility.

Gastineau, who was accompanied in his car by an unknown female, claimed that when he opened his window to receive an entrance pass to the complex a player spit on him. He refused to indicate which player among the 20-25 Jets on the picket line it was.

He left his car and began to swing at the crowd, but the altercation was broken up quickly. No one would say who broke it up.

"My grandmother would have gotten out of the car," Gastineau said. "Their actions speak for themselves. I've always been behind the team 100 percent, and I know Mr. Hess (Jets owner Leon Hess) would never spit at me even if I had decided the other way (to strike)."

No charges were filed, according to police.

Minnesota stands alone atop Big Ten

By Kent McDill
United Press International

The Minnesota Gophers are the only unbeaten and untied team in the Big Ten as the conference season gets underway Saturday.

The Gophers went 3-0 through the non-conference season, beating Northern Iowa, California and Central Michigan.

"I think it is all irrelevant now that we are going into the Big Ten season," Minnesota coach John Gutekunst said. "We can only play who we have got (on the non-conference schedule). Now, it's a new season."

BUT THE GOPHERS are ready for the new season. Sophomore running back Darrell Thompson ranks second in the Big Ten in rushing, averaging 123.3 yards per game and leads the league in scoring with six touchdowns.

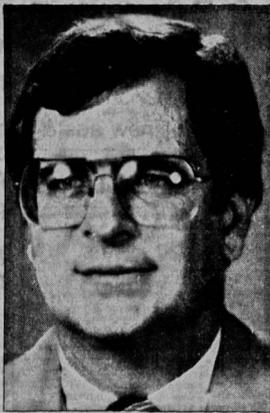

The Gophers start against Purdue, 0-2-1.

THE NINTH-RANKED Ohio State Buckeyes are unbeaten but were tied last week by Louisiana State 13-13. Ohio State plays Illinois in Champaign, Ill., on Saturday to kick off its chase for the Big Ten title.

In the seven games played between Illinois and Ohio State since Mike White and Earle Bruce became coaches at the schools, six games have been decided by seven points or less.

The 14th-ranked Michigan Wolverines may spend the rest of the season trying to put their loss to Notre Dame behind them. Since that opening loss, the 2-1 Wolverines have clobbered two opponents with a combined 93 points.

THE MICHIGAN defense, which had already lost tackle Brent White and linebacker Marc Spencer to injury, lost linebacker Andree McIntyre to an achilles tendon injury last week.

John Gutekunst
Michigan's opponent this week is 2-1 Wisconsin, which could show the Wolverines three or four quarterbacks in the game.

Also on tap Saturday is Northwestern, 0-2-1, against Indiana, 2-1. Hoosiers quarterback David Schnell threw for 316 yards and two touchdowns, both to flanker Ernie Jones, as Indiana beat Missouri last week. Schnell is now third in the nation in passing efficiency.

NBA players union files suit to end salary cap, bust 'trust'

By Frances Ann Burnes
United Press International

NEWARK, N.J. — The NBA Players Association, fighting for unrestrained free agency but saying it wants to avoid a strike like the one crippling the NFL, filed an antitrust suit Thursday against the league.

The suit charged that the college draft, right of first refusal and the salary cap, all standard elements of the collective bargaining agreement that expired at the end of last season, violate federal antitrust laws.

"This suit is being filed because the players believe the NBA, by unilaterally imposing these three restraints, is violating the antitrust laws," Players Association general counsel Larry Fleisher said. "The players believe the time has come to end these restraints."

RUSSELL GRANIK, Executive Vice President of the NBA and the league's chief negotiator, said the legality of those issues was resolved in the Leon Wood case.

"The issue is not a new one. We have been debating it for a long time," Granik said. "The courts have already found that the present system is very much legal."

In 1984 Wood, as a rookie with the Washington Bullets, filed a suit against the draft and the salary cap. A district court and appeals panel ruled the salary cap and draft were valid as part of the collective bargaining agreement.

Fleisher argues that the Wood case involves the old collective bargaining agreement and insists any new pact will not involve those issues. The suit was filed in U.S. District Court in Newark, in part because the union believes it will receive a speedy hearing there. Fleisher said he hopes for a decision within four to six weeks.

Sherman and Clayton antitrust laws. The union decided to file suit to avoid the work stoppage that has occurred in the NFL, Fleisher said.

"We do not foresee a strike," Fleisher said. "We are going to resolve this legally through the courts."

The named plaintiffs in the suit include Junior Bridgeman, president of the Players Association, and David Robinson, the No. 1 draft pick of the San Antonio Spurs. Also named are all rookies entering the league and the 275 NBA players.

THE PLAYERS' contract expired June 15, and talks between the NBA and the union are "going nowhere" with the start of the new season about a month away, he said. No new talks are scheduled.

The union filed suit hours after the expiration of a moratorium on legal action and the signing of rookies and free agents.

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A college graduate makes almost $900 more a month on average than a high school graduate, and professional degrees provide the highest average income of all — $3,871 a month, the Census Bureau said Thursday.

"In short," the report concluded, "the basic time-honored relationship between education and economic returns is clearly verified by these data."

The bureau, in a new study, "What's it Worth?" looked at the relation between educational background and economic status as of the spring of 1984 and also found continuing sharp disparities between males and females in their fields of study in college.

According to the new report, people with college degrees had an average monthly income of $1,910 in 1984, compared with a $1,045 average for those with only high school diplomas.

"Most degrees beyond high school have significantly higher income and earnings values associated with them than the next lower degree," the report noted. "In addition, the mean income and earnings measures for persons with only a high school diploma are in turn substantially larger than those for persons who did not complete high school."

Marsalis Quartet proves jazz force to contend with

By Kevin Goulding
The Daily Iowan

The Wynton Marsalis Quartet blew hot and cool at the beautifully renovated, 1930's art-deco style Adler Theatre in Davenport Tuesday night.

Playing before an enthusiastic audience of 1,900, Marsalis and his young quartet — Jeff "Tain" Watts, drums, Robert Leslie Hurst III, bass, and Marcus Roberts, piano — performed music primarily from their new album, Marsalis Standard Time, Volume I, a compilation of jazz standards. The quartet is relatively new (this album is their first), and Tuesday's concert demonstrated that this group will be elbowing its way into serious company among superior jazz ensembles.

Wynton Marsalis is the youngest, and second only, winner of Grammy awards in both jazz and classical categories for three years running: 1984, 1985 and 1986. Occasionally criticized for his "classical" treatment of jazz and overly precise style, most recently by the Chicago Tribune for his performance at this summer's Chicago Jazz Festival, Marsalis has stated, "Because I've played with orchestras and all that, some people think I'm a classical musician who plays jazz. They have it backwards: I'm a jazz musician who can play classical music."

Wynton Marsalis

Music

TUESDAY'S PERFORMANCE displayed Marsalis' masterful clarity and restraint, but also his passion, humor and virtuosity as well. His highlight of the show was a solo in the encore, unnamed and unrecognized by this reviewer, that had him visibly "passionate," he was blowing for all he was worth.

Other solo highlights included Duke Ellington's "Caravan," Jerome Kern's "Yesterday," and two Thelonius Monk compositions — "Blues Five Spot" and "Green Chimneys."

The performance had a dual appeal — Marsalis would lead off virtually every song and then turn it over to the band. As soon as Marsalis would finish he would walk and stand either behind the band or off to the side, occasionally heading offstage. In effect he was getting out of the group's way so that they could take off on their own. It was a display of confidence rather than an indifferent leave-taking. His confidence was well-placed.

PIANIST ROBERTS played with fluid grace and sparkling imagination. His solo of Duke Ellington's "In My Solitude" was so creatively handled that one couldn't even recognize it until well into the tune. Likewise, drummer Watts, playing with a driving aggressive fire, and bassist Hurst both displayed bold originality.

A highlight of the evening's show was the ease and humorous interplay of the group. It was an evening where, as an audience member, you could sense that the group felt "on." During the encore, bassist Hurst took off on an exciting extended solo. Marsalis was standing right behind him, tapping his feet, at rapt attention. He caught drummer Watts' eye and smiled and nodded in admiration several times.

Inspired by the young bassist's work, Watts followed immediately with a very inspired and wild solo of his own. All night long the group laughed and responded attentively to each other's music and it showed in their playing.

After a splendid 2 1/2 hour performance, and a thrilling encore in response to a standing ovation, Marsalis looked out at the appreciative audience, smiled, and said "Well, I guess that's it."

Gere movie still looking for extras

By Kevin C. Kretschmer
The Daily Iowan

Stuart Wolf, publicist for Farm of the Year, says the movie still needs people to appear in scenes as extras.

Richard Gere stars in the film which has been shooting in various locations around eastern Iowa over the last month. The film's director is Gary Sinise, a founding member of Chicago's Steppenwolf Theatre, who is making his debut in that capacity. The Harvest Film production also stars Kevin Anderson, Penelope Ann Miller and Helen Hunt who along with Gere are on location in Monticello through Sunday.

Extras are needed for the crowd scenes to be shot at the Great Jones County Fair grounds in Monticello. ### At the Bijou

Utú (1984) — New Zealand's strongest export to date, a turbulent epic focusing on historical violence between aborigines and white colonialists set in the late 19th century. Te Wheke, a Maori who scouts for the British, finds that the people of his own village — while friendly to the Europeans — have been senselessly slaughtered. Something in him snaps, and he raises his rifle pledging himself to a bloody, one-man revolution. Friday 7 p.m.

Psycho (1960) — Alfred Hitchcock's terrifying film about Norman (Anthony Perkins) and the Bates Motel. If you haven't seen the movie or don't know the story, shame on you. Friday 9 p.m.; Saturday 7 p.m.

Central America Trilogy — Each documentary deals with a different species of interest in Central America. The Real Thing — The interest is corporate, specifically, the labor relations at a Coca-Cola bottling plant in Guatemala. Witness to War — documents the work of Dr. Charlie Clements (recently at the U) as he works in the rebel-controlled zones of Guzapu, El Salvador. Waiting for the Invasion — The concern of American citizens living in Nicaragua is that the Reagan Administration might attempt a Grenada-style rescue mission on their behalf. Saturday 9 p.m.; Sunday 7 p.m.

Monty Python's Life of Brian (1979) — Proof of the depraved nature of all associated with a notorious gang of British comedians. Challenge the box office over the price of your tickets; go at risk of your soul; bring a resuscitator. Saturday 7:15 p.m.; Sunday 9:30.

West Side Story (1961) — Romeo meets Juliet and they sing and dance in the barrios of New York. Features a young Natalie Wood, Richard Beymer, George Chakiris, Rita Moreno and Russ Tamblyn. Saturday 9:15 p.m.; Sunday 6:45 p.m.

Padre, Padrone (1977) — Paolo and Vittorio Taviani's film, based on a newspaper report of a shepherd who lived in Sardinia until age 20, and then went on to become a professor of linguistics. The film possesses a stark visual style, 16mm format, and uses nonprofessional actors. Sunday 8:45 p.m.

Estevez and Dreyfuss make amusing team in 'Stakeout'

By Kevin C. Kretschmer
The Daily Iowan

At the end of Stakeout the first credit to appear reads "A John Badham Movie." Most filmgoers would probably not even note the significance of this line, but in this case it says something important about the director and his project.

Normally, that credit would read "A John Badham Film," the standard sign of serious intentions. Though this may seem a fine distinction, it means Stakeout has no pretensions about being anything more than entertaining.

Badham, the director of such films as Saturday Night Fever, Whose Life Is It Anyway?, Blue Thunder, WarGames, American Flyers and Short Circuit, rarely succeeds both critically and commercially with the same picture. It appears that he is now willing to sacrifice a positive critical judgment to make audience pleasers. To his "credit" this cop comedy-romance is definitely entertaining.

RICHARD DREYFUSS and Emilio Estevez star as Seattle police department detectives who, despite good intentions, seem to be only marginally successful in performing their job. When the partners are assigned by the FBI to stakeout the house of an escaped convict's girlfriend, the two believe they have pulled easy, but exceedingly dull duty. They balance the downside of the job by engaging in numerous quizzes on a variety of subjects and playing practical jokes on their fellow officers.

Everything is going reasonably well when Chris (Dreyfuss) unwittingly becomes involved with Maria McGuire (Madeleine Stowe), the subject of their stakeout. In the guise of a phone repairman, Chris bugs Maria's phone and then repeatedly, though unintentionally, runs into her over the next several days. One thing leads to another, and it is not long before Richard Dreyfuss on the left and Emilio Estevez on the right are detectives Chris Lecce and Bill Reimers in Stakeout. The film explores the comedic ramifications when observation becomes involvement.

Bill (Estevez) fears that Chris' activities may cost them both their jobs. Things are further complicated when Richard "Stick" Montgomery (Aidan Quinn) manages to elude the law as he makes his way toward Seattle.

THE ONLY REAL flaw in the film is the shift of tone between the sections that feature the Quinn character and those that feature Dreyfuss and Estevez. The beginning scenes of the prison break are incredibly brutal as are the scenes reintroducing "Stick," including the film's finale.

In this respect it closely resembles last year's Something Wild and the recent film The Pick-up Artist. Though this film works in spite of these jarring transitions, this new trend is not entirely appreciated.

Dreyfuss continues what has been described as an incredible comeback (from bad movies and drug addiction) with yet another role that allows him to play a wise-cracking, but lovable bumbler who gets in over his head. Even though he mercilessly plays to the audience with his repertoire of smiles, smirks and winks he does so with such mastery that one cannot help falling for his goofy charm.

Estevez, who like his partner sports a moustache, seems a Dreyfuss clone, except he looks a might too young to be a detective. Nevertheless, they play well together, creating an otherwise believable team.

STOWE, who has appeared in numerous stage and television roles, provides a pleasing presence in only her second big screen part. After success in The Mission, Desperately Seeking Susan, and the telefilm "An Early Frost" it is surprising to find Quinn in such a minor and thankless role. He seems to have escaped the sets of the harsh prison escape film Runaway Train and ended up wandering into this movie.

Stakeout is a late arrival to Iowa City; it has spent seven weeks at the top of the box office (the first five at No. 1). It is already a popular success, so it has accomplished its goal. Critically speaking, Stakeout is enjoyable, and that by itself is enough to ask of any movie — or film.

Labeques to play Sunday

By Laura Chadima
The Daily Iowan

Sunday night at 8 p.m. in Hancher, the exciting French duo-pianists Katia and Marielle Labeque will appear at Hancher Auditorium. The Labeques are well known for their adventurous programming as well as their compelling stage presence. They have performed in jazz clubs and on the "Tonight Show," as well as with the world's great orchestras.

The sisters began studying with their mother before attending the Paris Conservatoire. Rather than concentrating on formal, standard works of composers such as Mozart and Schubert, the Labeques decided to explore the music of Messiaen, Berio and Boulez.

In fact, the Labeques worked with Olivier Messiaen, recording his "Visions de l'Amen" in 1970. They have worked with Luciano Berio and pianist Alfred Brendel, as well.

Contemporary music has greatly influenced the Labeques and so has jazz. Katia Labeque learned jazz improvisation and how to play the synthesizer while she was a member of jazz/rock guitarist John McLaughlin's band. The Labeques have since continued to explore a full range of music.

THE LABEQUES' program for Duo Pianists Katia and Marielle Labeque will perform the music of George Gershwin when they play Hancher Auditorium.

their Hancher appearance is full of contrast. The first half will consist of "Three Andalusian Dances" by Infante and "Five Pieces" by the Spanish composer Isaac Albeniz.

The second half of the concert will feature "Rhapsody No. 2" and "Impromptu," by George Gershwin, as well as his popular tunes, "Our Love is Here to Stay" and "Embraceable You" arranged for two pianos.

The Labeques are very well known for their interpretations of Gersh-win's music and in 1980 recorded a gold record of "Rhapsody in Blue" and "Concerto in F." George Gershwin's brother, lyricist Ira Gershwin, was so impressed with their work that he invited them to his California home in 1982. The Labeques have since made a premiere recording of the original duo-piano arrangement of "An American in Paris."

Tickets to the Labeques are still available at the Hancher Box Office.

From the Pregame editors . . .

In this issue of The Daily Iowan's special football section, Pregame, all the interest, intrigue and imagination of Saturday's sold-out Big Ten clash at Kinnick Stadium between the Iowa Hawkeyes and the Michigan State Spartans have made it onto our pages.

Our "Where are they now?" segment provides a Nichol's worth of kicks over some Iowa football memories, accompanied by a feature tracing the roots of Michigan State's strong kicking game.

And then there's the story of Iowa's J.J. Puk, a linebacker who — get this — doesn't think too much of tackling. That's because he's more interested in making plays everyone remembers.

The Daily Iowan has taken to heart the adage, "You can't tell the players without a program." In that vein, we've established the lifeblood of a football game — a complete set of rosters, lineups and schedules for both teams.

This particular issue of Pregame wouldn't be worth the paper it's printed on if we didn't include a feature on Michigan State's Heisman Trophy candidate Lorenzo White. The slashing running back gained 233 yards against the Hawkeyes two years ago in Iowa City, but last year was held to less than 50 in an injury-shortened effort. Saturday's game will bring White closer to the NCAA career rushing record that becomes more of a reality with every handoff he receives.

On a more somber note, the Big Ten as well as the entire collegiate community mourned the loss of a coaching legend — Michigan State's Hugh "Duffy" Daugherty — the Spartans' helmsman for nearly two decades.

Be sure to make note of the moved-up kickoff time: Look for the pigskin to fly at 11:30 a.m.

If you have any comments, critiques, praise or suggestions about Pregame, do not hesitate to contact us.

— Marc Bona and Chris Wessling

Taking stock in Puk . . . . . 4

Iowa linebacker and co-captain J.J. Puk, who minimizes the task of tackling, leads his defensive teammates at that duty. But after this season he may not be doing it at all, as he plans to head into the stock market.

Kicking up a storm . . . . . 6

In this week's "Where are they now?" segment, former Iowa kicker Tom Nichol, the Hawkeyes' all-time scoring leader, is profiled. Also, the Michigan State kicking game — traditionally an incubator for great kickers — including Greg Montgomery, is featured.

Big Ten statistics . . . . . 15

For those of you who didn't have your statistical hunger slaked in the above story, there's plenty of Big Ten statistics to quell that rumbling.

Home field gives Iowa the edge

Every year, the Iowa-Michigan State football game is a well-played, tight contest. And when the 1-2 Spartans take on the 3-1 Hawkeyes Saturday at Kinnick Stadium, the two teams will treat fans to a great game.

In last year's contest, Michigan State quarterback Dave Yarema threw a fourth-quarter eight-yard touchdown pass to Mark Ingram, cutting Iowa's lead to 24-21.

Michigan State regained possession with just more than three minutes to play, but Yarema's attempt at a game-winning touchdown pass was intercepted by Iowa defensive back Ken Sims, sealing a heartbreaking loss for the Spartans.

This year, the Spartans, fresh off a 31-3 loss to Florida State a week ago, will lose again.

But not by much.

It will be old-time, grind-out-the-yardage, Bronko Nagurski-style football in the Big Ten opener for each school.

MICHIGAN STATE'S Heisman Trophy candidate Lorenzo White (see story, page 12) has not been the running force everyone thought he would be in 1987. He's great, but his season — so far — has not been. Although White is just 131 yards from the NCAA career rushing record, his 82-yard per game average is not spectacular for a highly touted Heisman hopeful.

Iowa's Kevin Harmon, who is just under the 100-yard mark per game with a rushing average of 98.5 yards, will counter White. Harmon's shoulder-faking and misdirectional running have propelled him from the shadow of older brother and former Hawkeye, Ronnie (now with the Buffalo Bills) and into Iowa's premier running back.

The Spartans' offense has sputtered after an opening 27-16 win against Southern Cal. They fell to Notre Dame two weeks ago, 31-8.

White will be a factor, but the true threat on the Michigan State side of the field will come from junior split end Andre Rison, who started every game last year for the Spartans.

AGAINST NOTRE DAME, Rison hauled in a 57-yard touchdown reception from quarterback Bobby McAllister. It was the only TD Michigan State has scored since the USC game.

Covering Rison will be a key factor in the game. Although young, the Iowa secondary, led by senior Kerry Burt, is gelling into a sound defensive backfield. Sophomore left corner Greg Brown is still inexperienced, though, as evidenced in the Iowa State matchup, where the Cyclones ran the first 14 plays of the game to his side. But senior Dwight Sistrunk and sophomore Merton Hanks add solid coverage at the free safety and right corner positions, respectively.

What will make the game interesting is having two quality running backs playing against defensive squads that shore up well against the run. The Spartans, going into last week's game, were allowing 2.4 yards a carry. The Hawkeyes are giving up slightly more than three yards a carry.

Both teams are close in ability, and the game will be tight. It comes down to one single factor — home-field advantage — that will win it for the Hawkeyes. Playing in front of 67,700 fans, most of them Iowans, will give the Hawkeyes the deciding edge.

Final score: Iowa 21, Michigan State 17.

4 Pregame Iowa vs. Michigan State

Puk keeps an eye on big plays, business

By Marc Bona
The Daily Iowan

Iowa linebacker J.J. Puk has a different opinion about tackling from most football players — he doesn't like it.

"I want to get the big play, an interception, something," he said. "Just tackling people doesn't cut it."

That's an odd thing to say for someone ranked among the Big Ten tackling leaders. Prior to the Kansas State game, Puk ranked ninth in the conference in tackles, averaging 9.25 tackles a game with 20 solos and 17 assists.

The 6-foot-3, 212-pound Puk graduated from Cedar Rapids Washington High School, where he set a school record for tackles in a season (134) and sacks in a game (four) while being named the most valuable defensive player. Despite the accomplishments, he never seems satisfied.

"I made the tackles (vs. Kansas State)," he said, "but I didn't make any spectacular plays . . . or cause a fumble or recover a fumble — I haven't done that yet this season. I'm trying to do that. That's my goal. Maybe I should start with lesser things, I don't know. A blocked punt would have been nice."

"I WANT TO MAKE the big plays. As far as tackling goes, that's what you've got to do. That's expected."

But Puk doesn't plan on making tackles — and big plays — all his life. Nearing a finance degree, Puk plans on entering the finite world of business. Even in post-game interviews, the Iowa native is a self-promotion, plugging himself as "hard-working and ambitious."

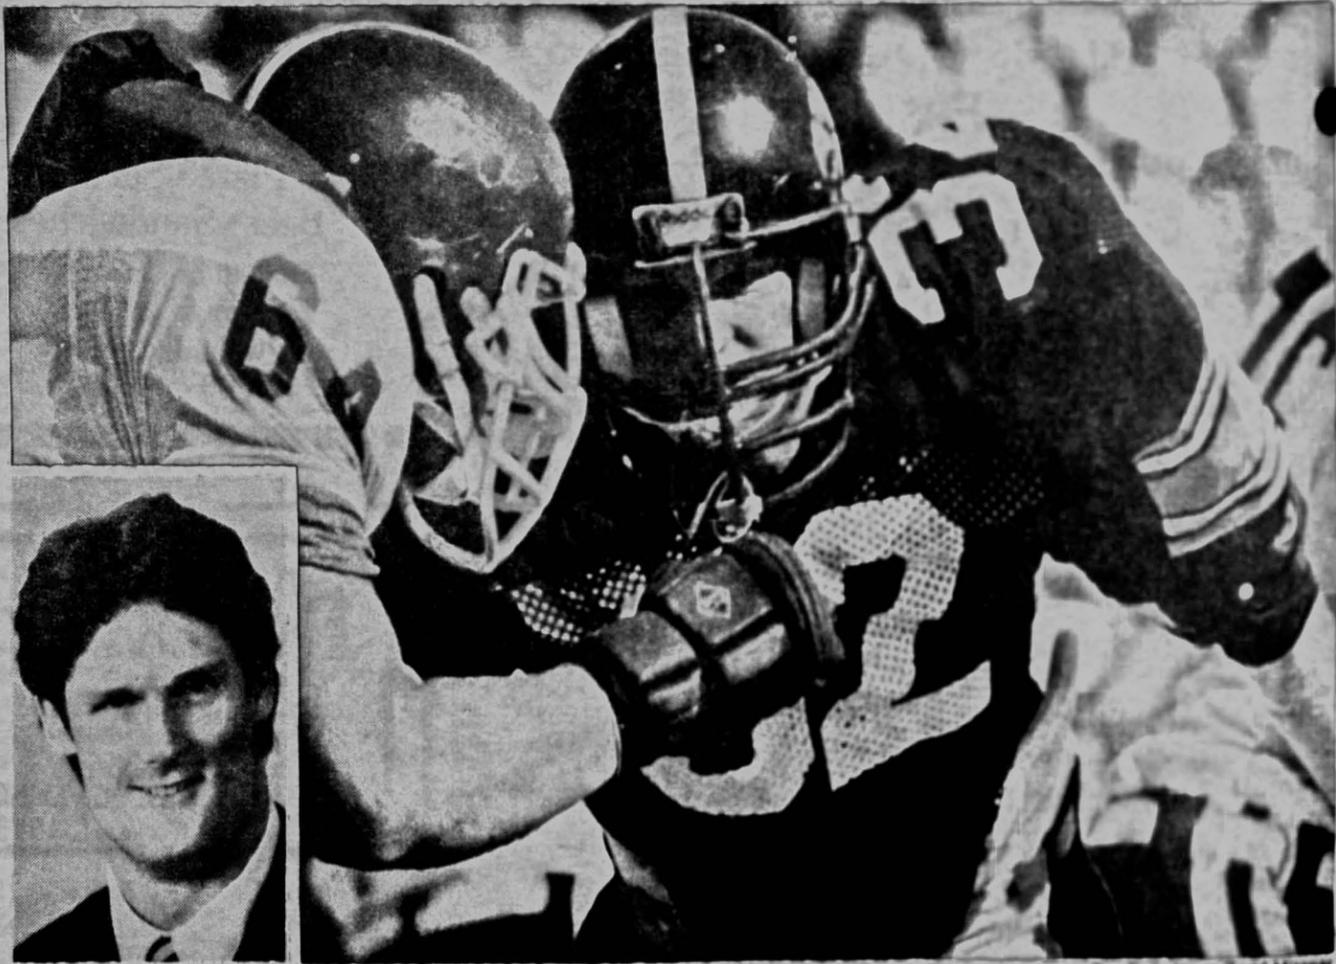

"I want to get involved in the (stock) market," Puk, who worked at Chicago's Board of Trade last summer, said. "It was definitely fast-paced. I've seen fights break out and people getting mad at each other. That's kind of nice. I might go to law school, but I want to work first. It's better than sitting around and writing papers all the time."

Sitting around is one thing Puk is definitely not doing.

Against Kansas State last week, Puk downplayed his accomplishments, including eight tackles.

"I was a little shaky — the defense let them score right there in the beginning — but we've just got to make sure that doesn't happen next week."

PUK'S AGGRESIVENESS and determination on the field couldn't have been any clearer than in last week's game. On the third play of the game, Puk stopped Kansas State tight end Kent Dean after a pass reception. On the next play, after fullback Rick Lewis broke through the Iowa defensive line, Puk nabbed him. Puk made his presence known once again on the next play, nailing running back Tony Jordan.

"As long as I keep being consistent, that's all I care about," he said. "That's all I want to do — keep improving."

In last week's game, Iowa was penalized for roughing Kansas State punter David Kruger, a call Puk waved his arms over and was obviously disgusted by.

"I didn't think I hit him," Puk said of the call. "I guess he was a good actor, and the ref gave it to him."

Puk, though, is glad just to have the opportunity to be called for a penalty. A shoulder injury kept him out of the '83 and '84 campaigns, but he competed as a reserve and special teams player last year, recording 36 tackles, and capped the season with an interception against San Diego State in the Holiday Bowl.

RECRUITED BY IOWA, Colorado, Minnesota, Iowa State and "a few Eastern schools," Puk chose Iowa to be different.

"I grew up with my brothers going to Iowa State," said Puk, whose younger brother, Kevin, is a senior tackle and linebacker at Washington.

"I grew up kind of wanting to do the opposite of what some people do, like my family members. I could have played with two of my brothers (David and Steve) at Minnesota, and it would have been pretty fun — that would have been neat — but I thought it was neater playing against them."

But J.J. — which stands for Jon James — set his heart on Iowa. "I always wanted to come to Iowa as long as I could remember," Puk said. "It's great to be a Hawkeye."

Puk's father played basketball for Marquette, but his sons opted for football. David Puk, who played for Minnesota from 1982-85, is in the process of applying to medical school and works as a research assistant in a bio-chemistry lab at Minnesota. Brother Steve, who is a salesman for Gallo wines in Minneapolis, earned a letter in 1984 while playing for the Gophers.

"IF J.J. NEVER would have gotten hurt," David Puk said, "he would have been awesome. He has it in his blood. He's crazy."

The injury Puk's brother alluded to was a shoulder injury stemming from a tackling dummy drill in practice. The injury, which originally required minor surgery, turned into a major reconstruction of Puk's left shoulder.

"The one thing is he doesn't give up," David said. "It comes from injuries. I can see it when he plays; you can tell he plays with pain."

"It was hard for him to sit back and watch everybody (while sitting out). He just hated it. He's gonna make up for all those memories he's lost."

"I wish he would have played last year," David said.

He added younger brother J.J. will jump at the chance to play professional football if it arises. "When I told him the day I decided to pass it (professional football) up, he about chewed my head off. He would die for that day."

J.J. PUK'S HEART for the game was earned on his own, but the talents came partly by way of two other sports he played in high school — basketball and tennis. As well as a first team all-stater in football, Puk also won the state doubles title in tennis and captained the basketball team.

"I think those two sports did help, as far as my lateral mobility goes," he said. "I could shoot the ball in basketball, but I wasn't tall enough and I couldn't dribble. I could play tennis but it cost a lot of money to keep it going."

"I like the action of football, the team spirit, the defensive aspect. I definitely like to hit people. Football just kind of grew on me."

He considers quickness an asset but does find faults in his play: "My quickness is good, but I'm not delivering on people as I should. That's one of my biggest downfalls. I think I have a sense for the football. I just try and go out and play naturally, without thinking. I just love it."

"I've got tons of room for improvement. When I sat out for three years, I felt I lost a lot," he said.

If Puk keeps improving, he may go down in history as one of Iowa's best linebackers — a position Iowa has been traditionally strong in the past few years, turning out the likes of all-American Larry Station.

Playing with Puk this season may be one of the strongest linebacker corps ever at Iowa. Senior Dan Wirth has earned three letters playing for the Hawkeyes, while sophomores Melvin Foster — touted as the best linebacker to come out of Texas in 1985 — and Brad Quast — tabbed the best freshman linebacker in the nation last season by The Sporting News — keep Puk in good company.

Against Kansas State, the foursome combined for 27 tackles.

"His strengths are that he's been around here for five years and he knows the defense really well," Quast said. "He's a good leader on the field and people look up to him. He's got control out on the field — that's why he's captain."

"He's quick on his feet; he's a real slashing kind of player. He really plays that position well."

But after this season, Puk will be in a new position. He'll stop playing football and start playing the stock market.

Kickers assault Big Ten records

Nichol's scoring title in jeopardy

By Hugh Donlan
The Daily Iowan

When Chuck Long passed his way into the record books in the 1984 Freedom Bowl, Tom Nichol kicked his way into the annals of Hawkeye football lore.

The legendary Long threw for six touchdown strikes and seven Iowa bowl records as Iowa thrashed Texas 55-17. But Long's bowl records do not stand alone because Iowa place-kicker Tom Nichol set Iowa bowl game records that game for most extra points (7) and most points in a game (13).

The Freedom Bowl was Nichol's last as a Hawkeye and it marked the end of an illustrious personal career filled with bowl appearances as well as great success for Iowa football.

In Nichol's tenure at Iowa he appeared in four postseason games: the 1981 Rose Bowl, 1982 Peach Bowl, 1983 Peach Bowl, and finally the 1984 Freedom Bowl. In Nichol's four seasons, Iowa went 34-15-1.

Nichol is Iowa's all-time leading scorer with 277 points, good enough for third-best total kicking points in Big Ten history. He also holds Iowa career records for field goals (45), extra point attempts (142) and consecutive extra points (40).

BUT WHILE LONG'S records remain intact, Nichol's scoring marks are being threatened by place-kicker Rob Houghtlin. Houghtlin's 31 points this season give him 217 career points, within striking distance of Nichol's 277.

"I had four years to do what he could possibly do in three," Nichol said. "It's a testimony to what a good kicker (Houghtlin) is."

The threat of his scoring record being broken does not bother Nichol. "It wouldn't bother me," the Green Bay, Wis., native said. "Records were made to be broken."

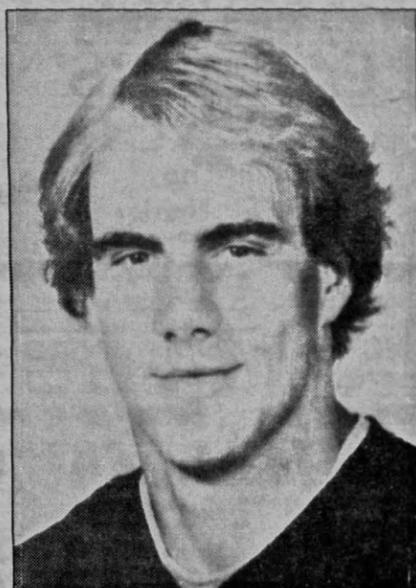

Nichol remembers his final, as well as record-setting game, fondly. "It was a lot of fun," he said.

"We went into the game very excited. Certainly we were well prepared," Nichol said. "I don't know if Texas had a letdown or what. But they were never in the game mentally or physically."

Nichol graduated from Iowa in 1985 with a B.B.A. in finance and marketing. These days Nichol works as a stockbroker specializing in investments and stocks for the Allied Group Securities in Des Moines.

"I LOVE IT," he said. "Stocks and sports have always been my love. It's a natural for me."

In addition to his new career as a stockbroker, Nichol is also married. He married Tana Powers, an Iowa graduate and a former member of the Hawkeye pompon squad, whom he met in economics class his sophomore year. Tana Nichol is an accountant with the firm of Peat, Marwick and Main.

The couple is having a two-story home built in West Des Moines that should be completed in 30 days, "If the builder keeps on schedule," Tom Nichol said.

The former Hawkeye is enjoying his new career as well as married life. "It's great," he said. "Living in Des Moines is really nice."

Nichol is one of the fortunate student-athletes who realized he needed an education and not just a football career. "Too many players try to bank on football as their shot," he said.

"I realized I needed an education. To get an education is something I could work in," Nichol said of his degree in economics and finance.

ALTHOUGH THE FORMER place-kicker did have aspirations of playing in the NFL, he is satisfied with living and working in Des Moines.

The former Hawkeye did have a tryout with the Green Bay Packers and talks with the New York Giants that did not result in any professional offers.

"I felt I had a legitimate shot," Nichol admitted. "A lot of times an NFL team won't draft a kicker. It's a lot easier to pick up a kicker that is floating around," he said.

The former Hawkeye cited Nick Lowery of the Kansas City Chiefs and John Lee of UCLA. Lowery, after spending time with five different NFL teams, has found success and a home with the Chiefs. On the other hand, Lee, an all-America at UCLA and fourth-round draft pick of the St. Louis Cardinals two years ago, is no longer in professional football.

"You have to be in the right place at the right time," Nichol said.

For the former place-kicker, his experience at Iowa was beneficial in more ways than one. Nichol gained the discipline necessary for football and was able to carry it to the other areas of his life.

Montgomery continues tradition

By Scott Wingert
The Daily Iowan

Former Washington Redskins Coach George Allen once said the kicking game is one-third of winning football.

If so, Michigan State may have a "leg up" on Iowa Saturday, at least in the punting department. Senior Greg Montgomery is rewriting the Spartan record book in that category, a book already stuffed with some of the most famous names in conference history.

Last year, Montgomery broke the all-time Big Ten single-season record in punting average with a 49.7 yard mark. While Montgomery is the current king of Michigan State punting, he is but one in a long line of Spartan punters that gave their teams a stranglehold in that category.

SINCE 1977, THE Spartans have led the conference in punting average six times. That mark is countered by Iowa's Reggie Roby, who averaged 45.4 yards a punt for the Hawkeyes from 1979-82.

Ray Stachowicz handled the Spartans' punting duties from 1977-80 and became the Big Ten's first and only four-time All-Conference selection. He ended his career with a 43.3 yard average, including a 46.2 yard mark in 1980.

Ralf Mojsiejenko was next in line from 1981-84, closing out with a 43.8 yard career punting average while doubling as placekicker. He boomed a 72-yard punt against Iowa in 1984 and owns a 61-yard field goal against Illinois in 1982.

One of the greatest punters of all-time, though, is Montgomery. Since transferring from Penn State in 1984, he owns a 50-yard punt in every Spartan game except two. His 86-yard blast against Michigan last year is another all-time league mark.

MONTGOMERY REGULARLY hangs his punts five seconds and professional scouts consider him a potential first-round NFL selection, a rarity at his position. He also handles the Spartans' long-range field goal duties.

And while Montgomery is sure to follow Stachowicz and Mojsiejenko to the NFL, a former Michigan State placekicker is also enjoying considerable success in that league.

The New Orleans Saints' Morten Andersen is on the verge of becoming the NFL's most efficient placekicker in history. The 1986 All-Pro has connected on 99 of 123 field goals in his career, including 26 of 30 last season. He is one kick short of qualifying for the NFL record.

Andersen's longest field goal last year was 53 yards, but with a tee at Michigan State he topped that mark three times. His career best of 63 yards against Ohio State in 1981 is another all-time Big Ten record.

LOST IN THIS barrage of statistics, however, are the reasons for this incredible dominance. According to Michigan State Special Teams Coach Dick Beckholt, it is difficult to attribute the success to any single factor.

"It's easy to just say we have the tradition here, but that's really probably it," Beckholt said. "When we get a good one in here, he gets in the limelight and that name sticks with the next guy."

"Sure, we have better facilities and better academics than a lot of places, but I don't think that has much to do with it. We really look around hard when we recruit — you never know where you'll find a great kicker."

That was exactly the situation with Mojsiejenko in 1980. Playing in a virtual vacuum in tiny Bridgman, Mich., the Spartans liked what they saw and offered him a scholarship. Mojsiejenko now plays for the San Diego Chargers.

"I WAS VERY surprised they recruited me," Mojsiejenko recalled. "They said they had an eye for talent and I guess I believed them. I just kept getting better and better."

Like Beckholt, Mojsiejenko is mystified about how the Spartans continue to find their kicking talent, but thinks at least some of it involves finding an all-around athlete.

"That question comes up a lot; maybe it's just a coincidence," Mojsiejenko said. "But I like to think punters are the best overall athletes on the team. A lot of the good ones can play other positions on the field."

Mojsiejenko points to Ohio State quarterback Tom Tupa, second in the country with a 47.9-yard punting average. He, like Montgomery, is a big, strong athlete who can also run if the situation calls for it.

"Kickers have to be a little different, no question," Beckholt said. "It's especially true here because of our tradition. But our good ones can block it out."

Iowa vs. Michigan State

Tight ends form competitive trio

Iowans Cook, Flagg and Clark aim high on, off field

The Daily Iowan

When opposing coaches analyze the tight end position on the Iowa football team, they must wonder if Coach Hayden Fry has some sort of cloning device.

Seniors Craig Clark, Marv Cook and Mike Flagg have approximately the same build, the same intensity, the same talent and have each enjoyed academic success. They are three players who personify what the term "student-athlete" should stand for.

Each have shared time at the tight end position for the past three years, but the ties between them started in high school as all three grew up in Iowa.

Clark's Columbus Junction team faced Cook's West Branch squad when Clark was a senior and Cook a junior.

"They beat us by three touchdowns," Clark smiled. "The rivalry between our schools was pretty big in tradition."

CLARK, WHO PLAYED FULLBACK ON OFFENSE and linebacker on defense, explained one crucial play in the game when Cook, who was West Branch's quarterback, juked and cut inside of him for a long touchdown run.

"Yeah, the coach was pretty mad at me," Clark said.

Now the two share the same job, along with two-year starter Flagg, who was an honorable mention all-American and second team all-Big Ten selection last year. So far this year, Flagg hasn't been able to get the starting job back from Cook.

So do the three get along considering the constant fight for the No. 1 spot?

"Definitely," Clark said. "There's a lot of camaraderie. By the same token, the three of us are very competitive."

Cook has gotten the starting nod in each game this year, but playing time is divided pretty equally among the three.

"BOTH CRAIG AND MIKE ARE A COUPLE great guys," said Cook, who has one year of eligibility left at Iowa. "But there's competition — I'm not kidding you."

At a recent press conference, Fry said the tight end spot is the deepest position on the team.

"We rotate those people because we can win with all of them," Fry said. "Mike Flagg could be an all-American, but he hasn't even started yet (this season)."

Fry said Cook will continue to start, until he loses the job.

"Marv's a helluva player, he's really consistent," Flagg said. "I'm not wrapped up in that all-American thing; I just want to help the team win."

And win the team has. In three bowl games — the 1984 Freedom, 1986 Rose and 1986 Holiday — Flagg has caught 12 passes for 192 yards and two touchdowns, as Iowa won two of the three bowl appearances.

THE TIGHT END POSITION IS INSTRUMENTAL to Iowa's offense, both the blocking and the receiving aspect. Clark, Cook and Flagg are pretty much equal in both aspects, so they rotate on nearly every down.

"In the rotation we try to just keep it going and keep someone fresh in there," Clark said. Part of the rotation includes having the tight ends take the plays in, an important aspect of the offense but Clark said the three take it in stride.

"We don't have any problems," he said. "It's not much of a cohesive problem; we're all old-timers and know the ropes by now."

Cook agreed, saying, "It seems like we are all doing a pretty good job of it."

The trio not only have tight end duties, but each contribute heavily to the special teams.

"WE'RE ALL GOOD BLOCKERS," SAID CLARK, explaining the logic behind employing all the tight ends on special teams, "and we run (pass) routes so we have a little foot speed — tight end is a happy medium there."

Clark was named special teams player of the year in 1984 and was named special teams player of the game vs. Ohio State, Illinois, Northwestern and Michigan in that season. In Saturday's game against Kansas State, Clark recovered George Murphy's onside kick.

Cook was special teams player of the week last season vs. Michigan, Ohio State and Purdue. Cook also became the regular kickoff man the second half of last season.

"I just want to help the U of I win, whatever it takes," Cook said.

Tight ends Coach Don Patterson has had a lot to do with the success of the position at Iowa. One his protégés is Jonathan Hayes, who became an all-American and now plays for the Kansas City Chiefs.

"HE'S VERY DISCIPLINED ON HIS COACHING and that rubs off on us," Cook said. "He's got a great concept for detail and technique. That makes us be that much better."

"He makes sure that when we step on the field, we're 100 percent ready. When you go out on the field prepared, then you can let your ability play."

Clark said Patterson coaches beyond the playing field.

"He wants to make sure you get your education while you're here and that you take care of your own business," Clark said, alluding to keeping the grades up.

Clark graduated in July and is attending graduate school for a degree in secondary math education. Cook is a business major who was tabbed an honorable mention academic all-Big Ten last year, while Flagg has been academic all-Big Ten the last two seasons in business.

While their degrees will be soft enough cushions to fall back on, Clark and Flagg are both opportunistic about playing professional football.

"If the opportunity is there, I'll give it a try," Clark said. "I'm not going to waste two or three years of my life struggling to make it though."

Flagg holds the same outlook as his teammate: "It's a matter of if someone wants me. If someone wants me, I'm going to give it a try."

Right now, though, one person who definitely wants the tight end trio around is Fry.

Spartans' Heisman hopes rest with White

By Dan Millea
The Daily Iowan

For Lorenzo White, facing Iowa represents the highs and lows of a college career and a passion for the Heisman Trophy.

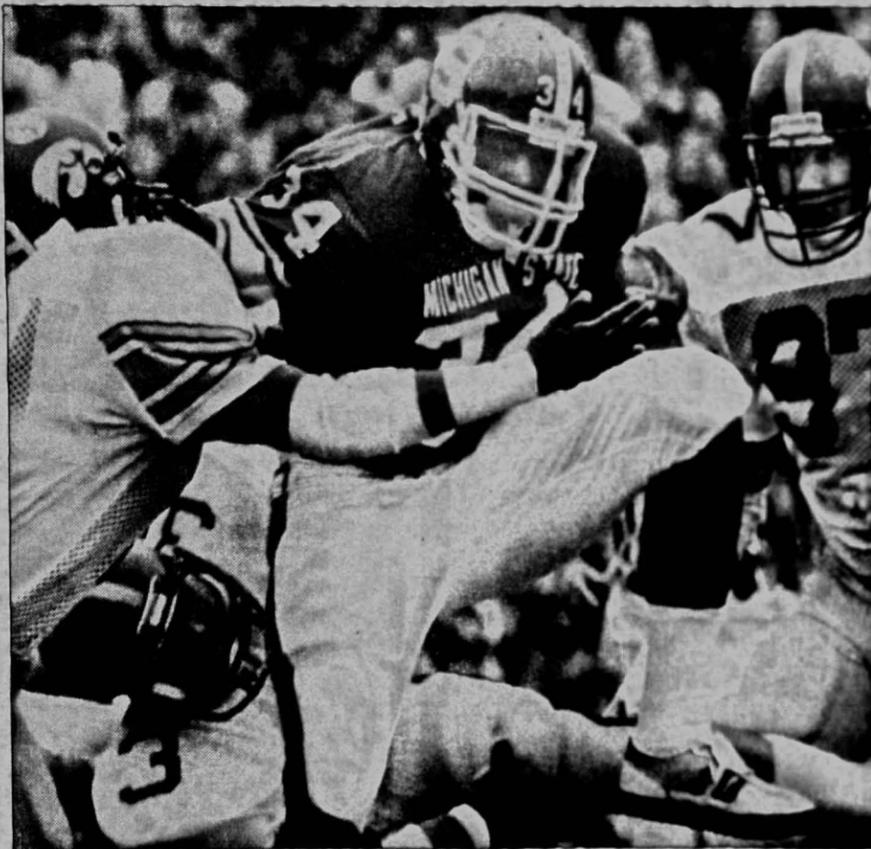

It was White's almost frightening, 233-yard televised performance in 1985 against No. 1 Iowa that introduced him to the American public and the Heisman voters. But it was last year's dismal showing vs. the Hawkeyes, and a knee injury late in the game, that virtually ended his 1986 Heisman chances.

After that 24-21 loss in East Lansing, Mich., White missed two games and was unable to shake the injury problems when he did return. He was used sparingly and finished the season with 633 yards, down from 2,066 in 1985.

His injury problems are now gone, but with only 272 yards in three games this fall, "Lorenzo White" and "Heisman Trophy" aren't often appearing in the same sentence. Without another 200-plus day sometime soon, the senior will surely leave the NCAA without a Heisman. And despite being a humble man, White badly wants that trophy.

"It's really important to me," White said of the Heisman. "I feel like I've won a lot of awards, but winning the Heisman is the best thing you can achieve in college football, and I want very much to achieve it. Then, I could look back and say, 'I was able to do things that were truly great.'"

But time is not on White's side. The senior tailback is not getting substantial national media attention, and the season is one-third complete.

Lorenzo White, Michigan State's Heisman candidate.

United Press International

Two years ago, the situation was different.

When he ripped through the vaunted Iowa defense and shocked the Kinnick Stadium crowd, White became a Heisman candidate. And after three more 200-plus days that season, the question wasn't whether he could win a Heisman, but when.

He had more yards than Bo Jackson in 1985, but when the Auburn tailback and Iowa's Chuck Long emerged as the top two candidates for the trophy, no one complained. For Lorenzo, it was just around the corner.

But then came last fall's Iowa game, a nightmare for White. He was coming off a 171-yard effort against Notre Dame, and a 197-yard game vs. Western Michigan. But Iowa stuffed him on play after play, giving up just 48 yards in 19 carries before White left the field in the fourth period to nurse his ailing knee.

He blamed no one for the poor game, including a Spartan offensive line that was continually overrun by Iowa's front five.

"When you play against a team you got 233 yards against the year before, they're going to do as much as they can to not let that happen again," White said of the Iowa defense on that day. "They may be willing to give up more passing yards, but they don't want to let you do that to them again."

Despite what happened last year, White said that game is not on his mind. His motivation will be drawn from other sources.

"I haven't been thinking about last year," White said. "Right now I'm thinking of this year, this season. I want to do everything I can as an individual. I want to help the team win."

But ever since that sophomore year it's been tougher and tougher for White to help his team. Defenses are keyed to stop him, and with some help from his injuries, they've done just that.

"I feel like (I'm being keyed) every time I step on the field now," he said. "I just have to deal with it and go out and play football. I can't worry about whether the linebacker is tracking me or if a defensive back is coming up on me. I can't let that interfere with my job."

Rest assured, Iowa Coach Hayden Fry's defenders will keep constant track of where No. 34 is Saturday, with a goal of controlling him like they did last season. But as fans who saw the 1985 game in Kinnick Stadium know, every time the Spartans break huddle White is a first down waiting to happen.

That works both ways for Iowa. White is dangerous, but Iowa defenders will put in some extra effort when they see him take a handoff.

"I know if I had the opportunity to play defense, I think it would be a great thrill to tackle a guy like Lorenzo White, or throw him for a loss," Fry said at Tuesday's press conference. "I think I'd remember that for the rest of my life."

Barring another injury, White will surely be a high NFL draft choice next spring. Along with the Heisman, that's his dream, to play in the NFL.

He hopes to eventually go beyond sports, and to accomplish things off the football field. "I want to be successful in the business world someday," he said.

White is a gentle, soft-spoken man off the field. His mysterious green eyes and slight smile exude caring and compassion. He is confident but takes no credit for his accomplishments.

"I give the Lord all my credit," White said. "Without him, there's nothing. Everything I've done — it was all a blessing from him. You don't just go out and run for 200 yards for no reason. I give credit for everything I do to the Lord."

When he fails, Lorenzo White assesses no blame. When he succeeds he diverts praise to his God. All he asks for his troubles is to win the Heisman Trophy, but the clock is quickly ticking and his time is running out.

Michigan State great Daugherty dies from kidney, heart ailments

By Anne Upson
The Daily Iowan

The death of Hugh "Duffy" Daugherty, at the age of 72, closed a chapter in Michigan State coaching history.

Daugherty, who coached the Spartans for more than a quarter of a century, died in his sleep Sept. 25 at Cottage Hospital in Santa Barbara, Calif., the town he had retired to in 1975.

A memorial service, attended by 500 people, was held in Santa Barbara last Monday.

Born Sept. 8, 1915 in Emleigh, Pa., Daugherty was hospitalized Aug. 23 for kidney dialysis treatments and was also suffering from a heart ailment. The cause of death was listed as kidney failure associated with the long-standing heart disease.

Daugherty began coaching at Michigan State in 1947 as an assistant to Coach Clarence "Biggie" Munn. Daugherty became head coach in the wake of Munn's retirement in 1954. He retired in 1972.

HIS 19-YEAR TENURE AT MICHIGAN STATE is the longest in Spartan history.

Undoubtedly, at the top of his accomplishments were two trips to the Rose Bowl. In 1956, Daugherty took the Spartans to Pasadena to face UCLA with a Big Ten record of 5-1-0, the second best in the nation. The Spartans won 17-14.

The same teams met again in 1966, with the Spartans finishing first in the Big Ten with a record of seven wins and no losses. This time, though, Daugherty wasn't as fortunate, as the Bruins came out on top, 14-12.

Daugherty's 1965 team was named national champion with a record of 10-1-0. The 1966 team went undefeated with only a 10-10 tie against No. 1-ranked Notre Dame, marring an otherwise perfect regular season mark.

During his career, Daugherty compiled two undefeated regular seasons and four second place conference records while racking up a 109-69-5 record. He holds the third-longest winning streak in Spartan history, winning 12 games from the third game of the 1955 season through the fourth game of the 1956 season.
