Plane's pilot reports smoke, gunfire at last transmission

By Frederick M. Muir
Los Angeles Times

LOS ANGELES — A Pacific Southwest Airlines commuter plane carrying 39 passengers and a crew of five crashed Monday in a San Luis Obispo County mountain range after the pilot reported smoke in the cockpit and gunshots from the back of the plane, federal authorities said.

County fire officials responding to the scene said they believed that there were no survivors on Flight 1771 out of Los Angeles International Airport and bound for San Francisco.

"The plane was coming straight down when it hit a hillside," said Bill Hartzell, owner of the cattle ranch where the debris slammed to earth. "There's airplane parts and body parts and luggage all over a 15-mile area. I don't know how anyone could have survived."

SACRAMENTO ATTORNEY Steve Kronick, flying to Paso Robles for a meeting Monday afternoon, said both he and the pilot of the small plane he was flying in were listening to radio traffic in the area when they "heard the (PSA) pilot say that there was gunfire aboard. And after that we didn't hear anything... the Oakland airport tried to get him on again and never was successful."

"That's all we heard him say," said Kronick, "There's gunfire on board."

FAA spokesman Fred Farrar said preliminary information showed that the British-made BAe146 aircraft was spotted burning on its port side over Templeton, Calif., shortly after radar and radio contact was lost at about 6:15 p.m. CST.

The pilot of the plane reported smoke in the cockpit as he flew over the Lucia Mountain Range near U.S. Highway 101, a Federal Aviation Administration spokesman said. The plane crashed into the mountain range shortly after the pilot talked to air traffic controllers.

THE AIRPLANE WAS flying at about 22,000 feet and crashed in the vicinity of Paso Robles, Calif., Farrar said.

A National Transportation Safety Board spokeswoman detailed the unconfirmed report about gunshots.

"Just west of Paso Robles, the crew reported gunshots in the back of the plane," said Drucella Andersen, a spokeswoman for the NTSB. "I want to stress this is preliminary and unconfirmed information," she added.

The Fire Department spokesman said the plane crashed in a sparsely populated area on ranchland.

Gorbachev challenges U.S. to slash long-range missiles

By Jack Nelson

WASHINGTON — Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev arrived here Monday for the summit and, immediately upon setting foot on American soil, challenged President Ronald Reagan to discuss new proposals for slashing long-range nuclear missiles.

Alighting from his blue-and-white Ilyushin 62 jetliner under clear but chilly skies, Gorbachev declared that the Soviets had prepared their position on long-range missiles and said: "We are hoping that we will hear some new words on their side." Gorbachev and Reagan will discuss a host of other world problems during their three days of meetings, which begin this morning. And this afternoon they will sign a treaty banning medium-range nuclear missiles, which constitute about 4 percent of the world's nuclear weapons.

BUT GORBACHEV MADE it clear that reducing the number of long-range missiles would be the "pivotal" issue in his sessions with Reagan. The two leaders agreed in principle last year in Reykjavik, Iceland, to cut in half their awesome long-range missile arsenals.

Although Reagan has given no indication that he plans to offer new proposals on a long-range missile treaty, he told reporters before Gorbachev's arrival Monday that he remains optimistic a treaty can be completed in time for signing at another summit the two sides hope to schedule in Moscow next May or June.

Later, after a Christmas tree-lighting ceremony at the White House, reporters asked Reagan whether he would have any "new words" for Gorbachev. "He'll hear them in the morning," Reagan replied.

WHITE HOUSE spokesman Marlin Fitzwater told reporters: See Summit, Page 8

Tenure figures for minorities, women stable

By Scott Hauser
The Daily Iowan

The UI's percentages of female and minority tenure-track faculty remained last academic year about where they have been for the past decade, but UI officials said Monday there are signs the situation is improving.

"We've not done well in the past — there's no question," UI Professor of Education and chair of the UI Council on the Status of Women's subcommittee on affirmative action Ursula Delworth said. "The questions now are, are we going to do better and what's it going to take to do better?"

She said the council is waiting to see what effect the UI's latest initiatives — particularly the recently announced "Opportunity at Iowa" minority recruitment program — will have on the figures.

According to state Board of Regents documents released Monday, the percentage of female tenure-track faculty — those whose employment makes them eligible for promotion to a tenure position — increased to 17 percent in 1987-88 — a 1 percent increase over the previous year, but 1 percent lower than the 10-year high of 18 percent.

The percentage has remained between 16 and 18 since 1977-78.

TENURE IS intended to ensure a faculty member's academic freedom by insuring he or she cannot be dismissed except for physical disability, adequate cause, change in institutional program or reaching retirement age, according to regents documents.

The percentage of minority tenure-track faculty declined from 8.3 percent in 1986-87 to 8.2 percent in 1987-88.

Since 1982-83, the percentage has hovered between 7.5 and 8.3 percent.

According to the UI's affirmative action program report, the UI did not meet its planned appointment of 62 women and 44 minority faculty members to tenured positions.

The UI appointed 25 new women — but 27 women resigned. Six women were promoted or transferred and the appointment of eight minority members was offset by the resignation of 10.

UI Interim President Richard Remington has emphasized minority and women faculty recruitment since he became interim president in May, launching a minority recruitment campaign in October to increase the number of minority faculty members by 10 in two years.

HE SAID THE affirmative action goals are seldom met because the UI purposely sets high

The state Board of Regents is expected to release the list of UI presidential candidates at the board's meeting Wednesday, the chairman of the search committee said Monday.

UI Professor of Communication Studies Sam Becker said the unranked list of candidates will be sent to the regents in time for their meeting in Council Bluffs but said the list would not be completed until the committee can finalize it this week.

The committee has hosted five candidates who have met with the members of the search committee, the UI administration, the UI Faculty Council, the executive committee of the UI Staff Council and student leaders to discuss the presidency.

BECKER SAID NOT ALL THE VISITORS' names will necessarily be submitted as candidates.

Charges to be filed against deputy

By Jack Cahoy
The Daily Iowan

Drunk-driving charges against a Johnson County sheriff's deputy are expected to be handed down in Johnson County District Court today, County Attorney J. Patrick White said Monday.

White said he has filed drunk-driving charges against County Deputy Richard Edwards in connection with an Aug. 19 incident in Iowa City. The trial information still must be approved today by Sixth District Court Judge John Sladek before Edwards can be officially charged.

Iowa City police records indicate Edwards was operating a motorcycle Aug. 19 at about 10 p.m. at the intersection of Highway 6 and Keokuk Avenue when he crashed and was injured.

Edwards was admitted to UI Hospitals and Clinics following the accident and was treated for injuries to his shoulder, arm and head. A blood-alcohol test was given while he was in the hospital and sent to the Iowa Department of Criminal Investigation in Des Moines for evaluation.

White confirmed Monday that according to the test results, Edwards' blood-alcohol level at the time of the accident exceeded the .10 legal limit.

The case became an object of controversy in early November when KGAN-TV of Cedar Rapids reported that the case had "dragged on for an unusually long time," and speculated on the possibility of a cover-up.

IN ADDITION, several memos from Johnson County law enforcement officials which were released to local media indicated the case was creating tension between the Johnson County Sheriff's Department and the Iowa City Police Department.

One memo from Iowa City Police Capt. Don Strand to Iowa City Police Chief Harvey Miller indicated that during a meeting with Capt. Duane Lewis of the Johnson County Sheriff's Department Oct. 14, Lewis allegedly had suggested that Iowa City police should have covered up the Edwards investigation because sheriff's deputies had done the same for police in the past.

White said he had met with both Miller and Johnson County Sheriff Gary Hughes in an attempt to alleviate the problems caused between the two departments.

"I have met with both chiefs regarding some of those concerns," White said. "I think I've got a start on it."

White said the six-month delay between the time of the incident and when charges were officially filed was caused by the need for his

Future of UI sewer service will be decided next week

By Joseph Levy
The Daily Iowan

The fate of the UI's sewer service could be decided by the end of this week, and service may be cut off in one week if an agreement isn't reached, Iowa City Manager Stephen Atkins said Monday.

A meeting last Thursday between UI Business Manager Michael Finnegan, Iowa City Assistant Manager Dale Helling and Iowa City Finance Director Rosemary Vitosh yielded a new UI proposal to solve the sewer-rate deadlock between the two parties, but Atkins said the proposal offers little new material.

Atkins said Monday he is still studying the new proposal and the city's response will be determined by the end of the week. If no agreement is reached, the city council has directed Atkins to cut service to the UI.

But the proposal — which still calls for an arbitrator to decide what rate the UI should pay for its sewage service — does not appear to differ from the UI's original stand, Atkins said. "It's just the same old stuff," he said.

The UI refused to pay all of its $110,000 sewer bill in October because of a disagreement about two sewer rate increases imposed by the city in September 1986 and in July of this year.

UI VICE PRESIDENT for Finance and University Services Susan Phillips said the increases are unfair, and the UI should be allowed to pay a special rate because it is a large multi-account customer.

Finnegan said the UI will not compromise its position — to not pay the full bill until a third-party arbitrator decides if the rate is fair.

"We're asking for neutral third-party involvement," Finnegan said. "Basically our position hasn't changed on that."

Atkins said the city's position is also unchanged.

"Rates are not negotiable," he said.

Atkins said shutting off the sewer service to a large multi-account customer such as the UI would not be difficult.

"It's really very simple to shut it off," he said. "It's like placing a balloon in the pipe."

The procedure is routinely done by the city when customers don't pay their bills, he said.

FINNEGAN SAID he didn't know the city would consider cutting their service lines as soon as Dec. 14.

"I wasn't under the impression that they would shut them off Monday," he said, adding, however, that the UI is not about to allow sewer service to be cut.

"The university will take whatever action is necessary to maintain services to the university community," he said.

Another condition of the new UI proposal is that a rate study be done to determine whether or not city sewage service rates are fair.

Atkins said such a study is not necessary because a study was just done in 1986. Rate studies are routinely conducted at 10- to 15-year intervals, he said.

Branstad mulls user fees, cigarette tax hike for funds

By Scott Sonner
United Press International

DES MOINES — Gov. Terry Branstad told reporters Monday he no longer is committed to raising Iowa's gasoline tax, but there still is a need to consider a dime-per-pack increase in the state cigarette tax.

During his weekly Statehouse news conference, Branstad dodged reporters' questions about his call last year to raise $60 million through a 4-cent gas-tax hike.

He said he no longer is locked into that proposal, but went on to explain the reasons increased highway spending is necessary.

"I think there is a need for a comprehensive transportation system in Iowa... I believe it should be financed with a user-fee system," Branstad said.

He balked when asked if that meant he still supports the gas-tax hike.

"I SAID I HAVE asked the Department of Transportation to review last year's program in light of federal funding cuts," the governor said.

Later, during a transportation symposium sponsored by the U.S. Department of Agriculture in Des Moines, Branstad spoke more favorably of the need to boost gas taxes to finance his proposed "Transportation 2000" package.

"We've put together a program, Transportation 2000, for highways, airports, railroads, riverways, even bike paths and hiking paths," Branstad said.

"It would be financed by user fees," he said, explaining persons who used the services would pay for them and enjoy the benefits.

One conference member asked Branstad what he meant by "user-fee."

"GENERALLY THE user fees used for transportation are your normal-type user fee," the governor said, "that being certainly a gas tax, or vehicle registration or the sales tax on vehicles."

During the news conference,

Branstad was more supportive of his year-old plan to boost the state cigarette tax to 36 cents a pack, one of the highest cigarette taxes in the nation.

"The cigarette tax is something I think might need to be considered. I think it has broad-based public support," he said.

Branstad last year estimated a 10-cent increase in the cigarette tax would raise $25 million, but he said that figure may be revised downward due to the nation's trend toward less smoking.

The need for tax increases has been discussed in light of the state's looming $150 million budget deficit.

Branstad touts a second wave of state-government reorganization as the key to fighting the deficit. His press secretary, Dick Vohs, last week said Branstad may abandon his past calls for a gas- and cigarette-tax increase.

The Iowa House approved the cigarette-tax hike earlier this year and the House Transportation Committee passed a 2-cent gas-tax increase.

UI nurse: Siblings may benefit from rivalry

By Lisa Legge
The Daily Iowan

Every brother and sister can attest to the existence of sibling rivalry.

And every parent with more than one child can attest to the worst sibling rivalry causes.

But a UI researcher says parents should relax and recognize the positive dimensions of sibling struggle for power and parental attention.

"The children in a family form a microunit of society and peers — which happen to be in the same family — give a testing ground for weaknesses and strengths, for learning to negotiate conflicts and to compete," UI Associate Professor of Nursing Martha Craft said. "It's a part of their identification development."

"I-can-do-better-than-you" statements are self-assessments of skills and talents, said Craft, a pediatric nurse who has researched children for 10 years and worked with them for 20 years. Competition gives kids insight into personal strengths and weaknesses, telling them how they measure up to peers.

Other benefits come from sibling rivalry as well, she said.

"PARENTS CAN use sibling rivalry to motivate the unmotivated child," she said. "Let's say Tommy fixes his bed and puts his clothes away, but Johnny, his younger brother, does not. If you praise Tommy for fixing his bed, soon Johnny will learn he should fix his bed, too."

"They can get the message through feedback to a sibling," Craft added. "Positive or negative they can get their message across and without too much lecturing."

Aside from rivalry, Craft said older siblings can influence the behavior of those younger through example.

"Older children give them a set of expectations of what life should be," she said. "They set the tone for goal-setting for younger children."

"BUT LIKE ALL phenomena, sibling life can be good and bad," she said. "If unmonitored, sibling rivalry can be destructive."

Craft suggests parents intervene only when the fighting poses physical danger or "when hammering away at a negative or critical incident could lower the child's self-esteem."

"Most sibling relationships vibrate between extremes so the relationship remains ambivalent," Craft said. "Children may be angry but they still have a lot of love for each other."

UI OKs plan for recreation facility

$6 million armory replacement to house 6 basketball courts, offer parking

By Scott Hauser
The Daily Iowan

The UI Campus Planning Committee approved Monday plans for a $6.5 million, 33,000 square-foot recreation facility to replace the Field House Armory when it is torn down. The new building will include a parking structure for a new psychiatric hospital.

Using a cardboard mockup of the structure, architect David Dulaney told the committee the new structure will be raised off the ground to allow parking under the six-basketball-court gymnasium and will include a parking structure on the west side of the building.

He said the new building is intended to keep the "spatial feeling of the Field House and work in relationship to the older building.

"WE DIDN'T WANT it to be two buildings that were very close to each other with a walkway between," he said. "The whole Field House complex started to be a whole rather than just an addition of six basketball courts."

The recreation facility is intended to replace the six basketball courts currently housed in the armory which is scheduled to be torn down in early 1989 when the UI Hospitals and Clinics constructs a psychiatric pavilion on the site of the armory.

The new building will sit south of the pool wing of the Field House, about 40 feet from the Field House with an enclosed walkway allowing pedestrian traffic between the replacement facility and the Field House.

The two buildings will be connected by a balcony which will run from the new building across the walkway and past the Field House pool.

THE BUILDING measures 150 feet by 210 feet and will house six, 84-foot-by-44-foot hardwood basketball courts — three on each side of a 28-foot center space.

UI Planning and Administrative Services Director Richard Gibson said the plan will not include space for the UI's Air Force and Army Reserved Officer Training Corps programs — also housed in the current facility.

The state Board of Regents approved the project for the recreation facility with the understanding the building would be finished before the psychiatric pavilion was built, the lost parking would be replaced and student fees would not be used to fund the project.

Gibson said the building is on a "fast-track" schedule and is planned to be completed before the armory is torn down — barring construction difficulties.

UI Vice President for Finance Susan Phillips said the replacement facility will be financed by UI investment income, parking fees and UI Hospitals and Clinics Building Usage funds and gifts — the funds which finance the psychiatric hospital.

THE NEW BUILDING and the parking structure will house about 452 parking spaces — 171 student metered spaces under the facility and 231 reserved spaces in the parking structure.

UI Recreational Services Director Harry Ostrander said he is satisfied with the design for the new building and said the new building's hardwood floors and additional space between courts would be an improvement over the armory.

"It'll do everything the old armory did in terms of adequate space," he said.

Dulaney said construction on the building will begin in March or April 1988.

UI nurse: Siblings may benefit from rivalry

By Lisa Legge
The Daily Iowan

Every brother and sister can attest to the existence of sibling rivalry.

And every parent with more than one child can attest to the worry sibling rivalry causes.

But a UI researcher says parents should relax and recognize the positive dimensions of siblings' struggle for power and parental attention.

"The children in a family form a microunit of society and peers — which happen to be in the same family — give a testing ground for weaknesses and strengths, for learning to negotiate conflicts and to compete," UI Associate Professor of Nursing Martha Craft said. "It's a part of their identification development."

"I-can-do-better-than-you" statements are self-assessments of skills and talents, said Craft, a pediatric nurse who has researched children for 10 years and worked with them for 20 years. Competition gives kids insight into personal strengths and weaknesses by telling them how they measure up to peers.

Other benefits come from sibling rivalry as well, she said.

"PARENTS CAN use sibling rivalry to motivate the unmotivated child," she said. "Let's say Tommy fixes his bed and puts his clothes away, but Johnny, his younger brother, does not. If you praise Tommy for fixing his bed, soon Johnny will learn he should fix his bed, too."

"They can get the message through feedback to a sibling," Craft added. "Positive or negative, they can get their message across and without too much lecturing."

Aside from rivalry, Craft said, older siblings can influence the behavior of those younger through example.

"Older children give them a set of expectations of what life should be," she said. "They set the tone for goal-setting for younger children."

"BUT LIKE ALL phenomenon, sibling life can be good and bad," she said. "If unmonitored, sibling rivalry can be destructive."

Craft suggests parents intervene only when the fighting poses physical danger or "when hammering away at a negative or critical idea could lower the child's self-esteem."

"Most sibling relationships vacillate between extremes so the relationship remains ambivalent," Craft said. "Children may be angry but they still have a lot of love for each other."

Women testify Henshaw paid them for sex

By Anne Washington
 United Press International

PROVIDENCE, R.I. — Three former college students testified Monday that insurance agent Stanley Henshaw III coaxed them to have sex with him for money, though one angrily told a defense lawyer "I am not a prostitute!"
 Maria Picciano, 23, of New York told a Superior Court jury she met Henshaw while attending Johns Hopkins & Wales College in Providence, eventually posing in nude photographs for him and having sex with him and two of his friends.
 The testimony came on the second day of Henshaw's trial, in which he faces nine counts, including charges that he broke the state pandering and sodomy laws against oral sex.
 Picciano said she was given cash — up to $80 — after the sexual encounters, which began in the fall of 1984, but she said neither Henshaw nor his friends ever mentioned sex-for-cash.

"YOU JUST LIKE to have sex?" Sheehan asked.
 "You can say that," Picciano answered.
 Picciano, asked why the three men gave her cash, said, "They insisted all college students need money. They said, 'This would be a great help for you, take it.'"
 But Picciano said she broke off her relationship with Henshaw because she felt she was "being used" and was being paid for sex.
 Earlier, Rebecca Kidd and Debra Smith — two Brown University graduates who agreed to testify in exchange for immunity from prosecution — said they also had sex with Henshaw, 45.

Professor did nothing wrong

The Black Law Students Association would like to officially comment on The Daily Iowan's front-page story regarding a study session held for minority law students by Professor W.H. (Joe) Knight. Knight was acting professionally and in accordance with law school philosophy and tradition when he decided to hold this session for minority students. In holding the study session, he was responding to a need by minority students who came to him for help. Knight saw the students who came to him as a cross section of students having pre-final anxieties, so he provided a combination study techniques/pep talk session. He was acting in accordance with the Iowa Law College's "open door" policy, by which any student, or in this case, groups of students, can go to any law professor for help and expect to receive the needed help. Help can only be given if a need is perceived. The complaining students could have taken the initiative and requested that a study session be set up to meet their needs. They had only to ask.

THE PERCEIVED "wrong" with Knight's study session was that the session excluded majority students. This is incorrect in that white students attended the session and were treated with respect and compassion by Knight. They were

Guest Opinion

By Leslie Mealy
 The fact that the incident even appeared on the front page of the DI should raise eyebrows. This semester, the DI has, on numerous occasions, carried front-page articles describing the UI's commitment to recruit and educate minority students. It is ironic that when a professor rises to meet this commitment, it becomes front-page news, not to praise his efforts, but to single him out as a "wrong-doer."

IT WAS unnecessary to go to the newspaper, if, as was reported, "minority and non-minority law students continued to have a good rapport." One wonders, however, if a black student, who had been excluded from a study group with white students, would make the front page by alleging that this was discriminatory behavior. The deep hostility of a minority of majority students is evidenced by someone feeling slighted enough to go outside the law school community and relate to the DI this chain of events.

The perceived "wrong" . . . was that the session excluded majority students. . . (but) white students attended the session and were treated with respect and compassion by Knight.

Professor Knight's actions were not "reverse discrimination" as falsely alluded to by a student in the article that you published. According to the quoted student's definition of reverse discrimination, any person who would invite a group of people to do something, in a particular class of people who not invited, would be guilty of reverse discrimination.

TO ILLUSTRATE this point with an extreme case, if, for example, a group of students approaches a professor outside of class with questions about class material, would that not obligate the professor to reveal the content of the discussion to the entire class? If anyone has been subject to "discrimination," it is Knight.

Ninety percent of the faculty felt Knight was totally within his rights as a professor to conduct the study session. If the professors who raised the battle cry were actually concerned about minority students obtaining an unfair advantage, why didn't these professors step forward and provide the "wronged" students with a study session? Perhaps it is time to examine the motives of all the "rebel-rousers."

Finally, if nothing else, we hope this incident raises the consciousness of all involved and demonstrates to all that the struggle continues.

Leslie Mealy, a third-year law student, wrote this guest opinion on behalf of the Black Law Students Association.

Columnist gives his response

Like any other thief, the ordinary columnist learns that practiced deception makes perfect. When Royko is hung over, he coughs up yet another slice of Slat's Grobnik. If George Will's staff runs out of lines to feed him, he just revises his trusty Chicago Cubs column. And ever since Michael Humes had his last fresh idea, on March 3, 1986, he's used his cats, Biffer and Rossi, to pick up the slack.

I have a trick, too: once each semester I answer my mail. Not that I'm out of issues and feeling time's noose tightening, no; I do it because I care deeply about you, the reader. If I didn't care, I wouldn't risk phrases like "time's noose tightening." If I didn't care, I wouldn't use real letters from real readers, readers like you, who themselves cared enough to write.

DEAR SCOTT,

Stone, Amnesty International doubled its membership because of one of U2's tours. If U2 reaches one person and makes them want to change something that is wrong in this world, they are doing more than just making a profit.
 M.L. and D.G.

Dear M. and D.,
 I'm surprised that two scholars who can quote offhand from Rolling Stone would find pronoun agreement so tough. Anyhow, I admit that U2 does more than just turn a profit; St. Bono's Band also soothes young people into believing that petitions and singalongs will change the world. How worthy.
 Just to set the record straight, by the way, I double-major in Half-Truth and Gross Overgeneralization, with minors in Blatant Disregard of Fact and Mere Gratuitous Sarcasm.

DEAR SCOTT,
 Your column about drinking beer and speaking with God was extremely offensive. If it was supposed to be humorous, it sadly failed to make that intent obvious and ended up being mere gratuitous sarcasm.
 C.B.
 Dear C.,
 I guess the humorous intent would have been obvious only to someone equipped with a human brain. So sorry you missed it.

DEAR SCOTT,
 I can only shake my head and wonder at your reactionary article on abortion. If private control over the means of production is capitalism, what is private control over the means of reproduction? I account abortion as a sin, but not the sin of murder. Your polemic against the Right to Lifers seems to portray them all as simple-minded fanatics clutching Bibles to their breast in self-righteous outrage. I hardly fit the description.
 G.G.
 Dear G.,
 True: you're more of a pseudo-intellectual crank with a touch of psychosis. Keep the lithium script filled.

DEAR SCOTT,
 The irrelevant nature of your column coupled with your flippant way of dealing with weighty matters make it perhaps the shoddiest piece of journalism I have ever read. One hopes for articulate, thoughtful work in a paper representative of a Big Ten university.
 J.W.
 Dear J.,
 One hopes, but what can one do? Transfer, perhaps?

DEAR SCOTT,
 I challenge you to discuss the issues with a real, live reasoning Christian to help you gain some perspective, balance and depth.
 R.M.
 Dear R.,
 Sure. And then I'll find a real, live, talking walrus to give me some diet tips.

Will buyers help Wall Street?

Mike Royko

On the first really cold day of this winter, I reached into the back of the closet for my heavy overcoat.
 As I put it on, the wife made a retching sound and said: "You're not going to wear that awful thing again, are you?"
 Why not? It's warm and it fits. What more can I ask of a coat?
 "It's old and filthy," she said. "Look in the mirror."

I looked at my reflection. True, some threads dangled from the bottom and the collar. And there were a few mud stains here and there. The cuffs were frayed and a couple of buttons were missing. But I pointed out that the basic structure was sound.
 "You ought to throw it out and buy a new one," she said.
 But it isn't really that old. I bought it in 1971.

"THAT'S 16 years," she said, sounding amazed.
 Ah, but a coat isn't like a car. I wear it only during the winters. The rest of the year, it rests. So it's much younger than it looks.
 "Please," she said, "I'm really embarrassed when we go somewhere in public. I've seen coatroom attendants look sick when they have to handle it."

So as I went out the door, I agreed to buy a new overcoat, although the thought was painful. Not only am I sentimental about old clothes, I'm cheap. The coat's price had been $140, the most I ever spent on a garment. But by wearing it all those years, I had amortized — I think that's the word — the original cost down to about $9.31 a year. Or maybe $9.50 with dry cleaning.

FINALLY, I have found a way to fight back against these madmen.
 For several years now, they've been playing their crazy game, buying stocks for more than they can possibly be worth, pushing up the prices, selling, buying, merging, insider swapping, then running out to get a new Rolex.

Brokers have been persuading the gullible to buy stocks in companies about which they know nothing. They don't know if the chairman of the board is a lush, if the bookkeeper is stealing from petty cash or if the factory roof leaks and the toilets back up. They don't even know where the company is located or what the heck they make or sell.

Many of the companies weren't even making money. But that didn't stop Wall Street. Wild-eyed people listened to the brokers, the experts, the authors of financial newsletters, who shouted "buy, buy, buy." And they threw more money at them and the prices went up.

NOW IT'S all crashing down. If you read The Wall Street Journal, all you get is pitiful moaning. Story after story about brokers who are trembling, economists who are quaking, financiers who are standing in pools of sweat, investors who are down to their skivvies.

And that's the publication that calls itself the "diary of the American dream." Dream? It reads more like the diary of the delirium tremens.

So now, who are they blaming for their own idiotic behavior? The consumers, because we're not spending enough. Me and my old coat.

I'm glad they told me, because I'm going to do everything I can to keep them miserable. The coat stays. So do the frayed underwear, the gravy-stained ties, the round-heeled shoes.

For Christmas, I give the kids a promissory note for cash that I will put aside for them in an old coffee can in a corner of the basement. That way, they can't spend it, either.

And how will I benefit from this? Maybe this time next year, I can sell my old coat to some needy soul on Wall Street.

Off track

Gov. Terry Branstad added his voice to those opposing the buyout of Iowa's North Western Railway, but money talks too, and money might talk louder.

The New York investor group, Gibbons, Green and van Amerongen, has proposed a leveraged buyout of Iowa's biggest railroad, and the Federal Railway Administration is currently considering it. Branstad joined the Iowa Department of Transportation in criticizing the sale, mainly because he thinks leveraged buyouts are a bad idea.

He's entirely right. A leveraged buyout consists of buying a business with a credit line set by the business' own assets. The money is paid back by the business' profit, or the sale of some of its property.

Picture it this way: A fishmonger gets sick, and to pay his hospital bills he borrows money against a huge chunk of his future earnings. So he's given hospital care, fine, but he's effectively out of a job and headed for hard times. If the fishing's really good, he might pay off his debt. If fishing is poor for even one year, the hospital throws the fishmonger in jail.

North Western is already $800 million in debt, and some drastic financial belt tightening would be necessary even without any buyout. That won't be pleasant. But financing a recovery with debt is just asking for worse, especially in dealing with an ailing company.

If the new debts incurred by the deal can't be paid off, the railroad — and its parent company — might be forced into bankruptcy. That would be too late for talk. The FRA shouldn't let it get that far.

Religious rights

In a case involving some of the most basic issues of religion and politics, the U.S. Supreme Court Monday decided to hear arguments regarding the tax-exempt status of the Roman Catholic Church. If the lower court ruling is upheld, the decision could eliminate the tax-free standing of the church and likely affect other religious and charitable groups as well.

Essentially, the high court must distinguish between federal laws which grant religious and charitable organizations tax-exempt status but disallow exemptions for groups involved in political activity such as lobbying. Several groups opposed to Catholic lobbying against abortion claim the church has crossed over into the political realm by having "engaged in a nationwide, persistent and regular pattern of intervening in elections" on behalf of pro-life candidates.

Undoubtedly, such activities could be described as political, but deciding against the church on the grounds that it had too strenuously advocated a political viewpoint would set a dangerous precedent for religious freedom in the United States. Contrary to the views of many secularists, the line between religion and politics is usually indistinct — if not completely nonexistent — and the values religious leaders inject into the political sphere are a fundamental part of the nation's heritage.

Whether or not one agrees with the the Catholic Church on its abortion stand, it is entitled to the protections afforded by the U.S. Constitution. Attempts to deny such protection amount to nothing more than harassment by those with a narrow political agenda.

Chiles decides against re-election bid

WASHINGTON — Sen. Lawton Chiles, D-Fla., a 17-year veteran of the Senate and chairman of its budget committee, announced Monday he will not seek re-election next year.

Chiles' surprise decision — he was heavily favored for a fourth term — is expected to turn the 1988 Senate election in the nation's fifth-most populous state into a wide-open contest in both parties.

Defense rests case in Deaver trial

WASHINGTON — Lawyers for former White House aide Michael Deaver announced dramatically Monday that they will offer no evidence to rebut testimony at his six-week trial, in which he has been accused of lying to a congressional subcommittee and a federal grand jury. The bold strategy, disclosed suddenly after U.S. District Court Judge Thomas Penfield Jackson again rejected defense efforts to dismiss the charges, means that the case could go to a jury as early as Friday. Defense lawyers said they acted because they felt that the government's case, presented over 20 days and through 52 witnesses, was weak and Jackson's rulings hampered their efforts to present a strong defense.

High court to hear church-records case

WASHINGTON — The Supreme Court agreed Monday to decide whether abortion-rights groups may seek to force the Internal Revenue Service to strip the Roman Catholic Church of its tax-exempt status because of the church's anti-abortion efforts. The justices said they will hear an appeal by the National Conference of Catholic Bishops and the United States Catholic Conference from contempt citations for not turning over internal documents to abortion-rights groups.

Pentagon braces for defense budget cuts

WASHINGTON — Pentagon leaders, bracing for budget cuts of up to 12 percent in what they planned to spend on military programs over the next five years, said Monday they expect to reduce troop levels by about 5 percent and kill several major weapons programs to meet the financial constraints. Defense officials have warned Pentagon agencies to prepare for cutbacks in planned program expansions, including President Ronald Reagan's Strategic Defense Initiative.

Supreme Court to rule on alcoholism

WASHINGTON — The Veterans Administration Monday asked the Supreme Court to rule that most alcoholics are victims of "willful misconduct," rather than an illness in a case that could have significant consequences for government agencies, employers, insurance companies and the estimated 10 million alcoholics in the United States. If the court decides that alcoholism is not a disease the ruling could be interpreted to affect treatment policies.

First day of strike in Haiti fizzles out

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti — The first day of a nationwide 48-hour general strike to protest the military government's takeover of the electoral process was only partly successful and, in the capital, wore off as the day wore on. The strike results made it more probable that the National Government Council, headed by Gen. Henri Namphy, would succeed in organizing January national elections under its control — but not necessarily more likely that such elections would gain broad popular acceptance.

Former Philippine adviser found dead

MANILA, Philippines — Former finance secretary Jaime Ongpin, one of the main architects of President Corason Aquino's economic policy, was found dead Monday with a single gunshot wound in his right temple in what police officials and family members described as an apparent suicide. Ongpin, 49, had been one of Aquino's most powerful and influential advisers until she fired him three months ago as part of a government shake-up in the aftermath of an aborted Aug. 28 coup attempt.

Pearl dead honored in harbor ceremony

By Patricia Bibby
United Press International

PEARL HARBOR, Hawaii — Silence marked the moment of attack, then jets streaked overhead in missing man formation Monday to honor the 2,409 Americans killed in the Japanese air raid on Pearl Harbor 46 years ago that thrust the United States into World War II.

About 150 people aboard the USS Arizona Memorial observed the annual ceremony, which concluded with a 21-gun salute and taps played across the harbor waters.

At Arlington National Cemetery, near the nation's capital, top officials of the American Veterans of World War II, Korea and Vietnam placed a wreath of red, white and blue carnations at the Tomb of the Unknowns.

Participants in the Pearl Harbor ceremony stood in silence at 11:55 a.m. CST, the exact moment of the attack, with only the sounds of the water lapping against the rusting hulk and stiff winds ripping through the open-air memorial.

SECONDS LATER, the silence was broken by the thunder of F-15 jets streaking directly overhead, flying in missing man formation.

In the harbor, the guided missile cruiser USS Worden cruised by with its crew in white dress lining the deck, standing at attention. Officials then hoisted the flag while the national anthem played.

"As we stand here today honoring these fallen heroes, let us not forget their legacy, a legacy best described by a need for military preparedness," said Adm. Ronald Hays, commander in chief of the U.S. Pacific Command.

"Pearl Harbor and World War II thrust America into a position of leadership of the free world — a position from which we dare not shrink — even though the burdens are great," Hays said.

THE ADMIRAL ENDED his keynote speech saying the attack on Pearl Harbor — which killed 2,409 Americans and wounded 1,178 — "served to remind us that the price of freedom is eternal vigilance."

Veterans and community groups presented funeral wreaths, and members dropped flowers one by one into the oily waters above the sunken battleship in which the bodies of 1,102 crew members lie entombed.

The Arizona is the only Navy ship not in commission still allowed to fly the U.S. flag by special permission of the Secretary of the Navy.

The Reagan-Gorbachev Summit

Thatcher reiterates proposal to Gorbachev

By Karen DeYoung
Washington Post

BRIZE NORTON AIR BASE, England — Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher said after talks here Monday morning with Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev that a "common sense" compromise on space-based defenses could provide a "way ahead" for forging new U.S.-Soviet arms-control agreements.

Thatcher reiterated her compromise proposal, which she first made to Gorbachev and President Ronald Reagan early this year, at a two-hour meeting with Gorbachev during a refueling stop on his way to the Washington summit.

It formed the centerpiece of what she later described as a "thoroughly valuable, and of course stimulating" visit between the two leaders, who last met when Thatcher traveled to Moscow last spring. The two leaders are said to enjoy a close if combative relationship, and they seemed buoyantly glad to see each other today. Gorbachev bounded down the steps of his Aeroflot Ilyushin-62 jet into the chill, sunny British morning with what appeared to be genuine enthusiasm.

As she did during her own Moscow trip, Thatcher Monday effusively praised Gorbachev and his campaign for internal reforms in the Soviet Union, saying "he's a bold, determined and courageous leader, and I hope that he succeeds with his task." Calling for world backing for his efforts, she said "you can't be urging human rights and then not support glasnost and perestroika." Gorbachev's policies aimed at increased openness in politics and an economic restructuring in the Soviet Union.

Thatcher believes much of her power derives not only from her position as the West's senior stateswoman in terms of longevity in office, but also through her position as Reagan's closest ally and confidante in Europe. Although she did not mention Reagan, her message appeared addressed toward Washington when she noted that "you have to be very, very well prepared" for superpower summit meetings. "During the course of the talks," she said, "new ideas may come up. That often happens... you don't make any commitment. You go away and work them out."

Gorbachev and Reagan on Tuesday will sign an agreement eliminating intermediate-range nuclear forces, comprising missiles deployed primarily in Europe. However, both men have said that progress toward a separate accord involving a proposed 50 percent cut in long-range strategic missiles would be at the top of their agenda. So far those negotiations have been blocked by disagreement over space-based missile defense programs, specifically the U.S. Strategic Defense Initiative, designed to counter the long-range weapons.

Thatcher believes her proposed compromise is a way around the logjam. In a news conference today after Gorbachev's departure, she described it as "quite a significant step which makes further arrangements... possible," such as a strategic agreement.

Her plan calls for both Washington and Moscow to pledge adherence to the 1972 Anti-ballistic Missile treaty for a fixed period, probably 10 years, while observing its provision not to deploy space-based systems.

France

PARIS — The French government rounded up dozens of Iranian dissidents and ordered them expelled Monday in what the exiles said was "ransom" for the recent liberation of two French hostages in Beirut.

The expulsion order, announced by the Interior Ministry, appeared to be the latest step in a complicated secret agreement worked out with Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini's government by Prime Minister Jacques Chirac and his aides to win the hostages' release.

The accord, only parts of which have become known, led to the Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev waves to photographers and reporters at his stop Monday at Brize Norton Air Force Base in England, while British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher looks on.

U.S. reporters target visiting Soviet media

By Sydney Shaw
United Press International

WASHINGTON — Reporters scrambling for stories the day before the official start of the superpower summit Monday often resorted to interviewing each other, with the most attention focused on the Soviet media.

Foreign television crews stalked the front rows of the international press center that was thrown up overnight at the J.W. Marriott Hotel, training their cameras on TV network luminaries such as ABC's Sam Donaldson and NBC's Andrea Mitchell. Still photographers snapped photos of the TV crews.

But the most often asked question seemed to be, "Where can I find a Soviet reporter?"

Detroit News reporter Richard Willing decided to spend some time at the Madison Hotel to find out more about the Soviet reporters staying there. He was not alone.

"IT'S THE FIRST HOTEL I'VE EVER CHECKED INTO where TV cameras were trained on me the whole time," he said. "I asked — ABC, CBS or KGB? But no one laughed."

In the Soviet press room at the Marriott, foreign ministry official Sergey Komolov tried, over the phone, to set up an interview between Fox Broadcasting and reporters from the Soviet government newspaper Izvestia as other journalists crowded around his desk to ask "what about Raisa's schedule?" "when will you have it?" and "how can I get into Gorbachev's news conference?"

"They're analysts," he explained in the phone, glancing apologetically at the horde. "How do you spell that? I-z-v-e-s-t-i-a. It's a newspaper."

A reporter from Reuters, notebook in hand, eagerly cornered a man and a woman seated next to Komolov, and started asking questions about the Soviet press.

"WE'RE HERE TO SERVICE THE COPYING machines," the woman said.

Another reporter, Evgueni Adnriyanov of the Soviet political weekly New Times, politely answered questions nearby. He said he covered the 1980 meeting between former Soviet leader Leonid Brezhnev and Indira Gandhi and but this event was better.

Staking out the summit

More than 6,000 members of the news media are covering the Reagan-Gorbachev summit. The most visible part of the press invasion of Washington is a cluster of temporary studios that television networks have built in the Ellipse, facing the south side of the White House.

Protestors wreak havoc on D.C. streets

By John Mintz
and Sandra Saperstein Torry
Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev came to a Washington that was charged with electricity.

Barricades had sprung up overnight. Battalions of police, Secret Service agents and overcoated men of indeterminate agency patrolled the streets. And protesters espousing seemingly every cause spent the day chanting and marching in the downtown neighborhood within blocks of his embassy.

It was a Felliniesque scene: a woman clad in a garbage bag over her full-length fur pacing Lafayette

Park from rally to rally, a man calling himself "Mr. Wake-Up-America" hiring a plane with banner to take his message to the skies, and an outraged Afghan in a curbside argument with a top D.C. police official yelling, "You will be Soviet slaves."

THE CITY THAT usually shrugs off the visits of foreign dignitaries was finally overwhelmed by the hype and high-tension security arrangements. And, at spots, it was brought to a standstill as traffic on the streets immediately around the Soviet Embassy was funneled into a single lane or blocked by barricades.

The climax to the day of Gorbachev-waiting came at 4:19 p.m. CST when the Soviet leader emerged from his black, armored Zil limousine to walk on a red carpet into the embassy. To make way for the enormous car with its extra-wide turning radius, the wrought-iron gate had to be cut Sunday night, according to a law enforcement official.

Monday evening, helicopters hovered, security agents scrutinized the scene through binoculars from nearby rooftops, and the entrance, shielded from overhead view by a new white canopy, was bathed in floodlights — as if it were an opening night.

ONE OF THE onlookers, standing behind a police line, suggested that she and her friend move to the Ellipse for the lighting of the National Christmas Tree. "No," said her friend, Carol Lee Miller. "This is history."

Gorbachev had touched down in an Aeroflot jet at Andrews Air Force Base in Prince George's County and was rushed in a 50-vehicle caravan to the Soviet Embassy.

Gorbachev's arrival for the superpower summit had brought mixed reviews. A marquee outside a Holiday Inn on his route from Andrews proclaimed, "Welcome, Mr. Gorbachev, to the United States." That angered the leader of a protest group.

France exiles Iranians for Beirut captives

By Edward Cody
Washington Post

PARIS—The French government rounded up dozens of Iranian dissidents and ordered them expelled Monday in what the exiles said was "ransom" for the recent liberation of two French hostages in Beirut.

The expulsion order, announced by the Interior Ministry, appeared to be the latest step in a complicated secret agreement worked out with Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini's government by Prime Minister Jacques Chirac and his aides to win the hostages' release.

The accord, only parts of which have become known, led to the freeing Nov. 27 of the two French journalists, and the trade two days later of an Iranian official confined in Paris for a French diplomat confined in Tehran. With this exchange and France's promise of quick payment on a billion-dollar debt to Iran, French officials have expressed hope that the remaining three French hostages in Lebanon will soon be freed and relations with Iran will be normalized.

THE EXPULSION ORDER announced Monday affected supporters of the People's Mujaheddin, an Iraqi-supported rebel group headed by Massoud Rajavi. The Baghdad-based organization, whose military action has been coordinated with Iraqi efforts in the gulf war, represents the major armed resistance by Iranians to Khomeini's rule.

Mujaheddin officials in Washington said their guerrillas have killed or wounded 8,400 Iranian soldiers and taken 845 prisoners in about 100 clashes along the Iran-Iraq border since the beginning of the year.

The Interior Ministry said "several dozen" Mujaheddin militants were detained early this morning around Paris and served with expulsion orders because "they were carrying out within that organization militant acts that gravely harm public order." Those rounded up were placed in "administrative retention," the ministry said, apparently meaning they were being kept in police custody pending expulsion.

THE MINISTRY'S communique did not describe the militant acts on which the expulsion orders were based. Mujaheddin spokesmen here and in Washington said their supporters have violated no French laws and have been residing in France under political asylum as defined by U.N. and French statutes.

"There is no doubt that these expulsions are part of the ransom Khomeini is seeking from the French government and that the French government has given in to this little Hitler, that is, Khomeini," said Shahin Gobadi, a Mujaheddin spokesman, in a telephone call from Washington.

The French Deputy Interior Minister for Security, Robert Pandraud, told reporters the expulsions were not part of a "bargain." He said they were ordered under French policy that accords asylum only as long as "political refugees do not foment outside attacks from French territory and do not by their presence or declarations compromise French diplomatic interests."

The French granted Khomeini asylum during the 1970s while he worked to overthrow the regime of Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlavi, a point noted by Rajavi, the Mujaheddin leader, in a telegram of protest to President Francois Mitterrand.

The Interior Ministry did not say when the expulsions would be carried out or where the Iranians will be sent. News reports quoted French officials as saying those expelled would not be forced to return to Iran. But it was unclear what other country besides Iraq would be willing to accept them.

Rajavi himself was based in a Paris suburb from 1981 until June 1986, when he was expelled as part of Chirac's first attempt to improve relations with Tehran. Two French hostages were released within 15 days.

U.S. reinforces opposition to Korean electoral intervention

SEOUL, South Korea — Amid indications that the ruling party's candidate is falling behind, a U.S. diplomat reiterated Monday that the United States is opposed to any intervention by South Korea's armed forces in the presidential election scheduled for Dec. 16.

The diplomat's statement, made on condition that he not be identified by name, was the second such warning in a week.

"We believe the election process should be culminated according to procedures," the diplomat said. "We are opposed to any disruption or interruption of that process by any sector of society, including the military."

Military tolerance of the election has been based on the expectation of a victory by Roh Tae Woo, the ruling party candidate. However, a Roh victory now seems less certain, and many analysts believe that a victory by either of the two major opposition candidates, Kim Young Sam and Kim Dae Jung, might be unacceptable to the military leaders.

A Western diplomat discounted military intervention as unlikely, but he did not rule it out as a possibility.

"Basically, I'm still optimistic," he said. "There is a tremendous consensus for seeing this election through to the end, and that affects most soldiers, too, by and large."

HE SAID THAT "most Koreans would view military intervention as worse than (that in) 1979-80" and warned that there could be a major uprising if the military steps in.

In 1979, Gen. Chun Doo Hwan and Roh, then also a general, seized control of the army, and in 1980, they carried out a coup d'etat that installed Chun as president. Roh was later named to head Chun's Democratic Justice Party and is now its candidate for president.

One of the victims of the 1979 army takeover was Gen. Chung Seung Hwa, who was ousted as chief of staff. Now, Chung has endorsed the candidacy of Kim Young Sam, and some analysts think that if Kim Young Sam is elected, he might let Chung carry out an army house-cleaning.

One indication that Roh is faring poorly came in an unpublished poll conducted Nov. 27-29 by the Korea Christian Research Institute for Social Affairs. The results were made available Monday to the Los Angeles Times.

THE POLL WAS based on interviews with 1,497 people nationwide. Of these, 26.8 percent said they would vote for Kim Dae Jung, 23.4 percent for Kim Young Sam, 18.9 percent for Roh, and 7.3 percent for a fourth candidate, Kim Jong Pil. Ten percent declined to say whom they favor, and the rest said they had not made up their minds.

KIM DAE JUNG also addressed a television audience, and he appeared to be more relaxed and rested than in earlier TV appearances. He made a direct appeal to the military.

"Some of you military people must have reservations about me as a result of this dictatorial government's propaganda," he said. "I state clearly that I am 100 percent anti-Communist. I fully support national security, and I respect the military."

Kim Young Sam canceled rallies in two other cities in the province and charged that government agents had touched off the violence in order to play up differences between his native Kyongsang region in the southeast and the Cholla region, which is Kim Dae Jung's base of support.

Summit

"There are areas in which new ideas can flourish. I don't want to pre-judge how the talks will go. But we're willing to bargain, and we're willing to talk."

Gorbachev, accompanied by his wife Raisa, Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze and a large delegation of top officials, arrived at nearby Andrews Air Force Base precisely on schedule at 3:40 p.m. CST.

"Welcome to the United States of America, we are delighted to have you here," Secretary of State George Shultz told the 56-year-old Soviet leader, clad in a gray coat and hat with a scarf, as he stepped from the jetliner. His wife wore an elegant gray fur jacket.

In brief remarks, Gorbachev said: "On behalf of the people and the government of the Soviet Union, I wish to assure all Americans that we sincerely want better relations between our countries and peoples."

"I HAVE ARRIVED in your country on this visit to complete work and to sign the treaty on the elimination of intermediate and shorter-range missiles, thus completing work on the question which all of the nations of the world have been looking to us to do."

Apart from nuclear arms control, Gorbachev said, "we will be discussing other world problems, too, of course, problems which are of concern to the nations. . . . We can neither of us shirk the role that we are to play in world affairs."

The very fact that he and Reagan are meeting for the third time in three years, he said, points "to the increased responsibility and understanding of that responsibility devolving upon the . . . leaders of the Soviet Union and the leaders of the United States of America."

As Gorbachev arrived, top Soviet officials appeared confident that progress would be made here and that another summit would be scheduled for Moscow next year, either in late May or early June.

AMERICAN OFFICIALS were more guarded in their optimism despite Reagan's public comments that he expected to make progress that would lead to a long-range missile treaty. Shultz and Fitzwater stressed that negotiations for the treaty would be complicated and time-consuming, and neither held out much promise that one could be completed in time for a Moscow signing ceremony.

Immediately after the brief welcoming ceremonies, Gorbachev and his Soviet party were whisked away in a huge and heavily protected motorcade and taken to the Soviet Embassy, about four blocks from the White House. Massive security precautions have been taken for Gorbachev's visit and several blocks around the embassy have been cordoned off and put under heavy police protection.

President

President for Health Affairs David Challoner, University of Arizona Provost Nils Hasselmo, University of Kansas Vice Chancellor for Research Frances Horowitz, University of Illinois-Chicago Chancellor Donald Langenberg and University of Minnesota College of Law Dean Robert Stein.

Becker has said only the people who have visited the UI will be submitted to the board for them to consider.

The board will interview the candidates and either select a new president or ask the search committee to submit more names, he said.

"They want to know who we would be satisfied with as president," Becker said, adding the board would also receive the information the committee has about all the candidates.

Becker said he hopes the board will be able to begin the interviews as early as next week.

The committee has gathered information and screened more than 200 nominees for the position left vacant when former UI President James O. Freedman resigned in July to become the president of Dartmouth College in Hanover, N.H.

Becker said he has been pleased with the search.

"There's always some other people you wish would have come and talked to us," Becker said. "No matter how well you know a person — until that person is on the job a year or two, you don't know how well he or she is going to perform."

The committee will continue to take names and gather information until a president is named, Becker said.

Crash

Said Ron Alsop a spokesman for the San Luis Obispo County Fire Department: "Wreckage was spread out over about 10 acres."

The crash site was placed about five miles east of the Pacific Ocean near the community of Harmony, about 15 miles west of Templeton and about 175 miles northwest of Los Angeles.

AT SAN FRANCISCO International Airport, where the flight was scheduled to arrive at 6:43 p.m. CST, PSA officials cordoned off an airport VIP area for those gathered to meet passengers on the ill-fated flight. The arrival board directed those interested in the flight to "please see agent."

The PSA aircraft normally carries a crew of four, but the flight included an extra flight attendant in training, said Suha Arkan, San Francisco station manger for PSA.

The airline said that it had dispatched a crew to the scene and had begun contacting next of kin of passengers and crew "so that they can do what needs to be done."

Jack Strauss, who was driving near the crash site, told CBS that "the wreckage was spread over an area of one to four miles by 500 to 600 yards in a very remote area."

"I could see no full bodies, just pieces," Strauss said. "The debris was spread all over."

A PSA spokesman in San Francisco said only eight people came to meet the plane and they were taken to a private area in the terminal.

"We are taking care of them," the spokesman said.

goals for itself.

The UI's salary situation is the main reason for the UI's slow pace of increasing percentages and for the larger number of women leaving tenure-track positions than being hired, he said.

"It's awfully hard to make progress when you're dead last and everybody knows it," he said.

He said the current report indicates women did better in achieving tenure-track positions because the percentage of women female tenure-track faculty who have tenure increased by 3 percent to 62 percent and said women's percentages increased while men's stayed about the same.

"I'm not saying it's just fine, it's not just fine, but we are making progress," Remington said.

He said the UI will continue to emphasize minority faculty recruitment because the UI continues to do poorly in attracting minority faculty members.

"THE QUESTION is whether the cup is one-half empty or one-half full," he said. "We have a bold new program and we're pushing for it."

Dellworth said the UI has not stressed issues which women faculty members think are important. "I don't think this has been a very hospitable environment for women," she said. "There's a whole lot of issues that have to be addressed if we want to attract more women and minorities."

She said women are subject to sexism and harassment and the UI has not emphasized the importance of child-care and day-care services until recently.

She said the UI's new flexible benefits program is a step in the right direction and said the UI's minority recruitment plan should improve the situation if it is financed by the Iowa Legislature.

"My feeling is we want to support these initiatives like 'Opportunity at Iowa' — they're very good, but we have to keep the heat on," she said.

The UI has about 1,200 tenured faculty members.

office to determine if the Iowa City police officers involved in Edwards' arrest had probable cause to request a blood test.

"I WANTED TO find out more directly from the officers whether they had probable cause," White said, adding that he had taken the unusual step of interviewing all of the officers involved in the arrest before pressing charges.

Accident reports filed shortly after the incident did not indicate whether officers smelled alcohol on Edwards' breath or noticed any other visible signs of drinking, according to White, but an investigation revealed that an officer who had been on the scene, Sid Jackson, had not filed a report.

White said that he received Jackson's report Nov. 30, and the report indicated the officers had probable cause to test Edwards.

Miller said he is investigating why Jackson's report was not turned in shortly after the accident, which is against departmental policy.

"I have asked the captain to investigate the matter," Miller said.

The case was also delayed by Miller's vacation in Europe during October and White's involvement in the Keaton Smiley trial.

WHITE SAID HE is concerned about the damage the case has done to the reputations of both the Iowa City Police Department and the Johnson County Sheriff's Department.

"It concerns me," White said. "Peace officers ought to be role models. I have heard some officers who have said if this had happened on a county road with nobody around they might not have filed a report."

Both Hughes and Edwards were unavailable for comment Monday regarding Edwards' status within the Sheriff's Department. White said he did not believe Edwards should be suspended.

"Dick Edwards is a fine officer," White said. "I don't think he should be suspended. I am very sorry that this delay caused so much bad publicity for him."

Miller said he hoped Monday's action would end the problems and the publicity caused by the case.

"I think the publicity with this case was nonsense and unwarranted," Miller said.

UI student council

By Kevin Goulding
The Daily Iowan

UI student Niambi Webster was recently selected by the Iowa Arts Council as one of four recipients for their Outstanding Achievements in the Awards.

Webster, a UI doctoral candidate in Curriculum and Instruction, is also Director of Educational Support Programs at Coe College in Cedar Rapids, portrays black historical characters through drama and music and dance in Iowa schools and colleges. "Through her performances, Niambi Webster presents a positive image of black culture in Iowa. As part of Clarke College's 'Women in History' program last year, Niambi combined her educational background with her talent, weaving the arts into the cultural history of Iowa," said Julie Baer of the Arts Council.

ACCORDING TO HER mentor, Sister Marguerite Neumann, Clarke College in Dubuque, Webster has dramatic talent as well as social message gives poignancy purpose to her performances. She has undertaken a Herculean job, persisting in "unlearning" racism at the schools.

A "southern girl" from Batesville, Ark., Webster came to Iowa in 1970 to pursue quality education. One of the first things she noticed was the lack of awareness of black history and the contributions of black Americans toward the founding of our country. "I heard about George Washington Carver, for instance, and attended Iowa State University. And not caring that they didn't know, and I'm talking about black and white people."

De Forest is just beginning to be heard outside of the California scene as a result of his January independent LP I Shall Be Released. The LP has attracted fair share of critical attention, generally favorable, with De Forest being labeled a promising songwriter in the footsteps of '60s Dylans and '70s/80s Elvis Costello. Dylan influence can be seen immediately in the album's title.

UI student honored by Iowa council for high achievement

By Kevin Goulding
The Daily Iowan

UI student Niambi Webster was recently selected by the Iowa Arts Council as one of four recipients for their Outstanding Achievements in the Arts awards.

Webster, a UI doctoral candidate in Curriculum and Instruction and also Director of Educational Support Programs at Coe College in Cedar Rapids, portrays black historical characters through drama, music and dance in Iowa schools and colleges. "Through her performances, Niambi Webster presented a positive image of black culture in Iowa. As part of Clarke College's Women in History program this year, Niambi combined her educational background with her talent, weaving the arts into the cultural history of Iowa," said Julie Bailey of the Arts Council.

Niambi Webster

According to her nominator, Sister Marguerite Neumann, of Clarke College in Dubuque: "Her dramatic talent as well as her social message gives poignancy and purpose to her performances. She has undertaken a Herculean job of persisting in 'unlearning' racism in the schools."

A "southern girl" from Batesville, Ark., Webster came to Iowa in 1970 to pursue quality education. One of the first things she noticed was the lack of awareness of black history and the contributions of black Americans toward the founding of our country. "I heard people saying that they hadn't heard about George Washington Carver, for instance, and he attended Iowa State University. And not caring that they didn't know, and I'm talking about both black and white people."

The lack of awareness was a pressing concern for Webster because she was raising a son in a predominantly white environment.

"I wondered how he was going to learn about the important black individuals and achievements like I did, and then I realized, 'me' — I would teach him." Webster began by structuring learning activities at home with her son such as little plays and puppet shows, and writing poems together and then putting dances to them.

She would do occasional shows with her son for his classmates and friends. Word soon spread about the delightful shows and Webster started getting requests to do presentations from teachers in the schools. A person from the Iowa Arts Council heard about her work and thought it should be seen by more children so she offered Webster a position as 'apprentice artist.' Webster progressed from apprentice artist to the 'artists in the school program,' and finally to the 'solo artist' program, which she was participating in when she was nominated for the award this year.

"I BELIEVE IN propagating black involvement in the arts. I want to see more blacks visible on stage, more plays by black playwrights and more roles of prominence, both serious and artistic versus comic buffoons and stereotypes," Webster said. "People need to see that blacks don't just sing, dance and perform sports." "Unlearning racism" is not an easy task. Webster's efforts are a shining example of how individual action can affect social change and progress. Webster's work shows that the true potential for the arts is not only for entertainment but also for enlightenment. In presenting the award at the State House, Governor Terry Branstad proclaimed: "Through their energy, commitment, and tireless efforts, these people have not only promoted and propagated the arts in Iowa, they have also raised the standards of excellence to the highest levels."

Singer works political vein

By Jeff Rynott

Political lyricism, though hardly at the level of its '60s heyday, is once again in vogue in the 1980s, with artists from Bruce Springsteen and U2 down to The Alarm and The Rainmakers all unleashing critical commentary on the state of the world today.

Carraig de Forest, a 29-year-old veteran of the Los Angeles club scene, is yet another songwriter in the political vein. Tonight, he brings his caustic comments to Iowa City in a performance at Gabe's Oasis, 330 E. Washington St.

De Forest is just beginning to be heard outside of the California club scene as a result of his January '87 independent LP I Shall Be Released. The LP has attracted a fair share of critical attention, generally favorable, with De Forest being labeled a promising songwriter in the footsteps of '60s Dylan and '70s/80s Elvis Costello. The Dylan influence can be seen immediately in the album's title.

Music

THAT COMPARISON TO Mr. Zimmerman is also apt, as neither artist is graced with the most beautiful of voices. De Forest, though an interesting and powerful songwriter, is no singer, and his musical talents also leave a little something to be desired. His ukelele is augmented on I Shall Be Released by producer Alex Chilton's guitar work, the only real musical spark on the 15-song collection. De Forest's flaws are most clearly revealed on a cover of the old TV theme "Secret Agent Man," which sounds painfully awkward.

De Forest, however, has gained attention from fellow artists. Besides producer Chilton, he has worked with bassist Gordon Gano of the Violent Femmes and drummer Will Rigby of the dB's, as well as opening on occasion for The Ramones, The Cure and Simple Minds. Such attention has come from his furious lyrics, the centerpiece of his talent.

POLITICAL ANTHEMS such as "Crack's No Worse Than The Fascist Threat" and "Hey Judas" show the songwriter will probably not be waiting in line to vote at the Republican primaries. The former accuses the Reagan administration of using the anti-drug campaign as a smokescreen to divert attention from its flaws. The latter — once performed to an outraged crowd at one of De Forest's high school reunions — begins with Judas and Hitler in Hell and adds Reagan. Finally the piece condemns John Hinckley for missing his shot at the president and making Reagan even more popular as a result, in a "too bad you missed" fashion.

De Forest's smoking gun is also turned onto the romantic arena in songs such as "Little Speeches," while the deceptive love song "I'll Be Your Angel" slowly reveals the destruction of the protagonist by the love object. The title is true — "cause loving you is killing me." If only De Forest sang and played as well as he wrote, a new Dylan might be brewing at last.

costumes — which was entirely appropriate, as the focus was the music. The songs ranged from the Kinks' "Father Christmas" to "Silent Night."

THE TRADITIONAL carols were performed beautifully; the perfectly blended voices sang with emotion and the spirit of the season. The arrangement of "Do You Hear What I Hear?" was excellent, as was the contemporary "I Want a Hippopotamus for Christmas," performed by Steve Sorenson.

At the intermission, the audience participated in a sing-along with Old Gold. Though the auditorium was filled to the balcony, the singers managed to create an atmosphere of warmth and intimacy with the crowd. The audience seemed to really enjoy this interlude, and it was particularly entertaining to watch the many small children as they took part in the fun. After the performance, hot cocoa was served in Hancher's main lobby.

"Cocoa and Carols" was an opportunity to escape end-of-the-semester tension, a chance to reminisce about past Christmases and enjoy the spirit of the current season. The Old Gold Singers provided an excellent way to spend a Sunday afternoon.

Michigan, Purdue rout opponents

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (UPI) — Glenn Rice scored eight of his 32 points during a 25-2 run that ended the first half Monday night, carrying No. 15 Michigan to a 113-66 rout of Western Michigan.

Rice hit four buckets during a seven-minute span in which Michigan, 5-1, turned a 30-22 lead into a 55-24 halftime margin.

Terry Mills added 19 points for the Wolverines, 14 in the second half. Gary Grant scored 16 points and collected a school-record 14 assists. Grant also passed Antoine Joubert to become Michigan's all-time assists leader.

In West Lafayette, Ind., Troy Lewis collected 20 points and six rebounds Monday night to guide No. 14 Purdue to a 72-54 victory over Colorado.

Everette Stephens added 16 points and Todd Mitchell chipped in 10 for the Boilermakers, 5-1. Scott Wilke had 14 and Brian Robinson scored 10 for the Buffaloes, who fell to 1-4.

Landry, under fire, wants to stay on

DALLAS (UPI) — Tom Landry, criticized by club owner Bum Bright following the Dallas Cowboys' 21-10 loss to Atlanta, said Monday he wants to coach the club through the 1989 season.

Landry, under contract through 1989, faced unusual criticism after his team's loss Sunday, although that criticism quickly faded the day after the game.

Moments after the Dallas-Atlanta game, Cowboys majority owner Bum Bright told one reporter he was "horrified sometimes at our act on our playing," but later tempered his remarks.

Landry, 63, is the third winningest coach in NFL history and has guided the Cowboys to a league-record 20 consecutive winning seasons. However, Dallas (5-7), is facing its second straight losing season.

In other news within the Cowboy organization, Landry learned Monday middle linebacker Eugene Lockhart will be lost for the rest of the season with a broken right leg and his backup, Steve DeOssie, may be out with an injured ankle. Also, quarterback Steve Pelluer had a swollen knee Monday, leaving Danny White the likely starter next week.

High school teammate helped arrest Hoyt

COLUMBIA, S.C. (UPI) — Former pitching star LaMarr Hoyt was arrested on drug charges again over the weekend by an officer who used to play high-school baseball with him.

Hoyt, 32, could face minimum 10-year sentences if convicted of possession with intent to distribute cocaine and marijuana. He was arrested Saturday in his apartment in his hometown.

Among the officers arresting the 1983 Cy Young Award winner was Andy Jones, who alternated with Hoyt at pitcher and shortstop on their Keenan High School team.

"Anytime you arrest somebody, you feel bad for them," said Jones, a Richland County sheriff's deputy. "It's a shame it had to happen to someone like LaMarr with the talent he had. And he had the whole community behind him."

Washington receiver Monk injures knee

HERNDON, Va. (UPI) — Washington Redskins Coach Joe Gibbs said Monday three-time Pro Bowl wide receiver Art Monk will miss "two or three weeks" with a partial tear of the medial collateral ligament in his right knee suffered during Sunday's 34-17 victory over St. Louis.

Gibbs said Monk, who has caught 38 passes for 483 yards and six touchdowns, may be placed on injured reserve, but is expected to be ready for the playoffs. The wide receiver's knee was examined Monday and no surgery was scheduled, just "rest and rehabilitation," Gibbs said.

"It had very little swelling in it today and that was good," Gibbs added of Monk's knee.

Detroit's Sicko resigns as coach

DETROIT (UPI) — After posting an 0-3 record this season Detroit basketball coach Don Sicko, saying he was in the way of the 'Titans' progress this year, resigned Monday, effective immediately.

Four-year Titans assistant coach John Mulroy, 28, will coach the team for the remainder of the season.

Sicko finishes his nearly six-year career at Detroit with a 57-88 record. His best campaign was in the 1984-85 season when the Titans had a 16-12 mark. Last year, Detroit finished with a 7-21 mark.

The 41-year-old Sicko came to Detroit in 1982 from Michigan, where he was coach Bill Frieder's chief aide for two seasons. Prior to that, he was an assistant at Kent State.

Who says football polls are always fair? Iowa, tied for the No. 20 spot last week, fell from the rankings entirely this week. See Page 11

Davis: Can squad stay this high?

By Eric J. Hess
 The Daily Iowan

Tom Davis is a little worried. Even after the 30- and 36-point victories in winning the Amana-Hawkeye Classic this weekend, the Iowa coach said he is wondering if his No. 3 Hawkeyes can stay on the emotional high that has buoyed them to a 6-0 record.

"I worry that they'll get to a point where they'll stop playing and believing they're the best," Davis said during his Sunday teleconference.

He gave his players Sunday and Monday to rest in preparation for

Tom Davis

Saturday's game with No. 2 Arizona in Carver-Hawkeye Arena. The game is set for 7:05 p.m. and will be televised by the Hawkeye Sports Network.

Davis said he hopes the intensity the team displayed while playing six games in nine days does not go away during the week-long layoff.

"ANY TIME YOU take a week off, you risk the peak," Davis said. It's the peak most coaches hope occurs during the NCAA tournament in March.

Saturday's game also holds special meaning for some Iowa fans who will see former Iowa Coach Lute Olson, now the coach at Arizona, for the first time since he left the Hawkeyes in 1983.

Olson is Iowa's winningest coach after spending nine seasons at the helm. His 168-90 record includes the Hawkeyes' only trip to the Final Four in 1980.

And like many of his Iowa teams, Olson returns to the Arena with a solid team that could prove pesky to the unbeaten Hawkeyes.

"It should be a very emotional

NEW YORK — Kentucky became the third No. 1 college basketball team in three polls this season and Iowa jumped seven places to the No. 3 spot in Monday's voting by United Press International's Board of Coaches.

Kentucky, which defeated Indiana 82-76 in overtime, collected 572 points and 27 of 42 first-place votes to comfortably earn the No. 1 spot ahead of Arizona.

The Wildcats, ranked No. 5 last week, replaced North Carolina as the top team. The Tar Heels, who Kentucky Coach Eddie Sutton said. "But I've said many times I'm not so sure we're the best team in the country. I do know we're one of the 10-15 best, but any attempt at picking a best team is very subjective."

Houston gets new GM; Phils get Dernier

By Mike Tully
 United Press International

DALLAS — Bill Wood became general manager of the Houston Astros Monday to highlight a day at the winter baseball meetings where free-agent signings outnumbered trades.

Wood's appointment ended a two-month vacancy at the position. Meanwhile, two free agents joined new clubs — outfielder Bob Dernier to Philadelphia and pitcher Don Schulze to Minnesota.

In other developments, Commissioner Peter Ueberroth called for players and owners to solve their differences without arbitration, and he defended baseball's progress in minority job hirings.

"By any objective measure," Ueberroth said in his annual address, "1987 has been a very, very productive and positive one for fairness in employment."

IN THE MAJOR-LEAGUE draft, nine players changed organizations. The best player taken, scouts agree, was the fifth choice, second baseman Santiago Garcia. He was taken from the Toronto organization by the Chicago White Sox and is given a decent chance to start next season.

However, Garcia, who batted .297 in 63 games for Knoxville of the Southern League, was suspended late last season for striking a teammate in the back with a bat. He was sent home to undergo psychiatric examination.

So far, only one trade has taken place at the meetings. Saturday, Detroit sent pitcher Dan Petry to California for center fielder Gary Pettis.

Wood, 46, succeeds Dick Wagner, who resigned under pressure Oct. 14. A member of the Houston organization for 11 years, Wood served as assistant general manager since 1985.

WOOD ADMITTED THE winter meetings have not produced many bombshells so far. He added, however, "You'll excuse me if I think this is exciting."

Astros owner Dr. John McMullen sounded irritated when asked why the selection took so long.

"You just have to go through the process," he said. "I didn't devote full time to it. I'm a physician, too."

Wood said the delay has not hurt the team.

"It hasn't prevented any clubs from talking to us," he said.

Program features outdoor classes

By Hugh Donlan
 The Daily Iowan

College credit doesn't have to be earned entirely in the classroom. Recreational Services' Touch the Earth Outdoor program offers an alternative.

The Touch the Earth program is available for anyone interested in participating in an outdoor activity, like white-water rafting, rock climbing, spelunking, cross-country skiing or backpacking.

This fall, the program sponsored a rafting trip, a kayak trip, a bicycle trip and spelunking. For the spring semester, cross-country skiing, white water rafting, rock climbing and several other trips are being offered.

"IT'S A TRIP experience basically designed to learn the skills we're doing," Wayne Fett, assistant director of Recreational Services said. "A lot of these people that we get on these trips have never done this before."

There are between 160 and 200 participants in the program each year and in addition to acquiring outdoor skills, academic credit can be obtained on some trips.

"You can't get P.E. (physical education) credit for it, but you can get leisure studies credit. About one-third of the students on these trips are taking it for credit," Fett said.

Dan Mehl, a graduate student in leisure studies, was a participant in last summer's five-day backpacking trip in the mountains of southern Wyoming and said he enjoyed the "off-the-beaten-track" path the group hiked, far from the public trails frequented by many tourists.

"IT WAS THE FIRST time I've been on a trip like that. I'm not an outdoors type of person," he explained. "It was an area where there just weren't a lot of people."

"It was good because there was a little amount of danger and because there wasn't a whole lot of people. It's kind of nice to be out of touch with civilization for awhile."

Prior to embarking on these adventures, participants take part in short clinics designed to develop some of the necessary skills. Although similar to physical education classes, Touch the Earth is more personal, as well as oriented to the outdoors.

"Because there are fewer students, you have more intense instruction and it's a little more relaxed. You don't feel like you're in class," Fett said.

"I like to see people get out and enjoy themselves outside."

Registration dates and other information concerning upcoming trips can be obtained outside of Field House Room E216.

Iowa bids goodbye to top goalie Gandy

By Hugh Donlan
 The Daily Iowan

After a two week layoff and a sluggish start, the goaltending of Brian Gandy helped keep intact the Iowa Ice Hawks' unblemished record.

The black squad, 8-0, continued its domination of Midwest Collegiate Hockey Association opponents with two victories over Cornell College — 4-0 Friday and 4-3 Saturday at McElroy Arena in Waterloo.

The weekend games also marked the conclusion of goalkeeper Brian Gandy's four-year stint in the net. The finance major will graduate next week and his 7-0 record this season, including three shutouts, will be missed.

"I think he's the best goaltender in the league," center Adam Shell said. "When you lose the best goalie in the league, it's definitely going to have a negative impact on the team."

"WE'RE GOING TO have to tighten up on defense, I'm sure of that. We'll miss his enthusiasm. He hates to lose," Shell added.

In Friday's 4-0 victory, Don Kisel led the club with three goals and Mike Pugliese added the game's final score. The game featured several altercations with Cornell players. The tussles resulted in one-game suspensions for Andy Nilles, Dan Seliger and

Sportsclubs

Mike Ftacek.

"(The Cornell players) were hacking at us and trying to slow us down and I guess things got out of hand," club Vice President Gandy explained. "We got sick and tired of them hacking at us."

Despite losing three starters (two defensemen and one wing) due to the suspensions, the club rallied from a 3-0 deficit to secure its eight-game unbeaten streak with a 4-3 victory Saturday.

"WE LOST A LOT on defense, but offensively we were just as powerful as Friday," Gandy said of the suspensions.

Shell got things rolling in the second period when his shot from the right face-off circle deflected off a Cornell defender's leg into the net.

"We got lucky, but we needed a goal bad," Shell said. "I was getting a little aggravated. We were playing so poorly and behind three goals."

Shell added two more goals on the night and Todd Benson scored the game-tying goal.

Gandy said he has enjoyed the role he has played in the Ice Hawks' program.

Entire class of missiles to be eliminated

By Lou Cannon and Don Oberdorfer

WASHINGTON — With an exchange of pens and hands President Ronald Reagan and Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev signed an historic treaty Tuesday eliminating an entire class of nuclear missiles and vowed to make progress toward another treaty that would slash the strategic arsenals of the rival superpowers in an East Room ceremony.

"We can only hope that history-making agreement will be an end in itself, but the signing of a working relationship will enable us to tackle the most urgent issues before us," Gorbachev said, before signing the major treaty of his presidency.
