Reagan reiterates 'We're not finished yet' in Union address

By Norman D. Sandler
United Press International

WASHINGTON — Insisting "we're not finished yet," President Ronald Reagan offered Monday to work with Congress in his final year in office to enact the policies needed to guarantee a legacy of prosperity, strength and lasting peace.

"We are strong, prosperous, at peace and we are free," Reagan assured the American people in his seventh nationally televised State of the Union address, delivered to a joint session of Congress.

"This is the state of our union," he said. "And if we will work together this year, I believe we can give a future president and a future Congress the chance to make that prosperity, that peace, that freedom, not just the state of our union, but the state of our world."

AS HE TRUMPETED a resurgence of political and economic freedom, the twin pillars of his conservative revolution, Reagan, who turns 77 Feb. 6, sought to remain a force to be reckoned with in the twilight of a presidency weakened in 1987 by scandal and defeat.

Reagan proclaimed democracy to be "everywhere on the move" and defended his assertive foreign policy as one that has "replaced 'Blame America' with 'Look up to America.'"

Far from the gloomy days of a year ago, however, the president seen Monday night was, in many respects, vintage Reagan: vigorous, at times feisty, brimming with optimism and ever ready to disprove the pundits and critics.

BUT EVEN AS he reached out in the lame-duck year of his presidency to a Congress controlled by Democrats bent on electing one of their own to the White House for the first time since 1976, leaders of the opposition offered a far different view of the state of the union.

In the official Democratic response, House Speaker Jim Wright and Senate Democratic leader Robert Byrd charged Reagan's policies had instead left a grim legacy of fiscal irresponsibility and economic weakness.

The two top Democrats said Reagan now has the responsibility to work with Congress to repair the damage through tougher trade laws, better education, job training and sensible pay-as-you-go budgets.

"WE HAVE COME to the end of an era," Byrd said. "The 'feel good' slogans have gone flat with time. The dark side of the Reagan years has only begun to loom."

Congressional reaction, split along partisan lines, found the speech more of a warm, "fatherly" valedictory rather than a leader's call to action.

Sen. Charles Grassley, R-Iowa, said, "This was the strongest State of the Union message I've heard. And it's the most well-received of any I've heard. . . . Translating this into policy may be difficult because it's his last year, but it doesn't show. He's the first lame-duck president I've seen who isn't walk-

Council reviews cuts in city staff

By Sara Anderson
The Daily Iowan

Discussion of the recently proposed three-year Iowa City budget continued Monday night during an informal city council meeting.

Iowa City Manager Stephen Atkins further explained the cuts to be made in city personnel. The Engineering Department staff will be reduced by 2.5 positions under the proposed financial plan.

"We simply don't have the capital to support the level of engineering we've done in the past," Atkins said.

People affected by the cutbacks within the department include one employee to be cut to half-time at the start of the next fiscal year, one to be transferred to the Landfill Department and one position cut entirely, effective at the start of next fiscal year. Another employee is expected to be lost through attrition, although a layoff in fiscal year 1990 is planned as a contingency.

ONE FULL-TIME position in the Traffic Engineering Department will also be eliminated if the budget is approved. "There simply isn't the volume of work we need to keep people productive," said Atkins.

City funds allotted to the Iowa City Central Business District Maintenance Department provoked discussion during the meeting.

"People often think of this as plaza maintenance," Atkins said. "There's much more to it than that."

But Councilor Darrel Courtney said he is unhappy with the funds appropriated for plaza upkeep. "If there's anywhere that it's needed, it's somewhere other than the plaza," he said.

Councilor Randy Larson inquired as to whether some city funds used for plaza upkeep could be shouldered by downtown businesses.

"WE HAVE approached them informally on that, but they see the land as the city's property and therefore their responsibility," Atkins said.

Arctic temperatures chill Midwest region

Temperatures are expected to warm up slightly today as a winter storm which brought bitterly cold temperatures to the Iowa City area finally recedes.

The National Weather Bureau Office in Des Moines predicts temperatures today will reach a high of 10 to 15 degrees after falling to a low of 10 degrees below zero overnight.

The winter storm that hit Iowa City also blustered across the rest of Iowa Monday, creating a ground blizzard that was blamed for at least three deaths, the closing of several highways and an unexpected holiday for children in nearly 100 northern Iowa school districts.

An arctic cold front, accompanied by 45 mph winds, roared into northwest Iowa Sunday afternoon and sent temperatures plunging nearly 30 degrees within a two-hour period. The winds created white-out conditions that halted travel on many rural highways and forced the Iowa Highway Patrol to close sections of Interstates 35 and 29, U.S. Highway 18 and Iowa Highway 3.

Shultz testifies as hearings start on INF Treaty

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Senate began formal review Monday of the Intermediate Nuclear Forces Treaty, opening hearings on the unprecedented superpower agreement that could determine President Ronald Reagan's legacy as a peacemaker.

Reagan, under attack from the right wing of the Republican Party for the arms deal with Moscow, formally sent the treaty and related agreements to the Senate with a letter that declared the accord to be "in the best interests of the United States."

On Capitol Hill, the Senate's Foreign Relations and Armed Services committee each opened hearings with Reagan Cabinet members who praised the treaty as a historic first step in cutting nuclear arsenals that also will strengthen — not weaken — the NATO alliance.

Vote-counters in Congress believe the treaty, which has broad bipartisan support, will be approved this spring by the necessary two-thirds vote, but there is a persistent worry over "killer" amendments that could require reopening negotiations with Moscow, or set other terms the Kremlin or the administration could not meet. Such amendments require only a majority vote.

Bush, Rather tangle on CBS

By Lori Santos
United Press International

WASHINGTON — Vice President George Bush, in an extraordinary live confrontation with Dan Rather Monday night, accused CBS News of ambushing him with a "rehash" of the Iran-Contra affair and took a personal swipe at the anchorman.

In an unusually long segment that dominated the half-hour broadcast, the live interview turned into a heated exchange between the two men, with both repeatedly interrupting each other and raising their voices.

Bush, who refused to be interviewed for Rather's piece in advance, agreed to appear on the broadcast on the condition his responses not be edited. Following a systematic review of what Rather called "inconsistencies in the record," Bush countered with his own attack.

UI celebrates King

The UI will join the rest of the nation in celebrating the birthday of Martin Luther King Jr. with a weeklong series of readings titled "In His Own Words," from Jan. 25-29, beginning at noon each day in the Union Main Lounge.

The readings of a selection of King's speeches and writings, to be given by faculty, staff and UI students, began with the first chapter of King's book Stride Toward Freedom and will conclude at the end of the week with "I See the Promised Land," King's last sermon, delivered in Memphis, Tenn., on the eve of his assassination.

The series began on Monday with UI School of Religion Chairman John Boyle reading "Return to the South;" UI Black Student Union President Rodney Sturgeon reading "The Decisive Arrest;" and Mae G. Henderson, professor of African-American World Studies, reading "The Black Revolution."

Today, UI student Menah Pratt will read "Suffering and Faith;" Mary Jo Small, UI associate vice president for finance and university services, will read "Antidotes for Fear;" and UI Associate Professor Diana Valdez will read "The Case Against Tokenism."

On Wednesday, UI Professor of Law Gregory Williams will read "The Power of Nonviolence;" UI student Jim Vogl will read "The World House;" and UI Professor of English Adalaide Morris will read "Nobel Prize Acceptance Speech."

On Thursday, UI Faculty Senate President Bruce Gronbeck will read "Pilgrimage to Nonviolence;" Marvin Crawford, president of the Student National Medical Association, will read "An Experiment in Love;" and UI Rhetoric Professor Fredrick Antczak will read "The Time for Freedom Has Come."

On Friday, UI Women's Resource and Action Committee Coordinator Susan Buckley will read "A Time to Break Silence;" UI student Phyllis Jones will read "The World House;" and UI Associate Dean of Faculties Fredrick Woodard will read "I See the Promised Land."

The speeches are free and open to the public.

UI to hold five debates

The UI Forensic Union has scheduled five debates for its Spring 1988 Debate Series. These debates are open to the public and will be held on Jan. 28, Feb. 18, March 10, March 31 and April 21 at 7 p.m. in Shambaugh Auditorium.

The first debate will be between Cary Stamp and Shawn Sherer on the affirmative and Mike Lennon and Steve Weils on the negative on the topic of "Resolved: That the U.S. and the U.S.S.R. should sign and ratify an agreement reducing long-range strategic nuclear weapons."

For more information, contact Clarke Rountree at 335-0854 or David Hingstman at 335-0620.

Stanley applications taken

The UI Center for International and Comparative Studies is now taking applications for the Spring 1988 Stanley Scholarships.

The scholarships are designed to help students pursue learning opportunities which are not available on the UI campus in the field of international studies.

Competition is open to all UI undergraduates with the exception of those who graduate in May or July of this year. The scholarships carry a stipend of $200-$500 which may be used in conjunction with any other scholarships.

Applications for the scholarship should comprise a 1-3 page proposal, including a statement of purpose and tentative budget; an up-to-date transcript; and two letters of recommendation from UI faculty members.

Applications should be addressed to the Stanley Scholarship Committee before March 1988. Students who have questions can call 335-0386. The awards will be announced on April 1, 1988.

Branstad vs. Democrats: Iowa prison debate starts

By Scott Sonner
United Press International

DES MOINES — Gov. Terry Branstad Monday set the stage for a heated turf battle over where to build new prison space, saying the state Board of Corrections is more qualified to make the decision than the Democrat-controlled Legislature.

His comments drew immediate fire from leading Democrats, who said they have no intention of allowing state administrators to make the decision without legislative approval.

Branstad, a Republican, has asked the Legislature to spend $7 million over the next two years to construct space for 200 new prison beds. He said during his weekly Statehouse news conference Monday the decision should be made by the unelected officials he appointed to the Board of Corrections.

"I happen to believe we should provide the flexibility to the Department of Corrections because they have the most knowledge and expertise," Branstad said.

HE SAID THE decision should be made in the same manner the Iowa Racing Commission decided where to construct the state's first dog and horse tracks.

"It is the responsibility of the Legislature and the governor to set public policy for the state. It is up to the professionals to make sure those policies are carried out," he said. He also said he still is open to the idea of turning a large hotel into a prison.

Rep. Gary Sherzan, D-Des Moines, a parole officer regarded as a corrections expert in the Legislature, vowed the Legislature will have the final say on the siting of a new prison. He said he is co-sponsoring a bill recommending an addition be built at the Riverview Release Center in Newton, Iowa, but he is open to other options.

"I DON'T HAVE any intention of giving the Department of Corrections $7 million without knowing how they are going to spend it," Sherzan said Monday. "I am willing to listen to their recommendation. I hope they would make a recommendation. Where is it? If they would make one it would help the process," he said.

"I don't know why, when it comes to prisons and corrections, it becomes such a battleground between the governor and the Legislature. If he would cooperate a little bit we could get something done," he said.

Sherzan said the governor is in no position to talk about a lack of expertise in the Legislature while he has allowed the directorship of the Corrections Department to remain vacant for seven months.

"The governor has been messing around since June or July trying to appoint a director. It is time he gets off the pot and appoints somebody," he said.

He also criticized Branstad for misrepresenting his $7 million proposal.

"The fact of the matter is he is only proposing spending $2 million. He is talking $7 million but there is only $2 million in his budget. The other $5 million is a promise for the next year," Sherzan said.

Branstad: Cigarette tax raise essential to balance budget

By Scott Sonner
United Press International

DES MOINES — Gov. Terry Branstad said Monday a full 12-cent increase in the state cigarette tax effective March 1 is "essential" to balancing his proposed $2.6 billion budget next year.

He also said the state does not have enough money to provide a "comfortable lifestyle" for welfare recipients, instead urging welfare funds be targeted to help the poor get off the welfare rolls.

Branstad said during his weekly Statehouse news conference it is necessary to raise Iowa's cigarette tax to 38 cents per pack March 1 to raise the money needed to fund all of the programs for the upcoming fiscal year beginning July 1.

The tax hike would raise nearly $10 million the final three months of the current fiscal year, ending June 30. It would help build part of the $39.1 million surplus Branstad is counting on to carry over from this year and help balance next year's budget.

"THE BUDGET is balanced with very little to spare," Branstad said.

Senate Majority Leader Bill Hutchins, D-Audubon, said senators may consider an 8-cent increase in the cigarette tax, but he has serious doubts a 12-cent tax hike will pass the Legislature.

Branstad also continued to send signals Monday he will veto the $1.8 million the Iowa House approved last week for a 6.5 percent increase in Aid to Families with Dependent Children benefits.

The governor responded to Democrats who were outraged last week when he suggested the benefit increase — an average monthly increase of about $30 for a welfare family of four — would encourage some AFDC recipients to turn down jobs.

"CLEARLY $30 a month is not going to make a comfortable lifestyle for anybody. The problem is, we don't have the money in the treasury to provide a comfortable lifestyle," Branstad said.

He said increased welfare spending should be targeted to "help people help themselves."

"I want to help us break the cycle of poverty. . . . If we can get people to climb the ladder and get a raise and get a higher standard of living, we are going to help that family," Branstad said.

Rep. Tony Bisignano, D-Des Moines, said he was "disgusted" by Branstad's belief that increased AFDC benefits would make jobs less attractive to the poor.

Several mailboxes along Amhurst and Friendship streets allegedly were vandalized on Friday and Sunday nights, resulting in more than $20 damage to one and the theft of another, according to police reports.

Some time on Friday night, a mailbox in an apartment complex on the 300 block of South Lucas Street reportedly had its lid torn off and thrown outside, according to police reports.

At about 12:30 a.m. Monday, a mailbox in the 300 block of Amhurst Street allegedly was stolen. Footprints were heading northbound away from the residence toward the 3000 block of lower West Branch Road, but were difficult to follow due to blowing snow, according to the report.

In that area of West Branch Road, another mailbox was discovered knocked from its stand but was left at the scene, according to the report.

Approximately $20 damage was done to a mailbox in front of a home in the 100 block of Friendship Street Sunday night, and the complainant reported that he noticed other damaged mailboxes along Amhurst Street, according to the report.

Theft: Two coats valued at approximately $160 were stolen Saturday night from a vehicle parked at The Vine Tavern, 330 E. Prentiss St., according to police reports.

Tom Gerhold and Chuck Carpenter, 1116 Oakcrest, reported at about 2:10 a.m. Sunday that a gray-and-blue coat valued at $60 belonging to Gerhold and a blue St. John's Bay coat valued at $100 belonging to Carpenter were taken from the locked vehicle, according to the report.

A $400 stereo system in the car also was ruined, according to the report.

Theft: Items valued at approximately $277 were stolen from a room in Burge Residence Hall Sunday afternoon, according to Campus Security reports.

UI freshman Traci L. Harner, 3208 Burge, reported at about 4 p.m. Sunday that a jacket, cash and sunglasses belonging to her were stolen from her room, according to the report.

Report: A UI student was arrested by Campus Security officers and charged with disorderly conduct Friday afternoon after he allegedly broke a window in a men's shower area in Hillcrest Residence Hall, according to Campus Security reports.

Jerry R. Duball Jr., 20, N245 Hillcrest, was arrested at about 5:15 p.m. Friday, according to the report.

Courts

An Iowa City man pleaded guilty to assault and criminal trespass Saturday after he allegedly became violent trying to get his paycheck from his former work manager on Friday, according to Johnson County District Court records.

Donald T. King, 27, 150 Hilltop Trailer Court, was at Millard Warehouse, 2710 U.S. Highway 6 East, after having his employment terminated. King's former manager repeatedly told King to leave the premises but King refused. King allegedly tried to obtain his paycheck and threatened to beat up the manager if he did not receive the check, according to court records.

King was ordered to pay a $68 fine, according to court records.

Graduate Fellowships
in Foreign Language Study
1988-89*

for Students in Professional and/or Interdisciplinary Programs

The Fellowships

The fellowships will be awarded for modern language study to graduate students pursuing international careers in conjunction with an interdisciplinary or professional studies program. There is particular interest in supporting students to acquire or enhance language skills at the initial phase of their plan of study. These fellowships are funded by a grant to the University of Iowa from the US Department of Education. The term of the fellowships is one year, from August 1988 to August 1989.

Awards

These fellowships offer $5000 plus part or full resident tuition to support a minimum of one advanced course per semester in foreign language study during the school year. In addition, the fellowships include a $1250 stipend for intensive summer language study in the US or abroad in accredited language programs.

Eligibility

The competition is open in terms of race, religion and sex, but eligibility is restricted to US citizens, nationals and permanent residents enrolled in graduate degree programs. The University of Iowa is an equal opportunity-affirmative action institution. Graduate and professional students in all colleges of the University are eligible. Preference will be given to students in the Colleges of Business Administration, Education, Engineering, Law, Medicine, Dentistry, Nursing, Pharmacy, and the Schools of Social Work, Journalism and Mass Communication, as well as students in interdisciplinary programs emphasizing language, communication, and development studies.

Application and Deadline

Application forms are available from the Center for International and Comparative Studies or from the offices of the college deans and directors of schools. Completed applications and statements of purpose must be submitted to college deans or directors of schools by February 1, 1988. Nominations will be made by the deans to a CICS selection committee.

Announcement of awards will be made by April 1, 1988 subject to funding by the Department of Education.

For further information contact the Center for International and Comparative Studies (319)335-0368 or Professor Thomas Rohlich, Dept. of Asian Languages and Literatures, 320 Gilmore Hall (319)335-2151.

*Subject to Department of Education Center funding for 1988-1991 Grant.

Former volleyball player may face charges

By John Gilardi
The Daily Iowan

Johnson County Attorney J. Patrick White said Monday he is in the process of investigating assault charges concerning former Iowa volleyball player Cheryl Zemaitis. As part of the discovery process for the trial of Iowa football player Keaton Smiley's trial, information was obtained by the Johnson County Attorney's Office about three separate incidents in which Zemaitis allegedly assaulted individuals, according to White.

White said after he interviews the victim and witnesses, he will decide whether to file charges against Zemaitis. White said the charge would either be a simple assault, which is a simple misdemeanor, or assault causing injury, which is a serious misdemeanor.

THE INCIDENT White is investigating occurred in March 1987 behind The Fieldhouse Bar, 111 E.

College St., between Zemaitis and a former UI student. White said he will interview Iowa football player Marshall Cotton, who was allegedly a witness to the incident.

Iowa City police responded to the incident, but did not file charges, White said, adding he first received information about the incident from Smiley's lawyer, Jim Thomas of Anamosa, and then decided to investigate the matter.

Reached at her home in Downers Grove, Ill., Cheryl's mother, Julie

Zemaitis, said the charges being investigated were "ridiculous."

"This is another ploy by Smiley's lawyers to get attention off Smiley," Zemaitis said. "This didn't surprise us."

SMILEY WAS sentenced to 60 days in prison in November after pleading guilty to aggravated assault in connection with an incident with Zemaitis on June 9, 1987. Smiley recently finished serving his sentence in the Johnson County Jail.

Smiley was also charged with assault in connection with an incident in which Zemaitis allegedly punched Smiley in the eye in his Slater Residence Hall room Oct. 27, 1986, and Smiley repeatedly kicked her in self-defense. That charge was dropped by the Johnson County Attorney's Office in return for Smiley's plea of assault.

Thomas alleges that immediately following the Oct. 27 incident, Zemaitis confronted a UI student in a Rienow Residence Hall room and allegedly beat her up.

White said Campus Security responded to Rienow to investigate the fight, but officers did not file charges and the matter was handled internally by UI officials.

White said the attorney's office was not going to prosecute the case.

"We have looked into the allegations and have decided not to prosecute" on the incident in Smiley's room and in Rienow, White said.

CAC cites UI brass for poor communication

By Michael Coleman and Anne Kevlin
The Daily Iowan

Collegiate Associations Council members Monday night sent a signal to UI administrators citing dissatisfaction with what they say is poor communication between students and the UI administration.

"I think you can point the finger at the top of this university, at the president's office," CAC President Mike Reck said.

Reck said some decisions recently made by UI administrators prior to student awareness present "a tremendous organizational problem."

One such UI administrative decision is the proposed move of UI ROTC facilities to South Quadrangle Residence Hall, which would shift the Foreign Language/International House to Hillcrest Residence Hall.

ANOTHER DECISION prompting concern from CAC members is the proposed increase in miscellaneous student fees — increases of up to 300 percent for services like transcript copies and student ID replacements.

Last week, the UI Student Senate and the UI Associated Residence Halls passed resolutions in favor of leaving the Foreign Language/

International House at South Quad. Both groups expressed concern that the administrators acted on the issue without notifying student leaders of their intentions, making it difficult for them to adequately study the issue and make their concerns known.

Student leaders also traveled to the state Board of Regents meeting in Ames last week to communicate their concerns to the regents and UI administrators. As a result, regents voted to defer for one month their decision to increase miscellaneous student fees, and they encouraged UI administrators to study alternatives to the proposed ROTC move.

CAC VICE PRESIDENT Maureen Edwards said administrators should pay attention to student opinions when forming policies that affect students, as increased miscellaneous fees would.

"It was brought up over the (winter) interim, and whenever that happens, students don't have any input," Edwards said.

Edwards said members of student organizations hope to meet with UI administrators within the next month to question the justification of increased fees.

"If there's really a need to increase the fees, I'm sure that would be acceptable to students," she said. "We just want to know why."

ONE OF MONDAY'S CAC resolutions included the proposal that UI administrators replace ROTC offices in the UI Field House Armory, rather than move those offices to South Quad, displacing the Foreign Language/International House. The Armory is scheduled to be demolished in December to make way for an addition to UI Hospitals and Clinics.

"I would feel that the university would be obligated to replace the facilities," CAC member Randy Ries said.

Current plans for the Armory's replacement facility, approved last week by the state Board of Regents, do not include space for ROTC offices. Reck said he thinks it is unlikely plans for the new facility will be amended to include ROTC offices.

"(The regents) would have to reconsider it," he said, adding he hopes the CAC resolution will encourage the UI administration to look for alternatives to moving ROTC offices to South Quad.

"They know the university better than I do," he said. "To some extent, it's their problem to rectify."

Exchange students celebrate 'Australia Day' at UI

By Cathy Jackson
The Daily Iowan

Students from "down under" don't get up to Iowa often. Still, an Australian celebration in Iowa City Monday, complete with vegemite sandwiches, commemorated Australia Day and the 200th birthday of the continent's first European settlement.

The eight Australian UI students and their friends toasted British Captain Arthur Phillip and his first fleet, which arrived on the shores of the Australian continent on January 26, 1788, after a journey of more than eight months.

The boat was filled with a majority of British convicts, some soldiers and a few British citizens, creating a settlement of almost 1,400 on Port Jackson.

"England was packed with convicts," said Christine White, an Australian exchange student at the UI College of Pharmacy. "Many of them were sentenced to life for crimes like stealing a loaf of bread. There were so many that they (British officials) started filling them up on boats on the shore," she said. "Finally they decided to send them to Australia."

WHITE ARRIVED at the UI

last week with two other students from Queensland University in Brisbane to spend a year at the College of Pharmacy here. The group is studying with second-year UI pharmacy students in the UI's first undergraduate exchange program with Australia, College of Pharmacy Dean Robert Wiley said.

It is also the first time, according to Janelle Bundy, a second-year UI pharmacy student and participant in the program, that a pharmacy college has had an exchange program.

The four UI students on the exchange will leave Feb. 2, Wiley said, for a similar pharmacy program at Queensland University.

Wiley said he organized the program with the head of the Pharmacy Department at Queensland University, Peter Stewart, who spent a year at the UI College of Pharmacy and returns to Iowa periodically.

"I'VE ALWAYS been interested in foreign exchange," Wiley, who spent a year on sabbatical in Melbourne, Australia, in 1974, said.

"There's a very close cultural affinity between Australia and the United States," he said. "We found that the Australian students could step into our curriculum with few problems."

Bundy said the classes she will be taking in Australia exactly match the ones she would have taken at the UI.

The cost of her year in Australia is also comparable.

"The only added expense is the plane fare, and the College of Pharmacy is helping us pay for that," Bundy said.

White said she decided to participate in the program because of the rare opportunity to study pharmacy for a year in America and because the UI College of Pharmacy has a good reputation in Australia.

The Australian exchange students are helping Bundy and the three others in the program prepare for their move by explaining some of the differences they have discovered between the countries.

"The lectures here are more formal," White said. "In Australia we can sit in the back and talk and joke and go in and out as we please, but here everyone is quiet."

"I've also felt a bit uncoordinated here," White said, "because everything is on the opposite side — doorknobs, cars, pedestrians. I keep running into people."

Local mental health board OKs 11 requests for grants

By Craig Sterrett
The Daily Iowan

The Johnson County Mental Health/Mental Retardation Advisory Board Monday night endorsed all eleven applications for state grants submitted by local mental health and retardation programs.

The applications approved at the special allocations hearings will be sent to the Johnson County Board of Supervisors for endorsement and then to Des Moines for final approval by the state April 5.

On a motion by Advisory Board Chairman Rockwell Williams the board recommended that the supervisors approve three of the applications for services who wish to employ part-time counselors who have a background of mental illness or of mental retardation.

THESE THREE programs are:

the Iowa City-based Iowa Coalition's application for a $20,750 grant to help pay a part-time staff to educate and provide support for Iowa's mental health consumers, a $18,000 grant for the Iowa City Job Cooperative's support group to help severely mentally disabled people or those with emotional problems to develop work skills and hold employment, and a $27,943 grant to support the Iowa City Lutheran Social Service's Senior Peer Counseling program for the elderly.

Board member Don Hruby said this sort of peer counseling and peer support group is based on the techniques used by Alcoholics Anonymous.

"THE TIME HAS come for us to give more support to peer counseling," Williams said. "They are economically efficient, a lot cheaper and a lot better accepted."

The board also recommended the application for a $17,202 grant for the Lutheran Social Service project, which helps adults who have committed sexual offenses against children.

Other applications for state grants endorsed by the advisory board last night include applications by Systems Unlimited's Nelson Center for $72,000; Families Inc.'s application for a $12,000 grant; Goodwill Industries of Southeast Iowa's application for $31,839 and a $48,066 grant for Iowa University Affiliated Program.

The board also endorsed applications by Mid-Eastern Iowa Community Mental Health Center for $9,500; Systems Unlimited's Home Services department for $75,200; and a Systems Unlimited application for $57,000.

UNIVERSITY LECTURE COMMITTEE

Notice of Co-sponsorship Funds

Recognized student organizations and faculty departments, are you searching for vital supplementary funds to make your guest lecture program a reality? The University Lecture Committee has limited co-sponsorship funds available on a first-come, first-served basis for spring and summer of 1988. For information call the U.L.C. at 335-3255 or drop by our office in the Student Activities Center, Iowa Memorial Union. The U.L.C. meets at 5 pm, Thursdays, Room 70 Schaeffer Hall.

THE PARIS CENTER FOR CRITICAL STUDIES

If the works of BARTHES, DERRIDA, FOUCAULT, LACAN, or LOUIS MARIN

inspire, instead of intimidate you, consider participating in the CIEE Critical Studies Program in Paris. Specific subject areas include theory of literature and literary criticism, history and theory of film, historiography and history, history of art, and topics in contemporary French philosophy.

Sponsored by a consortium of 21 U.S. universities and colleges, the program is administered in cooperation with the University of Paris III and offers semester and academic year options.

For a detailed program description and application information, please contact:

Bar the underage

The UI Student Senate's recent resolution to lobby for underage admittance to Iowa City's bars, for the "social outlet," is a preposterously bad idea.

The notion that those between 19 and 20 can be put on their honor not to drink while rubbing shoulders with slightly older tipplers is ridiculous. Human nature simply does not operate that way. Overage individuals would immediately feel pressure to buy drinks for their underage friends, and the underage would often be the "beneficiaries" of the quintessential — and yet illegal — barroom gesture. Drinks would find their way into the wrong hands within the first round.

If they were required to admit the underage, the employees of local watering spots would be required to devote much of their time to policing the crowd, squinting through the smoke and shadows at stamps, bracelets or whatever mark distinguished the legal drinkers. This would inject suspicion and antagonism into the supposedly hospitable relationship between the establishment and its customers. And still violations would occur, licenses and livelihoods would be jeopardized, and Dram Shop insurance rates would skyrocket.

In fact, it's a safe bet that there is someone underage drinking in every bar downtown — every night. One of the main effects of the new national drinking age is promotion of forged ID's. Another is erosion of respect for the law in general. The whole matter is a vivid illustration of how those who do not exercise their vote, as young people do not, can be legally disenfranchised. The fact that middle-aged mothers vote and 18-year-olds do not, assured that Mothers Against Drunk Driving would have its hysterical way.

Still, the UI Student Senate hardly argues for the maturity and judgment of young people in its resolution on this issue, spinning as it does fairy tales about "social outlets" and ignoring the nightmare such a resolution would be for proprietors.

Weapon of words

With the long-awaited Iowa caucuses about two weeks away, the Republican race for the presidential nomination appears to be a head-to-head battle between Vice President George Bush and Kansas Sen. Bob Dole. And a battle it is. Literally.

Both presidential hopefuls, being well aware of this political reality, have lowered themselves to a mud-slinging brand of politics, brandishing serpent tongues and regularly unleashing brutal verbal attacks on each other. The battle, though, is not over substantive issues such as the budget deficit or poverty. Rather, it is a battle over the role Bush played in the Iran-Contra scandal.

Recently, Dole has stepped up the venomous rhetoric against Bush in hopes of capitalizing on his opponent's acute vulnerability on what is really an age-old issue. However, despite being well into his campaign, Bush has been unsuccessful in minimizing the damage the scandal has brought to his campaign.

But Dole has gone a step too far. At a campaign stop in Iowa Sunday, he said: "My policy would be no arms for hostages — period." This is clearly a sound policy. To admit to any other stance would be political suicide. Given the opportunity to do things over again Bush certainly would have done things differently. With the wisdom of hindsight, tough decisions are made easy.

Big-time politicians — including Dole — have acquired the uncanny knack of bringing their infinite wisdom to criticize decisions that were made a long, long time ago. In this instance, though, it is simply a case of character assassination. What dirt would Dole have dug up on Bush had the Iran-Contra affair been hailed a success? Big-time politicians should stick to big-time issues. No and's, if's or but's.

Living in shame

Arizona Gov. Evan Mecham got the news Monday. Not that it was unexpected or even the least bit surprising, but nevertheless it was news: Enough signatures had been collected to either force his resignation or make him face a recall election.

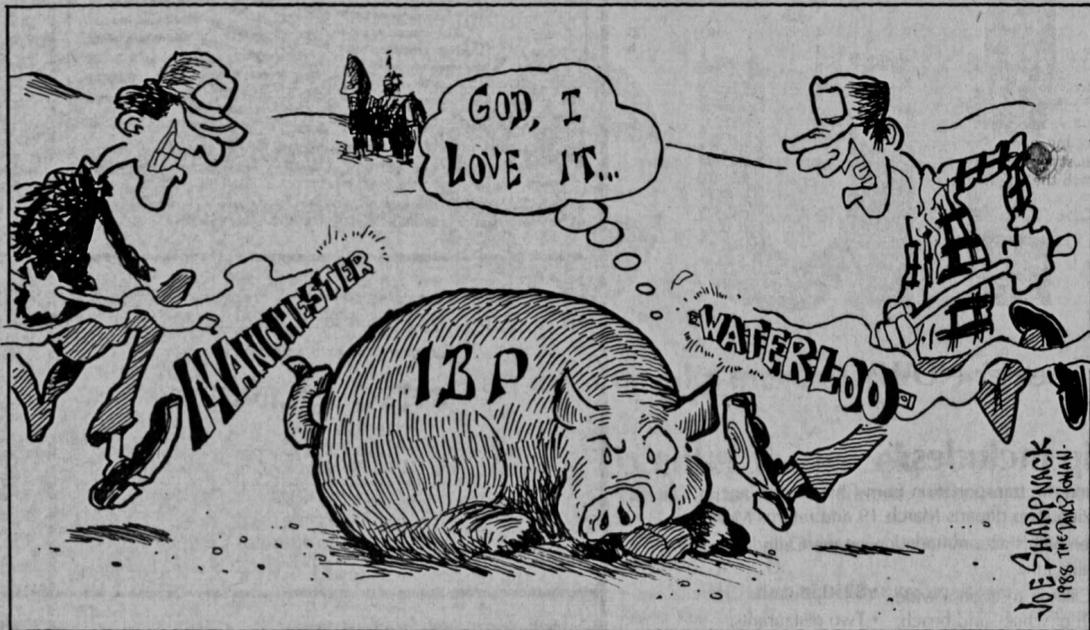

Mecham has until Saturday to decide his next move. And if his behavior since taking office in January 1987 is any guide, the governor's next move is likely to be inflammatory. In his first year in office Mecham has been, to say the very least, embattled. In addition to the recall campaign, Mecham now faces impeachment proceedings in the Arizona House of Representatives and felony charges stemming from allegations that he illegally concealed a $350,000 campaign loan.

But most of the attention has focused on Mecham's mouth. He has alienated and insulted virtually every interest group in the state of Arizona (and beyond) with his patently prejudicial remarks. Mecham has made ignorant comments about the shape of people's eyes, the color of people's skin and the legitimacy of people's sexual orientation. Even if one consciously tried to use such blatantly racist/sexist language with the regularity of Mecham, it would be difficult to keep pace with the Arizona governor.

Needless to say, the man deserves to go. Actually, the man deserves much worse: If some critics had their way, Mecham would probably be cast out into the Arizona desert to wander aimlessly, contemplating his own stupidity. But in the interest of maintaining the trappings of civilization, Mecham's punishment should be decided by the courts and the voters. Beyond that, Mecham's worst punishment will be a life of living with the shame he has brought upon himself.

Of poker, Greeks and politics

Once spent an evening playing poker with Jimmy "The Greek" Snyder. He lost and I won, so I can't help being a little fond of him.

One of the things I remember about that card game was that he seldom stopped talking. He didn't always make sense, but his ramblings were almost nonstop. Anecdotes about athletes and other gamblers, mini-lectures on how poker should be played, and frequent grabs for the phone to place bets with his bookie.

For a while I thought it was a ploy to distract the rest of us. But as his stack of chips shrunk, I realized he was simply a compulsive talker. And being something of a celebrity, he felt obliged to dazzle us with what he thought was wit and worldliness, even when we yawned.

When the game ended and we split up, one of the other players expressed surprise that a professional gambler could lose to the likes of me.

I TOLD HIM it proved one thing. Although it appears to be a simple game, poker requires some thought. And it was clear that Jimmy couldn't think and talk at the same time.

And this lack of brain-mouth coordination finally did him in. Somebody shoved a microphone in his face and he talked, but didn't think.

By now, just about everybody knows what he said: That blacks are superior athletes because of selective breeding by slave owners, and that if blacks become coaches, whites won't have any jobs in pro football.

Historians promptly said his breeding theory was nonsense, blacks said his coaching statement was racist and CBS said he didn't work there anymore.

And this provided most of the nation's commentators, editorialists, cartoonists and some politicians with the opportunity to express shock, horror and disapproval at what they saw as evidence that ignorance and racism exist even in such lofty citadels of intellectualism as the football broadcast booth.

IN OTHER words, everybody had a great time. As they should. It was wonderful farce.

Consider some of the comic elements:

Not knowing what hit him, Jimmy the Greek made a public apology, and to dramatize the depths of his remorse, he rushed to Jesse Jackson to seek forgiveness.

Naturally, Jackson was gracious and compassionate, which was to be expected of a presidential candidate grabbing some free network TV time.

So there we saw the humbled and grateful Jimmy being granted limited forgiveness by a statesmanlike Jesse Jackson.

This, of course, was the same Jackson who once referred to New York, which has a sizable Jewish population, as Hymietown.

And if that's not farce, I wasted many a Saturday afternoon watching the Three Stooges.

I'M NOT DEFENDING Jimmy the Greek. I'm sure he'll survive, if he stays out of poker games.

But in his own bumbling way, Jimmy the Greek had been trying to be complimentary to black athletes by talking about their athletic skills and how hard they work to excel.

That he was wrong in his explanation, even though he thought he was right, shouldn't be a surprise. He's a professional gambler and babbler, not a historian, anthropologist, sociologist or geneticist. And people in those rackets aren't sure why Walter Payton was so good, either.

In contrast, there wasn't anything remotely complimentary about Jackson's Hymietown remark. It wasn't as if he goofily mused: "I wonder why Albert Einstein and those other Jewish scientists got so smart. Do you think they eat lots of brain foods like fish?"

WHAT SNYDER said about blacks was dumb. What Jackson said about Jews was nasty. To even come close to matching Jackson, Snyder would have had to have referred to Detroit or Oakland as Coontowns.

Yet Snyder, who is nothing but an overblown bookie, has been kicked around by the same pro-Jackson commentators who had no problem explaining that Jackson's Hymietown remark was the result of an unfortunate cultural experience and social deprivation. Do they think that Jimmy the Greek went to Amherst?

I'm not sure what any of this means except that we apparently hold Greek bookies and black presidential candidates to different intellectual standards. We expect more of the bookie.

When push comes to shove

Sitting in a Los Angeles restaurant the other night, a place where, to all appearances, people of good tastes with good manners hang out, I watched an angry little social drama being acted out, the kind that happens so often these days that it has become a commonplace public occurrence.

A man at a table near me lit up a cigarette, and smoke quickly scudded to an adjoining table where two women were chatting over wine and salads. The woman facing the smoker screwed up her face in disgust and glared at him. He acknowledged her glare by returning one equally as belligerent — and went on smoking.

You didn't have to hear the silent dialogue to know its content.

"What right do you have to smoke and spoil my pleasure?" she obviously was thinking.

"WHAT MAKES you think you have the right to deprive me of my right to smoke?" he obviously was thinking.

It struck me then, as it has on so many occasions recently, that we have become so obsessed with the aggressive assertion of our "rights" that we have all but forgotten — or refuse to remember — those attributes of gentlemanly and ladylike deference and consideration.

Being a lady or gentleman meant thinking about how what you were about to do might make someone else feel, and not doing it if it would make that other person uncomfortable.

But even suggesting such behavior in today's coarse, me-first climate, is to brand oneself as an anachronistic fuddy-duddy, or worse, a wimp.

The proper, even admirable, way to behave in today's world of uncivil liberties is to automatically and unvaryingly assert that you have a "right" to take any advantage you can, and that you're a fool or a weakling if you don't.

TAKE DRIVING, for example. Until recently, this country was, as far as I am aware, the politest and least chaotic in the world behind the wheel. Now it's rare to hit the streets or freeways without being assaulted by aggressive moves, angry horn bursts or obscene gestures.

The same thing is true for waiting lines. My wife and I went to a movie the other night, where we waited half-an-hour in a line that stretched around the block. Just as we got to the entrance, about a dozen people who had not been waiting in line — young and mostly male — pushed their way ahead of us. A man and woman behind us politely told them they'd have to go to the rear of the line. Some of the line-jumpers ignored this request. The others retreated — but without the slightest trace of chagrin or embarrassment.

Another area where there's been a complete collapse of manners is at the dining table. Certainly no one would argue that a person has a "right" to eat any way he wants to. In an earlier time, you simply out of consideration didn't do things at the table others might find distasteful or offensive. Yet today you can see former breaches of good manners and good taste exhibited as "rights" in the allegedly most elegant restaurants and homes.

PUSHING AND shoving to get ahead of others in elevators. Elbowing aside old people on the streets. Yelling at children in public. Forcing your way in front of others to get at merchandise. Littering. Talking loudly in movies, plays and concerts. Being unpleasant or abusive to service people who can't fight back.

What has happened to bring on this apparently widespread feeling that if you have a "right" to do something, then it's OK to do it, and to hell with everybody else?

For one thing, apparently, many parents simply aren't teaching "manners" to their children anymore. Families have disintegrated in staggering numbers, and where there is still a mother and a father, both tend to be off at work, consciously or unconsciously relegating the teaching of good manners to schools, day-care centers, babysitters or, as a final resort, the police. Living among strangers in neighborhoods that are not neighborhoods in the traditional sense, children are not inhibited or checked by the possible disapproval of the community around them.

ANOTHER REASON for this epidemic decline in civility is that we now have about three generations of people brought up on television shows where most problems are solved by aggressive masochism and violence. Adding to this has been the general political climate, where the conciliatory tone of the Carter years has been replaced by the kick-ass-take-names-later tone of the Reagan years.

Yet another contributing factor to the level of brute aggressiveness is the big change in the attitude of many women toward men and vice versa. The desirable male role model of the '70s and early '80s was sensitive and "vulnerable," a man who could shed tears and admit fears. A lot of today's women seem to be derisive of that model, preferring again the tough guy — Rambo, or Conan the Barbarian.

IN SUM, aggressive, assertive, even belligerent behavior is seen as strong in today's marketplace of manners. Conciliatory, deferential, yielding behavior is seen as weak. It's that simple.

It is an unbrave new world out there, one in which people don't have the courage to say "you first," a world in which people are so frightened at the thought of being seen as weak and uncompetitive that they don't have the strength to yield their so-called "rights." So everybody's asserting his "rights" all over the place. The trouble is, I think deep down we don't truly feel any the better for it. Not really. As it seems to be developing with greed, I think we're getting a little sick of ourselves and the unceasing assaultive assertion of our "rights" in all those areas where generosity and gentleness used to prevail. In any case, I assert the right to hope so.

Witness: Nofziger aided Wedtech bid

WASHINGTON — A former officer of the scandal-ridden Wedtech Corp. testified Monday that ex-presidential aide Lyn Nofziger helped get White House officials deeply involved in a no-bid Army contract for the firm.

Mario Moreno, once a Wedtech vice president who pleaded guilty to bribery charges last year, said the defense contractor hired Nofziger just months after he left his White House job in early 1982 to break a stalemate over the $32 million Army contract. Wedtech eventually won the small-engine contract.

"We needed more powerful people to get involved so we could get rolling again," Moreno testified. "Nofziger had been one of the most powerful people in the administration and he was familiar with the engine problem."

Launch date for shuttle delayed

WASHINGTON — Top space agency managers decided Monday to put off pinning down a new target launch date for the first post-Challenger shuttle flight to gather additional data on the state of the overall program, officials said.

"We reached no decisions or milestones today," shuttle program manager Arnold Aldrich said. "We decided to take a couple of extra days to look at other aspects of the program other than the solid rocket motor before we commit ourselves to a new target (date)."

The shuttle Discovery had been scheduled to blast off around June 2 on the first American manned space flight since Challenger's destruction two years ago Thursday.

High court split on sensitive sex case

WASHINGTON — The Supreme Court, still operating with only eight justices, deferred ruling on a sensitive case Monday as it sought more information from a state court on a controversial Virginia law that limits minors' access to sexually explicit books.

The court's decision to postpone action follows a fall session in which the justices found themselves deadlocked 4-4 on a number of cases and unable to issue rulings.

In this case, the high court said it will rule after a Virginia state court clarifies what kinds of books and magazines are covered by a 1985 state law that requires retailers to keep juveniles away from their displays of racy material.

Court-martial trial begins for Marine QUANTICO, Va. — Court-martial proceedings began anew Monday against Cpl. Lindsey Scott, whose 1983 conviction on charges of raping and assaulting the wife of a fellow Marine was overturned last summer by the nation's highest military appeals court.

A jury of seven Marine officers was chosen Monday — five men and two women, six white, one black.

Scott's conviction nearly four years ago drew charges of racism from civil rights groups because Scott is black and his alleged victim is white.

Israel welcomes call for end to violence

JERUSALEM — Israeli Foreign Minister Shimon Peres Monday welcomed a proposal for a six-month "cooling off" period in Israeli occupied territories and an international Middle East peace conference, but Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir rejected the Egyptian-proposed formula.

"The call for an immediate end to all violent activity in our region is most positive," Peres said in a statement released by the Foreign Ministry.

Egypt's president begins tour for peace

BONN, West Germany — President Hosni Mubarak of Egypt arrived in West Germany Monday, beginning a six-nation tour to promote support for a proposed international conference on Middle East peace. He promptly won strong support from West German government leaders.

Mubarak spent four hours talking with Chancellor Helmut Kohl and President Richard von Weizsaecker. Afterward, Kohl declared, "I again assured him of my support for such a peace conference and I will put it on the agenda of the European Communities Summit."

Chinese probe death of American

BEIJING — Police are investigating the possibility of murder in the death of an 18-year-old American teacher in the northeastern city of Shenyang, Chinese sources said Monday.

A U.S. Embassy spokeswoman here identified the victim as Erin Elizabeth Johnston of Boone, N.C. She said an autopsy was being conducted and the cause of death has not yet been officially determined. Johnston was found by another American on Saturday morning at the apartment she shared with her parents on a university campus in Shenyang, Rifkin said.

Mecham must face recall — or resign

By T.R. Reid
Washington Post

PHOENIX — Arizona's secretary of state certified Monday that the state's beleaguered governor, Evan Mecham, must face a recall election this spring, setting up a political contest that is likely to feature a dozen candidates and split the Republican Party right down the middle.

With formal notification that enough Arizonans have signed petitions to force the recall, Mecham has a choice of resigning the governorship by Sunday or competing in a recall election — officially non-partisan, but already the focus of intense political maneuvering. Mecham's office said Monday he will not resign. If he doesn't, the election will probably take place on May 17.

It takes only 3,300 signatures to get on the recall ballot, and preliminary indications are that about a dozen people will make the effort. But there will probably be three chief contenders: Mecham, who is a conservative Republican; Carolyn Warner, the Democrat whom Mecham squeaked by in the tight 1986 gubernatorial election; and some senior Republican figure who is likely to be supported by most of the state's GOP establishment.

IT IS NOT completely certain who will emerge as the anti-Mecham Republican, but a corps of business and political leaders is promoting one of the Arizona GOP's elder statesmen: John Rhodes, the former minority leader in the U.S. House. The 71-year-old Rhodes initially rejected pleas that he enter the recall election, but as pressure on him has increased he has sounded more and more like a candidate.

Jay Smith, a political consultant working on the possible Rhodes candidacy, cites a recent poll that shows Rhodes first, Warner second, and Mecham a distant third. Warner, in contrast, has a poll that shows her beating Mecham whether or not a more establishmentarian Republican is on the ballot. And Mecham, despite the controversy boiling about him, seems to have a solid hold on about a quarter of the state's voters, almost all of them Republicans.

IT'S NOT CLEAR whether Mecham will still be in office next May when the election must be held. He faces a state felony trial this spring and an impeachment hearing going on right now in the state Legislature. The major charges in both proceedings involve a campaign loan that Mecham failed to disclose in the 1986 campaign.

Conviction in either case would oust him from office. Arizona has no lieutenant governor. Secretary of State Rose Mofford, a Democrat, would become governor if Mecham were forced out.

But the recall election, once it has been formally certified, must go forward even if Mecham is out of office, according to a ruling last week by the state attorney general. In that case, Mecham would be likely to petition his way onto the ballot.

Poll: Republicans offer promising candidates

By David S. Broder
Washington Post

WASHINGTON — A broad public perception that Republicans are offering the better-qualified candidates for president in 1988, particularly on national security and tax issues, is offsetting traditional Democratic advantages on domestic concerns and tilting the odds in the November election to the GOP, according to the latest Washington Post-ABC News poll.

Two weeks before the Iowa caucuses launch the nomination battle, two of every five Democrats surveyed say it would be better for their party to find another candidate to nominate at the convention than it would be to pick one of the seven men now actively campaigning.

Only one-tenth of the Republicans polled expressed similar dissatisfaction with their field of six contenders.

Among registered Republicans and Republican-leaning independents in the survey, Vice President Bush led Senate Minority Leader Robert Dole, Kan., by 49 to 26 percent, similar to the edge he enjoyed in an October poll. Trailing in the poll completed Saturday were former television evangelist Pat Robertson, 8 percent; Rep. Jack Kemp, N.Y., 6 percent, and former secretary of state Alexander Haig Jr. and former Delaware governor Pete du Pont, 4 percent each.

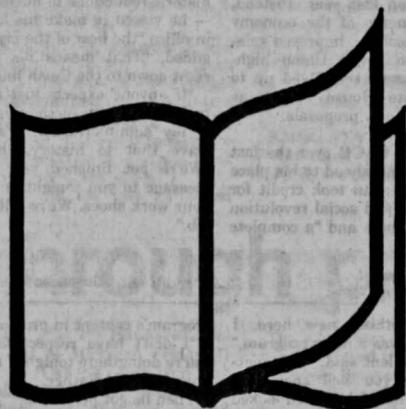

AMONG REGISTERED Democrats and independents who lean to the Democrats, civil rights leader Jesse Jackson and former Colorado senator Gary Hart led the field, with 25 and 23 percent respectively. The others were: Sen. Paul Simon, Ill., 12 percent; Massachusetts Gov. Michael Dukakis, 11 percent; Sen. Albert Gore Jr., Tenn., 6 percent; Rep. Richard Gephardt, Mo., 4 percent, and former Arizona governor Bruce Babbitt, 3 percent.

The national rankings differ markedly from recent polls in Iowa, which show Dole leading the GOP race and Gephardt, Simon and Dukakis out front among Democrats. History suggests that the national ranks will be radically reshuffled as the caucus and primary results come in.

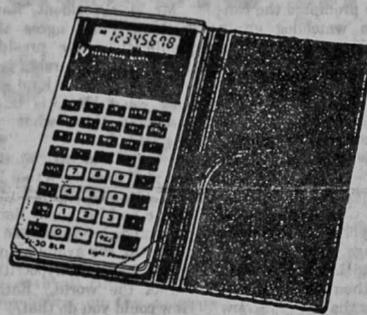

More significant as early indicators of the 1988 political dynamic are the signs that despite their status as the minority party, the Republicans have achieved parity with the Democrats on issues and start with a "stature advantage" for their presidential candidates.

On the question of which party "you trust to do a better job in coping with the main problems the nation faces over the next few years," Republicans lead Democrats, 44 to 43 percent, regaining a parity they had lost during most of the 1987 surveys when the Iran-Contra affair was so heavily in the news.

ing on crutches."

SEN. ALAN CRANSTON, D-Calif., said he was "delighted the president got a great burst of applause and a standing ovation when he called for support for the INF treaty . . . But I don't believe the president will get, or should get, his request for aid to the Contras."

After a year when the Iran-Contra scandal added to the perception that his political clout has diminished, Reagan hoped to convey a simple message: 1988 will see him hard at work on what aides described as an unfinished agenda and a still uncertain legacy.

No mention was made of the political crisis that gripped his administration last year. Instead, rosy assessments of the economy and the outlook for improved relations for the Soviet Union highlighted a speech that lived up to earlier White House billing as short on bold new proposals.

LOOKING BACK over the last seven years and ahead to his place in history, Reagan took credit for "an economic and social revolution of hope" at home and "a complete turnabout, a revolution" in America's standing around the world.

White House officials said the absence of fresh initiatives, a contrast to previous years, reflected a sense of realism about what Reagan can expect to accomplish this year.

Reagan seized the moral high ground — and safe political ground — by advocating educational excellence through "imaginative reforms" such as merit pay for teachers and stronger academic curricula, as well as a stepped-up war on crime and drug abuse.

With an agenda dominated by carry-over priorities — budget reforms, a continued attack on federal spending, a strong and vigilant military and a push for historic reductions in nuclear arms — he vowed to make his last year in office "the best of the eight" and added, "That means it's all out, right down to the finish line."

"If anyone expects just a proud retirement of the accomplishments of my administration, I say let's leave that to history," he said. "We're not finished yet. So, my message to you tonight is: Put on your work shoes. We're still on the job."

Bush

"There's nothing new here. I thought this was a news program," the vice president said. "This matter, Dan, as you well know and your editors know, has been looked at. . . . I find this to be a rehash and a little bit, if you'll excuse me, a misrepresentation on the part of CBS who said you're doing political profiles and you come up with something that has been exhaustively looked into."

COMPLAINING THAT the network had falsely lured him onto the program by telling him they were doing a candidate profile, Bush said heatedly the network had "impugned" his integrity with innuendo. "I'm asking for fair play, and I thought I was here to talk about my views on education and on getting this deficit down. . . ."

The brouhaha prompted the conservative media watchdog group Accuracy in Media to write CBS to demand "the resignations of all those responsible, beginning with Dan Rather."

The trick has given CBS "a black eye that will besmirch its reputation for credibility and fair play," said Reed Irvine, director of the group.

In New York, CBS News said it received many phone calls following the exchange, and issued a statement saying Bush's office had been told when the network agreed to his conditions that the interview would be "issue-oriented and tough."

Weather

Monday, with the wind-chill factor approaching minus 30 degrees, according to the National Weather Bureau. The high for the area was 3 degrees and the low for the area was 4 degrees below zero.

The Iowa Highway Patrol said icy conditions left by the blowing snow apparently caused a four-vehicle pileup on Interstate 29 that killed 13-year-old Richard Melton of Glenwood and sent nine other people to a Council Bluffs hospital. Icy roads also were blamed for a two-vehicle crash on U.S. 61 near Zwingle that killed two Dubuque men and left a third man critically injured.

Dennis Roth, 30, and Leonard Metcalf, 26, were killed when the car they were riding in slid out of control and into the path of a pickup truck driven by Neeloon Ness, 63, of East Dubuque, Ill. Ness was listed in critical condition at a Dubuque hospital Monday.

A PATROL dispatcher also said low visibilities were forcing numerous of cars into ditches.

"They were asking the guys to put their paperwork aside and check for stranded cars," the dispatcher said.

As the cold air slammed into northwest and north central Iowa late in the afternoon, blizzard program's content in promoting it. "I don't have respect for what you're doing here tonight," the vice president told Rather.

Then he got personal.

"I want to talk about why I want to be president," he exclaimed. "And I don't think it's fair to judge a whole career — it's not fair to judge my whole career by a rehash on Iran. How would you like it if I judged your career by those seven minutes when you walked off the set in New York? Would you like that?"

THE CAMERA caught a visibly surprised Rather, who left the network blank while in Miami last year for seven minutes after being told the U.S. Open tennis tournament would run into his scheduled news cast.

"Mr. Vice President," Rather said, "I think you'll agree that your qualifications for president and what kind of leadership you'd bring the country, what kind of government you'd have, is much more important than what you just referred to."

A few moments later he was prompted to explain that Bush was an anti-terrorist expert and question how he and President Ronald Reagan could be "party to sending missiles to the ayatollah of Iran."

"You made us hypocrites in the face of the world," Rather said. "How could you do that?"

FOR HIS PART, Bush said, "I signed onto it, the same reason that the president signed onto it. When a CIA agent is being tortured to death, maybe you err on the side of human life. But everybody has admitted mistakes. I've admitted mistakes. And you want to dwell on them."

conditions rapidly developed. Although a little snow fell with the advance of the cold air, the worst conditions were caused by the northwest winds of 30 to 45 mph picking up the snow that was already on the ground.

Wind chills at 7 a.m. ranged from 54 below zero in Mason City to 40 below in Fort Dodge.

Low temperatures early Monday ranged from 6 below at Spencer and Mason City to 2 above at Lamoni, Burlington and Ottumwa. Des Moines' low was zero.

THE FRIGID conditions prompted numerous school and business cancellations, and the Des Moines International Airport was closed for about four hours early Monday after its runway lights ceased working.

Roger Vogle, a spokesman for the airport's tower, said the lights' failure may have been weather-related.

The storm swept through the upper Midwest Monday accompanied by wind chill readings around 55 below zero, creating white-out conditions that closed roads and schools and forced dozens of stranded Minnesota motorists to seek overnight shelter in a single farmhouse.

Department budget will undergo no substantial change in services under the new budget proposal, although some councilors view the department as being understaffed.

"I think we are particularly understaffed on the overnight shifts," Courtney said.

Atkins said he would like to see two new positions added to the police department, but said the city could not afford it right now.

"While we do a good job policing, I'd love to see a liaison officer who could focus on just the schools. We'd head off a lot of problems that way," he said. "Ideally, we'd also have a traffic officer who could focus strictly on that."

Another budget work session is tentatively scheduled for next Tuesday night. Council business continues tonight with a formal council meeting in regular chambers at 7:30 p.m.

Defense Secretary Frank Carlucci, appearing before the Armed Services panel, said amendments that would link INF with conventional forces levels "is almost linking apples and oranges," since NATO and the Warsaw Pact embrace 23 nations, with the treaty applies only to two.

CARLUCCI SAID the Soviets wanted to link the treaty to the U.S. Strategic Defense Initiative, the Reagan anti-missile program known as "Star Wars," so we were opposed" to making similar demands linking any other issue to INF.

The treaty, signed Dec. 8 in Washington by Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev and Reagan, calls for the Soviet Union and United States to destroy all ground-launched missiles with ranges from 300 to 3,400 miles — the shorter- and intermediate-range class.

All the deployed U.S. missiles in that class are in Europe, as are most of the Kremlin's. Under the deal, the Soviets would have to destroy 1,752 missiles, against 867 on the U.S. side — what Reagan called "markedly asymmetrical starting points" toward nuclear disarmament.

But treaty critics, led by Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., emphasized that the nuclear warheads on those missiles can be returned to national stockpiles — which Helms asserted gives the Soviets an edge.

"I AM TOLD that the Soviet warheads are such that they can be very simply rebolted on other missiles with minor changes. On the other hand, our warheads would have to be reprocessed for re-use," Helms said.

"The moral is that old Soviet warheads never die; they are just retargeted on the United States. So, in fact, this is a treaty to protect nuclear weapons, not a treaty to reduce nuclear weapons," he added.

The fate of the INF treaty will figure significantly in whether Reagan is able to hold a successful summit in Moscow later this year, where he hopes to cap his final year in office with a strategic arms reduction agreement to cut by 50 percent the superpower stocks of long-range weapons that represent the real threat of nuclear holocaust.

One question everyone's tongue is sticking out is about the Cubs' Caravan scheduled for Friday. But before any words, Jim Frey, director of baseball operations, former field manager, said the question.

"One way or another, we're playing right field," Frey said.

The "he" to whom Frey is referring is 1987 National League MVP Andre Dawson, who is negotiating a new contract reportedly seeking a salary. The Cubs' settlement before the team to arbitrate.

"WE COULD SURELY get that far," Frey comes down to money, not your money, what you do with it.

Cubs' shortstop who along with Frey, Lancaster and Wagoner play-by-play man made the trip to Iowa. Dawson is $2 million price tag. "It's really not Dunston said. "But what he's asking for."

The next question mind Monday night team that had the field, a gold glove base in Ryne Sandberg's Cy Young cutliffe, finish in. No one really has that one.

"I HAVE NO idea," Frey said. "Those three great years. You can't win. He had it. But you can't win or four guys have. Everybody has to have a good year. Cardinals last year career years. That's Lancaster had success last season's success."

"On paper we have lineups in baseball. We just don't know. That brought up the biggest question of can Frey do to let team into contention National League playoffs."

"IT'S A PRETTY climb, isn't it?" Frey like to think that with the competitive. He knows how far a team can get back to. "In 1983 I took over and came on the people asked me. I said if we get some pitch a pretty good ball would have guess that we would have won that year."

TV station wants UI bids revealed

By Tracy Noble
The Daily Iowan

A Sioux City television station filed for a temporary injunction Friday to restrain the state Board of Regents and the UI from awarding the right to televise Iowa football and basketball games for any period past June 30, 1989, according to Johnson County District Court records.

Television station KMEG filed for the temporary injunction because officials there believed the contract for the games was awarded unfairly, according to court records.

The suit claims in March of 1987 the UI hired Rasmussen Communication Management Corporation (RCM) to produce and market the UI's television rights for its basketball and football games and coaches shows. The UI agreed to pay RCM a management fee for this work.

RCM TOOK BIDS from television stations and awarded the right to televise the games to the highest bidders. KMEG submitted a bid that was not accepted.

Instead, KCAU-TV, the ABC affiliate in Sioux City, won the rights to the broadcast package offered by RCM. The package includes Hawkeye basketball and football games as well as shows featuring Iowa basketball Coach Tom Davis and football Coach Hayden Fry. KTIV-TV, the Sioux City market NBC affiliate, broadcast Hawkeye games before KCAU landed the lucrative package.

Believing their bid should have been high enough to receive the programs, KGEM officials asked RCM to provide them with the bids submitted by other stations. When RCM refused to do so, a similar request was made by KGEM to the UI. The UI also refused, stating it did not have the information.

UI OFFICIALS SAID the bid information did not belong to the UI and is a trade secret which, if revealed, would give an unfair advantage to competitors of RCM. Because of this, the suit states, the UI was "ignorant of what others had agreed to pay for its own property."

The UI agreed to sell its sports events television rights to RCM, which had exclusive knowledge of the value of the rights, on Dec. 11, 1987 for $1,300,000. The term of the agreement was from July 1, 1987 until June 30, 1988.

When asked to comment on the injunction Thursday night, Iowa Athletic Director Bump Elliott said, "I don't have any comment. I certainly wouldn't until I know more about it. Until I know more about it what it is, I really don't have any comment at all."
On Dec. 28, 1987, the UI invited bids for its sports events television rights for a term of up to five years. Bids were required to be submitted by Friday, Jan. 29, 1988, according to court records.

If RCM bids for the rights, KMEG alleges, it would have an unfair advantage over its competitors since it has exclusive knowledge of the value of the rights, according to court records.

KMEG STATES IN its suit that if the bidding process is not stopped, the package for the rights

Optimism abounds in Cubs' Caravan

By Michael Trikk

One question was on the tip of everyone's tongue at the Chicago Cubs' Caravan stop at Iowa City's Highlander Inn Monday night.

But before anyone could mutter the words, Jim Frey, Chicago's new director of baseball operations and former field manager, answered the question.

"One way or another he'll be playing right field for the Chicago Cubs," Frey said.

The 'he' to whom Frey was referring is 1987 National League MVP Andre Dawson, who is currently negotiating a new contract and reportedly seeking a $2 million salary. The Cubs are holding out but Frey thinks there may be a settlement before Dawson takes the team to arbitration.

"WE COULD SETTLE before it gets that far," Frey said. "It all comes down to money. When it's not your money people don't care what you do with it."

Cubs shortstop Shawon Dunston, who along with Frey, pitcher Les Lancaster and WGN Radio and TV play-by-play man Dewayne Staats, made the trip to Iowa City, said he thinks Dawson is deserving of his $2 million price tag.

"It's really not my business," Dunston said. "But he deserves what he's asking for."

The next question on everybody's mind Monday night was how can a team that had the MVP in right field, a gold glove winner at second base in Ryne Sandberg and the second-leading vote getter for the league's Cy Young award, Rick Sutcliffe, finish in last place.

No one really had the answer for that one.

"I HAVE NO idea," Dunston said. "Those three people had great years. You can't forget Keith Moreland. He had a great year, too. But you can't win with just three or four guys having good years. Everybody has to play together and have a good year. Look at the Cardinals last year. They all had career years. That's what it takes."

Lancaster had similar thoughts about last season's dismal performance.

"On paper we have one of the best lineups in baseball," Lancaster said. "We just don't play together."

That brought up the final and biggest question of the night. What can Frey do to lead a last place team into contention for the National League pennant?

"IT'S A PRETTY big hill to climb, isn't it?" Frey asked. "I'd like to think that we can be one of the competitive teams. Nobody knows how far a team can go once they can get back their confidence."
In 1983 I took over a job (manager) and came on this caravan and people asked me how good this team could be. I said I don't know, if we get some pitching we could be a pretty good ball club. Nobody would have guessed in January that we would have won the division that year."

Other than signing Dawson, pitching is the biggest priority for the Cubs. Already the Cubs have traded bullpen ace Lee Smith to Boston for pitchers Al Nipper and

Stevens swims through pain

By Brent Woods

Kim Stevens doesn't splash through the water. She cuts it like a sharp knife.

The fifth-year Iowa senior all-American has used that smooth, efficient stroke to collect three individual Iowa records, four school records as a relay team member and a Big Ten title in the 100-yard freestyle her sophomore year.

Stevens also was a Canadian national champion in the 100-free in 1986. In all, her name appears on the Iowa record board seven times.

But nothing foils the best-laid plans of an athlete faster than an injury, and after her junior season, impingement syndrome in both shoulders forced the Hinsdale, Ill., native to watch from poolside for a year.

"IT WAS A WEIRD year," Stevens said after the Hawkeyes' dual meet loss to Michigan Friday. "I went to Canada and won the Canadian Nationals, and when I got back, my shoulder started hurting."

"At that point, swimming was everything to me."

When the pain worsened as she trained, Stevens said she knew something was wrong.

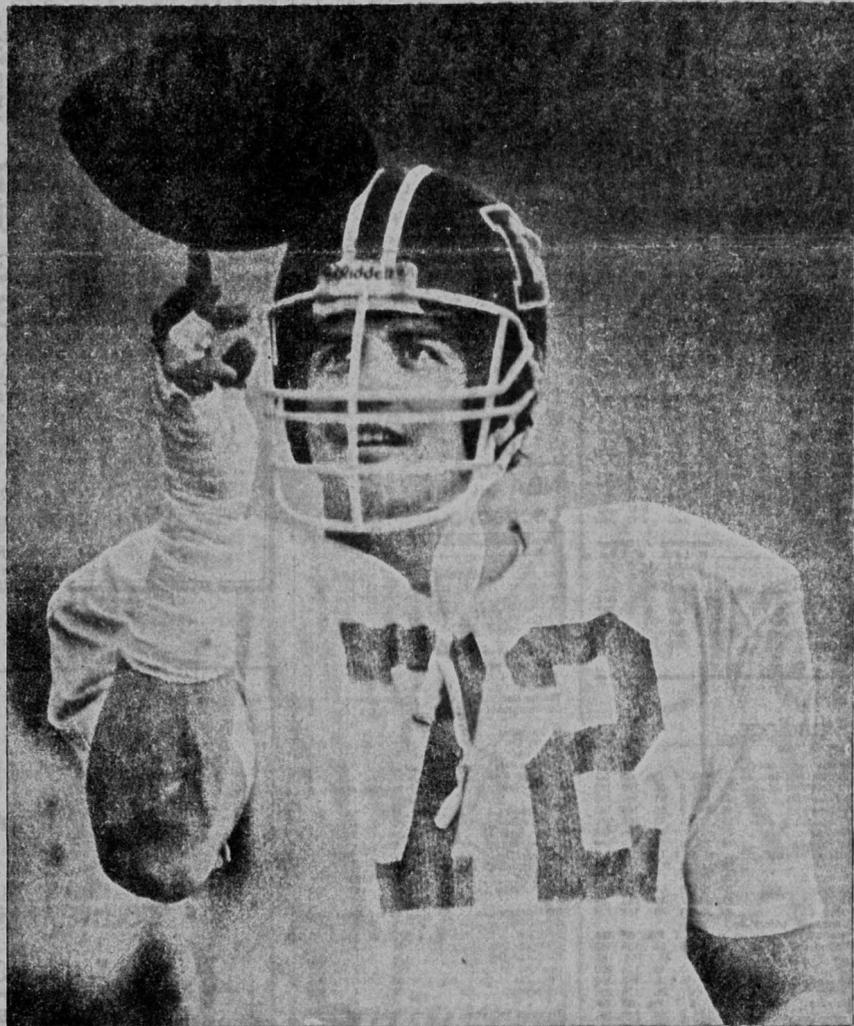

"It (the injury) is a fairly common swimming injury, I guess just from swimming too much," Stevens said. "My shoulder started hurting really bad, and in September, my right shoulder started hurting, too."

The result was surgery, and the process involved transplanting and tightening ligaments around her shoulder joints. The doctors said Stevens would be back in the pool in a month, but her shoulders had other ideas.

"I WAS SUPPOSED to be back in the pool in December, since I had the surgery in November," she said. "But it kept hurting, and I had to decide whether to live with it, or complain."

But Stevens isn't a complainer, Iowa Coach Peter Kennedy has

Badgers prove no match for No. 19 Hawks

United Press International

MADISON, Wis. — In a game halted several times by fans throwing debris on the court in Wisconsin Fieldhouse Monday night, Roy Marble scored 21 points to lead Iowa to an easy 104-89 Big Ten Conference victory over Wisconsin.

The game was the first Big Ten road win of the '87 season for the Hawkeyes.

The Hawkeyes, 4-2 in the Big Ten and 14-5 overall, took command early, breaking from a 4-4 tie to open up a 19-6 lead.

Trent Jackson had 24 points for the Badgers, who fell to 2-4 in the Big Ten and 8-8 overall. It was the fourth consecutive conference loss for Wisconsin.

Wisconsin shot just 28 percent in the first half, compared to 59 percent for Iowa.

Kent Hill triggered a 13-2 run with a layup with 16:25 left in the first half. A layup by Jeff Moe made it 19-6 at the 11:51 mark.

IOWA'S BIGGEST lead of the first half was 25 points at 43-18 on a basket by Hill with 1:42 remaining.

Iowa led 45-22 at the half.

The Hawkeyes took their biggest lead of the game at 60-30 on a layup by Marble with 17:05 remaining. Marble scored 15 of his points in the second half.

The Badgers managed to get no closer than the final score.

Junior guard B.J. Armstrong, the team's leading scorer this season, and Hill each added 19 points for Iowa.

Men's Basketball

Freshman Tim Locum, who shot five three-point goals in the game and Tom Molaski had 16 points apiece for Wisconsin.

It was the seventh time this season that Iowa has scored 100 or more points.

Wisconsin scored 67 points in the second half of the game.

Wisconsin forward Danny Jones fouled out with about eight minutes remaining with 10 points.

Iowa plays Minnesota in Carver-Hawkeye Arena Saturday with tipoff slated for 7:05 p.m. The sellout game is scheduled for the Hawkeye Sports Network. The Badgers, meanwhile, play in Madison against Northwestern Saturday.

IOWA NOTES

• With one minute remaining in the game, Gold squad member Kelly Westen scored four points for the Hawkeyes, a career-high, including a three-pointer from the left baseline. The previous high for the walk-on from Antigo, Wis., was three against Michigan State last season.

• Marble's 24 points gives him 1,203 points in his career, which surpasses former Iowa forward Kevin Boyle (1979-82) on the all-time Iowa scoring list. Marble is now in fifth place on the 1,000-point scoring list, which contains 22 players.

Cheerleading changed by new rules

By Anne Upson
The Daily Iowan

Many people are entertained by the tumbling stunts of cheerleaders, but there is more to the craft than just gymnastic skill. Cheerleading, like any athletic activity, is not without certain risks.

In the past 18 months, guidelines have been adopted by several supervisory boards, including the Big Ten conference, that have changed the traditional form of cheerleading.

Now it's more than just rooting a team to victory.

During a one-week period in the fall of 1986, two unrelated but tragic accidents attracted the attention of national and state committees and caused them to

More than rooting a team to victory

Today: Dangers

propose guidelines for cheerleading.

ON OCT. 29, Janis Thompson, a 20-year-old cheerleader at North Dakota State, died in what cheerleader advisor Jackie Wresstler called an "accident."

"It was a freak," Wresstler said. "Her body veered in the dismount, more than the spotters had anticipated."

Thompson performed a routine dismount from a three-tier pyramid, and was supposed to land safely in the arms of a male cheerleader waiting below. But she was caught awkwardly and suffered a broken back. Thompson, in good physical condition, was working with qualified spotters but still lost her life.

Wresstler said Thompson's death did not change her opinion on the safety of cheerleading.

"People took it (Thompson's death) as a message that there was no control in cheerleading. That is wrong," Wresstler said. "Yes, there is a risk in cheerleading, but there is a risk in any sport."

A WEEK LATER ON Nov. 4, Kentucky cheerleader Dale Baldwin, 22, fell out of a stunt he was performing on a trampoline during a practice. Baldwin was an experienced tumbler and a member of the Bud Light Daredevil team, which is renowned for its dangerous trampoline maneuvers. The accident left his body paralyzed from the neck down.

Although these two accidents were not caused by specific problems in cheerleading, they led to restrictive action on the part of the University of Michigan.

The Michigan Athletic Department, in January of 1987, issued tentative regulations for its basketball cheerleading squad for the remaining six weeks of the season.

According to Michigan cheerleading advisor Don Trivelino, these measures were formed partially to insure the safety of the squad and partially as an outcome of the two tragic accidents.

"THE RULES PUT into effect in the month of January were made temporarily for the safety reasons concerning what the basketball cheerleaders could do," Trivelino said. "The rules which we put into effect were... nothing built above two high, no throwing and basically nothing three feet off the floor."

Trivelino said the Michigan

Up-and-down week plagues Ice Hawks' gold team skaters

By Hugh Donlan
The Daily Iowan

After struggling without a victory in nine games, the Ice Hawks' gold squad held on to an early lead and defeated Ripon College 7-5 Saturday night in Waterloo.

Dan Sciro and Andy Nilles led the gold squad's attack with two goals each and Mitch Wolf, Mike Pugliese and Brad Hatley each scored a goal. The Iowa team outshot Ripon 46-42.

"We were ahead most of the game and it came down to keeping the lead," gold squad captain Noel Rubin said. "It felt pretty good to win the first game. For most of the guys that have played every game, it was nice for them."

Although the gold rebounded from its ninth consecutive loss, a 4-2 defeat Thursday at the hands of Loras, for Saturday's win, the thrill of the victory was short-lived for the club. On Sunday, the gold lost 9-1 to the same Ripon squad it defeated the previous night. Brad Hatley scored the club's only goal.

Sportsclubs

ONE REASON FOR the gold squad's inconsistency is the fact that the squad consists of players with little or no organized hockey experience, unlike the 8-0 black squad, where players are usually more experienced and are former high school and organized league skaters.

"The object of having two teams," Rubin explained, "is to have the black squad win the league. The gold squad is to take the players who haven't played organized hockey before. So we take everybody we can."

"For the first four or five games of the season we were having a hard time fielding players. We only had three players on the bench and we just ran out of gas."

Ice Hawk Club President Mike Pugliese helped fill in one of the gaps in the gold's roster and was encouraged by what he saw.

"EVERYONE ON THE team likes to play and they're very supportive of each other. The game they won Saturday, they played well," he said.

Pugliese also said he got some insight into what the gold needs to do in order to improve.

"They've got to start relying on the people they have and they have to start playing in position," he said. "They've got good enough players, they just have to start playing as a team."

The black and gold squads continue MCHA action Friday night. The league-leading and undefeated black squad (8-0) takes on Grinnell in Waterloo at 9:30 p.m. Friday. The Ice Hawks are sponsoring a fan bus for Friday's game. The cost of the trip is $10 and beverages will be provided. If you would like a ticket, contact Chris Homerin at 353-3113.

Strike cost NFL $104 million

United Press International

SAN DIEGO — NFL owners lost more than $104 million in potential income from the players' strike and only seven of the league's 28 teams made money this season, the Los Angeles Times reported Monday.

The Times said it obtained its figures from internal reports of the NFL Management Council and the NFL Players Association. The paper said neither group contested the numbers.

The Times reported 21 teams lost money because of the strike plus three other factors: a $30 million league-wide debt incurred from losing a lawsuit to the Los Angeles Coliseum Commission, legal fees stemming from the league's battle with the USFL and rebates to the television networks as a result of the three-week walkout.

Raiders $5.49 million and Seattle $4.92 million. Atlanta, Buffalo, Green Bay and Washington all lost more than $3 million.

DETROIT, HOUSTON, Kansas City all lost between $2 and $3 million; Chicago, Cincinnati, Dallas, New England, New Orleans, the New York Giants, Pittsburgh, San Diego and St. Louis had losses between $1 and $2 million; and Tampa Bay lost less than $1 million.

THE SEVEN money-making teams, according to the Times, were Indianapolis ($5.46 million), Miami (5.13 million), Minnesota (3.15 million), the Los Angeles Rams ($1.26 million), Philadelphia ($470,000), Denver ($460,000) and Cleveland ($140,000).

The New York Jets reportedly had the largest losses at $6 million while San Francisco lost $5.08 million, the Los Angeles

The Times said it based its league-wide $104 million loss in potential revenue on 1986 gate receipts and a projected increase of 8 percent in those receipts. If that increase had occurred, teams would have made $330 million from ticket sales in 1987. Instead, they made only $286 million from ticket revenue.

Cubs threaten to move if city denies Wrigley lights

United Press International

CHICAGO — The Chicago Cubs will consider moving to another city if the City Council fails to enact legislation to allow the team to play a limited number of night games at Wrigley Field this season, a team executive warned Monday.

"Without the ability to play night baseball, we would be forced to consider moving to another municipality where we could operate under more reasonable conditions," Cubs Chairman John Madigan said. "Without some sort of modernization, this part of Chicago's history is in jeopardy."

Madigan issued the Cubs' warning to a City Council committee considering legislation that would allow the team to play at least 18 night games at Wrigley Field, the only unlit baseball park in major-league baseball.

anti-noise ordinance currently on the city's books has prevented the team from going through with the project.

In addition, a vocal neighborhood group called Citizens United for Baseball in Sunshine (CUBS) has fought against the lights plan, claiming that to allow night games would harm the tranquility of the neighborhood surrounding the ballpark.

Madigan said the Cubs still are committed to day baseball, but the team would like to be able to host a limited number of night games so Wrigley Field could be used if the team got into postseason play, and also be considered for hosting the 1990 All-Star game.

LAST YEAR, Baseball Commissioner Peter Ueberroth announced the Cubs would not be allowed to use Wrigley Field for any postseason play because television contracts with major-league baseball require a specific number of night games to be played. The Cubs finished in last place the National League East Division in 1987.

Don Grenesko, vice president of business operations for the Cubs, told the City Council committee the team's chances of hosting the 1990 All-Star game would be greatly enhanced if night games were allowed at Wrigley Field.

AN ESTIMATED 75 neighborhood residents who also attended the committee hearing asked aldermen to delay a vote on the Cubs' request until after a March 15 referendum on the lights' issue. The referendum would ask voters if they favor the installation of lights at Wrigley Field.

But Rob Mier, the city's chief negotiator on the lights issue, said acting Mayor Eugene Sawyer is anxious to reach an agreement with the team, especially since NL team owners are scheduled to vote soon on which team will host the 1990 All-Star game.

Pitt star Cheers Heyward may jump to NFL

United Press International

PITTSBURGH — University of Pittsburgh tailback Craig "Ironhead" Heyward, a leading candidate for the 1988 Heisman Trophy, said Monday he was quitting school to pursue a career in the NFL.

Heyward announced his intentions live on a local television news show about two hours after Coach Mike Gottfried told a news conference he had suspended the burly runner for failing to attend class this term.

Gottfried, who said he met with Heyward before the news conference, also acknowledged he was investigating rumors Heyward had engaged in illegal contacts with sports agent Bruce Allen and Allen's Pittsburgh associate, Eric Metz, an insurance salesman.

HEYWARD, THE nation's second-leading rusher last season with 1,655 yards, said he has not signed with Allen nor any other agent but was ready to pursue a pro career.

"After this afternoon and I heard the press conference, I decided to petition for the NFL," Heyward said. "My reasons for doing that are being a father (he has a young son) and coming from a family of eight, a low-income family, so I think the decision is a good decision for me."

HEYWARD, A fourth-year junior on target to graduate in December 1988, is ineligible for the regular NFL draft.

to broadcast will be granted for up to five years without KMEG having an opportunity to make an informed bid. Also, the rights respecting the information KMEG seeks would then be violated, according to court records.

KMEG General Manager Bruce Lewis refused to comment because of the nature of the case but his attorney, Don Ribble reiterated KMEG's position.

"RCM wouldn't tell the university what the stations had bid to broadcast the game," Ribble said.

said, and she has taken her fate with an attitude of resign. She isn't bitter because she feels her injury has been a blessing.

"Before the injury, swimming was all-important and winning was all-important," Stevens said. "I believe that the Lord took swimming away from me for a reason. When I didn't have swimming as my sole identity, I realized that the most important thing to me is my relationship with Jesus Christ."

STILL, SHE SAID it wasn't easy watching helplessly last season as Michigan's Gwen DeMaat broke her Big Ten record of 1:50.13 in the 200-yard freestyle.

basketball cheerleading squad was upset about the action.

"These were hard restrictions," Triveline said. "The squad was hostile to them. They felt that since they had been doing the stunts they didn't need to stop," Triveline said. "But it's not the athletes that make the rules and restrictions."

WHILE THE MICHIGAN cheerleaders were acquainting themselves with their school's demands, the Big Ten Conference formed a committee in February 1987 to look into the dangers of cheerleading and to provide the conference with official restrictions. This ad-hoc committee consisted of Minnesota Athletic Director Paul Giel, Michigan Athletic Director Don Canham, former Northwestern Athletic Director Doug Single, assistant Big Ten commissioner Clarence Underwood and Commissioner Wayne Duke, an Iowa graduate.

These five men reviewed studies put out by the National Cheerleading Association and the United Cheerleading Association. After a six-month period, the following legislation was adopted in August, according to Underwood.

"THERE ARE NO pyramids in basketball (allowed)," Underwood said. "Football pyramids are reduced from two-and-a-half to two persons high. The number of traveling cheerleaders in football is reduced from 12 to six and there is no traveling for the basketball squads."

"Split catches, front and back extensions, and toe pitches are also not allowed," Underwood said. "Each university must have a representative advisor and all injuries sustained must be treated and diagnosed by a team physician."

"These rules were put in place primarily to decrease the potentiality of injury and to protect the individual schools in the conference," Underwood said.

Along with these regulations came provisions for enforcement. According to Underwood, the cheerleading advisor at each school is responsible to carry out the policy.

"AFTER THE FIRST violation, the squad gets a private reprimand. After the second, the squad gets a public reprimand," Underwood said. "On the third violation, depending on its severity, the squad gets placed on probation or expulsion."

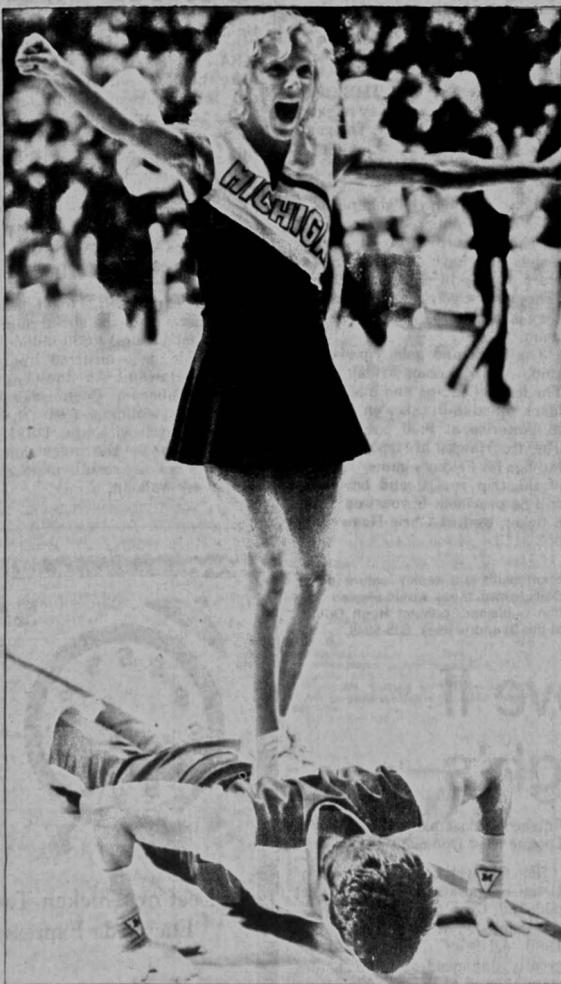

The findings of the Big Ten ad-hoc committee have gotten mixed reactions.

"A part of me inside ... it was hard," she said. "But I was happy for Gwen."

Kennedy said he thinks Stevens' strong kicking and good "floatability" have not only allowed her to become such a good swimmer, but also helped in her recovery, which has brought her close to her pre-injury pace.

"Kim has a very efficient stroke," Kennedy said. "She kicks real well and that's one of the reasons she looks so smooth in the water."

There's a story behind that. "WHEN I WAS 11, my coach and I were watching a little six-year-old swim," Stevens said. "She

The Daily Iowan/Carlos Trevino
Michigan has placed regulations specifying what cheerleaders can and cannot do on the basketball floor and on the football field.

Iowa cheerleading advisor Les Steenlage said the safety factor is important but the restrictions may be too rash. On the other hand, Triveline said he was positively in favor of the legislation.

"The restrictions have their advantages," Steenlage said. "It seems, though, that the Big Ten overreacted."

"Personally I am extremely happy about what is going on in the Big Ten," Triveline said. "Doing things which are entertainment I personally feel aren't the role of the cheerleader. Cheerleaders are supposed to keep the crowd in the game."

IOWA CHEERLEADING co-captains Tom Sattler and Lori Henry share the views of their advisor.

"The only reason I got into cheerleading was for the tumbling and the partner-stunting," Sattler said. "I'm not what one would call a 'rah-rah' cheerleader. I like to twirl the stunts, do the tumbling."

"But I think that the restrictions are kind of good because there are basketballs bouncing around and you can really, really get hurt," Sattler said.

flashbacks disappear, however, when the subject of this year's Big Ten meet is broached. Stevens will be swimming with pain, as she has all year. She was held out of Saturday's meet against Illinois State because the shoulders were acting up and Kennedy thought there was "no sense taking chances."

But Stevens' ambitions remain steady.

"If I do really well and make NCAAs I'd like to go to the Olympic Trials if my shoulders hold out. If not, I'll be done after Big Tens and that's fine, too."

"If I trust in the Lord, everything will work out."

Redskins must contain Elway

By Joel Sherman
United Press International

SAN DIEGO — To martial a defensive strategy that will stop the Denver Broncos, most coaches begin by confronting the John Elway Myth.

This fiction says the Broncos are a one-man team built around Elway, virtually their only skilled player.

Stop Elway and you stop the Broncos. Right?

Not really. A more effective strategy, say NFL coaches, involves actually turning the Broncos into the one-man team everyone likes to think it is.

Elway must be denied two options: the inside run and the trick play.

"SOMETIMES YOU get too concerned with Elway and Denver starts running well. Now, you have trouble with the run and with Elway," said Giants defensive coordinator Bill Belichick, whose defense stopped the Broncos in New York's 39-20 Super Bowl triumph last year.

The Broncos lack an outside running threat, and their smallest offensive line is unlikely to overpower. Thus, Denver's ground game is filled with misdirections

Washington Redskins vs. Denver Broncos
January 31, 1988
Jack Murphy Stadium
San Diego, California

and traps, many performed from shotgun formation. If the Broncos' running attack, led by Sammy Winder, gets going, that opens the play-action pass.

"You can't be so concerned with the pass rush and pass coverage that Denver racks up running yards on you," Belichick said. "If you stop the run, they are forced to become more one-dimensional (Elway)."

BRONCOS COACH Dan

Reeves likes multiple formations and gimmick plays.

"Every game they'll have four to five plays they'll try to make big plays from (with trick plays)," said Willie Brown, the Raiders' defensive backfield coach. "Maybe you'll see a reverse pass, or a throw back to the quarterback. But you'll definitely see a few."

Defensive backs must be especially vigilant, staying with receivers until the play is over.

"The hardest job for the secondary is to contain the receivers when (Elway) starts scrambling," Chiefs Pro Bowl free safety Deron Cherry said. "He'll get out of the pocket and there will be excellent coverage. Then, the coverage breaks down and his arm is so strong he can get the ball quickly any place on the field. Their wide receivers are taught to continue moving until the play is over."

THE BRONCOS' "Three Amigos" — Vance Johnson, Mark Jackson and Ricky Nattiel — are small but quick and unafraid over the middle.

With the favored options stymied, you must then contain the one-man team.

Washington's quick defensive ends Charles Mann and Dexter Manley should make it more difficult for the elusive Elway to get outside. However, should Mann and Manley play too far upfield, the middle will be available for Elway.

That is why many teams employ a "policeman" or "spy" at the line of scrimmage against Elway. That player must stay at the line and follow Elway, preventing him from maneuvering at will. You need an outstanding athlete to do so, such as Giants linebacker Lawrence Taylor.

Cubs

Chicago Cubs General Manager Jim Frey admires the tie of Clint Alberhasky, an Oxford, Iowa, resident, during an autograph session Monday as the Cub Caravan made a stop in Iowa City.

Calvin Schiraldi. Frey says the dealing isn't done yet.

"I'D LIKE TO improve the pitching staff," Frey said. "I'm going to continue to try and make the pitching staff better. Get more depth, more people and more insurance in case of injuries and those kinds of things. We're going to have to find someone in the bullpen before spring training. The bullpen is one area that I am working on."

Frey credited the 1984 division title to the deals made late in spring training and early during the regular season.

"In 1984 we got (outfielders Bob) Dernier and (Gary) Mathews and that made us a competitive team. We made another move and we got (pitchers Dennis) Eckersley and Sutcliffe and then by July we exploded. We wouldn't have won it without Sutcliffe and Eckersley."

South Koreans will beef up security for Olympic Games

United Press International
SEOUL — The South Korean government will formally activate in April a 60,000-strong special anti-terrorist force to safeguard people participating in the 24th Olympic Games to be held Sept. 17 through Oct. 2, the JoongAng Ilbo newspapers reported Monday.

The JoongAng Ilbo, a nationally circulated daily, said the combined military-police security force, to be placed under the command of a safety control center, has been training in preparation for its official activation.

The special force will be composed of quick reaction, commando, and anti-explosives units, the paper said. Its quick reaction units will have 10,000 men, according to the report.

THE PAPER SAID police will engage in guard duty at facilities open to the public such as airports, seaports and stadiums, while guard duty at less prominently visible places will be handled by soldiers.

Futuristic fashions shown off

United Press International

BOSTON — Design students from across the country showed off suits of the future Monday featuring wings and jetpacks for women and creative menswear to help males regain their position as society's power brokers.

Grand prizes at the 21st-century fashion show went to a sash-waisted suit for men, which does away with the tie and adds a cone-shaped cuff for work at a computer keyboard, and a hooded woman's jumpsuit that covers the body with cotton to adjust to the "Greenhouse Effect."

Stephen Walker's suit for men, "Techno-Ease," was chosen for its blend of professionalism and comfort, a concept he predicts will be a welcome change to the fast-paced world of the next century.

"Fashion has no logic," said Walker, who studies at the Fashion Institute of Technology of New York. "People just want to look good and feel comfortable."

CO-WINNER Diana Compton of Houston Community College in Houston, Texas, envisions a future in which styles conform to concerns over ozone depletion and pollution.

"In an economy where the United States is losing its competitive edge, there will be more attention given to materials and products that can be made efficiently and inexpensively by Americans," she said.

Arts/entertainment Riverside drama gets mixed review

By Kevin Goulding
The Daily Iowan

Riverside Theatre's first-time staging of Mary Swander's book-length poem, Driving the Body Back, achieved mixed results Thursday night.

Swander's book, published by Alfred Knopf in 1986, has drawn favorable reviews. Louise Erdrich of the New York Times wrote, "The book is a marvelous collection of folk humor, wild ways and down-home storytelling."

The limited success of the performance is primarily due to the lack of transition from poetry/storytelling to dramatic staging. The story, largely autobiographical, is based on the time Swander drove behind the car containing her mother's body on its way to burial. On this trip from Iowa City to Manning, she was accompanied by an older Aunt Eileen, who regaled her with tales of deceased family members, all of whom were colorful, comic and eccentric.

THE STAGING of the play, by director Michael Sokoloff, is imaginatively conceived but bogs down in its extended passages of narrative storytelling. This particularly applies to Mary (Jacque Hinshaw) and Eileen (Jeanne Osborn), and, to a lesser extent, the collection of deceased family members who come to life to display their peculiar quirkiness. A basic ingredient of drama is to generate some form of interaction between characters, usually with dialogue.

It would seem that this opportunity was available, and necessary, with the characters of Mary and Eileen. Too often their reminiscing was overextended. Because the action was given to the characters from the past, the women were left with nothing to do but sit or stand — and talk. Sokoloff, who developed the new script, retained the emphasis on the words, as opposed to action or animated staging.

Further underscoring this sense of emphasis, or balance, was the play's structure, which alternated the focus between the women's conversation downstage and the family ghosts' upstage action.

Again, when the action slowed, it was usually with the women. Their characters' function, because of their emphasis on poetic, imagistic reminiscence, was to essentially set the stage for the crazy family members. In the conversation between Mary and Eileen, Mary, the central character in the play, mainly listened. Again, there is the poetic suggestion of passive reverie as opposed to dramatic action.

AT ITS BEST, the ensemble of Rip Russell, Riverside Theatre regulars Ron Clark and Jody Hovland, and musician Willis J Knight, animated the play with down-home country humor and colorful characters. There was Maud, who would her money to her dogs, and Uncle George, who "because he weighed only three pounds at birth, Grandma kept him in the oven for warmth, and you (Mary) still use the cake pan she lay him in."

Riverside Theatre, Iowa City's resident professional company, is to be commended for its continuing bold and creative efforts. This production, with its local creative input — Swander and Sokoloff are both Iowa natives — is a commendable example of inspired, grassroots art.

Driving the Body Back continues at 8 p.m. Jan. 27-29, and at 2 p.m. and 8 p.m. Jan. 30 at Old Brick, 26 E. Market St.

Kodo performance a delicious taste of Japanese values

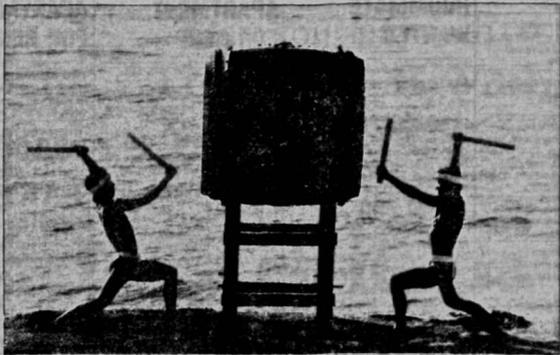

By B. Gordon
The Daily Iowan

For sheer athletic prowess, Kodo is unmatched. For almost frenzied musical excitement, they have no equal. But the most moving thing about Kodo's performance Sunday afternoon at Hancher Auditorium was how the beauty of their values shone through every moment.

All that mattered was the beat, which ranged from soft thrumming to unbridled savagery. Kodo's physical and spiritual discipline, born of daily training on the remote Japan Sea island of Sado, extended them into a childlike shamelessness at which a Westerner accustomed to more limiting definitions of dignity could only marvel.

For as wild and unleashed as the drumming and passions of the performers became, there was never a sense of getting out aggression on these tremendous instruments. There was no pent-up aggression to be released: These men perform and live in a state of ecstatic concentration.

PERFORMING BOTH modern and ritual works from the Japanese, Balinese and other village traditions, Kodo kept up an incredible variety of percussive sounds throughout. Their drums and other instruments were made entirely from natural woods, skins and fibers. Their costumes were simple body clothes and short kimonos. They used a spartan minimum of stage effects such as lighting changes, backlighting and screens.

Highlights of the afternoon included Chonlima, a modern piece based on a Korean myth about a horse who — according to the program — "was capable of running at tremendous speed over great distances without tiring." This featured a line of four drummers with one snare-type and one tom-tom look-alike each, performing in lightning sequence and finally all at once.

THE DRAMATIC climax of the performance was the Odaiko and Yatai Bayashi, where troupe members leaped and pounded a drum weighing almost half a ton mounted on a float. Then they sat before the 3-foot-wide miyadaiko drums and, gripping the drums with their legs and holding themselves in a half-sit-up position for 20 minutes, beat in wild desperation — but always in perfect time.

Carbon monoxide poisoning hits Minnesota bingo players

United Press International

HIBBING, Minn. — Officials poured over the Hibbing VFW Club Monday, trying to find out how more than 18 bingo players became sick from carbon monoxide poisoning there this weekend.

Jim Bymark, an official at the Mesabi Regional Medical Center in Hibbing, said 16 people were checked into the hospital and two more into a clinic Sunday. He said doctors verified they suffered from carbon monoxide poisoning.

"Four patients were admitted to the hospital as a result of this episode," Bymark said. "All of the patients are in good condition with one expecting to be discharged today and the others tomorrow."

John Shock, a manager at the club, said bingo players reported "dizziness and just not feeling good."

Fire Department and VFW officials said they did not know whether the building's furnace or something else, such as gas or sewer lines, caused the sickness.

ABOUT 80 TO 90 PEOPLE were in the building Saturday and 50 to 60 Sunday. The VFW just moved into the renovated building less than two months ago.

Shock said public utility engineers had been summoned to the club Saturday night but they couldn't find anything wrong. The fire marshal and engineers were back at the club Monday.

Now there's more than one way to get through college.

To get ahead in school, it helps if you choose a brilliant roommate. Like a Macintosh™ personal computer. And now there are two models to choose from.

The Macintosh Plus, which comes with one 800K disk drive and up to four megabytes of memory.

And the Macintosh SE. Which comes with either two built-in 800K drives, or one drive and an internal 20-megabyte hard disk. As well as a choice of keyboards.

The SE also has an expansion slot, so you can add a card that lets you share information over a campus-wide network. Or another that lets you run MS-DOS programs.

Whichever Macintosh you choose, you can use the latest, most advanced software. And that means you'll be able to work faster, better and smarter.

No two ways about it.
