Gays march for legislation, AIDS funding

By Joseph J. ...
Los Angeles Times

WASHINGTON — Undaunted by gray and chilly skies, more than 200,000 gays, lesbians and their political supporters marched on the White House Sunday to demand increased funding for AIDS research and federal anti-discrimination legislation. Sponsors said it was the largest such demonstration in the nation's history.

The festive, upbeat crowd shouted slogans, waved placards and sang songs as they gathered at the foot of the Washington monument and began a long, winding march that ended up on the lawn in front of the Capitol.

While the size of the march, estimated by U.S. Park Police, did not live up to sponsors' predictions of 500,000 or more, they still called it a ringing success.

"TODAY, WE MARK a major turning point for gays and lesbians all over America ... today is a day for every gay person to look at themselves and be proud of who they are," said Kay Ostby a Washington, D.C., attorney and one of three national organizers of the march.

"What's important is that we have built bridges to other groups, such as blacks, women and labor," she said, noting the presence of presidential candidate Jesse Jackson, Eleanor Smeal, former president of the National Organization of Women, and Cesar Chavez, president of the United Farm Workers, all of whom spoke briefly.

Late in the afternoon, Jackson told the big crowd that stretched for a dozen blocks along the mall below the Capitol:

"Let's find a common ground of humanity. We share the desire for life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness, equal protection under the law. Let's not dwell on distinctions."

THERE WAS standing applause when Jackson declared: "We can fight AIDS and every form of death. Let's give life a chance."

Smeal told the throng it numbered 500,000 — more than twice the police estimate — and called on her listeners to "feel the political power of the moment."

The march, which sponsors said was endorsed by religious groups, civil rights organizations, political associations and community activists across the nation, came off smoothly and was unmarred by violence or injuries, according to Washington, D.C., police.

As they made their way through the streets, many demonstrators embraced each other with great emotion and held hands. A group of AIDS patients, some in wheelchairs and others walking with canes, raised fists in triumph as crowds along the downtown route cheered.

BUT FOR OTHERS it was a day of anger. Numerous marchers held signs charging that the Reagan administration has not allocated enough funds for AIDS

UI vows to raise research ranking

By Scott Hauser
The Daily Iowan

The UI plans to be among the top 10 public research universities in the next 10 years and must accelerate the rate at which its quality improves if it is to achieve its goal, according to a self-study report released Friday.

"We feel there's a larger gap today than there should be between where we are now and where we could be," UI Professor of Sociology and Chairman of the Self-Study Committee Edward Lawler said at a press conference announcing the study.

He said the UI has the potential to increase its ranking over the next 10 years despite recent budget difficulties, but it must make a university-wide effort to improve the institution.

The 74-page report, entitled "Building on Strength," recommends the UI recruit more "world-class scholars" and provide support for promising UI faculty to become world-class scholars, continue the trend of applying tenure and promotion standards stringently, increase the cultural, ethnic and racial diversity of faculty and students and strengthen graduate education.

WHILE EMPHASIZING the strong foundation the UI currently has, the report — compiled by a 16-member committee over the last 15 months — says quality must "improve at a faster pace in the next decade than it has in the last decade" if the UI is to prepare itself for the 21st century.

"There are a number of departments in which we might be perceived to be in the top 10 schools, but overall, we are not," Lawler said. "And we have to face that fact."

UI Interim President Richard Remington called the report a "milestone" and a "model of its kind" which "very frankly portrays the strengths and the weaknesses of the university."

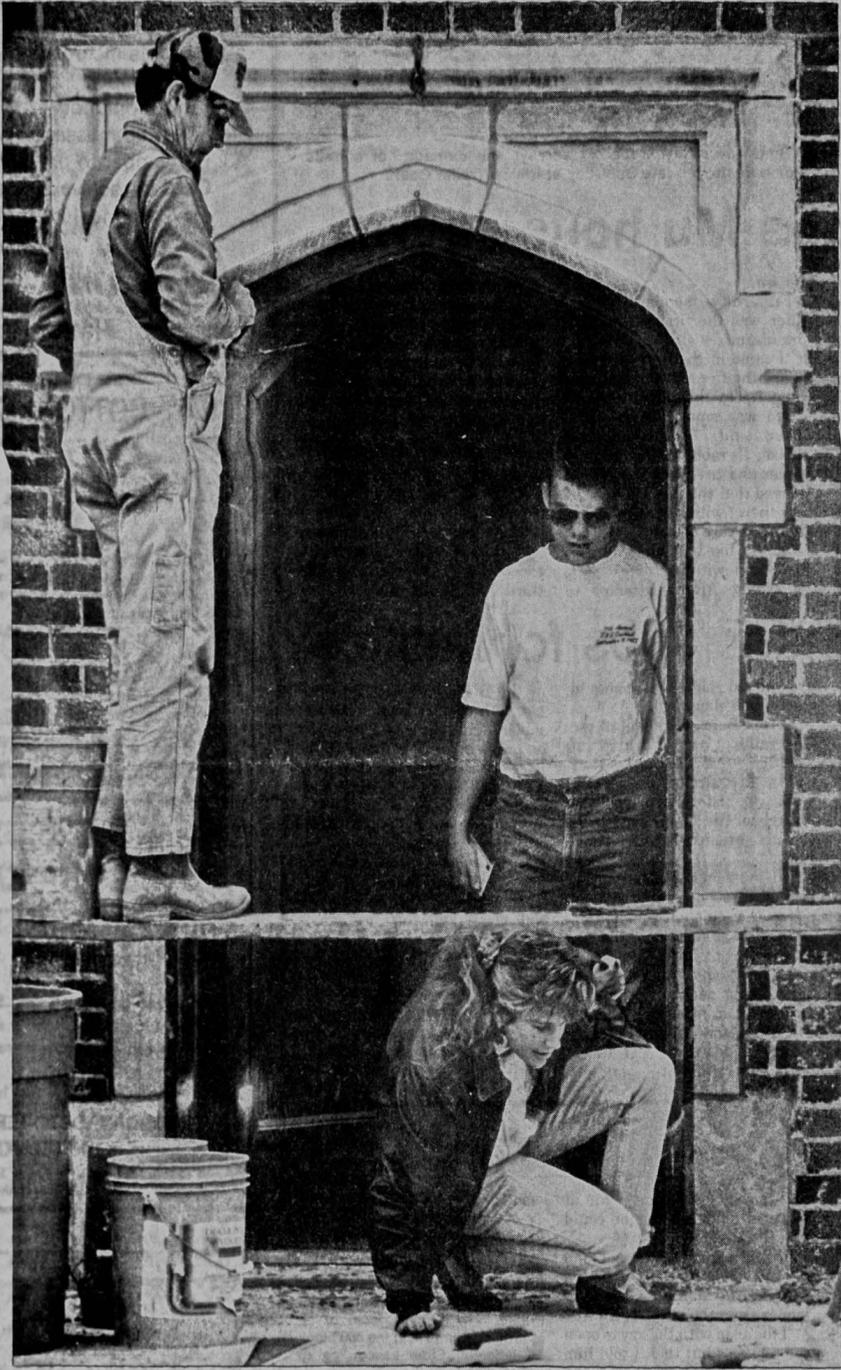

The report says the UI was among the top 20 of all universities in the 1920s and 1930s and seventh among public universities during that time. By 1982, the UI has fallen out of the top 25 universities, and is currently "somewhere between thirtieth and thirty-fifth."

THE REPORT SAYS putting the UI in the top 10 public universities is equivalent to being in the top 25 of all universities and colleges.

Lawler said the report is intended to provide for discussion on ways the UI could move to improve its quality and is not a "blueprint."

He said the committee considered

Tourette's victim claims discrimination

By Joseph Levy
The Daily Iowan

Saul Lubaroff, an Iowa City man with Tourette's Syndrome, claimed Sunday United Airlines unfairly discriminated against him because of his disorder when his plane reservation was canceled by the airline last week.

Lubaroff said he plans to take action against United Airlines. "I felt like a victim," Lubaroff said. "I thought I was being discriminated against."

Tourette's Syndrome is a disorder which often causes Lubaroff to move abruptly and swear in mid-sentence uncontrollably. It is also characterized by facial and body ticks.

Lubaroff said his uncontrollable swearing during a flight prompted the airline to cancel a reservation he had for another flight. He said he had informed the airline of his condition and special arrangements were made in advance.

"THEY SAID I endangered the other passengers," Lubaroff said.

Lubaroff had reservations to fly to Los Angeles Sunday, Oct. 4. He was to appear on "Hour Magazine" — a TV talk show — and speak about his disorder.

His flight from Cedar Rapids stopped in Denver. He deplaned with all the other passengers but was not allowed to re-enter the United jet. He said he was allowed to board another United plane to Los Angeles — 10 hours later. In addition, his plane reservations to return home Saturday were canceled by the airline.

"The airline kept giving me the run-around," Lubaroff said. "I was treated very unfairly by the entire airline system."

A United Airlines reservations official, who declined to be identified, said special arrangements for people with medical disorders are

Hazelwood case to begin Tuesday

By Monica Seigel
The Daily Iowan

A few guests were absent from the 200th birthday party for the U.S. Constitution last month.

Amid the red, white and blue celebrations commemorating the signing of the document written to guarantee rights to all U.S. citizens, a few people were skeptical.

Those people postponed the celebrating — waiting to hear whether student journalists are covered by that guarantee.

Tuesday, the U.S. Supreme Court will begin hearing oral arguments for Hazelwood School District vs. Kuhlmeier, a precedent-setting case expected to determine whether school administrators should be allowed to censor student newspapers.

"THE HAZELWOOD CASE, in effect, will decide once and for all whether students are covered by First Amendment rights," said Iowa High School Press Association President Merle Dieleman, a journalism teacher and publications adviser at Pleasant Valley High School. "It will determine the future of scholastic journalism."

According to Mark Goodman, executive director of the Student Press Law Center in Washington D.C., the case dates back to 1983 when Robert Reynolds, the principal of Hazelwood High School in Missouri removed a double-page spread of an issue of Spectrum, the student newspaper, claiming the topics of the spread were too controversial.

The spread — written and laid out by then seniors Cathy Kuhlmeier, Lee Ann Tippett and Leslie Smart — addressed teenage stress and included articles about teenage pregnancy and how divorce affects children.

REYNOLDS SAID THE stories invaded students' privacy and although the reporters had identified their sources only by pseudonyms in the stories, was concerned students interviewed for the stories could be identified. So Reynolds pulled the pages from the issue.

The students, in response, took their principal to court, claiming their freedom of expression rights, as guaranteed to them by the First Amendment, had been violated.

In May, 1985 a district court ruled in favor of the school district. The students appealed that decision and it was reversed in the Eighth District Court of Appeals.

In ruling in favor of the students, the court of appeals decided the newspaper was a forum for public expression and the content of the articles would not disrupt everyday school activities.

UNSATISFIED WITH THE appeals court ruling, the school district last fall asked the Supreme Court to review the case.

Kemp to visit Iowa City

Republican presidential candidate Rep. Jack Kemp, R-N.Y., will be in Iowa City Wednesday morning and afternoon.

Kemp will address UI students and faculty from 11:30 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. in Shaeffer Hall Room 121. Kemp will also tour the Proctor and Gamble Company, 2200 Lower Muscatine Road, and address company employees from 1:30 to 2:30 p.m. The public is invited to both events.

UI professor honored

UI Associate Professor of Pediatrics and Special Education David Wacker has been named the 1987 National Educator of the Year by the Association for Retarded Citizens.

Wacker will receive the award at the ARC national convention in Washington, D.C., Saturday.

Within Iowa, Wacker has served seven major school systems, including more than 35 classrooms of students with moderate, severe and profound retardation and other disabilities.

At the UI, Wacker provides research and direct training experiences to undergraduate and graduate students in behavior assessment and evaluation courses.

Wacker also serves on the editorial boards of or as consulting editor to six major journals within the mental retardation/developmental disabilities field.

Wacker was also named Iowa Educator of the Year by the Iowa chapter of the ARC.

Students given fellowship

Two students in the UI College of Medicine's joint M.D.-Ph.D program are among 15 recipients nationwide of a new March of Dimes fellowship that supports their studies in birth defects research through June 1989.

David Gretch, a student researcher in the UI Department of Microbiology studying the human cytomegalovirus, and John McCann, who is in the doctoral program in the UI Department of Physiology and Biophysics and is doing research into cystic fibrosis, were honored with the March of Dimes Predoctoral Graduate Research Training Fellowship.

Both Gretch and McCann are part of the UI Medical Scientist Training Program, which was established in 1977 and currently has 48 UI students in the program.

The March of Dimes supports research directly related to the causes, prevention and treatment of birth defects in humans. This is the first year of the predoctoral fellowship program, which awarded 15 fellowships out of 100 applicants nominated by medical schools nationwide. The award provides a two-year stipend totaling $24,000.

The UI is the only institution to have successfully sponsored two students for the March of Dimes fellowship.

UI holds palate seminar

More than 45 surgeons, speech pathologists, orthodontists and other specialists from 20 foreign countries, as well as 40 American specialists, will take part in an international conference on treatment of cleft lip and palate from Oct. 14-17.

The conference will consider current trends and future directions of health care management in this field, and will differ from typical conferences by using of work sessions rather than formal papers and findings to inform participants.

The conference is being sponsored by the UI College of Medicine and the National Institute of Dental Research, and is part of the UI Cleft Palate Research Program Project, one of only two of its kind nationwide funded by the institute.

F Street to be closed

To facilitate the installation of water mains by Iowa City crews, F Street will be closed to traffic from Sixth Avenue to Seventh Avenue today.

Construction is expected to be completed and the street reopened by Friday, weather permitting.

Trailer fire arouses suspicion

By Franc Contreras
The Daily Iowan

Iowa City firefighters are investigating the possibility of arson after a trailer at 30 Hilltop Trailer Court sustained $4,000 damage in a fire Saturday.

The blaze was extinguished 20 minutes after firefighters arrived, but not before four rooms and part of a hallway in the ground-level structure were damaged by flames and smoke.

The trailer was owned by Judy Bennett who lived in the trailer three other people, according to fire department reports. No one was injured in the incident. Bennett was unavailable for comment Sunday.

Fire Department officials would not say what the cause of the fire was, but they did say wood paneling inside the home generated the majority of the smoke.

Twelve firefighters were dispatched to the scene to battle the blaze. Iowa City fire officials declined further comment on the incident.

Sigma Alpha Mu house burns

By Anne Upson
The Daily Iowan

A fire destroyed a third-floor room of the Sigma Alpha Mu fraternity house, 932 E. College St., Saturday night at about 10 p.m.

No injuries resulted from the fire, but damage to the house is estimated at $10,000.

Only four fraternity members were at the house during the time of the fire. The other residents were participating in a fraternity event at the Highlan-der Inn.

Fraternity member Richard Alter was the first to hear the fire alarm.

"I came in the front door and heard the fire alarm going off. I went up to the third floor and there was smoke in the hall," Alter said. "The room was ablaze, I grabbed a fire extinguisher and tried to put it out. It seemed that the fire department was here within seconds and they took care of it."

"It was like spitting on a bonfire," said witness Mike Spatz, describing Alter's attempt to extinguish the fire.

Sigma Alpha Mu Vice President Brian Levey said the contents of the damaged room included two mattresses and a radio. There was no one living in the room. Levey said the damage is estimated at $10,000.

"The carpeting and mattresses were burned, the walls are black and the window was broken," he said.

There was no significant damage to the rest of the house except for a smoky odor on the third floor, Levey said.

Workers chant 'Jobs for Justice'

By John Petterson
United Press International

DES MOINES — Militant-sounding national and state labor leaders during the weekend called on workers and farmers to fight a "new generation of robber barons."

More than 700 people, including presidential candidate Bruce Babbitt and Sen. Tom Harkin, D-Iowa, attended a "Jobs for Justice" rally Saturday at the State Fairgrounds.

The rally was part of a nationwide campaign sponsored by labor, church and farm groups to oppose what organizers say is economic violence.

Speakers struck a fighting posture and led rally participants in chants and clapping.

Morton Bahr, president of the Communications Workers of America union, said worker rights are under the worst attack in history and said the lifestyle of the American middle class is threatened with extinction.

"We must oppose the new generation of robber barons who are using the cult of competition and the disguise of deregulation to cut wages and close factories," Bahr said. "We're talking about being pushed to the wall and we're not going to take it."

Nurse Nancy Dehm, a Communications Workers local union president representing staffers at the Burlington Medical Center, warned that Iowa hospitals' unwillingness to pay fair wages or provide liability insurance is leading to a crisis in the medical profession as nurses leave specialty fields.

And national United Auto Workers Vice President Bill Castevens refused to accept rosey administration claims of millions of new jobs and scoffed at talk about a new service industry.

"We don't want just any kind of job," Castevens said. "We've lost more than 2 million industrial jobs that paid an average of $400 a week and they've been replaced with these service jobs paying $258 a week."

Police

By Franc Contreras
The Daily Iowan

An unidentified man armed with a handgun fled from an Iowa City gas station in the 300 block of South Dubuque Street Saturday at 7:57 p.m. with $70, according to Iowa City police reports.

The man entered the Pester Derby Station, 302 S. Dubuque St., and pointed a .22-caliber pistol at the clerk's chest. The man reportedly told the clerk working at the store, "Give me all your cash; all I want is bills."

The suspect, who is described as a 5-foot-8 black man, was last seen walking at a fast pace south on Dubuque Street, according to police reports.

Iowa City police are investigating the incident.

"I was scared to death," said the clerk working during the robbery. "There is no feeling like having a guy point a gun at you and knowing that he could pull the trigger."

The clerk gave the gunman about $70 in cash from a drawer. The man then asked for money from the cash register.

"I fumbled with the key to open the register, but then I told him no money was kept there," the clerk said. "He said 'OK,' then he thanked me for the money."

Theft: An Iowa City man reported that two motorcycle helmets and riding accessories were stolen Friday from his garage, according to police reports.

The equipment was valued at a total of $600, according to the reports. The incident occurred in the 300 block of South Dodge Street while the victim was home working on his roof.

Report: A UI student was arrested by police Friday after he allegedly shot off fireworks that set off a fire alarm in Burge Residence Hall, according to Campus Security reports. James Robert Hagist, 20, 320 Ellis Ave., was charged with disorderly conduct in connection with the incident.

Theft: Seven dozen light bulbs and a vacuum cleaner were stolen Friday from a utility room of an apartment complex in the 500 block of Jefferson Street, according to police reports.

The 40-watt bulbs were valued at $125 and the vacuum cleaner at $200, according to the reports.

Report: Delta Chi fraternity members Sunday allegedly took an adding machine and a bowling ball from Colonial Bowling Lanes, Hwy 218, according to police reports.

The items were returned after police officers were called to the scene, according to the report.

Theft: A locked bicycle Saturday was stripped of its handle bars and front tire in the 600 block of East Burlington Street, according to police reports.

The stolen items were valued at a total of $150, according to the reports.

Simon welcoming members of defunct Biden campaign

By Lisa Legge
The Daily Iowan

UI Student Senate President Joe Hansen said Sunday he will support Democratic candidate Paul Simon, the Illinois senator met with Democrats at an Iowa City residence Friday to sway to his side supporters of former presidential candidate Joseph Biden.

Hansen, formerly a student coordinator for Sen. Joe Biden, D-Del., said he decided to work for Simon because he has the "best shot" of getting to the White House and of his "similar voting record" to Biden, who withdrew from the campaign after disclosures about plagiarism and embellished academic records.

Hansen now joins UI Collegiate Associations Council President Mike Reck and UI Liberal Arts Student Association President Gordon Fischer as local student staffers for the Simon campaign.

"I THINK STUDENTS — from what I hear among the Students for Biden association — a lot of them are leaning toward Simon," Hansen said. "Paul Simon has a similar voting record to Joe Biden's. His campaign is on the move. It's going up. The organization is getting better within the state. He's generally a good candidate."

Simon met with Biden supporters at the home of Jean Cater, 325 Seventh Ave.

"A lot of these people have been Biden supporters and I want to tell them why I'd love to have them aboard," Simon said. "That's the basic message: I think I can win and I think I stand for the things that Joe Biden has stood for and stands for."

To demonstrate that his political philosophy is similar to Biden's, Simon spoke of the two candidates' shared qualities and compared his senate voting record to Biden's.

"JOE AND I have always gotten along very well together personally," he said. "We served on two committees together. But more than just getting along personally — because I get along personally with Sen. Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., — we also vote together a great deal."

Simon said the two agree on foreign policy and arms control, adding "you will see that the Biden-Simon record is very, very similar — more similar than any of the other candidates with any legislative background."

Stressing his electability to the former Biden supporters, Simon said his election in Illinois is proof he is electable nationwide, because that state reflects the voting patterns of the country.

"We are rural. We are urban. We have about the same percentage of blacks and Hispanics as the nation does," he said.

SIMON SAID HE also has the ability to attract votes outside the Democratic party as well.

"I've always had the ability to appeal to Republicans and we see it in Iowa at meetings," he said. "We have always been able to reach out to and pull Republicans and independents while maintaining the Democratic base."

He said education is an issue which attracts Republican support, making him even more electable.

"Education is the area where I have worked very hard," he said. "I mean no disrespect to my colleagues who are running when I say I have done more in this field than all the other candidates put together."

UI freshman Julie Taiber, a former Biden supporter, signed on with the Simon campaign after his speech.

"His speech was very impressive," she said. "There's still the factor of who my first loyalty was. But I agree with (Simon's) voting record, his personality and how he feels toward the issues, everything from Central America to arms control. He was on the same committee as Joe Biden — foreign affairs."

UI sophomore Jenö Berta also joined the Simon campaign after supporting Biden.

Dukakis controversy calms; Iowans focus on new issues

By James Cahoy
The Daily Iowan

Iowans have been very forgiving of the mistakes his campaign has made during the past couple weeks, Democratic presidential candidate Gov. Michael Dukakis, D-Mass., said during an appearance in Iowa City Friday.

Referring to the revelations that his campaign had given videotapes to the media which eventually resulted in the collapse of the campaign of fellow Democratic candidate Sen. Joseph Biden, D-Del., Dukakis said he realized the actions had hurt his campaign.

"It was not the kind of mistake you make in a campaign like this," Dukakis said. "But the people responsible for what happened are no longer with us and I think we have to continue to move on."

DUKAKIS SAID the resignations of his campaign manager John Sasso and political director John Tully have been costly to his campaign, but expressed confidence his campaign will make a comeback.

"People in Iowa have seemed to be very understanding what happened so far," Dukakis said. "I don't think it's cost us as much as it could have."

Dukakis made the comments Friday after a lecture on foreign policy before a UI political science class in Schaeffer Hall.

Speaking before a crowd of about 300 people, Dukakis said the next president of the United States must have "a sense of history" when dealing with foreign policy.

"You have to have an understanding of what the politics of a region are if you are going to shape a policy for that region," Dukakis said. "For example, our affection for democracy in Nicaragua is only a couple of years old. Before that we supported one of the most repressive regimes in the world there. Our policy is utterly ignorant of 150 years of history."

U.S. POLICY in Central America should be to support efforts such as the Arias plan which are worked out by the nations of the region rather than by the United States, Dukakis said.

"I'm an enthusiastic supporter of the plan as a way of ending the killing in Central America," Dukakis said. "The best way we can provide support to Central America is by providing economic, rather than military aid."

Dukakis was also critical of U.S. policy in the Persian Gulf, saying the president ought to respect the War Powers Act and work through the United Nations in order to end the conflict.

"Our policy ought to be to negotiate a cease-fire and organize a multilateral peace-keeping force in the region," Dukakis said. "We have to work with other nations rather than just stand alone."

Saying that the use of force should be a last resort by the United States, Dukakis listed two justifications for military intervention by the United States.

"I would intervene if American lives and property were at stake," Dukakis said. "Or if there was a threat to our national interest. The question, of course, is what constitutes our national interest."

Dukakis also praised the achievements of Soviet premier Mikhail Gorbachev and his policy of glasnost.

"We have witnessed several encouraging signs the Soviets may be moving to a more open society," Dukakis said. "It may reflect a significant change toward a more stable and peaceful world."

Soviets to return to Iowa after ag visit

DES MOINES (UPI) — A top Soviet agriculture official said this weekend he plans to pursue the vast potential for cooperative agriculture and industrial ventures between the United States and Soviet Union, following a tour of farm-related businesses in Iowa.

Victorovich Nikonov, a member of the Politburo and the highest ranking member of the Communist Party to visit the United States since late Premier Leonid Brezhnev in 1972, said Saturday he plans to send his colleagues to Iowa to clinch deals discussed on his 31-member trade delegation's whirlwind tour of the state.

"Iowa is a beautiful country and the people here are business-like and favorably disposed toward us, but regrettably we have not had much time to be devoted to our business encounters," said Nikonov, speaking through a translator.

The Soviets toured the Kinze manufacturing plant in Victor and Pioneer Hi-bred International in Johnston Saturday.

49 killed in Burmese airliner crash

RANGOON, Burma — A Burmese domestic airliner flying through monsoon rains crashed Sunday into a ridge studded with 12th-century pagodas, killing all 49 people on board, including 14 Americans, government radio and Western diplomats said. A brief Rangoon radio report said the Fokker Friendship F-27 twin-prop plane belonging to the government-owned Burma Airways Corp. "crashed after a midair fire near Phanaung village" shortly before it was to land.

New rules for nursing homes sought

WASHINGTON — A major overhaul of federal rules for nursing homes, including a "patients' bill of rights" and more stringent rules for round-the-clock care, will be proposed this week by the Department of Health and Human Services. The new rules would apply to all residents of any home receiving federal funds through Medicaid or Medicare, the vast majority of nursing homes. The plan, designed to improve the quality of care for more than a million people in 16,000 facilities, also requires that nurses' aides be given at least 80 hours of training by the home before they handle patients.

African lion mauls girl at flea market

HOUSTON — A 300-pound African lion owned by a photographer mauled and critically injured an 8-year-old girl at a flea market and had to be shot three times before it released the child's head from its mouth. Police said a security guard at the Texas Flea Market in north Houston saved the life of Roxanne Hernandez by shooting the lion. "The lion knocked over an ornament and became excited," said witness Brian Mason, 27. "The little girl walked by and he knocked her down. He grabbed her and started dragging her across the floor. She was screaming . . . He had her by the head and wouldn't let her go. Then two guys ran up and shot him." Mason said.

Farmers reap bumper crop of subsidies

COLCHESTER, Ill. — Through chilly autumn days and into the frosty nights, Midwestern farmers are piloting combines across dusty fields, racing to complete the annual harvest of grain and beans — and a bumper crop of government subsidies. This year's harvest payoff will come from the federal treasury rather than from bountiful crops. About half of what farmers earn will come from federal programs. Direct government payments to farmers in 1987 are estimated at about $15 billion, roughly 20 percent greater than in 1986. The farm economy will benefit from another $8 billion in other federal expenditures, bringing the government's agricultural costs this year to at least $23 billion.

Striking NBC workers to vote on pact

BETHESDA, Md. — The union representing 2,800 striking NBC workers said Sunday it would submit the network's latest contract offer to the rank and file for a vote in a move that could end the 15-week-old walkout. A six-member negotiating committee of the National Association of Broadcast Employees and Technicians agreed to let union members vote on whether to accept the deal, union spokesman John Krieger said.

Cause of common cold possibly found

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va. — Doctors at the University of Virginia and Johns Hopkins University medical schools have isolated a substance thought to be responsible for many of the miseries caused by the common cold. The suspected culprits are called kinins, inflammatory chemicals found in nasal secretions, doctors said. The doctors said the information, if confirmed by more research, could be the key to unlocking the mystery of why cold sufferers must contend with stuffy noses and sore throats.

China criticizes U.S. for meddling

BEIJING — President Li Xiannian charged Sunday that Congress violated the basis of U.S.-China relations by criticizing Beijing's handling of unrest in Tibet, where three major protests against Chinese rule erupted in the past two weeks. "The U.S. Congress can only look after U.S. affairs and has no right to interfere in other countries' internal affairs," Li said. Li's comments, carried by the official Xinhua news agency, represented Beijing's highest-level criticism of what it describes as foreign meddling in China's handling of the problems in Tibet.

Filipino police brace for wage strike

MANILA, Philippines — Police formed special battalions Sunday to guard against attempts by renegade soldiers or communist rebels to take advantage of a general strike called by militant trade unions demanding a wage increase. An Aug. 28 attempt to topple the government of President Corazon Aquino was mounted two days after a crippling general strike called by the May 1st Movement, also known as KMU.

Debate over Bork will help process

By Pam Murphy
United Press International

WASHINGTON — White House officials spent the weekend mapping strategy for the Senate debate on the all but doomed Supreme Court nomination of Robert Bork, and the Senate Republican leader said Sunday he sees the fight as a chance to expose "flaws" in the confirmation process.

Assistant Senate Democratic leader Alan Cranston of California, meanwhile, sharply countered a prediction that the next nominee, perhaps one even more conservative than Bork, would slide through the Senate confirmation process like "a greased pig."

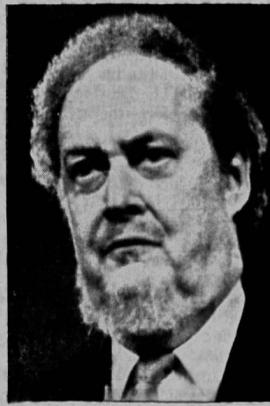

During an interview on ABC's "This Week with David Brinkley" Cranston also said a vote on Bork's nomination would probably take place a week from Tuesday.

SENATE REPUBLICAN leader Robert Dole of Kansas commented Sunday on "This Week" that the opposition did "a political job on Judge Bork."

"We have to make the tone elevating," Dole said of any further debate. "We're not going to win the Bork nomination . . . but we're going to show the American people the flaws in the process."

President Ronald Reagan, who last week shunned several opportunities to rise up in vocal defense of Bork, will add his voice to the debate in a series of appearances that will include a trip Tuesday to New Jersey and an expected televised address to the nation, administration officials said Sunday.

"The president fully intends to speak out on what he regards as a gross injustice," one presidential aide said. "It will be classic Ronald Reagan."

Robert Bork

EVEN THOUGH 53 senators announced they would oppose Bork if his nomination reached the floor, the nominee said Friday he would not withdraw his name. Bork said he wanted to use the continued Senate debate to press his warning that politicizing the process of confirming judges "is not simply disturbing — it is dangerous."

Sen. Joseph Biden, D-Del., who chairs the Judiciary Committee, said on CBS News' "Face the Nation" Sunday he did not understand Bork's charge that the process was politicized.

"He sat before our committee for 30 hours, he looked me straight in the eye and told me how fair he thought the hearings I was conducting were," Biden said.

White House officials mapped strategy for the debate over the weekend, while admitting they underestimated the intensity of the political fight to come when the Bork nomination was first considered.

Nessie still a mystery after 25-boat search

By Tyler Marshall
Los Angeles Times

LONDON — A 25-boat flotilla combing Scotland's famous Loch Ness with sonar for signs of the lake's legendary monster completed its much-publicized three-day search Sunday after spotting an "unusual" moving object.

Or was it just a seal? Or a fish?

Indeed, what the organizers labeled the most comprehensive, hi-tech search ever undertaken for the Loch Ness monster provided no immediate answer at all to the riddle of what, if anything, lurks in one of Europe's largest, deepest lakes.

The notion that some mysterious being exists in the lake goes back about 1,400 years, to when a Christian missionary first talked of "a certain water monster."

THE SEARCH FOR a strange, elusive, creature has generated global interest over the past 50 years, attracting serious scientists as well as eccentrics.

During the first two days of the latest search, organizers reported signals indicating a large moving object, first at a depth of around 180 feet and then again at about 600 feet.

The signals came as the boats, deployed in line across the mile-wide lake, laid down a "sonar curtain" and moved carefully down the lake's 23-mile length.

But when the leader of the $1.6 million project, Adrian Shine, an amateur British naturalist, emerged to discuss results with an eager gathering of about 200 reporters, he dismissed the notion of a monster. "Nobody really believed in that anyway, did they?" he asked.

SHINE SAID HE believed that the object spotted during the sonar sweep was most likely a large fish.

Darrel Lowrance, president of Lowrance Electronics of Tulsa, Okla., which supplied the sonar equipped for the project, looked at the data and made his own pronouncement.

"I tend to think it's a seal," he said.

Locals would have none of that. They long ago christened their legendary creature "Nessie" and speak of it with an affection worthy of the attention and tourist dollars that it draws to the remote northern districts of Scotland.

Jackson, Bush start down campaign trails

Jesse dismisses claims he can't win caucuses

By Bill Brewer
United Press International

GREENFIELD, Iowa — Democratic presidential candidate Jesse Jackson launched his Iowa presidential campaign by dismissing claims he cannot win the state's first-in-the-nation caucuses because of Iowa's tiny minority population.

"The bulk of our support lies in family farmers, small business people and in people worried about drugs," Jackson said, denying claims by some top Iowa Democrats that Jackson stands little chance of winning in a state with only a 3 percent minority population.

"Our outreach has been extensive. Our support here has been very broad-based," he said.

Jackson kicked off his Iowa effort

Saturday in the small farming community of Greenfield, 60 miles west of Des Moines, where he rode a tractor in a parade to a farm where he addressed a rally of 900 supporters.

JACKSON USED THE rally to urge disaffected farmers, unemployed blue-collar workers, Hispanics, blacks and women to unite behind his candidacy.

"It's not enough for you to be right. There's not enough for you to save yourselves," Jackson told the crowd. "But when we form a coalition with a common agenda of jobs, peace and justice we can win."

In Raleigh, N.C., earlier Saturday, Jackson officially declared his candidacy for the Democratic nomination during the annual convention of the national Rainbow Coalition, an organization Jackson established during his unsuccessful 1984 presidential bid.

Before arriving in Greenfield, Jackson told reporters in Des Moines, Iowans share his concern with the safety of U.S. sailors in the Persian Gulf, where he said the Reagan administration is waging "an illegal war."

"OUR BOYS IN the Persian Gulf are in a very precarious position because of an undeclared war. We are waltzing in the gulf while our boys are getting shot at. We are not really fighting," he said.

Jackson, who earlier told the Atlanta Constitution his daughter was born only 6 months after he was married, also declined comments on other published reports alleging he has engaged in extramarital affairs.

"We shouldn't dignify rumors," he said.

Recent polls show Jackson leading the other Democratic candidates in the Super Tuesday primary states in the South.

Vice president ready to declare his candidacy

By Norman D. Sandler
United Press International

WASHINGTON — Lest there be any doubt about why he has traveled tens of thousands of miles and spent almost $8 million in the last year or so, Vice President George Bush goes home to Texas Monday to declare his candidacy for the political objective that eluded him in 1980.

In the ballroom of a Houston hotel, before some 2,000 cheering loyalists, Bush — the Connecticut Yankee-turned-Texas oilman, the establishment Republican with the gilt-edged resumé — will announce he is running for president.

It will be perhaps the most anticlimactic moment to date of a campaign that four months before the Iowa precinct caucuses has been marked by personal drama and startling revelations that have claimed candidacies if not political lives.

the faithful and trying to dispel the questions that hang over his campaign.

"You're going to see a tiger unleashed Monday," he declared during a weekend campaign swing through New England. "This is it. We're right up against the cutting edge."

With that in mind, Bush takes his formal place amid a crowded field of rivals — declared and otherwise — who have not come close to matching him in money, organization or recognition.

Catastrophic chemicals

A delegation of Soviet scientists will be here in Iowa City this week from Oct. 12-16 for a symposium with their American counterparts. Their subject will be chemicals and pesticides in the environment.

Soviet and United States officials are absolutely ecstatic about the whole thing, calling it one of the most significant exchanges between the two countries all year.

Significant because it's safe. The symposium will study the kinds of pesticide-related problems faced by farmers in the broad agricultural regions of both countries. That's the optimistic note of the event: the hope implicit in the fact that farmers in both countries, even separated by the political and cultural iron curtain, are still basically ordinary guys with similar concerns.

Look behind the symposium and you'll see a skull and crossbones stamped on the very same subject: chemicals. The symposium is concerned with the kind of chemicals which destroy boll weevils and booster crop growth. But those aren't the only kind of chemicals the Soviet Union and the United States possess. They've also poured large amounts of money and expertise into developing chemicals that burn the eyes out of just ordinary guys, eat away their skin or gut out their brains.

There aren't any symposiums on those kinds of chemicals because they aren't targeted for boll weevils — they're targeted for use against people in both countries.

Everybody involved feels good about the pesticide symposium this week. Its practical benefits aside, it's seen as proof of a mutual humanity, a people-oriented hope for both countries to live in peace. But unless both countries actually do something about destroying their stockpiles of chemical weapons, this symposium and any like it are turned into silly little puppet shows with little importance.

Thrill of defeat

When one thinks of Columbia University, a member of the prestigious Ivy League, one envisions a group of students congregated on the steps of the library discussing the political philosophies of such great thinkers as Plato, Socrates, Locke and Hobbes.

Columbia is — and always has been — an institution of higher learning which places the pursuit of knowledge and the development of the human mind above all other endeavors — especially athletic teams.

Recruiters for Columbia refrain from promising prospective applicants — athletes in particular — the opportunity to play a sport before sold-out stadiums packed with rabid fans.

Columbia recruiters cannot, and do not, promise a star athlete a shot at the pros or stands filled with recruiters — unlike many manipulative operators who make such empty promises to high-school athletes every day.

Columbia University does not market illusions nor do they peddle four-year degrees in fantasy; the fantasy that football (or big-time college athletics) will best prepare an individual to cope effectively with the perils of the real world.

A Columbia recruiter would probably sit a prospective student-athlete down and say, "Your chances of becoming a professional athlete are very slim — you know, about one-in-a-million. What I suggest is that you concentrate all your energies on earning your degree and to play football just for the fun of it."

On Saturday, Columbia University's football team earned the dubious distinction of becoming the owner of the longest losing streak in Division I football history — 35 games. That's four long years of losing, but it's well worth it because graduation for these student-athletes is not a fantasy, it is a reality.

Powerful press

The correct role of the media in covering the current presidential race has been a hot issue this year. The damage inflicted by the media is most certainly justified in certain situations — provided the facts are correct and the information checked. But this is where the role of the media ends — with the facts.

In Sunday's edition of The Des Moines Register, a front-page headline read, "Storm clouds over Jackson candidacy." Now before going on, how many readers do you suppose pick up the papers and only briefly skim the headlines?

Continuing, the above headline makes it seem as though Jackson has a "cloud" hanging over his campaign. Well, as the reader hopefully completes the story, they will find that the headline was misleading at best, slanderous at worst.

In this particular article, only four sentences of the 29 paragraphs written about Jackson contained anything resembling the content of the headline, and even these sentences were grossly vague, speculative and based on nothing more than the possibility of an upcoming news story, whose existence has been totally denied by the paper's editors.

Hmm, so where is this campaign-threatening cloud which ominously hangs over the head of a leading presidential candidate? Obviously, only on the front page of this particular paper. But it was in print, people did read it & people remember. Result: instant and unjustifiable damage to the campaign of Jesse Jackson.

The public must continue to scrutinize the subject matter, emphasis and integrity of the media in order to fully appreciate what, how and why they are saying what they do. Yes, the media has the power of the press. But you, the reader, have the greater power of discretion — the freedom to act or judge on one's own.

A candidate's view on drugs

By Pete du Pont

Guest Opinion

John G. Golden is making the "wrong assumption" when he says that our campaign's random drug testing plan is the "wrong answer" to solving this country's growing drug problem.

In his editorial (The Daily Iowan, Sept. 23), Golden states that "to imply that this country has the resources or the shortsightedness to try to stop drug use at the grass roots level is preposterous." What is truly preposterous is the assumption that we can't do anything about it "at the grass roots level." That's like saying your newspaper has a circulating problem but you can't do anything about it because you can't control your delivery system.

We can agree to disagree on the testing issue, but one thing is certain — something different needs to be done soon.

DRUG ABUSE has become a major problem in this country today. It cannot be ignored. It won't go away. Current approaches have done little or nothing to curb the problem. Educating the public to "just say no" is a good approach, but it is not nearly enough. One out of every two teenagers today has tried drugs. One out of four uses drugs regularly. Clearly, new approaches are needed to resolve a problem that I think is threatening our entire society, especially future generations.

Numerous other desperate suggestions have been put forth that run the gamut from mothers' patrols to physical assaults on pushers to legalizing drugs to take the profit out of traffic. Those plans won't work because they don't strike at the user side of the drug equation.

For too long, our country has taken the attitude that drug use really is a victimless crime; that it doesn't hurt anybody and therefore it is okay. The term "recreational drug use" became an acceptable word in the English language for condoning practices that technically were illegal but which promoted drug use by encouraging everyone to wink at the law.

THE IDEA that drug use is a victimless crime is just plain wrong. The victims are often the drug users themselves, such as basketball star Len Bias. Unfortunately, the victimless list has grown to include hundreds of thousands of teenagers who have the same problem as Len Bias and who could end up just like him. They all think it's just plain recreation and mind-expanding.

But there are numerous other victims as well. The families of the drug users suffer the most when their loved ones die. Money that is needed to support families instead goes for the purchase of drugs. Robberies and muggings and, in some cases, murders are committed because the criminals need money to buy drugs. Previously safe neighborhoods have been taken over by thugs. Drug users are losing their jobs. Families break up.

GOLDEN RECOGNIZED in his editorial that a major problem exists, but he didn't propose an answer to that problem. Our campaign's drug testing idea is about finding that answer. We believe we have found it: we must focus on the user side. We must have a way to send a message to teenagers that drug use is wrong. Golden seems to think that message would be contradictory. But there is nothing contradictory about saying point blank that drug use is wrong. Don't do it. Simple enforcement of criminal statutes is not enough. By then, it's too late. Going after the pushers is all right, but that still does nothing to curb the demand side. Society must find a way to send a message to these kids.

Our campaign's idea is one of the ways this problem can be corrected. Linking drug use among teenagers to their getting a driver's license sends the right message. "Don't do drugs or you won't drive" is something teenagers can relate to because, as we all remember, that driver's license is probably the single most important piece of real estate a teenager can have.

RANDOM TESTING is the best way this plan can be effectively implemented. The plan calls for universal random testing of teenagers while they are in high school. If they test positive for drugs, they would lose their driver's license for two years or would experience a delay in getting a driver's license. Importantly, their parents would be told and rehabilitation programs would be made available.

Our campaign anticipated from the outset that there would be people who would object to the testing. It might even be challenged on constitutional grounds. We are convinced it will stand that test. Several cases challenging the constitutionality of testing have already been tried in court and the courts have upheld testing.

But let's focus on the message. The message that drug use is bad has to come through loud and clear, and it must come from all us. The plan to curb drug use must start with the young people who are most susceptible to it and it must hit them right where they feel it the most — in their wallets and purses where their driver's license is kept. We must use peer pressure. We must give teenagers a reason to "just say no."

Beers and weekly columns

My wife walked into the kitchen the other day to discover me rummaging around in the refrigerator. "What are you doing?" she asked suspiciously. "Writing," I answered. "Is there any beer in here?"

This hard work, disguised as goofing off, is an aspect of living with a columnist that has taken my wife some time to get used to. Soon after we were married, she came in from a trip to the supermarket to find me prostrate on the couch, apparently watching a football game on TV. "I thought you said you couldn't do the shopping because you had to write your silly column?" she asked with just a hint of sarcasm. "I am," I quickly rejoined. "I'm writing about football as emblematic of America's obsession with ritualized violence ... or lack of moral fiber ... or something. Did you remember the beer?"

THE GERMAN poet Goethe (always cite authority when rationalizing one's bad habits) described writing as "busy idleness." That's really what it is: an intense contemplation conducted with all the outward appearance of willful sloth.

What surprises me is that more people don't aspire to be columnists. I mean, what other occupation pays you well into the lower two figures to sit around on your duff all day, claiming you're pondering the weighty events and issues of our time? Well, okay, maybe the presidency — but that's not an easy job to come by.

I recently conducted a scientific poll in which I discovered that most people (at least the person I asked) think that the hardest part of writing a weekly column is coming up with a topic, something to write about. Actually, coming up with a topic is the easiest part of writing a column. All you need to do to find a topic is read the newspapers, watch TV, roam the streets and bars. One week a man writes to Ann Landers that he is jealous of a picture of Jesus that his wife has hung on their bedroom wall (Ann wisely counsels him to "discuss this problem with your wife"). The next week Geraldo Rivera is hosting yet another hysterical daytime talk show (a recent in-depth discussion subject for Geraldo was "Prisoners of Psychotherapy"). Another week Donna Rice, bimbo to the mighty, is modeling a new line of sportswear called No

Excuses ("I make no excuses," she coyly says, "I only wear them").

NO, TOPICS are easily found. The real task for the columnist is finding the perspective angle, the penetrating analysis. That's where work disguised as goofing off comes in. Finding the perceptive angle, the penetrating analysis, is often a tedious matter of just walking around, poking one's head into refrigerators, reclining on couches, watching football games on TV. It's an unattractive world for those (such as grumpy wives) not familiar with it.

Of course, a column can't be written lying on a couch, drinking beer and watching a football game (I know, I've tried it). There comes a time when the columnist must rise to the occasion and make it to the typewriter and start pounding out the requisite 750 words. The columnist, usually lazy as Ludlam's dog, is aided in this effort by the editor, an inherently sadistic person who pronounces the word "deadline" with a sinister emphasis on the first syllable.

YOU WOULD think that all of the time spent in busy idleness would make the actual writing of the column a breeze, a simple translation of the idea fermented on the couch to words on paper. That's not, however, the way it works. Words are notoriously stubborn.

They mold more than they are molded. They twist and turn, confound and lead the mind to surprising — sometimes pleasing, sometimes disturbing — conclusions. Whatever might have been the instigation or inspiration for the start of writing, the act of writing questions, transforms, recasts those fuzzy first notions until they often end up unrecognizable from their original conformation. How, for example, can a column about football be emblematic of America's obsession with ritualized violence wind up being about writing columns?

And that is the real reason for and pleasure of writing — the meandering, unfolding, risky nature of discovering exactly what it is one has to say about something. Ultimately, the columnist is not so much preaching "This is what I think" as sharing "Hey, look what I found that I think."

research. Others mocked the president's AIDS Commission, saying some of its members are homophobic and know little about the disease.

"Today, I feel great anger and embarrassment," said Hugh Magladry, 35, a Los Angeles caterer with AIDS-related complex, a medical precursor of the deadly virus, as he walked slowly past the gates of the White House, arms linked with other demonstrators.

"People are dying and this administration pretends that the problem will go away. It reminds me of an old line: 'Just when I think I'm cynical enough, I realize that I'm not nearly cynical enough to get by,'" he said.

Seconds later, Magladry and his friends were greeted by the taunts of several hecklers, who waved placards urging marchers to "repent" and "remember Sodom." One man, grasping a bullhorn, kept yelling, "Shame on you for what you do," and was answered by jeers from hundreds of demonstrators.

AS THE MARCH continued, unsuspecting tourists who had wandered down to the White House for an afternoon of picture-taking stood quietly on the sidewalk, watching the colorful parade.

When they began gathering in front of the Capitol, demonstrators at one point heard several off-color, heavily amplified songs about gay and lesbian dress and sexual behavior. They cheered with enthusiasm.

"This weekend, Washington D.C. is ours," the Rev. Troy Perry, a founder of the Metropolitan Community Churches, told the audience. "This is the gay capital of the world!"

Indeed, organizers said they had other events planned for the remainder of the week, including a national strategy planning meeting and a non-violent vigil in front of the U.S. Supreme Court, to protect a decision that upheld a Georgia law banning sodomy.

"We are here for high visibility events," said Ostby. "This is a chance for every gay and lesbian person to feel pride in themselves once and for all."

But there were poignant moments as well. Hundreds of marchers, in a ritual reminiscent of visits to the Vietnam War Memorial, walked quietly around a sprawling, specially embroidered quilt on the Capitol lawn listing the names of thousands of AIDS victims.

One marcher sank to his knees, took off his cap and wept when he saw the inscription honoring his lover, who died this year.

"For some of us, this is a day of hope," said Tom Panagiotos, from San Francisco, as a light rain fell. "But it is also a day of great sadness and loss."

Dan Bradley, who now has AIDS, told the marchers what he wants his obituary to say.

"... after years of struggle and a lifetime of fear, I finally had the courage to say, 'I'm gay and I'm proud.'" internal reallocation, the UI Foundation's Iowa Endowment 2000 private fund-raising campaign and federal grants and state appropriations as ways to finance the improvement, but said the committee did not consider tuition increases as a way to pay for it.

"We are not suggesting tuition increases pay for these goals," Lawler said. "We're assuming further tuition increases will occur at their natural rate. We are not suggesting the increases increase at a faster rate."

LAWLER SAID PUTTING the UI in the top 10 public universities would give Iowa a "truly premier institution."

"I don't think anybody wants to be second-rate," Remington said, adding the people of the state of Iowa want the UI to be number one in education and the arts as well as athletics. "They've never had a second-rate institution in this state and they don't have one now."

The important point for the UI is not necessarily the top 10 goal, he said, but that the UI increase the rate at which it improves.

Lawler said the top ten includes the University of Wisconsin, the University of Michigan, the University of Illinois, the University of North Carolina, the University of Texas and the University of Washington.

The study is part of the UI's 10-year reaccreditation process which will begin in early November when a team from the North Central Association of Colleges and Schools is on campus to evaluate the UI.

Martha Lubaroff, Saul's mother, said Sunday no definite plans for action against the airline are made.

"Right now we're just happy to have him home," she said. "We're going to explore what his rights were."

Martha Lubaroff agreed she thought her son was treated unfairly. "He's my kid," she said. "I think he was given a raw deal."

American middlemen," he said. "We could have gotten them from there."

Although Khorassani's statement appeared to be designed to link the Stingers obtained by Iran to the Iran-Contra affair, congressional investigators said that they have found no evidence that Stingers were ever sent to Iran as part of Reagan's highly controversial covert weapons sales to Tehran during late 1985 and 1986. The sale involved TOW and HAWK missiles.

ACCORDING TO U.S. military sources, the United States is secretly supplying Stingers to about a dozen armed forces around the world, most of them North Atlantic Treaty Organization countries. The most controversial recipients are the anti-communist insurgents in Angola and Afghanistan, who are unable to adhere to all of the elaborate security procedures required of NATO nations. On Sept. 20, the Sunday Times of London reported that members of Younis Khalis' Islamic Party, an Afghan rebel faction with close ties to Iran, had sold at least 16 U.S.-supplied Stingers to Iran for $1 million. The Middle East Economic Digest reported Oct. 3 that some of these Stingers were put on display in Tehran last September.

BUT MILITARY SOURCES cautioned that neither the Afghan nor the Angolan rebels receive enough of the Stingers at any one time to permit the accumulation of a surplus. "The idea of the Iranians having dozens of Stingers is unlikely," said one source. In addition, these officials noted that Stingers are so complex that even trained U.S. soldiers are unable to fire them without six weeks training.

The questions of whether Iran has Stingers and how they got them are likely to be the focal point of a scheduled debate in the Senate next week on Reagan's Persian Gulf policy. According to an aide, DeConcini plans to introduce legislation that would require the administration to get permission from Congress to sell Stingers to other Arab Gulf states.

Congressional sources predicted that these developments might cause some members of Congress to question whether the Afghan rebels should continue to receive Stingers. Because of the popularity of the Afghan cause, this policy has never previously been questioned in Congress.

Hazelwood

expert in constitutional law, said the question of whether the student newspaper is a public forum will probably again be the deciding factor.

"My guess is, that because the newspaper is part of the school's curriculum, it is a public forum that is subject to more control than other traditional public forums of speech," Shane said. "In this case, the court will probably rule in favor of the Hazelwood district."

But Shane said the ruling may also be based on whether the content of the censored stories could be considered disruptive to the school day.

"IF THAT IS THE case, I think the court is being very naive if it decides the topics of divorce and teenage pregnancy disruptive to high school-aged students," he said. "I would loathe to see those stories censored on that basis."

Ben Van Zante, journalism teacher and publications adviser at Iowa City West High School, 2901 Melrose Ave., agreed.

"We've been doing topics like that for years," Van Zante said. "We've covered some very sensitive areas, and I've never heard a complaint."

Van Zante said he is concerned for the students in the Hazelwood case and even more concerned for the future of scholastic journalism.

"It's a tough one to call, but I'm afraid of what the students are up against," he said. "Smart money says the students are going to lose."

GOODMAN OF THE SPLC is more confident for the students.

Both the SPLC and IHSPA — which is based at the UI — along with dozens of other scholastic and professional journalism associations have filed "friend-of-the-court" briefs, Goodman said, encouraging the Supreme Court to rule in favor of the students.

"I'm very optimistic the outcome of the case will be in our favor," Goodman said. "It will be a sad day if it isn't."

Dieleman went a step further.

"The way this turns out will have a real effect on whether I stay on as an adviser," he said. "It could change the direction of newspapers and take all the excitement out of working with them."

UI journalism instructors and scholastic journalism programs executives Richard Johns and Mary Arnold will sit in on opening day of oral arguments for the case Tuesday.

Hawkeye fill-ins win Fry's praise

By Hugh Donlan
The Daily Iowan

MADISON, Wis. — When a team loses starters to injuries it also loses its hopes of a championship. But Iowa remains in the Big Ten's run for the roses after its 31-10 victory over Wisconsin Saturday although Tony Stewart, Steve Thomas and Sean Ridley started for the first time as Hawkeyes.

"We are very proud of the way our guys played today," Iowa Coach Hayden Fry said. "They did a heck of a job on both sides of the football."

Stewart, a 6-foot-1, 200 pound running back, carried the ball 23 times for 103 yards in his first collegiate start. Stewart replaced Kevin Harmon, who is nursing a sprained ankle.

"HE SHOWED US A lot of ability," Fry said. "(His) running ability was super. But the thing I didn't like is he fumbled twice," the Iowa coach said of the freshman ball carrier.

Stewart was not the only new face in the Hawkeyes starting lineup. Defensive end Sean Ridley started for the first time. All three played instrumental roles in the victory, Iowa's 10th in the last 11 years over Wisconsin.

"I was really psyched up for it," Ridley said of his first start. "It is unfortunate that Mike (Burke) couldn't start this game. I'm glad we didn't lose anything by me starting."

The 6-foot-3, 218-pound defensive end from Omaha, Neb., led the Iowa defense with 10 tackles, including three resulting in losses. See Iowa, Page 5B

Ailing Iowa hobbles by Wisconsin

By Mike Trilk
The Daily Iowan

MADISON, Wis. — When Don Morton took over the head coaching job at Wisconsin he promised that he would turn the Badger football program into a winner.

Saturday Iowa proved that Morton still has a lot of work to do.

The Hawkeyes dumped Wisconsin 31-10 in front 74,645 people at

Football

Camp Randall Stadium, proving that it will take some time for the Badgers to become a force in the Big Ten.

"The conclusion I come to now is that we are not a Big Ten contender," Morton said after the Badgers slipped to 0-2 in the conference and 2-4 overall. "If that comes as a surprise to anybody, they've probably been living under a rock."

The win boosts Iowa to 1-1 in the conference and 4-2 overall heading into next week's showdown at Michigan.

NOT ONLY DID THE Hawkeyes get their first conference win of the 1987 campaign, but Iowa's sputtering offense came back to life against the Badgers.

Iowa, sparked by the play of freshman running back Tony Stewart and senior quarterback Chuck Hartlieb, racked up 412 yards of total offense, 223 via the air and 189 on the ground.

Hartlieb, who started in place of an injured Dan McGwire, connected on 18 of 26 passes, tossed two for touchdowns and scored once himself to regain the starting quarterback job.

"Chuck Hartlieb had an excellent game at quarterback," Fry said. "He did a good job of audibling. He certainly did a fine job today — I would imagine that McGwire would be healthy next week, but based on Hartlieb's performance today there is not any question, unless he gets injured in practice this week, that he will start next week."

STEWART, STARTING FOR the first time in his college career, was replacing Kevin Harmon, who is hampered with a knee and an ankle injury. Stewart carried the ball 23 times for 102 yards.

"I thought for a first ball game he showed a lot of ability," Fry said of Stewart. "But the thing I didn't like is he fumbled twice. He has to learn to hang on to the football, but his running ability was super."

Iowa's defense had its bright spots, too, as the Hawkeyes held the Badgers to just 175 total yards and sacked Wisconsin quarterback Tony Lowery five times. Senior Steve Thomas had three tackles behind the line of scrimmage, while senior Kerry Burt caused a fumble and picked off two Lowery passes.

"We had a lot of outstanding people for the Hawks today," Fry said. "Right off the top of my head I know that Steve Thomas and Dave Haight did a great job on the defensive line. (Brad) Quast and (Jim) Reilly in particular were outstanding at linebacker. Kerry Burt may have had the best game of everyone."

"THAT LAST INTERCEPTION" he had was a pro interception," Fry added. "He reached up and over the receiver and took it away without ever making contact."

Iowa took a 7-0 lead on its second possession, marching 89 yards in. See Hawkeyes, Page 4B

Attitude, Hawks improving

By Eric J. Hess
The Daily Iowan

Iowa softball not only has a new coach but also a new attitude.

First-year Coach Gayle Blevins left the Iowa Softball Complex Sunday with a split with Northern Iowa, but she said the 1987 edition of the Hawkeyes have improved as the fall has progressed.

Blevins said the two games against the Panthers — a 2-0 win in the first game and a 2-1 eighth-inning loss in the nightcap — showed her how much the team has improved.

"Our kids really were into the game early," said Blevins, who joined the Iowa coaching staff coming from Indiana. "We just have progressed a lot of areas."

IOWA USED MUCH of its 17-player roster in the two games with the exception of co-captain Sally Miller, a third baseman who Gayle Blevins recently had arthroscopic surgery on her left knee. "We felt like we wanted to give more kids a chance," Blevins said.

Softball

In the first game, freshman Diana Repp tossed a three-hit shutout. Coughenour smashed the game-winning hit with a two-run double, scoring junior Lynda Schlueter and sophomore Kristen Rhoades, in the third inning.

In the second game, the Hawkeyes were held to one run when Karin Wick scored on a double steal with Coughenour at first.

THE PANTHERS TIED the score in the top of the seventh on an RBI single from Connie McBride. The game-winner came in the eighth on another single by Chris Ehler.

Sarah O'Byrne went the distance to collect the victory. Iowa freshman Tami Chown suffered the loss. Blevins said the Hawkeyes maintained momentum for most of the two games until the Panthers held the Hawkeyes scoreless with the bases loaded in the second game.

The Iowa mentor said she noticed that Northern Iowa was a bit intimidated by the Hawkeyes early. Still, Iowa made several defensive changes in order to make up for Miller's absence and to see different players at different positions.

Junior Cara Coughenour, normally a first baseman, played the second game at shortstop.

"She's having everyone play at two different positions," she said.

COUGHENOUR, A co-captain from Kingsley, Iowa, said the team has spent the fall adapting to one another and its new coach.

One new implement Blevins has brought to Iowa is "slapping," a term used for a half-bunt, half-swing where the batter chokes up. See Softball, Page 5B

Giants tame Cards for 3-2 series lead

SAN FRANCISCO — The San Francisco Giants exploited another St. Louis injury Sunday and surged to within one victory of their first World Series appearance in a quarter century.

Former Cardinal Jose Uribe's two-run single fired a four-run fourth inning against reliever Bob Forsch that sparked the Giants to a 6-3 victory over the Cardinals and gave San Francisco a 3-2 edge in the best-of-seven National League playoff.

"The momentum is going our way," Giants Manager Roger Craig said. "We're forcing the issue."

Mathews left after three innings with an injured right thigh and, with a Candlestick Park record baseball crowd of 59,363 watching, San Francisco blasted Forsch.

The Giants won in Cardinal style, stealing bases, going from first to third and catching just about everything that was hit.

"They looked like the Gas House Gang today," St. Louis Manager Whitey Herzog said. "We looked like leadfoots."

Puckett, Gagne rip homers as Minnesota trips up Detroit

By Ira Kaufman
United Press International

DETROIT — Kirby Puckett and Greg Gagne ended slumps with home runs and Detroit's 40-year-old Darrell Evans was victimized by a rookie baserunning mistake Sunday night, helping the Minnesota Twins take command of the American League playoffs with a 5-3 victory over the Tigers.

A season-high crowd of 51,939 braved temperatures in the low 40s as the Twins took a 3-1 lead in the best-of-seven series. In Monday afternoon's Game 5 at Tiger Stadium, the Twins will pitch Game 2 winner Bert Blyleven while Detroit counters with Doyle Alexander, who went 9-0 for Detroit in the regular season before losing Game 1.

THE TWINS REACHED the brink of their first World Series in

AL Playoffs

22 years. In each of the last two AL Championship Series, though, a team trailing 3-1 (Kansas City in 1985 and Boston in 1986) has rallied to advance into the World Series. Overall, only seven of 36 teams behind 3-1 in a postseason series have rallied successfully.

Puckett, who had just one hit in 14 playoff at-bats, hit a solo homer in the third. Gagne, who was 1 for 11, put the Twins ahead 2-1 with a fourth-inning shot.

Detroit closed to 4-3 with a run in the sixth, but Evans' baserunning gaffe cost the Tigers at least a run. Leadoff singles by Chet Lemon and Evans knocked out starter and winner Frank Viola and placed runners on the corners. Pinch hitter Dave Bergman's opposite-field single to left off Keith Atherton scored Lemon and Mike Heath's sacrifice advanced both runners.

JUAN BERENQUER replaced Atherton and, on the first pitch to Lou Whitaker, taken for a ball, catcher Tim Laudner's snap throw to third baseman Gary Gaetti picked off Evans, who was leaning toward home and slid belatedly back to the bag. Berenquer's subsequent wild pitch, which moved Bergman to third, would have scored Evans with the tying run. After Whitaker drew his third walk of the game, Jim Morrison flied out to end the decisive inning as Evans watched glumly from the Tigers dugout.

The Twins added an insurance run in the eighth with the help of an error by Evans.

Jarvis' streak comes to end

BOSTON (UPI) — The longest consecutive-games streak in NHL history ended Sunday night when center Doug Jarvis was scratched from the Hartford lineup before the Whalers' game against the Boston Bruins.

Jarvis, 32, who hadn't missed a game since he was 9 years old, called the benching a "positive experience." His ice time is expected to be curtailed this season with the addition of Brent Peterson to the Whalers' roster.

Jarvis set the record in the Whalers' 33rd game last season.

Tewell takes three-stroke victory

PENSACOLA, Fla. (UPI) — Doug Tewell recorded an eagle and three birdies on the back nine Sunday and surged to a three-stroke triumph in the $300,000 Pensacola Open.

Tewell began the round with a slim one-stroke lead over Phil Blackmar and Danny Edwards. The margin stayed at one until Tewell dropped an 18-foot eagle putt on the 11th hole to move to 14-under-par. The 38-year-old veteran then pulled away with birdies on the 12th, 14th, and 16th holes. With a six-stroke lead, Tewell bogeyed the final two holes and finished with a round of 68.

Neither Edwards nor Blackmar was able to respond to Tewell's binge with a charge. They finished with rounds of 1-under-par 70 and tied for second at 12-under.

Tewell credited his victory to the way he attacked the tough holes at the start of the back nine on the 7,093-yard Perdido Bay Country Club layout.

On The Line

For the first time ever there is a repeat champion. Soon-to-be-famous Brent Knout, who copped the OTL prize a few weeks back, went 9-1 this week to become the first ever contestant to win the contest twice, let alone in the same year.

Six other prognosticators went 9-1 this week, but Knout touted Wilkes as a 23-15 winner over Upsala in our tiebreaker game. Wilkes actually won the game 21-13 which allowed Knout to squeak past 9-1 contestant Ron Schneider who picked a 15-13 win for Wilkes.

Knout will be challenged next week by the The Daily Iowan regulars Mike "Magic" Trilk, Eric J. Hess and Marc Bona. You see, each week Knout enters more than one ballot. The thing is the regulars only get one shot. So we'll see how Knout does under pressure.

AS FOR THOSE OTL regulars... well let's just say that "Magic" Trilk didn't take to kindly to the things written about him in this column all last week. So instead of going out and getting the goons back, Trilk just proved himself, once and for all, on the OTL field of honor.

All you have to do is look at the numbers. This week's results: Trilk 8-2, Hess 6-4 and Bona 4-6. Overall: Trilk 38-11, Hess 34-15 and Bona 29-20. Tiebreakers: all three are tied at 4-1.

As for last week's guest pickers Beano Cook and Chuck Long, well, at least we can say they are better than Bona. Cook, who picks football games for a living, went 5-5. OTL's advice to Beano: Well, we can't print that in a family newspaper. Long went 6-4 but did pick the Michigan State game right. Back to the picket lines, Chuck.

BEFORE WE EXPLAIN the rules for this week's contest, we would like to give some ink to some of the people who enter this contest every week but can't pick football games worth a diddy dadd.

To Eric Blumhagen, Eric Johnson and Tim Cronin of Luther College: Thank you for sending your ballot from out of town and the arrangement that we worked out this week is good for the rest of the year. To Gary Grout, thanks so much for laminating your ballot. And finally, this week's oh-so-close ballot goes to former Quad-City Times employee Joe Hawkins. Hawkins went 8-2 this week missing only the Illinois-Purdue game and calling the Iowa State-Northern Iowa game a tie.

This week's rules are simple. Circle the teams you think will win, including the tiebreaker. You can only enter five ballots, and they have to be in Communications Center Room 111 by noon Thursday. Oh, by the way, this week's prize will be donated by the Super Spud located in the Old Capitol Center. So if you get a hankering — that means desire — this week, drop by the "Spud" for a piping hot potato and a frosty cold brew.

Hawkeyes earn 3 shutouts

By G. Hammond-Kunke
The Daily Iowan

Iowa left no doubt that it is still the boss of Big Ten field hockey, blanking Michigan State 5-0 before a record crowd at Kinnick Stadium Sunday afternoon.

The win gave the 12-3 Hawkeyes undisputed hold of first place with a 4-0 record in Big Ten games. Friday, Kinnick exploded past Ohio State, 8-0.

In Saturday's contest, goalkeeper Andrea Wieland recorded her second of three weekend shutouts as the Hawkeyes cruised past non-conference foe St. Louis 5-0.

The 12th-ranked Hawkeyes won their sixth straight game with Sunday's victory, and didn't disappoint 531 vocal fans who braved brisk weather for the, "No Ice, No Skates, Iowa Field Hockey" promotion sponsored by the University of Iowa Promotions Department.

RIGHT WING Melissa Sanders started the scoring against Michigan State after a great feed from Erica Richards. Moments later, off of a Barb de Kanter pass in, Cherie Freddie found Richards open in the front of the net for a 2-0 lead.

Richards nearly scored again 30 seconds later in front of the net, causing a penalty stroke, which Elizabeth Tchou promptly flicked in on the lower right side for a 3-0 lead. The goal was Tchou's 21st of the season.

De Kanter closed out the first-half scoring by driving home a Tchou rebound off a penalty corner. Michelle Murgatroyd made the play of the day with just seconds left in the game, when she passed the ball through Vicki Hodge's legs right on mark to Richards. Richards zipped a deflected shot past a stunned Michigan State goalie.

here today," Iowa Coach Judith Davidson said in reference to the contest held for the fans. "I'm appreciative to everybody who came out. This was great — it's great to play in front of this kind of crowd. We need to have people come out for next week's game against Northwestern (October 17, 11 a.m.). That'll be a fast-paced game."

"I'm a little disappointed that we didn't have the sharpness that we had Friday against Ohio State or yesterday against St. Louis, but I'm glad we scored."

Davidson said the Spartans and "whistle happy" officials controlled the tempo of the contest.

"The fans didn't see a real fast-paced game today because we played at Michigan State's slow pace," Davidson, who has a 70-9-1 career record against Big Ten opponents, noted.

"I THOUGHT THE officials should have let the play go more to see who was carrying the play (on many of the obstruction calls)."

Davidson, who predicted Iowa was going to explode on some team soon, credited Tchou, a senior, for helping the younger players get primed for the weekend matches.

"Liz Tchou had a lot to do with this team being ready to play this weekend. She's our team leader. I have a tremendous amount of respect for her," Davidson said. "Overall, I'm pleased with the whole weekend."

"We had a team meeting recently and talked about why our intensity level hasn't been very good in practice," Tchou said. "I think it did a lot of good. This team knows it has the potential to be very good."

Against Ohio State, Richards drilled home a career-high four goals and Tchou added two more. Aileen Trender and De Kanter also scored during the rout of the Buckeyes.

"ERICA HAS REALLY been seeing the passes this weekend," Davidson said. "She's been playing the ball a whole lot better at mid-field. I think the shooting drills we had this week are helping her keep her eye on the ball."

Weekend sweep nets Iowa 2 wins

By Anne Upson
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa volleyball team is on a three-match winning streak after defeating Michigan and Michigan State on the road this weekend.

The Hawkeyes took the Wolverines in three games, 17-15, 15-4, 15-10.

"We had a balanced attack," said Iowa Coach Sandy Stewart.

Stewart said there was a struggle in the first game, but the team pulled ahead to win.

"We were behind and then we came back and broke them," Stewart said.

Iowa players Kari Hamel, outside hitter, and Toni Zehr, middle hitter, both had nine kills while co-captain Ellen Mullarkey had seven. Mullarkey also had four block assists and three service aces in the match.

ANOTHER outstanding player in the match was freshman outside hitter Jennifer Thompson. Thompson had two kills in two attempts giving her a kill percentage of 1.000.

Stewart said that Michigan lost its best player, setter Lisa Vahi, to a sprained ankle.

All of the Hawkeyes played against Michigan except freshman Ginger Lorentson, who was out of weekend play because she had the flu.

Iowa came back to beat Michigan State after dropping the first game 8-15. The Hawks won the final three games 15-3, 15-13, 15-4.

The Hawkeyes' weekend performance pleased Stewart.

"Both nights we played really well. We frustrated their passing with our short serves," Stewart said.

Zehr had six service aces and Mullarkey had three. Kari Hamel led the team in blocks with 12, while Zehr and Mullarkey tied with ten blocks.

Jennifer Thompson

TWO OTHER mentionable players were freshmen Barb Willis and Ruth Spethman. They played in the left position both matches.

After this weekend's action, Jenny Rees appears to have an edge on the open leftside position.

"She (Rees) played really well. She played all four games very steadily," said Stewart.

Stewart said that the main problem in the first game was receiving.

"Our receiving against Michigan State was not good," she said. "We got stuck in one rotation. We were leading 8-7, then they got ahead seven points and won the game 15-8."

Stewart said that Hamel turned in a solid performance. She had 17 digs against Michigan and 10 digs against Michigan State.

"Kari did consistently well of any who played," Stewart said. "We had a real productive weekend."

Personal bests set in 10th-place finish

By Scott Wingert
The Daily Iowan

Success is a relative term. At first glance, it would appear Iowa's 10th-place performance at Saturday's Indiana Invitational was just another back-in-the-pack effort.

But it was not. All five Hawkeye runners established career bests at 8,000 meters, though as a team finished well behind all four of the other Big Ten teams in the meet.

"There are different ways to measure success," Coach Larry Wiczorek said. "In cross country, we have time to measure our accomplishments, and all five of our people set a new p.r. (personal record). We can't ask for much more than that at this point."

Kevin Banks of Western Kentucky won the race at the wire over Michigan's John Scherer. Banks was timed in 24:05.1 and Scherer in 24:05.3. Richard Ede of Kentucky was third in 24:06.

ILLINOIS, RANKED fourth in the country, led a clean sweep for the Big Ten in the first four team spots. The Illini won the meet with 45 points, followed by Michigan (71), Indiana (72) and Michigan State (119). Iowa scored 270 points.

Sean Corrigan again led the Hawkeyes, finishing 17th in 24:46 after leading at the 2,000-meter mark. Other Iowa finishers included: Scott Ventura (60th, 25:42), Rod Chambers (75th, 26:10), Dave Brown (77th, 26:11) and L.J. Albrecht (95th, 26:47).

"This was a great experience for our team," Wiczorek said. "We got a chance to study the course (the site of the conference meet) and compete against some top teams in the country."

"It was a good move to go down there. Our guys saw as tough as competition as they'll see all year."

WICZOREK WAS again pleased with Corrigan's effort, noting that many of the Big Ten coaches commented on his vast improvement over a year ago.

"He has all the tools to be a major league talent," Wiczorek said. "He's really gaining confidence in himself and his abilities."

Wiczorek pointed to the fact that Corrigan finished 59th in last year's Big Ten meet in 26:50, two minutes over his time Saturday.

"Nine conference runners placed ahead of Sean Saturday," Wiczorek said. "And I think he can get some of those people. He's starting to breathe down some of those people's necks."

five plays. Stewart ran for gains of 8, 16 and 2 yards and fullback David Hudson carried once for 11 yards. Then Hartlieb hit Marv Cook for a 51-yard touchdown pass with 8 minutes and 48 seconds left in the first quarter.

It looked like the Hawkeyes would score on their next possession as well. Iowa drove from its own 33-yard line to the Wisconsin 24 before Stewart fumbled on a play that Fry thought should have been called dead.

Three plays later, however, Iowa got the ball back when Burt picked off his first pass of the afternoon at the Wisconsin 38-yard line and brought it back to the Badgers' 30 with 2:19 to play in the first period.

AGAIN HARTLIEB alternated runs to Stewart and Hudson before he rolled into the endzone on a 4th-and-1 play from the 1-yard line. Rob Houghtlin's kick gave Iowa a 14-0 lead.

Iowa made it 21-0 with just under 4:00 left in the half when Richard Bass capped a 12 play, 56-yard drive with a 2-yard touchdown scamper.

Wisconsin put three controversial points on the board on the last play of the first half.

The Badgers drove from their own 26-yard line to Iowa's 6 with just over :20 left on the clock before Iowa's Thomas sacked Lowery on third down, pushing the ball back to the Iowa 20. The Badgers had no timeouts left and rushed kicker Todd Gergoire onto the field to attempt a 37-yard field goal as time expired.

Fry didn't think that the Badgers got the snap off before the clock wound down, but the officials disagreed.

"EVERYONE ON MY sideline said that the clock was on zero when the ball was snapped," Fry said. "I shared that opinion with him (the official). I wasn't aggressive or belligerent. The official assured me that he was standing back and he could see the ball and he could see the clock and that the ball was snapped with one second to go."

Trailing 21-3 coming into the second half, Wisconsin threatened to climb back in the game as the Badgers' Marvin Artley broke through the Iowa defense and went Iowa answered the Badger score on its next possession when Hartlieb connected on a 9-yard scoring pass to Quinn Early, making it 28-10 with 8:20 to play in the third quarter.

Houghtlin added a 32-yard field goal in the fourth quarter to round out the scoring.

THE FIELD GOAL gave them momentum going into the locker room at halftime, and they came out and scored a touchdown on a nice play and that always concerns me," Fry said. "Our guys came out in the second half right after they scored and marched down the field and scored, and that helped."

IOWA NOTES

Although Iowa notched a decisive victory, Saturday's game did have its low points. Senior offensive tackle Bob Kratch left the game early in the first quarter with what Fry called a high ankle sprain.

Iowa netters master 3 flights

By Tom Dickerson
The Daily Iowan

The toughest competition the Iowa women's tennis team faced this weekend wasn't opposing players.

Blustery weather swept through the Midwest producing strong winds and cold temperatures — not ideal conditions for tennis — as Iowa played in the seven-team Nebraska Invitational in Lincoln, Neb.

"The conditions were terrible," Iowa's Liz Canzoneri said of the first day of matches. "It was like a typhoon out there."

Despite the conditions the Hawkeyes won three flights of singles play, and one doubles flight. Iowa's combined singles record was 16-5, and the doubles teams finished 6-3.

"They learned a lesson from last week," Iowa Coach Micki Schillig said, referring to the bad weather the Hawkeyes encountered at the

Women's Tennis

Midwest Invitational. "They didn't complain about the weather; they just went out there and played hard."

SINGLES COMPETITION was divided into seven flights, with eight players in each flight. Iowa's Canzoneri captured Flight 2, Catherine Wilson won Flight 4 and Colleen Nichols claimed Flight 7.

Canzoneri defeated a Wichita State player in three sets in her first round match, then breezed in the next two matches to take first place. She beat a familiar opponent in the semifinals of Flight 2, Anne Marie Ovnik from Minnesota, 6-4, 6-1, to advance to the finals.

"She seems to have Ovnik's number," Schillig said. "She played her a couple times last year. The matches are always good, it just seems Liz always comes out on top."

In the finals, Canzoneri crushed Julie Ohlsson of Colorado, 6-0, 6-1.

"She played so well in the final, the other girl must have only scored 10 points," Schillig said.

"That match was an incredible thing for me," Canzoneri said. "It was a great combination of my mental state and physical state being together. It was one of the best matches I've ever played."

WILSON HAD A MORE difficult time in the finals than her teammate. Wilson was extended to three sets against a Colorado player before winning Flight 4, 5-7, 7-6, 6-1.

Nichols won her flight much the way her teammate and roommate Canzoneri did. It took her three sets to win her first round match, then she sailed past her next two opponents to claim Flight 7.

Nichols went on to beat Anne Stephens of Nebraska, 6-3, 6-2, in the semifinals, and dominated Gloria Logan, 6-0, 6-1, in the finals.

Other Iowa singles results included a fifth-place finish by Pennie Wohlford in Flight 1, a second-place finish by Madeleine Willard in Flight 3, a fifth-place finish by Tracey Peyton in Flight 5 and a seventh-place from Susan Evans in Flight 6.

Peyton and Evans won their doubles flight, defeating teams from Minnesota, Nebraska and Colorado.

Iowa will host Western Illinois Tuesday at 3 p.m. in a dual meet.

Hawkeyes settle for 3rd as Michigan State takes meet

By Dan Millea
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa women's golf team finished a disappointing third in the Huskie Classic in Dekalb, Ill., Saturday, thanks to surprising performances by Michigan State and host Northern Illinois.

The Spartans were tied for third after one day of competition but shot a round of 308 Saturday to take the meet title. Northern Illinois led the field after a round of 310 Friday, but the Huskies slid to second with a 325 final round.

The 325 score was enough to keep the Huskies in front of Iowa, which shot a pair of 318s. The Hawkeyes had defeated both Northern Illinois and Michigan State earlier in the fall.

"(Michigan State) has a couple of good players, but they've never been able to put it all together, so I was a little surprised," Iowa Coach Diane Thomason said. "Northern Illinois played very well the first day, which we didn't expect."

"We need to get better team scoring," Thomason said. "Having one individual get hot is fine, but we need to have the whole team play consistently."

THE HOT individual at the Huskie Classic was Kelley Brooke, who shot an even-par-73 Friday and a 78 Saturday to place second in the individual standings. Justi Miller of Illinois was the meet medalist with a 72-74.

"I was really pleased with Kelley,"

Thomason said. "The weekend in Wisconsin (Wisconsin Invitational, Sept. 18-19) she was in a position to win it and she had some problems. This time she handled the pressure and played real well, but just had a great round."

"Kelley is looking more confident now, and the next time she's in that situation she might win it."

Shirley Trier was second to Brooke in scoring for Iowa with a 79-81-160. Stacey Arnold was next with an 83-79-162, followed by Amy Butzer's 83-81-164, Sarah Ward's 89-80-169 and Jeannine Gibson's 87-85-172.

"I was real pleased with Sarah Ward's last round (80)," Thomason said. "It's nice to get that kind of play out of the No. 6 spot."

LIFE IS A BED OF ROSES
A truly extraordinary film from Alain Resnais. Life is a Bed of Roses features Ruggiero Romano, Geradine Chaplin, Fanny Ardant, and Vittorio Gassman in three different stories. The first stars Romano as a kind of WWI Rudolph Steiner type who builds an insanely eclectic Palace of Happiness to which he invites a select group of friends to carry out an experiment in reborn, married with this first story is another which takes place in the same chateau, but in 1982. The castle has long since been transformed into a progressive school, and during spring vacation is the site for a seminar on "education of the imagination." The third narrative line concerns the fantasies of three children who have remained at the school for the holidays. There is a quotation from Verdi spoken in the film: "My job is not to copy real life, but invent it." Once again, Resnais has succeeded magnificently in doing just that.

for a total of 12 yards and a quarterback sack for a 9-yard loss.

"I FELT CONFIDENT (playing) in the game," Ridley said.

The Hawkeyes did not allow the Badgers a first down until the last series of the first half after Iowa had opened up a 21-0 lead. With three minutes remaining in the first half, Wisconsin marched down the field with its newly-installed quarterback.

The Badgers drove inside the Iowa 10-yard line, but the Hawkeye defense would not bend. On a 2nd and 6 play, Wisconsin quarterback Tony Lowery pitched the ball to running back Eric Ford who was sacked for a 2-yard loss by Ridley. On the next play Thomas and Ridley chased down Lowery before Thomas threw him for a 12-yard loss. Wisconsin managed to get off a 37-yard field goal as time expired in the first half.

FRY WAS PLEASED with the Iowa's defensive performance and said he thinks the unit is getting better with each game it plays. "Our defense is playing real good, hard, tough football," he said.

The Iowa head coach was also satisfied with the performance of the new starters.

"All but the one missed tackle on a bootleg, he looked like he played a real good game," Fry said of Ridley.

"Steve Thomas played a great game inside," Fry said of the defensive lineman who has been switched from noseguard to end.

The transfer from Nebraska appeared to have little trouble in adjusting to his reads of the Wisconsin offense and his new responsibilities as an end. "I prefer to be in the middle, but I'll play anywhere. I don't care," Thomas said.

Thomas had nine tackles in the game, three of those tackles were for losses.

Linebacker Jim Reilly returned to the Hawkeye lineup after missing the last five weeks of practice due to an injury received in the Tennessee game. Reilly had five tackles, recovered a fumble and sacked the Wisconsin quarterback for a 5-yard loss.

The junior from Dubuque, Iowa, was satisfied with his play after his absence from action. "I thought I played OK," he said.

"I thought the whole team played pretty decently. We played pretty solid."

Talks break off over 'labor peace'

By Greg Henderson
United Press International

TYSONS CORNER, Va. — NFL ownership, which took a hard line by fielding non-union teams, is now demanding an extended contract to ensure a "labor peace," a move that could lengthen the strike.

Management's proposal to double the period of the collective bargaining agreement came Thursday during the latest round of negotiations in the nearly three-week walkout. The two sides broke off talks Sunday.

Union and management agreed in August to bargain for a three-year deal, matching the duration of the league's $1.42 billion television contract. But the NFL Management Council now says that agreement was voided when the players struck Sept. 22.

"It buys you five years in a prospective basis, five seasons of no strikes and no shutdowns and all the attendant problems that go along with it," said Jack Donlan, executive director of the Management Council.

JIM CONWAY, THE Management Council's general counsel added, "We think this industry needs a good, long period of stability and labor peace. Our proposal for a longer plan is a peace plan, not an attempt to stall off these talks, not an attempt to derail the process."

Donlan said the new demand would allow the NFL Players Association to reopen for negotiation the economic issues of its contract, and possible binding arbitration, when a new television deal is signed in three years. But the union says its many issues cannot be split on economic lines.

"We're about to witness an enormous explosion in Europe and in Japan and in Australia," said Doug Allen, the NFLPA's assistant executive director. "The NFL is about to become a worldwide sport and (will) generate enormous revenues. When that happens, we want to make sure that the players are in a position to react to that and to participate in that growth."

ALLEN ALSO CLAIMED player "frustration" builds over a longer agreement, making a strike ultimately more likely after an extended collective bargaining agreement. The previous two contracts covered five years and strikes followed.

Allen said part of the reasons players struck in 1982 and again this season is because of vast changes in the league over the length of the agreements and the volume of demands that build up.

"What we are saying to the players in these negotiations is the fans are tired of labor disruptions every time we come to the table," Conway said.

Softball

on the bat and "slaps" the ball through the infield.

"She wanted to bring that here and work on it," Coughenour said.

Blevins said the players are having varying degrees of success slapping the ball, but control and placement of the ball still need work.

"It's a dimension Iowa's never had before," Blevins said.

On the mound, the Hawkeyes have three freshmen and a senior. Christen Barry, a senior from Syracuse, N.Y., will start her second season with Iowa as the lone returner. Sophomore left-hander Pamela Brown, a pitcher last season, has been relegated to designated hitter and first base.

IOWA'S THREE freshman — Chown, Repp and Andrea Meyers

— have all had good progress, Blevins said. But none had a change-up, a pitch the players could use to keep batters off balance, before joining the Hawkeyes.

The Hawkeyes have two lone seniors in Barry and Amy Drake, making the team a young and inexperienced team.

"It's a very young team, and it's so critical to have leadership out of your upperclassmen," Blevins said.

Iowa will continue to practice this week with final cuts late in the week. Blevins said she didn't know how many would be cut, but the number would depend on who she believes will contribute the most when the Hawkeyes open their spring season in March at the Sooner Invitational in Norman, Okla.

Playoffs

Aiming to clinch their first World Series spot since losing to the New York Yankees in 1962, the Giants have named Dave Dravecky to face John Tudor in Game 6 Tuesday night in St. Louis. Dravecky shut out the Cardinals on two hits in Game 2.

"He pitched a masterpiece," Craig said of Dravecky.

"The key for me Tuesday is going to be concentration, and just going out and having fun," Dravecky said before Game 5. "That's what this game is all about. The bottom line is those two things. Have fun and concentrate."

A SEVENTH GAME, if necessary, would also take place in Busch Stadium.

San Francisco's Jeffrey Leonard

failed to hit a home run, snapping at four his record streak of games with at least one, but Kevin Mitchell connected for the Giants and San Francisco first baseman Will Clark set a playoff mark by hitting in his fifth consecutive game.

Joe Price, who replaced starter Rick Reuschel to open the fifth, earned the victory with five innings of masterful relief. The

The Giants contained one St. Louis outburst with their 10th double play of the series, extending their playoff record.

MATHEWS BECAME the second St. Louis starter to suffer a playoff injury. Danny Cox missed two starts with a stiff neck.

Emergency room used as drive-in KANSAS CITY, Kan. (UPI) — A man shot three times early Sunday morning intentionally drove his car through the glass doors of a hospital emergency room to get help, authorities said.

Robert P. Roth, 42, of Kansas City, Kan., tried twice to drive his car through the double doors at Providence-St. Margaret's Hospital before he made it in, a hospital employee said.

No one at the hospital was injured when Roth guided his car into the emergency room area, authorities said. About five people were in the area awaiting treatment.

Hospital workers helped Roth into an examination room. He was listed in serious but stable condition Sunday with a bullet wound to the face and two gunshot wounds to the pelvis.

The only damage reported was to the wall and doors.

Hospital officials said hospital operations were not impeded, although the car was in the area for nearly an hour before police removed it.

Roth was shot during a disturbance at a motel early Sunday morning, said police spokesman Donald Ash.

Police later arrested an unidentified man and a woman in the shooting. The man, 30, remained in custody Sunday, but police questioned and released the woman, Ash said.

Ragtime group jams

By Anne Kevliv The Daily Iowan

I was a pretty painless way to learn a lesson in American history. As the music Sunday afternoon descended upon the audience at Hancher Auditorium, it evoked images of the idealism and the surge of national pride in turn-of-the-century America...

the Hancher Auditorium "Sunday at 3" series. Under the direction of Gunther Schuller, who founded the ensemble at the New England Conservatory of Music in 1973, the group has become nationally renowned...

Sunday's performance was everything the ragtime style is meant to be — happy, amusing, playful, delightful. The music, often technically demanding, was expertly played — members of the group are graduates of the acclaimed New England Conservatory of Music...

THE 15-MEMBER ensemble, which was instrumental in the rebirth of ragtime popularity when it was formed in the early 70s, performed as part of

SCHULLER SELECTED the program largely from the works of the ragtime king, Missourian Scott Joplin. It was in these pieces, "The Maple Leaf Rag," "Scott Joplin's New Rag," and "The Pineapple Rag," that the ensemble was best able to show its razzle-dazzle, whimsical colors. Musicians were adept in focusing on extremes in volume, tempo and texture of the Ragtime style...

Particularly enjoyable were the jazzy, sleazy numbers by self-proclaimed jazz inventor Jelly Roll Morton. His pieces, "Smokehouse Blues" and "Grandpa's Spells," were performed in the true spirit of Dixieland jazz...

IWP celebrates 20th anniversary

By John Marks The Daily Iowan

In celebration of its 20th anniversary, the UI International Writing Program will bring a host of poets, novelists, journalists and playwrights from all over the world to the campus this week.

Paul and Hualing Nieh Engle started the program in 1967 in order to give foreign authors a chance to experience both American culture and the community of writers from other countries.

Many former members of the program returning for the anniversary have become major literary figures in their own countries, said Hualing Nieh Engle, who currently directs the IWP. The guest list includes writers from Guatemala, China Mainland, Hungary, Czechoslovakia, Israel, Finland, Jamaica, Spain, Poland and the Philippines.

SPECIAL GUESTS INCLUDE Nobel prize-winning Polish poet Czeslaw Milosz, Irish poet Seamus Heaney, Mitchel Levitas, editor of The New York Times Book Review, and Coleman McCarthy, national correspondent for the Washington Post.

To begin the anniversary events, book review editor Levitas will speak to the Writers Workshop and the IWP on "Demystifying The New York Times Book Review: How It Works and How Decisions Are Made."

Seamus Heany, an Irish poet, will read at 8 p.m. Thursday night in Phillips Hall Room 100.

At 3 p.m. Friday in the Boyd Law Building Room 265, poets Milosz and Heany, Levitas and Washington Post correspondent McCarthy will lead a panel discussion on "Society and the Writer."

Milosz, whose oeuvre includes essays, prose and poetry, will read at 1:30 p.m. Saturday in Phillips Hall Room 100. Former members of the IWP will hold a panel discussion on "My Life As a Writer" at 3 p.m. in Communication Studies Building Room 101.

THE IWP AND the Department of Asian Studies and Literature will co-sponsor a dialogue in Chinese among 12 writers from Taiwan and China Mainland Sunday at 2 p.m. in the Union Terrace Room. The commentators for the event will be Chinese writers working in the United States.

The last of the anniversary events will take place the following week when Spanish authors and critics will hold a panel discussion on the post-boom literature of Latin America entitled "After the Boom: What?" Oct. 20 at 7 p.m. in the English-Philosophy Building Room 304.

Fernando Del Paso, currently cultural attache to the Mexican embassy in Paris, and Patrice Eusteve, director of the national theater in Buenos Aires, will participate in the discussion, which will be held in English.

All of the events are free and open to the public.

Iowa to host the world

The whole world comes to Iowa sooner or later. The presidential candidates come for the voters, artists come for Hancher, students for the UI. This week brings A. M. Rosenthal and several reporters from The New York Times, Mitchel Levitas, editor of The New York Times Book Review, reporters from Le Monde, The London Times Literary Supplement, The Washington Post, The San Francisco Examiner and some regional papers to cover the 20th anniversary of the UI International Writing Program.

Many events related to the program will be reported this week. It is a unique program of international relations from Iowa that stretches around the world. Every year 30 to 40 writers from other countries come to the UI to spend time here with each other and with Paul and Hualing Nieh Engle. They then scatter to continue writing in their home countries.

Jack Simons

Paul Engle once had occasion to visit a doctor in Japan. The doctor asked: "Are you the Paul Engle who has made Iowa so famous in Japan?"

Citizens of Iowa City must buy the book The World Comes to Iowa, which is a 300-page collection of the remembrances of some of the more than 650 writers who have come to the International Writing Program. What makes the book unique is that it is a hymn to a university and a city.

Marcy Rosen played a cello recital in Clapp Recital Hall last Wednesday night before a small appreciative audience. She deserves much credit for playing the Bach "Suite No. 6 in D Major." Having heard the Bach Suite only on recordings, I was unaware of what a formidable task it was for the performer.

Rosen played the Bach without music after first preparing herself with a silent moment of meditation. The piece was full of sudden shifts from loud to soft and its rapid succession of tones provided rich harmony sounding like more than one instrument on the stage.

The Bach shows every wart, every bad note, every squeak of the bow. It is a naked performance. Rosen also played brilliantly "Fantasy Pieces" by Robert Schumann and "Sonata in A minor" by Edvard Grieg.

It was not necessary for her to play the Bach — only heroic.

A/E Briefs

UI School of Music faculty member David Greenhoe will give a free trumpet recital at 8 tonight in Clapp Recital Hall. Accompanying Greenhoe on the piano will be Eric Ziolek of the UI music theory and composition faculty. The program will feature a performance of Hindemith's "Trumpet Sonata" which will be dedicated to the memory of pianist Kerry Grippe, a former School of Music faculty member who died recently.

Nourishing the Lunchtime Connoisseur "Hopper's Silence" — The UI Museum of Art will show the award-winning film Hopper's Silence as part of its Wednesday lunch series at 12:30 p.m. The film offers a personal glimpse of Edward Hopper's work and life and is narrated by Helen Hayes. Anyone wishing to bring lunch may eat in the museum staff lounge prior to the program.

The Stradivari Quartet, a string quartet composed of faculty members of the UI School of Music will perform Wednesday at 8 p.m. in Clapp Recital Hall. They will play the music of Haydn, Shostakovich and Ravel. The quartet has been absent from the performing scene for two years due to an injury to its first violinist, Allen Ohmes.

The Pirates of Penzance, Gilbert and Sullivan's classic musical comedy will be presented by the University Theatres at 8 p.m. Oct. 14-17 and 22-24 and at 3 p.m. Oct. 18 and 25 in E.C. Mabie Theatre. This song-filled farce became a Broadway smash in 1981 starring Linda Ronstadt. The plot is convoluted, hysterical and very British.

Poland's Warsaw Ballet will perform Giselle at 8 p.m. Friday in Hancher Auditorium. Giselle is considered one of the great works in the ballet repertoire. The ballet premiered at the Paris Opera in 1841, and since that time has come to represent the essence of the Romantic style in ballet.

An exhibition of art works by art teachers in Iowa's elementary, junior and senior high schools is currently on display in the Gallery Space, Terrace Lobby in the Union. The exhibit will continue through the end of the month.

Peter Schickele and friends will bring "The Intimate P.D.Q. Bach to Hancher Auditorium Saturday night at 8 p.m. Schickele punctures classical music and manners with a combination of parody and slapstick.

Douglas and Close thrill in 'Fatal Attraction'

By Kevin C. Kretschmer
The Daily Iowan

Movies

Fatal Attraction

Directed by Adrian Lyne. Produced by Stanley R. Jaffe and Sherry Lansing. Screenplay by James Dearden.

Dan Gallagher.....Michael Douglas
Alex Forrest.....Glenn Close
Beth Gallagher.....Anne Archer
Ellen Gallagher.....Ellen Hamilton Latzen

Showing at the Englert Theatre

Dan Gallagher (Michael Douglas) tries to comfort a distraught Alex Forrest (Glenn Close) after a casual weekend of unbridled passion ends with the latter's unsuccessful suicide attempt in Fatal Attraction.

As the new morality is indeed upon us. It wasn't long ago that movies suggested that both men and women might improve their lives by leaving their spouses and exploring the unknown (the unknown was often someone without sexual hangups). Films often reflect social conditions, and lately changes in attitudes about sexual behavior have begun showing up on the screen.

Earlier this year the makers of The Living Daylights, the latest James Bond entry, claimed that they had intentionally restricted 007's amorous pursuits to echo audience concern with socially transmitted diseases. Sexual adventure is out; safe sex is in.

NOW ALONG COMES Fatal Attraction which tells us that the cost of a discreet weekend tryst with an acquaintance may be your life. According to the film, successful, but frustrated career women are laying in wait for happily married professional men.

The implicit philosophy of the film, that goal-oriented working women are a threat to American morality, is likely to bother that share of the audience who picks up on it. Unquestionably, the film has its flaws (they should have fired the continuity person). Nevertheless, on the whole its strengths combine to form a tension-packed thriller that is bound to create sweaty palms and uneven breathing for all but the most detached filmgoer.

MICHAEL DOUGLAS PLAYS

Dan Gallagher, a married New York City lawyer who is seduced by Alex Forrest (Glenn Close), an unmarried publishing executive. Despite the fact that he has a loving, beautiful wife and an adorable daughter Douglas decides to spend a weekend with the temptress.

Actually, the premise should not be accepted. Certainly, this type of thing happens every day, but the film constructs an extraordinarily idyllic family life for Gallagher.

Maybe it is not the premise so much as the casting that makes it hard to accept. Casting the extremely sexy Anne Archer as Gallagher's wife Beth makes it difficult to believe that he might stray.

In any case, Gallagher succumbs to Forrest's attentions and turns a weekend into a sexual decathlon while his wife is scouring suburbia for their dream home. At one point, Forrest asks where she stands. "I think you're terrific, but I'm married," is his reply. It is not long before she demonstrates that that was not the response she was seeking. Forrest caps the weekend with an embrace in which Gallagher finds that she has slit her wrists.

UNFORTUNATELY FOR Gallagher, she makes a full recovery and begins a plan to win him away from his wife. His kind, but firm brush-offs are to no avail. Forrest only becomes more determined to have him, but now externalizes her anger by terrorizing his family. A particularly good scene features the three leads at the Gallagher condo as Forrest poses as a possible buyer for the uncomprehending Beth and an agitated Dan. Director Adrian Lyne whose previous film 9½ Weeks treated kinky sex with excessive style takes this opportunity for more of the same. For the most part, the stylish touches add to the turmoil. For example, the daylight photography which is especially appealing in the early scenes is appropriately replaced with a gloomy cast as the film gets increasingly grim. Some scenes do seem derivative of Hitchcock (and others), but it is difficult to create a thriller with anything new into the master's territory.

IT IS SURPRISING how much tension is built by including scenes that contain no dialogue, especially in some extremely violent situations. Whether that was Lyne's decision or screenwriter James Dearden's script the results are remarkably effective.

The three stars are excellent in the leads of a story that has only very minor supporting characters. Douglas and Archer provide credible performances as unnerved husband and wife, while Close contributes an askew rendering of her role that reminds one of Bette Davis at her virulent best.

Politics aside, Fatal Attraction is probably the best of its kind since Jagged Edge, another Glenn Close vehicle. It is not without its problems, but it delivers just what any thriller should — thrills.

Call your mummy.

You remember. She was always there when you were frightened. And if you got hurt, she was standing by with bandages. Wouldn't it feel good to talk to your mother again right now?

Calling over AT&T Long Distance Service probably costs less than you think, too. And if you have any questions about AT&T rates or service, a customer service representative is always standing by to talk to you. Just call 1 800 222-0300.

Sure, your schoolwork and your friends keep you busy. But call home and find out what she's wrapped up in.
