AMES — The state Board of Education, speaking through its representatives at a meeting in Ames, indicated it would be willing to sign a tentative agreement on the contract to replace the one held by Thomas Armony.

Following a closed session Tuesday afternoon, which lasted into early Wednesday morning, an agreement was reached in principle that would replace the two-year contract held by Armony and be effective immediately.

According to Board President Bob Hardin and Superintendent of Public Instruction Mark Morey, the agreement would be submitted to the state Board of Regents for approval.

The State Department of Education in Des Moines Tuesday announced a tentative settlement had been reached.

"The state board was willing to sign an agreement on the contract to replace it," Morey said.

According to Regent Charles Duchen, the state Board of Regents on Monday night had been presented with a tentative agreement for the new contract.

"I'm pleased that the regents were pleased with the agreement," Duchen said.

The regents approved the tentative agreement Tuesday morning, but the contract would not be approved until after the tentative agreement is submitted to the state Board of Education for its approval.

The tentative agreement would be submitted to the state Board of Education for its approval, and if approved, the contract would be signed.

The contract would be effective immediately, Duchen said.

The state Board of Regents had previously approved a contract between Armony and the State Department of Education, but the agreement was not signed, according to Duchen.

"I'm happy that the regents were pleased with the agreement," Duchen said.

UI football player Smiley released from jail early

District judge grants 20 percent reduction in prison sentence

By Trust Auditor

The Daily Iowan

UI football player Rodney Smiley was released today from the Johnson County Jail after being sentenced to seven months in prison for assault in connection with a December 1986 incident. The assault resulted in a broken jaw to a non-athlete victim. Smiley's weapon and gun are evidence in the assault case.

The two-year pilot project will assist research on the role of special education and training in the education, socialization, and vocational development of special education students. The project will also provide the necessary data for a comprehensive occupational health and safety service for Iowa State University.

The Iowa farm health and safety plan will make educational services available to farmers and farm families in Iowa. The plan will be available to farmers in 1986-87 and then in 1987-88. The plan will provide farm safety training, education, and in-service training to farmers and farm families.

City parents, students make bus request

By Craig Stewart

The Daily Iowan

Iowa City School officials are overhauling a new busing alternative for Iowa City West high school students.

The Iowa City School Board will update its policy for Northwest Junior High and Iowa City West high school students involved in extracurricular activities.

The West Side Athletic Advisory Committee (WSAAC) is planning to meet Thursday evening at the Iowa City School Board office to discuss the possible implementation of new busing plans.

"We are looking into the possibility of having a new bus service for Northwest Junior High and Iowa City West high school students," said David Cronin, principal of American Senior High School. "We are looking at options to provide transportation for students who participate in extracurricular activities."

Cronin said that the current busing system is not adequate to accommodate the growing number of students who are involved in extracurricular activities.

A survey conducted by the WSAAC showed that a majority of students participating in extracurricular activities face difficulties in getting to and from school on time, due to the current busing system.

The proposed busing system would provide a more efficient and timely service for students participating in extracurricular activities, allowing them to focus on their academic and extracurricular pursuits.

The WSAAC will present its findings to the Iowa City School Board for consideration and potential implementation.

IU forum observes Roe vs. Wade case

By Jay Cate

The Daily Iowan

A forum entitled "Women Reclaim Their Bodies: The Global Struggle Reclaim Their Bodies" is scheduled for next Thursday, January 22, at 7:30 p.m. in the Iowa Memorial Union.

The forum is being sponsored by the Student Environmental Action Coalition (SEAC) and New Wave/Progressive Student Network.

The forum will commemorate the 15th anniversary of the Roe vs. Wade decision, which granted women the right to abortion.

This year will likely be bigger than ever, but it is not clear what will happen in the next year, said a founder of the Emma Goldman Clinic for Women's Reproductive Health, John Coon. Coon said he is sure that the pro-choice movement has been made up of people who are citizens of the United States.

The forum is being sponsored by the Student Environmental Action Coalition and New Wave/Progressive Student Network.

"We believe that women should have the right to abortion," said Coon. "We are committed to supporting women's rights and ensuring access to reproductive health care."

The forum will feature speakers from various organizations and will provide an opportunity for the public to discuss the importance of reproductive rights and the challenges faced by women seeking access to abortion.

Allegations of secret 1984 campaign funds plague Hart

The candidates pledged to end discrimination in education and student loan programs. Candidate Michael Dukakis and Rep. Richard Gephardt said that education and job programs targeted for minority neighborhoods could be expanded.

Reagan promises hike in grants to establish more magnet schools

By Iris A. Allen
United Press International

SUITLAND, Md. — President Ronald Reagan, impressed with the academic achievements of a predominantly black suburban high school in the Washington area, said Wednesday he will ask Congress to triple federal grants to magnet schools.

Addressing students at one such school, Suitland High, which offers a special magnet program as part of a performing arts program as its magnet, Reagan said that 'money isn't the answer' to educational improvement.

But with Education Secretary William Bennett at his side, Reagan announced he would like to see the federal, state and local spending on education 'become meaningless' without merit incentives for teachers, strong leadership by principals and involvement by parents.

The student body appreciated the president's appearance and was impressed with his spouting laymen at suitboards at every school in most of America, and his achievement over one with higher test scores and progresses that resulted in parents standing in line for three days to win a slot for their children.

REAGAN SAID he would like to see the same transformation in schools across the country, but that the $300 billion in surplus federal, state and local spending on education 'become meaningless' without merit incentives for teachers, strong leadership by principals and involvement by parents.

Branstad rejects AFDC hike
Governor says more welfare erodes incentive to work

By Scott Ennis
United Press International

IOWA CITY, Iowa — Terry Branstad said Wednesday he oppose an increase in AFDC benefits for children. The state's current welfare program is "stupid," he said.

Branstad, who is running for governor next year, said the welfare system rewards people to stay on the dole.

The governor, who is running for re-election this year, made the statement after a Senate Appropriations Committee approved Tuesday a bill that would spend $1.8 million to boost AFDC payments 6.6 percent.

Branstad said in Davenport last week that his stand on welfare is part of the reason he wants a job in the White House.

"I think we're getting away from the basic premise of welfare — which is to provide a hand up, not a handout," he said.

Branstad said he was not willing to support a bill that would allow more AFDC money.

The Republican governor said "the more you pay off, the more they won't go to work." He added: "If you want to have incentives for people to become independent, you're going to have to pay a price." He said:

"It's not the right thing for the state, the right thing for the federal government, but the right thing for the individual welfare recipient to get a job."

The governor also offered a way to screen for alcoholism.

Branstad said the test developed by United Press International at the University of Iowa is related to what makes some people prone to alcoholism.

"I think this test is extremely important," he said.

The test, which measures two enzymes in the body, would help researchers understand what makes some people prone to alcoholism. The enzyme is related to alcohol and drug abuse.

Branstad said the test "is being done for the first time." He said:

"It provides guidelines as to what the enzyme is and how it relates to alcohol.

Branstad, who is running for re-election in 1990, said the test would be "great" for the development of "convenient specific laboratory measures of alcohol abuse and dependence."

Finally, the South Quadogh Phshed Republie House rooms can be used for all student discussions.

On Sunday, plans to move the 74 students of South Quadrupled Room, who had been removed from their dorms, were finally settled. Although detailed plans to build a new student housing project were approved several months ago, UI officials did not get around to notifying the students of their impending relocation until this week.

Several residents have vowed to fight the move, but it appears that the plans have already been in motion for several weeks. UI officials were required to contribute approximately $1.2 million to remodel South Quad Hall.

The PLANE RAd been cleared for landing at about 3:10 p.m. when it was about 13 miles out of the airport according to FAA spokesman Dick Meyer, who said there was no further contact between the controller and pilot of the plane beyond the statement that it was going to land.

The first survivor out was Peter Schauer, 28, of Durango, Mo., who trudged 11/2 miles through snow drifts up to 10 feet deep, making a path for the others to follow. One of the survivors, said Schauer, was an experienced pilot. Two feet of snow fell in the Durango area Monday, making the city's schools for the first time in 30 years.

The survivors were notified of the rescue by a call from their pilot. The pilot told them the plane was over a path in the forest.

The report on the plane was not far from the crash site. The survivors were told that the plane was over a path in the forest.

"THE PILOT TIPPED the wings and caught a view of the scene of the crash," spoke a man, who walked up to the plane and said,"It was nothing wrong with the plane. The pilot was trying to get snowmobiles in, but the snow was too soft." Schauer said Schauer was nearly the last of the survivors to get out of the plane, which made a hole that we could get out of.

According to Hampshire, students had requested more time to understand the impact of each service in the reports. The College of Liberal Arts, also expressed concern about the reports.

The regents reviewed a report by the regent Committee on Educational Services, recommending the effect of new administrative requirements at registrar universities. The report stressed the need to eliminate unnecessary paperwork and improve the efficiency of the system. The report recommended that the university establish a new position of provost to oversee the implementation of the new requirements.

The board approved proposed administrative requirements for the UI College of Engineering beginning January 1990. The new requirements will include a focus on improving the efficiency of the system and reducing unnecessary paperwork.

The board also approved a proposal to establish a new position of provost to oversee the implementation of the new requirements. The proposal was supported by the College of Liberal Arts, who expressed concern about the reports.

13 intramural sports offered Spring term

By Hugh Danson

For the spring, the arrival of warmer weather is an excuse to lounge around and become a couch potato. But for the intramural athlete, spring brings the advent of another season of competition.

The Division of International Services offers 15 intramural sports for students to compete in their respective athletic confederations. According to the Division of Intramural Services, there are 14 events scheduled to be held in the Field House each day.

"FIELD HOUSE USAGE is at its prime during the spring," said the Division of International Services. "Spring is always a busy time for the students who participate in the intramural programs."

In the spring, the intramural athlete is an expert at event registration. Following the opening of the event registration for the spring season, the intramural athlete is a pro at event registration.

"Registration for the spring season is open," said the Division of International Services. "Students can register for spring events by visiting the registration table located in the Field House."

California rock band Green Day, performing at Cabaret Oasis tonight, brings to Iowa City its second tour of the year. The band is well known for its political and social messages. The hand written message on the stage announced, "We are the band, music is what we do."

The band wasridor in 1986 in Berkeley, Calif., and went through a previous incarnation before arriving at its current form. The band's first album, "Dookie," was released in 1994.

The band's second album, "Insomniac," was released in 1995. The band has been nominated for several Grammy Awards, and has sold over 20 million copies of its albums worldwide.

In addition to its music, Green Day has also been involved in several social and political causes, including environmental activism and opposition to the war in Iraq.

The band's concerts are typically high-energy and intense, with lead singer Billie Joe Armstrong often leading the crowd in political chants and slogans.

The band's music is often characterized by its fast tempo, distorted guitar sound, and Armstrong's distinctive vocal style. Green Day's best-known songs include "Boulevard of Broken Dreams," "Basket Case," and "Good Riddance (Time of Your Life)."

Tickets range from $20 to $30, and the concert is expected to sell out.
