30 arrested in protests against CIA

By John Bartenhagen and Scott Hauser
The Daily Iowan

UI Security and Iowa City police officers arrested 30 people protesting the presence of CIA recruiters on campus Wednesday, after about 100 protesters spent the day in and around Westlawn trying to stop the interviews.

Iowa City police began arresting the protesters about 3 p.m. on charges of criminal trespass after the protesters refused to leave the building when warned by UI officials their actions were illegal.

Police officers — some of whom were wearing rubber gloves — dragged the protesters out of the building, put them on a UI bus and transported them to North Hall, where they were charged.

Many of the protesters were also charged with interference with official acts, criminal mischief and disorderly conduct.

Earlier Wednesday, three protesters — one a juvenile — were arrested on charges of interference with official acts when they tried to block access to the building.

Wednesday's demonstration began with a noon rally on the Pentacrest and was moved to Westlawn at about 1 p.m., where interviews with a representative of the agency were taking place.

THE PROTESTERS — in their seventh attempt to stop the agency's interviews — said the CIA should not be allowed to recruit on campus because it is a criminal organization which terrorizes other nations.

"We know the CIA is not just another career opportunity — it's not like working for McDonald's," Young Socialists Alliance member Jackie Floyd said. "When you join them, you become a declared enemy of every progressive person on the face of the earth. We have to consider what kind of society we live in that we need an organization like the CIA."

"What is happening now is you force people to do as they're told — that's what the CIA is here for — to recruit people for that purpose," South African Student Association member Moyise Majeke said. "If the people don't do what they're told, they kill them. We are not talking about people who are trying or pretending to be human — they gave that up long ago."

About 40 counter-demonstrators confronted the anti-CIA protesters, claiming the protesters did not represent UI students and said students should have the right to choose whether or not they want to interview with the agency.

"THE CIA OFF-CAMPUS group is trying to limit the employment opportunities of the students on this campus," UI student Matt Doyle said. "Most people hired by the CIA will not be given guns to go kill babies; most of them will be given office jobs."

"I don't agree with some other organizations that come here to recruit but there are students paying tuition and taking classes and they deserve the right to interview with whoever they want," he said. "This protest is fine — they can come here and say the CIA does terrible things and is very naughty, but to try to keep them from coming here is wrong."

But protesters said their demonstration was an attempt to increase awareness of the CIA's activities before the agency involves the United States in a war.

"UNLIKE VIETNAM, we're going to resist now, we're not going to wait until they're bringing people home in body bags and napalming children," UI student Pat Kearns said. "We don't want them on our campus, we don't want them in our country, we don't want them in other countries."

"What democracy means to the U.S. (government) is a country that is subservient to them," he said.

UI Campus Programs and Student Activities Director Kevin Taylor said all the interviews took place, but said he didn't know how many had been scheduled.

Taylor and security officials escorted one interviewee into the building at about 2:15 p.m., after protesters kept him out of the building by blocking the entrance.

UI officials have said the protesters have a right to demonstrate against the agency's presence, but do not have the right to interfere with the interviews.

IN A STATEMENT on UI recruiting and placement policies, UI Vice President for Student Services Philip Hubbard said the CIA meets the necessary requirements to be allowed on campus and adds to the range of choices available to UI students.

About 30 protesters were later arrested at Westlawn and charged with criminal trespass. Other protesters were charged with interference with official acts.

More senators reject Bork

By Edward Walsh
Washington Post

WASHINGTON — The Supreme Court nomination of Judge Robert Bork was all but buried Wednesday by the announcements of 10 more senators that they will vote against confirmation, but conservative Republicans urged the embattled nominee not to give up.

With pressure building on him to ask President Ronald Reagan to withdraw the nomination, Bork and his wife, Mary Ellen, met with 16 GOP senators in the office of Minority Leader Robert Dole, R-Kan. Dole said Bork did not indicate his intentions and said only that he wanted to discuss his apparently hopeless situation with his family.

OUTSIDE THE CAPITOL, a scene resembling a pep rally for Bork unfolded as the senators escorted him to his car. When a reporter shouted to Bork, "Are you going to hang in there?" Bork did not reply but the senators began applauding and gesturing that he should fight on.

Meanwhile, 10 more senators, including Florida Democrats Lawton Chiles and Bob Graham, who both had been considered undecided, and five other southern Democrats, announced Wednesday that they will oppose Bork's nomination.

Earlier Wednesday, Bork met at the White House with Reagan, Vice President Bush, Attorney General Edwin Meese III and White House chief of staff Howard Baker Jr. White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said Reagan told Bork he will "stand behind him." And other officials said a national television speech by the president, which had been shelved earlier this week, is again being considered, possibly for the eve of a Senate vote.

Students play role in defeat of local sales tax proposal

By Joe Levy
The Daily Iowan

UI students voted overwhelmingly against the proposed 1 percent local sales tax Tuesday, and at least one UI student leader says the near one-sided student vote was instrumental in the referendum's defeat.

"Taking into consideration that the vote was as close as it was, I really believe students voting 4-to-1 against it may have helped to defeat the tax," UI Student Senate President Joe Hansen said Wednesday.

Hansen pointed to voting results from the city's three student-dominated precincts — Burge, Stanley and Quadrangle Residence Halls — which were slanted 114 to 30 against the tax.

If this ratio is representative of the way all UI students voted, Hansen said, students may have been the deciding factor in the election.

The imposition of the tax failed in Iowa City by just 420 votes, 3,672 to 3,252.

"I REALLY, TRULY believe that we can say our efforts saved students $660,000 per year," Hansen said, basing his figures on estimates that the 1 percent addition to the state's 4 percent sales tax would cost an average student $22 annually.

That savings, according to Hansen justifies the senate's spending $3,500 on a campaign to defeat the tax.

Mailings to 9,000 voting-age students and running ads in The Daily Iowan, including a full-page ad Tuesday, were "cost effective" ways to fight the tax, Hansen said.

"That's a lot of money," he said. "But in a sense it was cheap."

The senate will not stop efforts to achieve tax justice with the defeat of the sales tax referendum.

Ticket business flourishes in Iowa

By Lisa Legge
The Daily Iowan

Marty McCabe sat in his room Tuesday at the Marriot Pavilion across from Busch Stadium in St. Louis. He has 500 tickets for each of the National and American League playoff games in Minneapolis, San Francisco, St. Louis and Detroit.

McCabe has already sold 500 tickets for half the games at prices of $60 or more. The tickets have a face value of $20 and $25, depending on the location.

McCabe, president and sole proprietor of Tickets Are Us in Bettenddorf, Iowa, is in the ticket resale business.

"If the definition of 'scalping' is charging more for a ticket than the face value, then that's what I do," McCabe, 30, said from St. Louis earlier this week. "I don't stand out in the street and sell them. I have an office. I have a computer. I run this like a business."

Dukakis to visit UI campus

Democratic presidential candidate Gov. Michael Dukakis, D-Mass., will visit the UI campus on Friday at 2:30 p.m. in Schaeffer Hall Room 221A. Dukakis will give a short lecture and then hold a question-and-answer session. The public is invited to attend.

U2 sells 100 more tickets

About 100 additional tickets for the Oct. 20 U2 concert were sold Tuesday only minutes after they were released, according to UI officials.

People in line Tuesday were put on a waiting list and will be notified by UI officials when extra tickets are available. There are still approximately 500 U2 tickets left for sale.

Sunset Street closed

The north section of Sunset Street in Iowa City will be closed to vehicular traffic today due to reconstruction work at the intersection of Sunset and Benton streets.

Benton Street will remain open with one lane in each direction. The lanes will be narrow, and motorists are advised to drive with caution and at reduced speeds.

The work is expected to be completed by Oct. 23, weather permitting.

Association begins drive

The American Lung Association of Iowa will be holding a major fundraising drive in Iowa City and other Iowa towns this month for the American Lung Research Program.

The association is seeking one household per block to start a donation envelope and pass it onto a neighbor in Iowa City. The envelope will be passed house-to-house until it returns to the original volunteer. It is then returned to the American Lung Association of Iowa Office in Des Moines.

The funds raised from the statewide campaign will allow the association to provide various educational programs throughout the state. For more information, contact Martha Sterner of the association at 1-800-362-1643.

Professor presents study

UI Professor of Economics John Fuller will present the results of the latest economic impact study on the arts in Iowa at the October meeting of the Iowa Arts Council, Oct. 9 at 9 a.m. in Waterloo.

The meeting, held at the National Bank of Waterloo, 100 East Park Ave., will also include a public forum at 1:30 p.m. to give visitors an opportunity to interact with the Iowa Arts Council Board. The meeting is open to the public.

Nurses hold conference

All area nurses and nursing students are invited to attend the fifth district of the Iowa Nurses' Association meeting Tuesday, Oct. 13, in room D of the Gage Union, at Coe College in Cedar Rapids.

An open forum will be held to discuss the issues and resolutions to be presented at the annual state convention, which will be held Oct. 15-17 in Des Moines. The meeting will begin at 7 p.m.

Babbitt speaks in Amana

Former Arizona Gov. Bruce Babbitt will be the guest speaker at a reception for Iowa Rep. Robert Dvorsky, D-54th District, Friday, Oct. 9 at the Barn Restaurant in Main Amana.

The reception begins at 7:30 p.m. For more information, call 351-0988 or 645-2663.

UI hosts professor

The UI College of Engineering's Department of Biomedical Engineering and the Sigma Xi Scientific Research Honor Society will host Lawrence Stark, professor of engineering science and physiological optics at the University of California-Berkeley and professor of neurology at the University of California's San Francisco Medical School.

Stark will present a lecture on biological oscillators Wednesday, Oct. 14 at 3 p.m. in the Old Capitol Senate Chambers as an Ida Beam Lecturer.

Ex-Iowa wrestler Penrith won't serve jail sentence

By Traci Auble
Special To The Daily Iowan

Former Iowa wrestler Brad Penrith will not have to serve a jail sentence for violating the terms of his probation, according to a ruling handed down in Johnson County District Court Wednesday morning.

Johnson County Sixth District Court Judge John Sladek ruled that Penrith, a senior from Windsor, N.Y., would not have to serve a 7-day jail sentence requested by the Johnson County Attorney's Office for violating the terms of his probation for two drunk driving charges.

Penrith pleaded guilty to charges of public intoxication and disorderly conduct following an incident June 16 when he was arrested for fighting with Stephen Bloomer, 21, of Davenport, at the corner of College and Clinton streets.

At the time, Penrith was serving a one-year probation set in August, 1986, in connection with OWI convictions in Johnson and Dallas counties. Penrith's probation officer Connie Wilson requested in August Penrith's probation be revoked because of the June 16 incident.

BUT WILSON CHANGED her position at the hearing, saying she no longer believed Penrith should go to jail because of his compliance with the terms of his probation during the past 42 days and his participation in two substance abuse programs.

"Because of his compliance with aftercare meetings at the Mid-Eastern Council on Chemical Abuse, Alcoholics Anonymous and community service, I'm not as adamant on having him serve time in jail," Wilson said. "In the last 42 days, Brad has done very well."

Wilson added that Penrith has now served 70 of the 115 community service hours he was required to complete as part of the terms of his probation.

Iowa Assistant Wrestling Coach Kevin Dresser also spoke on behalf of Penrith at the hearing, saying he has been working out with the team and has remained sober since the last hearing.

"As far as I know, he hasn't touched any alcoholic beverages," Dresser said.

SLADEK SAID HE was aware of the publicity Penrith has had to suffer through and is satisfied with his current behavior.

"I'm satisfied you've undergone treatment and lived up to the terms of your probation," Sladek said.

Penrith will continue his probation, Sladek ruled, until the 115 hours of community service is completed.

Though Penrith is working out with the wrestling team, Iowa Coach Dan Gable said Penrith, a 1986 NCAA national champion, will not be reinstated to the team immediately.

Penrith was suspended from the team shortly after the June 16 incident.

Gable said he would wait until Iowa Men's Athletic Director Bump Elliott returns from a trip to discuss the matter.

"From what I hear, the court hearing went about as good as could be," Gable said. "I'm sure a decision will be made shortly."

Forecast says 1987 income of Iowans is best in 6 years

By James Cahoy
The Daily Iowan
and United Press International

A forecast released Wednesday by the UI Institute for Economic Research indicates the rate of growth in Iowans' personal income in 1987 will be the best in six years.

The forecast shows an 8.6 percent gain this year in Iowans' total personal income, fueled by bigger payrolls from a larger work force and a much improved farm sector.

"This gain constitutes the largest increase in personal income in current dollars since 1981, when it grew by 13.7 percent and inflation was rampant," said UI Professor of Economics Jerald R. Barnard, who serves as director of the institute. "It's definitely good news."

Barnard, who prepares the report jointly with UI graduate assistant Rodney Raehsler, said 1987 was a strong year for Iowa economically.

"Overall, in both personal income and employment, we expect that '87 will turn out to be a strong year for Iowa — better than both '85 and '86," Barnard said.

"I wouldn't describe it as a complete recovery," Barnard said. "But it does mean that we are improving."

BARNARD SAID THE study also forecast growth in the Iowa incomes for 1988 and 1989, though at a slower rate than this year. A 7.1 percent gain in personal income is expected in 1988 and an increase of 0.4 percent is expected in 1989 (both as measured in current dollars).

The report released by the institute also said a U.S. Commerce Department report in May showing Iowa led the nation with a personal income gain of 9.7 percent the first quarter is based on a misleading estimate of the state's work force, a new economic report said.

"The announcement in May by the U.S. Department of Commerce reporting Iowa led the nation with a gain in personal income . . . deserves some clarification," the report said. "The return to work of striking farm machinery workers counted for a good share of the growth in non-farm income."

One student, Michael J. Kirlan, N224 Hillcrest, was charged with interference with official acts in connection with the protest and another student, Elizabeth J. McNulty, S322 Currier was charged with disorderly conduct.

The following local residents were charged with criminal trespass, according to Campus Security reports:

Perry A. Blakley, 1128 E. Washington St., also charged with assault and interference with official acts; Carol DeProsse, 1113 E. College St.; Thomas J. Sheehan, 1128 E. Washington St.; John Stonebarger, 212 1/2 S. Clinton St., also charged with disorderly conduct; and Richard H. Winter, 223 McLean St.

Two juveniles were also arrested in connection with the incident. One was charged with trespassing and interference with official acts, and the other with disorderly conduct, according to Campus Security reports.

All the people arrested were taken to North Hall, where they were charged and released, according to officials.

Theft: Three cars parked in a ramp near UI Hospitals were broken into and a total of $1,185 in items stolen, according to Campus Security reports.

A $1,000 car telephone was reported stolen from one car, another car had a $100 radar detector stolen, and two stereo speakers valued at $85 were taken from the third car, according to Campus Security reports.

Theft: The University Bookstore Tuesday reported that $237 in items were stolen from the store's entrance, according to Campus Security reports.

Scott Schwarz reported that someone apparently took his bag containing books, a wallet and a Walkman portable stereo, according to the report.

Theft: A $59 radar detector was stolen Tuesday evening from a car parked near UI Hospitals, according to Campus Security reports.

The car sustained $50 damage as a result of the incident, according to the reports.

Domestic abuse law working well locally

By Monica Selgel
The Daily Iowan

Cooperation between domestic abuse victim advocacy programs and law enforcement agencies has helped make a state law calling for the mandatory arrest of domestic abusers work locally, but the system is not perfect, domestic violence advocates said Wednesday.

"When the mandatory arrest law went into effect, we had incredible cooperation among law enforcement groups," Iowa City Domestic Violence Project Director Pat

Meyer said. "I think we're unique in the state on that and we can be proud."

Participating in a forum on the mandatory arrest law, Meyer said the law — which requires police officers to make an arrest when called to a domestic violence incident where physical injury is evident — has dramatically changed the community's attitude toward domestic violence.

"This has challenged people to look at battering in a whole different way," she said. Meyer said historically, police officers have been encouraged not to interfere in domestic cases.

CORALVILLE POLICE Department Sgt. Dave Stoos agreed, saying officers were initially skeptical of the mandatory arrest law because it was such a drastic change from the way law enforcement officers traditionally operate.

"It's not because we don't have compassion for the victim," Stoos said. "But the officers were concerned it was taking away their discretion."

Stoos said instruction he received

11 years ago on how to deal with domestic violence discouraged officers from making arrests or removing anyone from the house, and encouraged them to remain calm, unemotional and uninvolved.

The mandatory arrest law — which went into effect July, 1985 — changes the officer's role, and some officers are fearful of getting into a false arrest situation.

But Meyer said the officer's role of a power-figure is essential in dealing with domestic violence situations. She said domestic abuse is a control issue, with the abuser trying to gain power over the victim, and the abuser must be dealt with "by someone who is perceived as more powerful."

JOHNSON COUNTY Assistant Attorney Linda McGuire said the law has increased the number of domestic abuse cases going through the county attorney's office.

She said in the first six months of 1986, before the law went into effect, only six cases were reported. In the next six months, after the law went into effect, 54 cases were reported, and she said that number is growing.

McGuire said the law creates some problems for the prosecutors and judicial system, which must be careful not to further victimize the victim, and must make every effort to see that the abuser receives counseling.

About 30 people attended the forum at Trinity Episcopal Church, 320 E. College St., including Rep. Phil Bremmer, D-Cedar Rapids, who introduced the domestic violence act — from which the mandatory arrest law was derived — to the Iowa Legislature.

Federal intervention not solution to deficit

By Joseph Levy
The Daily Iowan

Government intervention is not the solution to the United States' $170 billion trade deficit.

That was the consensus Wednesday night of more than 30 participants in the Iowa City National Issues Forum at the Iowa City Public Library, 123 S. Linn St.

Cheaper labor abroad, better methods of production by foreign competitors and foreign import quotas are key elements contributing to the trade deficit, audience members and an appointed panel agreed.

The forum, one of a series of three held in Iowa City, is designed to give legislators a grassroots perspective on national problems, according to Paul Slappey, one of its organizers.

The six panelists — UI Economics Professor Ray Reizman; UI Labor Center Programs Coordinator Marsha Adams; local farmer Steve Lacina; Sheller-Globe Technical Communications Director Bob Hicks; Iowa City Area Development Group President Ray Muston and Iowa Hydraulics Consultants Organization General Manager Lars Hill — spoke to begin the event.

Afterward, audience members gave their impressions and asked questions of the panel.

"WHEN YOU TAKE a $15,000 car in the U.S. and it costs $45,000 in Japan, there's something wrong," Hicks said. "The automotive industry should have an equal shot."

Adams agreed conditions abroad are stacked against U.S. imports, while foreign goods flood the U.S. market.

"We in fact do not have free and fair conditions," she said. But import quotas, limiting the amount of imports foreign nations can ship into the United States, are not a solution, panelists and participants said.

"The quest for import relief has hurt more companies than it helps," Hill said. "The U.S. auto industry is a good example of how trade protection can backfire."

Hill said the import quota agreement between the United States and Japan, which limited the amount of Japanese auto imports to 1.68 million in 1981, lulled the American automobile industry into a false sense of security.

"THERE IS NO doubt import restraints led to greater short-term profits for the corporations of the U.S.," he said, explaining that short-term profits were a trade-off for long-term vulnerability.

"The pursuit of protection is far too difficult a game to play," Hill said.

Hicks said the automotive industry holds the key to the nation's trade deficit. In 1964, he said, 97 percent of automobiles purchased in the United States were made by either General Motors, Ford, Chrysler or American Motors. Today only 54 percent are made by those companies.

In that respect, the United States is currently faced with a $60 billion dollar trade deficit with Japanese automakers alone.

"It isn't getting any better," he said.

The Japanese automakers, whose success is largely responsible for the floundering of U.S. automakers, employ better management-labor relations, Hicks said.

"They have been taught to work as a team," he said. "They do (something) once. We do it three or four times and we wonder why."

"Our survival is going to be through people and people involvement," he continued.

The involvement of the American educational system, labor unions and worker wages were also discussed.

Symposium hopes to help infertile couples cope

By John Bartenhagen
The Daily Iowan

In the past, adoption was the only option for infertile couples wishing to raise a family.

But today, thanks to medical advancements in areas such as male subfertility, artificial insemination and embryo transfer, childless couples may choose from numerous alternatives.

A symposium called "Insights into Infertility," designed to educate health professionals and infertile couples on new trends, approaches and procedures in combating infertility is scheduled for Oct. 17 at the Highlander Inn from 8:30 a.m. to 5:00 p.m.

The symposium is co-sponsored by the Iowa City chapter of RESOLVE, a national organization providing counseling, referral and support for infertile adults, and by Sero, a drug manufacturing corporation.

A PROCLAMATION IN which Gov. Terry Branstad declared October "Infertility Awareness Month" said approximately one in five Iowa couples are involuntarily childless.

"The impact of fertility impairment can be devastating for the family life, work and career, and mental, emotional and physical health of these families," the proclamation stated. "There is a great need for increased information, education and public awareness of the professional services that are available to support such families."

Several of the techniques to be discussed during the symposium, including surrogate motherhood and embryo transfer, have sparked heated controversy concerning their morality. But former coordinator and vice president of the Iowa City chapter Becky Woodhouse said RESOLVE's purpose is not to advocate the use of any of these techniques, but only to educate people about their options.

"WE HOPE TO provide people with accurate information about diagnostic and treatment techniques and to help them cope with the often stressful emotions that accompany infertility," she said. "I think at this point, everybody has their own ideas" about these techniques.

After an opening speech by Carole Harder on "Infertility and the Psychology of Winning," the symposium is broken into five 50-minute periods. During each period, participants may choose from three or four workshop topics.

Workshop speakers include Attorney Noel Keane, best known for arranging the surrogate parenting of "Baby M"; Dr. Kathryn Hauser, one of five of the state's reproductive endocrinologists; UI Family Practice Associate Professor David Rosenthal and co-founder and former president of RESOLVE of Iowa, Carla Tracy.

WOODHOUSE SAID THE Iowa City branch of RESOLVE was organized in January of this year, with members meeting the fourth Tuesday of each month. RESOLVE of Iowa has been in existence since 1981.

"The problem is that a lot of people don't know about RESOLVE," she said. "Some doctors don't know about us, and some doctors do, but for some reason don't tell their patients. But I think the word is starting to get out."

One of the biggest problems that people who are infertile face is a lack of self-esteem, accompanied by shock and disbelief, she said.

"Sometimes people equate infertility with not being very feminine or not being very masculine," she said. "I think for a lot of people, when they realize there are other people who are going through the same tests and emotions, it makes it easier."

Tickets for the symposium are $20 for RESOLVE members, $30 for non-members and $40 for health professionals. Woodhouse recommends people register for the symposium before Oct. 9.

RESOLVE, founded in 1973 by Barbara Eck Menning, is a non-profit organization currently serving more than 15,000 national members through 47 local chapters and the national office in Massachusetts.

Writer lets pediatrics, fantasy mix

By Rebecca Himschoot
The Daily Iowan

Iowa City fantasy writer Mickey Zucker Reichert has more on her mind than just a bunch of stories.

Zucker Reichert, a graduate of Thomas Jefferson Medical School in Philadelphia, has just published her first book, titled Godslayer. She is also a pediatrics resident at UI Hospitals.

Zucker Reichert said combining the two interests has been a generally good experience.

"There's a lot of information I can use from one career to another," she said. "I started writing when I was a kid and continued in college when I had some free time."

ACCORDING TO Zucker Reichert, Godslayer is the story of a Vietnam veteran who finds himself involved in a war in the world of Old Scandinavia. In the end he finds he is needed by both worlds.

Although this is her first published novel, Zucker Reichert said Godslayer is the first book of a trilogy. She said the first two books key on different characters in the same world, and the third book pulls them together.

Zucker Reichert said it's hard to draw a line between fantasy and science fiction. "There's really a fine line between fantasy and science fiction. Science fiction is more concept-based — you write about ideas which may be scientifically technical. Fantasy is based more on characters," she said. "There's really a difference to it than that, but that's a matter of differentiation."

FOR INSTANCE, Zucker Reichert referred to Isaac Asimov as a good example of science fiction writing, and J.R.R. Tolkien's works as fantasy.

"Fantasy is essentially a matter of getting people to believe something they ordinarily wouldn't believe," she said.

Zucker Reichert hasn't had any formal training in writing and said she didn't begin writing seriously until she began medical school.

Godslayer is available in area bookstores and is published by DAW Publishing in New York City.

U.S. pushes for naval blockade in Gulf

WASHINGTON — U.S. officials are pushing for a U.N.-sponsored naval blockade in the Persian Gulf to cut off the flow of arms to Iran if the Khomeini government refuses to agree to a cease-fire in its war with Iraq, administration sources said Wednesday.

Pentagon, State Department and National Security Council officials arrived at the strategy as a way to enforce a proposed worldwide arms embargo, sources said.

U.S. test of missile may hurt arms talks

WASHINGTON — The Pentagon plans to test the Navy's new Trident 2 missile with 12 dummy warheads next month despite complaints by a key congressman that it would create havoc with future arms control efforts, administration officials said Wednesday.

Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger has pressed for a test firing with 12 warheads, sticking to the weapon's planned development that was outlined months ago. The first D-5s are to be put aboard Trident submarines next year.

At issue is whether the test would limit the number of missile-carrying submarines the Navy could deploy and if it would hinder negotiations under way in Geneva on reducing long-range nuclear missiles.

Reagan OKs relief aid to quake victims

LOS ANGELES — President Ronald Reagan declared a major disaster in earthquake-damaged Southern California Wednesday, allowing federal relief aid for more than 10,000 homeowners and businesses.

The declaration cleared the way for release of federal funds for temporary housing, grants of up to $5,000 for individuals and families, low-interest loans to cover uninsured property, business losses and other programs to supplement state and local recovery efforts.

Search continues for capsized refugees

SANTO DOMINGO, Dominican Republic — Rescue workers Wednesday began recovering the corpses of dozens of refugees who were thrown from a capsized vessel and drowned or were torn apart by sharks as they screamed for help, authorities said.

More than 100 of the estimated 160 Dominicans, possibly bent on illegal entry into the United States, aboard the 40-foot boat heading east toward Puerto Rico were missing and presumed dead after the Tuesday disaster, said Eugenio Cabral, Dominican civil defense director.

Rebels slay 150 civilians in Sri Lanka

COLOMBO, Sri Lanka — The cease-fire in Sri Lanka's ethnic war was in tatters Wednesday following the slayings Tuesday night of at least 150 civilians, mainly Sinhalese Buddhists, by Tamil separatist rebels and renewed attacks on Sri Lankan government troops.

Informed sources said late Wednesday that Sri Lankan President Junius Jayewardene and Indian Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi had issued a joint order to troops to shoot on sight any person found resorting to violence.

E. German family defects to West

West Germany — An East German family of five escaped to West Germany by crashing through a border fence in an army surplus truck and then climbing over other border barriers, West German border police said Wednesday.

Police said the family escaped during the night near the main official border crossing point at Helmstedt, near Hanover.

B-1B bombers grounded for inspection

WASHINGTON — The Air Force grounded its fleet of 69 new B-1B bombers Wednesday to inspect their emergency escape systems following the crash of one of the planes 10 days earlier that killed three of the six crewmen aboard.

The bomber ran into a flock of birds while on a practice low-level bombing run over southeastern Colorado Sept. 28. Two of the four engines were crippled and at least one caught fire.

Three people aboard parachuted safely from the burning bomber after it climbed to 15,000 feet. A chief purpose of the climb was to give the crew enough clearance from the ground and time to get out of the plane. Why the other three could not escape and went down with the plane remained a mystery.

Trial opens in Howard Beach racial death

NEW YORK (UPI) — A prosecutor Wednesday said a mob of white youths who spotted three blacks in their predominately white neighborhood cried "let's go kill them" then attacked one with a baseball bat and chased another onto a highway to his death.

But the lawyer for one of four whites on trial for murder and manslaughter said during his opening statements that the victims were "no angels" who used cocaine and "were looking for an argument. This is no racial incident."

Florida closes loophole in new gun law

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. — The Florida House voted unanimously Wednesday to close a loophole in a permissive new gun law that allowed people to carry guns openly in public, but the Senate delayed action for a day.

A loophole in the law, which took effect Oct. 1 and replaced an array of local gun ordinances, inadvertently allowed anyone to carry guns visibly.

Rivals bash Gore in debate

Accused of making phony differences

By Clay F. Richards
United Press International

WASHINGTON — Democratic presidential rivals ganged up Wednesday on Sen. Albert Gore for trying to set up "phony" differences among the candidates to win the votes of conservative Dixie Democrats.

In the third straight debate among the six Democratic candidates, Gore tried to distance himself from the others in the race.

Gore advocated a strong defense, saying the other candidates wanted to retreat from the Persian Gulf and generally were guilty of practicing "the politics of retreat, complacency and doubt" in foreign policy.

Sen. Paul Simon of Illinois took issue.

"You criticized those in the party who advocate the 'politics of retreat complacency and doubt,'" Simon told Gore in the debate at the Kennedy Center Concert Hall.

SAYING HE HAD voted such defense programs as the Stealth bomber and beefing up conventional forces, Simon said, "I don't think I fall into that category. I think it would be healthy if you didn't mean any of us to say so right now and, if you do, I think we ought to be named."

During the debate, Gore refused to name the rivals he was talking about. But when the acrimonious exchange turned into a free for all after the formal session, the Tennessee senator blurted out that he was talking about "all five" opponents.

The sometimes hostile exchanges between Gore and his rivals were somewhat embarrassing to the sponsoring Democratic National Committee and moderator Paul Kirk, the party chairman, who had boasted of a Democratic Party united to drive the Reaganites out of the White House.

DURING THE DEBATE, Gore staunchly defended the decision to reflag tankers in the Persian Gulf and put them under protection of American warships. He also said he opposed efforts to ban test flights for missiles as part of an arms control treaty.

That provoked this exchange on stage after the debate.

Gore: "We can discuss differences in a civil way . . . and not make it personal and I haven't made any personal comments at all."

Simon: "I think we have to keep in mind the tone of those differences."

Gore: "If you can't stand the heat, get out of the kitchen . . ."

Rep. Richard Gephardt of Missouri: "I think what we don't need to do is create artificial differences or categories . . ."

Gore: "There's nothing artificial about a proposal to stop all flight testing of submarine- and land-based missiles. If I point out that this is damaging to our policy of deterrence, none of my opponents should take that personally . . . To describe that as knifing is just completely misguided. . . . I don't believe the United States should retreat from the Persian Gulf."

Simon: "There is not a single candidate here who says we should retreat."

A few minutes later Gephardt said: "Everybody agrees we ought to be there. The issue is how to do it. You have one view, we have a different view."

Gore responded strongly: "Retreat, complacency and doubt are labels I believe characterize a view in part of the Democratic Party that all five of my opponents have come close to subscribing to."

Former Gov. Bruce Babbitt of Arizona and Gov. Michael Dukakis were lesser participants in the exchange and Jesse Jackson tried to play peacemaker.

"We may disagree on two issues out of 10," Jackson said. "But our strength is in the (other) eight."

Top AIDS commission members quit

Reagan expresses 'deep regret'; new chairman named

By Jan Ziegler
United Press International

WASHINGTON — The two top members of President Ronald Reagan's controversial AIDS advisory commission quit Wednesday in an unexpected turn of events blamed by its departing vice chairman on internal turmoil and a lack of administration support.

Chairman Eugene Mayberry and Vice Chairman Woodrow Myers Jr. announced their resignations in separate cities, immediately raising questions about whether the commission would be able to fulfill its obligations.

Within hours, the White House announced retired Adm. James Watkins, a former chief of naval operations, would succeed Mayberry as chairman. No replacement was named for Myers, whose resignation had not been formally received.

"I HAVE BEEN honored to be part of the commission you have established to bring both public attention and health attention to the issue of AIDS," Mayberry told Reagan in a letter. "Your leadership has been important in setting a course for our country on dealing with this health problem."

Reagan said in a brief written statement that Mayberry had brought "a well-respected background" to the commission and accepted the resignation with "deep regret."

"I'm sure that Jim Watkins will provide the leadership that is necessary for the commission to review fully all aspects of the AIDS epidemic," he added.

In Rochester, Minn., Michael O'Hara, a spokesman for Mayberry, said only that the edocrinologist and Mayo Clinic executive "has resigned, effective today."

"He has not stated any specific reasons," O'Hara said. "I think he prefers not to get into any specifics."

sioner for the state of Indiana, said at a news conference in Indianapolis, "The difficulties we experienced were severe," but did not elaborate on their nature.

"I feel that I can no longer be effective in attempting to reach the goals outlined in the president's order creating the commission," he said.

The vice chairman said he had had a close working relationship with Mayberry and resigned as soon as Mayberry called to tell of his own resignation.

William Walsh, executive director and a commission member, said he was optimistic the panel would be able to complete its mission.

"I think we'll do a good job," he said in a telephone interview.

Aquino, military prepare for 'more serious' coup attempt

Officials charge Honason, Marcos involved

By Mark Fineman
Los Angeles Times

MANILA, Philippines — Philippine President Corazon Aquino ordered the closure Wednesday of at least three opposition-controlled radio stations and deployed Army tanks around her palace after loyal military leaders reported that another, "much more serious" attempted coup d'etat will be staged against her before this month's end.

The disclosure came after a marathon series of Cabinet meetings Tuesday night and Wednesday, in which Aquino's armed forces chief Gen. Fidel Ramos said the coup plot involved a powerful new "tactical alliance" between all major right-wing opposition leaders and hundreds of renegade soldiers, among them Col. Gregorio Honasan, who staged the nearly successful Aug. 28 coup attempt.

CITING MILITARY intelligence reports and "voluminous documents" seized in Tuesday night raids on five Manila hideouts being used by the renegade troops, Ramos asserted that deposed President Ferdinand Marcos and his close friend, Eduardo Cojuangco, were both involved in the plot.

Several reliable government sources doubted Marcos's involvement in the plot. They speculated that the allegation was part of a government campaign to discredit the still popular Honasan, who also helped to carry out the coup that overthrew Marcos in February 1986.

Those same sources said, however, that Cojuangco's involvement was far more likely and that it would deepen the threat to Aquino's 19-month-old government, which remains in crisis six weeks after it nearly fell to dissident officers and soldiers.

During his Cabinet briefing Wednesday, Ramos said that Cojuangco, a once-powerful and feared Marcos aide who has been in exile in Los Angeles since the February 1986 coup that overthrew Marcos, is now "in a nearby country with a six-seater executive aircraft standing by to bring him back to the Philippines as part of this plot."

COJUANGCO IS AQUINO'S cousin, but there has been a long-standing feud between his branch of the family and hers.

Ramos's assertions could not be independently verified. They were relayed during an afternoon briefing by Aquino's press secretary Teodoro Benigno, who said Ramos described the plot as "very, very serious," and he stressed that the government was clearly startled by Ramos's report.

"You can bet your life that we were given the kind of briefing that made our eyes pop open," Benigno said of the Cabinet session. Specifically, he added, Aquino and her Cabinet were alarmed by "the emergence of a new, very disturbing political dimension" to the frequent rumors about new coup plots.

"There are alliances in that political dimension and Marcos and Cojuangco are involved," Benigno said. "The tactical alliance we see now is a much bigger force than what transpired on Aug. 28."

Within hours of the Cabinet session, more than 1,000 troops backed by armored personnel carriers and tanks were deployed around Aquino's presidential palace.

Iranians attack Saudi tanker, survive raid

By Charles P. Wallace
Los Angeles Times

DUBAI, United Arab Emirates — Iranian gunboats attacked a Saudi Arabian chemical tanker Wednesday in the southern Persian Gulf.

The attack was described as another move in Iran's effort to apply internal pressure on the Saudi regime, which supports Iraq in the Iran-Iraq war.

Shipping sources said that the tanker, the 21,032-ton Raad al Bakry VIII, was attacked by three Iranian gunboats at about 4 a.m. The tanker is owned by a Saudi firm in Jidda and was off the coast of Dubai at the time of the attack.

The Iranians reportedly raked the vessel with machine-gun fire and rocket-propelled grenades. There were no injuries among the crew and damage to the ship was described as minor. The ship continued on its course to the Red Sea.

MEANWHILE, IRAQI aircraft reportedly raided an Iranian communications center at Ilam, about 120 miles east of Baghdad. The raid was described as retaliation for an Iranian rocket attack on Baghdad Monday night. According to the official Iraqi News Agency, all the planes returned safely.

In another development, the Japanese government announced in Tokyo that it will contribute about $10 million toward the protection of shipping in the Persian Gulf. It said it will also raise the level of its economic and technological aid to countries in the gulf region.

According to a Foreign Ministry official, the $10 million will go to "high-accuracy radio aids" to be installed in gulf nations to relay information on mine-sweeping and other data to ships in the waterway. The official did not describe the equipment or say what countries would have access to the information.

Wednesday's attack on the Saudi tanker was the first by Iran since last Thursday and followed a dramatic Iraqi air raid Monday on the Larak and Hormuz oil terminals near the Strait of Hormuz, at the mouth of the gulf. Five Iranian storage ships were hit in Monday's raid.

IRAN HAS A policy of retaliating for Iraqi air raids with attacks on shipping in the gulf. Western analysts said that they believe that Iran's assault on the Saudi tanker Wednesday was part of an Iranian campaign to increase internal pressure within Saudi Arabia, which is one of Iraq's primary benefactors in its war against Iran.

Last Saturday a number of Iranian speedboats reportedly approached an oil terminal operated jointly by Saudi Arabia and Kuwait at Ras al Khafji, but turned back when Saudi jet fighters were sent to the area.

There were reports Wednesday from Washington that about 50 Iranian speedboats had assembled near the Iranian oil terminal at Kharg Island and that they were loaded with explosives ready for an attack. There was no independent confirmation of these reports.

Erosha, one of two Soviet monkeys aboard a biological satellite mission, has broken free from his constraints and is playing with switches and electrodes, which may force the cancellation of the first joint Soviet-U.S. space project in five years. Reuters

Monkey business on Soviet satellite

By Charles Mitchell
United Press International

MOSCOW — A mutineer monkey is on a hunger strike that may make him difficult to control, threatening to force the early termination of the first joint Soviet-U.S. space project in five years, authorities said Wednesday.

The Tass news agency identified the monkey as Erosha, a name often given in Russian folklore and fairy tales to animals that are mischievously curious or are troublemakers.

Scientists are standing by to abort the week-old biological satellite mission because Erosha, one of two Rhesus monkeys aboard, has broken free from restraints and is playing with switches and electrodes, Tass and Radio Moscow reported.

The other monkey on board, Dryoma, or Dreamer in English, remains calm and strapped to his seat, Tass said.

The Sovetskaya Rossia newspaper said that data received from Cosmos 1987 also indicates that Erosha has not eaten in five days, a fact that could make his behavior even more erratic.

THE NEWSPAPER SAID scientists have taken Erosha's earth-bound understudy and placed him in a mockup of the endangered biological satellite in an attempt to anticipate the orbiting monkey's behavior and assess what potential damage he may cause.

The mission, which began Sept. 29, was to have lasted two full weeks, with the satellite returning to earth about Oct. 13.

Also on board the orbiting zoo are 10 rats, dozens of fish, lizards, plants and other life forms down to one-cell organisms sent aloft to test the effects of weightlessness on them.

"During the early days of the mission the reactions of the main passengers were in line with their names. Dryoma is calm and Erosha, who is younger, is a typical snooper," the Tass news agency said.

Tass said Soviet scientists first discovered that Erosha had broken free from his restraining cuff when he suddenly popped up on television minus the usual bands of electrodes attached to his skull. That was on the fifth day of the mission.

"He seemed more cheerful and started investigating everything around him including the cap on his head. What he has done with it is not clear so far. Specialists are accounting for all the variants of action by the younger passenger which is complicating the flight and standing in the way of its fulfillment," Tass said.

Farm survival

"Let's not kid anybody. This is a necessary bailout..." Senator Leon Panetta, D-Calif., said Tuesday after the House of Representatives approved, by a 365-49 vote, a bailout bill to save the financially troubled Farm Credit System.

A key provision of the bill, whose investment could reach $6 billion, would allow banks to sell farm mortgages to investors on the open market, giving bankers the opportunity to diversify their portfolios and generate greater returns.

The additional dollars channeled into agriculture would make it possible for banks to offer new loans and a glimmer of hope to struggling farmers. The availability of credit is essential to the survival of farms, especially those suffering severe financial stress.

The best news of all is that farmers will reap important benefits from the legislation. Often, it is more costly for banks to foreclose on loans than it is to strike a deal and help the struggling farmer get back on his feet. The new bill would require banks to restructure the debt, allowing the farmer to stay in business and remain on the farm.

The bill also establishes mediation proceedings for banks and farmers when repayment plans for restructured loans are being made. Farmers would also be able to appeal any mistreatment imposed upon them by their lenders.

Unfortunately, this extra leeway afforded farmers is strongly opposed at the White House, where a presidential veto has been threatened. The president must realize that despite economic indications that the financial crisis on the farms is improving, the losses already suffered are so severe that, without a fresh infusion of funds, they probably will not be able to survive. The president should approve the House's bill.

Damage control

Henry Ford III used to sum up his own stance on public relations: "Never complain, never explain." The styles of many of our presidential candidates could benefit from a little of this philosophy.

The tendency among both Democratic and Republican aspirants has been to explain ad nauseam (in hopes of explaining away) any mistakes, gaffes, inaccuracies or personal shortcomings the press brings to light. Then the candidate will complain about being pilloried by the media.

Recently we have seen Democratic hopeful Michael Dukakis stumping through the hamlets of Iowa apologizing over and over for the videotape which sank the Biden campaign. Since he supposedly didn't know about the ploy, simple acceptance of his manager's resignation and a straight-faced condemnation of such tactics would have sufficed. Instead we get self-flagellation.

Vice President George Bush is doing a bit of damage control himself these days, apologizing for a quip inspired by a recent Soviet military exercise. When the Russians were able to field 350 tanks without a breakdown, he said we should "send them to Detroit." The United Auto Workers took umbrage and Bush began groveling.

In fact, Bush's quip was inappropriate. American automobiles have improved radically in the last few years. So it is not necessarily in Detroit where expertise is needed.

Still, it is doubtful that the Pentagon could activate 350 of anything without a breakdown, thanks in part to the history of utter disregard military procurers have for dependability, a tendency aggravated by the present administration's liking for high-tech gadgetry. Bush doesn't bother to explain things like this.

The candidates should quit trying to be all things to all people. They should offer positive plans to address the problems facing us rather than neurotically minimizing the negative.

Justice for all

On Tuesday, the House of Representatives approved a whopping $6 billion in federal funds to the country's biggest agricultural lender, the Farm Credit System. If this measure passes, it will constitute one of the most expensive bailouts in the history of the nation.

The emotions aroused by such a measure are bullishly strong, especially in the farm belt. The image of a poor but honest family farmer stubbornly defending his right to work the land on which his parents are buried has become a pop culture icon.

But we're all hypocrites, and the Bradley Bill is our indictment. Before Congress right now, the bill proposes giving titles to 1.3 million acres of federal forest reserves, parks and grasslands in South Dakota back to the Sioux. The bill would also allocate more than $170 million in investment funds to the Sioux, who in 1868 were promised all the land in the western half of South Dakota by the federal government.

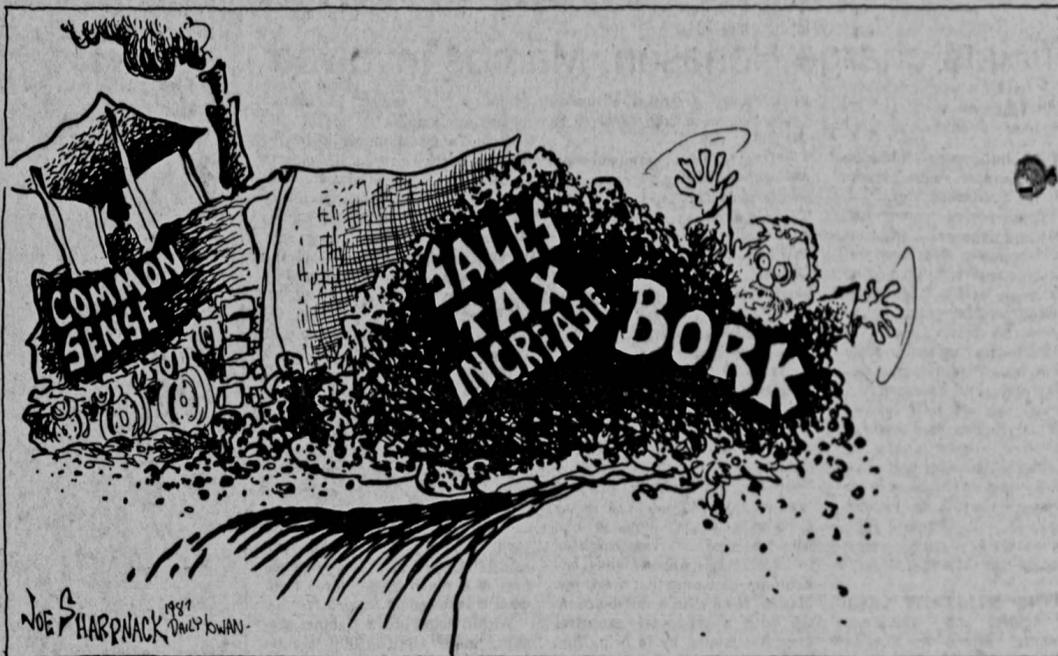

Twice since then the government has reneged. Twice the Sioux were herded off their land without even so much as the courtesy of having a multi-million dollar movie made about them.

The two beleaguered groups, the American farmer and the American Indian, make similar protests: the land isn't just a place to work, it's spiritually important to us. The only difference is time. The rich, brown soil tilled by the farmers is powdered a foot deep with the bones and blood of Indians who played and laughed and died here hundreds of years before Christopher Columbus ever crossed the ocean blue.

The farmers need help, yes, and they should get it. But the Indians — in this case the Sioux — need help raised to the power of a hundred years. The name for that kind of help is justice.

Taxpayer puts IRS on notice

Most people would break into a sweat and start trembling. That's the effect the Internal Revenue Service can have when they send someone a grim computerized letter that begins: "This is your final notice..."

And they'd be in a panic when they got to the parts that say: "A notice of federal tax lien may be filed... your property or rights to property may be seized. This includes salary or wages, bank accounts, commissions or other income. Real estate and personal property such as automobiles may also be seized and sold to pay your tax."

But when Allen Fehr, who runs an engineering consulting firm in Freeport, Ill., got such a letter, he didn't so much as bat an eye.

Despite the ominous threat, he didn't run to a lawyer, call an accountant or stick his head in the kitchen oven and turn on the gas.

HE SAT down and wrote a letter to the IRS saying, in effect: Go right ahead, seize my property — and make public idiots of yourselves.

Then he added one more notation to a diary he's been keeping for the past 20 months of the contacts he's had with bureaucrats at the IRS.

The final threat brought the number of contacts — by phone or mail — to 25.

And they all had the same purpose: To persuade Fehr to pay the IRS money he has already paid them. Plus interest and penalties.

Fehr's case is one of the best examples of bureaucratic, computerized bungling that I've seen in a long time.

It began in 1985 when the IRS audited a real estate partnership that Fehr was involved in and ruled that the partnership owed back taxes.

THIS WASN'T uncommon. The tax rules for real estate partnerships were constantly being revised and reinterpreted.

The IRS decided that Fehr still owed $17,632 in taxes for a four-year span.

So he signed the proper document, wrote the check and sent it to them. The IRS received the money and the canceled check came back with his next bank statement.

About three months later, he got a letter from the IRS telling him that he owed the $17,632 and asking him when he would pay.

He phoned someone at the IRS and told him that the check had been sent and cashed. The tax man said he would look into it.

"But I got another letter from him a month later, saying that the tax was still due and the interest was accumulating.

"I phoned him and told him the same thing, and again he said he'd follow through."

A FEW WEEKS later, a computer spit out another menacing letter saying that he owed the money and that he'd better pay up.

But that letter had someone else's name on it. So he called this other tax man and explained the situation.

"He told me that he'd need a copy of the canceled check and the consent forms I had signed showing that the IRS and I had agreed on that amount.

"So I sent copies of the canceled check and the consent forms."

You would think that would be the end of it. But it wasn't.

"He called me back. There was some problem on his end locating the check and the original consent forms because the check was now in Kansas City and he was in Chicago.

"I told him that was his problem, since I had sent them. He said he wanted me to make out new forms.

"I TOLD HIM that there was no way I was going to do that. I had already given them the original forms. So he got huffy. Here I've paid them what they wanted, followed their instructions and they're getting huffy.

"A few weeks later, the IRS guy called again and said that he had finally located the check, but he couldn't find the consent forms and wanted me to send some new ones. I told him that if their system couldn't cope with this, that was their problem. So he said, OK, he'd take care of it."

But the next month, he got another letter demanding payment and telling him what the latest interest was. And again he sent a copy of the canceled check.

And it went on and on. Back would come another letter saying that the check couldn't be found and asking him to send another one. He would send a copy of the check. Then he'd get a letter demanding payment and telling him what the interest was.

BY THE beginning of this year, he not only owed the $17,632 that he had already paid, but he owed interest of $9,105.

That comes to an extra $26,737. Even Chicago loan sharks don't charge that kind of juice.

And most recently came the warning that the IRS was going to seize everything he owned.

So he wrote what he says is his final letter to the "chief" of the Taxpayer Assistance Section of the IRS, in Kansas City.

After beginning the letter "Dear Chief," he reviewed the bureaucratic madness in great detail, then ended it by saying:

"We are proud, loyal, law-abiding Americans... However, we are quite frankly very tired of spending time and money in an effort to prove that you received and cashed our check.

"AFTER thoughtful deliberation, we have concluded that it is now up to you to prove that you did not receive and cash our check.

"We now will not quit until a complete apology is issued from somebody other than a computer and we are compensated for our very frustrating time."

So now it is up to the IRS. Will the computer attack again? Will the computer send agents to seize home, car and everything else Fehr owns and leave him and his wife huddling in the cold? Or will a human finally intercede?

But maybe there are no humans left in that office. Maybe the computer ate them all.

We'll wait and see.

U.S. economy faces trouble

To the prophets of economic doom, yesterday's 91-point drop in the stock market must seem like a timely harbinger of things to come. For while America is nearing a record for consecutive months of economic growth, enjoys both a low inflation and declining unemployment rate, and retains the world's only true "safe-harbor" currency, many economists and business leaders are nonetheless deeply pessimistic about our economic future.

In case you haven't noticed, a growing chorus of Cassandra's are ominously warning that the dual legacy of Reaganomics and years of economic neglect may be recession, depression and worse. Some analysts even suggest that the "American Century" has come to an inglorious end after fewer than 50 years. Worse yet, they say, the ignominious "Britainization" of America has begun.

ITEM: The respected British weekly The Economist noted in a recent cover story that, from a European perspective, the exuberance that characterized America in the early Reagan years has given way to hints of defeatism and despair. Americans, the editors write, now seem sulky and uncharacteristically defensive about the future.

ITEM: A special report published by The Wall Street Journal on global finance portrayed the United States as an economic "has been." The report strongly suggested it is time to recognize a new economic reality: that Japan is now the world's greatest economic power, at the height of its economic strength and roughly equivalent to the United States from 1946-1970 and Great Britain from 1851-1890. America, by contrast, looks increasingly like Britain from 1926-1944, poised on the precipice of a steep international economic and political decline.

ITEM: The August 1987 issue of The Atlantic featured a story by Yale historian Paul Kennedy entitled, "The (Relative) Decline of America." Its thesis is that America's shrinking share of world economic production, the collapse of its agricultural economy and its astronomical foreign debt has created a fundamental — and perhaps insurmountable — challenge to America's paramount position in world affairs.

ITEM: Writing in the Spring 1987 issue of Foreign Affairs, C. Fred Bergsten argues that unprecedented international economic imbalances have arisen during the 1980s. The systemic implications of these changes both for international politics and security may, if improperly managed, pose the risk of a severe global economic and political crisis.

ITEM: This month's issue of The Atlantic features an article by Peter G. Peterson, former chairman and chief executive officer of Lehman Brothers, entitled, with delicious irony, "The Morning After." According to Peterson, "The 1980s and 1990s may be remembered, with bitterness, as a turning point in America's fortunes — a period of transition when we took the British route to second-class economic status."

First, it is difficult to argue with The Economist's proposition that many American captains of industry have either lost the will or forgotten how to compete. American bankers contemptibly whine about Tokyo banks "unfairly cutting fees." Corporate moguls constantly gripe about foreign competitors "unfairly" cutting price and "stealing" market shares. Listening to some of these industrialists, you'd think that a fat profit margin was some sort of legal entitlement. No wonder we occasionally sound defeatist. No wonder, as well, that those who have lost their nerve are attracted to the panacea of protectionism.

Second, this writer finds the notion of American economic inferiority abhorrent, and the idea that we should concede the mantle of world leadership unthinkable. Most people I know do too, and retain that optimistic belief in America's ability to overcome difficult obstacles.

But Reaganesque nationalistic breast-beating is neither going to keep American economically strong nor politically respected. Nor can chauvinistic manifestations like trade protection help us revitalize our domestic economy or manage the world economy in the months ahead. Only a realistic appraisal of our current strengths and weaknesses can do that.

Thus, to the extent that the current spate of doom and gloom literature alerts Americans to the imperative need to confront the budget deficit, reduce our foreign-financed overconsumption and spur greater investment and productivity, it serves a vital purpose. James McCormick's column appears on the Viewpoints page every other week.

Protest

"In our view, individual students must have the freedom to choose to interview or not to interview with any employer who visits this campus," he said. "We must preserve this fundamental right to freedom of choice."
 "At the same time we respect the views of those who disagree with us," he said. "We encourage them to freely express their dissenting views in ways that do not restrict others in exercising their freedom of choice."

 Iowa Sen. Bev Hannon, D-Anamosa, who attended the protest at Westlawn, said the protesters were making an important point.

"I BELIEVE YOU have raised a good question today — should the UI facilitate the recruiting of students for an agency known for terrorism?" she said. "It's a question I will bring up with my fellow legislators."

 Hannon said she has traveled to Central America twice, the last time in August 1987 with a group of 12 women to observe the effects of war on Central American countries.

She said media coverage of conflicts there centers almost entirely on Nicaragua, to the exclusion of problems in other countries. The press has been quick to report the sending of Soviet arms to Central America, she said, but has not mentioned the United States sends $2.5 million every day to El Salvador.
 "As far as the reporting on Central America as a whole, the American press is, with few exceptions, out to lunch. Instead of reporting, they are repeating," she said.

DEMONSTRATORS continued to chant encouragement to the arrested protesters as they were put on the bus and about 25 demonstrators stayed after the bus left, saying the protest against the CIA on campus would continue.

 University Relations Assistant Director Tom Bauer said the 23 students arrested will also face disciplinary charges from the UI.
 The protest was part of a weeklong series of events sponsored by New Wave/Student Progressive Network to stop the agency's recruiting efforts at the UI.

Bork

ing down," one official said. "He's willing to go all the way. And that's what we want to happen unless Bork himself takes a different view."
 Bork thus appeared caught in a political twilight zone, with Reagan and GOP Senate conservatives urging him forward in a cause that White House officials and other Senate Republicans privately say is lost.
 After their show of support outside the Capitol, the Republican senators indicated by their tone that a showdown on the Senate floor over the Bork nomination could be long and bitter.

D-Del., and Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., the committee's ranking Democrat, Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Tex., said, "The American people know what the people who cheated in college think. We want to hear from the straight-A student."
 Biden has acknowledged he plagiarized from a law review article while in law school, one of the revelations last month that led to his withdrawal from the 1988 Democratic presidential campaign. Kennedy was expelled from Harvard University for cheating on an examination. He was later reinstated.

Gramm said the Bork nomination "deserves to be debated" by the full Senate.

"For the American people and the system, I hope we fight this out," he said. "I look forward to it."

SEN. JAKE GARN, R-Utah, bitterly told a reporter: "I've never been this angry before. It's a blot on the Senate. I've voted for liberal judges before. That will never happen again. If they (Democrats) win (the White House), there will never be another liberal judge as long as I'm in the Senate. The whole damn Senate will be tied up."
 Despite the defiant tone of the conservatives, Republican strategists said privately that the Bork confirmation fight has been lost. "I'd say it's gone. And I don't see how they turn it," one GOP aide said.

 Asked whether anyone in the meeting had told Bork he could still win confirmation, Dole said, "We told him we're still counting."

BESIDE CHILES and Graham, the other senators who Wednesday announced their opposition to Bork were: James Exon, D-Neb., Alan Dixon, D-Ill., John Breaux, D-La., Richard Shelby, D-Ala., Wyche Fowler Jr., D-Ga., Jim Sasser, D-Tenn., Albert Gore Jr., D-Tenn., and Sen. Kent Conrad, D-N.D. Sen. Wendell H. Ford, D-Ky., announced his opposition Tuesday night.
 Sen. Mark Hatfield, R-Ore., charging that Bork is the victim of a "lynch mob," said he would vote for confirmation.

 Exon said Bork "has not exhibited due judicial temperament by his adamant position to fight to the end to certain defeat on the floor..."

"He appears incapable of grasping that there is a time to aspire and a time to concede," Exon continued. "I respectfully urge Judge Bork and the president to come down from their defiant mountaintop and end the confrontation."

IN ONE OF the toughest indictments of Bork, Graham said, "His scrupulous inattention to the human consequences of adjudication is seen as a threat by many who have only recently won hard-won progress toward equality for all Americans. ... Scholastic brilliance, when it is bloodless and abstract, is nothing more than brilliance with blinders on."

Senate Majority Whip Alan Cranston, D-Calif., said there are now 56 votes against Bork, 40 for and four senators undecided. Cranston also said that it is moderate Republicans who are most eager to avoid being forced to vote on the divisive nomination.

"It's Republicans who don't want to walk the plank," he said. "They feel it's a loser either way. If they're loyal to the president, they get hurt. All the public opinion polls show that."

Tax

Hansen said.
 "We got the local option tax defeated," he said. "But that's just the beginning of it."
 "The state government needs to enact some tax laws that raise money for communities in an equi-able manner," he said. "A progressive city income tax is the fairest way to go."

A TEMPORARY INCREASE in city property taxes may be necessary, Hansen said, to balance the city's books in fiscal year 1989, when a $900,000 deficit is projected.

Some members of the Iowa City Council agreed this may be the only alternative to cutting back city services.

Councilor Larry Baker, whose council term expires before the 1989 budget will be voted upon, said the council ought to look at other revenue options, but said it isn't going to be his decision.
 "(The new council members) are the ones who are going to have to make the final decision," he said.

Baker voted against placing the sales tax referendum on the ballot. Iowa City Mayor William Ambrisco said the council will most likely be faced with either cutting services or raising property taxes.

"We're down to two options," he said.
 Ambrisco said the council may have to look at raising property taxes 11.7 percent to balance the city's budget.

Tickets

ts — which have a face value of $16.50 — for $50 apiece. McCabe paid the agent who bought the tickets a flat fee of $50 for waiting in line to buy the tickets before they went on sale.

Concerts are just one event for which McCabe buys and sells tickets. He also buys tickets for local athletic events and plays, national events such as the Indy 500, television shows like "Saturday Night Live" or "Late Night with David Letterman," and college football bowl games. He said U2, Bruce Springsteen, the Grateful Dead and Pink Floyd have been the hottest concert tickets in the past years.

"You name it, I can get it," McCabe said. "But I try to stay away from county fairs."

MCCABE STAYS away from county fairs and concentrates on major events because most of the tickets he sells are for what he calls "corporate incentive programs" — perks for corporations interested in luring new shareholders and clients.

"The people I'm trying to deal with are affluent and need tickets for clients," he said. "Time is more valuable than the $15 face value of the ticket. That means nothing to them."

Athletic events such as the Super Bowl and the Master's Golf Tournament — both annual events — are two of the hottest and most lucrative money-makers, McCabe said, adding that this year's tickets for the four-day golf tournament, at a face value of $85, will probably go for $1,500.

Iowa football tickets are also highly in demand by local corporations, McCabe said. He does, however, deal with individuals or private parties when he has tickets left over.

"I'M SURE I'LL be there at the U2 concert selling tickets," he said.

McCabe said unlike corporate ticket-buyers concerned more with saving time than money, those buying U2 tickets from Tickets Are Us were unable to get them themselves and probably would have if they had known about the concert earlier.

"They had a last-minute change in plans or they didn't hear about the show until the last second," he said, adding generally these people are just die-hard fans who would see the concert regardless of the cost. "They may be sitting in the front row wearing silk jackets or be dressed like the Grateful Dead. Who knows?"

IN ORDER TO keep his rapidly moving business alive, McCabe must always know who will be where when before most people. He keeps "hundreds" of contacts in "every major city" and has three full-time employees, as well as six WATS lines and a toll-free number in his Bettendorf office.

"I'm on the phone 70 percent of the day," he said, adding he travels frequently.
 McCabe also must keep up on laws forbidding ticket scalping by researching state statutes nationwide and consulting attorneys.

Ticket scalping, a common business on the east and west coasts but less common in Iowa, is legal in the state, Iowa Attorney General Tom Miller said.

"We certainly don't encourage it, but there's nothing illegal about it in the state of Iowa," UI Campus Security Director Bill Fuhrmeister said.

McCabe compared the selling of tickets to the selling of stocks.

"One day you buy a stock for $18 and the next day it's worth $40. It's the same for tickets," he said. "What I have is a commodity and its cost goes up depending on supply and demand."

Richards dreams of title, Olympics

By G. Hammond-Kunke
The Daily Iowan

What else could Iowa field hockey player Erica Richards want?

Coming out of Camden Catholic High School in Pennsauken, N.J., Richards was voted Field Hockey Player of the Year by The Philadelphia Inquirer. Richards started on both Camden Catholic's state title teams in field hockey and softball.

With those credentials, it is easy to understand why Richards was recruited by some of the top programs in the country, including three-time national champ Old Dominion, the current No. 1-ranked North Carolina and Northeastern, to name a few.

As a first-year player, Richards helped Iowa to its first national championship. So what else could Richards want?

"I'd like to win the national championship again and I'd like to make the (1992) United States Olympic Team," Richards said. "That would really be awesome."

THOSE ARE NOT implausible goals for the swift-moving, slick-passing sophomore. It's obvious Richards will continue to improve.

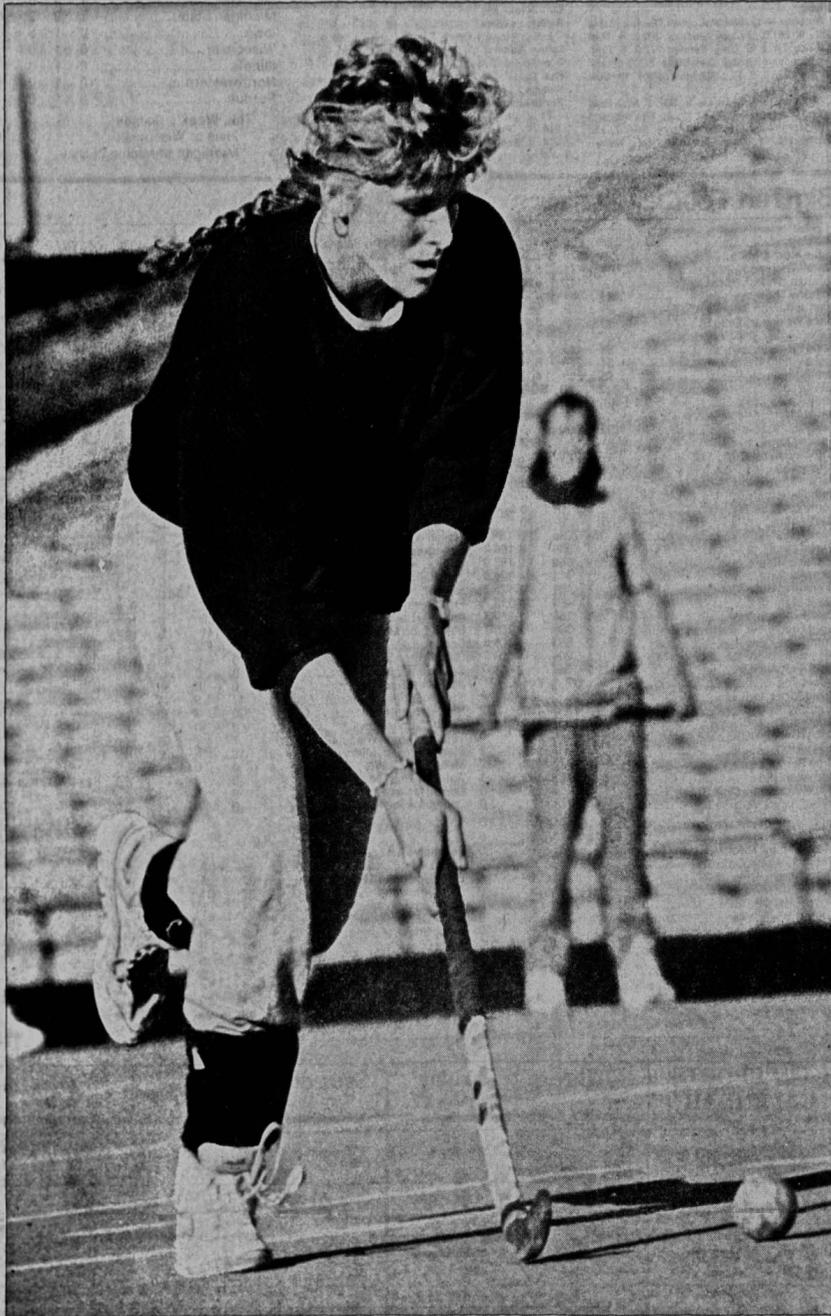

With six goals this year, Richards has already surpassed last season's scoring output by one. Her most recent goal came with 45 seconds left in the second overtime against Michigan last Saturday to give the Hawkeyes a victory.

"That game was so frustrating," Richards said. "The whole team was frustrated. We tried so hard to score and we kept shooting and finally I got one in. It felt great to get the win."

Richards started the season in the front-line left-wing slot but has been moved to the center position, a switch Richards likes.

"There's a lot more action in the center as opposed to the wing," she said. "On the left side you're on your non-stick side. At center you can create more flat and through passes.

"PLUS, WE HAVE a lot more plays designed to the right side of the field because it's harder for the defenders on the other team because of its their non-stick side."

Richards, who gets inspiration from scoring, realizes there is a lot of room for improvement for her and the 12th-ranked Hawkeyes.

"Just from the start of the year to now there has been a lot of progress on the team. We've been putting a lot of shots on goal, but I think our biggest problem has been

Morton set to rebuild Wisconsin

By Dan Millea
The Daily Iowan

First-year Coach Don Morton has his hands full at Wisconsin, inheriting a football program that came oh-so close to being a Big Ten power, then fell like a brick to the league cellar after the death of then-Head Coach Dave McClain.

McClain had spent eight years rebuilding the Badger program, taking it to the brink of national notice with three bowl appearances and four upsets of Big Ten bully Ohio State in his final six seasons.

On top of that, Wisconsin has sent more players to the NFL than any other conference team in the last few years. But when he died suddenly of a heart attack before the 1986 season, McClain left the Badgers just short of being a true Big Ten contender.

THEN CAME THE Jim Hilles era, and the quick demise of the Badger program. Despite returning 16 starters, Wisconsin went 3-9 last year and finished last in the conference. Coach Hilles was quickly ushered out and the 40-year-old Morton brought in.

His job is to bring the program back to bowl game respectability and eventually win a Big Ten title.

"I've been preparing for this day for 18 years," Morton said after getting the job. "I think it's important for all of us, no matter what our profession and no matter what our career, to pursue a dream."

With only eight starters — just one on defense — back from last season, Morton's dreams may have to wait at least one more year. The Badgers are currently 2-2, including losses to Utah and Michigan, the latter a 49-0 drubbing in Ann Arbor last weekend.

"WE DID NOT set a precedent," Morton said in defense of the beating his team took. "We aren't the first team to go into Ann Arbor and get soundly beaten. Young people are resilient, they do bounce back."

In defense of Morton, he had the least number of starters back in the Big Ten this season, and when given the time he has proven himself in the past.

A 1969 graduate of Augustana (Ill.), Morton has never had a losing record in eight seasons as a collegiate head coach, six at North Dakota State and two at Tulsa.

At North Dakota State Morton claimed four North Central Conference titles and a Division II National Championship in 1983. His teams lost in the national title game in 1981 and 1984.

MORTON THEN HEADED to Tulsa, where he promptly won a Missouri Valley Conference title in 1985 and turned in a 7-4 mark in the Golden Hurricane's first season as an independent last year.

Coming into the 1987 season Morton had won nearly 75 percent of his games, better than Ohio State's Earle Bruce, Iowa's Hayden Fry and Purdue's Fred Akers. Only Michigan's Bo Schembechler has a better collegiate winning percentage among active Big Ten coaches.

But obviously Morton's accomplishments came at a lower level of competition than the Big Ten, and it's in Madison that he will truly prove himself.

"I'm not a genius and I'm not a magician," Morton said.

Grant has overseen 'revolution' in athletics

Christine Grant

By Hugh Donlan
The Daily Iowan

There are only nine NCAA Division I schools that have a women's athletic department — and Iowa is one of them.

In 1973 Christine Grant became the Iowa women's athletic director while still in graduate school. She inherited a program whose participants were not allowed to use the Field House, that had one set of uniforms for three women's teams, whose golf team was not allowed to practice on the golf course, had no scholarships to award and had to scrounge for equipment.

"It was almost less than a club sport because some club sports on the campus were fairly well-funded," Grant said in a recent interview.

In Control

The second of a two-part series on Iowa's Athletic Directors

Today:
Women's Athletic Director Christine Grant

TODAY THE PROGRAM supports 10 intercollegiate varsity sports that have enjoyed tremendous success. Last year, Iowa women's teams in volleyball and cross country were nationally ranked. The track team set an NCAA relay record. The basketball team captured its first Big Ten championship and was one game away from the Final Four. The field hockey team won the national championship, a first in Iowa women's athletics, after winning its third Big Ten title in five years.

Women's athletics at Iowa have become first-rate, and Grant has been a crucial variable.

The Iowa associate professor of physical education and sports studies has been responsible for overseeing the entire women's athletic program. Her duties include the preparation and disbursement of a $2.8 million budget, scheduling of facilities for practices and events and the hiring of personnel.

BECAUSE OF THE great scope of the work she is responsible for, much of the athletic aspects of her work is delegated to the associate and assistant directors of women's athletics, Linda Hackett and Paula Jantz.

Grant considers her most critical task the hiring of coaches.

"If you hire the right head coach, it makes all the difference in the world," Grant said in her Scottish accent. "If you hire the wrong head coach, then you've got a nightmare."

The athletic director does more than act as an administrator. She also teaches and acts as an advisor to the physical education and sports studies graduate program.

"Theoretically, half of my job is teaching and advising in the graduate program, and that's an area I really enjoy," Grant said.

"This kind of job you could work 24 hours a day, you really could. I think you've got to be somewhat sensible about it so you don't burn out."

"I THINK TEACHING keeps things in perspective, it really does," Grant said. "That's the primary purpose of this university. And I try to keep that in the foremost part of my mind. Even when I'm being the athletic director."

"My job is trying to ensure our coaches don't get that kind of pressure. Because when that pressure gets too great, that's when all the abuses start. Coaches start feeling, 'God, I've got to win. Maybe I've got to do something I'm not sure I think is right because I've absolutely got to win.'"

"I see my job as minimizing that pressure."

Iowa women's teams have enjoyed more than success on the athletic field. When Grant says she emphasizes education she means

Fry lets the doctor address injury issue

By Mike Trilk
The Daily Iowan

Hayden Fry has been known for a lot of things since he came to Iowa — take over an ailing football program.

From the Hawkeyes' Tiger Hawk emblem to his "l'il dumplings" to his vast array of cowboy boots, Fry is loved by Iowa fans from Council Bluffs to Davenport. And Fry has said that he loves the coaching job at Iowa and would have a tough time ever leaving.

But that's where the love affair ends as Fry has not always gotten along with the press — or the press hasn't always gotten along with Fry.

One of the main reasons Fry and the news media have been on thin ice is the situation regarding injuries. Fry has always kept mum on his injury report, and because of that he has received criticism from not only the press but his coaching peers as well.

BUT ENOUGH WAS enough as Fry invited Iowa team physician John Albright to address a host of reporters gathered for Fry's weekly press conference Tuesday on the reasons for Iowa's secretive injury report.

"I'm completely irritated with people insinuating that I'm lying to people about injuries," Fry said.

"The way that we go over injuries has to be on a day-to-day basis," Albright said. "The trainers and I and the other physi-

Iowa spikers down Bulldogs

By Anne Upson
The Daily Iowan

Iowa broke their four-match losing streak Wednesday night at Carver-Hawkeye Arena, beating Drake in four games, 15-0, 15-3, 15-17, 15-6.

The victory wasn't the only thing the Hawkeyes celebrated. Senior co-captain Ellen Mullarkey recorded her 1,000th career kill.

"I had no idea. It was great, really nice," Mullarkey said. The middle hitter now ranks third on Iowa's all-time kill list.

The first game was interrupted and a short celebration took place on the court after Mullarkey reached her milestone. She received a rose and a trophy.

Although the Hawkeyes won the match, Coach Sandy Stewart was not pleased that it took four games.

"I AM TICKED off," Stewart said

Volleyball

after Iowa ran its record to 7-6. "We lost the flow and just didn't execute. This is definitely a rebuilding season."

In the fourth and last game the Hawkeyes came out fighting and led Drake by five points before the Bulldogs scored a second point. Then Iowa held the visitors at six points while they surged ahead to win the match 15-6.

Drake Coach Bill MacLachlan said his team, whose record falls to 3-12, played better in the third game.

"Iowa didn't play bad. We had a couple of breaks," he said about the Bulldogs' only victory of the evening.

Drake scored the first point of the game and continued to lead. The Bulldogs held the Hawkeyes at four points in the beginning of the game before Iowa caught up 10-11. From there the game was neck-and-neck until Drake's Amy Krell scored a kill, giving the Bulldogs a 17-15 win.

STEWART SAID A cause of the third game loss was the setting of outside hitter Kari Hamel.

"Kari was not meant to be a setter. She does not have the capabilities," Stewart said.

According to Stewart, the right outside position, opposite of Toni Zehr, is open.

"No one has earned the starting position yet. We will keep putting people in," Stewart said.

Stewart remains positive about the six freshmen on the team.

"They are fantastic, real coachable. They just need to play with more confidence."

Although freshman Ginger Lore-

son started, Stewart said she doesn't have the playing experience to continue starting. "She plays well at times but she plays like a freshman with hesitation," the Iowa coach said.

IOWA PLAYED aggressively in the first two games to beat the Bulldogs by wide margins. They won the second game 15-3 and the first 15-0.

"It was embarrassing to lose like that," MacLachlan said. "We played better later."

Both coaches praised the play of Iowa's Mullarkey and Zehr.

"Mullarkey made a big difference. We couldn't stop her," MacLachlan said.

"Toni played excellent. She showed leadership ability," Stewart said.

Iowa's next match is Friday against Michigan in Ann Arbor.

Gorton wins Longdriving contest

PENSACOLA, Fla. — Michael Gorton of Santa Barbara, Calif., won the $50,000 Michelin National Longdriving Championship Tuesday with a 318-yard, 34 1/2 inch drive at Perdido Bay resort.

Gorton, 33, appearing in the final round for the second consecutive year, earned $15,000.

Bobby Wilson of Sherwood, Ark., finished second with a drive of 312 yards, 20 1/2 inches, while defending champion Art Sellinger of Eules, Texas, was third at 309 yards, 10 1/2 inches. Wilson won $7,000 and Sellinger $5,000.

Another California native, Iowa quarterback Dan McGwire, finished third in a Michelin regional longdriving contest held this summer at Iowa City's Finkbine Golf Course.

Former UNLV recruit fined $800

NORTH LAS VEGAS, Nev. (UPI) — Former Nevada-Las Vegas basketball recruit Lloyd Daniels was fined $800 Tuesday for attempting to purchase cocaine in February.

Daniels, 19, who was originally charged with a felony, pleaded guilty in June to a reduced misdemeanor charge of attempting to possess a controlled substance.

At the time of his plea, Justice of the Peace James Kelly said if Daniels, a first-time offender, remained drug free for 90 days, the misdemeanor citation would be erased from his record.

On The Line

Today's On The Line is once again being replaced by Off The Wall — Take No. 2. OTW is dedicated to inflated sports objects, both animate and inanimate — like the Twinkie Dome in Minnesota, the home of baseball's poorest excuse for a baseball team. The Twinkies are really playing racquetball with a baseball bat.

On a more serious note, The Daily Iowan's newsroom had both of its double doors shattered down. Had the California earthquake struck Iowa City? Had CIA protesters sabotaged our newsroom? Was it Dan Millea's pet puppy (really a vicious wolf) who chewed down the doors?

No, it was all because of Mike "Magic" Trilk. Trilk's ego has gotten so huge (because of his status as the DI's top football prognosticator) that he couldn't get his now 88-pound watermelon head through the doors.

If you want the chance to lower Trilk's ego a few thousand notches, go for it by picking the most games correct and winning yourself a 16-gallon keg. To be real cool you could then invite the sports staff over for a party with the keg you've won from Iowa City's friendliest hotspot — Fitzpatrick's — located at 525 S. Gilbert.

Don't forget the simple rules:

Iowa tennis 'looking sharp;' ready for Nebraska tourney

By Tom Dickerson
The Daily Iowan

After coming off an impressive showing at the Northwestern Invitational last weekend, Iowa women's tennis Coach Micki Schillig is looking for continued success starting today at the Nebraska Invitational in Lincoln, Neb.

"I think last week built some confidence for us," Schillig said. "I think they're (the players) ready for this weekend."

The highlight of last weekend's action was Iowa's doubles play. The Hawkeyes' No. 1 doubles team of Catherine Wilson and Pennie Wohlford captured the doubles championship bracket at Northwestern over tough competition, and the No. 2 team of Liz Canzoneri and Madeleine Willard advanced to the semifinals before losing.

"Both of those teams are looking real sharp," Schillig said.

UNLIKE THE Northwestern Invitational where there was just one flight of singles and one flight of doubles, the Nebraska tournament will employ eight flights of singles competition and one flight of doubles.

That means No. 1 players will play only against No. 1 players from other teams, No. 2 players will face No. 2 players, etc., through eight flights of singles.

"It will be different," Schillig said. "It will be all match-ups, not like the one big draw like last weekend."

Other teams in the invitational include Colorado, Minnesota, New Mexico, Texas Tech, Wichita State and host squad Nebraska.

Schillig said the Hawks had a good workout Monday and went inside to hit yesterday because of the cool weather.

"We didn't have any strenuous workouts, we were just working on some brush-ups," Schillig said.

SCHILLIG'S LINEUP for the singles flights will go: No. 1 Flight Wohlford, No. 2 Canzoneri, No. 3 Willard, No. 4 Wilson, No. 5 open, No. 6 Tracey Peyton, No. 7 Susan Evans and No. 8 Colleen Nichols.

Pat Leary was slotted for the fifth flight but is still suffering from a kidney problem. She will resume practice soon and might be ready for Tuesday's home meet against Western Illinois.

"Pat still won't be traveling because of being sick," Schillig said. "Other than that we're happy and healthy."

Wilson-Wohlford and Canzoneri-Willard will comprise two of Iowa's three doubles teams. The third team will be Evans and Peyton or Nichols.

"I'm not sure what I'm going to do with my third team yet because it was supposed to be Pat and Susan," Schillig said.

As for the outlook this weekend, Schillig said, "I hope that we can win a couple of the different flights. I think the competition is going to be tough, but I hope we can win a few of them."

Competition began this morning and will conclude Saturday.

Canucks: Signing Quinn was 'business practice'

VANCOUVER, British Columbia (UPI) — On the opening day of testimony in the Vancouver Canucks' civil suit against the NHL, the team's majority owner claimed he was using common business practice by paying rival coach Pat Quinn $100,000 at midseason.

Frank Griffiths Wednesday testified the payment was merely a signing bonus to seal a contract making then-Los Angeles Kings Coach Quinn president and general manager of the Canucks.

"It was a matter of ordinary common business practice for me," Griffiths explained. "It's the water that goes into the cement so that it casts up hard."

The trial stems from NHL President John Ziegler's Jan. 30 decision to impose a $310,000 fine on the Canucks for signing Quinn in late 1986 while he was still coaching Los Angeles. Ziegler also fined the Kings $110,000 and Quinn was barred from coaching in the NHL until the 1990-91 season.

Footballers face off Sunday

By Hugh Donlan
The Daily Iowan

Sunday's battle between No. 1-ranked Imprinted Sports Wear and Bob's Place at 11 a.m. on the fields south of the Recreation Building will be flag football at its finest.

"It's a blood and guts match-up," Imprinted Sports Wear's Dave Hall said.

The game will feature "two teams that really know how to play the game," according to Hall.

Both teams are 2-0 and Bob's Place will get a chance at cracking the men's independent rankings, which look like this: Imprinted Sports Wear holds the top spot with Franchise in second and Sophists third. Pi Kappa Alpha leaps to No. 4 after two impressive wins last week. Exance, Neon Knights and Back Door Front Door hold down Nos. 5 through 7. Delta Sigma Delta is ranked No. 8, while

Intramurals

Unit and Old Mill round out the list at ninth and 10th.

AFTER VICTORIES IN COED action last week, Alpha Chi Sigma will face DSD, Thermos meets Dionysus, Team Xerox goes up against Choppin' Broccoli and The Anson Brigade plays Cow Tipsters.

Gamma Phi Beta is slated to take on Delta Gamma, while Delta Zeta meets Pi Beta Phi in Sorority competition.

In Residence Hall play, Flip Flop defeated Sea Shore II, Go K-Team II beat Bordwell and Stallions topped Mayflower 6AB.

Upcoming events:

Now is the time to start organizing teams for the Pre-Holiday Basketball Tournament tentatively set to start the second week of November. Entries are due Oct. 24 in Field House Room E216.

Recreational Services is extending the due date for inner-tube water polo until Oct. 14. Games will begin Oct. 18.

Entries for the field goal contest are due Oct. 14 and the competition will be Oct. 18 in Kinnick Stadium.

Recreational Services is offering the opportunity to go trapshooting at Quail Ridge Gun Club. Guns are provided by Quail Ridge for a $3 fee. Entries are due Nov. 5 and competition will be Nov. 9 and Nov. 11.

If you have any questions concerning any of these events contact Recreational Services at 335-9292 or stop by in Field House Room E216.

Intramurals is a weekly feature in The Daily Iowan. If you would like information published contact Hugh Donlan at the DI sports desk, 335-5848.

Gaetti stars in Twins' victory

By Ira Kaufman
United Press International

MINNEAPOLIS — Don Baylor delivered a pinch-hit single to break an eighth-inning tie and Gary Gaetti homered twice Wednesday night, lifting the Minnesota Twins to an 8-5 victory over the Detroit Tigers in Game 1 of the American League playoffs.

The playoff triumph was the first for the Twins since divisional play began in 1969. Minnesota was swept 3-0 by Baltimore in 1969 and 1970.

The Twins, whose 56-25 record in the Metrodome was the best home mark in the majors, will start Bert Blyleven, 15-12, in Game 2 of the best-of-seven series tonight. The Tigers will go with Jack Morris, 18-11, who is unbeaten in eight decisions in the Metrodome.

American League

IN ENDING DETROIT Manager Sparky Anderson's nine-game winning streak in playoff competition, the Twins blew a 4-1 lead only to rally in the eighth.

The Tigers scored twice in the eighth to take their first lead, 5-4. Then Dan Gladden of the Twins led off the bottom of the inning with a single. First baseman Darrell Evans caught Greg Gagne's bunt in foul territory, but Kirby Puckett lined a double to left-center and Gladden beat the relay throw home with the tying run.

Rookie Mike Henneman replaced starter and loser Doyle Alexander and walked Kent Hrbek intentionally before Gaetti walked on five pitches. Willie Hernandez, relegated to mop-up duty in recent months, replaced Henneman. Baylor singled to left for a 6-5 lead, and Tom Brunansky followed with a two-run double to left-center with Baylor nailed at the plate.

Alexander was 9-0 with a 1.53 ERA for the Tigers since his acquisition from Atlanta Aug. 12, but the Twins roughed up the veteran right-hander for eight hits and six runs in 7 1/2 innings. Jeff Reardon, who replaced Frank Viola in the eighth, picked up the victory.

Reardon, who saved 31 games after being obtained from Montreal in the off-season, allowed one hit in two innings. The right-hander struck out the side in the ninth, including Gibson to end the game with the tying run at the plate.

Doctor

cians on the staff see the athletes and watch the progress of their injury.

"For an example, last week with Peter Marciano, Coach Fry could not give you an answer of what his progress was because no one knew. We were waiting to see if his bones would heal. They looked like they might, but he didn't practice and he didn't do much walking, as a matter of fact, until right before game time when you could see the result that he was well.

"WHAT WE DO IS see everybody on Sunday morning and then look at them again Sunday evening, again at practice on Monday and then Coach Fry and I meet before the Tuesday conference," Albright said. Albright added that other factors come into play.

"There is something called the Buckley Amendment that has to do with release of information about college students about their grades and their medical status," Albright said. "We have about 20 students that won't allow any information at all out about their medical status."

Simply, Albright was taking the blame for Fry, and supposedly certain players, who don't want information about their injuries released.

"Coach Fry gets a very sketchy report," Albright said. "I'm the one that causes Hayden Fry's hesitation about talking about injuries, and that puts Hayden on the spot."

Grant

it. Iowa women's athletics boasts a 79 percent graduation rate, the highest graduation rate of any athletic program in the country.

THE GOALS FOR Iowa women's athletics are simple. Grant sees them as a high graduation rate, to consistently finish in the top three of the Big Ten and to be ranked in the Top 20 nationally. A woman athlete at Iowa is a student first and an athlete second and must strive for excellence in all the arenas of life.

The success of an athletic program can be measured in many ways. Win-loss records, graduation rates and the progress of students professionally are all important factors when measuring Iowa's progress.

There are some very unique aspects of the Iowa women's program that contribute to its achievements. Iowa is one of the few schools to have a women's athletic department that is not a branch of the men's department. It has also been able to attract and retain the finest coaches.

"WHAT IT ALL boils down to is ... you know ... it's a game. And I don't think you dare lose sight of that," Grant said.

In addition to being the director of the successful program at Iowa, Grant has served as a U.S. Olympic Committee member, has been a member of the Big Ten task force to study women's athletics, was selected as a field hockey judge for the 1980 Olympics, was the coach of the Canadian National field hockey team as well as the Iowa field hockey team, and has recently become the president of the National Collegiate Council of Women's Athletic Administrators. The list of Grant's contributions to Iowa athletics and women's athletics in general goes on and on.

The success and progress of women's athletics at Iowa is the result of several factors. Grant is the most obvious, but she has had the full support of the men's athletic department and the university administration.

"THE GROWTH OF the women's program would not have been possible without the total support of the president of the university, which I have always enjoyed and our program has always enjoyed, and also the support of (Men's Athletic Director) Bump Elliott,"

Grant said.

Grant spoke highly of her men's counterpart. "He is an exceptional man. I've met a lot of athletic directors from across the country. I have tremendous respect for him. He goes out of his way to support us and I know so many other men in athletics who go out of their way to put down women's sports. He's really unique," she said.

While Grant has set and maintained the highest standards for her athletic department, she also has goals of her own.

"I'll probably get out of being the athletic director before I retire and go back to teaching. I'd also like to have some time to write. Because I've been through a revolution with all these women. We should record what happened."

Richards

not seeing the open goal at the right time," Richards noted.

"We're getting closer to where we should be. I think for a while we were living on last year's national championship. Now we realize that this is a totally different team."

Richards also has some of her own goals.

"PERSONALLY, I need to work a lot more on my combination passing," she said. "Iowa Coach Judith (Davidson) always tells us to pull the ball back and don't run forward so you can see the field and other people to pass it to. I have a tendency to get too anxious when I get in close and I let go of a shot when I probably should have passed the ball."

Richards grew up 10 miles from Philadelphia on the New Jersey side of the Delaware River. Her father influenced her to be an athlete, and she has no regrets about leaving the big city for the big corn country.

"It's such a change, a good change," Richards said. "Though I do miss the Flyers and the Phillies, I really love it here in Iowa. I don't have any second thoughts about coming out here. Academically, it's a great school, too."

Another thing Richards misses is not having the opportunity to play ice hockey.

"I LOVE ICE hockey. My favorite player is 'The Great One' (Wayne Gretzky). That's one thing about being a woman athlete, professionally there's not much there for you as a player."

"Another pain in the neck is that we don't get any fans here. There used to be more people at our high school games," she added.

Richards said she would like to see more fans turn out for games, and this weekend is the right time to catch some field hockey action. The Hawkeyes face Ohio State Friday, St. Louis Saturday and No. 16 Michigan State Sunday.

"Come out and see a game," she said. "Michigan State is a really big game for us, especially after their upset win over Michigan."

It brings out the best in all of us.

Montana crosses 49ers' picket line

REDWOOD CITY, Calif. (UPI) — Two-time Super Bowl MVP Joe Montana, wide receiver Dwight Clark and 10 other San Francisco 49ers broke ranks with striking NFL players Wednesday and reported to camp.

The club also traded non-union linebacker Keith Browner to the Los Angeles Raiders and non-union running back Andre Hardy to the Seattle Seahawks Wednesday for future draft considerations.

Head coach Bill Walsh, who last week asked Montana and the other strikebreakers to stay out for the sake of team unity, said it was time for the 49ers to get back to work.

"We had hoped the matter (the strike) would be settled by this time," Walsh said. "We gave it as much time as we could."

The returning 49ers will be in the lineup Sunday against the Atlanta Falcons. However, Walsh would not commit to starting them.

"THOSE VETERANS we have may or may not start," he said. "It's too early to tell. But (Sunday's game is) a league game, a division game. We are going to play to win."

The returning veterans announced their intentions Tuesday at a team meeting that at times grew vocal.

"I won't say it was a heated meeting," Clark said on his morning radio show. "But everyone got to say what was on their mind."

The first to arrive was cornerback Eric Wright about 8:30 a.m. Stragling in over the next hour were running backs Roger Craig and Jeff Fuller, rookie tight end Ron Heller, Clark, Montana, running back Joe Cribbs, fullback Harry Sydney, rookie linebacker George Cooper, tight end Russ Francis, defensive end Dwayne Board and defensive tackle Pete Kugler.

Joe Montana

"I HAVE NOT always agreed with the union's direction, and although I think Gene Upshaw has come a long way in improving our situation, I have by way of staying out on strike with my teammates (past and present) paid a dear price in losing over $300,000," Francis said in his statement. "I have paid my dues in triplicate to the efforts, and I can no longer afford this support."

Dravecky two-hits Cardinals; Giants even NL series, 1-1

By Mike Tully
United Press International

ST. LOUIS — Will Clark and Jeffrey Leonard flexed San Francisco's home-run muscle and Dave Dravecky contained St. Louis' speed Wednesday, helping the Giants even the National League playoffs with a 5-0 victory over the Cardinals.

Clark hit a two-run homer in the second inning and Leonard added his second homer in as many games, sending the best-of-seven series to Candlestick Park tied at one victory apiece.

The Giants have named lefthander Atlee Hammaker, 10-10, to work Game 3, scheduled for Friday. If recovered from a stiff neck, Danny Cox, 11-9, will pitch for St. Louis. Otherwise, rookie lefthander Joe Magrane, 9-7, will start. Cox had been expected to start Game 1, but could not because of his neck injury.

National League

Dravecky, a 31-year-old lefthander acquired July 4 from San Diego, allowed only six baserunners and two hits, tying for the fewest ever allowed in a championship series in either the National or American leagues. He struck out six and walked four.

CLARK QUIETED A Busch Stadium sellout crowd of 55,331 by hitting a 1-0 delivery from John Tudor over the right-field fence in the second inning to give San Francisco a 2-0 lead and help hand St. Louis its first home loss in seven LCS games.

St. Louis received four leadoff walks — one was caught stealing, two were erased in double plays and one became the only St. Louis base runner to reach second base. The Cardinals suffered only their second home shutout all season.

Marriage made in a market

DAVIE, Fla. (UPI) — A man and woman who believe a supermarket is a better place to meet people than a bar made their point by getting married next to the checkout counter.

Victor Radeka met Deborah Francis about a year ago during the first in a series of singles' nights at South Florida Publix Supermarkets. He was a Pompano Beach mechanic, she a telephone saleswoman for a Fort Lauderdale pharmaceutical firm.

When they decided to marry, they called store managers. Publix suggested they hold the wedding in the store Tuesday, another singles' night.

Publix and a radio station that co-sponsors the singles' nights, sending a public relations opportunity, mailed invitations to the media.

About 1,000 reporters and shoppers showed up to gawk.

"Who are all these people?" the groom asked before the ceremony. "I only invited about 150."

ON HER FATHER'S arm, Deborah marched down an aisle of shopping carts, past crew-cut stockboys and managers wearing blazers, past a platoon of television cameras and past a display of light bulbs.

Deborah's eyes were moist as she joined Victor on the makeshift wedding platform.

Notary Public Mitchell Cohen delivered nondominational vows. Deborah bit her lower lip.

Judy GeBauer

UI scene 'delights' playwright

By Kevin Goulding
The Daily Iowan

Judy GeBauer, a member of the UI Playwrights Workshop, will be seeing a staging of her new play Magician Reversed for the first time this weekend. While she has heard it in rehearsal, the first full staging is a moment of truth for a playwright. "I've removed myself from rehearsals in order to create some sense of objectivity. And while it's ready to go, I'm still frustrated that there's so much more work to do on it, but no more time."

GeBauer, who was invited to come to the Playwrights Workshop by director Bob Headley after they met at the Bay Area Playwrights Festival, is delighted to be here. "What I love about the workshop is that it isn't tailored in any one direction. Each playwright can work at their own rate and in their own style. And while there is a certain pressure to present a product, the emphasis is on process."

GeBauer is equally pleased with being in Iowa City, having moved with her husband and daughter from Salem, Ore. There they operated an acting and dance studio for the past five years. "The difference is night and day. Iowa City, comparably, is fluid and flexible, with interesting people and ideas. In Salem it was rough. It's a very conservative, government town, the capital of Oregon, very hostile to new ideas and people. Coming here is like coming out of the Middle Ages."

MAGICIAN REVERSED is set in a context in which a couple runs an "occult seance scam." Into this "slightly mysterious environment" enters an interested customer. Explains GeBauer: Magician explores symbiotic relationships and the manipulation of intimacy. The third party enters and serves as catalyst for the couples' relationship and problems.

The grand opportunity in the workshop is the chance to see your new piece come "out of the book." GeBauer comments: "The emphasis for us all in Magicians is to give me the experience of the play I've written, so while we're trying to give it full production value there isn't the pressure that there would be if thousands of dollars were invested."

Magician Reversed, by Judy GeBauer, will be performed tonight, Oct. 8 and 9 at 8 p.m. and Oct. 10 at 2 and 8 p.m. in University Theatres' Theatre B.

'Cosby' remains tops in Nielsons

NEW YORK — With help from Johnny Carson, Bill Cosby and Michael J. Fox, NBC once again soared to victory in the ratings for the second week of the season, while CBS and ABC fought it out for second, figures released Tuesday showed.

For the week ending Oct. 4, it was a one-network race. NBC won handily with a 17.4 rating and 29 share. CBS was second with a 13.2 rating and 22 share and ABC was third with a 12.8 rating and 21 share, according to the A.C. Nielsen Co.'s "people meter" ratings.

For the season to date, NBC was in first with a 16.9 rating and 29 share, CBS was in second with a 13.9 rating and 24 share and ABC was third with a 13.5 rating and 23 share.

As usual, "The Cosby Show" led the way for NBC followed by the Cosby spinoff sitcom "A Different World." Even though it has been moved away from Cosby's Thursday night stable, Fox's "Family Ties" ranked No. 10.

Cosby and his spinoff again demolished the Thursday night competition, with CBS's Vietnam war series "Tour of Duty" finishing at No. 57 and ABC's sitcom duo "The Charmings" and "Sledge Hammer!" finishing No. 71 and No. 72 respectively.

Each ratings point represents about 887,000 households and a share is the percentage of operating sets tuned to a particular show.

The top prime time shows for the week ending Oct. 4, according to the A.C. Nielsen Co., were:

1. The Cosby Show (NBC)
2. A Different World (NBC)
3. Growing Pains (ABC)
4. Cheers (NBC)
5. Moonlighting (ABC)
6. Golden Girls (NBC)
7. Who's the Boss? (ABC)
8. Johnny Carson's 25th Anniversary (NBC)
9. Murder, She Wrote (CBS)
10. Family Ties (NBC)

'Switcheroo' premise fails to bring movie to full potential

By Hoyt Olsen
The Daily Iowan

A film premise does not have to be completely original to be good. Like Father, Like Son is a variation on an old idea, but one that still has abundant potential. Unfortunately, the film fails to deliver the punch that its idea promises.

What we have here is the old personality into a new body switcheroo. A brain transference serum used by Indians living in Death Valley is given to an archaeologist, then borrowed by his nephew, who stores it in a tabasco sauce bottle, which is inadvertently used by his best friend's father to flavor some tomato juice.

The old switcheroo is a staple of such films as The Shaggy Dog, Heaven Can Wait, and All of Me. Here the personality switch is coupled with the generation reversal gag of Back to the Future and Peggy Sue Got Married, because the mind of surgeon Jack Hammond switches places with the mind of his teenage son Chris.

YOU MIGHT notice immediately that its situation places Like Father, Like Son in some terrific company. But do any of you aging yuppies out there remember that all-time bad TV series "My Mother the Car"? How many of you suffered through The Reincarnation of Peter Proud? The switcheroo concept has produced barrels of mediocrities for every success.

Like Father, Like Son belongs in those barrels, although far above the bottom. The film's problems do not include the cast, which does its level best to rise above its material. Star Dudley Moore exudes all his mischievous charm as the teen trapped in an aging body, who suddenly realizes the advantages available through a combination of legal age and a wallet full of charge cards. Moore's sheer exuberance carries the plot further than it has a right to go.

Co-star Kirk Cameron, making his starring debut in a feature film after becoming a teen idol via TV's "Growing Pains," is not even close to Moore's league as an actor. But he has those teen idol looks, and manages an effort that, while also not even close to Michael J. Fox's league, at least suggests a potential there to develop. Other cast members of note include the talented Catherine Hicks (female lead of Star Trek IV and The Razor's Edge) and veteran character actor Patrick O'Neal.

HICKS AND O'Neal are wasted as stereotypical opposites, an idealistic doctor out to help everyone and a bureaucratic administrator out to maximize the hospital's earnings. Therein lies the film's biggest problem: The initial situation and the father and son characters are interesting, but otherwise the picture becomes as sour as last month's milk. The other characters are flat; the further complications are more predictable than sunrise.

The teenager in Dr. Hammond's body finds himself doing rounds with interns waiting to write down his every utterance, aiding a patient who has stopped breathing, and trying not to fight off the stacked and adultery-minded wife of the administrator. The adult surgeon in Chris' body has to cope with a boorish science teacher, a date to a rock concert, the date's jealous jock boyfriend, and a track meet during which he is to run anchor for the relay team.

Despite this predictable agenda of scenes, some moments are gems. One involves a hospital administrative meeting during which Chris, bored by a discussion he cannot follow, tries to learn to smoke while chewing gum. Dudley Moore is wonderful every time he is given half a chance in this movie, and in this scene he makes the most of a whole one.

Director Rod Daniels also directed Teen Wolf. That movie had a teen idol, a good idea, and a few very funny moments amid much predictable routine. Like Father, Like Son borrows that pattern, too.

Michener grant helps author

Money gives UI grad time to pen novel

By Kevin Goulding
The Daily Iowan

Kim Unterhalter, a 1987 graduate of the UI Writers' Workshop and recent recipient of a James Michener Fellowship, knows what she wants to do.

"Ideally, I will just write," she says. "I don't want to teach or get an editing job in a big city. I also want to get my novel to the point where someone will publish it."

The Michener Fellowship is a $7,000 grant awarded to as many as 10 writers, all former students of the UI Writers' Workshop. The writers are judged on the basis of works of prose in progress, and the grant is to allow the promising writers one year to work on their projects.

As the old saying goes, "time is money," and if it weren't for the grant, Unterhalter wouldn't have the time to write. "It gives me another year to write and read. Otherwise, I would have ended up in a high-school teaching job, which would have left me no time."

UNTERHALTER received the grant based on a section of her novel Ruins, the story of a South African family's move from Cape

Kim Unterhalter

Town to Rome, as told by the 12-year-old son, Sam. The story intersperses his remembrance of their family's African servant, Zac, whom he had grown close to, but was left behind in the move, with the family's experience in their new environment.

Ruins is Unterhalter's first long work, having previously worked on short stories. She recently completed her first draft of the novel. "I've got Ruins to the point where it has an agent and been submitted to a publisher. I'm going on and writing other things now," she said. "I have another book in mind. But I know I'll have to come back to Ruins very often in the next year in order to get a publisher to accept it."

When Unterhalter speaks of the lingering sense of native allegiance the family in her book experiences, she speaks from first-hand knowledge, for she also is a native of South Africa who moved to Rome when she was 7, eventually ending up in the U.S. Writing a politically motivated story was not in the soft-spoken Unterhalter's nature. "If I had to write a political story, I couldn't have done it," she said. Rather, she chose a personal view. "By writing about it, I'm playing my part if I can convey any of the truth about what it's like for people in South Africa. By putting it into a story, it can teach people about what it's like there, and what the problems are."

WHEN UNTERHALTER first started in the Writers' Workshop, according to Professor James McPherson, she was writing about rural Texas during World War II. At his suggestion, she started in on what was closer to her background. "Other people don't have the concrete experience (of South Africa) like she does. She's also an excellent stylist," he says. Unterhalter acknowledged McPherson as one of her inspiring teachers and the admiration proved mutual when McPherson remarked: "I'm proud as a black American to have encouraged her to look into it."

Unterhalter first arrived at the workshop fresh out of an undergraduate program at Colgate University. "I was a little confused and lost. But, looking back, the experience gave me the time and place, and some wonderful teachers. It also gave me readers, which you don't get when you're out on your own, other than my family."
