Crippled jet crashes into hotel

Nine people die after pilot ejects from fighter

By Jim Slater
United Press International

INDIANAPOLIS — A crippled Air Force jet fighter plowed into the lobby of an airport Ramada Inn and exploded Tuesday, killing nine people, injuring seven and enveloping the hotel in fire and smoke. The pilot parachuted to safety.

The A-7D Corsair jet slammed into the seven-story hotel "like a bomb," ripping away a bank's roof and flattening trees and light poles in its path. A man getting out of his car in front of the hotel lobby was engulfed in flames as the jet crashed, witnesses said.

The pilot, Air Force Maj. Bruce Teagarden — a 12-year veteran with 2,085 flying hours — told investigators that his single-engine jet flamed out, or lost power, at 31,000 feet as he headed toward Terre Haute, Ind., about 40 miles away, on a training flight to Nevada.

AIR TRAFFIC controllers advised him that Indianapolis International Airport was 15 miles off his right wing, and Teagarden turned the jet and tried to glide into the airport. When he realized he could not make it, he ejected and the plane flew on to crash into the motel at 8:15 a.m. CDT, officials said.

"The pilot ejected when the engine could not be restarted and weather conditions precluded the pilot from successfully completing a flame-out landing," a Pentagon spokesman said.

Teagarden, 35, the father of two children from Las Vegas, was released from an Army hospital after examination, officials said.

The fighter jet bored as much as 20 feet into the lobby area before stopping. Witnesses said the awning in front of the hotel collapsed, blocking access.

RESCUE WORKERS said the dead

all were in the lobby of the hotel. At least seven people were injured, including two firefighters.

Fire officials completed their search of the site Tuesday evening and said they did not expect to find any additional victims.

Four of the nine people killed were identified Tuesday: Emma Jean Brownlee, 37, Indianapolis; Allen Mantor, 18, Amo, Ind.; Beth Louise Goldberg, 30, Indianapolis; and Brenda Joyce Henry, 26, Indianapolis. All were hotel employees.

Dennis Nicholas, Marion County coroner, said the other five victims would not be identified until Wednesday because dental records would be needed to make a positive identification since the bodies were badly burned. Nicholas said he believes all the victims were hotel employees.

U2 Invades Carver-Hawkeye Arena

U2, Bono electrify Iowa City crowd

By Anne Kevlin
The Daily Iowan

Under a bleak gray sky, close to 16,000 people filtered through the doors of Carver-Hawkeye Arena Tuesday evening, awaiting the long-anticipated and much-publicized concert by the Irish rock group U2.

It was a concert charged with electricity. Inside, the audience danced and waved arms even before the performance, as a warm-up band and then a recording of The Beatles' hits blared from the sound system. At a pause in the recorded music, fans jumped to their feet in false anticipation: The band was nowhere in sight.

Outside, scalpers stood in 20-degree temperatures, competing for the surprisingly few people who wanted to attend the concert, but still had no tickets.

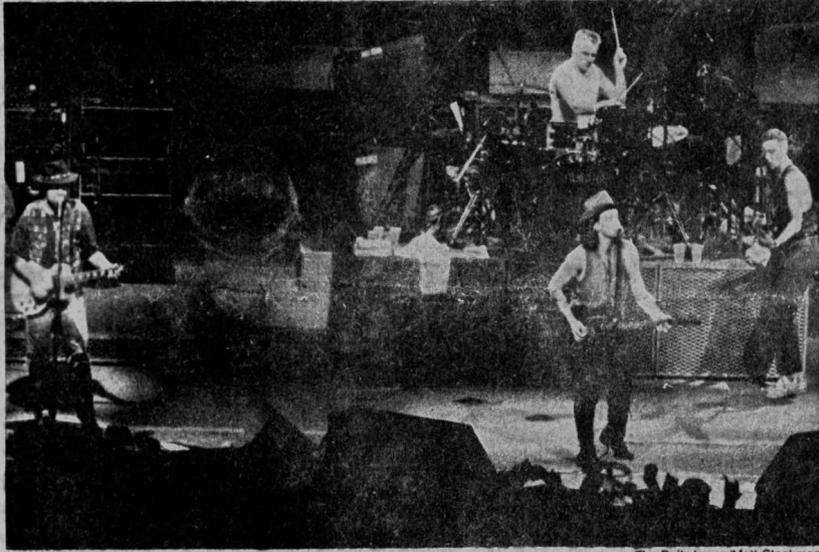

But the arena was hot — from both the enthusiasm of dancing bodies and the loud rock vibrating from giant speakers.

At 8:30 p.m., much of the crowd rose to its collective feet with strains of The Beatles' "Twist and Shout," and then several thousand hands began to sway to "All You Need Is Love." It was a sight of unity, of audience members banding together their expectations.

"I'll take anything right now," a UI junior said as he tried to get rid of two extra concert tickets in a parking lot near Carver-Hawkeye Arena. "I don't know how hard it is to sell them, I just want to get rid of them so I don't have to stand out here and freeze."

The junior, who declined to be identified, said he bought eight tickets for $17.25 each, and gave five away to friends. He was having trouble selling the tickets for more than $12 at 7 p.m., a half hour before the concert's opening act began.

Rusty Page and Harold Dodd came Tuesday from Sterling, Ill., for the concert, and had a second-row ticket to sell after a friend decided not to attend. Dodd said he would take whatever payment he could get shortly after 7 p.m.

The Irish rock group U2 performed before 16,000 fans Tuesday night at Carver-Hawkeye Arena.

The two described themselves as avid U2 fans. "It's like a religious experience," said Page, who has attended four U2 concerts. "U2 is one of the best bands to come out in the last 20 years or so."

Dodd described the atmosphere of U2 concerts he has attended: "Everybody stands up, and everybody is dancing, and everybody sings, word for word."

Troy Kramersmeier, a junior at Buena Vista College, said he withstood the cold for 1½ hours, trying to get rid of two extra tickets. Kramersmeier said he was hoping to get $50 to $60 for the tickets he paid $25 for, but he was having little luck as fans rushed to line up by the doors to the arena.

"We're just trying to get rid of them for as much as we can," he said.

Near entrances to the arena, crowds thronged around tables set up to sell U2 t-shirts that sold for $17, as well as other U2 souvenirs. The crowds dwindled

15 injured after fans rush stage

By John Gilardi
The Daily Iowan

At least 15 people were injured — three seriously — when thousands of fans at Tuesday's U2 concert rushed the stage in Carver-Hawkeye Arena, according to Campus Security.

One pregnant woman was kicked, another person suffered a knee injury and a third man was found on the floor and complained of being "light-headed," according to Campus Security reports. Police believe the man may have fallen to the floor and hit his head.

All three were taken to UI Hospitals and Clinic — two by ambulance and one by squad car. The conditions and names of the people injured were not released Tuesday night.

"IT'S NORMAL for people to rush the stage at a concert," Campus Security Lt. Ralph Moody said. "It just so happened we had people injured. We normally have people injured when they start rushing the stage. The problem was we had an awfully full house."

When U2 went on stage at approximately 9 p.m., about 2,000 of the 16,000 fans rushed towards the stage. Many people poured out of the seats onto the main floor. The chanting and waving crowd pushed toward the stage and people then began to fight their way out of the crowd.

"The pushing and shoving was so bad that you thought you were going to get punched," Luther College student Beth Dehli said. "It was so intense that you were scared for your life."

As the band played, people continued to push toward the stage. SCOPE ushers cleared the aisles and security personnel tried to keep the crowd back

Stock market rebounds with largest point-gain in history

By Ellen Freilich
United Press International

NEW YORK — The Dow Jones industrial average soared 102 points Tuesday in record volume in its biggest point-gain ever. But most stocks closed lower in the aftermath of Monday's devastating crash.

The Dow surged 102.27 to 1841.01, a 5.9 percent gain. It was the blue-chip indicator's 30th largest advance in percentage terms. The Dow plunged 508 points — 22.6 percent — Monday.

Analysts said the Dow advanced because investors believe government and monetary authorities will work to prevent a further collapse, because many companies said they will buy back some of their stock and because the bond market rallied. The bellwether Treasury 30-year bond rose 3 points, or about $30 for every $1,000 of face value.

"THE MOST IMPORTANT thing is that the bond market rallied and that there appeared to be a concerted effort by monetary authorities to keep this market from moving much lower and to prevent further repercussions," said Ricky Harrington, analyst at Interstate Securities in Charlotte, N.C.

Another factor helping the market and encouraging some bargain-hunting among name-brand stocks were announcements by many

UI receives science grant

The UI Department of Civil Engineering has received a $180,000 two-year grant from the National Science Foundation to study and develop methods of design sensitivity analysis and optimization.

The grant will be used in the study of complex structural systems such as cars, airplanes, space vehicles, buildings and bridges.

The research involves the design of safer, more durable, more efficient and cost-effective structural systems, according to UI Civil and Environmental Engineering Professor and Optimal Design Laboratory Director Jaspir Arora.

"Cost-effectiveness does not mean using cheaper materials to construct these systems," Arora said. "The time involved in the design process will decrease and thus save people money. Safety constraints on the systems will be more rigid."

Arora and several graduate students will conduct their research in the Optimal Design Laboratory in the UI College of Engineering.

Ethics professor to visit

Mark Siegler, Director of the Center for Clinical Medical Ethics at the University of Chicago and a nationally known scholar on biomedical ethics, will speak at the UI on Oct. 29 as an Ida Beam Visiting Professor.

Siegler will deliver his lecture at 4 p.m. in the UI Medical Alumni Auditorium, Room E-331. His talk is titled "Should Fluids and Nutrition be Withdrawn from Incompetent Patients Not Terminally Ill."

Siegler is the author of Clinical Ethics: A Practical Approach to Ethical Decisions in Clinical Medicine, a widely used text in the field. He has published and spoken widely on issues of general internal medicine and biomedical ethics.

Siegler's talk is sponsored by the UI Program in Medical Humanities as part of the UI College of Medicine Lecture Series.

U.N. chapter holds meal

The Iowa City chapter of the United Nations Association will be holding a free community meal on Sunday, Oct. 25 at 6 p.m. at 10 S. Gilbert St.

Featured speakers at the event include James M. Olson, National Field Director for the United Nations Association of America, and Kelly Eyanson, Acting Program Director for the Iowa City Food Bank Emergency Service. The program is scheduled to begin at 7:15 p.m.

RESOLVE holds meeting

The Iowa City Branch of RESOLVE of Iowa will hold a meeting on Tuesday, Oct. 27, at 7:30 p.m. in North Liberty, Iowa.

The group, which offers information and support to infertile persons, is sponsoring the meeting as part of Iowa Infertility Awareness Month. A recap of the events of the month is planned for the meeting.

Mall sponsors contest

Sycamore Mall in Iowa City will be sponsoring a Halloween Costume Contest and trick-or-treating in the mall on Friday, Oct. 30.

Age groups for the costume contest include 1-2 years, 3-5 years, 6-9 years and 10-13 years. The contest will begin at 6:30 p.m. in the center of the mall.

The mall will also sponsor trick-or-treating from 7-8 p.m. Costumed children may visit Sycamore Mall stores and receive treats from the merchants during this time.

Groups request volunteers

Two Johnson County service organizations are asking for volunteers for community service work.

The Johnson County United Action for Youth Organization needs volunteers to provide emergency shelter for youth when other shelters are full. Call 338-7815 or 338-9279 for more information.

The Iowa City Woman's Transit Authority needs volunteer drivers and dispatchers for its weekend ride service. For more information, contact 335-6002.

Zuber accuses Iowa City staff of deceiving council

By Joseph Levy
The Daily Iowan

Iowa City Councilor Ernest Zuber accused the Iowa City staff Tuesday of deceiving the council on several important budgetary matters, pointing to a memo he claims may have led to the council to make a very costly mistake.

Zuber, speaking at the council's formal meeting, claimed a memorandum sent to the council May 20, 1986, by Assistant City Attorney David Brown was a "miscommunication."

Brown's memo was in regard to the city's multi-year $800,000 effort to improve the Iowa City Municipal Airport to comply with Federal Aviation Administration standards.

Zuber said the memo led him to incorrectly believe the federal government might reimburse the city for 90 percent of the cost of the not-yet-completed compliance project — or $720,000.

"THE CITY HAS been taken down the primrose path," Zuber said, adding this is the most serious of several erroneous claims he says the city staff has made during his term on the council. "This is just another one of the miscommunications going on here," Zuber said.

If the airport does gain FAA compliance, the federal government might only reimburse the city for 90 percent of the cost of acquiring land for an extended runway, or about $90,000.

"If that was not the intent, then why in the hell was I told that?" Zuber asked. "I would caution any new member of the council to be careful what you read, be careful what you're told (by members of the city staff) — you might get nicked."

But councilor John McDonald — mayor of Iowa City when the council began the runway extension project to bring the airport up to FAA compliance standards — said he understood at that time the city would only be reimbursed for land acquisition dollars, not for 90 percent of the entire project cost.

"WHEN WE MADE the decision, when we made the vote, I was not under the impression we would be eligible for the reimbursement of those particular monies," he said.

This mistake in the memo, Zuber said, is significant because the city is currently trying to alleviate a projected $900,000 deficit for fiscal year 1989.

"Seven hundred thousand dollars is a lot of money when you've got a $900,000 deficit," he said.

Zuber, whose term on the council expires at the end of the year, also voiced his objections to a resolution passed by the council Tuesday night granting $40,000 to the Iowa City Area Development Group — a local economic development organization.

The grant would be the third of five annual grants totaling $200,000 given by the council to the development group. The council voted 5-1 in favor of continuing funding of the group, while Zuber voted against the proposal.

"It's another deal like the airport," Zuber said, explaining he wanted to know exactly how these tax dollars are being spent. "Where have our benefits been?"

Iowa City Mayor William Ambrisco said the audit would be a good idea, but added he would still vote to fund the group.

"I will continue to vote in favor of this economic development group," he said, explaining an audit could not accurately show the effectiveness of such a group. "You don't see results overnight."

McDonald's styrofoam use may spark local picketing

By Paula Roesler
The Daily Iowan

Fast-food businesses should curtail the use of non-biodegradable styrofoam containers nationwide, an anti-styrofoam advocate said Tuesday.

Local picket organizer Joe Bolcom, a UI graduate student, said he decided to help organize a local picket last week after hearing about a nationwide movement against the containers.

Advocates want to express this view this weekend while picketing the Iowa City McDonald's, 804 S. Riverside Drive.

The Clearing House for Hazardous Waste is a group based in Washington, D.C., which is promoting the protests. McDonald's is targeted for the pickets because the corporation is the leader in the fast-food industry, Bolcom said.

STYROFOAM IS A plastic product which produces toxic substances during the manufacturing stages that are harmful to the ozone layer of the earth's atmosphere, according to a leaflet distributed by the anti-styrofoam group.

The picket is targeted for Friday and Saturday from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. It is part of a nationwide environmental drive opposing the use of styrofoam cups, sandwich containers and packaging products by fast-food chains; the group is proposing the use of biodegradable paper products.

"McDonald's is a very significant contributor (to the styrofoam problem)," Bolcom said. "Hopefully, if they do something, other businesses will follow suit."

McDonald's announced Aug. 6 — five days after demonstrations by the Vermonters Organized for Cleanup picketed McDonald's restaurants in that state — that their packaging companies would stop using ozone-damaging gases to manufacture containers. Bolcom said he considers the concession a victory, but styrofoam disposal continues to be a problem.

LOCAL demonstrators said they hope the picket will educate the public about the hazards of styrofoam products. The public can be instrumental in getting businesses to change their policies, Bolcom said, but local McDonald's managers haven't been confronted because the manufacture and use of styrofoam is a policy implemented by the national corporation.

Local environmentalist JoAnn Beard said McDonald's will probably be "good neighbors" if they are made aware of the severity of the styrofoam problem.

During the picket, demonstrators said they hope to "create a presence" and distribute information about styrofoam materials.

UI participates in Alcohol Awareness week

By John Bartenhagen
The Daily Iowan

In an attempt to educate college students about one of their primary pastimes, campuses nationwide are participating in the fourth annual National Collegiate Alcohol Awareness Week this week.

Kathleen Adams, director of public relations for The Will Rogers Institute, one of three national sponsors, said the program's purpose is to distribute educational material to an increasing number of college campuses. This year, the sponsors have filled more than 2,000 orders for informational packets — almost double last year's total, she said. "Our primary goal is to help college students avoid the dangers of drinking and to help them make intelligent decisions about it," she said.

RATHER THAN ALIENATING students by promoting abstinence from alcohol use, Adams said the program advocates moderation. "We haven't stressed abstinence because it is unrealistic, especially in a college setting," she said. "Plus we don't want anyone have a negative reaction — sometimes, when people tell you not to do one thing, you'll run right out and do it." As part of the local alcohol awareness effort, a section of the Fieldhouse, 111 E. College St., was reserved for underage people Tuesday.

Fieldhouse owner Mark Eggleston, who emphasized that no alcohol was served in the reserved section, said the event was very successful, drawing about 400 underage people.

"I WAS PLEASANTLY surprised with the turnout because we never really had the opportunity to follow through with our end in terms of advertising," he said. "We're seriously thinking about doing it on a semi-regular basis."

By replacing myths about alcohol and responsible drinking, Adams said the program will not only improve the behavior of this generation of college students, but successive generations.

"We've come a long way already toward responsible drinking," she said. "Twenty years ago, drinking and driving was not a concern. Hopefully, the children of this generation will be informed from the start."

ALCOHOL AWARENESS week

is also sponsored by the Association of Deans of Students and the Student Nurse Association, she said. As part of their educational campaign, the sponsors offer these tips for safe drinking:

- Don't drive after a tailgate party or happy hour. One American dies in an alcohol-related traffic accident every 35 minutes.
- Eat something — never drink on an empty stomach. Solid food like cheese can slow down the alcohol absorption rate.
- Don't be pressured into drinking more than you can handle and don't pressure your friends to keep up with you. Everyone has an individual tolerance.

Keep a watchful eye on serving sizes. Cocktails should contain no more than 1 1/4 ounces of distilled spirits. Wine is commonly no more than a five ounce serving and a typical serving of beer is 12 ounces.

• Know yourself and your mood. If you rarely drink, chugging a few beers will affect you faster than it would affect someone who is accustomed to drinking. Your mood can also influence the way you react to a drink. If you're depressed over a test or some other event, drinking will depress you further.

Group seeks Lake Macbride-Solon bike trail

By Craig Sterrett
The Daily Iowan

A group from the Solon, Iowa, area is seeking funding to improve a mile-long trail that would make it safer to hike and ride bicycles between Lake Macbride State Park and Solon after the Johnson County Conservation Commission voted against the group's $6,000 request.

Solon Area Community Foundation President Larry Meister said Monday Iowa Route 382 is one of the busiest roads in the area and bicyclists pose a safety problem for both drivers and cyclists who use the road.

"I travel back and forth to Solon on a daily basis," Meister said. "Kids who live at the lake ride in to come to town. In the summer Solon kids ride out to the beach."

The limestone-surfaced trail would be almost a mile long and would lie on the bed of what used to be part of the Rock Island Railroad.

THE PORTION OF trail the Solon Foundation wants to build would be 5 feet wide and will link up with another trail along the lake to make the entire trail 5 miles long.

There is a trail presently on the old rail line, but it is only a mowed grass pathway.

Eighty percent of the trail is along the lake, and with its picturesque bridges "the trail itself is just beautiful," Meister said.

It would cost $30,000 to bring the trail up to standards, Solon Foundation Representative Jim Martinek told the Johnson County Board of Supervisors Oct. 13.

Martinek said the foundation has appropriated $10,000 and has already raised $6,000 for the project.

But earlier this month, the Johnson County Conservation Commission voted 5-2 against the foundation's request for $6,000.

"THE BOARD DOES not feel they can go in on a trail that is so closely related to a state facility," Conservation Board Executive Director Rod Dunlap said. He also said that the county does not have money in its budget for the project at this time.

"It is a great thing but I don't know if we should get involved in it," Johnson County Supervisor Harold Donnelly said. "It would help the development of that area."

The Iowa Department of Natural Resources turned down a request by the foundation a year ago, because money from state park user fees cannot be used for building the trail.

State officials said they thought the trail was a good idea from both safety and recreational standpoints, and said they will try to help efforts for fundraising and attempts to get donations for the project.

After being turned down by the county on Oct. 13 and by the state in November 1986, the Solon Area Community Foundation will begin seeking funds elsewhere.

The foundation is trying to pay for the trail through donations and will go back to the Department of Natural Resources to solicit more funds.

Homecoming committee announces week's events

By Paula Roesler
The Daily Iowan

Today begins a full schedule of entertainers and events for UI Homecoming Week 1987, homecoming organizers said.

Homecoming '87 Executive Council Director Mary Rae Durband said the 18-member homecoming committee started planning for this week's activities, entitled "A Time to Celebrate," in February and has been working hard ever since.

"Our plans are finally coming together," Durband said. "And I think Homecoming this year will be really successful and will really be a time to celebrate."

The celebration begins today at the Old Capitol Center with entertainers Ty Montgomery and Rob Shulz and the University Singers performing between 12:20 p.m. and 1 p.m.

THE HOMECOMING parade through the downtown area is scheduled for Friday at 6:15 p.m. and will include many UI student groups and 12 high school marching bands.

The Marching Cobras, a high school drill team from Kansas City, Mo., will be the parade's star attraction.

"They're kind of a drill team that dances," Durband said. "They're quite a spectacle. They're really great."

Chuck Baumann, Homecoming Executive Council Assistant Director, said members of the Cobras drum and dance corps, who range in age from 12 to 17, perform across the country.

THE UI FACULTY-staff award will also be awarded as part of homecoming this year. Nominations were taken from UI students, faculty and staff and the Homecoming Council chose the winner based on the nominee's exemplary attitude and supportiveness to the UI community.

"We wanted to recognize somebody from the faculty or staff this year," Baumann said. "You may have a professor or know a janitor who has really been supportive of the Hawkeyes. We wanted to honor them. They're part of the whole scheme of things."

The award-winner will be announced and presented with a plaque at the faculty-staff reception, which will be held in conjunction with the Homecoming King and Queen coronation on the Union's sun porch today at 4 p.m.

Members of the 1987 Homecoming Court include UI students Mark Ingebritson, Larry O'Brien, Paul Oetken, Eric Sestrand and Jim Vogel as king candidates and UI students Elise Burmeister, Robyn Bishop, Valerie Cardenas, Michelle Frick and Jolynn Schneider as queen candidates.

The Homecoming King and Queen will be introduced during the Iowa-Purdue pregame activities. At halftime, Homecoming '87 special guest Irving Weber will be introduced.

WEBER, 86, IS a UI alumnus who was the first All-American swimmer at the UI. Baumann said UI men's swimming Coach Glenn Patton has dubbed Weber "the father of UI swimming."

"Every single swimmer at the UI has known Irving Weber since he was a swimmer here in 1922," Baumann said, adding Weber still swims every day.

One of the week-long homecoming activities is a baby picture contest in the Union. UI students, faculty and staff are challenged to correctly match baby pictures of UI football players with their names. The winner will receive an autographed football.

Homecoming buttons are on sale all week at many downtown businesses, the University Bookstore and at the football game Saturday. The $1 charged for each button is directed to the homecoming activity fund.

Other homecoming events this week include a pep rally on the Pentacrest Thursday at 7:30 p.m., a firework display at the Hancher riverbank Thursday at 8:30 p.m. and an I-Club Breakfast with Coach Hayden Fry.

Senate debate on Bork delayed again

WASHINGTON — Senate debate on Robert Bork's Supreme Court nomination was put off again Tuesday but senators still clashed over the judge, with one accusing pro-Bork forces of using the nominee as a pawn in a political game.

Full-scale debate on the Bork nomination, delayed for two weeks, was postponed again when the Senate voted to limit debate to 30 hours on legislation that would force the president to report to Congress on further U.S. military involvement in the Persian Gulf.

Jury quizzed on alcohol at Deaver trial

WASHINGTON — Potential jurors in the perjury trial of former deputy White House chief of staff Michael Deaver said Tuesday that overcoming alcoholism could be a sign of character but others said excessive drinking reflected a weakness in willpower.

Deaver, 49, is expected to use his battle with alcoholism as a defense, contending his illness impaired his memory when he was questioned about certain meetings connected with his lobbying activities after he left the White House in 1985.

First lady urges mammograms for women

WASHINGTON — First lady Nancy Reagan, whose surgeon praised her as his "best patient" after breast cancer surgery, is urging women everywhere to have cancer-detecting mammograms, her spokeswoman said Tuesday.

Reagan's two surgeons explained that the tiny cancerous lesion discovered in her left breast — less than a centimeter in size — could only have been detected through a mammogram. The first lady was told that only 3 percent of breast cancer tumors are revealed "by touch" and the remaining 97 percent through mammography.

Suicide of stripper tied to mother

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. — A Harvard psychiatrist testified in a landmark case Tuesday that a "psychological autopsy" showed a mother contributed to the suicide of her 17-year-old daughter by forcing her to become a stripper.

Tina Mancini killed herself March 24, 1986, with a .357 Magnum pistol. Her mother, Theresa Jackson, 40, is charged with aggravated child abuse, procuring sexual performances by a child and forgery.

"I have determined the nature of the relationship with her mother was a substantial contributing cause to Tina Mancini's suicide," said psychiatrist Douglas George Jacobs.

Report finds history books distort past

NEW YORK — History textbooks dilute and distort key elements of the nation's past by trying to appeal to children addicted to television, a report funded by the Education Department said Tuesday.

"Books have been dumbed-down and neutralized," said Gilbert Sewell, a researcher at Columbia University's Teachers College. "Too often texts are overwhelmed by graphics in a misguided attempt to catch and hold the attention of television-addicted children and adolescents."

Americans harassed in Panama City

PANAMA CITY, Panama — The government controlled by military strongman Gen. Manuel Antonio Noriega has escalated its campaign of political attacks on Washington with a series of actions to harass U.S. diplomats, servicemen and other citizens in Panama, U.S. spokesmen said.

On Friday, Panama deported a recently retired U.S. colonel, Charles Stone, who headed the U.S. Embassy's military group. Stone was the third U.S. citizen expelled during a four-month political crisis. Two American journalists earlier were ordered to leave the country.

Karpov resignation evens chess match

SEVILLE, Spain — World chess champion Gary Kasparov won his first victory Tuesday in his title defense against Anatoly Karpov, who resigned against overwhelming odds.

The victory evened the score of the two Soviet grandmasters in the 24-game duel to two points each. Their first three encounters ended twice in draws and in one win for the challenger.

Ancient boat of Pharaoh found buried

CAIRO, Egypt — An international scientific team confirmed Tuesday that pieces of wood buried in the shadow of the Great Pyramid of Giza are remains of a 4,600-year-old boat built for the Pharaoh Cheops.

The scientists confirmed the existence of the ancient craft by drilling a three-inch diameter hole through 63 inches of limestone and making photographs of the sealed chamber with a sophisticated remote video recorder.

Smoke billows from the burning Iranian oil platform destroyed by four U.S. Navy destroyers in an 85-minute attack Monday.

Iran vows to make U.S. regret attack

By Charles P. Wallace
Los Angeles Times

MANAMA, Bahrain — Iran charged Tuesday that the United States had caused $500 million worth of damage during the attack on its offshore oil platforms and threatened to retaliate in the next few days.

"God willing, we will carry out our duty in the coming days and make them sorry," the Speaker of Iran's Parliament, Hashemi Rafsanjani, said in a speech broadcast by Tehran radio.

Rafsanjani, who is Iran's chief spokesman on the war, joined a growing chorus of Iranian public figures who demanded revenge for the American attack Monday, despite the hope expressed in Washington that the attacks would not escalate.

"It is not a threat nor an attempt at intimidation when we say we will respond to intimidation," Rafsanjani said.

THE COUNTRY'S oil minister, Gholamreza Aqazadeh, told reporters in Tehran that the two oil platforms in the Persian Gulf that were attacked by the United States Monday were still burning out of control 24 hours later.

Gulf shipping executives said commercial traffic in the waterway appeared normal. U.S. military sources said three of the destroyers, brought into the gulf for the attack, had sailed back out through the narrow Strait of Hormuz to rejoin their battle groups in the Arabian Sea.

Aqazadeh said two crewmen on the oil rigs were seriously injured in the attack and added that a preliminary estimate of the damage was $500 million. He vowed that Iran would file a complaint with international bodies against the attack.

In Washington, Pentagon spokesman Fred Hoffman denied that any Iranians had been injured. The Pentagon said Monday that the platform crews had been given 20 to 30 minutes to abandon the platforms before the attack began.

THE UNITED STATES said it was retaliating for an Iranian missile attack last week against a U.S.-registered Kuwaiti tanker near Kuwait's main oil terminal. The missile attack blinded the American captain of the Sea Isle City and wounded 17 other members of the crew.

Four U.S. Navy destroyers pounded the two sections of one oil platform with 1,000 five-inch shells, finishing off the job of destruction with demolition teams. Later, Navy commandos boarded a nearby platform that had been abandoned by its Iranian crew and blew up radar and communications equipment they found there, according to the Pentagon.

Aqazadeh denied that the platforms had been used as military command posts to launch gunboat attacks against merchant shipping as Secretary of Defense Caspar Weinberger had asserted. He said the only weapons installed on the platforms were machine guns.

Reaction to the American strike, the third clash with Iran in less than a month, was muted among Arab states in the gulf.

FOUR YEARS OF PROVEN SERVICE.

I have known Bill Ambrisco for many years. I have not always agreed with him and I expect I'll disagree with him again. Bill, however, has a deep and abiding belief in the principle of community service that is hard to dispute; he says that Iowa City has given him and his family a good life, and that he should give something of himself in return—which he does. Bill Ambrisco is a good and decent man who works hard for the good of the community. It is possible to argue with Bill on the details of issues, but it is impossible to argue with his integrity or his principles.

Global attack on AIDS begins

Health officials set up group to fight disease

By Ivan Zverina
United Press International

UNITED NATIONS — World health officials announced Tuesday they are setting up a Global Commission on AIDS to help tackle an expected increase of up to 3 million cases of the deadly disease in the next five years.

They said this would be a "greater than tenfold increase" from current levels.

The United States proposed a global program to make "the world's blood supply safe for transfusion" by 1991 as part of the overall strategy against Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome.

Halfdan Mahler, director general of the World Health Organization; Jonathan Mann, director of WHO's special program on AIDS; and U.S.

Surgeon General C. Everett Koop were among officials presenting latest findings to the 159-nation U.N. General Assembly.

THE OFFICIAL COUNT as of Oct. 20 was 62,438 reported cases of AIDS from 126 countries, with the United States alone accounting for 42,354, they said.

Koop said there were 25,000 AIDS deaths in the United States and "we estimate that 1.5 million additional Americans are infected by the AIDS virus." He said by 1991, costs of treating the disease in the United States may reach between $8 billion and $16 billion per year.

Koop ruled out a quick vaccine against AIDS because of the long incubation period of the disease.

But he said "one thing that can be done in the short term" is a global effort to screen blood to make it safe for transfusions. "Could we do this, all of us working together, say by 1991?" Koop asked.

"ACTUALLY, REPORTED (cases) are only a fraction of all cases," Mann said. "We estimate the actual number of AIDS cases worldwide has been in excess of 100,000."

"We estimate that for each AIDS case there are likely to be 50 to 100 AIDS virus infected people," Mann told delegates. "According to our best estimates, in the first five years after infection, 10 to 30 percent of infected people will develop AIDS."

"This information suggests that 10 to 30 percent of the estimated 5 to 10 million virus-infected people in the world may develop AIDS during the next five years," Mann said.

"This would mean 500,000 to 3 million new cases, or a greater than tenfold increase compared to the number of cases thus far," he said.

"Unless a treatment is found to protect healthy AIDS virus-infected persons from developing AIDS, we will be helpless to avert this large wave of new AIDS cases," he said.

"We are creating a Global Commission on AIDS, bringing together experts in the health, social, economic, legal, ethical and biomedical fields," Mahler said.

He said in just a few years, the spread of AIDS has brought on a "confrontation between man ... and disease ... that has rarely been as stark."

Twin girls to undergo operations

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (UPI) — The first of a series of operations to separate 10-month-old South African Siamese twin girls began Tuesday, with a hospital spokesman saying it was not likely both infants will survive the multi-step surgery.

The twins, Mpho (Gift) and Mphonyana (Little Gift), are joined at the back of the head and share a main artery behind their separate brains. During seven hours of surgery, doctors clamped the shared blood vessel, hoping secondary vessels will take over and form a "natural bypass" over the next week, making possible additional operations to complete the separation.

Hospital staff said both twins were "doing well."

Professor Robert Lipschitz, who is heading the 40-person surgical team at Baragwanath Hospital in the black township of Soweto, said earlier that the team had been in regular contact with U.S. surgeons who performed a 22-hour operation on similarly joined West German twins in Baltimore a month ago.

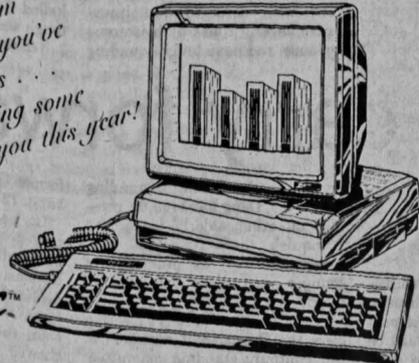

Lipschitz said although he had received "some very sound advice," it soon became obvious to the local team that the similarity between the two cases was only superficial.

Lipschitz said the separation process would take up to two months "providing there are no complications."

President Ronald Reagan listens as Indian Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi speaks at a White House ceremony Tuesday.

Gandhi, Reagan hold talks

Indian leader pledges no nuclear bomb 'unless constrained'

By Norman D. Sandler
United Press International

WASHINGTON — Indian Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi sought U.S. pressure Tuesday to prevent Pakistan from joining the club of nuclear nations with a dual-edged promise that his country will not produce atomic weapons "unless constrained to do so."

After almost two hours of talks at the White House, Gandhi and President Ronald Reagan announced a series of steps to continue a recent upturn in relations between their countries, clouded still by the issue of U.S. aid to Pakistan.

With India worried about the threat from neighboring Pakistan, its enemy in three wars since 1948, Gandhi prodded Reagan for U.S. assistance — offered in the past only in the form of moral suasion — to block a Pakistani bomb.

"WE DO NOT HAVE nuclear weapons, we do not want nuclear weapons and we certainly do not want nuclear weapons in our neighborhood," said Gandhi, whose country stunned the world with the explosion of an atomic device in 1974.

However, Gandhi voiced concern at the growth of nuclear stockpiles and said "another country" — presumably Pakistan — now seems on the threshold of fulfilling a longtime goal of acquiring nuclear weapons.

"On our part," Gandhi said, "let me assure you, Mr. President, and the people of your country that we have no intention of producing nuclear weapons unless constrained to do so."

Gandhi also told a news conference later Tuesday a cut-off of U.S. aid would deter Pakistan's nuclear program.

"It's very difficult to say they would halt the program but the program would very definitely slow down very much if your aid is cut," he said.

HE SAID THAT at the recent Commonwealth conference in Vancouver, Canada, a "senior Western official" told him Pakistan already has a "workable" nuclear device.

Reagan assured Gandhi that U.S. military and economic assistance to Pakistan — now in limbo because of congressional concerns over the nuclear issue — "is not directed at India."

Beyond that, a senior administration official said only that the two leaders "had a good discussion of our respective points of view."

A senior U.S. official said today the administration is "working hard" to reinstate the Pakistan aid program, which has caused U.S. relations with India to suffer.

Among the factors driving the administration's commitment to Pakistan is the role that country plays as a base and arms pipeline for rebels fighting the Soviet-installed government in Afghanistan and as a haven for Afghan refugees.

Aquino attacks critics: 'Honeymoon is over'

By Keith B. Richburg
Washington Post

MANILA, Philippines — Declaring "the honeymoon is over," President Corazon Aquino Tuesday directly confronted widespread criticism that she is weak and lacks vision by telling business leaders that she will drop her slow-moving style of government-by-consensus and pledging "henceforth, I shall rule directly as president."

In what had been billed as one of the most important speeches of her presidency — coming amid a perception that her government was adrift — Aquino touched on all the major concerns of the business community and the general public.

The list ranged from her shaky ties with the military to concern over mounting labor unrest, from the conduct of the war against communist insurgents to nagging questions of whether she is strong enough to "hack it" as president.

"THE QUESTION YOU all really want to ask is, can she hack it? Isn't she weak?" Aquino told a forum of more than 1,000 businessmen. "The honeymoon is over, isn't it? It didn't last very long. . . . The Cory who could do no wrong in those early, invigorating months after February 1986 is seen as having done nothing at all."

Aquino answered the "weakness" charge by saying, "Although I am a woman and am physically small, I have blocked all doors to power except election in 1992." She blamed the perception that she is weak on "shamefaced officers" in the military who want to overthrow her, and on "failed politicians who made the last places in the last election and are now trying to find a back door to power."

IN THE 40-MINUTE address, laced with sarcasm and interrupted several times by boisterous applause, the new, tough-sounding Aquino began her public conversion from housewife-politician to strongminded president by ordering the police and military to use force to break up widespread illegal strikes. The labor actions have added to the atmosphere of instability while threatening new business investment.

That announcement drew immediate praise from businessmen who hailed Aquino for finally taking a tough stand to end the unrest. Representatives of church-affiliated social action groups said later, however, that the speech appeared to mark Aquino's final passage from a president of uncertain ideology to one who has decided to anchor her administration on the conservative twin pillars of business and the military.

They noted that her speech was aimed primarily at pleasing her business audience, and made no mention of the urban poor or the landless farmers.

Chinese expected to carry forward reforms

By David Holley
Los Angeles Times

BEIJING — The central committee of China's Communist Party Tuesday formally approved preparations for a party congress that is intended to push forward policies of openness and reform.

The session endorsed draft revisions of some articles of the party constitution and approved in principle a document on reform of China's political structure, according to the official New China News Agency.

Political reforms aimed at reducing the direct day-to-day administrative role of the Communist Party in government and the economy are expected to be key topics of discussion at the party congress, which opens Sunday.

CHANGES IN the party constitution are believed to be intended partly to allow paramount leader

Deng Xiaoping, 83, to step down from the powerful Politburo standing committee but retain chairmanship of the party's central military commission.

Under the current party constitution, the military commission post, which is equivalent to being armed forces commander-in-chief, must be filled by a Politburo standing committee member.

Diplomats and other analysts believe that by planning to step down from the Politburo standing committee, Deng has brought pressure on other elderly leaders to relinquish their positions, thus opening the way for promotion of younger men more dedicated to reform.

Presiding over Tuesday's meeting were the five current members of the Politburo standing committee: Deng; acting General Secretary Zhao Ziyang, 68; President Li Xiannian, 78; Chen Yun, 82; and former General Secretary Hu Yaobang, 72.

Hu lost his post as general secretary in January in a conservative backlash that followed student demonstrations in favor of more democracy. He has made only a handful of public appearances since then, but Chinese television showed all five leaders on the nightly news broadcast Tuesday.

The central committee formally accepted Hu's resignation and confirmed the appointment of Zhao as acting general secretary, actions first taken in January by an enlarged meeting of the Politburo. The congress is expected to confirm Zhao as general secretary.

Attending the central committee meeting were 202 members and 122 alternates. A new central committee, the 13th in the 66-year history of the Chinese Communist Party, will be elected by the congress.

Psychologists: Panic simply a case of 'herd' mentality

By Gayle Young
United Press International

NEW YORK — For psychologists, the panicky trading on Wall Street that sent the Dow Jones plummeting to a record low was nothing less than a classic case of herd mentality.

Like gales stampeding from a presumed enemy because a single individual starts running, investors saw people around them selling stock at any price and decided to sell their stock too.

"When the risks are high and the situation uncertain, the herd mentality takes over," said psychologist Jagdish Sheth, a professor of marketing at the University of Southern California in a telephone interview.

"People don't really know what to do because the market is so unpredictable no one really understands it," Sheth said. "So the trend is to watch each other and imitate, imitate, imitate."

"YOU ARE NEVER so vulnerable as when in a panic situation," agreed psychologist James Gottfurcht, who counsels brokers in Santa Monica, Calif. "In a panicky crowd your nervous system is heightened. You become more susceptible to influences and you lose your identity."

Psychologists interviewed Tuesday said a number of economic factors led to the market crash Monday which saw a record Dow Jones average plunge of 508 points.

But they also said psychological factors came into play during the day's trading and that the emotional aftereffects will be around for a long time to come.

They doubted the panic many traders were experiencing could be alleviated overnight, despite reassurances from President Ronald Reagan and top economic officials.

Headlines in three New York newspapers blare the news of Monday's stock market collapse. Despite yesterday's record drop of 508 points, the Dow Jones recovered nearly 190 points early Tuesday.

Some of the researchers likened the situation to a classic psychological model called the prisoner's dilemma, in which two prisoners are told separately by the warden they will be freed if they inform on the other.

IF BOTH PRISONERS decide to act in their own best interest, they both lose. But if they cooperate, they may benefit from the situation.

"The idea is, if you don't sell and I don't sell and he doesn't sell, the price will stay up," said Daniel Kegan, a Chicago psychologist in private practice who studies people's attitudes toward money.

But the psychologists said it is unlikely traders will cooperate in order to keep the price of stocks up.

"The whole force of the market is that with every win there is a loss," Sheth said. "It is difficult to bring a spirit of cooperation into a competitive situation."

The psychologists said people who have lost substantial amounts of money in the market will probably feel tremendous emotional turmoil.

"Studies have shown people are more sensitive to losses than they are to gains," Kegan said.

"Loss is the most traumatic experience in life," Gottfurcht said. "Loss of a love one is No. 1, but money is right up there because money is tied to power, control, self esteem, popularity."

U.S. economy may feel ripples from recent stock market plunge

By Alan Krauss
United Press International

NEW YORK — The U.S. economy is likely to feel aftershocks from the stock market's precipitous slide despite safeguards installed since 1929 that should prevent a repeat of the Great Depression, economists said Tuesday.

The economy now is cushioned by such buffers as federal insurance on bank and brokerage accounts, unemployment and welfare benefits and social security, all of which have been put in place since the 1930s to guard against a replay of the general economic collapse.

Nevertheless, the economists said, the damage done in the stock market could hurt investors, consumers and businesses as it ripples through the economy.

THE MOST LIKELY consequence of the dramatic loss in stock value is a decrease in consumer spending, which is the principal engine that drives overall economic growth, said Geoffrey Moore, director of the Center for International Business Cycle Research at Columbia University's Business School in New York.

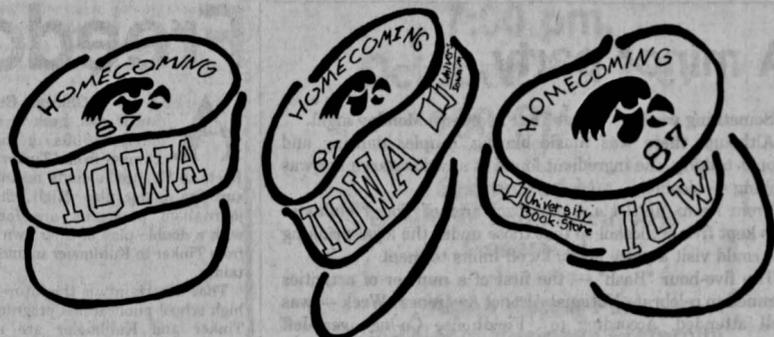

"Consumers on the point of making a major purchase such as a house or an automobile might postpone that purchase if they think either that the stock market decline means a recession that would threaten their jobs or if they think the price might come down," Moore said.

They also might decide to postpone major purchases simply because the drop in their stock portfolios has cut the overall value of their assets — a phenomenon economists label the "wealth effect," Moore said.

Moore said the stock collapse could cause businesses to curtail plans for spending on new plants and equipment until the extent of the upheaval is clearer.

A minor party

Something was missing at The Fieldhouse Monday night. Although there was music blaring, couples dancing and groups talking, one ingredient found at any downtown bar was lacking — alcohol.

From 7 p.m. until 1 a.m., the back area of The Fieldhouse was kept free of alcohol so that those under the legal drinking age could visit a place normally off limits to them.

The five-hour "Bash" — the first of a number of activities planned to celebrate National Alcohol Awareness Week — was well attended. According to Fieldhouse Co-manager Jeff Logan, about 350 minors walked through the bar's doors Monday night.

Despite the success, it may be another year before a similar bash is held. While the idea of opening up bars to underage patrons appeals to many people, some bar owners are reluctant to admit minors.

The fear of losing money and the difficulty of establishing a procedure for admitting minors are two major reasons owners are hesitant. "I was first apprehensive because our life and blood is selling liquor," Logan said. "There's also a lot of hassle about how to figure out how (minors) can be allowed into a bar."

Granted, it might be difficult to keep all minors from ever having a drink. But with careful thought and planning, a feasible plan could be worked out. Minors at the University of Illinois in Champaign, for instance, are welcome at nearly all of the local bars.

How do the Illinois bars handle the influx of non-drinking patrons? With little trouble, say several owners. At some of the bars, employees attach colored bands on the wrists of those who may drink while those who cannot wear plain bands. At other bars, marks are made on patrons' hands as they enter. In order to purchase an alcoholic drink, a person must display the proper colored band or mark.

Additional staffing would be needed — especially for the first few weeks — to implement such a system. But the benefits of such a plan would be well worth the initial cost.

First of all, bar owners would help send all patrons — regardless of age — a healthy message about alcohol: People can have a good time without drinking. In addition, allowing more people into the bars would increase sales at all of the downtown eating and drinking establishments open at night.

Local business people and UI student leaders should look into the possibility of such a system. An ad-hoc committee should be formed so that an exchange of ideas may begin. Let's send the message that people can have fun without alcohol.

Use common sense

Yes, it can happen here.

Last Friday morning, a UI senior was getting gas for her car at a local QuikTrip. She returned from the store to find a man sitting in her car brandishing a gun. He forced her to drive him to Marshalltown, Iowa, where he picked up another man. She was eventually released near Boone, Iowa unharmed.

She was lucky. Yes, this woman was very lucky. Lucky that she wasn't beaten, raped or killed.

And it seems it usually takes an isolated incident such as this one to open people's eyes and make them realize that such crimes could happen to them or to someone close to them. Granted, kidnapping is not the most prevalent crime in Iowa City, but rapes and other forms of assault are far too common.

According to officials at the Rape Victim Advocacy Program, the number of reported rapes and related sexual incidents have jumped in the last few years. Just since July 1 the program has received 18 reports of rape, nine reports of past rape, four sexual assaults and eight sexual harassments. Five of the rapes occurred in the Iowa City metro area and five more of the rapes occurred in Johnson County. Three of the rapes were gang rapes.

So obviously, such crimes do happen here — more frequently than people think, when one considers that these statistics reflect only the incidents reported. And these are only a few categories of crimes.

The bottom line is to just be careful. There are many preventative measures that can be taken such as not going out alone after dark or walking in well-lighted areas if forced to be out alone. Lock cars, doors and windows. Be careful of letting strangers or very casual acquaintances into a residence. Acquaintance rape is becoming more and more common. These are just a few things that can be done. Contact a counseling service if more information is needed. For the most part, just use common sense.

included anonymous comments from three current and former students about their pregnancies and another student's account of the impact of his parents' divorce.

Three staff members — Kathy Kuhlmeier, Leslie Smart and Lee Ann Tippet — filed suit in federal court charging that their First Amendment rights had been violated. The district court judge's ruling in favor of the school district was later overturned by the Eight Circuit Court of Appeals.

THE UNCERTAINTY faced today is whether the Supreme Court will uphold the decision of the circuit court that the articles would not disrupt the normal activities of the school or result in financial liability for the school administration.

We were both in the U.S. Supreme Court chambers last week to hear Leslie Edwards, attorney representing the students, and Robert Baines, Jr., representing the school district, argue the case.

The strongest arguments presented were those by Supreme Court Justices William Brennan and John Paul Stevens in questioning the school officials' case. Brennan put the case in a nutshell when he said that the school board's arguments "really add up to no First Amendment protection."

THE OPINION of the justices will probably be handed down this spring. Until that time, the veil of uncertainty hangs heavily over student publications. Are student publications included under the Tinker decision? In the last 18 years student publications programs have operated under the assumption that the Tinker decision does not apply to them. Sensitive issues like pregnancy and divorce have been included in a majority of high school newspapers in Iowa during that time.

If students' First Amendment rights are not upheld, what will happen? Students will lose the primary outlet they now have for making their opinions, ideas and concerns known to their peers and the rest of the community. Students will have trouble believing that the First Amendment applies to all citizens of the United States. Student interest in reading and working on the newspaper will dwindle. The high school student press will no longer be a training ground for the collegiate — and ultimately the professional — news media.

How will the Supreme Court resolve this issue? We want them to stand firm on First Amendment rights. This case can keep the doors opened by the Tinker case flung wide. The justices must stand firm on student press freedom and make that Tinker to Kuhlmeier double play if future journalists are to have their "chance."

Mary Arnold is executive secretary of the Iowa High School Press Association. Richard Johns is executive secretary of Quill and Scroll Society. Both are members of the faculty of the UI School of Journalism and Mass Communication.

If students' First Amendment rights are not upheld, what will happen? Students will lose the primary outlet they now have for making their opinions, ideas and concerns known to their peers and the rest of the community.

Darkest day has bright spot

Mike Royko

As the Dow Jones plunged, I nervously pondered the possibility of another Great Depression and wondered what I should do to survive. So I called my wife and said: "Buy coal." "Why should I buy coal?" "Because when I was a kid during the Depression, if you had coal in the basement for the furnace, you were all right." "But we have a gas furnace." "Buy some coal anyway in case they turn off the gas. The utilities are heartless. And buy potatoes." "Why?" "Because I remember that we ate a lot of potato pancakes. Cheap, and they stick to your ribs. And remember to switch off the lights."

BUT AFTER we spoke, I turned on the TV and heard a financial expert say the stock plunge might merely be a long-overdue adjustment, and there is no reason to climb out on a window ledge.

Even more important, he said that this could be the time to take advantage of some shrewd buying opportunities.

Not wanting to miss any shrewd opportunities, I immediately headed for LaSalle Street, the heart of Chicago's financial district.

I saw a well-dressed young man stumbling along, holding his hands to his face and moaning.

"Excuse me," I said, "but can I ask you a personal question?" "What is it?" he cried. "Make it quick, I'm heading for the nearest bridge."

"Are you a yuppie?"

"YES, I AM a devout yuppie."

"And you wouldn't happen to also be an MBA, would you?" "To my lasting regret, yes." "And are you a broker or a trader?" "Yes, yes, but why are you asking me these questions?" "I just wondered what kind of watch you're wearing." "A Rolex, of course. What kind of yuppie MBA broker-trader do you take me for?"

"Would you care to sell it?" "Would I?" he cried, yanking it off and thrusting at me.

I stuffed a few greenbacks in his hand and said: "Is that a Burberry trench coat you're wearing?" "Yes, brand new," he said, tearing it off. "You want it?"

"Deal. And I can't help but notice a Mont Blanc pen in your pocket. Would you ..."

"NAME YOUR price and you've got it. I've already used it to write a farewell note to my sweetheart, an assistant aerobics instructor."

"Thank you. And what about that Hermes scarf and the Porsche designer sunglasses, hmmm?"

"As you can see, the scarf is newly tear-stained, so I'll knock off 10 percent."

"Make it 20. Now, let me ask what kind of wheels you have?" He fell back against a wall as if stricken.

"You mean my ...?" And he began weeping.

"Is it a BMW?" "Of course. Hand washed every second day since I've owned it. Oh, my Bavarian beauty."

"I know how you must feel. But at a time like this, you really should consider divesting yourself of this asset. It is a drain on your cash flow."

HE TOOK the car keys from his pocket and said: "It has a list price of ..."

I shook my head. "You don't understand. Now that the Dow has hit 1,700, the market is glutted with them."

I stuffed a few more bills into his hand and took the keys.

"Anything else?" I said. "Well, there's my Olin skis, my Lotus Elan bike and my espresso machine."

"Where are they?" "At my condo."

"Ah, you have a condo. Lakefront, I assume?"

"Are there condos elsewhere?" "I'm sure we can agree on a reasonable price, including the furnishings. Deal?"

"I have little choice."

"FINE. HAVE we missed anything?"

"Well, yes, there is my ... my ... no, I can't bring myself to part with it."

"Be realistic. What is it?"

"No, I can't, it's more precious to me than anything else."

"What is it, your home multimedia center? Your Kangaroo golf bag and all-graphite clubs? Your Prince racket? You can't take them with you."

"No, it's my ... membership in the East Bank Club. With my own locker."

"Ah, poor devil. But I'll take it. And to show you I'm not without heart, I'll bring you there one last time as my guest. Well, nice doing business with you. Bye."

"Wait," he said, as he searched through his pockets. Then he withdrew a small metal container.

"Here," he said. "You might as well have it all."

"What is it?" "My coke," he said. "No thanks. I prefer Pepsi."

once the music began, and t-shirt vendors danced to the music. One vendor, 33-year-old Kip Pritchard, said he worked for the band because the pay was particularly good, and because he liked what the band's music had to say.

"They're probably the hottest group in the world," Pritchard said, citing sold-out U2 concerts throughout Europe. "They have something to say that I think a lot of people are wanting to hear, and agree with."

Amnesty International, an organization that promotes the fair treatment and release of political prisoners in the world, distributed information and solicited interest in that cause at more tables near entrances. Amnesty International volunteer Chris Dahle credited the support of U2 to an increasing interest in the organization.

"U2 was one of the first groups to help open the Conspiracy of Hope Tour," Dahle said, citing the tribute to Amnesty International's 25th anniversary in 1986. U2 sings about social issues like the ones that organization supports, he added.

"I think that young people are idealistic in general, and I think that someone has to tap their social conscience," he said.

Downtown bars prepared for the onslaught of pre- and post-concert crowds, and U2 fans seemed to meet that expectation. Jeff Rauer, a UI senior and an employee of the Deadwood bar, said several U2 concert-goers were at the bar at 6 p.m. before the performance.

The U2 concert also boosted sales at retail stores in town, said Beth Prichard, an employee of Musicland in Old Capitol Mall.

"We've had lots of people buying U2 stuff this week, getting ready to sing along," she said. "You can tell whenever a concert's in town by all the albums that get sold before and after."

Prichard said for the past week, several people were asking about extra tickets to the sold-out show.

from the stage. Those who had to be carried off the main floor were taken to an aid station by Campus Security and Johnson County Ambulance personnel.

One concert-goer said he "questioned having second-row tickets when something like this happens."

"THERE WERE little girls doing a man's job down in front of the stage," he added referring to concert security personnel who had difficulty managing the crowd.

UI junior Kim Kiehna was sitting in the fourth row from the stage when the crowd rushed forward and she was pushed down to the ground. After being taken out by a friend, Kiehna had lost her pair of shoes and a contact lens. She also suffered a bruised shin which she said made it impossible for her to walk.

"It was unbelievable down there," Kiehna said.

Most of the people injured suffered minor injuries, such as cuts, bruises, fainting and loss of breath, campus security officers said.

companies that they will buy back some of their stock.

"Between corporate repurchases and the fact that the market remained open, people can go home with a little more confidence in equities," said Edward Shopkorn, partner in charge of institutional equities at Mabon Nugent & Co. But he said people still were "incredibly jumpy."

GENERAL MOTORS, Ford and Chrysler were among the many corporations that announced stock buybacks or said they will accelerate buyback programs they previously announced.

Trading was very volatile with many blue chip issues opening late — and sharply higher — because there were more buy orders than sell orders.

Later, under pressure from margin calls, mutual-fund redemptions and computerized arbitrage selling, trading was halted in many blue chip issues at midday because sellers could not find buyers.

"It was a reasonably scary day," Shopkorn said. "At one point the Exchange closed down a whole lot of big stocks because there were no buyers. There was no one to buy stocks, not even the specialists. The auction market ceased to function."

THE TRADING HALTS prompted the Chicago Board of Options Exchange, the Chicago Mercantile Exchange, the American Stock Exchange and the New York Futures Exchange to suspend trading in stock-index futures contracts and options for about an hour at midday.

The Dow staged a 200-point rally by about 10:30 a.m. EDT, but it erased the gain and moved to a 12-point loss within two hours. In the next half hour the Dow rallied about another 90 points, then lost most of that advance. At about 2 p.m. the Dow began rising again, racking up a 180-point gain before retreating to closing levels.

The impact of computerized trading on Tuesday's volatility remained a controversial issue. Proponents of such trading argue that stock index futures and options only indicate market sentiment. Opponents blame these inventions for wild market swings.

"WHEN THEY CLOSED down all these stock-index options and futures, the stock market went straight up," said New York investor Asher Edelman. "When they opened up again, the market went straight down."

The Dow's 508-point dive Monday to 1738.74 — almost 1,000 points below the record high of 2722.42 it set Aug. 25 — erased all gains the indicator had made since April 7, 1986.

The New York Stock Exchange Index rose 4.42 to 133.04. Standard & Poor's 500-Stock Index added 11.99 to 236.83. The average share price rose $1.

contact minority members have with other minority members.

Currently these groups comprise 23 percent of the UI faculty and 37 percent of the student population.

The regents have set an 8.5 percent minority enrollment plan for the three universities by 1991.

The program will be financed with regents state appropriations, foundation and private support.

The UI has asked the regents for a $1.25 million appropriation to finance the minority student program, but the board office is recommending the UI receive $795,000.

Hubbard said the amount is not enough, but the program would be carried out regardless of the amount approved by the state.

"WE'LL USE AS much as the regents will provide us," Hubbard said, adding he hoped the regents would appropriate the original $4 million. "The state appropriation is the core that enables us to expand those resources."

Hubbard said the UI has to begin identifying promising minority students early in their educations and motivating them to think about attending college.

"We have to make sure the air (minority students) breathe is the same air the people in this room breathe," he said.

He said he would like to see the outreach part of the UI's program include coupons given to promising minority sixth graders.

The coupons would say the bearer will be admitted to the UI and will receive the necessary financial help, provided the student remains in high school long enough to meet the UI's admission requirements.

REMINGTON SAID the new program would work with the UI's 10 colleges, using a decentralized approach specific to the problems of each college.

"For this program to work best it has to be embedded in the hearts and minds of all those involved," he said. "We have to do this because it's an acute problem and it requires an acute response."

Hubbard said the individual departments would be required to identify possible candidates for the program and the central administration would assist them in attracting the candidates to the UI.

"I WAS IN VIETNAM and what flashed through my mind after the first explosion is it felt just like the bombs they dropped over there. We felt a little like a bomb had gone off," said Leland Hutchens, of Bloomfield, Ind., one of the 103 people registered at the Ramada Inn, about a half mile from the airport.

"You could see the fire coming down the carpet in the hallway as we were trying to get out," said Steve Sanders, of Sandborn, Ind. "The smoke got so black in there you couldn't see anything."

Robert Eanes, an attendant at the Airport Marathon service, said a man was set afire when he got out of his car in front of the lobby as the plane hit.

"Some people were screaming at the man to run but he was frozen," Eanes said. "He was looking up. It happened so fast he didn't have a chance to run or anything. He was engulfed in flames."

EANES SAID some people ran to the man and threw a coat over him.

Tom Murray, 42, of Indianapolis, was taken to Wishard Hospital in critical condition with third-degree burns over 80 percent of his body.

A hospital spokeswoman said she did not know whether Murray was the person seen engulfed in flames. "We assume that, but no one is absolutely certain of that," Wishard spokeswoman Susan Brown said.

An airport spokesman said Teagarden's effort to land was complicated by heavy clouds over the city, preventing the pilot from seeing the runways. Air traffic controllers tried to talk him down.

A flameout was described by military officials as a total loss of engine power. Teagarden could guide the single-engine craft as it continued to lose altitude, but could not regain altitude once it was lost, they said.

Cardinals top Twins 3-1 in Game 3

St. Louis bounces back behind Tudor, Worrell

By Mike Tully
United Press International

ST. LOUIS — Vince Coleman, a flop in the Minneapolis Metrodome, doubled home two runs in the seventh inning Tuesday night to help the St. Louis Cardinals to a 3-1 World Series victory over Minnesota, cutting the Twins' lead to two games to one.

Coleman's hit soured the strategy of Minnesota Manager Tom Kelly, who removed starter Les Straker from a shutout to start the seventh and replaced him with playoff hero Juan Berenguer. St. Louis routed Berenguer in one-third of an inning.

The Cardinals plan to send Greg Mathews against Frank Viola Wednesday night in a battle of left-handers in Game 4 of the best-of-seven Series.

Before a Busch Stadium record crowd of 55,347 and in 45-degree weather, John Tudor went seven innings, giving up four hits, for the victory. Todd Worrell pitched one-hit relief over two innings for the save. Berenguer took the loss.

STRAKER, WHO has been derided as a symbol of Minnesota's pitching weakness, held the Cardinals to four hits through six innings. Then Kelly hit for him in the seventh, and Berenguer let the game get away.

Jose Oquendo and Tony Pena opened the seventh with singles, and pinch-hitter Terry Pendleton sacrificed. In an 0-2 hole, Coleman sliced a single down the third-base line, bringing home two runs. He followed with his second stolen base of the game, and scored when Ozzie Smith singled to right.

All three victories in this Series have come at home, the Twins capturing two games in the Metrodome and the Cardinals rebounding at Busch Stadium.

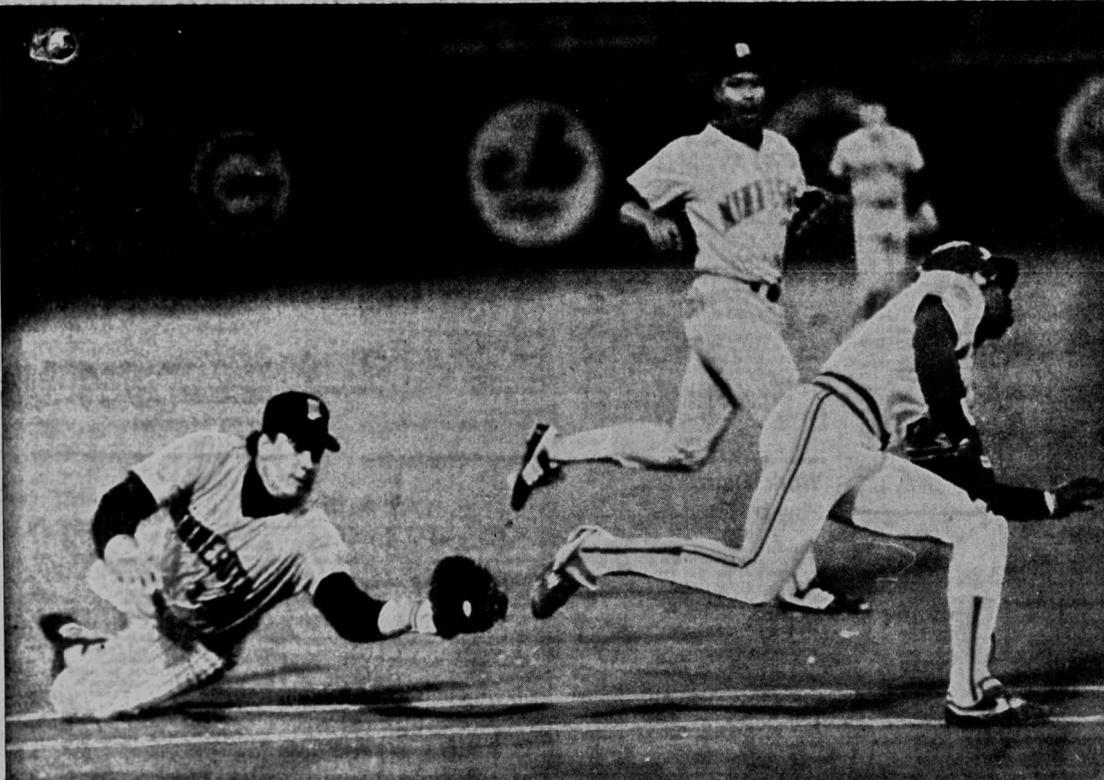

Coleman represented part of the reason for the Cardinals' lack of success in Minnesota. He went only 1 for 8 in the first two games with one stolen base. His inability to reach base left the Cards' running game ineffective, and they were routed twice, 10-1 and 8-4.

TUDOR ALLOWED a run in the sixth. With one out, he walked Greg Gagne and Kirby Puckett. Gagne tagged and advanced when catcher Pena caught Gary Gaetti's pop-up while tumbling into the St. Louis dugout.

Tudor had Tom Brunansky 2-2 and appeared to give him a good pitch, low and away, but Brunansky poked it into right field, where Curt Ford seemed to lose the ball in the lights.

Ford probably would not have

Injuries pose more problems for Hawkeyes

Football

By Eric J. Hess
The Daily Iowan

Iowa football Coach Hayden Fry doesn't know where to turn.

All three of his running backs — Rick Bayless, Kevin Harmon and Tony Stewart — are injured to some capacity. Fry said Bayless will not be back for at least two weeks, and Harmon is not likely to be 100 percent for the rest of the season. Stewart, meanwhile, suffered a deep thigh bruise during the Wisconsin game.

"What would happen to Michigan if they'd lost Jamie Morris? What would happen to Michigan State if they'd lost Lorenzo White?" Fry asked reporters at his Tuesday press conference.

Stewart was named the starter at running back, only because Harmon is not likely to be at full speed.

On the offensive line, the loss of Bob Kratch with a sprained ankle has Fry working with a makeshift line.

"A KID LIKE Bob Schmitt hasn't even worked out at left guard until two days before the game, and he has to start the game against Wisconsin," Fry said. "He plays the first series for us and does a pretty good job and then Bob Kratch goes down at left tackle; we've got to move him out to left tackle. And he becomes our MVP. He does a heck of a job."

Hartlieb: Iowa must improve

By Eric J. Hess
The Daily Iowan

Chuck Hartlieb emerged Tuesday after Iowa football Coach Hayden Fry's press conference looking back with disappointment and to the future with optimism.

"I think we might have been able to get the job done Saturday if we had a couple more things click right, even without a running game," Hartlieb said.

A senior from Woodstock, Ill., Hartlieb completed 27 of 34 passes for 362 yards in a 37-10 loss to Michigan, throwing one interception.

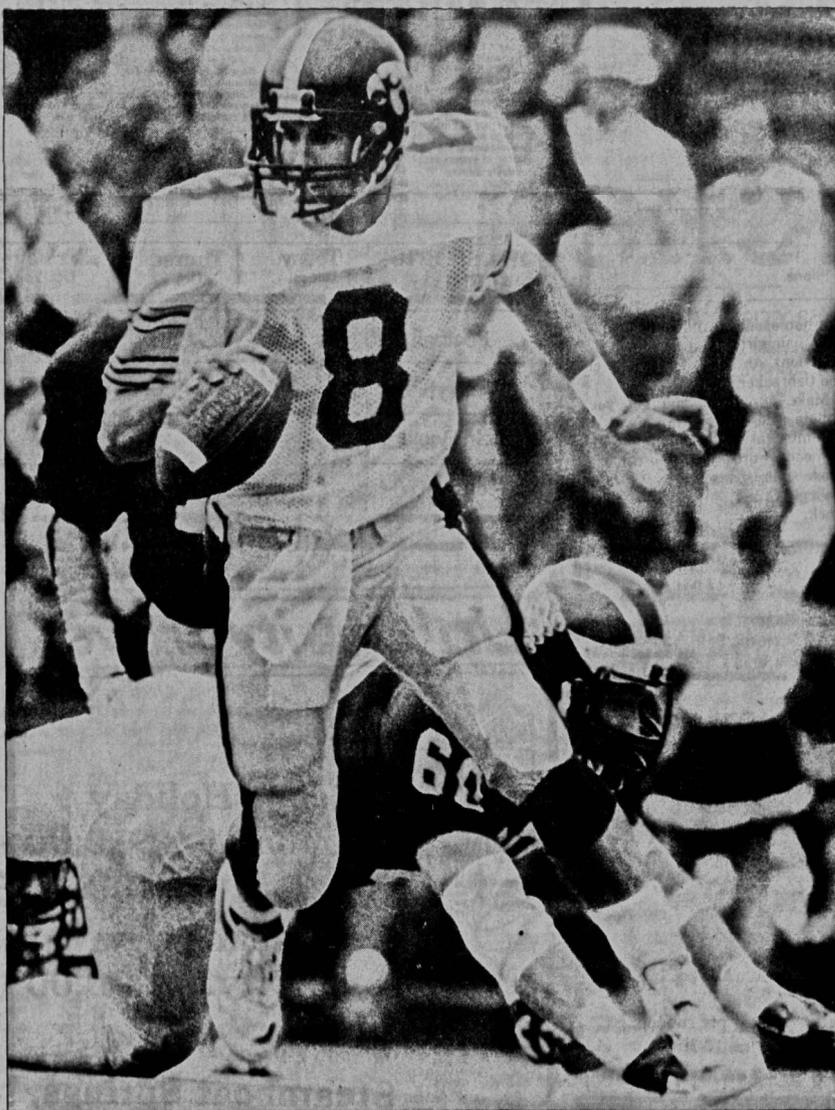

"I really didn't sit down and think about things until Sunday about my individual performance," he said. "It was a tough day because even though we did pass the ball as a group well, we still didn't put enough points on the board."

"IT REALLY doesn't mean much when you only put 10 points on the board."

Fry, however, was impressed with Hartlieb, saying that he has rightfully earned the No. 1 spot at quarterback.

"Overall, to complete 27 out of 34 pass attempts, that was encouraging."

Huskies will test Hawks' spikers

By Anne Upson
The Daily Iowan

After two losses this past weekend, the Iowa volleyball team (9-8) is anticipating a win over Northern Illinois (11-9) Wednesday at 7 p.m. in Carver-Hawkeye Arena.

But if Iowa is to rebound, the Hawkeyes will have to do it without middle hitter Stephanie Smith. She is out for the season because of a knee injury suffered in last Friday's match against Illinois. Smith's position is being filled by freshmen Barb Willis and Ginger Lorentson.

"I want to give her (Willis) playing experience," Iowa Coach Sandy

Volleyball

Stewart said.

Stewart said Iowa beat Northern Illinois last year in four games 15-9, 15-10, 13-15, 15-12. She also said that the Hawkeyes have the advantage of playing at home.

But Huskies' Coach Herb Summers said that improvement can be expected from his team.

"IT'S HARD TO say — we want to improve on things that we didn't do in the previous match," Summers said. "We need to play more consistently."

Summers added that senior outside hitter Anne Polaski could be a leader for the Huskies.

"She has had a good year," he said. "She is one of the better athletes; she has shown persistent performance. It has definitely been her best year."

Summers said he thinks Iowa is a different team since the loss of setter Kathy Griesheim.

"Iowa usually competes hard," he said. "Their characteristic playing has changed since the loss of Kathy Griesheim. They do have a hard defense, and they are aggressive at the net."

Stewart said her team is ready to bounce back after the recent losses. "Practice has been going well," Stewart said. "Our goal for the week is three wins. We want to be 12-8 by the end of the weekend. That will get us back on track."

Summers said the match has the possibility of being entertaining.

"If both teams play up to their potential," he said, "it has the capability of being a great match."

Hoosiers jump to 12th in UPI ratings

By Charlie McCarthy
United Press International

NEW YORK — Indiana victories during fall and winter months have long been expected, but the Hoosiers' current success story has nothing to do with shorts, sneakers or jump shots.

The Hoosiers, 18-17 victors over Minnesota Friday night, were rated 12th today in the UPI Board of Coaches' college football ratings. It was Indiana's first appearance in the Top 20 in over a year.

"We have a program proud of people doing well," said Indiana Coach Bill Mallory, whose basketball counterpart, Bobby Knight, coached Indiana to the national basketball championship this past season. "We certainly appreciate the support — it's nice to be in the Top 20. It's gives our football program exposure."

Oklahoma, which Saturday routed Kansas State 59-10, received 45 first-place votes and 743 of a possible 750 total points to remain atop the ratings. Nebraska, which defeated Oklahoma State 35-0, grabbed three first-place votes and 692 points.

IDLE MIAMI received the remaining two first-place votes and compiled 656 points.

Louisiana State and Auburn, both of the Southeastern Conference, and Atlantic Coast Conference member Clemson, finished No. 4, No. 6 and No. 7 respectively. Florida State, which smashed Louisville 32-9, jumped two spots to No. 5.

Rounding out the top ten were No. 8 UCLA, No. 9 Syracuse and No. 10 Notre Dame.

Florida placed 11th, followed by Indiana, Georgia, Ohio State, Michigan State, Tennessee, Michigan, Alabama, Oklahoma State and South Carolina. Dropping from the ratings were Penn State, Arkansas, Oregon and Minnesota.

LSU, a 34-9 victor over Kansas, and Auburn, a come-from-behind 20-10 winner over Georgia Tech, are each undefeated against SEC opponents but do not play each other this season — unless they meet in the Sugar Bowl. Clemson fell one spot after beating Duke 17-10.

LSU COACH Mike Archer had been especially concerned about Kentucky for two reasons. The Wildcats' only loss before Saturday was by one point at Rutgers, and the game was being played in the afternoon at Baton Rouge, and the Tigers hadn't won under those circumstances in six straight games dating back to 1980.

"So much for jinxes," Archer said. "We proved we can play in the evening or in the morning."

The Bruins moved up one notch by downing Oregon 41-10, while the Orangemen jumped two spots after destroying the perennial "Beasts of the East" Nittany Lions, 48-21. The Fighting Irish, who defeated Air Force 35-14, and the Gators, who mauled Temple 34-3, each moved up three spots.

Orangemen Coach Dick MacPherson, a Penn State alum, said one

Men's hoops scrimmage schedule set

Iowa men's basketball team will play three preseason scrimmages in three Iowa cities this fall. The Hawkeyes will play at Burlington (Oct. 29), Cedar Rapids (Nov. 5) and Marshalltown (Nov. 13). Iowa opens its home season with an exhibition against the Italian National team Nov. 17.

Those who purchased tickets for the Marshalltown scrimmage (originally slated for Nov. 11) may receive refunds by writing George Funk, Athletic Director, Marshalltown High School, 1602 South 2nd Ave., Marshalltown, Iowa, 50158. Tickets for the Nov. 13 practice are $5 and may be purchased by writing Funk.

Bucks' Moncrief out for eight weeks

MILWAUKEE (UPI) — Milwaukee Bucks guard Sidney Moncrief was scheduled for surgery Tuesday on his left knee and will be sidelined for eight weeks, the team said.

Moncrief will have a bone spur removed from the upper part of his kneecap. The spur prevents Moncrief from fully extending or flexing the knee.

Bucks medical adviser David Haskell said Moncrief made the decision after consultation with team doctors, coaches and front-office staff.

"Rather than have him limp along all year, he has decided to have the operation to give him the best opportunity to play with endurance," Haskell said. "It's a fairly routine knee operation for athletes. It's not a common problem, however. He can't function with this. He can't run, squat or bend his knee."

S. Korea wants IOC to prevail

SEOUL, South Korea (UPI) — South Korea rejected North Korea's demand Tuesday for direct talks concerning the possibility of sharing the 1988 Summer Olympic Games, and urged the North to accept an International Olympic Committee offer on the issue.

Kim Chong-ha, president of the South Korean National Olympic Committee, sent a letter to his North Korean counterpart Kim Yu-Sun saying he was disappointed by North Korea's repeated demand for meeting concerning the Olympics.

World Series Almanac

Today is Wednesday, Oct. 21. Ten teams have rebounded from a 2-0 deficit to win the World Series, but none have come back from 3-0.

Tonight's Matchup
Cardinals pitcher Greg Mathews, 11-11, opposes either Joe Niekro, 7-13, or Frank Viola, 17-10, of the Twins in an 8:25 p.m. EDT start at Busch Stadium.

Quote of the Day
"We spent a lot of time trying to analyze '86 and we decided we had a lot more talent than we had wins to show for it." — Twins General Manager Andy MacPhail.

Today's Quiz
Who are the only players to hit three homers in a World Series Game? (answer below)

Omen
The last team to win the first two games of the World Series at home, the 1961 Yankees, wound up losing the Series.

Counter Omen
In 14 previous World Series appearances, the Cardinals lost the first two games twice. In both cases, 1958 to the Yankees and 1959 to the Philadelphia A's, the Cardinals lost the first two on the road and also lost the Series.

Stat
Tuesday night's game marked the 48th World Series game to take place in St. Louis, second highest total of any city behind New York's 142.

Quiz Answer
Babe Ruth, in 1926 and 1928, and Reggie Jackson, in 1977.

Postseason Plans
As soon as the World Series ends, Niekro has a fishing trip in the Florida Everglades planned with brother, Phil.

World Series Record
If Joe Niekro appears in a game, he would break Walter Johnson's record for most time spent in the major leagues before playing in a World Series game, more than 19 years. Johnson waited 18 years.

Flashback
In 1937, the Yankees defeated the New York Giants in five games for the second of their four consecutive World Series championships. Lefty Gomez won the first and the fifth games.

Series Fact
The last Series to draw a combined attendance of less than 100,000 came in 1936 when the Chicago Cubs and Detroit drew 62,232 for five games.

On The Line

Hey there On The Line readers, getting psyched? Yes, of course you are. It's homecoming week.

Surely, this week holds many fun-filled activities that will enable you to get into the spirit.

Now, preparation is the name of the game. Here are a few tips to arouse the mood.

The first item on the list of pre-homecoming events is to buy a bota. Upperclassmen may skip this section and work on the picks. But, yes this is an important event.

The size and durability of a bota can only be found out by testing it. A good rule to follow is, the bigger the better. This of course works for many other issues as well.

After the prized possession has been purchased, or has been cleaned out since the last home game, its time to plan the concoction which you will fill your goatskin with. This entails hours of thought and experimentation, because everyone knows that it takes more than just a jacket to get the chill out of your bones.

Another activity is to go in search of all black and gold clothes. This usually is quite a lengthy process, because hopefully you don't own anything gold. Finding someone who has gold as a prominent color in their wardrobe could take a while.

The most difficult activity is next. You have to see through your

Fry

"This past week against the University of Michigan, he didn't block anyone. That's what we're facing."

Fry said Purdue's defense is usually in a 4-3 alignment with Fred Strickland, a second team all-Big Ten pick last season, as the middle linebacker. Another alignment with just one linebacker complements Purdue's defensive structure.

"They have a very sophisticated blitz package," he said, adding that the Boilermakers recovered eight of 10 fumbles when playing Illinois, mostly because of Purdue's blitzes.

Another question mark for Fry is the kicking game.

"OUR KICKING game is just about as poor as we've had since I've been here," Fry said.

The ninth-year Iowa coach said some "experimenting" could be done with punt returns, kickoff returns and other special coverage plays.

"From a coverage standpoint, from a runback standpoint, from a kicking standpoint we're just going to keep doing our best to try to upgrade it, because that's the only chance we have in a close game to win," Fry said.

"If we don't have a good kicking game, we're not going to win."

Fry said the Hawkeyes have to be concerned about a continually improving Purdue team under first-year Coach Fred Akers.

Purdue lists Shawn McCarthy, the team's punter, as their starting quarterback and does not list Doug Downing anywhere on the depth chart. Yet Fry believes Downing will start.

"We anticipate Downing (will start)," Fry said. "The latest medical report was that he wasn't as bad as first anticipated."

IOWA NOTES

• Defensive lineman Jeff Koeppel is definitely out for the Purdue game. And right defensive end Mike Burke is "very, very questionable."

• Fry said he is always concerned with the possibility of not going to a bowl game even if he had an experienced team.

"If they can do it for 19 years before we get here," Fry said. "I imagine they can throw one in every now and then."

But that doesn't necessarily mean the Hawkeyes face a must-win situation for the rest of the season.

"I'm never in must-win situation; I can go fishing," Fry said.

• Iowa Sports Information Director George Wine told members of the media that four bowl representatives will attend Saturday's homecoming game. The list includes the Liberty, Freedom, Florida Citrus and Independence.

• Fry said Iowa will wait and see what happens in reference to bowl games. The Hawkeyes have won four games and have attended bowl games in the past with as few as seven wins.

"Hey, you guys are smarter than I am in math. I'm just an ol' country boy," he said. "We've got four victories that nobody can take away from us. We've got five games left."

"... All you fair weather fans that jump the boat and they're sunk and all and all this and all that and all that other crap, you're about as smart as my pig," Fry said.

Finally, Voice of the Hawkeyes writer Al Grady asked what Fry's pig's name was.

ing to me knowing the situation with our line," Fry said.

Hartlieb did not talk to reporters after the Michigan game. He said it was because of a decision made by Offensive Coordinator Bill Snyder and the rest of the quarterbacks.

"We really felt as a group that this was becoming a little bit more of an individualistic thing," Hartlieb explained. "This is a team game. It takes all 40 players every Saturday. And we thought maybe we could perform on the field a little better if we just stepped away for a little bit."

Hartlieb said a number of little things appear to be holding back the Iowa running game, such as poor field position, an unstable offensive line and injuries to the running backs.

Fry added that Hartlieb made his contribution to the running game in one of the team's longest ground gains against the Wolverines, scrambling once for 12 yards.

Against Purdue, which Hartlieb noted has a "one-of-a-kind defense," the Hawkeyes are likely to attack during Saturday's homecoming game at Kinnick Stadium the same way as in every other game.

"I think we know that we're capable of playing better," he said. "And I think we know in the long run down the road we're going to start playing better. It's just a matter of time."

"We go into every game feeling we have to have a balanced attack," he said. "And we'll emphasize the run just as much as the pass — probably."

But what Hartlieb said he was most impressed with this season was the ability of the quarterbacks to communicate with the rest of the offense.

"I think quarterbacks, receivers and tight ends are talking real well right now," he said. "I think that, as much as anything, is what the key is to why we're doing so well."

either step forward or back. "I think we know that we're capable of playing better," he said. "And I think we know in the long run down the road we're going to start playing better. It's just a matter of time."

triumph over the Nittany Lions doesn't necessarily make his team the new "Beast of the East."

"WE HAVE TO do this three or four years in a row," said MacPherson, after Syracuse beat Penn State for the first time since 1970. "We have to be humble about it."

Penn State's Joe Paterno said, "They are an awfully good football team. It could have been worse than it was. They just played a heckuva game."

Syracuse's 48 points was the second-highest point total ever scored against a Paterno-coached team. The Orangemen are 6-0 for the first time since their national championship campaign of 1959.

Mallory's No. 12 Hoosiers faced adverse conditions to be 3-0 in the Big Ten for the first time since 1967, tied with Michigan State atop the conference.

"We couldn't practice up there (in the Metrodome) on Thursday because the World Series teams (Minnesota Twins and St. Louis Cardinals) were there, and we're also in the middle of exams. It was certainly a difficult situation."

GEORGIA FORGED ahead four spots after romping over Vanderbilt 52-24. The Buckeyes, who fought off Purdue 20-17, jumped two spots, while Big Ten foe Michigan State leaped five spots to No. 15 after thrashing Northwestern 56-0.

The Volunteers fell eight spots after losing to Alabama 41-22. The Crimson Tide's victory enabled them to reappear in the ratings, as did the Wolverines, who beat Iowa 37-10, and the Gamecocks, who routed Virginia 58-10.

World Series

caught the ball anyway, but the play contained an irony. The last time Tudor pitched, in Game 6 of the National League playoffs, San Francisco right fielder Candy Maldonado lost a ball in the Busch Stadium lights, producing the Cardinals' only run of the game.

This game bore no resemblance to the first two, a fact that became evident when the Twins failed to score in the fourth inning. They had assembled a seven-run fourth inning in Game 1 and a six-run outburst in Game 2. This time, they were retired 1-2-3.

Minnesota's biggest threat over the first five innings came in the third, when Tim Laudner and Dan Gladden singled to put runners on first and second. Gagne flied out to end the inning.

St. Louis fared little better against Straker. Tom Herr hit into an inning-ending double play in the first, and Pena grounded to second with two on and two out in the second.

Chronological story line weakens 'In the Mood'

By Kevin C. Kretschmer The Daily Iowan

It can be a difficult process turning real-life events into a motion picture. Usually, some facts, characters, or locations have to be altered or changed all together to accommodate the filmmaking process.

The makers of In the Mood make no concessions and offer up a straight-forward telling of actual events. Unfortunately, though the story is fairly interesting and occasionally humorous, it is not particularly cinematic.

In the Mood is the "weird, but true" story of Ellsworth "Sonny" Wisecarver Jr. (Patrick Dempsey), who gained national notoriety in 1944 as a Los Angeles 15-year-old who, in the course of a few months, ran off with two married women.

THE EPISODIC nature of the script (by Phil Alden Robinson, who also directs) creates several highs and lows that build, then drain emotion. As a result, the final episode, which is far from the best, does not offer an especially exciting climax to the film. Robinson is better in the capacity of director (his debut) as he paints several beautiful pastel landscapes and draws quirky, funny performances from leading and supporting players alike.

DEMPSEY, WHO recently starred in Can't Buy Me Love, is good in the role that the entire movie centers on. Talia Balsam, as Judy, and Beverly D'Angelo, as Francine, create likable characters as the older women with whom Sonny becomes involved, though a movie based entirely on either of these relationships might have proved a better choice.

In the Mood is mildly amusing, but its attempt to recapture the past is, in a word, unmemorable. It really is about a different time — a time when people cared if a teenager ran off with a married woman. Such an incident would not draw much attention today, nor probably will this movie.

Variety sets KRUI apart

By John Marcus The Daily Iowan

A peculiar phenomenon is in the air in Iowa City, and all it takes is a radio to tune it in. Remember the radio, that ancient prototype of the satellite dish?

On the extreme left of the dial on this contraption, you will find KRUI (89.7 FM), the UI-funded student station specializing in alternative music. Since April 1984, the station has been broadcasting throughout the Iowa City area, providing an outlet for the various musics that fall outside the strict perimeters of commercial, format-based radio.

"IT'S THE ONLY place you can get a good honest variety because it's not based on commercialism or big business. We don't have to worry about advertising so we don't have to worry about ratings," Wheeler said.

The fact they don't worry about ratings doesn't mean they don't get them. Local surveys indicate KRUI is the third most listened to radio station in the area. In defiance of established marketing truths, KRUI succeeds without a rigid format. In fact there is no format; "alternative" is merely applied for convenience.

College radio in general has made significant inroads into the music and radio industries. It is a misconception that student stations are merely minor league farm teams for the big leagues. Though the major record companies do sometimes use it to test new artists, college radio has aided the growth of an independent music business and vice versa. College radio and independent, "alternative" record labels feed each other, opening up the airwaves and other opportunities for non-commercial artists.

LISTENING TO KRUI at any time of day, one can stumble upon any type of popular music. Specialty shows are broadcast to cater to fans of jazz, heavy metal, soul, reggae, dance and hardcore punk, but even the general area programs refuse to adhere to any mainstream. Siouxsie and the Banshees might be followed with the Temptations, or Metallica with L.L. Cool J.

The D.J.'s themselves are unpaid students motivated sometimes by career aspirations but more often by an enthusiasm for the music. The slick, high-speed delivery practiced by commercial station disc jockeys is avoided in favor of a more relaxed but still upbeat approach bordering on the conversational. The D.J. is a sort of personal music guide rather than a ranting salesman, and though some may trip over their tongues at times, they are refreshing next to their professional counterparts.

COLLEGE RADIO and KRUI are flourishing because of the growing demand for greater variety in entertainment.

Vicky Wheeler agrees: "Variety is wanted more and more in all areas of American culture. KRUI is really valuable as a free forum of individual ideas and expressions; there is no reduction of everything to the lowest common denominator."

All the entertainment media have expanded significantly in the last decade. TV has cable, film has home video and local radio has KRUI. But for the latter, the only outlay goes toward the hardware, which is negligible in the age of CDs, PCs and VCRs. Switch on your TS (transistor) and enjoy.
