Cuban inmates in Louisiana take over detention center

By Gary Hines

OAKLAND, La. — About 1,000 Cuban detainees at a Louisiana federal prison revolted Friday,loit a protest against being denied of the right to vote. Officials said the Cubans were "stirred up" by a crowd that spilled outside the prison gates.

"They're in a state of rebellion," said Edward A. Whitaker, director of the Federal Bureau of Prisons. "They're revolting." Whitaker said officials were trying to negotiate with the inmates to end the protest.

The prison is one of several across the country where Cubans have been protesting their treatment. Many have been denied the right to vote, and some have been held for more than a year.

"We're trying to get the Cubans to calm down," said Whitaker. "They're not listening to us."

The protest began Friday afternoon, when a group of about 100 inmates marched into the prison yard and began chanting anti-American slogans.

"They're upset," Whitaker said. "They're frustrated."

Whitaker said the Cubans have been denied the right to vote since 1980. He said the Cubans have been held for an average of about three years.

"They're not happy," Whitaker said. "They're frustrated." Whitaker said the inmates have been denied the right to vote because they are considered "enemy aliens." He said the Cubans have been held for an average of about three years.

Former Iowa Democrats rally behind Robertson
At first, there was a great deal of skepticism among the Panamanians that President Bush would become involved in the situation. But as the weeks went by, Bush was found to be a steady personality with a strong heart. It is of great comfort to know that the Panamanians have accepted our presence in their country.

In fact, a great deal of the Panamanians’ confidence has come from the fact that they are seeing the United States as a partner in their development. We have given them the confidence that they can be part of the international community and that their voice will be heard.

The Panamanians have shown a great deal of resilience and determination in the face of these challenges. They have demonstrated a willingness to work hard and to make difficult sacrifices.

It is important to remember that the United States has a special responsibility to the people of Panama. We are committed to helping them build a better future.

Robertson's Foreign Policy

Robertson's foreign policy is characterized by a commitment to increasing American influence in the region. He has stated that "the United States cannot remain aloof and allow other nations to determine the future of the Americas."

Robertson has emphasized the importance of free trade and economic cooperation in the region. He has worked to increase trade between the United States and Latin America, and to reduce barriers to trade and investment.

Robertson has also placed a strong emphasis on human rights and democracy in the region. He has stated that "the United States will continue to support and work with countries that respect human rights and promote democracy."

Robertson's foreign policy has been characterized by a commitment to building strong relationships with Latin American countries. He has stated that "the United States has a special responsibility to the region, and we will continue to work to strengthen our partnerships."
U.S. increases military aid to the Contras

By Roy Gutman

Washington Times

WASHINGTON — Even as the Contras prepare for open-war negotiations with the United States government and the government of Nicaragua, the United States is providing more military aid to the rebels, who are considered a political group opposed to the Sandinista regime. The increase in military aid is significant and will make it easier for the Contras to conduct their military operations.

The Contras, a group of rebels opposed to the Sandinista government, have been receiving military aid from the United States for many years. The increase in aid will enable them to conduct their military operations more effectively and increase their chances of success.

The Contras are fighting against the Sandinista government in Nicaragua, which came to power in 1979 after a revolution that overthrew the Somoza dictatorship. The United States has long been a supporter of the Contras, and their military aid is a significant component of the U.S. policy towards Nicaragua.

The increase in aid is part of a broader strategy by the United States to contain the Sandinista regime and prevent it from extending its influence into other countries in the region. The United States has been providing military aid to various groups in Central America as part of its efforts to counter the influence of the Sandinistas.

The Contras' military aid will be used to purchase weapons and supplies, as well as to train and equip their fighters. The increase in aid is significant and will enable the Contras to conduct their military operations more effectively.

The Contras are expected to use the increased military aid to increase their fighting power and to conduct more effective military operations. The Sandinistas, on the other hand, are likely to be at a disadvantage in the conflict.

The Contras are led by a group of former military officers who were opposed to the Sandinista regime. They have been fighting against the Sandinistas since the early 1970s, and have received substantial military aid from the United States.

The Contras' military aid is a significant component of the U.S. policy towards Nicaragua, and the increase in aid is part of a broader strategy by the United States to contain the Sandinistas and prevent them from extending their influence into other countries in the region.
U.S. knows of brothers' deals with Iran

For the first time, published reports have detailed how the two brothers of a multimillionaire who had donated millions to a family of long Island politicians operated a shadowy operation to help Iran during the 1979-81 hostage crisis.

The New York Times reported that the two brothers, Robert Martin and John Martin, had funneled more than $10 million worth of goods and services to Iran through a United Nations charity without the knowledge of the UN.

In the late 1970s, the United Nations had a charity, the United Nations Children's Fund (UNICEF), that was able to sell goods to Iran without the approval of the United States government. The two brothers, who are now in their mid-70s, had a long history of donating money to the United Nations.

The Martin brothers were also involved in the sale of weapons to Iran, according to the reports.

JFK's grave visited on 24th anniversary

When John F. Kennedy's coffin was placed in the crypt at the Washington Cathedral on November 22, 1963, it was a day of mourning and reflection. The nation had just lost a charismatic and beloved leader, and the world was in shock.

But for the families of those who served in the military, it was also a day of honor and respect. The Kennedy family had a long history of serving in the armed forces, and their sacrifice was not forgotten.

Today, on the 24th anniversary of the day that America lost its most beloved leader, we remember JFK's legacy and the sacrifices of those who served under his leadership. May we honor and remember them as we move forward into a new chapter of history.

Hawk files lawsuit

By Ed M. Ransdell

COLUMBUS, Ohio - Earle "Jim" Hawks, a former Ohio State swimming coach, filed a $1.5 million lawsuit here yesterday against the university, alleging that its president, Edward L. Birck, and the school's director of athletics, Professor Edward J. "Tosti" Tosti, intentionally harmed his reputation.

The suit alleges Birck was blinded and rendered 'Jim' Hawks unable to compete in the national swimming meets because Tosti and others allegedly interfered with the administration of the swimming team. The suit also charges Tosti with interfering with "Jim's" activities as Ohio State's swimming coach from 1964 to 1979.

"Jim" Hawks won 58 national championships during his tenure as Ohio State's swimming coach.

Iowa outlasted Indiana, 3-0, to put a close end to its nine-game losing streak to the Hoosiers. With the win, the Hawkeyes move to 3-2 in the Big Ten.

"I told the team before the match, this is not going to be easy," Stewart said. "They proved we can play to our potential if we stick to our game plan, and we did that tonight.

"Stewart added, "It was not a perfect game, but we played better and started hustling. We have to keep improving.

Koru Kari, who scored her 20th goal of the season, put the Hawkeyes on the scoreboard with a 3-0 lead in the first half. Kari's first goal of the season came in the 26th minute, followed by a goal from Erika Tressel in the 28th minute.

The Hawkeyes dominated the Hoosiers in the second half, with Kari scoring her second goal of the game in the 75th minute, and a goal from Kari's teammate, Morgan Little, in the 85th minute.

Hawkeyes post split

In every game, Salam from played 210 yards. He carried the momentum into their respective teams.

Two was not the magic number for the Hawkeyes. They were not able to score in the second half, and the Hoosiers took a 2-0 lead in the third period.

The Hawkeyes, though, did not give up. They scored two goals in the second half, with one from Kari and one from Tressel. This gave the Hawkeyes a 2-1 lead going into the third period.

The Hawkeyes and Hoosiers finished the game with a 2-1 win for the Hoosiers. The Hawkeyes ended the game with a 1-1 tie, but they showed improvement from their previous two losses to the Hoosiers.

The Hawkeyes' win in the third game against Indiana was due to the efforts of their defense, who held the Hoosiers to only one goal in the second half. The Hawkeyes also scored twice in the second half, with goals from Kari and Tressel.

"We have been working hard in practice," Stewart said. "We are not satisfied with our performance, but we have shown improvement.

The concert took place on Friday evening, and it was a sell-out success. The venue was packed, and the crowd was energized. The band's frontman, vocalist, and guitarist, was in top form, as were the other members of the band. They played a setlist that included hits like "Here I Go Again," "Is This Love," and "Here's to Sanity." The audience sang along and danced to the music, creating a vibrant and lively atmosphere.

The sound was excellent, with clear vocals and powerful guitar tones. The lighting was also impressive, perfectly complementing each song's mood. The performance was a testament to the band's skill and creativity, leaving the audience in awe.
