Smiley case may result in lawsuit

Zemaitis' parents angry at UI officials, claim they are 'sitting on their hands'

By James Cahoy
The Daily Iowan

The parents of Cheryl Zemaitis accused UI officials Wednesday of "sitting on their hands" in not taking action against Iowa football player Keaton Smiley, and said they will consider a lawsuit against the UI if Smiley is allowed to play football next year.

In a letter dated Oct. 19 and sent to UI Interim President Richard Remington, UI Vice President for Student Services Philip Hubbard and Iowa Men's Athletic Director Bump Elliott, Zemaitis' parents Richard and Julie wrote: "We would like to know if you are going to allow such a vicious and dangerous person to continue to attend your university. Aren't you concerned for the safety of the students at Iowa?"

"There are many fine young people at the University of Iowa," the letter states. "They should not have to be associated with or compared to the Keaton Smileys on your campus — those who are violent, abusive and have no concerns for the rights of others."

SMILEY PLEADED guilty to charges of aggravated assault in Johnson County District Court Oct. 2 in connection with an incident involving Zemaitis on June 9. The plea was part of an agreement with the Johnson County District Attorney's Office, which dropped three other charges against Smiley stemming from the June 9 incident and an incident Oct. 27, 1986 involving Zemaitis.

During the June 9 incident, Smiley allegedly hit Zemaitis repeatedly, threatened to cut her with a knife and held her against her will in his apartment at 530 S. Clinton St., according to court records. Zemaitis left the UI and returned to her home in Downers Grove, Ill., shortly after the incident.

Smiley, a defensive back from Duncanville, Texas, is currently redshirted for the 1987-88 season, but still remains a member of the team. He still faces a charge of assault causing injury in connection with an incident involving UI junior Jennifer Lee on May 17.

"THE UNIVERSITY ought to take a stand and revoke Smiley's academic and athletic status," Julie Zemaitis said Wednesday. "They have done absolutely nothing. I want to know what they are going to do about this man who assaulted my daughter and who is a threat to the safety of everyone on the Iowa campus."

Zemaitis said she and her husband will consider legal action against the UI if nothing is done about Smiley's status.

"I want something done about this situation," she said. "My daughter is going to be affected by this incident for the rest of her life. I am sick and tired of hearing about the suspect's rights — what about the victim and her rights?"

Hubbard said Wednesday the UI has not made a decision about Smiley's status and said there was "nothing new" in the Zemaitis' letter.

Behrendt leads heart team

Specialist brings talent to the UI

By Lisa Legge
The Daily Iowan

When seven-pound Marissa Getting was born with a defective heart Oct. 17, physicians knew she would not live long without some kind of corrective surgery.

Marissa's parents, Robert and Doreen Getting of Grundy Center, Iowa, chose a relatively risky option: They authorized UI Hospitals and Clinics to perform a heart transplant — a procedure still in experimental stages for infants — on Marissa.

"She has a chance now where she did not have one before. That's all we know," Douglas Behrendt, UI Hospitals' chief cardiovascular surgeon and leader of the surgical team, said of Marissa — one of the world's youngest heart transplant patients.

"Previously she had no chance," he said. "If we can get her through this, she will have a normal life. Whether it will be a long life I don't know."

BUT DESPITE THE many uncertainties of the experimental transplant procedure, Marissa — although still listed in critical condition — is steadily improving, Behrendt said.

In fact she may be doing better than older heart transplant recipients, he said, because, as a newborn, her immune system may not yet be well-developed enough to sense a foreign organ and reject

3 Americans die in Philippine attacks

By Keith B. Richburg
Washington Post

MANILA, Philippines — Three American servicemen, one of them retired, were shot and killed in separate but apparently well-coordinated attacks Wednesday outside Clark Air Base, marking the first known terrorist incidents against American targets here in more than a decade.

In a fourth incident, an American serviceman in his car came under fire about the same time as the other attacks, but he escaped injury, according to Maj. Thomas Boyd, a spokesman at Clark, the American-leased facility in Pampanga Province north of here.

All of the attacks occurred within 2 miles of Clark and 15 minutes of one another, beginning shortly before 4 p.m. Wednesday.

One serviceman was killed while walking near a McDonald's restaurant in Dau, Pampanga Province, and another was killed on the road to Carmenville, a mostly American subdivision. In that incident, military officials said a Filipino was killed who came to the scene to help the American.

A car with an American came under fire at about the same time on the road to the Sunset Valley housing subdivision, but the assailants missed. In the fourth attack, a retired air force serviceman was killed at Hensonville, a military housing area.

Income tax reform signed by Branstad

By Scott Sonner
United Press International

DES MOINES — Gov. Terry Branstad signed into law a bill reforming Iowa's income tax structure Wednesday, while legislative leaders looked ahead to possible cigarette or sales tax hikes next year.

The bi-partisan tax plan lowering the state's top income tax from 13 percent to 9.98 percent sailed through the Iowa Legislature Tuesday during a one-day special session — the second extraordinary session of the year.

The few critics said the proposal benefited wealthy Iowans at the expense of middle-income taxpayers, but the Republican governor and most majority Democrats hailed the compromise as a fair effort to raise 2.6 percent more revenue, simplify tax forms and lure business to the state with lower tax rates.

"We've all waited a long time for this," Branstad said during a bill-signing ceremony.

"It shows what we can do when we put partisan differences aside. I want to thank the legislators in both parties... No longer will national magazines be able to say Iowa has the highest nominal rate in the nation."

"We have a tax system that is much more competitive, much more fair," he said.

BRANSTAD SAID it was unfortunate the income tax controversy overshadowed other significant pieces of legislation in the 1987 Legislature, including a groundwater protection plan and increased teacher salaries.

House Speaker Don Avenson, D-Oelwein, said the tax plan written as a one-year solution likely will be extended for another year unless lawmakers can agree to make the structure slightly more progressive and "smooth out capital gains concerns."

He also said an anticipated budget deficit of up to $150 million may force consideration of a dime-per-pack increase in the state cigarette tax and expansion of the state sales tax to include new services, such as those provided by lawyers and accountants, which now are exempt from taxation.

"The budget situation will create a very, very difficult legislative session," he said.

Avenson said delay of a planned change to generally accepted accounting practices could knock $50 million off the deficit "and revenue growth might cover another $20 million worth of problems" in the state's $2.4 billion budget.

"I THINK WE'RE looking at about $80 million we will have to deal with through a combination of revenue measures and cuts," he said.

The cigarette tax, which would raise about $25 million, is opposed by Senate Majority Leader Bill Hutchins, D-Audubon. However, it passed the House earlier this year and was proposed in January as part of Branstad's tax package.

The governor said last spring he would be "proud" to have the highest cigarette tax in the nation, which is what Iowa would have at 36-cents per pack if the proposal became law.

Dick Vohs, Branstad's press secretary, said it is premature for the governor to discuss next year's budget plans, but said he has been generally supportive of a cigarette tax hike.

"Generally it is a health issue as much as a revenue issue. On that count, yes, he supports it. But as far as whether or not the state needs the revenue, that will be subject to the condition of the state budget," Vohs said.

EXPANSION OF the sales tax has been debated over the past three years but draws much opposition from special interest groups affected, especially strong lobbying groups for lawyers and accountants.

"Myself, I think it is unfair to make barbers and cosmetologists pay the sales tax and not lawyers and accountants," Avenson said.

The effort to reform income taxes began in January when Branstad proposed state income taxes be increased $125 million to help finance increased teacher salaries and lower the top state income tax rate to 6 percent.

In June, meeting in the Legislature's first special session since 1981, lawmakers approved a tax bill raising income taxes $47 million.

Ambrisco, Gerot and Strait battle for two at-large seats

By Joseph Levy
The Daily Iowan

Three candidates — including two incumbents — will battle for two at-large seats on the Iowa City Council in next Tuesday's election.

Iowa City Mayor William Ambrisco and Councilor George Strait are trying to hold their seats against challenger Dale Gerot, owner of Iowa City Wrecker, 1222 Gilbert Court.

Gerot declined to be interviewed for this series but he has said in public candidate forums he would seek to represent small business interests on the council.

"Small businesspeople in Iowa City need stronger representation," he said.

Cutting city subsidization of the Iowa City Municipal Airport, which receives about $103,000 annually from the city for day-to-day service needs, is one of Gerot's priorities.

"JUST A FEW people in the city use the airport," he said. "I don't believe the airport is that important to the city. The airport would be one of the number one things on my list (to cut)."

Putting aside certain capital city maintenance projects scheduled for 1989 could also help balance the troubled budget for that year, he said.

"A lot of the capital improvement projects can be cut or pushed back," he said. "If they are put off one or three years, it's not going to hurt anyone."

Gerot said he will have to learn much about city government to be a good councilor, but said he is willing to learn.

"I realize I don't have all of the answers," he said. "That's not all bad. We need someone with a fresh outlook."

Ambrisco, who has been mayor since 1986, said his reputation on the council speaks for itself. At a candidate forum held at the Iowa City Senior Center Oct. 15, he told the audience, "What you see is what you get."

POINTING TO HIS voting record on his term to the council, Ambrisco said objectivity and an

Ruling favors ICEA

A hearing officer for the Iowa Public Employee Relations Board has ruled in favor of the Iowa City Education Association on complaints the union filed against the Iowa City Community School District after last year's teacher arbitration process.

The officer ruled that the district had engaged in prohibited practices in three instances and issued a cease and desist order to the district on these practices.

The hearing officer ruled the district had acted on "bad faith" when it changed its evaluation committee but made no changes at the bargaining table during the arbitration process.

The officer also found that the district had wrongly sought the opinions of individual ICEA members rather than negotiating through the ICEA during the arbitration.

Finally, the officer ruled that the district had illegally altered the evaluation instrument contained in the collective bargaining agreement by specific reference.

In altering the evaluation instrument, the district could make major changes in the process without consulting the ICEA, the officer's report said.

Professor to visit Vietnam

A UI anthropologist and his University of Arizona colleague announced Tuesday they will mount a joint Vietnamese and American field project to search for clues to the role early humans may have played in the extinction of the largest ape that ever lived.

At the 1987 meeting of the Geological Society of America, UI Professor of Anthropology Russell Ciochon and University of Arizona Professor of Archeology John Olsen said they will travel to Hanoi to continue research with a group of Vietnamese scientists on the activities of early man.

The team hopes to answer the question of the role that early humans, Homo erectus, may have had in the extinction of the giant ape, Gigantopithecus.

Excavations at a northern Vietnamese cave site revealed the remains of the ape, early humans, and orangutan apes. Fossil bone collected from the site shows evidence of cut marks, indicating the early humans were likely preying on some species.

School board votes down short-lived conduct policy

By Craig Sterrett
The Daily Iowan

A "good conduct" policy which said students involved in co-curricular activities must follow school rules 24 hours a day, was rescinded by the Iowa City School Board Tuesday night.

According to the policy — instituted in June 1987 — students in co-curricular activities are considered representatives of the school and, as such, have additional responsibilities they must uphold in or out of school.

After considering a revised version of the policy which only included punishments for breaking school rules on use of alcohol, drugs and tobacco, the board voted 5-1 with one abstention to annul the good conduct policy.

"The issue centered on whether or not schools have a responsibility to the development of students, and if so, how much responsibility," Schools Superintendent David Cronin said Wednesday.

Board member Ellen Widiss said she felt the district had rules to discipline its students when they are under its jurisdiction and it was not the school's responsibility to act as a "policeman" when students are on their own time.

UNDER CURRENT school rules, Iowa City students must abide by school rules while at school, on school grounds, at school-sponsored activities and on the way to and from school and school-sponsored activities.

"My reason (for annulling the good conduct rule) is that we have a general student discipline policy which covers students at all times while within the school's jurisdiction," Widiss said Wednesday. "If (rules violations) take place totally out of the school's jurisdiction then I don't think that the school is the best institution for dealing with that."

The school should not be in a role of punishing students for things they do at home or outside school jurisdiction, board member Jay Christensen-Szalanski said.

"WE ARE NOT SAYING we do not care if students drink or smoke" by rescinding the policy, Christensen-Szalanski said Wednesday. "Our responsibility should not be punitive but rather to help the students eliminate their problem."

Widiss agreed the schools should approach chemical abuse in a rehabilitative, and not a punitive, way.

"Co-curriculars are today considered an integral part of the educational process," Widiss said. "For a student having problems using alcohol or drugs, it is important for the schools to adopt a rehabilitative approach for counseling."

Court upholds rape verdict

DES MOINES (UPI) — A divided Iowa Court of Appeals Wednesday upheld the rape conviction of a man who said he should have been allowed to present evidence that the victim exchanged sex for money and drugs in the past.

In the Polk County rape case, Willie James Jeffries Jr. said he was denied a fair trial because the court refused to allow him to admit evidence about the victim's prior sexual behavior as well as evidence she suffered from delusions of sexual abuse.

The incident involved a woman who got into a car with Jeffries and another man in October 1985 after she ran away from a drug rehabilitation center in Des Moines.

COURT RECORDS said she left the center with the intent of "getting high" and entered the car because she said Jeffries and his companion told her they had marijuana or alcohol. After stopping to buy wine, the two men drove the victim to a wooded area where the rape allegedly occurred.

Jeffries said the woman offered to engage in sex in order to pay the men back for the drugs and wine they provided. But she contended Jeffries requested sex and when she refused, he began hitting her.

On cross-examination, the woman admitted to having a history of drug use, including LSD, marijuana and alcohol, but the district court refused to admit a doctor's testimony that the woman "states she has sex because others want her to and to get drugs... and on a few occasions, had sex with strangers for money."

The credit card, an identification card, wallet and checks belonging to a Grimes, Iowa, man were reported stolen at 6:09 p.m. Tuesday from the QuikTrip, First Ave., Coralville, according to the report.

At 6:50 p.m., a store employee reported to police that two men had attempted to charge merchandise on the credit card at The Fly in Sycamore Mall when a call to the credit center revealed that the card was stolen, according to the report.

The men reportedly ran toward the Walgreens exit in the mall when the card was verified as stolen, according to the report.

The subjects also attempted to charge $369 worth of sports merchandise Tuesday evening at The Athlete's Foot, Old Capitol Center, but were not allowed to complete the transaction after a verification was declined and one of the subject's signatures on the receipt failed to match that on the card, according to a store employee.

One of the men was described as a black male about 5-foot-8 with short hair, a short, well-kept beard, wearing black frosted jeans, a cap of the same material and a long-sleeved shirt, according to police reports.

The other was described as a white male about 5-foot-10 with long hair, wearing a white cap and a long black wool coat, according to the report.

Report: An Iowa City man was reported driving with what appeared to be a rifle protruding out of his car window at 3:40 p.m. Tuesday, according to police reports.

Mitchell Sherwood, 1203 Lakeside Drive, was charged with illegal manner of conveyance, disorderly conduct and reckless driving, according to the report.

Theft: Two scarecrows and one uncarved pumpkin were reportedly taken from the front porch of an Iowa City home sometime overnight Tuesday, according to police reports.

About $50 in clothing that adorned the scarecrows was also taken, according to the report. Police have no suspects in the incident, according to the report.

Pentacrest vigil remembers human rights activist Anaya

By Lisa Legge
The Daily Iowan

About 60 people gathered on the Pentacrest Wednesday evening for a candlelight vigil to remember slain Salvadoran human rights activist Herbert Anaya and to protest his assassination.

Anaya, president of the private Human Rights Commission and an outspoken critic of the government and armed forces, was shot four times Monday in El Salvador as he prepared to take his children to school. His funeral was to be held earlier today.

"We're concerned about his murder and the things that are going on in El Salvador are a threat to the peace plan," Central American Solidarity Committee member Pat McNamara said, referring to the Central American Peace Plan signed by the leaders of five Central American countries, including Jose Napoleon Duarte, president of El Salvador.

McNamara said Anaya was killed because of his vocal criticism of Duarte's proposal granting amnesty to members of military "death squads" responsible for more than 40,000 killings.

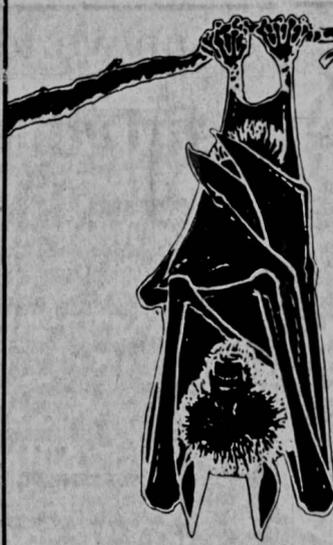

"This vigil is to remember the life of a man who for the last eight years had tried to work for peace in Central America," committee member and Salvadoran native Rafael Dubon said. "And for all his work — he was murdered."

THE PROTESTERS, candles in hand, marched through the city's pedestrian mall and stopped at the fountain, where Dubon read the names of others allegedly killed by the El Salvador government in the past four weeks. To this, the crowd chanted, "Presente, presente, presente."

"It's saying that the people's spirit is present with us," committee member Suzanne Janssen said. "We do this with the idea that they're walking alongside us. They made a great sacrifice and we want to remember that."

Following the march, protesters went to a Schaeffer Hall classroom to write letters to U.S. Sens. Tom Harkin, D-Iowa, and Charles Grassley, R-Iowa, and Duarte protesting the murder and asking for an investigation.

The UI Central American Solidarity Committee sponsored the vigil.

Remington: skills, theory necessary

By Paula Roesler
The Daily Iowan

UI Interim President Richard Remington said the UI's educational opportunities and reputation can be improved by changing general education requirements with the changing needs of students, but said students need both theory and skills.

"Some learning is more important than others. It will fit you for the kind of career you are looking for and that you want, but you've got to have the general liberal arts background of understanding and you've got to have some marketable skills," he said.

"Therefore, we've got to look at undergraduate education and see that we're meeting that and we're giving you the benefit, if we can, of helping you acquire the methods and the general concepts that you need to be flexible, as well as some skills," he said.

SPEAKING TO ABOUT 50 students at a UI Liberal Arts Student Association meeting Tuesday, Remington and UI Vice President for Student Services Philip Hubbard stressed a variety of learning styles, upgrading faculty recruitment and diversifying the student population.

The UI College of Liberal Arts faculty needs to constantly re-evaluate general education requirements to ensure they meet student needs, Remington said, but all liberal arts students should learn both theory and applied skills.

He said the quality and quantity of education gained by students at the UI will affect their acceptance of future challenges and changes in their careers, which is why all modes of learning should be included in the liberal arts.

Increasing faculty salary is another means to improve the UI's quality of education, Remington said, because higher salaries upgrade faculty recruitment standards.

Hubbard said tuition hikes to support faculty salary increases may seem unattractive to students, but those increases also upgrade the UI's reputation which enhances students' success in the job market.

THE UI'S GOAL to increase minority enrollment is not in conflict with the state Board of Regents tuition increases, Hubbard said, because financial aid opportunities are usually improved when tuition rises.

"This is part of the picture, that even though tuition goes up and prices some people out of the market, you will have the aid to keep them in," Hubbard said.

Remington said his ultimate goal is for the UI to recapture its top ten ranking among universities nationwide.

"Is this the best university in the country?" he asked. "No. Is it the worst? Absolutely not. Is it as good as it can be? It's not. Can it be better? We're trying."

Japanese executive advises UI research

By John Bartenhagen
The Daily Iowan

In order to encourage relationships with foreign-based industries, U.S. universities must devote their research efforts to specialized technological areas, Reinoshuke Hara, the president of Seiko Instruments, Inc. said Wednesday as he began a two-day visit at the UI.

"Perhaps the best way to encourage more business relations is to bring the research activities, especially at universities, to the attention of the Japanese people," the president of the Tokyo-based electronics corporation said at a press conference marking his arrival.

Hara pointed to specialized, high-tech research programs at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology and North Carolina State University as models for other universities to follow.

"The (UI) laser laboratory is an example of such specialization," he said.

BECAUSE OF A friendship with UI Chair of Biomedical Engineering Kwan Rim, Hara was originally invited to visit the campus by former UI President James O. Freedman. While on campus, he will meet with UI administrators, faculty and students and will visit the UI's International Center, health care facilities and research laboratories.

"Through his friendship with Professor Rim, we took the opportunity to have him visit the campus and see what we're up to," UI Vice President for Educational Development and Research Duane Spriestersbach said. "Hopefully, he'll leave here with a better understanding and appreciation of the rich resources we have."

Spriestersbach said it is important for the state and the UI to continue efforts begun during Freedman's presidency to establish relationships with Asian countries.

"WE DON'T LIVE in a vacuum," he said. "We are living increasingly in one world and it's high time we understood the implications of that. It isn't very effective to try to relate to foreign industries only through our language and culture and to expect them to go the whole mile."

Many Japanese industries have clustered their operating facilities in the U.S. on the East and West coasts, but Hara said he believes Asian investors will begin examining sites in the Midwest.

"Iowa is one area for Japanese investment and for investment jointly by countries in the Asian-Pacific region," he said.

Trade friction and the high cost of production in Japan will force Seiko to open another factory in the U.S., Hara said, but denied his UI visit was business related.

"I'm here as an individual — not as a representative of Seiko Instruments," he said. "Of course, if I came here as (an official representative), I would certainly try to sell my products."

Hara was scheduled to give a brief talk at a noon luncheon Wednesday hosted by the Iowa City Rotary Club. He will also speak to UI and Iowa business leaders at a seminar on the role of cooperation between industry and universities in international understanding from 3:30 to 4:30 p.m., Oct. 29, in the Union Terrace Room.

After receiving a doctoral degree in chemistry in 1952 from the University of Tokyo, Hara did post-doctoral research at the University of Washington, Harvard University and Louisiana State University from 1952 to 1956. Hara joined Seiko Instruments in 1968.

Kidnappers free S. Korean for $1 million

BEIRUT, Lebanon — A South Korean diplomat kidnapped in Moslem West Beirut 21 months ago has been released after his captors were paid "not less than a million dollars" ransom, Shia Amal leader Nabih Berri said Wednesday.

Berri refused to identify the kidnappers of Do Chae Sung, 38, the second secretary of the Korean Embassy in Beirut. He said that Amal "protected him after his release, but we had no role in freeing him."

Iraq launches new attacks in Gulf

MANAMA, Bahrain — Waves of Iraqi warplanes bombed oil installations and two oil tankers in the Persian Gulf region Wednesday as a Soviet envoy arrived in Baghdad on a tour to coax Iran and Iraq to accept a U.N. cease-fire.

Reports from Iran said at least 18 people were killed and 70 wounded in the Iraqi attacks, and Tehran vowed to retaliate. Iran later fired artillery at the southern Iraqi port city of Basra, killing many civilians, the Iraqi News Agency said.

Apartheid threatens academic freedom

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa — More than 17,000 students, faculty members and university staff rallied and marched on four South African campuses Wednesday, calling strict new government controls on anti-apartheid activity a serious threat to academic freedom and university autonomy.

The new rules compel university administrators to take "all reasonable steps" to stop militant anti-government activities on campus — or risk losing millions of dollars worth of government subsidies, which account for 70 percent to 80 percent of university operating costs.

China leader Deng to resign post

BEIJING — China's Communist Party will announce a major reshuffle of its ruling Politburo next week, including the resignation of senior leader Deng Xiaoping from one of his key political posts, Chinese and Western sources said Wednesday.

The sources said Deng will retain control over China's military, indicating he has been unable to find a successor generally acceptable to the party's competing factions.

The future role of Deng, 83, who spearheaded a drive to shake up China's government structure and introduce economic reforms but has stated a wish to "semi-retire," has been a key question at the week-long congress, which began Sunday.

Iran, Soviets seize U.S. Stinger missiles

ABU DHABI, United Arab Emirates — Iran and the Soviet Union have seized up to 35 U.S.-made Stinger anti-aircraft missiles from Afghan rebels, a guerrilla chief said Wednesday.

Sheikh Jalauddin Haqqani accused the Iranians of a "breach of trust" in taking "between 16 and 25" Stinger missiles as they were being rushed into Afghanistan from Pakistan through Iranian territory. Iran seized the missiles in July while the Soviets captured the Stingers in battles with the rebels in February, Haqqani said.

Reagan to name Court nominee today

WASHINGTON — President Ronald Reagan, rebuffed in his effort to seat conservative Judge Robert Bork on the Supreme Court, will name a new nominee today to replace retired Justice Lewis Powell, the White House announced Wednesday.

A White House spokesman said Reagan has "gone over all the candidates" but was not sure that he had met personally with any of them. He said Reagan is looking for "someone who shares his views on a strict interpretation of the Constitution" and is qualified.

Chernobyl possible at federal reactors

WASHINGTON — A severe nuclear accident, such as the one at the Chernobyl reactor, "cannot be ruled out" at federal reactors that produce plutonium and other nuclear materials for the U.S. atomic bomb program, a government report says.

The report also concludes that should a severe accident occur at the nation's four defense production reactors, plant confinement systems may not be able to prevent deadly radioactive materials from being released into the environment.

Possible AIDS prediction technique found

BOSTON — Researchers apparently have found a way to identify which patients infected with the AIDS virus would be most likely to benefit from anti-viral drugs, it was reported Wednesday.

A study involving hemophiliacs infected with the AIDS virus indicates doctors could determine which patients are most likely to develop complications by measuring a protein in their blood produced when the virus reproduces.

Gorbachev visit welcomed

Reagan: Summit would not mean progress

By James Gerstenzang
Los Angeles Times

WEST POINT, N.Y. — President Ronald Reagan said Wednesday that he would welcome a visit to the United States by Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev, but that a summit conference "is not a precondition for progress" on the superpowers' arms control agenda.

Reagan, described by aides as taking care not to raise expectations about a summit in the wake of earlier disappointments, said, "When the general secretary is ready to visit the United States, I and the American people will welcome him."

The president spoke to the corps of cadets at the U.S. Military Academy, several hours after the White House and the Soviet Union formally announced that Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze would meet Reagan Friday.

The White House meeting will take place one week after U.S.-Soviet negotiations intended to lead to a summit appeared to hit a snag in Moscow over continued Soviet insistence that limits be imposed on space weapons, including the United States' Strategic Defense Initiative missile defense system.

THE WHITE HOUSE announcement said that the Soviet foreign minister would make "a brief working visit" beginning Friday, that he was expected to carry a letter from Gorbachev to Reagan, and that the talks would continue those that Shevardnadze and Secretary of State George Shultz held last week in Moscow and last month in Washington.

White House officials say they feel that Gorbachev may have re-emphasized his interest last week in obtaining limits on SDI as a last-ditch gamble, hoping that the president's domestic political problems would entice him to accept the restrictions in exchange for a summit conference and completion of a treaty eliminating U.S. and Soviet medium- and short-range nuclear weapons.

"Shultz and the president slammed the door on that very quickly," said an administration arms-control expert, speculating that the U.S. reaction has led to "a retrenchment in progress" in Moscow.

NOW, HE SAID, the Soviets appear ready to put arms-control efforts and progress toward a summit "back on track," leading to some optimism that dates for a summit conference can be set during the Shevardnadze visit. Before Gorbachev raised the space weapons issue Friday in Moscow, White House officials had spoken about the possibility that the Soviet leader would visit the United States during late November. The president said at a news conference barely 12 hours before the Moscow talks ended that he wanted to play host to Gorbachev at his ranch northwest of Santa Barbara, Calif.

Reagan, speaking Wednesday to more than 4,000 cadets, said that "summits can be useful for leaders and for nations — occasions for frank talk and a bridge to better relations. It would be good for Mr. Gorbachev to see this country for himself."

"I AM READY to continue and intensify our negotiations but a summit is not a precondition for progress on the agenda at hand," Reagan said.

Reagan told the cadets that Shultz's meetings in Moscow produced "important positive movement toward an INF agreement," referring to a pact to eliminate medium- and short-range nuclear weapons, which are known as the Intermediate Nuclear Force, and also made progress in other areas.

Spending freeze considered for reducing budget deficit

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Lawmakers and White House officials, in search of a tax and spending plan to curb the deficit, are assessing a range of suggestions, including a freeze on spending, negotiators said Wednesday.

But the negotiators agreed they face hours of work before they can reach a compromise to trim at least $23 billion from the huge federal deficit blamed for the upheaval on Wall Street.

"I feel good about it," said White House chief of staff Howard Baker.

"Nothing is on the table at this point to accept or reject," said Sen. Bennett Johnston, D-La.

But he added a spending freeze was among the items discussed "as a starting point from which you build other things."

Most stocks decline but market stabilizes

NEW YORK (UPI) — Most stock prices declined Wednesday but some blue chips made gains in a session analysts called "relatively stable" after two weeks of Wall Street turmoil.

The Dow Jones industrial average inched up 0.33 to 1846.82.

The Dow climbed 52.56 points, or 2.9 percent, Tuesday after posting its second-worst point decline ever Monday. The Dow has recouped 108.41 points since its unprecedented 508-point collapse Oct. 19 on Black Monday.

But losing issues led gainers 1,154-588 among the 2,016 issues crossing the New York Stock Exchange tape and prices fell sharply in heavy trading of over-the-counter and American Stock Exchange issues.

Trading once again ended at 2 p.m. EST under the shortened trading hours adopted by the nation's exchanges for the rest of the week.

THOUGH MANY STOCKS retreated, analysts said the market held up remarkably well in the face of the dollar's plunge against other major currencies.

"I would give today a C-plus on a one-day basis in view of the environment we're dealing with," said Gail Dudack, vice president and head of technical analysis at A.G. Warburg.

"It was a relatively stable day and it's important that we continue the stability," said Trude Latimer, analyst at Josephthal & Co.

The dollar buckled after the president of the European Community Commission said in the French city of Strasbourg that the United States was prepared to let the dollar fall to as low as 1.60 West German marks. The Treasury said his comments did not reflect U.S. policy.

While the market's behavior was tamer than some recent performances, volatility was far from absent.

THE DOW DROPPED more than 63 points in the first half hour of trading, hurt by overseas sell orders and a weakening dollar. It then reversed itself, moving ahead 35 points, but erased most of that advance before the close.

In the context of the last two weeks, however, action was fairly calm, analysts said.

The market's drop over the last two weeks has been like "running 'Gone with the Wind' on fast-forward in 10 minutes," said Phil Erlanger, chief technical analyst at Advent Inc.

"This was not a disappointing day," Erlanger said. "All of this short-term choreography will not be of consequence until a lot of time has gone by or we break the key level of 1700 on the Dow."

Erlanger said 1700 is the most important level for investors to watch.

"IF WE BREAK below 1700, the market will not be able to sustain itself above the 1,000 level," said Erlanger. "We are on the edge, but not over the edge."

He said if the market can stay above 1700 and move above 2200 by the beginning of January, it can start a "fresh bull market cycle" that could send the Dow to 3500 by 1989.

Analysts said investors also were watching efforts in Washington to cut the federal budget deficit, action many believe is needed to signal the financial community that the government recognizes its fears about the economy.

Despite the focus on Washington, Erlanger contended the stock market now has become the most important economic factor.

"We're in a pickle here where the market's fall could cause the stress on the economy" because investors feared before the stock collapse occurred, Erlanger said.

Compliance with peace plan doubted in Central America

SAN JOSE, Costa Rica (UPI) — Central America's foreign ministers agreed Wednesday that terms of a regional peace accord will go into effect Nov. 5 but remained flexible on judging compliance with the plan.

However, the civil war in Nicaragua threatens to scuttle the peace agreement, according to some participants.

Costa Rican Foreign Minister Rodrigo Madrigal Nieto said a two-day meeting of the region's foreign ministers produced agreement on a list of measures each government must take by Nov. 5.

"We have . . . a list of measures that each government will take by Nov. 5," Madrigal said.

He said the terms were the same as those contained in the peace plan signed by the five Central American presidents Aug. 7 in Guatemala. It calls for a regional cease-fire, amnesty for anti-government rebels, an end to outside assistance to rebel groups and democratic reforms in each of the signatory countries.

BUT OTHER participants in the meeting said many doubts remain about what actually will happen when the plan takes effect. The major unresolved issue is how Nicaragua will arrive at a cease-fire agreement with U.S.-backed Contra rebels.

The Nicaraguan delegation, headed by Foreign Minister Miguel

D'Escoto, has steadfastly resisted pressure from the other four signatories to negotiate a cease-fire with the Contras they have been battling since 1981.

D'Escoto said Tuesday the Sandinistas are willing "to talk immediately with the chief Contra, President Reagan, but not with the rank and file."

A Costa Rican diplomat said a cease-fire in Nicaragua was "virtually impossible" and said the other four governments were unlikely to convince the Sandinistas to change their position.

The diplomat said failure to reach a cease-fire in Nicaragua would have "serious consequences" for the fate of the peace plan.

Ex-CIA agents to establish center to end covert action

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Author Philip Agee and three other ex-CIA agents who became disillusioned by covert operations in the Third World announced Wednesday they have established a center to promote public debate to end such operations.

The former agents charged at a news conference that covert operations have not advanced national security, but instead undermined the freedom of millions of people and alienated the United States from many of its allies.

"What we are really talking about are paramilitary objectives (by the United States) to overthrow governments," Agee said, citing current efforts by the Reagan administration to overthrow the Sandinista government in Nicaragua.

AGEE, A FORMER CIA agent in Latin America and author of Inside the Company: A CIA Diary, a critical account of the agency's actions, said the Center for the Study of Covert Action will work to expose covert operations and encourage public debate.

Agee was joined by John Stockwell, former CIA chief of station in Angola and National Security Council assistant to Henry Kissinger; Phil Roettinger, former CIA case officer in Guatemala; and David MacMichael, an intelligence analyst whose testimony influenced the World Court to condemn U.S. policies in Nicaragua.

"The more these kind of operations are brought out for debate, the better the United States will be because we are supposed to be a democracy," said Agee.

GOP rivals stake out own niche

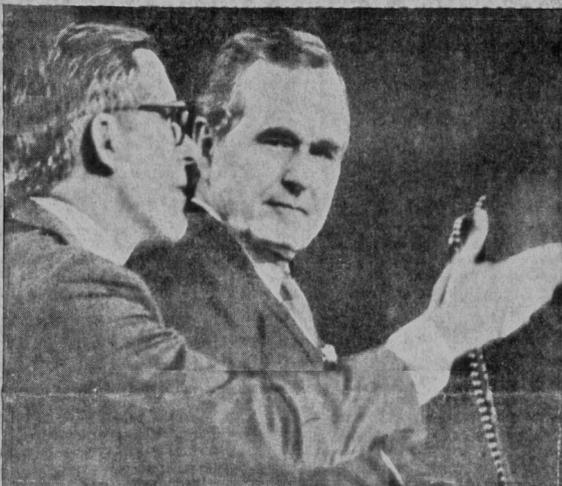

HOUSTON (UPI) — The six Republican presidential candidates vowed loyalty to President Ronald Reagan's record Wednesday but carefully shifted to stake out new ground in their battle to claim the right to be his successor.

In their first joint debate, just a little more than a year before the 1988 election, the GOP contenders cautiously talked about the future and steered clear of blaming the Reagan administration for the nation's current economic woes.

Most wanted to take advantage of the nationally televised debate on William Buckley's "Firing Line" to make their positions known to the nation.

Center stage in the debate was Vice President George Bush, who hoped to use the debate to reaffirm his position as frontrunner in the Republican race, but not to become the scapegoat for his role as the No. 2 man in an administration that has suffered its worst setbacks in the last week with the stock market collapse.

APPEARING ON the program were Bush; Senate GOP leader Robert Dole of Kansas; Rep. Jack Kemp of New York; former Secretary of State Alexander Haig; former television evangelist Pat Robertson and former Delaware Gov. Pete du Pont.

Republican presidential candidate Pierre du Pont speaks as Vice President George Bush listens during a debate in Houston.

"I could, but I won't," Bush replied when asked where he would have second-guessed Reagan's policies over the last seven years. "I'm not going to start now . . . We're here to beat Democrats. In our family, loyalty is a strength, not a character flaw."

Haig, while not directly attacking the Reagan record, said he always gave blunt opinions when serving as secretary of state and said there was certainly reason to "question" the administration for its role in record budget deficits and moving toward an arms control agreement with the Soviet Union at a time it was "abusing freedom" in Afghanistan.

KEMP WAS more direct in his attack, blaming the administration for starting off with the "biggest tax increase in history" in the 1982 budget and "not employing a strategic defense." He said he would not sign a new arms agreement with the Soviet Union until they agree to honor the terms of previous treaties.

Dole, seeking to stake out a role as a party leader independent of the administration, said the GOP suffered a "problem of sensitivity" and would work toward a program to solve the problems of blacks, Hispanics and the disabled — without giving any details.

Kim makes candidacy official

Los Angeles Times

SEOUL, South Korea — Opposition leader Kim Dae Jung officially — and finally — announced Wednesday that he was running for the presidency and disparaged the ruling party's candidate with the remark that "Only those who have a clear personal history of democratic struggle are qualified."

He said the December election would be "a great war in which democratic forces have declared the final decisive battle against military dictatorship," Kim, 63, told reporters. "We will surely win."

Kim, who at least five times in the past two and a half weeks has said unofficially that he was in the race, acknowledged that his candidacy could split the opposition vote against Roh Tae Woo, since his longtime rival, Kim Young Sam, is also running.

Kim Dae Jung said that he still believed a single opposition candidate could be determined later in the campaign, and he insisted that he was the best choice for that role.

Witches predict coming year

NEW YORK (UPI) — The witches are out with their annual Halloween predictions for the coming year and they say Lt. Col. Oliver North will start a string of franchise military summer camps and Michael Jackson will try to adopt Jim and Tammy Bakker.

For the 14th year, the off-the-wall forecasts were offered Wednesday by the New York Center for the Strange, which claims to be in contact with most of the legitimate witches in the country — 320 at its latest count.

For example, the witches predict that George Bush's campaign will falter "when, in attempts at levity, he unintentionally insults both working mothers and used-car dealers."

Fads for 1988 will include primal laughing, sleep marathons and urban bird-calling.

A fashion designer will introduce a line of lingerie and designer jeans under the "Young Bimbo" label.

THE ORGANIZATION'S associate research director, Lewis Scott, says witches are harmless and have been getting the dirty end of the stick for centuries.

They "seek nothing more than an end to society's vilification and hostility and the freedom to practice their beliefs quietly and with dignity," he said.

Scott claims America's leading witches include a prominent TV newscaster, a leading hotel operator, a top Detroit auto executive, several members of Congress and a presidential candidate.

Sorry, no names — but here are some other predictions:

- Sen. Robert Dole will win the GOP presidential nomination, and New York Gov. Mario Cuomo will be the Democrats' vice presidential candidate.
- A Japanese electronics company will introduce a device for decolorizing TV movies.
- British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher will appear in a Jane Fonda aerobic dancing video.
- Gary Hart will move to Los Angeles where he will develop a highly successful matrimonial law practice.

Psychologist wary of Rambo attire for kids

SAN DIEGO (UPI) — You are what you wear, so think twice before buying your child a Rambo costume this Halloween, says a psychologist.

Dressing up for Halloween is "a way to live out a fantasy," says Michael Mantell, "and parents shouldn't worry if their children want to play a superhero or a hobo for one day of the year."

But if the fantasy includes carrying "a terrifying-looking machine gun," he warns, or if the child stays in the new character for days, it's probably time for a talk.

Kids who select warlike costumes based on movies like Platoon or the Rambo series "are assuming an aggressive personality," says Mantell, and this usually is normal play-acting.

Poor priorities

If it were up to Rep. Tom Tauke, R-Iowa, elderly Iowans who receive Social Security benefits from the federal government will not be getting a raise in 1988.

In an effort to reduce the massive federal budget deficit — $148 billion in fiscal year 1987 — Tauke and Rep. Tim Penney, D-Minn., proposed a deficit reduction plan which includes rescinding next year's 4.2 percent increase in Social Security benefits.

There is no denying that the enormous deficit must be reduced dramatically if the American economy is to become healthy again. But placing this burden on the nation's elderly — whose income earning potential is limited — is a poor alternative.

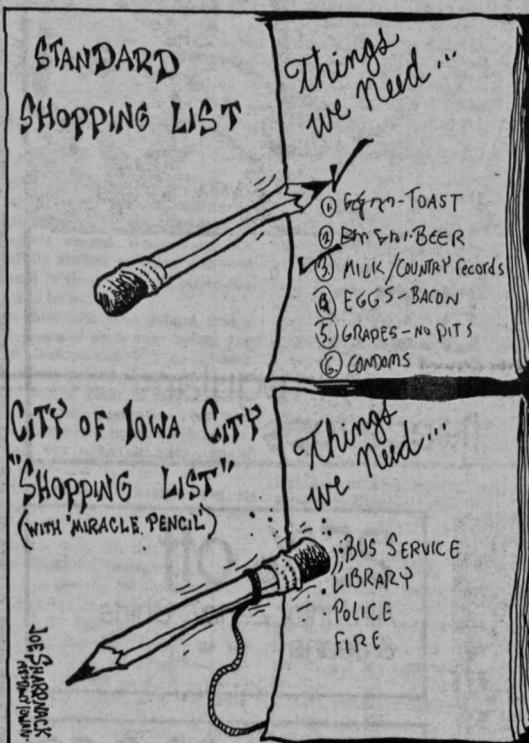

There are many other areas where cuts could be accomplished without endangering the economic security of senior citizens. There are billions of dollars being invested in the military which could be eliminated without sacrificing our ability to defend ourselves against foreign aggression.

An increase in income taxes for wealthy Americans with six-digit incomes and upward would also generate desperately needed income without posing a serious threat to their economic well-being. Unless, of course, they had the misfortune of suffering through a severe depression after having to settle for a Toyota Supra instead of a Mercedes Benz.

Proportionally, the state of Iowa has the third highest number of elderly people in the United States. Most have worked their entire lives and now having reached the stage in life where they should be able to relax. They are instead faced with fixed incomes which are not even keeping up with cost-of-living adjustments.

Reducing the budget deficit should be resolved, but not at the expense of those least able to afford it. Other options should be explored.

A recent New York Times/CBS poll produced evidence of a not too surprising consensus among Democratic primary voters: The biggest vote-getter among current candidates, with 43 percent, was "none of the above." Clearly none of the "dwarfs" has been able to arouse much positive response and the party race seems to be a battle for the least apathetic.

The Times article reported that many Democrats would prefer a non-candidate, like Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., or Sen. Bill Bradley, D-N.J., or New York Gov. Mario Cuomo. Times editors seem to be on the verge of endorsing a draft of Bradley in particular. They recently featured the New Jersey senator in a Sunday Magazine cover article, and the story in which the results of the poll were announced portrays the former NBA star and Rhodes scholar nothing short of the "white hope" of embattled Wall Street.

Bradley says he wants none of it. Cuomo and Nunn say the same thing, and who can blame them? Those qualified for the presidency by intelligence and foresight, rather than pure ego, are understandably reluctant to step into the wringer of the next incumbency. Nobody in his right mind wants to lead the shovel brigade in the wake of the Reagan administration. The common sense of all current candidates is thus suspect.

The draft-Bradley forces are reportedly calling it a "question of duty," citing the need of the nation's financiers for a leader in this time of crisis. Wanting the job has little to do with it.

In this respect they are almost certainly right. What the country does not need is another nap-filled idyll in pomp, egoism and deficit spending. The voters should mistrust the beaming confidence of the current candidates from both parties. We should look for a realist, who faces with some trepidation the very demanding job now to be done.

Capital punishment: Just . . .

THE JUSTICE of the death penalty — the right and wrong of it — even the simple practicality of it, are perennial bones of contention, perennially misunderstood.

There's practicality — although not much of it. The American prison system is chronically overcrowded and large amounts of the taxpayers' money are spent on efforts at hopeless upkeep. The term "correctional facility" has become, for most of the country's largest prisons, a dangerous euphemism. Too often, prison "corrects" nothing, and in the view of many it serves most effectively as a breeding place and training ground for lawbreakers who leave its walls not only unrepentant but harder, more cynical and not very peaceful.

But as a space-clearer, capital punishment doesn't exactly shine. As things stand today, only a small fraction of the death penalties handed out are actually enacted, and even if all of them were, the space cleared at any large facility — such as San Quentin or the New York State Penitentiary — would be a drop in the ocean compared to the hundreds and even thousands presently crowding the cells.

By Steve T. Donoghue

OF COURSE, the conditions of those large prisons — the daily violence, brutality and humiliation — warrant mention all by themselves. Such conditions will amount to nothing more than a trade school for psychopaths and to years and sometimes decades of mental and physical torture for any inmate who might be willing to reform.

Opponents of capital punishment are quick to argue that society has no more right to take a human life than does a killer — more on that in a minute. But they're usually silent on the questions which naturally accompany such a point — such as, what then, gives society the "right" to subject someone to horrible, even torturous conditions. Or for that matter, why society can even imprison someone against their will, when rapists and killers can't.

CRITICS OF THE death penalty can cite many examples of such error. They point out that there's always the possibility of an innocent man being executed by mistake. They also condemn the apparently uneven application of the death penalty: Blacks and other minorities draw the sentence a greater percent of the time than whites.

But none of that says anything about capital punishment itself. Yes, the legal system is flawed, and true, many people harbor unvoiced or even unrecognized prejudices. Those are human limitations, and humans are forever paying the price for such limitations. Opponents of capital punishment remind us that the price innocents pay in this case is one beyond restitution. But that doesn't make the punishment wrong.

IN THE END, it isn't human error or expense or deterrence or even revenge. In the end, it boils down to a question of "right" and "wrong."

This brings us back to the question of society's rights. Abstract musings aside, there are realities here to be understood. This society is a willing cooperation, an enormous confederacy held together as much by unwritten, unspoken contracts as by any formalized system of laws. And the most important of those unwritten agreements, the one on which all the others hinge, is that we do not kill each other.

If an individual cheats on his contract and breaks the law, that individual deserves punishment under the law. Likewise, if an individual breaks the most important contract and kills someone (and if the legal system, to the best of its ability, proves it to be true), that individual warrants a punishment every bit as irrevocable as the crime.

The morality of it isn't the question nor does it mean anything to say that only evil countries like Iran have death penalties. Of course it's wrong for someone to kill someone else — that's a noble, responsible belief.

The point is that a death penalty, far from being institutionalized barbarity, is a firm approval that a conscientious society gives to that belief.

Steve T. Donoghue is a Daily Iowan editorial writer.

. . . or just discriminatory?

THE ISSUE of capital punishment has divided societies for hundreds of years. In the United States today, it remains a divisive issue despite the fact that recent Supreme Court decisions have all but consolidated states' discretion in administering the death penalty.

The reasons for the division are numerous and reflect the personal conflict many people feel about capital punishment: while the death penalty is a harsh — perhaps even cruel — sentence, alternatives within the present criminal justice system are unsatisfactory. Recognizing the profound nature of this conflict and acknowledging the frustrations which arise from it, one nevertheless must face the fact that capital punishment is fundamentally at odds with the values our society ostensibly strives to uphold.

A LEADING ARGUMENT against capital punishment is the historical fact that it has been applied in blatantly discriminatory patterns. When the U.S. Supreme Court reinstated the death penalty in 1976, the justices ruled that capital punishment is legal only if applied in a fair, non-arbitrary manner. Today, about 11 years and 70 executions later, the ruling stands, but the court's warning against arbitrary application has not been observed.

By Dan McMillan

The most recent challenge to the death penalty, brought on grounds of racial discrimination, was turned away by the Supreme Court in April despite statistical evidence that the law is indeed unevenly applied. Central to the argument was an in-depth study conducted by UI College of Law Professor David Baldus who examined more than 2,000 murder cases in Georgia between 1973 and 1979.

Baldus found that defendants charged with killing white victims were 4.3 times as likely to receive a death sentence as defendants charged with slaying blacks. Furthermore, statistics show that blacks who kill whites are sentenced to death at about 22 times the rate of blacks who kill blacks and more than seven times the rate of whites who kill blacks.

QUITE CLEARLY, the numbers show two lingering biases: 1) there is a higher premium placed on the lives of white people, and 2) the death penalty is a punishment more commonly handed down upon blacks than whites. Despite strides in civil rights and equal protection cases, the United States remains a nation deeply divided along lines of race with the result that minorities pay a far greater price for their crimes. To ignore these facts is irresponsible; to suggest that the prejudices they represent can be easily overcome is hopelessly unrealistic.

Beyond the statistical evidence showing arbitrary and capricious application of the death penalty are other compelling arguments against capital punishment. While proponents frequently cite the death penalty as a valuable deterrent against homicide, the statistical data on such matters is far from conclusive. In fact, studies conducted by Hugo Adam Bedau have shown no evidence of deterrence and other surveys even indicate an inverse relationship between capital punishment and the rate of homicide.

THE FINAL ARGUMENT is one which has no statistical backing, yet it is the most important: the moral argument. Naturally, the body of thought in this area is varied and ever-changing, but heeding the most forceful voices for morality in our time requires us to reject all conditions which damage the integrity of human life — war, poverty, disease, etc. In keeping with the sanctity of life, state-ordered killing is unacceptable.

Explaining the paramount importance of non-violent resistance in the 1960s civil rights protests, Martin Luther King Jr. noted that violence changes the complexion of any struggle and destroys the possibility of positive results ever being gleaned. This principle is equally valid when applied in the argument against capital punishment. Put simply, a society seeking to raise its level of civilization cannot hope to do so through practices which are essentially barbaric.

Dan McMillan is a Daily Iowan editorial writer.

These are hard, violent times

There's something ominous about the first known fatalities of our stock market collapse.

During the 1929 crash, the first fatalities were Wall Street types with names like Chauncy or Fairfax who decided that they could not face life without their pump portfolios and weekend homes on Long Island.

So they stood on the office window ledge, said "Farewell, cruel world," and did what they thought was honorable. They jumped.

It wasn't the brightest thing to do, since even life in a soup line is better than being a dead splat on a sidewalk. But at least there was a certain old-fashioned dignity in what they did, in that they blamed themselves.

BUT NOW the first fatalities were more in keeping with our modern times and state of mind.

A disgruntled investor walked into a brokerage office in Miami. He had bought stocks on margin, meaning credit, and couldn't cover his losses. In other words, he had speculated, gone in over his head.

So he took a Dirty Harry gun from his briefcase, killed one broker, wounded another, and only then did he shoot and kill himself.

It's a tragic story, but it might give us a hint as to the kind of nightmare we might be in for if this market slump turns into something more — such as a severe recession or a full-blown depression.

This isn't the same kind of society that it was in 1929. The population is different. Attitudes are different. And so are the personal values — or lack of them.

DESPITE THE legend of the Roaring '20s being a time of prosperity, there were many poor people in this country. But they were different than today's poor.

For one thing, most of the poor of that period didn't even realize they were poor. In the cities, many were immigrants who thought that if they had a menial job, a roof over their heads, a hot meal on the table and shoes on their feet, they were doing OK. They weren't used to much more.

Few had cars and didn't expect to ever own them. A streetcar or legs were adequate transportation. They had no instant entertainment on a magic tube in the parlor. Or even a radio. Air conditioning hadn't been invented and dirty clothes were washed by hand and hung on a rope to dry.

Those on farms thought they were in good shape, too, if they scratched a living from the land and didn't go to bed hungry.

THE POOR today know they are poor. They've been officially categorized and have received formal notification of their poorness. Thanks to television and other forms of communication, they know what others have and they don't. And they resent what they don't have.

Actually, compared to the ordinary lower class family of the '20s, today's poor are doing much better. A welfare family today is better fed, better housed and has better medical care than a lowly-paid working family of 65 years ago. They have luxuries and entertainment that didn't exist then.

But that's all relative. The measure is no longer what you have — it's what you want and don't have. And if today's poor have to get poorer, they aren't going to like it. Nor will those who are somewhere on the next level — the almost poor, those who are just getting by, just hanging on.

CONSIDER A few thoughts that might cause bad dreams. Recent years have been prosperous. Not for everybody, but for most Americans. Despite Reaganomics, the social safety nets are still there. People don't have to go to relief centers, as they did in the '30s, and stand in long lines for a carton of basic groceries. Young men aren't trundled off to New Deal CCC camps to do make-work jobs for three squares and a flop. When was the last time you saw someone on the street selling apples?

Yet, more and more people pick up guns and go looking for someone to divest of assets — frequently shooting the victims almost as an afterthought. We've become more and more violent. Sometimes for profit. And other times just for something exciting and macho to do.

SO IF IN an era of prosperity we've become more violent, if our prisons are stuffed beyond capacity, if the cops and judges can't keep up with the volume of crime, what will it be like if times get really hard?

Will there be a sense of community, of helping and sharing, as was often the case in the Great Depression?

Oh, sure, if we get genuine hard times, the Hell's Angel types are going to open soup lines. And the Insane Idiots and Deranged Demons street gangs are going to put down their Saturday Night Specials and begin baking bread for the needy. Yeah, and I'll suddenly grow a full head of hair.

I don't want to be an alarmist, but that confused crowd in Washington known as Our Leaders had better begin thinking beyond what the slumping Dow Jones means to next year's elections and their corporate contributors.

They might start by renting a video movie called "Road Warrior." But they shouldn't look at it as a piece of fiction. Think of it as a documentary. One of these days, it could be.

Council Elections

unbiased nature has been the basis for all of his votes.

"Four years ago I brought something to the council — my 30 years of business experience," he said. "That record stands by itself."

Owner of Welt-Ambrisco Insurance and present mayor of Iowa City, Ambrisco said his campaign is based upon economic development for the area and balancing the city budget, which faces a $900,000 deficit in the next fiscal year unless changes are made.

If elected to a second term, Ambrisco said he will remain committed to the present council policy of keeping property tax increases at or below 6 percent.

"That's what I am committed to," he said. "I will not go beyond that."

BUDGET BALANCING will have to result from reviewing every city service to determine where efficiencies can be made and to find the lowest priority services, he said.

Ambrisco said the present Iowa City professional staff — especially Iowa City Manager Stephen Atkins — is one of the best in the country and will be able to address the city's budget problems effectively.

"Mr. Atkins is the right person for the '80s," he said, saying the city staff is a "world class" group.

Ambrisco said health, safety and welfare services should have highest priority in the upcoming budget review process.

Economic development will become increasingly important in Iowa City as UI enrollment declines, he said, because the area will have fewer UI-related jobs. "They are our largest employer," he said.

"CUTTING RED TAPE" to encourage businesses to locate in Iowa City and to encourage existing Iowa City businesses to stay here is important, Ambrisco said.

Strait, who has been a member of the council since 1982, said his experience on the council makes him the right man for the job.

A retired UI professor of law, Strait said fiscal responsibility, community growth, neighborhood preservation and the Iowa City Public Library will be his priorities if he is re-elected to the council.

He would not say he would vote to increase funding to the library, which is currently operating at reduced hours due to budget limitations.

Strait said the only budget items he would commit to support are police, fire and human social services.

"I HAVE TO SEE the whole picture before I can say yes or no," he said. "Everything else will be up for review."

The entire budget will have to be scrutinized to find inefficient or duplicated areas, he said.

"We're going to have to look at that whole budget," he said. "If there are any duplications of services, then we can start there."

Strait was a strong supporter of the now-defeated local sales tax, and said he believes a property tax increase is a possible means of generating city revenue to balance the budget.

He said he would favor a property tax increase only as a last resort to balance the budget.

"The voters did not give us the option of a sales tax," Strait said.

George Strait

"There are ways to keep the tax rate down and still fund services."

Economic development for the area is another of Strait's priorities.

"The council has to make the steps easier (for a business to set up here)," he said.

NO ONE CLAIMED responsibility for the attacks, and the military refused to speculate about the killers. "We don't have any way at this time to determine whether the attacks were coordinated, whether Americans were specific targets, or what the motives were," Boyd said. "We have not come to any conclusions. It is too soon."

Maj. Gen. Donald Snyder, the 13th Air Force Commander, went on the armed forces television station here and asked military personnel to "maintain very, very good prudence" and restrict their travel off base to well-traveled roads. "We're not sure who's perpetrated these crimes," he said.

Most analysts said the killings could either be the work of communist assassins or rebel right-wing military officers who want to destabilize the government of President Corazon Aquino.

The slayings come after weeks of repeated warnings from the communist New People's Army that they were prepared to escalate their 19-year-old insurgency by attacking American targets.

THE MOST RECENT issue of Ang Bayan, the Communist party's official newsletter, carries an unsigned statement in which the party threatens to attack American military facilities and business interests.

Earlier this month, the Northern Luzon chapter of the New People's Army held a clandestine press conference for a handful of reporters, and a rebel spokeswoman, Ruth Firmeza, announced: "If there is another coup or martial law, we will hit the U.S. imperialists, all American personnel, military, diplomatic or what." She added, "U.S. facilities are also targets," and announced a "hit list," of prominent Filipino politicians and some journalists, including Newsweek magazine correspondent Melinda Liu.

The slayings outside Clark bore a striking resemblance to the recent spate of slayings in Manila by "sparrow units," the NPA's urban assassination squads.

THE SERVICEMAN killed near McDonald's was identified by Philippine police as Randy Davis, 30, of the Air Force. Three men opened fire on him at point-blank range, police said.

A Philippine police spokesman said the three gunmen fled aboard a "jeepney." The spokesman in Dau said two empty shells from a 45-caliber pistol were found at the scene.

"Sparrow" assassinations in Manila have generally followed the same pattern, with a group of three men or women approaching their victim on a street, opening fire at close range with concealed handguns and then fleeing aboard passenger jeeps where they easily blend into the crowds.

If the communists are linked to the slayings, it could mark a potentially dramatic escalation of the insurgency which has increasingly taken its campaign of violence from the countryside to the city streets. Such a turn of events would also pose new policy risks for the United States.

"THE CASE IS being handled through the proper channels," Hubbard said. "The policy is if a person is considered dangerous we can exclude them from the university. In this case, nothing has been decided yet."

But a release issued Wednesday by the UI Office of University Relations indicates the UI is "unlikely" to invoke any disciplinary procedures against Smiley.

"In cases in which criminal charges are filed against a student for conduct which occurs off-campus, the university, upon notice of a complaint, undertakes an investigation to ascertain whether the university has jurisdiction over the matter," the release stated. "When the alleged misconduct occurs off-campus and outside the context of a university-sponsored event or function, it is unlikely the university will find that it has jurisdiction to invoke its disciplinary procedures."

ONE OF SMILEY'S two attorneys, Jay Roberts, said he also thinks it is unlikely the UI will take action against his client.

"We don't anticipate it," Roberts said. "We're not aware of any pattern of behavior that would cause him to be considered a threat to public safety."

Roberts also called the letter from Zemaitis' parents to the UI "racially-motivated" and said they wanted to punish Smiley because he was black.

"We considered filing a motion against her parents' involvement in the case during the trial because of their bigotry," Roberts said. "This letter is a purely racial attack on their part."

But Julie Zemaitis denied the charge, calling it a "low blow" and said it was unjustified.

"It's a lot of nonsense," she said. "They tried to bring that up during the trial. It stinks, and I really resent it."

it — one of the major causes of failure in a transplant patient's recovery.

"We may be able to fool her immunities into thinking that this heart is their heart," he said. "That may be naive but there is the hope that the younger children may be easier to manage in regards to rejection."

"We've got a pretty good chance," he added.

UI Hospitals is becoming the regional referral hospital for infant heart transplant surgery, part of which is due to Behrendt's work.

"HE STARTED the program," said David Kapelanski, UI College of Medicine assistant professor of surgery and Behrendt's colleague in cardiopulmonary surgery. "He's been principally a congenital heart specialist, but he's brought his experience in pediatric heart transplants here."

A soft-spoken Rhode Island native, Behrendt studied at Harvard Medical College and interned at Massachusetts General Hospital. Specializing in pediatric cardiac care, he worked for the National Institutes of Health and taught at the University of Michigan before coming to the UI last November.

His expertise in transplant surgery is what the UI wanted when they lured Behrendt — the highest-paid state official — to Iowa by offering him an annual income of $260,000.

Behrendt recruited a team of experts to boost the UI department, and since its ultimate formation this summer, the department performs a heart transplant about every three weeks.

here was because the over all transplantations were very strong. Heart transplants were lagging behind," he said. "That's one of the reasons they asked me to come; I had some experience with it," he said.

The cardiovascular team has done 10 previous heart transplants since Behrendt joined the staff. But before Saturday, his youngest patient had been a three-month-old — a small patient, but considerably larger than the newborn Marissa.

The relatively new developments enabling transplantations of infant hearts — about the size of a Brussel sprout — is the culmination of a number of new developments, including better techniques of infant open-heart surgeries, infant transplant surgeries and anesthetization, and the development of transplantation drugs and miniaturized heart pumps, Behrendt said.

"OUR GENERAL ABILITY to operate on babies has gotten better. All of a sudden we can do all these things we couldn't have done five years ago," he said.

"This is not the first transplant. We've done a lot of transplants but it's always exciting to see the heart start up and start to work — whether it's an adult or a child, it's the same thing. But this is the smallest one and we've been preparing for this for a long time."

"I think we're doing all right now," he said, in his characteristic understated way.

Behrendt said his next project is to develop a lung transplant surgery program at UI Hospitals, a program he hopes to begin next month.

Minnesota clips Iowa in 5 games

By Anne Upson
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa volleyball team put up a fight, but lost to Minnesota in five games, 15-5, 15-6, 11-15, 13-15, 15-4, Wednesday night in Minneapolis, Minn.

According to Iowa Coach Sandy Stewart, the match was frustrating.

"Our confidence wasn't the problem. It was the lack of communication. They were not listening to what was open, so our hitting wasn't very smart," Stewart said.

Middle hitters Ellen Mullarkey and Toni Zehr led the Hawkeyes with 11 kills each in the match. Outside hitter Kari Hamel had 10.

"KARI HAS BEEN down with the flu so she wasn't at 100 percent, but she had 22 digs," Stewart said. "Toni had a good serving game. She had four service aces."

Minnesota outside hitter Andrea Gonzalez led all players with 32 kills. She also recorded three service aces, 16 digs and six blocks.

Those statistics were enough to elicit praise from the losing coach.

"Gonzalez had a great game. She really led their team," Stewart said.

Volleyball

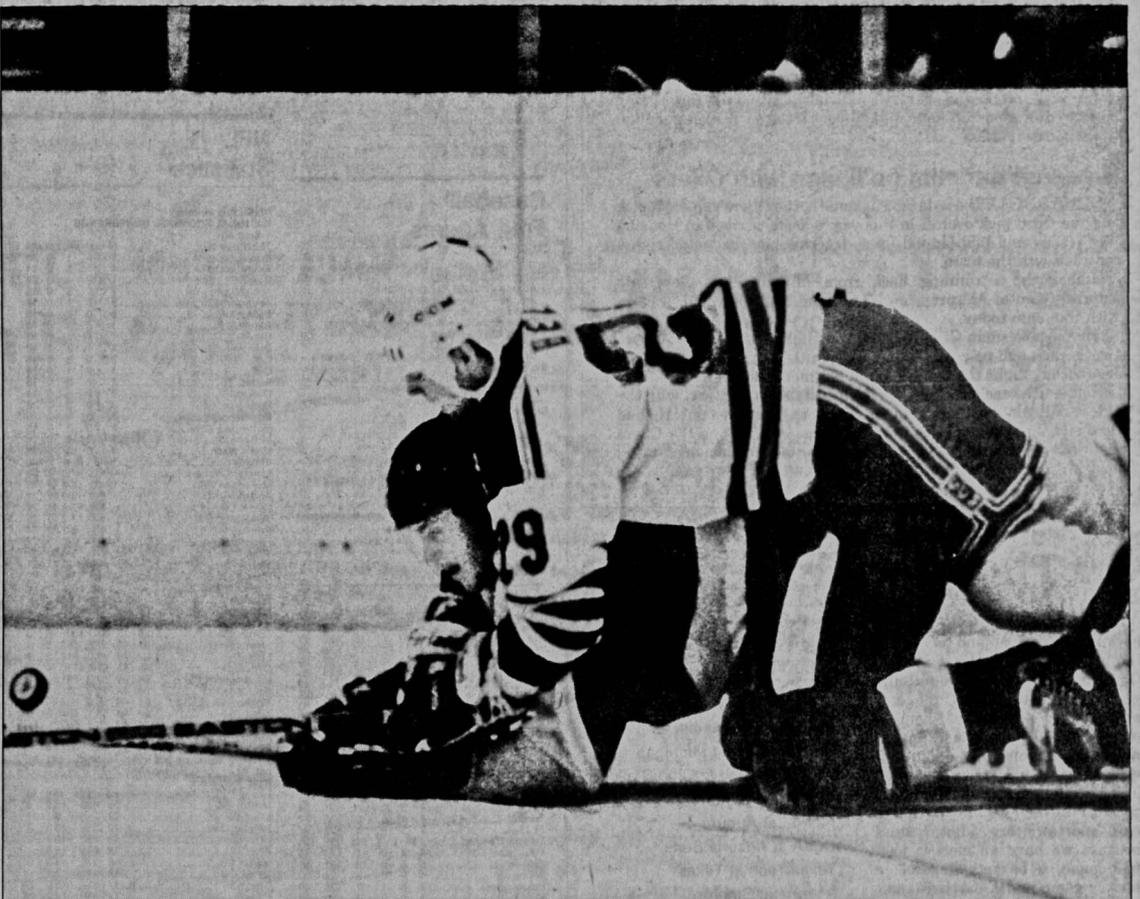

According to Stewart, Iowa played better when they "took charge." "We fought back after the losses," she said. "We didn't play badly when the communication and serve receive was there, but we got intimidated and didn't pass the ball."

IOWA'S BLOCKING was, throughout the match, a liability. The Hawkeyes had only five blocks while Minnesota had 26. Stewart called that type of play "not a good average."

The silver lining in the dark cloud was the Hawkeyes' defensive play, where they showed improvement.

"Our defense was good but you can't play defensive all the time. We were not offensively good," Stewart said.

"We have improved significantly over the season. Right now we have reached a plateau," Stewart said. "We have the potential to do fine in the rest of our games. We need to get the mental aspect together."

NFL owners: Pension fund lost $39 million

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Claims by NFL owners that they have lost $39 million from the players' pension fund in the recent stock-market plunge are an exaggeration, an official for the players' union said Wednesday.

Speaking at the owners' meeting at Kansas City, Mo., Jack Donlan, executive director of the Management Council — the owners' negotiating arm — said Tuesday what had been a $40 million surplus in the pension fund had withered to $1 million due to losses in the stock market. However, Miky Yaras, director of benefits for the NFL Players Association, said the numbers used by Donlan were taken when the market was at its low point last week.

"It's probably more like $30 million (in losses) today," Yaras said. "And tomorrow it will probably be (lower) depending on the market."

"THE TRUTH IS we have very conservative managers and we've lost less than other people."

Yaras responded in the affirmative when asked if the losses reported by Donlan were to improve management's leverage in negotiations for a collective bargaining agreement to replace the one that expired Aug. 31. Formal talks broke off Oct. 11 between Donlan and NFLPA Executive Director Gene Upshaw.

Upshaw was in Miami for the AFL-CIO convention Wednesday and unavailable for comment. A spokesman for the NFLPA said Upshaw would discuss the pension Thursday.

Donlan suggested the loss in pension surplus could affect contract talks. Pension benefits are a key issue in negotiations.

"That's one of the places we were going to get the money (for added benefits)," Donlan said. "We'll have to take a look at that at the point in time when we revisit that question with the union."

JOHN JONES, director of public relations for the Management Council, said Wednesday from New York the owners' pension proposal on the table when talks broke down would have provided the single, largest increase in the league's history.

"Now Donlan and ownership have to gauge what the offer is going to be when negotiations resume," Jones said.

Jones said benefits from the 1982 collective bargaining agreement, under which the league is running in lieu of a new pact, are not threatened by the recent losses and will stay intact until a new agreement is reached.

Jones said Donlan plans to contact

Upshaw next week to try to renew negotiations. The players struck for 24 days in hopes of forcing a new deal. However, the owners refused to budge much and the players ended their strike without a new contract.

The strike concluded Oct. 15, mainly ignited by players crossing picket lines to compete in the owners' "replacement" games. Upshaw then filed an anti-trust suit against the owners, which among other things seeks to gain free agency for NFL players.

Horton injured, out for 2 weeks

By Scott Wingert
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa basketball team will be without its most experienced center for at least two weeks.

Junior Ed Horton sprained his left ankle during a one-on-one drill at practice Tuesday afternoon.

"I have a third degree ligament tear of my left ankle," Horton said after a visit to the doctor's office Wednesday afternoon. "I've never felt this much pain before. I'm just glad it didn't happen during the season."

Iowa basketball trainer John Streif said Horton may be in a cast for up to three weeks.

"It's a bad sprain," Streif said. "But he's doing fine. We'll take the cast off in about a week and re-evaluate his situation then."

HORTON, WHO AVERAGED 7.8 points, 5.6 rebounds and 20 minutes of play per game last season, is the second center to go down to injury this season. Kent Hill also sprained an ankle during Tuesday's practice.

"I'm set up for a shot at an angle and came down on the inside of my left foot," Horton said. "I'll be in pain for a couple of days, but the doctor said it will heal faster in this cast."

Horton said he wants to be sure he is back in action before the Hawkeyes open their season against the Italian Nationals Nov. 17.

"I hate for this to happen right now," Horton said.

Iowa's Ed Horton pulls down a rebound during a game last season.

2 Auburn stars suspended

AUBURN, Ala. (UPI) — The NCAA Wednesday declared quarterback Jeff Burger and offensive tackle Jim Thompson of sixth-ranked Auburn ineligible for the rest of the season for accepting a free plane ride to a hunting trip.

The NCAA ruled that Burger and Thompson violated the extra benefit rules by accepting an Oct. 11 plane ride and hunting trip from a friend of Thompson's family. Auburn immediately filed an appeal.

"You've got to accept it and go on," Auburn Coach Pat Dye said. "It's not what we wanted to hear. I guess I was prepared for both (possibilities), but I was a little bit surprised by the ruling."

Dye did not know if the NCAA would act on the appeal before the Tigers, 6-0-1, take on No. 11 Florida, 5-2, in a key Southeastern Conference game Saturday night.

JANET JUSTUS, THE NCAA's assistant director of eligibility, said she did not know how long it would take to decide the appeal, but a ruling was expected before the end of the regular season.

The rule in question bars athletes from receiving privileges not accorded other students. Dye had said previously he did not think the trip violated NCAA rules.

A friend of the Thompson family flew Burger and the lineman on a hunting trip in south Alabama the day after the Oct. 10 Vanderbilt game. The man is a University of Alabama graduate, published reports said.

The incident marks the third time Burger has been in trouble this year. An academic honesty committee at the school recommended that Burger be suspended for the fall and winter quarters for plagiarizing a term paper, but Auburn Vice President Warren Brandt overturned the penalty.

BURGER WAS BRIEFLY declared ineligible before the season began because assistant coach Pat Sullivan signed his property bond after Burger was arrested following a fight at a fast-food restaurant. The NCAA restored Burger's eligibility on an appeal from the school.

Burger, a fifth-year senior, has completed 105 of 154 passes for 1,314 yards and 10 touchdowns this season.

Backup quarterback Reggie Slack, a sophomore who got his first start last week, hit on 11 of 17 passes for 185 yards and three touchdowns in a 38-7 win over Mississippi State.

Martin: No comment on Yankees' future

NEW YORK (UPI) — "New" Yankees manager Billy Martin declined to state his opinion Wednesday on whether his team will stay in New York, and Mayor Edward Koch said negotiations between the city and team are progressing.

"I can't predict how long the Yankees will stay in town — I don't even know how long I'm going to be here," the off-again, on-again manager said when asked if he could envision the Yankees playing outside of the Bronx.

Martin was one of several baseball managers and executives at City Hall for a ceremony honoring major-league baseball's efforts to prevent drug abuse.

The city, state and Yankees officials have been negotiating parking provisions in the team's 30-year lease on Yankee Stadium that expires in 2002.

Highsmith admits he'll sign with Oilers

HOUSTON (UPI) — Alonzo Highsmith, the Oilers' top draft pick and the third pick overall in this year's draft, arrived in Houston Wednesday and told United Press International he would sign a contract with the team.

Highsmith, a running back from Miami (Fla.), flew into Intercontinental Airport from Miami and said he would practice with the team today.

Oilers spokesman Chip Namias and Highsmith's lawyer, Bruce Greer, each had no comment on Highsmith's arrival. Namias said Wednesday night the team had not yet met with Highsmith.

Highsmith reached agreement in principle to a contract with the Oilers Saturday, with only minor details to be worked out. He had filed suit against the NFL and its 28 teams, charging the Oilers were not negotiating fairly and that the league conspired to fix salaries paid to draftees.

On The Line

Off The Wall has been brought back by popular demand because of the upcoming Halloween weekend. On The Line has been bound and gagged for not reacting the way any reporter (sports or a heinous metro) should have after Tuesday morning's erroneous malady of writing.

How could anyone (even a metro reporter in their right-wing mind) call sportswriters idiots? Just because we have an electric football game, a basketball game, a hockey game and a baseball game in the newsroom doesn't mean we're not serious about what's happening in the Persian Gulf. (That's some sort of a cat or is it a rug company?)

Cutting down sportswriters could only stem from petty jealousy. Editor John Gilardi remedied the problem by separating the departments with a huge concrete wall.

LET'S HAVE A moment of silence for those lonely metro reporters who have nothing to look forward to this festive weekend except those tedious stories they labor over like assembly-line parasites.

Take Assistant Metro Editor Scott Hauser — a Lou Grant look-alike-contest loser, (this dedicated newsmen hasn't cracked a smile in three months). On Friday and Saturday nights, Hauser sits around watching reruns of Seahound and Combat.

Don't forget Jim Cahoy. Halloween night, Cahoy and staff writer Ann Keavin will be in the library co-authoring their book, "Archaeological Remains and How It Relates to Sexual Abstinence in African Elephants."

Drop off your can of tuna and old archaeological notes along with your ballots before noon today at Communications Center Room 111.

Remember to circle the winner of the tiebreaker game (just like every other game) and limit yourself to five ballots. Then, after you win you can pick up a 16-gallon keg of brew — benevolently donated by Billy's — located at 819 First Ave. in Iowa City. Billy's is the one place — perhaps in the whole university structure — where everyone has a great time and no one, including Cahoy and Hauser, leaves without a smile.

Pension Plunge

NFL management says the players' pension fund, worth $40 million before the stock-market plunge, has dropped $39 million since last week's tumble on Wall Street.

Trainer's Room — George Rogers, who has been limited to eight carries because of a sprained left big toe, declared himself healthy enough to play this week for the Washington Redskins.

Ineligible — The NCAA declared Auburn quarterback Jeff Burger and offensive tackle Jim Thompson ineligible for the remainder of the season for accepting a free plane ride. The NCAA said the pair violated extra benefit rules by accepting an Oct. 11 plane ride and hunting trip from a friend of Thompson's family. Burger was ranked third in the nation in passing this season.

Vengeance? — Four members of the San Diego Chargers who took part in the NFL players' strike were among 11 players cut by the team late Tuesday. Linebackers Angelo Snipes and Andy Hawkins were released along with guard Curt Digiacomo and defensive end Mack Moore.

Jordan leaves Bulls' practice

CHICAGO (UPI)—Michael Jordan, the leading scorer in the NBA last season, walked out of a Bulls practice Tuesday because he felt his scrimmage team was being cheated in scoring.

Jordan, who averaged 37.1 points per game for the Bulls last season, walked out of practice 20 minutes before it ended after an argument with Bulls' coach Doug Collins.

"I'm a competitor, and I want to win," Jordan said upon leaving the practice. "I always keep score in everything, scrimmages, games, whatever, and I know the score was 4-4. Doug said it was 4-3, my team losing. I know after a long, tough practice, the losing team has to run. I felt like he (Collins) was stacking the odds against me on purpose."

JORDAN SAID HE left practice because "I was afraid I would say something I would regret later." He said he was upset because Collins would not stop to recount the baskets.

Collins refused to comment on the encounter. When asked if Jordan would be fined, Collins said, "That will be taken care of later."

"I'll probably be fined, and I should be fined," Jordan said. "They have to make an example of me for the team. I know that. But I also think I was being treated unfairly. This was the maddest I've ever been."

NFL may get first woman announcer

By Randy Minkoff
United Press International

CHICAGO — Gayle Sierens, a news anchor with limited sports play-by-play experience, has a chance to become the first woman ever to do network play-by-play of an NFL game.

If all goes according to plan, Sierens, 33, a news anchor for WXFL-TV in Tampa, Fla., will do a late-season NFL game on NBC. If she meets network standards, she may do more.

Sierens is not overly excited about her unique opportunity.

"Right now, my job is that of a news anchor," she says. "I haven't done sports in the past two years. I know that I can do it. At the very least, when it's over, people will know that I tried. I do know that my top priority now is, and will be, doing the news."

MICHAEL WEISMAN, the NBC vice president of sports who made the decision to use a woman, believes Sierens and another woman hired by NBC, Gayle Gardner, will serve as trailblazers in the industry.

"I liken it a lot to Jackie Robinson breaking down the color barriers in baseball," Weisman says. "For too long, women haven't gotten a chance to do sports, let alone play-by-play. The last to do it was Phyllis George. But we're not talking about doing personality features. We're talking about doing hard news reports and also play-by-play."

Sierens will work with NBC's

Marty Glickman, who helps critique announcers during the regular season. Glickman works with regulars and rookies alike, advising them on how to improve their on-the-air talents.

After her audition, she will be assigned a regional telecast.

"A LOT OF PEOPLE think we're going to stick her on a meaningless Saturday game or something but that's not going to be the case," Weisman said. "She'll do a regional game, just like anyone else we'd be considering to do work for us." Sierens has never done NFL play-by-play, but she has done work in a similar capacity for soccer and equestrian events.

"I know the sport, believe me," she says. "But frankly, I decided several years ago before I switched over to news that some people out there are going to have their minds made up about how a woman does sports."

"I just made up my mind to do my best and not worry about it. That's the way a professional handles it."

Knicks get Green in swap with Pistons

NEW YORK (UPI)—The Detroit Pistons, responding to an offer sheet New York gave Sidney Green, Wednesday traded the 6-foot-9 forward to the Knicks for rookie Ron Moore and a 1988 second-round draft choice.

In acquiring Green, the Knicks will allow forward Bernard King to join the Washington Bullets, a New York spokesman said. King, a free agent and former NBA scoring champion, had signed an offer sheet for $2.2 million with the Bullets.

In other news, New York signed guard Trent Tucker to a two-year contract. Tucker, entering his sixth year out of Minnesota, averaged 11.4 points a game last year.

"Sidney Green now fills Bernard King's salary slot, so Bernard is free to do whatever he will," Knicks General Manager Al Bianchi said. "We expect Green to help us in our weakest spot, rebounding."

"I WASN'T SURE this could be completed, but the signing of Tucker and the trade for Green firms up our club in time for Coach Pitino to get his system working before the season starts."

The Knicks had signed Green, a native of Brooklyn, to a three-year, $2.25 million offer sheet that the Pistons matched. New York wanted the 220-pounder for his rebounding skills. New York was outbounded by 500 boards last season.

"I'm glad the ordeal is over," said Green, 26. "It was a childhood dream to play for New York because I grew up watching them and now the dream is a reality."

Green started 69 games with Detroit last year and grabbed 653 rebounds. He fell out of favor with Coach Chuck Daly and sat on the bench late in the season. He played just 12 minutes in four exhibition games this season.

Moore, a 6-10 center out of West Virginia State, was the Knicks' second-round pick in this year's draft.

Riley picks Lakers to repeat; NBA season opens Nov. 7

By Ian Love
United Press International

NEW YORK — Fresh from knocking off the Boston Celtics in the NBA finals last June, Lakers Coach Pat Riley wasted little time in taking a swipe at history.

He guaranteed Los Angeles would repeat as NBA champion.

Riley put aside coaching etiquette — the curious condition that prevents bold predictions — and claimed in the victorious locker room that his team will be the first in 18 years to win back-to-back titles. The last to do so were the 1968 and 1969 Boston Celtics.

There will be other subplots as the league enters its 41st season, which begins Nov. 6 with 11 games.

The league features six new coaches, including the return of Bill Russell, the player-coach of the 1968-69 Celtics.

"THE FUN PART about basketball," said Golden State Coach George Karl, "is that an injury here and a contract squabble there and things can blow up in your face."

The Lakers return the key players from a team that went a league-best 65-17 during the season and 15-3 in the playoffs. Magic Johnson, who took on more scoring responsibilities at the request of Riley, is coming off his best season.

However, the 28-year-old guard missed most of the exhibition season because of tendonitis in his knees. He is expected in the lineup opening night. Los Angeles returns Kareem Abdul-Jabbar for his 19th season at center along with forwards James Worthy and A.C. Green.

SECOND IN THE Pacific Division is a tossup. Golden State, Portland and Seattle all improved last season. The SuperSonics, behind Dale Ellis, Xavier McDaniel and Tom Chambers, were a surprise opponent against the Lakers in the Western Conference final.

Portland finished second in the division, but lost Sam Bowie to another broken leg and are in need of a solid center. Golden State

NBA Champions: In the next season

- 1985-86 Boston Celtics — Lost 4-2 in NBA Championship series to LA Lakers.
- 1984-85 LA Lakers — Lost 4-1 in Western Conference final to Houston Rockets.
- 1983-84 Boston Celtics — Lost 4-2 in NBA Championship series to LA Lakers.
- 1982-83 Philadelphia 76ers — Lost 3-2 in first round of playoffs to New Jersey.
- 1981-82 LA Lakers — Lost 4-0 in NBA Championship series to Philadelphia.
- 1980-81 Boston Celtics — Lost 4-3 in Western Conference final to Washington.
- 1979-80 LA Lakers — Lost 3-0 in first round of playoffs to Houston.
- 1978-79 Seattle SuperSonics — Lost 4-1 in Western Conference final to LA Lakers.
- 1977-78 Washington Bullets — Lost 4-1 in NBA Championship series to Seattle.
- 1976-77 Portland Trail Blazers — Lost 4-2 in second round of playoffs to Seattle.
- 1975-76 Boston Celtics — Lost 4-3 in second round of playoffs to Philadelphia.
- 1974-75 Golden State Warriors — Lost 4-3 in Western Conference final to Phoenix.
- 1973-74 Boston Celtics — Lost 4-2 in Eastern Conference final to Washington.
- 1972-73 New York Knicks — Lost 4-1 in Eastern Conference final to Boston.
- 1971-72 LA Lakers — Lost 4-1 in NBA Championship series to New York.
- 1970-71 Milwaukee Bucks — Lost 4-2 in Western Conference final to LA Lakers.
- 1969-70 New York Knicks — Lost 4-3 in Eastern Conference final to Baltimore.
- 1968-69 Boston Celtics — Finished regular season 34-48 and did not qualify for playoffs.

hopes for a more mature Chris Washburn at center with top pick Tellis Frank, a 6-10 forward-center, to help underneath.

Gene Shue takes over a Los Angeles Clipper team that won just 12 games last year. Phoenix also has a new coach in John Wetzel, whose team ended last season mired in a drug scandal.

Boston, the elite in the East, will start the season the way it finished the last — injured. Kevin McHale will be out until December after foot surgery and Bill Walton is not expected back until at least March. But Larry Bird, Robert Parish, Dennis Johnson and Danny Ainge return to form the most solid starting unit in the league.

WASHINGTON, WITH 5-3 Tyrone Bogues and 7-6 Manute Bol, will feature a lineup with the league's shortest player and the tallest player. Charles Barkley, the league's rebounding leader last year (14.6 rpg) leads the 76ers with Julius Erving gone. But the retirement of Jeff Ruland leaves Philadelphia without a legitimate center.

The New York area will have little to look forward to. Rick Pitino has taken over the Knicks and installed a running-pressing system that relies on a deep bench, which he does not have. Top draft pick Mark Jackson should add passing savvy to the attack, but without a rebounder to help Patrick Ewing the Knicks should stay near the bottom. New Jersey missed the playoffs for the first time in five seasons last year. The Nets improved their backcourt by adding John Bagley and top pick Dennis Hopson. However, they traded Dawkins and need a center to help Mike Gminski.

In the Midwest, John MacLeod takes over the Dallas Mavericks, who won the division but were eliminated in the first round of the playoffs by Seattle. Houston put its house in order by signing Ralph Sampson to a long-term contract, but the Rockets need to improve their backcourt if they are to contend for a league title.

THE JAZZ COMPLETED the biggest off-season trade, giving away Kent Benson for Darryl Dawkins and Mel Turpin in a three-way deal with New Jersey and Cleveland.

Sacramento named Russell coach and Willis Reed his assistant. First-round pick Kenny Smith has been impressive at point guard and will allow Reggie Theus to move to shooting guard.

Denver's season will ride on Calvin Natt returning to form after missing the year with a torn Achilles' tendon. San Antonio will play the season waiting to see if David Robinson will someday become a Spur.

Probably the most competitive division is the Central. Atlanta won a team-record 57 games but was blown out by Detroit in the playoffs. The Pistons took Boston to a seventh game in the conference finals.

Chicago drafted well, picking up Scottie Pippen and Horace Grant to help relieve scoring champion Michael Jordan (37.1 ppg).

Golfers vie for record purse

By Mike Rabun

SAN ANTONIO — A select field of 30 players embarks on the final tournament of the PGA season today with the richest prize in golf history awaiting the winner.

Despite the fact $4.5 million will be awarded this week, there has been criticism from some of the game's great names about the lucrative Nabisco Champions of Golf.

"I think the money is great," said Greg Norman, who qualified through a year-long points competition. "The bottom line is that it is great for us. But I don't think the money should count on the official money list. It puts too much emphasis on this one tournament."

Three separate competitions will take place this week at the par-70 Oak Hills Country Club course, all of them with rich payoffs.

$2 million at stake for the 72-hole tournament with the winner claiming $360,000. That is more than Ben Hogan made in his entire career. In addition, this week's tournament ends a year-long $1 million points race with the winner of that competition earning $175,000.

Finally, the tournament includes a 54-hole event in which Curtis Strange, Scott Simpson, Ben Crenshaw, Larry Nelson, Tom Kite, Dan Pohl, Fred Couples and David Frost will be vying for $1.5 million as representatives for eight different tour tournaments. This is also the culmination of a year-long points race.

Strange, for instance, represents the B.C. Open and if he outduels the other seven, that tournament will receive $500,000 to distribute to its various charities.

STRANGE COMES into the tournament as the year's leading money winner with $718,941 and leads the points race as well. If he wins this week, that total will swell to $1,253,941.

A number of players — Paul Azinger, Simpson, Larry Mize, Crenshaw and Kite among them — could pass Strange and claim the Arnold Palmer Award for the most money won this year.

'Pistol Pete' was basketball pioneer

Like most obsessions, I would guess, Pistol Pete Maravich's was a tough one for the owner to get a handle on.

He remembers a hot summer day in Louisiana when he was 12 and going one-on-one with his dreams.

"It must have been 105 degrees that day," Maravich says. "It was a Saturday afternoon and I was in the gym, all by myself, as usual. I would spend six to 10 hours a day there."

"I remember stopping after several hours and starting to cry. I went over to a corner and started asking myself questions. 'Other kids are out swimming and playing. Why am I here? Why do I have this desire? Why am I killing myself?'"

After a few minutes he put the questions aside and went back to work.

IN A HIGH SCHOOL junior varsity game, the puny, 5-foot, 12-year-old Maravich threw a bull's-eye bounce-pass behind his back, through an opponent's legs, to a teammate for an easy layup.

He was a marvel, a phenomenon, a dazzling ballhandler and shot creator.

He had some help. His dad, Press Maravich, was a college coach who

Scott Ostler/Los Angeles Times

designed hundreds of ballhandling and shooting drills to keep his son-prodigy constantly challenged.

They were partners in crime. They shared a dream.

"THE DREAM WAS for us to try to push basketball to the furthest limits possible," Maravich writes in his new book, "Heir to a Dream." His vision saw the basketball court as a spawning ground for physical excitement and originality.

That was a weird concept two decades ago, unless you were a Harlem Globetrotter. In 1966, when Pistol Pete came out whirling and passing and shooting at LSU, most coaches would bench you if you dribbled through your legs, let alone through someone else's legs.

Pistol's coach understood. Pistol's coach was his dad. Pistol averaged 44.2 points in his four years at LSU, more than anybody before or since.

Even when his remarkable scoring and playmaking continued in the National Basketball Association, Pete remained a misunderstood genius, a Vincent van Gogh of the hardwood. When his Atlanta Hawks played in Philadelphia, fans hung a banner: "Pistol Pete, why do hot dogs cost $2 million in Atlanta and 35 cents in Philly?"

"THAT BANNER REALLY summed up my career," Maravich says. Pistol had other problems. Bad teams, bad clinics. His mother drinking herself to death. Pete himself doing way too much alcohol-related partying.

Still, he played enough great basketball to make two All-Star team starting lineups, to win an NBA scoring title — he averaged 31.1 points in 1977 — and to be named to the Basketball Hall of Fame.

Now Pete, who just turned 40, is a born-again Christian, happily married, with two sons. He lives in rural Louisiana, does some public speaking, some television color work, some clinics, plays in an occasional old-timers' game.

He's coming out with four instructional videos, "Pete Maravich's Homework Basketball," featuring some of the crazy drills designed by Pete and Press, who died of cancer earlier this year.

"I'm just trying to push the game to its limits," Pete always told reporters.

The game would have evolved anyway, but surely Pistol speeded it along, paving the way for Magic Johnson, Michael Jordan and the others who continue to push it to its limits.

Hearns tries for fourth crown

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (UPI) — Thomas Hearns, who has strived for seven years to become boxing's first four-time champion, says he will make quick work of Juan Roldan tonight to accomplish that goal.

Thomas Hearns

something I've been dreaming about for a long time. A lot of people wish they could be in this position — not only to win four titles, but to win three or two or even one. Few men have ever made it to this point and I'm proud of that.

"The condition that Thomas Hearns is in, this fight cannot go 12 rounds."

Roldan agrees only that the bout will end quickly.

"Thomas won't make it past the fifth round," said Roldan, a 30-year-old Argentine.

Hearns said he will use his advantages in height and reach to keep Roldan away. At 6-foot-1, Hearns is six inches taller than his opponent and his 78-inch reach is 8 1/4 inches longer.

"Roldan is a Joe Frazier-type guy," Hearns said. "He wants to get inside. I want to make Roldan reach, lunge and try to hit me. Once I get him in that predicament, the fight will be over."

"HE'S THE ONE who will be lunging," Roldan said.

Hearns, of Detroit, is 44-2 with 37 knockouts. His losses were knockouts against Marvin Hagler and Ray Leonard. Roldan is 63-3-2 with 41 knockouts.

Hearns and Roldan are hoping a victory will lead to a rematch with Hagler, who held the 160-pound title for more than six years before losing to Leonard April 6. Hagler stopped Roldan in 10 rounds March 30, 1984, and stopped Hearns in three rounds April 15, 1985.

Hearns last fought Dennis Andries March 7, stopping him in 10 rounds to win the WBC light heavyweight title. He held the World Boxing Association welterweight championship in 1980-81 and the WBC junior middleweight crown from 1982-86.

Roldan's last bout was a ninth-round knockout over James Kinchen.

Freshman favored for Heisman

TAMPA, Fla. (UPI) — Sixth-ranked Auburn can bail the Downtown Athletic Club out of a jam Saturday.

The Tigers have allowed opposing rushers a mere 2.9 yards per carry this season and Auburn's swarming defense faces the challenge of stopping the nation's leading runner, Florida freshman Emmitt Smith. The Heisman Trophy, awarded annually by New York City's Downtown Athletic Club, has never been presented to a freshman.

With six weekends left in the regular season, the 1987 Heisman is there for the taking. If Smith enjoys a big day in Auburn, the Dec. 5 announcement date could prove the most embarrassing day in 53 years of Heisman awards. With a segment of the Heisman voters sure to dismiss Smith only because of his college class, another running back could win the award in a wide-open field.

"THE AWARD SAYS to the outstanding college football player of the United States," says Heisman voter Mick Elliott, college football editor of the Tampa Tribune. "There is no qualifier. Class status will, however, be a factor in the voting. If another running back gets it, I think it'll insult the award."

Smith, who carried the ball just five times in the season-opener against Miami, is leading all Division I-A rushers with 1,011 yards. He has gained 85 more yards than runner-up Gaston Green of UCLA, despite 13 less carries, and he has joined Herschel Walker as the only players in Southeastern Conference history to rush for 1,000 yards as freshmen.

"Our defense doesn't usually talk about opponents after a game, but after listening to them speak about Smith, there's no doubt they were impressed," said Louisiana State Coach Mike Archer after Smith gained 184 yards. "We tried everything possible to stop him, but he made play after play. I'd say right now that he's one of the best to ever play in the SEC."

"I THINK EMMITT deserves the Heisman at this point," says Neal Anderson, the former Florida tailback now starting for the Chicago Bears. "People haven't done things he's done and they're being mentioned for it. It's not only hype that wins it... it's how much you produce. Undoubtedly, he's going to be one of the best backs to play college football."

Notre Dame's Tim Brown became the Heisman's unofficial front runner Sept. 19, returning two punts for touchdowns against Michigan State on national television. Brown, the likely No. 1 pick in next spring's NFL draft, didn't crack the Heisman Top 10 last year despite posting better numbers as a junior.

The ninth-ranked Irish close with a brutal schedule — Alabama, Penn State and Miami — and it may become difficult to justify a Heisman vote for a player who does most of his damage returning punts. When Nebraska's Johnny Rodgers won the award in 1972, the wingback caught 55 passes in addition to his superb punt return skills.

"BROWN'S A GREAT athlete," Elliott said, "but if he didn't play for Notre Dame, would he even be a candidate?"

Unless Brown and Notre Dame both excel down the stretch, Heisman voters will be left contemplating running backs. No defensive player has won the Heisman and this year's top candidate, Ohio State linebacker Chris Spielman, has been hurt by his team's low profile. Spielman will also have to finish very strongly to match his numbers as a junior, when he placed 10th behind Vinny Testaverde.

The highest-placed returning player is versatile Gordie Lockbaum of Holy Cross, who finished fifth and attracted 32 first-place ballots last year. Playing in Division I-AA has virtually eliminated Lockbaum from Heisman consideration for some of the 1,050 voters who will be asked to fill in three choices.

GREEN HAS BEEN very consistent for the seventh-ranked Bruins, averaging 5.6 yards per carry with 10 touchdowns. Michigan State's Lorenzo White, who led the nation in rushing as a sophomore in 1985, is averaging just 4.3 yards per attempt and he struggled in key games against Florida State and Notre Dame.

If Smith burns the Auburn defense for his usual 177 yards as a starter, we may have Heisman history made the evening of Dec. 5 with the presentation to a freshman.

"You can't practice the way Emmitt Smith runs," says Alabama Coach Bill Curry. "It's a God-given talent."

Judge says don't bug Houdini

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — A judge presiding over the "Court of Historical Review" ruled Wednesday that legendary escape artist and magician Harry Houdini should be allowed to rest in peace and should not be bothered by further attempts to contact him in the beyond.

"I do have some concern about letting him rest in peace," said Municipal Court Judge George Choppelas, referring to Houdini, who promised his wife he would contact her after he died if he could.

Houdini died on Halloween Day in 1926 of an inflamed appendix ruptured by an unexpected blow to the abdomen from a college student while the magician was performing.

"Any further attempts (to contact Houdini) would be acts of futility," Choppelas said at the "hearing."

SINCE HOUDINI'S death, seances have been held every Oct. 31 to try to contact him, but every attempt has failed, including those made by Houdini's wife for a decade after his death.

The witnesses testifying in song, puns and nonsense at the hearing included professors from local colleges, city officials and a prominent psychic. Questioning the witnesses were U.S. Attorney Joseph Russo-niello, City Attorney Louise Renne and Attorney Frank Winston.

The "Court of Historical Review" has no legal standing but presents historical controversies in a full courtroom setting, featuring lawyers, judges and witnesses.

Proposed NHL Rink Changes

Proposed rink-size change fuels controversy in NHL

By Jeff Jacobs
The Hartford Courant

For the gifted centerman, it would furnish the precious gift of time and space. For left and right wingers, it would offer a chance to fly.

But for the plodding defenseman, it could be the nightmarish hockey innovation that makes him as extinct as the plodding dinosaur.

At issue are two ideas being bounced around the National Hockey League's think tank these days. Unofficially, some knowledgeable hockey people feel that the ideas are viable suggestions to keep today's substantially bigger and faster athletes from congesting obsolete rinks to the point of gridlock.

Change NHL rinks from the standard 200 feet by 85 feet to Olympic-sized 200 feet by 100 feet.

Keep the same size rinks for economic purposes, but move the nets out from the rear boards by about five feet. A 60-foot distance from blue line to goal would be maintained, but 10 feet would be squeezed from the neutral zone. The center-ice red line would be removed for everything except icing calls.

EDMONTON OILERS center Mark Messier, the perfect blend of size and speed, wants a larger ice surface. Hartford Whalers right winger Kevin Dineen agrees.

Boston Bruins General Manager Harry Sinden has been adamant in his defense of smaller rinks. Whalers Coach Jack Evans favors the "classic" 200-by-85 rink but also points out the problems created in undersized rinks in Boston, Buffalo and Chicago.

This might surprise people who saw him tuck in the corners for a tough Philadelphia team, but Flyers General Manager Bob Clarke favors bringing the goal line out, making the mid-zone smaller and eliminating the two-line pass. Perhaps even more surprising, Chicago center Denis Savard, who is a dazzling force when given ample ice space, likes the rinks exactly the way they are. New Jersey General Manager Lou Lamoriello and Calgary Coach Terry Crisp agree with Clarke.

"If they did make the ice surface larger, the entire style of play in the NHL would change," Evans said. "You would have to look for different players, and the training would be different from the development levels. I'd say a changeover of five players a team would be a modest guess. A lot of guys in the league right now would be out of work."

"I JUST LIKE it the way it is. It's the classic-style rink that the North American fan has grown used to. But we have some smaller rinks that create problems, too."

Sinden's Bruins play their home games in a rink that has been compared to a telephone booth. The Bruins say Boston Garden is 193 feet by 83 feet, but it seems smaller.

"They've got to build a new Boston Garden one of these years, and I'd like to see a grandfather clause put in where all the new buildings go to the large ice surface," said Dineen, who played in the 1984 Olympics and two world championships. "The Calgary Saddledome already has the ability to make either size rink."

"I'm going to give you arguments that a lot of other people will, but I really believe that the players have just gotten too big and too fast for the rinks (the average player weighs about 20 pounds more than players weighed 25 years ago). And I believe that the smaller rink causes too many injuries. Big, fast guys are blasting into each other. You won't see as many big, slow defensemen, but a guy like Mark Fusco who didn't stick in the NHL would still be playing."

MESSIER, ECHOING Dineen's comments, compared today's NHL games to pinball. Disagreeing with Sinden, the Oilers' power forward said that he thought fans would be willing to spend a few extra dollars to see a more skilled game.

How much would it cost teams to expand the width of a rink 15 feet? "Plenty, although I'm not sure how much," said David Andrews, Whalers vice president of finance and development. "It would involve tearing up the concrete, extending the piping for making ice and getting extra boards. Then, you'd be pulling out maybe 500-550 prime seats at $21.50 a game."

An architect walking around the Hartford Civic Center with Andrews Monday guessed that that work might cost upwards of $2 million. Multiply 500 seats by $21.50 and multiply that figure by 40 home games and you get $520,000 in lost ticket revenue. Of course, as Messier suggested, a $1 ticket increase would more than make up the difference.

"I think you can forget that option," Evans said. "You're talking about a lot of money."

"I'd like to see it," Crisp said. "You'll see more mobile players, and the game will flow better."

NFL fur coats hit market

CHICAGO (UPI) — The football fan who thinks he owns everything imaginable with the logo of his favorite NFL team on it is in for an expensive surprise.

Carol and Irwin Ware, furriers for the high fashion I. Magnin department store chain, now have the exclusive United States licensing rights to manufacture and sell furs bearing the official logos for all 28 NFL teams.

The first football furs are on display at Chicago's Michigan Avenue I. Magnin store in the Bears' colors of orange and blue.

"I think a lot of fans would want to buy a fur jacket," Irwin Ware said Wednesday while trying on a short orange-and-blue fur jacket with a large Bears' helmet design on the back. "I have a feeling it will go."

Several members of the Bears, including quarterback Jim McMahon and linebacker Mike Singletary, will model the jackets along with their wives at a Nov. 3 benefit.

The furs will come in a variety of styles, from the short varsity style to a long evening fur in all the colors of the 28 NFL teams, Ware said. Many will be reversible, with denim or leather on the non-fur side.

The first furs will be in the Bears' colors because "we want to see how it goes. We want to see what the people buy."

The furs will range in price from $700 to $3,000 or more.

"These people spend $50,000 on a skybox. What's $1,000 or $2,000 to them?" Ware asked.

Kentucky trackster dies

LEXINGTON, Ky. (UPI) — Rodriq McCravy, a 19-year-old University of Kentucky track athlete, was found dead today in his dormitory room, the university said. The cause of death was unknown and an autopsy was ordered.

The university trainer, Al Green, said McCravy had a "strenuous" workout Monday and a light practice Tuesday that was cut short when he complained about feeling ill.

"He did not complete his weightlifting because he didn't feel well," Green said. "However, he began feeling better, at dinner and studied. He talked to another track athlete on the telephone at 1:30 a.m. and went to bed."

McCravy's roommate at the Kirwan Tower dormitory heard "gurgling" noises about 5 a.m. and found McCravy had stopped breathing, the university's sports information office said.

Lexington fire department paramedics tried to revive McCravy, who was declared dead at the university medical center at 6:34 a.m.

McCravy, a sophomore from Louisville majoring in social work, competed in the hurdles and 400 meters as a freshman at Kentucky.

He finished sixth last season in the TAC National Junior Championships and set a Kentucky freshman record of 53.35 seconds in the 400-meter intermediate hurdles. He also ran for the 4x400 relay and outdoor sprint medley relay teams.

At Trinity High School in Louisville, McCravy was a two-time Kentucky High School Class AAA state champion in the 300-meter hurdles.

Sklar making it big as 'little' publisher

By Robin Rutan
Special to The Daily Iowan

The first thing that strikes you about Morty Sklar is the shyness. He has the habit of looking about to see if anyone is in earshot. If there is, he lowers his voice to a whisper. What he has to say comes out plainly, without a show of pretense.

He seems uncomfortable when talking about poetry, and you have to jar yourself to remember that he has published some of the best poets in America as well as a winner of the Nobel Prize for Literature.

Sklar, a UI graduate from Queens, N.Y., founded The Spirit That Moves Us Press in 1975. Today, he is still at it; in the world of small presses, that's a long time. His first issue was mimeographed. But through tenacity and effort, he began to attract more and more poets that lead to a better magazine.

In 1982 the translators of a Czech poet who was relatively unknown in America asked him to consider publishing a book entitled The Casting of Bells. He agreed to look at it.

SKLAR SAID: "My getting to publish the first collection in English in the U.S. of Jaroslav Seifert's The Casting of Bells in 1983 and his winning the Nobel Prize for Literature in 1984 was a real fluke. The people who translated that book from the Czech talked me into publishing it as soon as possible, as Seifert was 86 years old and on his deathbed. I had been very late in my publishing schedule, but I wanted him to have his book before he died."

Sklar ran off a small edition and offered it to the public. There wasn't much response. Choice Magazine and The London Times Literary Supplement gave good reviews. While sales of the book increased a little, Sklar gave no thought of a second printing.

When the Nobel Library solicited him for a copy, he thought that routine. What right had a small press operator to the expectation of publishing the winner of the highest literary award in the world?

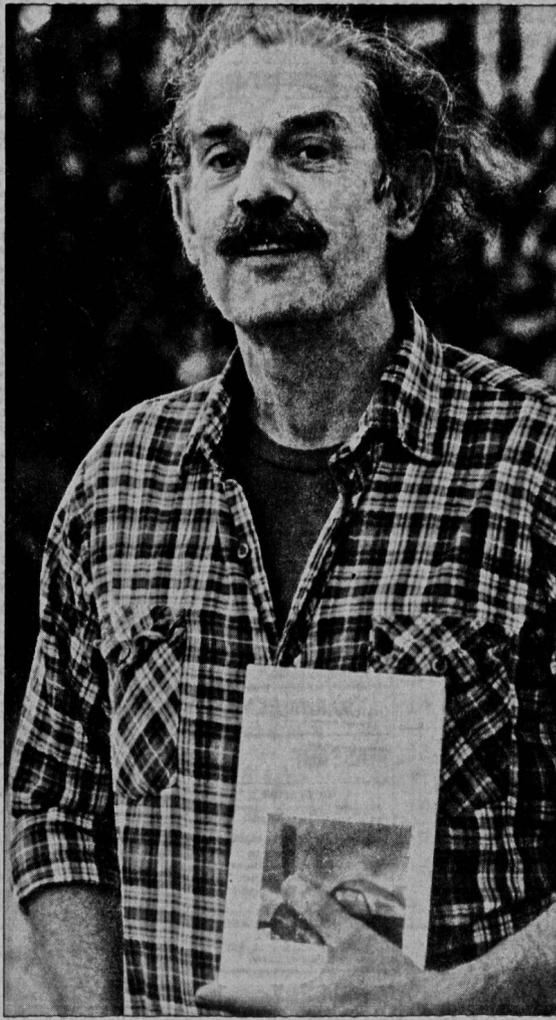

WHEN SEIFERT WON the Nobel Prize in 1984, Sklar felt vindicated as to his judgment. He has since put out two reprint editions of Bells.

Before Bells Sklar published in 1977 The Actualist Anthology, a collection of poets who lived and interacted in Iowa City in the early to mid-'70s. In 1980 came the first Editor's Choice, which presented reprints of fiction, essays, poetry and graphics from the world of the small press. He next published Nuke-Rebuke, a book which protested the dangers of the world we live in. Sklar followed this with Here's the Story in 1985.

He has published such writers as Marge Piercy, William Stafford, Jane Rule, Raymond Carver and Gary Snyder. He has published much fiction and poetry from those whose names meant little, whose work deserved a forum.

SKLAR'S LATEST anthology, just published, is Editor's Choice II: Fiction, Poetry and Art from the U.S. Small Press. Mary Biggs, editor of Primavera and the first woman to edit Library Quarterly, is the co-editor.

Choice II contains an interesting array of writers and visual artists. Smooth polish is blended with raw power to produce a book worth reading. The idea for the book was to let editors of small presses and "little" magazines pick out the best they had to offer. Then Sklar and Biggs chose the best grapes and pressed them into an issue which is 330 pages long.

Morty Sklar

On one page someone like Bukowski might appear, but on the next William Dickey and on the next page an unknown writer whose poem could have more appeal than any other. A diverse number of writers representing many schools of writing and coming from varying niches in the world of contemporary poets and fiction find a place in Choice. It's a good book and comes from one of the most in-touch presses in America. The Los Angeles Times called The Spirit That Moves Us Press "a handle on America poetry." It's an apt description.
