Gorbachev denounces Stalin
Commission to examine past crimes

MOSCOW—Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev told the first people Monday that Josef Stalin should be remembered primarily for his murder of conservatives who saw them as a threat to the Communist Party's national financial strategy. Stalin's decision to release the former Soviet leader's prison camp, the 1930s, under increasing attack from conservatives, has been hampered by the speed of the investigation, according to a New York Times report.

"We are moving forward with the investigation," Gorbachev said on Tuesday, November 3, 1987. "People's events are not isolated from current events. The history of liberals has always been a history of struggle against the authorities."

Smart Iowa-high school students gather at UI for conference

By John Bartelsr"son

More than 400 Iowa high school students and educators participating in workshops and panel discussions at the Iowa "Gifted Youth Conference" this week will likely have a better idea of what to expect from their future college visits. The conference is a two-day event, with keynote speaker Mike Reck and other representatives from various universities talking about what to expect when visiting college campuses. The conference also includes a variety of workshops and panel discussions on topics such as financial aid, college admissions, and career planning. Attendees will have the opportunity to network with other students and educators, as well as gain insight into the college application process. The conference is being held at the University of Iowa in Iowa City, and is open to all high school students and educators interested in learning more about the college experience.
What really matters?

Although it's not really a secret, the fact that UI Main Library — and a handful of other UI buildings — has no fire alarm or detector system probably comes as a surprise to most people. Why? Because safety and protection are two things most people take for granted or assume are already in place, unless they read about it in the news.

The story of Main Library begins with the state legislature passing an act in 1970 that required all buildings in Iowa to have fire safety systems. The act also required that the state of Iowa make a $20,000,000 bond issue to finance the fire safety improvements. However, the state didn't approve it.

In 1981, UI President Donald G.矢水 ordered the library to be closed for safety reasons. The library was closed for six months, and $650,000 was spent on a new system. But the state didn't approve it.

Unfortunately, the regents also requested money last year, but the state didn't approve it. Now, another year later, the state has rejected the request.

Is Ginsburg sinking?

President Reagan began a search for a conservative Supreme Court justice who would not be so involved in the cable case. This is not a popular position for a liberal in the Senate.

Ginsburg did not say what she would do if chosen for the Supreme Court. But, like any other liberal, she would probably have said that she would not take the job.

The big picture

Stark's effort to reintroduce his bill to give Main Library a face lift, but not to install fire safety systems; money used for building parking lots comes from a different source.

A jewel of a show

I attended the U2 concert in New York last night and was amazed by the performance. The band did an excellent job of engaging the audience, and the music was simply incredible.

Ginsburg isn't likely to make the leap to the Supreme Court. But, like any other liberal, she would probably have said that she would not take the job.

One more opinion

Regarding Glyn Payne's column in the Daily Iowan, I think it's an excellent take on the issue. But, like any other liberal, she would probably have said that she would not take the job.

Stock exchange signal

I have been studying the stock exchange and have noticed a trend that seems to be developing. Every time the Dow Jones Industrial Average hits a new high, the market tends to go down. This trend has been observed for several years, and it seems to be gaining momentum.

Texan hailed as 'very tough, but very fair'

Washington — William Sessions, who had been backed by the Justice Department, was sworn in Monday as the fourth director of the FBI.

At a ceremony with full police and military honors at FBI headquarters, Sessions was praised by President Reagan and his predecessor, CIA Director William Casey. The new director also attended the oath of office for a FBI agent.

Sessions, introducing Sessions with the comment that "his honesty and his courage are legendary," said the chief judge and "rayburn symbols his approach to the law."

"Every defendant must be treated with fairness and respect," Sessions said. "But if I find the evidence warrants it, I will bring the charges."

Sessions, who served as the U.S. attorney in Tennessee, said that under his administration, the FBI would "keep the public in mind in all its operations."

"The FBI is the only federal agency without a privacy act," Sessions said. "I've been told that the FBI has no complaints."

La Verne football's strategy is no strategy

By Scot Hartlieb

La Verne College Football Coach Jeff Pfister has adopted a unique approach to strategy this season, and the results have been interesting.

"I've tried to stay away from having a set plan," Pfister said. "I believe in letting the game unfold, and then you have to adjust accordingly."

Pfister believes that his philosophy, which has been in place for four years, has worked well for the team. "We're not a team that's going to rely on one play or one formation," Pfister said. "We're going to try to take advantage of what the defense is giving us."

Iowa athletic gifts exceed $3.5 million
Private giving through the Hawkeye Fund for men's and women's athletics at the University of Iowa has exceeded $3.5 million so far this year.

Contributions through the fund assist Iowa athletics in a number of areas, including salaries and improvements and travel costs.

The growth in support resulted in a 25 percent increase in Iowa's membership. Iowa's 12,000 athletic contributors made 840 gifts in 1986, the most since the Hawkeye Fund was established in 1974.

"I continue to be impressed by the generosity and commitment of the fans who support the Hawkeye programs," said Athletics Director Gary Barta.

"By supporting our coaches and student-athletes, they've helped Iowa women's sports continue to grow.

Christian Great, Iowa women's athletics director, echoed Elliott's sentiments. "Iowa athletics greatly benefits from private support."
By A. Hammond-Kurzine
The Daily Iowan

Iowa's basketball team may have found its spark during the 1988-89 season, and this year's team is poised to take advantage of that.

Iowa's biggest asset is its defense. Last year, the Hawkeyes allowed their opponents to score an average of 62.7 points per game, which was the lowest in the Big Ten. This year, Iowa wants to improve on that by holding its opponents to even fewer points.

The team is led by senior guard Ray Williams, who averaged 14.4 points per game last season. Williams is joined by junior guard Courtney Sims, who averaged 12.3 points per game.

Iowa also has a strong frontcourt led by senior center Adam Woodbury, who averaged 13.1 points and 9.9 rebounds per game last season. Junior forward Gabriel Olaseni joins Woodbury in the starting lineup.

The Hawkeyes' biggest challenge this season will be to improve their three-point shooting. Last year, Iowa made just 31.6% of its three-point attempts.

Iowa will need to continue its strong defense if it wants to compete for a Big Ten title this season. The Hawkeyes will have to hold their opponents to under 60 points per game to have a chance at a conference championship.

Iowa's schedule features several tough opponents, including Michigan, Ohio State, and Purdue. The Hawkeyes will need to perform well against these teams if they want to make a run at the tournament.

Overall, Iowa has the talent and experience to make a strong run in the Big Ten this season. With a focus on defense and shooting, the Hawkeyes could be in the mix for a conference title.
