Larson victorious over Kubby in tight race; Horowitz wins unopposed

By Joseph Levy
The Daily Iowan

Incumbents William Ambrisco and George Strait and newcomers Randy Larson and Susan Horowitz all won election to the Iowa City Council Tuesday.

Ambrisco and Strait retained their at large seats by outdistancing challenger Dale Gerot. Ambrisco took 3,697 votes and Strait tallied 2,948. Gerot received 1,844 votes. Mary Jo Streb, who dropped out of the running a few weeks after announcing her candidacy this summer, still received 1,122 votes.

Horowitz ran unopposed in district A and netted the largest vote-count of any candidate with a total of 3,951 votes.

In the closest race Larson defeated Kubby by 179 votes for the council's district C seat 2,821 to 2,642.

Kubby won that election among voters in district C — the northwest portion of the city — by a wide margin, 825 to 620, but district councilors are chosen at large by city voters. The candidates must, however, live in the district.

THE FOUR WILL join councilors Darrel Courtney, Kate Dickson and John McDonald, who were not up for re-election this year, on the council. Johnson County Auditor Tom Slockett called the voter turnout "middle-of-the-road" for an Iowa City election.

"There weren't any variations from the 1985 voting trend," Slockett said, explaining the lack of a mayoral race keeps voters away.

"The major factor is in Iowa City we don't vote for mayor," he said. The mayor is chosen by the seven council members themselves.

Ambrisco, who is currently mayor, said he would accept a re-nomination if the other six councilors decide to support him.

"That's just something we just don't think about," Ambrisco said. "It's never happened before. It would be unprecedented."

"I WOULD PREFER it would be a unanimous vote for the new mayor," he added.

Larson said he didn't know who he would support to be the next mayor, but said Ambrisco and previous mayor McDonald would be excellent choices.

"Bill Ambrisco and John McDonald are two of the finest mayors we've ever had," Larson said.

Horowitz would not commit support for any mayoral candidate. See Council, Page 7A

China warned of missile sales to Iran

By Daniel Southerland
Washington Post

BEIJING — A senior U.S. official said Tuesday he has warned his Chinese counterparts that Beijing's sales of Silkworm missiles to Iran could erode American domestic support for U.S.-China relations, including further sales of high technology to China.

But Michael Armacost, undersecretary of state for political affairs, gave no that indication the Chinese have changed their position that they are not selling weapons to Iran.

When weapons of Chinese origin "hit American flagships and injure Americans and also are directed against friendly nations in the (Persian) Gulf, this has political impact in the United States and potentially erodes support for the important relationships we have developed," Armacost said at a press conference.

AIDS workshop presented to rhetoric groups

By John Bartenhagen
The Daily Iowan

Informational workshops held yesterday and today in the Union Ballroom are offering about 4,000 UI rhetoric students a chance to learn more about AIDS.

UI Rhetoric Chairman Doug Trank said all rhetoric sections were scheduled to attend a presentation during the regularly scheduled class times either Tuesday or today.

The program was coordinated and presented by UI Student Health Services Director Mary Khowassah and Health Iowa Program Director Barb Petroff, he said.

Petroff said the comprehensive education AIDS program is one of the first of its kind.

"Very little is being done on other college campuses in the way of AIDS education," Petroff said. "I think we're doing some trailblazing in the area of AIDS education."

KRIS CARLE, a rhetoric graduate instructor who attended two Tuesday morning sessions, said he thought the program, which included an explanation of how the disease attacks the immune system, as well as information on proper condom use and the availability of testing in Iowa City, was worthwhile.

"I learned a little bit more despite the fact that I've given several speeches and am generally well informed about AIDS, so if I got something out of it, I'm sure my students did, too," he said. "I think, though, they could have made the presentation more concrete by showing the incidence of AIDS in Iowa and especially at the university. I think that would have made people say, 'Wow, this is really around.'"

Although some instructors made attendance optional, Carle said he required all of his students to go to the presentations.

"I THINK IT WILL help my classes in two ways — it gives us a chance to talk about a controversial issue, and I'm going to use the opportunity to talk about and evaluate an outside speaker," he said.

Bill Jacobs, a graduate instructor in rhetoric, said since the workshop was announced, students have brought up the subject of sexually transmitted diseases several times in his class.

"The workshop is a really valuable program," he said. "It will benefit the whole university community because the more knowledge disseminated about the subject, the better."

But another graduate instructor of rhetoric, who declined to be identified, said although the program's purpose is admirable, it is unfair to take an entire day away from the rhetoric program.

"I'M GLAD THE university is doing something because it seems the students are curious about it — it comes up in class quite a bit," he said. "But can you justify taking a day out of rhetoric classes?"

"I don't see rhetoric as a service class, but I know a lot of first-year T.A.'s do. People see it as a support group from time to time, but I don't," he said. "It's more important to me that they do a lot of writing and reading."

Schedule of courses changes format

By Scott Hauser
The Daily Iowan

It's not available at newsstands, but UI students in the habit of thumbing through newspapers the size of the New York Post or the Village Voice will probably feel comfortable picking up a new tabloid at the Registration Center.

Although the news many students read may be just as frightening or disheartening as a Post story, what UI students will be looking for in the new tabloid is an available class.

The UI spring 1988 semester schedule of courses has had a facelift — the traditional 8 1/4 by 11-inch, stapled, magazine-style schedule has been replaced by an 11 by 17-inch, unbound, tabloid-sized newspaper — about the width of, but a little longer than, a folded standard newspaper.

PRINTED ON WHITE newsprint, the new 94-page schedule contains all the registration and class information previous schedules contained, but has no advertising and is printed in two columns instead of three.

The change was met with disdain by some seasoned class schedulers.

"Just as far as the physical size, it's a pain," UI orientation adviser Julie Helling said. "It's big, it's not convenient, it all comes apart like a newspaper and it doesn't fold up as well."

She said she doubted the new schedule could withstand the semesterlong leafing and browsing advisers and most students do when considering which classes to take.

UI Liberal Arts Student Association Vice President Paul Oetken agreed, saying the new schedule has more of a newspaper format's bad characteristics and few of the magazine's good ones.

"I THINK IT'S awful," Oetken said. "This thing, it gets ink all over your hands for one thing. It's bulky. Its pages fall out."

UI Associate Registrar Catherine Pietrzyk said the UI changed the format because the new schedule is being printed by the UI Printing Service instead of being handled by an independent firm.

The independent firm — University Communications of Rahway, N.J. — went out of business about the same time the printing service acquired the equipment necessary to print the new schedule, she said, so the UI decided to have the printing service publish it.

The new schedules will probably cost the UI a little more than the old ones in total cost because the magazine-type schedule was subsidized by the ads, Pietrzyk said.

THE TABLOID FORMAT, however, is cheaper for the UI to publish than the magazine format, she said.

The UI orders about 32,000 copies of the schedule for the fall semester. See Schedule, Page 7A

Simon to visit today

Democratic presidential candidate Sen. Paul Simon, D-Ill., will visit Iowa City today.

Simon will give an address to the Iowa City Foreign Relations Council at the Iowa City Congregational United Church, 30 N. Clinton St., at noon.

He will then proceed to an official opening of his Iowa City campaign office at 13 S. Linn St. at 1:30 p.m. and a meeting with Johnson County Democrats at the Iowa City Public Library, 123 S. Linn St. in Meeting Room A at 1:45 p.m.

Fulbright awards given

Five UI students have received Fulbright scholarships for overseas study for the 1987-88 academic year.

The students include Nicholas McNamara of West Des Moines, Iowa, a 1987 UI graduate; Susan Garzon of Iowa City, a UI doctoral degree candidate in anthropology; Peter Waldor of South Orange N.J., a 1987 UI master of fine arts graduate in poetry; Cynthia A. Humes of Fort Dodge, Iowa, a doctoral degree candidate majoring in Asian religions; and Johnathan Bascom of Keats, Kan., a doctoral degree candidate in geography.

Japanese honor UI dean

UI Dean of Continuing Education Emmett Vaughan has become only the second American inducted into the Japan Risk Management Society, a Japanese association of professors of risk management and insurance.

Vaughan, an insurance professor in the UI College of Business, was recognized by the society for his contributions to risk theory and risk management theory. He received the honor last month during a 10-day trip to Japan where he delivered a paper titled "Recent Developments in Risk Management Theory" to the society.

USI honors state senator

United Students of Iowa will honor State Sen. Richard Varn, D-Solon, with its "Friend of the Student" award at USI's Fall Legislative Assembly this weekend at the Iowa State Memorial Union in Ames.

The award is being given in recognition of Varn's consistent commitment and service to Iowa's students, according to USI Legislative Director Scott Brown.

As chairman of the Iowa Senate Education Appropriations Subcommittee, Varn has helped secure funding for the state work-study program and other state financial aid programs, Brown said.

The award will be presented by students at a luncheon during the assembly. The event is open to the public, and interested students are urged to attend.

'Free China Night' held

The UI Chinese Students' Association is sponsoring a "Free China Night" Saturday at 6 p.m. on the first floor Main Lounge of the Union.

The event will feature food and a two hour show featuring Chinese folk dances, Kung-Fu, a traditional fashion display and music performed with traditional Chinese instruments. Tickets cost $5.50 per person.

In conjunction with the event, a Chinese cultural exhibition will be held this week in the Old Capitol Center. The exhibition will feature live performances of Chinese music and martial art from 12 to 1 p.m. daily.

Funeral talk sponsored

The Memorial Society of Iowa River Valley, a local non-profit consumer group which deals with funeral services, will hold a discussion on the 1987 change in Iowa law which allows pre-paying for funeral services and merchandise.

The discussion will be held in the Iowa City Public Library Meeting Room A Nov. 8 at 2 p.m. Discussion panel members will include Iowa City Attorney Jean Bartley and several Iowa City morticians.

The panel will discuss the problems consumers might face under the new law, and listen to plans for implementing the pre-paying service.

County supervisors ponder building new Butler Bridge

By Craig Sterrett
The Daily Iowan

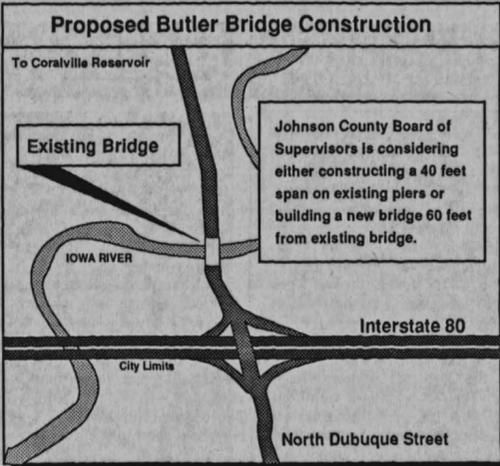

Johnson County officials are considering building a $1.34 million bridge on the Iowa River on a heavily traveled route between Iowa City's North Dubuque Street and the Coralville Reservoir.

There would be little difference between the cost of replacing or restoring Butler Bridge on Old Highway 218 located about a half mile north of town, structural engineer Noel Willis told the Johnson County Board of Supervisors Tuesday.

Assigned by the board to find the most feasible way to deal with the 24-foot-wide, deteriorating bridge in June 1987, Willis said it would cost $1.13 million to place a new 40-foot-wide span on the existing piers — $210,000 less than the cost of building a new bridge.

The Johnson County Board of Supervisors will vote Thursday to post a 16-ton weight limit on the existing bridge. The board will also set a date for an informative public hearing for people who frequently use the bridge.

ROAD SALT, continuous pounding of heavy traffic and aging have deteriorated the bridge deck, Willis said.

Although its piers are in good condition, the bridge deck has deteriorated so badly the bridge can only be used for two or three more years, Johnson County Engineer Gene Bane said.

Willis said there would be "some difference" between the lifespan of a rehabilitated and of a replaced bridge. "After all those piers are 50 years old," "A new one is the only way to go," Supervisor Harold Donnelly said.

A new 40-foot-wide bridge would be located 60 feet from the present bridge to keep the highway open during its construction.

Iowa Department of Transportation officials say they do not think a bicycle and pedestrian path is necessary. The 40-foot width is enough to handle the large amounts of bicycle traffic going to and from the reservoir, Willis said.

An Iowa City man was sentenced Friday to serve 270 days in Johnson County Jail after pleading guilty to two charges of assault and one charge of false imprisonment in connection with a June 14 domestic abuse incident, according to Johnson County District Court records.

Charles E. Phillips, 29, 32 Sunrise Village, allegedly entered the mobile home where he and his wife were residing and began hitting her, saying he was going to rape her, according to court records.

Phillips forcibly took her to a bedroom where he kept hitting her, resulting in bruises on her face, arms and hip, a fracture near her left eye, bruised ribs and bleeding kidneys, according to court records.

Phillips was given credit by the court for 47 days previously served, according to court records. An appeal bond was set for $7,500.

An Iowa City man was charged with assault without intent to cause serious injury Tuesday after he allegedly beat a female victim, according to Johnson County District Court records.

Thomas J. Humphrey, 25, 203 Myrtle Ave., beat and dragged the victim across the floor of his residence on Oct. 27. After doctors examined the victim at Mercy Hospital, it was determined that the victim sustained a sprained ring finger, according to court records.

A preliminary hearing in the case was set for Nov. 17.

An Iowa City man was charged with interference with official acts Tuesday when he tried to damage a police car after he was arrested Friday, according to Johnson County District Court records.

David W. Hart, 24, 514 N. Dubuque St., was arrested on an unlisted charge and placed in the back seat of a police car with another subject. Hart then placed his legs over the other subject and began kicking the rear window of the squad car, according to court records.

Hart was taken out of the car to prevent damage to the car and possible injury to the other subject, according to court records. No damage was reported to the police vehicle, according to court records.

An Iowa City man was charged with criminal trespass Tuesday after he passed out on a bench inside Van Allen Hall early Monday morning, according to Johnson County District Court records.

David C. Coffey, 33, 1122 E. Market St., was found passed out by a custodian who could not wake Coffey, according to court records. Coffey had been issued a criminal trespass warning by Campus Security effective until April 1988 for all UI buildings and property, according to court records.

Student Senate fills vacancy Olson appointed to take Saxton's former seat

By Paula Roesler
The Daily Iowan

The recent resignation of former UI Student Senate Executive Associate Amy Saxton prompted the controversial appointment Tuesday of Sen. Olson to the seat for the remainder of the 1987-88 senate session.

The senate voted 12-10 to appoint Olson, who defeated Family Housing Senator Randy Hewitt in the contest.

Saxton said Tuesday she was asked to resign from the seat because of time conflicts she had due to a heavy class load.

One of the executive associate's main duties is to chair the Senate University Appointments Committee.

Hewitt is a member of the appointments committee and several senators felt this made him the more qualified candidate.

BUT OLSON, an at large senator, said his lack of experience on the committee should not be the senate's determining factor in filling the executive associate vacancy, and said he could serve as capably on the committee as Hewitt.

After appointments are made by the committee, Olson said, the executive associate becomes a communicator between the senate and the CAC, the Interfraternity Council and the Panhellenic Associations Council and other UI committees.

"I think the senate did think I was stronger at (acting as a communicator)," he said. "That outweighed the fact that I hadn't served on the appointments committee. I think they had the faith, at least 12 people did, that I could adjust to the appointments committee and come in and chair that."

"I THINK I'M MORE capable, and I think the senate thinks I'm more capable in other duties the executive associate has as far as communicating ideas and being able to interact with the different groups within the senate itself," Olson added.

Olson said Hewitt will continue to serve on the University Appointments Committee.

"I talked to Randy and he's still serving on the appointments committee and now I have to come in and chair," he said. "I don't know if it's going to be awkward or not but we talked about it. We were mutually supportive no matter how it came out."

BEFORE THE VOTE, Hewitt said the nominating committee found him slightly less qualified than Olson, but added his work on the appointments committee should have been a more important consideration.

"I think Dave just came closer to what the other executives believe an executive should be because he was more active in the Allied Student Advocacy Party," Hewitt said. "I am a member of ASAP. I am also a person who believes in non-partisan politics. I don't think the senate needs to be broken up into two groups."

The senate meeting went into a 30-minute executive session to discuss the fairness of the nominating committee's interviews of the candidates and evaluate each candidate's merits.

Sen. Mike Wild said there should have been more organization in the process to fill the vacant executive seat.

"They used different questions when the appointments committee interviewed the two," Wild said. "There was a question that maybe there was some prompting of candidates."

Olson was elected to the senate last March and Hewitt is serving his second term.

LASA passes proposal for B.G.S. Wants program to have specific course-focus

By Monica Seigel
The Daily Iowan

The UI Liberal Arts Student Association Tuesday passed a proposal it hopes will ensure that students in the UI Bachelor of General Studies Program focus on a specific course of study.

The B.G.S. degree, according to the UI Schedule of Courses, is "designed to give students maximum flexibility in planning their academic programs."

But LASA's Academic Affairs Committee, the sponsor of the proposal, is concerned some students in the program neglect to effectively tie together the course of study they create.

"There is a concern that B.G.S. majors can have a lack of focus in their course of study," Academic Affairs Committee member Ann Naffier said.

The committee is also concerned that the B.G.S. major is not always taken seriously, despite its being a legitimate and beneficial program, Naffier said.

"People look down on the degree, like it's not a real degree, but that's not true," she said. "It's an excellent program for creative students who want to plan their own degree. We'd like to make it a little more prestigious."

The present B.G.S. requirements for graduation include:

- completion of general education requirements
- completion of at least 36 hours of advanced course work at the UI, no more than 18 of which from any one department may count toward the requirement
- achievement of at least a 2.0

cumulative grade-point average

• no more than 40 hours of credit in one academic department may count toward the 124 semester hours required for graduation.

The LASA proposal recommends the requirement of 36 hours of advanced coursework be retained, but that they be channeled into two to four departments. The proposal also recommends a minimum of nine hours and maximum of 18 hours be taken from each of those departments.

LASA also recommends B.G.S. majors be required to complete a thesis, practicum or internship-type project for three semester hours of credit, to "suitably demonstrate the coherence of their course of study," the proposal stated.

LASA members debated the B.G.S. project recommendation at length, with proponents claiming it would make B.G.S. students more accountable and opponents arguing it would make the B.G.S. degree similar to an honors degree.

Although several amendments were offered to strike or change the B.G.S. project recommendation, all were rejected.

UI Liberal Arts Office of Academic Programs Assistant Director Patricia Addis said coherence in the B.G.S. program has been the topic of much discussion within the college, and will be addressed at the UI College of Liberal Arts Educational Policy meeting Monday.

LASA Vice President and EPC student representative Paul Oetken said LASA's proposal will be recommended for consideration by the EPC at Monday's meeting.

High court nominee troubles lawmaker

WASHINGTON — A senior House Democrat said Tuesday he was "troubled" by Supreme Court nominee Douglas Ginsburg's actions as a top Justice Department official in the sale of Conrail, the federally owned freight railroad.

Rep. John Dingell, D-Mich., chairman of the House Energy and Commerce Committee, expressed dissatisfaction with Ginsburg's response to late 1985 allegations that Ginsburg's department subordinates destroyed documents to frustrate Dingell's review of the proposed sale of Conrail to Norfolk Southern Corp., another major Eastern freight railroad.

Deficit talks cause alarm on Wall Street

NEW YORK — Stock prices skidded Tuesday, as the Dow Jones industrial average fell 50.56, ending a weeklong advance as Wall Street became alarmed at slow progress on budget-cutting talks in Washington and worried about the weak dollar.

Traders said the dollar's lower value and the apparent lack of movement in talks between the Reagan administration and Congress on reducing the budget and trade deficits took a toll on stock prices.

Branstad: Iowa faces huge deficit

DES MOINES — Gov. Terry Branstad admitted to a coalition of women's and elderly groups Tuesday the state budget faces a $150 million deficit next year, the first time he has publicly acknowledged the size of the potential debt.

The Republican also criticized the legislature for underfunding his request to boost spending on elderly respite care and said the state must do a better job of addressing the needs of low-income families who have no health insurance.

Falwell quits politics to preach gospel

WASHINGTON — Television preacher and political activist Jerry Falwell, acknowledging money problems at his own ministry, said Tuesday he is withdrawing from politics to spend full time expanding his church and television enterprise.

"I'm moving from politics to the pulpit," Falwell told a news conference. "... I am officially resigning as president of the Moral Majority and the Liberation Federation. I'm now rededicating my life to preaching the gospel."

Safety of NutraSweet questioned

WASHINGTON — Two people who believe NutraSweet caused them to have seizures and five scientists said Tuesday they have doubts about the safety of the artificial sweetener.

Testifying before the Senate Committee on Labor and Human Resources, the scientists said until the questions are resolved, foods and beverages should be labeled to show how much of the sweetener they contain.

But Food and Drug Commissioner Frank Young told the committee: "We do not have any medical or scientific evidence that undermines our confidence in the safety of aspartame," the chemical compound in NutraSweet.

Reagan to meet Gorbachev in Moscow

MOSCOW — President Ronald Reagan has agreed to meet Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev next year in Moscow where an accord slashing strategic nuclear arsenals by 50 percent could be signed, Soviet and U.S. officials said Tuesday.

Viktor Karpov, the head of the Soviet Foreign Ministry's Arms Control Department, told the official Tass news agency a proposal for one summit in the United States and one in Moscow was contained in a letter Gorbachev sent to Reagan via Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze, who visited Washington last week.

Politburo member dodges questions

MOSCOW — Alexander N. Yakovlev, a member of the ruling Politburo, talks a lot about glasnost, the official policy of public openness, but displayed very little of it Tuesday at a rare meeting with the press.

Yakovlev, who is head of the propaganda department of the Communist Party Central Committee, defended the secret nature of Communist Party meetings and fended off questions on a variety of other subjects.

Soviet-made arms meant for IRA seized

BREST, France — French officials said Tuesday they seized more than 150 tons of arms and explosives headed for the Irish Republican Army, including thousands of machine guns and 20 Soviet-made surface-to-air missiles.

Customs officials said the arms confiscated from the Panamanian-registered Eksund II cargo ship apparently were all Soviet made.

Bomb explodes near U.S. commander

KUWAIT — A bomb concealed beneath a police truck exploded Tuesday in an area where the commander of U.S. forces in the Persian Gulf was consulting Kuwaiti officials on how to defend the oil-rich emirate against Iranian missile attacks.

Plans for deficit reduction floundering

By Karen Tumulty
Los Angeles Times

WASHINGTON — White House and congressional negotiators focused Tuesday on a $30 billion deficit reduction plan that combines equal amounts of spending cuts and taxes; but participants said the talks that began last week in an atmosphere of urgency were meandering.

While Democrats complained that the White House negotiators were inflexible on taxes, Republicans charged that Democrats were unyielding in their refusal to consider further domestic spending cuts.

As a result of the inability to agree on a basic strategy, every proposal being presented behind the closed doors of the meeting room was going up "in a cloud of smoke," said one disheartened negotiator, Rep. Silvio Conte, R-Mass.

AT THE SAME TIME, partisan friction was building with the approach of the deadline for averting a painful automatic spending cuts, now only two weeks away. Each side has begun speculating that the other might be trying to scuttle the talks for political reasons.

"We're beginning to suspect each other's motives," Rep. Trent Lott, R-Miss., said.

The immediate proposal before the negotiators was a plan offered by Senate Budget Committee Chairman Lawton Chiles, D-Fla., and his House counterpart, Rep. William Gray III, D-Pa. They suggested raising taxes and cutting spending by $10 billion each this year and added a list of other deficit-reduction measures worth another $10 billion. Those additional steps would include sale of certain government assets and increasing Internal Revenue Service enforcement — measures that critics quickly denounced as easy but unreliable solutions.

LOTT DENOUNCED the plan as cutting domestic programs only "a dribble" of $2.8 billion.

"How ridiculous can you be?" he asked rhetorically. "The Democrats are totally inflexible."

Democrats were making similar complaints about the White House which they said was turning aside all proposals for higher taxes. Shortly after the stock market plummeted Oct. 19, President Ronald Reagan had promised that everything but Social Security would be "on the table" in negotiations to cut the deficit.

Reagan, speaking at a Rose Garden ceremony, urged further deficit cuts but repeated the public warnings of some economists that too many new taxes too soon would "chill the economy."

Switzerland releases Iran-Contra documents

Los Angeles Times

WASHINGTON — The Swiss government Tuesday turned over crucial bank records to U.S. investigators in the Iran-Contra case, making it likely that independent counsel Lawrence Walsh will seek a sweeping indictment alleging that conspirators illegally diverted funds from arms sales to Iran and tried to obstruct justice.

Review of the thousands of pages of documents will require several weeks and perhaps delay any charges until next year, sources familiar with the case said.

The release of the records ended a contentious, 11-month legal battle in courtrooms and government agencies in the United States and Switzerland. The documents, widely considered critical to Walsh's investigation, are expected to fill a substantial gap in the sensitive probe.

ACQUISITION OF THE records

clears the way for a broad indictment that would include the funds-diversion charges. Sources outside Walsh's office had believed that he might bring only the obstruction-of-justice charges as a first step, if there were a long delay in compiling the "paper trail" needed to support the conspiracy counts that cover the diversion allegations.

In response to Tuesday's action, Walsh said only that he was pleased at the Swiss move. He expressed thanks to Swiss officials and the Justice Department's office of international affairs for their assistance, and added that his office would "proceed promptly with our review of this evidence."

The records are of Swiss bank accounts controlled by former National Security Council aide and Marine Lt. Col. Oliver North, retired Air Force Major Gen. Richard Secord and his business partner, Albert Hakim, and arms dealer Manucher Ghorbanifar.

Reagan selects woman to lead Labor

By Oswald Johnston
Los Angeles Times

WASHINGTON — President Ronald Reagan Tuesday nominated Ann Dore McLaughlin, a former undersecretary of the Department of the Interior and a career public relations executive, to be secretary of labor.

If she is confirmed by the Senate, where no serious opposition is expected, McLaughlin would replace William Brock III, who resigned last month to run the presidential campaign of Senate Minority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan.

McLaughlin, who also has served in public relations posts at the Environmental Protection Agency and at the Treasury but has no professional experience in labor relations, "will give the Labor Department decisive and forceful handling," Reagan said when he presented his nominee at a ceremony in the Rose Garden. "Besides," he quipped, "if she's handled John McLaughlin this long, she can handle anything."

MCLAUGHLIN IS MARRIED to John McLaughlin, a well-known combative conservative political commentator and television talk show host.

With the resignation in September of Secretary of Transportation Elizabeth Dole to work full-time on her husband's campaign, McLaughlin would be the only woman in the Reagan Cabinet.

McLaughlin noted that the first woman to fill a Cabinet post, Frances Perkins, was a predecessor as labor secretary in the Franklin Roosevelt administration. "As the second woman to undertake this privilege, I am indeed aware of the challenges," she said.

There appeared to be little sentiment among Democrats or labor unions for opposing the nomination.

"WE'RE GOING TO take a pretty good look at her, but it doesn't seem like she's drawing any serious opposition," said Paul Donovan, a spokesman for the Senate Labor and Human Resources Committee, which is headed by Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass. He said that the panel has not decided when it will hold hearings on the nomination.

AFL-CIO President Lane Kirkland said his organization was "able to work constructively" with the Department of Labor under Brock and expects "a similar relationship" with the department under McLaughlin's leadership.

Police bust armed man for threats to Shultz

WASHINGTON (UPI) — An unemployed Vietnam veteran accused of threatening to kill Secretary of State George Shultz was arrested at a motel Tuesday and found armed with "enough ammunition to fight off an army," authorities said.

The man, identified as Edward Gallo, 41, was being held in the District of Columbia jail for psychological testing and was ordered to appear Friday for a preliminary hearing in U.S. District Court, a spokesman for the U.S. Attorney's office said. A police spokesman said Gallo will be formally charged with threatening to kill a public official.

Gallo, who lives in Worcester, Mass., was arrested at 8:20 a.m. at the Regency Congress Inn in Washington, officials said.

There was a brief struggle when Gallo was arrested and a police officer's gun was fired, but nobody was hit, a District of Columbia police spokesman said.

District of Columbia police had been alerted Monday night that Gallo had come to Washington allegedly to kill Shultz, authorities said.

Shultz was informed of the threat but had no reaction, said State Department spokesman Charles Redman.

Days of decision

With Iowa's first-in-the-nation caucuses just three months away, political attention is focusing more and more on America's heartland. Consequently, polls by The New York Times, Gallup, CBS News and other national opinion indices are appearing with a frequency exceeded only by the candidates themselves.

The political attention is, of course, good news for Iowans. Not only does it offer the first opportunity to hear the views of those running for the nation's highest elected office, but Iowa's relatively small population allows for unusually personal contact with the candidates.

But the mere appearance of the candidates in the state does not ensure an informed voting decision in the February caucuses or the November general election. All the political rallies, ribbon cutting ceremonies, panel discussions and church-basement dinners with the presidential hopefuls don't amount to anything more than empty symbols of a decaying democracy if the people of Iowa (and the nation) fail to take full advantage of the political power entrusted to them.

In the remaining months before the political process shifts into high gear, the voters of the state and the nation should begin to take notice of the subtle — and the not so subtle — differences between the candidates. Clearly, the nomination in both major parties is still up in the air, awaiting the verdict of the crucial undecided votes. That means the race for the White House remains anything but a foregone conclusion. Smart voters won't miss the chance to actively participate in making the decision in 1988.

Little White lies

On Monday, White House and congressional officials moved quickly to quell reports that cuts in Social Security benefits and services were being proposed as a way to fight the federal deficit.

According to White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater, "The president's feeling is very strong that Social Security is not one of those programs that we should be tampering with." Sound reasoning — too bad he's lying.

On the same day that Fitzwater made the assertion that the president wasn't looking to reduce Social Security benefits, the Supreme Court had an assertion of its own to make. The high court denied a Reagan administration appeal designed to free the government from carefully monitoring Social Security payments to people unable to manage their own affairs and collection of benefits.

So what we see is Reagan's hired "mouth" telling citizens that he's not about to tamper with Social Security benefits. Yet simultaneously, the president is asking the Supreme Court to say, "Sure, if those who receive Social Security benefits are too mentally or physically handicapped to make sure they get what they're entitled to, tough paycheck." Appropriately, the Supreme Court said forget it.

In the past year or so, several of Reagan's shortcomings have come to light — the most annoying of these being that this man cannot be believed at face value. There's an old adage that warns one to take things with a grain of salt. In this case a salt lick may be more appropriate.

The plain truth seems to be that what our leader is saying is in no way entirely indicative of what he may be doing. In the mean time, the least Reagan and his "mouth" could do is better coordinate their stories. Even elementary kids are adept at this simple task. Hmmm, maybe there's something in that last line.

A good exchange

A recently announced agreement on the exchange of students between the United States and the Soviet Union has gone unnoticed as reports of more dramatic developments make the headlines. Though Kremlin speeches and upcoming summit meetings rightly steal the show, the current progress in academic relations merits some attention.

The exchange of students between the two countries has occurred for some time — since 1958 in fact — yet it was just recently that the Soviets agreed to send 50 undergraduates to study in the United States. Until now, Soviet exchange students tended to be scientists and scholars in their mid-30s rather than youths of more impressionable age.

The new agreement also breaks the traditional mold by scattering the Soviet students among 18 U.S. college campuses instead of limiting them to a few Ivy League schools. The students will attend college without political chaperones.

Meanwhile, negotiations aimed at making history textbooks in the two countries more objective about each other will resume after being suspended in 1979. These discussions could open a broad dialogue leading to greater cultural understanding.

The number of U.S.-Soviet exchange students and scholars is paltry when compared to the 350,000 foreign students now in this country or in contrast to the 20,000 students who come from China alone. Obviously, more can be done to improve academic relations between the two countries.

A serious deficiency on the U.S. side of the equation is the fact that less than 5 percent of those studying a foreign language are learning Russian. The exchange would be helped by greater financial reciprocity from the Soviets and both governments could lift unnecessary restrictions.

With a U.S.-Soviet exchange of students and knowledge, the whole world stands to gain.

Next nominee is unknown

WASHINGTON — When it appeared that his Supreme Court nomination of Judge Robert Bork was going down the drain, President Ronald Reagan vowed that his next appointment would be one Bork opponents would "object to as much."

One wonders if he had that in mind when he selected Douglas Ginsburg, a little known federal appeals judge, 41, to the high court, the second time around. Whether it was or not, Reagan's startling threat has remained in the minds of many Americans.

His selection of Ginsburg is puzzling but not surprising. He was determined to name a conservative, one who believes in judicial restraint rather than flexibility to meet the times, and he apparently has done that.

BUT NO one really knows how Ginsburg feels about a multitude of current issues that he will face as the years go on in that lifetime job, if he is confirmed.

He is said to be an expert on

antitrust and business law. His experience in the courtroom is almost nil. His tenure on the appeals court amounts to one year although he was confirmed unanimously by the Senate for that post.

In a world of winners and losers as Washington often is portrayed, Attorney General Edwin Meese was the winner and White House chief of staff Howard Baker is the loser.

Baker is a moderate, who if he chose to push his luck, may have been able to guide Reagan toward the center in the twilight of his presidency. But Meese, Reagan's longtime mentor, was determined to make sure that the replacement for Bork would be cut from the same cloth.

MEESE, FOR all his own troubles, prevailed with Reagan and when the surprise choice of Ginsburg was announced, the East Room was filled with conservatives and organized "Right to Lifers."

Much is riding on the American Bar Association and the opinion it will render next month on Ginsburg's qualifications. Opponents have little to mine in his record because as Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., put it, he has "no paper trail."

White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said that Reagan was "impressed" with Ginsburg's scholarship. He also noted his "sense of humanity," but when asked to be specific, he simply said that those who interviewed him felt that he had compassion.

White House strategists briefed Bork and put him through mock hearings to prep him for his ordeal before the confirmation committee. Bork did not hesitate to express his views and opinions, and his positions that have changed over the years.

GINSBURG, A much younger man, undoubtedly will be put through the same litmus test now that it is established a potential justice can be questioned about his legal philosophy — that it is not off limits.

To most senators and the country at large, he is an unknown quantity. Reagan did not interview him before his appointment. That was left to Meese, Assistant Attorney General Bradford Reynolds, Baker and other White House staffers. But Fitzwater said that Reagan was familiar with Ginsburg's work in the drive for deregulation.

Like Reagan, Ginsburg has a "get the government off our backs" philosophy, according to some reports.

As for the president, his choice of a new Supreme Court justice is based on a longtime desire to change the course of the high bench, to put it on the straight and narrow, and to keep it from expanding the interpretation of the law to meet the social needs. That he hopes will be one of his key legacies.

Helen Thomas is the UPI White House reporter.

Who is to blame for plunge?

U.S. is responsible for Wall Street woes, say the British LONDON — Ever since the Boston Tea Party, the British have been accustomed to what they regard as America's habit of chronic overreaction.

"Sell-sell-sell, followed by buy-buy-buy, is a game for lunatics," a London broker snorted this week. "Wall Street is inhabited by neurotic whiz kids who didn't think before they cut their own throats."

That view is shared by many in the City — the square mile of inner London that handles 38 percent of the world's stock and currency dealings. Here, too, the markets plunged and then partially recovered, not out of fears for the British economy but in direct response to the roller coaster in New York.

The market has become wholly international. Instability in New York deeply worries investors everywhere. According to City opinion, that instability will persist for as long as America refuses to swallow the correct dose of financial medicine.

"THERE REMAINS considerable doubt about the resolve of the Reagan administration to grasp the issues," argues the Daily Telegraph. "Washington still takes the view that the root of the problem lies with the Japanese trade surplus. If the administration continues on this path, the markets must expect very rocky rides ahead."

Brian Dunning

The unpalatable fact is that the British and other Europeans, including the powerful West Germans, are weary of Americans constantly blaming other nations for the chronic U.S. trade deficit. And it is that gap between income and expenditure that is now seen as the worm eating at the heart of American strength and world leadership.

In the affluent suburbs of London, the U.S. deficit is painfully evident.

THIS WEEK, I called at most of the major stores near my home in Richmond-on-Thames. I found goods piled high from France, Italy, Germany, Spain, China, Korea, Taiwan and, of course, Japan. Apart from a few cans of pineapple juice, I found nothing labeled "Made in U.S.A."

My experience can be repeated in suburbs across Western Europe — a Common Market that is now larger than the United States itself. When investors on Wall Street hurl themselves into a frenzy of selling, they are, in effect, simply reacting to the failure of American industry to compete as it used to compete.

Does that assessment seem unkind? Yes, it is unkind. The truth is usually brutal.

That is why Andrew Alexander, a strongly pro-American columnist and an influential voice behind the success of Margaret Thatcher's economic philosophy, places the blame firmly on the shoulders of the U.S. government.

"THE FEDERAL deficit is perfectly curable by a modest tax rise or a modest cut in U.S. government spending," he writes. "Only the contrariness of the U.S. system, with power divided between a Republican administration and a Democratic Congress stops a simple cure from being swiftly produced. Instead the Americans have tried to get foreign central banks to bail out the dollar — an attempt which failed in the past, is failing now and will fail in the future."

In short, say the British, it is up to Americans to remedy America's temporary ailment. And the sooner the better.

But have Americans the will and determination? The British find it hard to believe that the genius of U.S. economic growth has run out of steam. In the past five years they have invested $600 billion in American industry — not out of charity, but from a hard-nosed calculation that American know-how and American workers are the best in the world. Whether American politicians are in the same league is another matter.

Weinberger exit won't change arms talks

By Robert C. Toth
Los Angeles Times

WASHINGTON — The expected departure of Secretary of Defense Caspar Weinberger from the Reagan Cabinet will remove a strong and influential brake on the arms control process, and will probably alarm conservatives who share Weinberger's profound suspicions of dealing with the Soviet Union.

But it is doubtful that the resignation will make any substantive change in the terms of the emerging U.S.-Soviet agreement to eliminate long-range medium-range nuclear missiles, or its ratification, according to senior U.S. officials and private experts. And the same is probably true of the expected next step in the arms control process, an agreement to cut back long-range strategic missiles.

"MOST OF THE pieces (of both agreements) are already on the negotiating table," one of those officials said. "It's more a matter of waiting for the right time, and then arranging them in the right way. And the Defense Department has signed off (approved) on all of the U.S. positions in that process."

Indeed, coming just as the super powers are on the verge of signing the medium-range missile accord and moving into high gear on negotiating a new strategic weapons agreement, Weinberger's resignation should speed up the movement, another senior U.S. official said. "It should make things a little easier. The Joint Chiefs of Staff should have more flexibility and independence under Frank Carlucci (now the president's national security adviser and Weinberger's likely successor at Defense) and they want a new strategic treaty and are less enthusiastic than Weinberger for SDI (Strategic Defense Initiative)," he said.

"CAP WAS EXTREMELY argumentative and stubborn when it came to dealing with the Soviets. It's not so much that he opposed all arms agreement but that he feared 'soft' diplomats at State would give away the store."

"Weinberger was not so much against arms agreements per se as he was afraid that such agreements would begin the 'slippery slope' toward a new era of detente in which the Russians would cheat and support for large U.S. defense budgets would disappear," said a senior State Department official.

Others are not so generous about Weinberger's motives in the arms control debates. Some note that whether intentional or not, virtually all his positions on arms issues have or would have had the effect of creating new hurdles to agreements.

In his fervor for the Strategic Defense Initiative, for example, the secretary has pushed for early deployment of missile defenses, although doing so would violate the Anti-Ballistic Missile treaty and make a new strategic arms agreement almost impossible to achieve. And his insistence on testing the new Trident II missile with 10 and 12 warheads, when it is expected to carry only eight, complicates negotiations because previous agreements provided that all missiles would be counted as if they carry the maximum number of warheads with which they were tested.

JACK MENDELSON, deputy director of the non-government Arms Control Association, noted that in November 1985 on the eve of the administration's first summit meeting with the Soviets, Weinberger wrote President Ronald Reagan a letter — quickly leaked to the press — urging him not to make any concessions on offensive or defensive weapons. He urged the president to avoid even reaffirming existing agreements.

Robert MacFarlane, then the president's national security adviser, called the letter an effort to sabotage the arms talks.

Weinberger, who is intensely loyal to Reagan, has been the greatest champion of SDI, while Secretary of State George Shultz's key arms control adviser, Paul Nitze, would like to discuss the ambiguities in the ABM treaty as a way to ease Soviet concerns. The White House, with Weinberger's support, has refused to permit it.

Council

"You need a mayor that really is going to pull all of the council people together," she said.

Strait also said he would not commit to a candidate for mayor and declined to comment on the possibility of being chosen to fill the office.

"It will be up to what the seven of us want," he said.

All of the elected councilors said they thought the new council has good chemistry and should be able to attack the major issues at hand head-on.

THE PROJECTED 1989 budget deficit of $900,000 — which was the major issue of the campaign for all of the candidates — will be the top priority, the councilors agreed.

The make-up of the new council, members agreed, is more mainstream. But they said they thought that would be an advantage in solving problems such as the deficit.

"I'm excited about the composition of this council," Ambrisco said. "The voters have said, 'This is what we want.' They're not really interested in these (special issues) that come up every few years."

Larson agreed the similar opinions of council members will enable the council to take action on the major issues.

"It makes it easier to find an innovative compromise-type solution that satisfies all of the parties," he said. "We'll be less combative and more able to work with people."

In the Coralville city race, Mayor Micheal Kattchee, who ran unopposed, won re-election with 89 percent of the vote. Also winning election to the council were Allan Aleson, Thomas Gill and Diana Lundell, who all ran unopposed.

program ties in well with the goals of rhetoric classes.

"Every rhetoric class has a unit on values and value statements on controversial issues — this clearly is a prime example of that," he said. "We're really anxious to see how this works out. If it helps stimulate discussion and helps students work on their research skills, their writing and reading, then we will certainly participate in future programs."

Because of the importance of the subject, Karle said he thought the presentations were worth losing a day of class.

"For me, it's just one of the issues I would have talked about in the course of the semester," he said. "My only qualm is the time of the semester — we're really busy right now. But how else can you get at least the entire freshman class to go to something like this?"

The program evolved from the UI Task Force on Infectious Diseases, UI Dean for Student Services Phillip Jones, a member of the task force, said.

Jones said the committee sees this effort as crucial to a larger goal of providing information and education about AIDS to all students.

ter, about 27,000 copies in the spring and about 21,000 for the summer semester at a cost of about $10,000 per order, she said.

Students and faculty have complained about the change — particularly the size of the new schedule — but have also said the new type size and added white space makes the schedule easier to read, Pietrzyk said.

The registrar's office also received several complaints when the original magazine-style schedule first contained ads in 1982, she said.

LASA member Dave Bissinger said he liked the ad-less feature of the schedule.

"I think without ads it gives it a more professional and educational approach," Bissinger said. "Trans Am ads and Bruegger Bagel Bakery ads trivialize the well-thought out course of education."

The schedules have been available since about Oct. 10, Pietrzyk said. Early registration begins Nov. 18, according to the new schedule.

After registering, students can use the newsprint schedules for the perennial newspaper purposes, Oetken said.

"There's one good use for it: wrapping fish," he said.

China

radio said. "The U.S. military forces instead attacked a launch belonging to the emirate of Sharjah, killing one member of its Indian crew," the radio said.

A U.S. OFFICIAL on Monday night acknowledged the encounter between the suspected Iranian patrol vessel and the USS Carr on Sunday night was complicated by darkness and the configuration of the ships in the area.

The Navy said the Carr, a guided missile frigate that was escorting the military-chartered oil tanker MV Patriot, fired on a suspected Iranian vessel that made an "apparently hostile" high-speed run on the convoy.

In Washington, Navy Cmdr. Robert Purcha said the Pentagon was standing by its original position Monday that the attacking boats were "suspected Iranian vessels."

Armacost said Chinese officials repeated an earlier statement that China would take "strict measures" to prevent Chinese weapons exports from being diverted to either Iran or Iraq. He said he was not certain what the measures were but hoped they would have an effect.

THE STATE DEPARTMENT official said Silkorm missiles were of "special concern" to the United States because they have the range and capability of being used against "nonbelligerents" and shipping in the gulf.

The United States decided last month to postpone considering a further easing of restrictions on U.S. high technology sales to China following Iranian Silkorm missile attack on a Kuwaiti oil terminal and a Kuwaiti tanker flying a U.S. flag.

Armacost's comments came a day after China's newly elected Communist Party chief, Zhao Ziyang, told reporters that allegations of Chinese weapons sales to Iran were based on "no grounds at all."

"It is unfair to shift the responsibility for the intensification of tensions in the gulf to China," Zhao told foreign journalists at the Great Hall of the People yesterday.

ARMACOST DECLINED to comment on Zhao's remarks, but said "there is clearly a difference of views."

"Our objective is to put the issue behind us," said Armacost, who argued that the fundamentals of the U.S.-China relationship have not been affected by the disagreement over arms sales or by allegations by U.S. congressmen of Chinese human-rights violations in Tibet.

Armacost said the issue of U.S. concern about the human-rights situation in Tibet arose during his talks here. But he said he reminded the Chinese that the United States has long recognized that Tibet is a part of China.

"We express our views... simply as an expression of American concern about human rights anywhere," said Armacost.

The official said he also expressed the hope that foreign journalists would be able to travel again to Tibet. Authorities expelled foreign journalists from Tibet on Oct. 8 following three anti-Chinese demonstrations, one of which turned into an attack on a police station and resulted in at least six deaths.

Several bowls showing interest in Hawks

By Mike Trilk
 The Daily Iowan

Neither of the national news services consider the Iowa Hawkeyes one of the 20 best football teams in America.

But a team doesn't necessarily have to be highly-regarded in the polls to continue playing into the holiday season. Several postseason bowl officials are licking their chops over the current Hawkeye squad.

"Iowa is a very enjoyable team," Freedom Bowl official Tom Starr said Wednesday. "They have great fan support and a great reputation.

They may have the best reputation in the country right now. It would be between them and Nebraska."

The Peach Bowl, which has moved from Dec. 31 to Jan. 2, is also looking at a possible black and gold New Year.

"Iowa has a tremendous following," Peach Bowl Assistant Executive Director Dale Morgan said. "We are very impressed with Iowa. They are a quality team, and when I say quality I'm talking about the university, the football team and the fans."

A WEEK AGO things didn't look as bright for the Hawkeyes. But after Iowa's 29-21 win over then Big Ten leader Indiana and the apparent rebirth of a potent offense, the Hawkeyes are back in the good graces of bowl officials.

"To show you how interested we are about Iowa, our executive director is going to scout Iowa's game with Northwestern Saturday," Morgan said. "There is no question that the University of Iowa is one of our primary teams of interest. We are looking for a very good southeastern team and a very good national team and Iowa falls into that category."

The Hawkeyes are owners of a 6-3 record thus far, and wins in their final three games would probably find them headed toward a good bowl — maybe a New Year's Day game at the Florida Citrus Bowl. Citrus Bowl officials said that Iowa would be a good choice should the Hawkeyes wind up as the Big Ten runner-up.

The Peach Bowl would still be a possibility should the Hawkeyes get tripped once more, as would shots at the Freedom, Holiday, Bluebonnet, All-America and Liberty Bowls.

"THEY HAVE THAT extra game," Morgan said, referring to Iowa's opener with Tennessee. "So we would look at Iowa as a team with eight wins and not a team with four losses."

The Peach Bowl has been especially fond of Big Ten teams in recent years. Iowa won the 1982 Peach Bowl, Purdue played there in 1984 and Illinois in 1985. Combine that with this year's Saturday playing date and the Peach Bowl looks like an attractive bowl trip for Iowa fans.

"We've had tremendous success with Big Ten teams," Morgan said. "Since we moved our game to Saturday, people in Iowa City could jump on a plane Thursday night (New Year's Eve), spend New Year's Day in Atlanta, see the game Saturday and fly back home

Avenson will offer agents proposal

By Scott Sonner

DES MOINES — Iowa House Speaker Don Avenson said Tuesday he will introduce a bill next year to make it a criminal offense for opportunistic sports agents to approach athletes who have not exhausted their college eligibility.

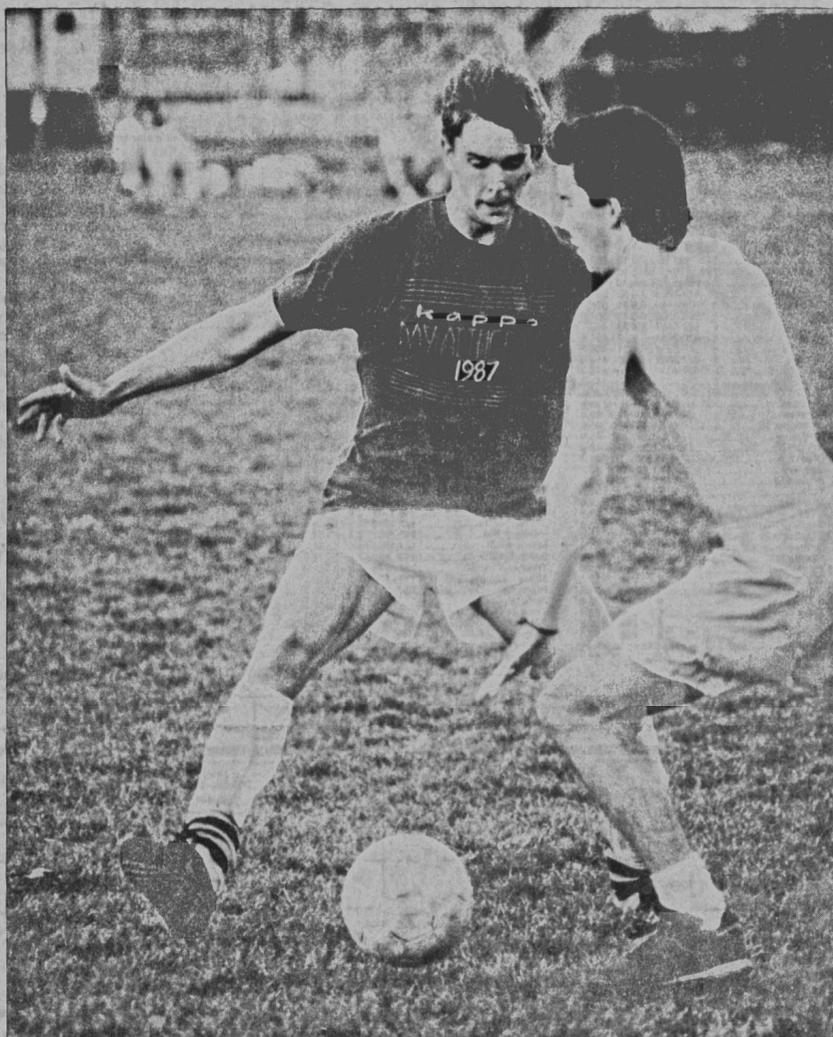

"I think it's a shame that adults, for purposes of their own personal profit, will harm the athletic future and quite often the educational futures of young people," Avenson, D-Oelwein, said in an interview.

"There is only one way to make them think twice — make it a criminal offense."

Avenson said his decision was spurred by frequent news accounts of agents signing college football players, including former Iowa running back Ronnie Harmon, who allegedly accepted $55,000 from agent Norby Walters of New York in 1985 while Harmon was still playing at Iowa.

WALTERS AND partner Lloyd Bloom, who have become the target of a grand jury probe for fraud and racketeering in Chicago, have acknowledged signing players with college eligibility remaining but contend they have broken no laws.

"I don't think the NCAA can police itself. They proved that because the problems have not stopped and they end up punishing the athlete instead of the agent," said Avenson, an avid Hawkeye fan.

Fry: Hawkeyes shouldn't look past Wildcats

By Eric J. Hess
 The Daily Iowan

Hayden Fry, the master neutralizer, said at his Tuesday press conference that Iowa cannot look past the Northwestern Wildcats.

After squeaking past the Wildcats 27-20 last year, Fry is hoping the Hawkeyes will approach the ninth-place Wildcats in the same fashion they did Indiana.

Football

"This year they (Northwestern) haven't won as many ballgames at this point. But they have played certain people very, very tough," Fry said.

"Their running game is vastly improved the last couple of years. Their defense may no longer get blown out like they used to. They're playing people much tougher," he added.

Fry said the Iowa fans could see another change in the punting game Saturday. The Hawkeyes started the season with Mark Adams, gave Ross Blount a three-punt tryout and had tight end Marv Cook kicking during last Saturday's 29-21 victory over Indiana.

NOW FRY SAID Dan McGwire could see some punting duties, as Chuck Hartlieb has solidified himself as not only Iowa's No. 1 quarterback but also the Big Ten's top passer.

McGwire said he'll be ready to punt if called upon. Cook is still No. 1 on the depth chart, but McGwire said he thought he was the backup.

"If they want me to kick, I'm more than more than happy," he said. "Any way I can contribute to this team, I'll do so."

McGwire has the credentials to punt. As a junior at Claremont (Calif.) High School, he punted for a 44.5-yard average. In his senior year, he averaged 42 yards per punt.

In the backfield, the Hawkeyes continue to have injury problems.

Rick Bayless, however, may see some action. The fifth-year senior from Hugo, Minn., had an injury to his right knee, forcing him out of commission for most of the season.

KEVIN HARMON and freshman Tony Stewart, who is on crutches and in an immobilizer, are both out indefinitely. Still Fry said both may see action. Further practice will determine who will be used.

Iowa's offensive line has been even more mysterious from week to week.

"I don't even know who's going to start," Fry said.

Bayless may return to squad

By Tom Dickerson
 The Daily Iowan

Iowa running back Rick Bayless — who hasn't played since he suffered a knee injury against Iowa State six weeks ago — practiced Monday and might be ready to go Saturday against Northwestern in Evanston, Ill.

And last year's most valuable player couldn't be coming back at a better time. The running back position stands almost vacant with Kevin Harmon and Tony Stewart both nursing injuries.

"We're a little low in the backfield," Bayless said. "I guess that gives me a little more opportunity now that I'm back."

Bayless strained his right knee at Iowa State while trying to make a cut on the artificial turf. The injury didn't look serious at first, and didn't feel serious, according to Bayless.

"I walked off just fine and it only hurt for about 20 seconds," Bayless said. "It has never really hurt after that."

BAYLESS WAS put in an immobilizer for a few weeks to let the knee recover, and began running and riding the bike again two weeks ago.

"I don't feel I've lost any speed," Bayless said. "I feel just as quick as I was before. It's just a matter of getting timing back with the quarterbacks and with the other people on the field, and as soon as I can do that I feel I'll be alright."

Coach Hayden Fry indicated in Tuesday's press conference that it's a "wait and see" prognosis for Bayless now. Fry said yesterday the doctors told him to give Bayless a hard workout to build up resistance.

Bayless said the practice session went well.

"I feel my cutting ability is at 100 percent, but my conditioning ability is much less than that," Bayless said. "In practice it's hard to simulate a game situation. If I tried to play for a full game now, I'd be dead tired."

FRY HASN'T given Bayless the nod for this weekend — yet.

McGwire wins rookie award

NEW YORK (UPI) — Mark McGwire, the Oakland Athletics first baseman who broke the rookie home-run record with a league-leading 49, Tuesday was unanimously named the Jackie Robinson American League Rookie of the Year by the Baseball Writers' Association of America.

"A lot of people kept drilling into my head that I had the award locked up," said McGwire, whose brother is Iowa quarterback Dan McGwire. "It was hard to push that aside. I was at a golf tournament this fall, and someone introduced me as the sure bet for rookie of the year. I didn't like that. It's hard to put it out of your mind when someone tells you you're going to be it."

McGwire eclipsed the rookie homer mark Aug. 14 and finished the year with 11 more than any first-year player in major-league history. He became only the second AL player to unanimously win rookie honors. The other was Carlton Fisk of Boston in 1972.

IN A VOTING by two writers from each AL city, McGwire received all 28 first-place votes for 140 points. Points were awarded on a 5-3-1 basis for votes from first through third.

"I'm very honored," he said. "When (BBWA Secretary Jack Lang) called today and told me, what got me was it was unanimous. He said it was only the second time. I thought that was very nice — that got to me a bit."

The 24-year-old from Claremont, Calif., hit .289 and knocked in 118 runs in becoming the second straight Oakland player to win the AL rookie honor. Jose Canseco won in 1986.

Third baseman Kevin Seitzer of Kansas City was second in the balloting with 64 points and catcher Matt Nokes of Detroit was third with 32. Seitzer had 207 hits to finish sixth in the league in batting with a .323 average.

NOKES, HELPING the Tigers compensate for the loss of Lance Parrish to Philadelphia, batted .289 with 32 homers and 87 RBIs.

Others receiving votes were outfielder Mike Greenwell of Boston (9), outfielder Devon White of California (5), pitcher Mike Henneman of Detroit (1) and second baseman Nelson Liriano of Toronto (1).

McGwire, a 6-foot-5, 225-pound right-handed hitter, did not become a regular until two weeks into the season.

He pursued Roger Maris' record of 61 homers for much of the first half of the year. He hit 33 homers

In front of a record-breaking crowd of 2,237, the Iowa volleyball team lost an intrastate battle to Northern Iowa Tuesday night in Cedar Falls 15-6, 11-15, 15-6, 15-12.

Iowa Coach Sandy Stewart said the match went well but the large crowd definitely affected the Hawkeyes' play.

"It was a pretty good match. The crowd was phenomenal," Stewart said. "It is an impossible gym to play in. It got so loud that I could barely think."

Volleyball

Northern Iowa's win in the fourth and final game could have been attributed to the crowd, Stewart said.

"We should have won the fourth game," Stewart said. "The team got intimidated; we should have given that game to the crowd."

Even though Iowa lost the match, senior co-captain Ellen Mullarkey scored enough kills to become second on Iowa's all-time kill list.

"ELLEN HAS A total of 1,167 kills for her career," the sixth-year coach said. "Most of these came in three years of play because of an injury she had in her freshman year."

The Panthers' Maryellen McCann put away some kills of her own. "McCann played a great game with 34 kills. She was hard to stop," Stewart said.

Overall, Stewart said Northern Iowa played collectively.

"They played kind of scrappy," she said. "They pulled together as a team — they have steady players, and they always play well at home."

Other players which had a significant part in the match were Iowa's Kari Hamel, Toni Zehr and Barb Willis.

Stewart said that Hamel, an outside hitter, did "a nice job." Hamel had 11 kills, 12 digs and a .219 hitting proficiency.

Zehr and Willis, both middle hitters, had nine kills each.

ACCORDING TO Stewart, a key factor in the Hawkeyes' loss was their serving performance. Iowa had four service aces and committed 11 service errors.

"We did not serve as well as we normally do," Stewart said, adding that another Iowa downfall was a lack of forcefulness.

"We fall into lapses in which we give up a few points when we think that the ball is down," Stewart said. "We've got to keep the intensity and concentration in the game."

"These are fundamental things of a new team. Once we get them down, the rest of the game will come together."

Greer, Draper named as coaches

Former Iowa all-Big Ten sprinter Victor Greer has been named assistant track coach at Iowa while Rich Draper, who has spent the past three years at Bowling Green as men's and women's head swimming coach, will rejoin the Hawkeyes as an assistant.

Tar Heels' Reid, Bucknall suspended

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (UPI) — North Carolina basketball players J.R. Reid and Steve Bucknall have been suspended for the Tar Heels' season opener against Syracuse Nov. 21, Coach Dean Smith announced Tuesday.

The suspensions came after Reid and Bucknall were charged with simple assault during an alleged altercation with a North Carolina State student in a Raleigh nightclub.

Smith, entering his 27th year as coach of the Tar Heels, said the players failed to avoid the confrontation. "Although the players were verbally harassed and pushed in an effort to provoke some kind of a response, I am taking disciplinary steps against them for not getting out when the verbal harassment started," Smith said in a release issued by the university.

Smith said the two players understood the reasons for his actions. Bucknall has been accused of punching the N.C. State student and Reid is accused of spitting in the student's face. Neither player commented Tuesday on the incident.

On The Line

Good evening, America, I'm Ted Koppel, and this is "Nightline."

Melodramatic, powerful music and the sound of clacking teletype machines.

We're reporting live from The Daily Iowan newsroom, a hotbed of words, weirdness and wackos. It's a hallowed place, this newsroom, turning out the likes of famed pollster George Gallup, ex-NCAA boss Walter Byers and Mike Trilk. But things have changed. Once a docile, tranquil place of hardworking journalists, the DI has assumed a Jekyll-and-Hyde personality.

But where did the transformation begin? For the answer we turn to David Brinkley, David.

Thank you, Ted. (Five seconds elapse before he continues)

TO REALLY understand this place, the mentality that permeates the newsroom and the people that work here, we stayed for a few days, sort of lived among the natives so to speak. What we found was quite interesting.

At the pinnacle of this publication is Editor John Gilardi. No one would speak on camera fearing retribution, except for the entire sports section, and what they said couldn't be aired, anyway. But the consensus here, Ted, is that John's curly red hair has impaired his ability to think straight, often forcing him to quote the Craig Gemoules Guide to Layout and Design verbatim. Of course, the issue at hand often times isn't related to layout or design, but John likes to quote it anyway. One high-placed insider said John "needs to wake up and smell the coffee."

AND THEN THERE IS Managing Editor Chris Wessling, Ted. Chris fancies himself the next Ben Bradlee, legendary executive editor of The Washington Post. The terms

"power-hungry" and "delusions of grandeur" personify this journalist quite well.

Between John's daily high-decibel beratings of the sports staff and Chris' penchant for daydreaming of glory, fame, money and a center-field position with the Milwaukee Brewers, it is painfully obvious to see the schizophrenic path these two editors have blazed for the DI. (Ted interrupts) Is there any hope, David?

Frankly, Ted, no one can be sure. But if there is a solution to the ailments which plague the DI, it's for readers to drop off no more than five ballots to Communications Center Room 111 by noon Thursday. Of course they must circle the winners, including the tiebreaker, and pick a score for that game. The rest is left to God. Back to you, Ted.

Thank you, David. As for you sports fans, remember if more than 1,000 ballots are submitted, our sending thanks to you will be in the form of a special bonus as well as a frothy keg of amber-colored ale. Good night.

Fry

In two games against Wisconsin and Indiana, left guard Bob Schmitt has not practiced during the week. After those games, Schmitt was named MVP.

"I kid (Offensive Line) Coach (Kirk) Ferentz. You're a heck of a coach." Here Schmitt doesn't even work out and he's down for the second time.

Despite all of the problems, Iowa has the No. 1 offense in the Big Ten, averaging 397.9 yards per game. Northwestern, incidentally, is last in the conference in total defense, giving up 440.9 yards per game.

FRY SAID HE was surprised to find out about Iowa's strength on offense.

"When I use the word remarkable, it's been remarkable year because we obviously now with the last two victories over Purdue and Indiana have a shot at a bowl game," he said.

Dave Haight, surely considered a remarkable force by Fry, recorded 18 tackles against Indiana. The senior from Dyersville, Iowa, leads the team with 89 total tackles, including a team-leading 11 stops for losses, four sacks and two fumble recoveries.

"I think he's the best defensive lineman in college football," he said.

And Iowa defensive back Kerry Burt has seven interceptions, one shy of the team record set by Nile Kinnick in 1939 and Lou King in 1981.

IOWA NOTES

• Fry said Dwight Sistrunk has felt the coach's wrath about his "nickel-and-dime" antics.

"It's just a natural response by Dwight. If he makes a big play, he likes to kind of run towards the other bench or hold the ball up — nickel-and-dime stuff."

Fry said taunting the other team is not going to be an Iowa trademark during his reign.

• Fry called Marv Cook the "best tight end in the Big Ten" and possibly in all of college football. The only exception Fry mentioned may be Oklahoma's Keith Jackson. But Fry said the Sooners don't use their tight end as much as Iowa.

• Iowa defensive lineman Steve Thomas suffered a knee injury in Saturday's game — possibly torn ligaments — and is out indefinitely.

• This is the first time in four games the Hawkeyes do not play on television. Game time at Dyche Stadium in Evanston, Ill., is set for 1 p.m. The 38,000-seat stadium still has seats available. Call the Northwestern Ticket Office at (312) 491-7070.

• Fry has not lost to Northwestern in nine games, including one game while he was coaching at Southern Methodist. Northwestern Coach Francis Peay is winless against the Hawkeyes in one attempt.

• Rob Houghtlin, with a season-high 11 points last week, needs 20 more points to tie Tom Nichol's career record of 277 points.

• Iowa has outscored its opponents in every quarter except the third quarter — 37-36.

Bowls

Sunday. They wouldn't miss a day of work and they'd still be at home on Christmas."

The Freedom Bowl said that Iowa is among its final nine teams, and one more loss would not hurt the Hawkeyes.

"WE'RE VERY big on the Hawks," Starr said. "We're down to nine solid teams and Iowa is one of them. One more loss wouldn't hurt them as far as we are concerned."

Starr also said that a Pac Ten-Big Ten matchup is a possibility.

Iowa still has dim hopes to reach the Rose Bowl Jan. 1 but some unlikely things would have to happen. Iowa would have to win its final three games, Michigan State would have to lose twice, Indiana would have to lose once and Michigan would have to lose once.

Michigan State has games left with Purdue, Indiana and Wisconsin. Indiana plays Illinois, Michigan State and Purdue.

before the All-Star break but slowed in the second half. He had a chance to become the 12th player to hit 50 homers in a season but sat out the final game to be with his pregnant wife.

"WHEN I HIT 49, I really started thinking about (No. 50)," he said. "I thought it would be really neat to hit 50. Ever since Matthew (his son) was born, I've been telling people that was my 50th home run of the season."

McGwire tied Andre Dawson of the Chicago Cubs for the home-run lead in the majors. He shattered the previous rookie record of 38 homers shared by Wally Berger and Frank Robinson and hit more homers than any AL player since Harmon Killebrew had 49 in 1969.

George Foster was the last player to reach 50 homers, hitting 52 for Cincinnati in 1977.

McGwire's 118 RBIs were third most in the AL and fifth best in the majors. His 49 homers were the most by an Oakland player and helped the team stay in the AL West race most of the season. The A's finished in third place with an 81-81 mark, the club's best showing since the strike-shortened 1981 season.

LAST SEASON, Canseco staged a hold-out over contract negotiations after winning the award, but McGwire forgoes no such problem.

"I don't want to see any conflicts in the contract," he said. "Because of the situation we young players are in, there is no reason to hold out."

Bayless

"He said when you go out to practice, just watch yourself and don't worry about it. He told me not to do anything fancy, just stick to the basics," Bayless said.

The Hugo, Minn., native rushed for 1,150 yards and 10 touchdowns last season, including a career-high 183 yard performance against Northwestern. Sitting on the bench has been strange for Bayless, who never suffered a major injury before this season.

"I HAD A bruised quad muscle before the season and that held me out at the beginning," Bayless said. "It's been a tough year all around."

Bayless, a fifth-year senior, said he had only missed two practices at Iowa before this injury-filled season.

"It's been hard to sit there and know that you want to be out there so bad and you couldn't be out there," Bayless explained.

Fry admitted it would be nice to have Bayless back on the field against the Wildcats.

"He certainly can make a valuable contribution to our offense if he's available Saturday," Fry said.

Agents

Earlier this year, a three-member UI faculty committee which probed sports agent payments to Harmon and former Iowa defensive back Devon Mitchell recommended the university ask for legislation to make agent tampering with student-athletes a criminal offense.

The committee also urged the university to join other Big Ten Conference schools in a civil suit seeking damages from Walters in an effort to deter similar conduct by other agents.

UI LAW PROFESSOR David H. Vernon, one of the members of the panel, Tuesday reaffirmed his adamant stance for legislation restricting the dealings between sports agents and college athletes. But he said he was unsure of what the current proposal has to offer.

"I think that it's a good idea if there is legislation on this subject, but I have no idea what has been proposed," Vernon said from his Iowa City home.

The Big Ten has filed a lawsuit in U.S. District Court in Chicago demanding agents identify all athletes who still have collegiate eligibility, but who have already signed contracts with other agents.

Dick Vohs, press secretary to Gov. Terry Branstad, said the governor is interested in Avenson's idea and wants to discuss it with NCAA Director Dick Schultz, a former University of Iowa coach.

to all amateur athletes. "Quite often they talk to high school athletes who can be drafted into the major leagues right from high school," he said.

"WE WOULD HAVE to make it a criminal offense for sports agents to talk to college athletes while they still have eligibility.

"Ronnie Harmon is a pretty good example. Here in Iowa, Ronnie Harmon got away with it without any damage to himself or his athletic career... but young people caught while they still have athletic eligibility could lose their chance for an education."

Avenson rejected the argument such a law would infringe on the student athlete's right to negotiate his own prosperity.

"When an athlete takes a scholarship to attend an institution of higher education in return for their athletic prowess, I think they give up some freedom at that point automatically," he said.

"FOR EXAMPLE, they give up what they want to do between 2 p.m. and 6 p.m. at practice. There is some loss of freedom whenever you enter a contract.

"NCAA rules say you are ineligible to receive the money from an agent, but it is impossible to stop until you stop the agent himself," Avenson said.

Since the 1987 football season began, Iowa Coach Hayden Fry has declined comment on the agents, but earlier this year he said he thinks the grand jury probe will lead to tougher rules and regulations.

The Hawkeye coach also repeatedly has called on state lawmakers to set up some system whereby student athletes would be paid a monthly stipend beyond their scholarship to help defray their expenses.

"We make a pot of money in athletics and if anybody is getting the short end of the stick, it's the athletes as far as I'm concerned," Fry said last May. "They need to be given something, not much, but something that would really help them."

Chinese dancers awe with acrobatic feats and dancing

By Steve Donoghue
The Daily Iowan

This review ought to applaud the Chinese Festival of Song and Dance which visited Iowa City on Sunday as the first fruit of the cultural exchange program between the United States and the People's Republic of China. But this review won't do that. Cultural exchange aside, the Festival ought to be applauded because it was just plain fantastic. Lan-Jan King, director of the United States-China Dance Exchange Program at the UI, promised ahead of time that "you will see a lot of colors." That was an understatement. The show began under an ornate peacock backdrop, big jeweled plumes stretching up over the first performance before a large Hancher Auditorium crowd. The first dance was a lively mish-mash of styles, a high-energy beginning.

FOR MOST OF THE audience, however, the show really took off with second act, an umbrella-juggling routine by acrobat Li Xiaozhen. Yes, umbrella-juggling. Six umbrellas. With her feet. The precision necessary to balance and throw spinning umbrellas with her toes was so unbelievable that it was almost a relief when she at one point missed and the umbrellas fell to the stage.

But it was a short-lived relief. She picked them up and got right back to amazing everybody.

The second of the next two numbers, "Dance in Rainbow Costume," was a gorgeously contemplative, compelling solo dance by Chen Ailian, wonderfully staged and choreographed. But as good as it was, it pointed out the single flaw of the whole Festival: the pacing.

CASE IN POINT: this slow, beautiful dance was followed directly by the acrobat Gao Jianxin, who proceeded with stylish grace to balance a glass pagoda 6-feet-long on his forehead, while he himself was balanced on a single 4-foot pole. To say the least, this left the audience roaring in astonished joy.

Such marketplace miracle-working is the very definition of a tough act to follow. At regular intervals throughout the performance, there came these rapid-fire, I-don't-believe-it acrobatic feats — including the incomparable Gao Jin, who tossed stacked bowls onto his head with one foot while balancing on a ten-foot unicycle.

Even that unevenness, however, didn't seriously hamper this lively troupe.

Cultural exchange? Sure. But mostly just plain fantastic.

JCL cooks in Clapp concert

By Laura Chadima
The Daily Iowan

Clapp Recital Hall doesn't exactly have the atmosphere of Gabe's, but its fine acoustics allowed the members of the UI's premiere jazz band to shine Monday night. Johnson County Landmark, its 18 members led by Director of Jazz Studies Paul Scea, gave a fantastic concert to a large and enthusiastic crowd.

From bold to mellow, the music was excellent — an impressive display of UI talent. But equally impressive was the fact that many of the tunes performed were written by UI students. After the opening number, a composition by UI senior Chris Merz, a former JCL member, was programmed. "Milo's Meadow" offered a variety of sounds and two hot solos by soprano sax player Brett Spainhour and trumpeter Jeff Gossman.

PERHAPS THE MOST interesting work of the evening was "Theurgy," written by Scea. Starting with minimal instrumentation — drummer Eric Halvorson — the composition built up to a full and overwhelming sound as the band exerted its full power. The sound was heavily textured and often raucous as the instruments were layered upon each other. Scea then brought the audience back to earth with a traditional Hoagy Carmichael and Johnny Mercer tune, "Skylark," featuring a mellow Saul Lubaroff on the alto sax.

Scea introduced the composition "Legend" as "a rather monumental work." Written by UI freshman Craig MacMillan, "Legend" featured some frenzied sax playing by UI senior Scott Devlin. The program closed with Oliver Nelson's "Emancipation Blues." JCL gave a new positive meaning to the term "blue Monday," as the audience seemed to have almost as much fun as the band itself as they rocked to Nelson's swinging tune.

The student jazz ensemble Galadriel opened for JCL. Led by Chris Merz, this five member group also featured compositions by bassist Craig MacMillan.

JCL performs frequently in Iowa City, and jazz fans should not miss Johnson County Landmark's next performance.

Los Lobos of "La Bamba" fame proved it was a master of Tex-Mex and Rock 'n' Roll Monday night in Hancher Auditorium before an enthusiastic and knowledgeable audience.

Los Lobos brings basic rock to Hancher Auditorium show

By Jeff Rynott
The Daily Iowan

Hopefully, those who went to Monday night's performance at Hancher Auditorium thinking only of Los Lobos as the "La Bamba" band have been duly enlightened.

The East Los Angeles quintet's concert proved old-fashioned rock 'n' roll is still alive and vibrant in the technopop '80s, as they romped through a 90-minute performance that included slices of rock, blues, south-of-the-border and Tex-Mex styles. What made the show even better was the enthusiastic and knowledgeable crowd, who clapped and stomped their way along with the rhythms.

Best of all was the low-key approach of this veteran band. In a much-needed break from all the flash and trappings of most popular groups today, the trendiest thing about Los Lobos was vocalist/guitarist Cesar Rosas' trademark black shades. The band provided only the most rudimentary light show and a bare-as-bones stage setup, with an occasional tapestry of an old house the only prop.

NONE OF THE EXTRAS were missed, because Los Lobos concentrated entirely on their music and let it win the audience over. The band took the stage with "Evangeline" from How Will The Wolf Survive? and ran through most of the material from that album and the current By The Light Of The Moon, including their first hit

Music

"Will The Wolf Survive?," "Tears Of God," "Is This All There Is?," "One Time, One Night" and a great encore version of "Shakin' Shakin' Shakes," with the band's stage hands flying in from the wings to join in on the "Lord, it makes me tremble" line.

The band also ran through a James Brown cover and a cover of Ritchie Valens' "Come On, Let's Go" before winding up the set with a rocking rendition of "Set Me Free (Rosa Lee)" and bowing to the incessant demands of the crowd and playing their cover of Valens' "La Bamba." The latter song featured yet another let-the-audience-join-in segment as with U2, as guitarist Rosas let a woman in the front row briefly strum the riff.

THE MUSIC WAS consistently fine, if sometimes a little hazy because of the interplay of the band's boom and Hancher's acoustics. Guitarists Rosas and David Hidalgo contributed excellent work, with Hidalgo adding great solos, and Steve Berlin laying down some heavy sax as well. The highlights of the concert often involved the rare sight and sound of an accordion player, as Hidalgo led the band through Tex-Mex and polka-tinged numbers that brought the crowd up to dance.

The opening act, Fishbone, exploded onto the stage with what could be the wildest set ever seen at Hancher, featuring flying bodies and trombones, and manic energy. The band's outrageousness and punkish approach to their music and to the crowd split the audience, especially as the lyrics grew more graphically sexual and the lead singer began to spray the crowd with water. Many parents who had brought children suddenly found themselves in the wrong place at the wrong time and made a beeline for the lobby. With an hour-long opening set, Fishbone was a half-hour or so too long, with its initial pure energy and mayhem getting old as it went along — but they did play a song from the old "Fat Albert And The Cosby Kids" TV show, which has to be good for something.

EDITOR'S NOTE: People wondered whether The Daily Iowan's review (Nov. 3, 1987) was a bit soft on Whitney Houston. The last paragraph was omitted due to space limitations. Astute readers will remember the review concentrated on Houston's vocal ability; the following is the critique of her music that was left out, following the Elvis Costello quote:

"That sentiment still rings true. Houston's music smacks of too much craft, lacking spontaneity and unsentimental emotion. Ballads and dance music have always been the easiest forms for pop stars to master. It would be interesting to see Houston attempt some more challenging material along the lines of fellow female vocalists such as Annie Lennox, Chrissie Hynde, Tina Turner and the Queen of Soul, Aretha Franklin.

HE LIKED MY PURRING. NOW WHAT DO I DO?

YES...WHAT DID THIS CAT BEING NORMALLY DO?

LICK ME ALL OVER THE FACE TWICE, MAYBE FIFTY TIMES A DAY.

WHICH EXPLAINS HIS CONSTANT WRETCHING!

GENTLEMEN, IF OUR PROTEST IS TO SUCCEED, WE'RE GOING TO NEED A CHIEF COORDINATOR AND NEGOTIATOR. NOW, PHIL SLACKMEYER HERE HAS RUN SEVERAL CORPORATIONS...

THANKS, BARNEY, BUT I DON'T KNOW IF I'M THE MAN FOR...

ANYONE HERE HAD MORE LEADERSHIP EXPERIENCE THAN PHIL?

UH... YES, HERB?

I USED TO BE A GOVERNOR.

SO? EVER BREAK A UNION? I'VE BROKEN TWO UNIONS!

CUSTER'S FIRST STAND

'Goose' to migrate to Japan

LONG BEACH, Calif. — Howard Hughes' Spruce Goose — the plywood flying boat that barely earned its name with a one-mile hop over a choppy Long Beach Harbor in 1947 — may be dismantled and shipped to Japan as an extraordinary centerpiece of the 1987 International Design Exposition.

"It is all very preliminary," said Joseph Prevratil, president of Wrather Port Properties Ltd. of Long Beach, the subsidiary of Wrather Corp. that operates the Queen Mary Hotel and its domed neighbor, the Spruce Goose exhibit.

"I emphasize that we only are inquiring about the possibility," said Prevratil. "We're testing the feasibility ... but there are no commitments on either side."

ONE SIDE IS Wrather Port Properties, which in 1983 contracted to finance, build and manage the display of the giant flying boat under a lease arrangement with its owner, the non-profit Aeroclub of Southern California.

The other party, said Prevratil, is the city of Nagoya, Japan, host of the design exposition.

Six weeks ago, Wrather officials met in Long Beach, 20 miles south of Los Angeles, with a senior representative of the Nagoya city assembly. Prevratil confirmed Tuesday that he will fly to Japan later this month for further discussions.
