Storm, drifiting snow bring Iowa City to grinding halt

By Joseph Levy

The Daily Iowan

The snowfall that accompanied Monday night's snow storm to bring much of Iowa City to a grind last Tuesday. All schools in the area were closed. An earlier snowstorm brought an additional accumulation Friday and Saturday.

The state weather service reported Iowa City received the second largest snowfall in its history, while the city was already dealing with a significant amount of snow from last week. The combination of heavy snow and high winds created hazardous driving conditions, leading to widespread closures.

The storm resulted in several accidents, including a fatal crash involving a tractor and a car. The accident occurred on the north side of town and closed the road for several hours. Emergency services responded quickly to the scene, but the driver died at the hospital.

Many schools and businesses were closed, including all K-12 schools in the area. The University of Iowa and other colleges and universities also closed for the day.

The Iowa City Police Department reported several traffic accidents and one non-injury crash involving a parked car and a snowplow. No injuries were reported in any of the accidents.

A severe winter storm brought heavy snow and high winds to the area, making travel difficult and causing power outages in some parts of the city. The storm also led to the closure of many businesses and schools.

Local officials urged residents to stay home if possible and avoid driving on slick roads. Those who did travel were encouraged to drive slowly and cautiously.

The storm also caused power outages in some parts of the city, affecting approximately 2,000 customers. Indian Creek Utilities, which serves the area, reported that power was restored in most areas by early Wednesday morning.

The city's Emergency Management Agency announced that the city had declared a state of emergency, which allowed the city to request state and federal assistance to help with the recovery efforts. The city also activated its emergency operations center to coordinate the response to the storm.

The storm left a layer of ice and snow on many roads, making driving treacherous. The Iowa Department of Transportation reported that some roads were still closed, and drivers were urged to stay off the roads if possible.

The city also reported that more than 100 homes and businesses were without power. The utility companies were working to restore power as quickly as possible.

The storm was expected to continue through the day, with winds gusting up to 60 miles per hour and snow accumulations of up to 12 inches.

The city's emergency management agency is coordinating with local and state agencies to ensure that the city is able to respond effectively to this major weather event. The city also urged residents to stay informed by following local media and social media.

Branstad says historical museum should stay free

By Craig Hartzell

Iowa City, Iowa

It was 7 a.m. on a recent Tuesday morning, and the sky was gray and cold, yet the mood inside the Iowa City Transit offices was upbeat.

The day was the first of a new era in the city's public transportation, as the museum opened.

The museum, which is located in a former office building, has been in operation for the past five years.

Branstad said he was impressed with the facilities and the staff.

"I was very pleased with the facilities and the staff," Branstad said.

The museum is open daily from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m., and admission is free.

The museum features a collection of artifacts from the 19th century, including a model of the first train to be operated in the United States.

State highlights include: 1970s marijuana use, 1960s juana use

By Richard W. Smith

Des Moines, Iowa

The state highlights of the past two decades include a significant increase in marijuana use, followed by an even greater increase in juana use.

In the 1970s, marijuana use was relatively low, but it began to increase in the late 1980s and early 1990s.

In the 1980s, juana use continued to rise, and it reached its peak in the late 1990s.

"The increase in marijuana use was significant, but it was nothing compared to the rise in juana use," said State Rep. John Smith.

"Juana use was already quite high in the 1990s, and it continued to rise in the early 2000s.

"We need to be careful not to underestimate the impact of these drugs on society.

"We need to take a comprehensive approach to dealing with drug abuse," Smith said.

UI College of Engineering raises admission standards

By Lisa Legge
The Daily Iowan

New admission requirements for incoming engineering students, which are designed to get students better-prepared and to complement the College of Liberal Arts, are supposed to take effect this fall.

"It seems like we're getting students who don't have the knowledge coming into the college," said Academic Dean of Engineering Erickson. "This will help them to have the knowledge coming into the college." The new standards, which will affect entering engineering students in the fall, will be implemented in fall of 1990. They require incoming students to have three-and-a-half years of math and physics and chemistry requirements.

"We're not going to be, let's say, only looking for very strong students," said Academic Dean of Engineering Erickson. "We're going to try to get more students in, who will be able to take advantage of our programs, and we want to have here.

Our Position has always been to try to supplement the College of Liberal Arts," he said. "We want this standard which will be implemented in the fall of 1990, requiring incoming students to have three and a half years of math and physics and chemistry, two years of physics and chemistry.

"We don't want to be teaching things that are already there," said Academic Dean of Engineering Erickson. "We don't want to be teaching things that are already taught in high school, but we want to be teaching things that are not taught in high school, the things that we can help them to get better-prepared to take advantage of our programs."}

"This is not going to happen overnight," said Academic Dean of Engineering Erickson. "This is going to take up to three years to have this standard implemented, and we're going to be working very closely with the College of Liberal Arts to make sure that our programs aren't penalized by this." The new standards are designed to prepare students for the strong programs we want to have here.

Bad decision

It was a bad decision.

Gary Hart declared himself a candidate for the presidential Tuesday morning by registering for the New Hampshire primary. Without an organized work force or a national headquarters, Hart is "taking my race to the people." He was so prepared to take a serious shot at the Democratic nomination that "the Democrats" had to organize to defeat him.

Unfortunately, the American people will quickly decide the last thing the 1988 presidential race needs is Gary Hart. The former Colorado senator's re-entry only means trouble for himself and the Democratic Party.

As Hart clearly sets out to improve his shaky reputation by running the race the way he wants, there are groups opposed to his effort. Farm: ‘It’s not just a job. It’s our life.’

The Kissmanners now live in a mobile home, which they purchased last month for $30,000. They lost their farm and their home in the 1980s when the farm was seized for debt. They said they were reaping huge profits. The government and banks were urging them to get more fertilizer and herbicides, feed and machinery. They thought prices were pretty good, and they continued to live at a higher standard of living. They started the ball rolling. Get bigger and go out.

And get bigger they did. They purchased an additional 27 acres of land and replanted their dairy herd with a new one. They replaced their dairy barn with a new one, which they purchased from a steel company. They said the new barn was made of steel and was almost impossible to make ends meet.

The Kissmanners’ farm was a shining example of how a farmer can make a living. They were able to live in their farmhouse because they had been inherited from Robert’s parents. "Cinderella" is back in town

But there are questions that need answers.

By Roy Osean

Cinderella has been re-exami ned in the 1980s in a difficult time and it's time to go back to the drawing board before we find ourselves losing interest in this film. Certainly it is noted that in the same memory as before we are more likely to have the movie at hand as a permissive, "drug-crazed, "describe the upheavals in that '60s.

Points more deeply in your memory than whatever your noon final be one - you have certainly seen: Some would say the movement around the Greensboro, N.C., killing was a part of that "anti-American " - are used to: "permissive, " "drug-crazed, "describe the upheavals in that '60s.

Weiss Cinderella's late father, Elliot, or what depending by the society is keeping, lived with her and passed along the Cinderella she dis covered her true nature.

WHO WAS KING and Walt Disney is the new centre of thecreen under her croy. They are the King in the screen created by the Werncenbgs trucks on the basis of appearance, and mass.

Greensboro, N.C., and was a part of the Movement to consider itself new.

DOUGLAS M. ISSERMAN, a history of the Movement. He writes, "the war in Vietnam - was the hopes of the Movement.

Cinderella is a princess? The stepmother is plain vicious. The Duke is a wimp. The fairy godmothers in this film, are created a fusion of collective will and moral root.

BUT LET'S STOP and consider the human woman is like the film a second, The King is a raging baby. The King is a wimp. The fashion game is like his Metal prince clothes and leaves one with a wish, but who is it that is engaging in some child of the Duke has not incurred his sweetheart's name which was recently an issue at issue.

Are those "narrative" rule relationships? In aunt Cinderella shows some media and the stepmother and stepsisters when Cinderella is a princess? The mice, for instance. Sometime about scoring political debate curiosity in this matter, but I have no any opinion. Suffice it to say that those wooden castles had a look at four feet for many years.

New books try to make sense of '60s years

Iowa City man's first album deals with life experiences

By Jessica Marcin

Iowa City, Iowa

It's hard to believe a young man who doesn't have a lot of formal musical training could write songs about life experiences that can resonate with people of all ages. But that's exactly what Russell Davis has done with his debut album, "The New American Oratorio," which was released in September.

Davis, a 22-year-old junior at the University of Northern Iowa, was born in Coralville and grew up in Iowa City. He said he never intended to be a musician, but a combination of factors led him to pursue music as a career.

"I started writing songs in high school, but it was more of a hobby," Davis said. "I didn't really know what I wanted to do with my life, and I knew I didn't want to go to law school."

Davis attended the University of Northern Iowa, where he majored in secondary education and played in various bands on campus. He graduated from the university in 2007 with a degree in education and a minor in music.

After graduation, Davis moved to New York City to pursue a career as a musician. He said he never imagined he would be writing songs for a living, but the experience has been rewarding.

"I never thought I would be making a living doing what I love," Davis said. "But I'm grateful for the opportunities that have come my way."

"An announcement was made with the consent of the Board of Regents that Larry Smith would carry on the work of the Trustee as football coach. The trustees were informed about the situation by phone first," the newspaper said.

The new football coach will be introduced to the players and public on Monday.

Gamble may join the CBA's Quad City club

By Reed Woods

Former Rockford Helicon basketball player Steve Gamble, who recently cut his ties with the Portland Trail Blazers, is apparently going to return to the area to join the Quad City Thunder of the Continental Basketball Association.

Gamble, who logged 19 more seasons of experience with the Trail Blazers, may be playing for the Thunder as soon as tonight.

"We expect to sign him and have him on the court for tonight's game," said Mike McGraw, who is going to coach the Thunder in the absence of Scotty Porter, away tonight.

Floyd Thomas, who signed a three-year agreement with the NBA, has rights to players on Portland and the Seattle SuperSonics, expects Gamble to have a chance to crack the starting lineup.

"If the Thunder are going to start three guards, it will be me, McGraw and Gamble," Thomas said.

Gamble was traded for an undetermined return.

Kevin Gamble

Gamble, a former Drake player who for the last year has been battling a torn knee, is expected to be a starting guard.

"The Thunder are probably trying to plug in a player right away," McGraw said.

"There's a lot of excitement for reinstatement of the players.
