Remington talks with UI groups, legislators

Interim president has interview for top spot

By John Gilardi
The Daily Iowan

UI campus constituency groups said Sunday they were pleased they had the chance to interview UI Interim President Richard Remington last week — but some still expressed reservations about him taking over the position of president permanently.

Remington met with deans; the UI Executive Committee Staff Council; representatives of American Federation of State, Clerical and Municipal Employees; and the UI Faculty Council last Monday. He then met with student leaders Tuesday. On Friday, Remington met with the UI Presidential Search Committee for two hours.

UI Presidential Search Committee Chairman Samuel Becker said Remington's interview "went fine." He said he has not yet received any reaction from members of the 17-member committee to the interview.

Laser Center dealings upset state lawmakers

By Jay Casini
The Daily Iowan

Iowa legislators said Sunday the claims made by UI officials regarding the $25 million UI Laser Center had been misleading and harmful to the UI's relations with the Legislature.

The comments came despite last week's meeting of UI Interim President Richard Remington with a legislative panel that oversees spending at Iowa's three state universities.

Remington said during the meeting the UI never promised that three leading laser scientists who served as advisors on the laser facility project would come to the UI.

"It was never a situation in which they told us, 'If you build the building, we will come,'" Remington said. "It was always a situation in which they said, 'If you do not build the building, we will not come.'"

N.J. teen dies at fraternity initiation

United Press International

NEW BRUNSWICK, N.J. — Rutgers University said Sunday it has banned fraternity social events following the death of a freshman pledge reportedly given a vomit bag and told to "drink until you were sick."

James Callahan, 18, died Friday of apparent alcohol poisoning after he and 13 other students trying to join the Lambda Chi Alpha fraternity were given between 200 and 300 drinks during an all-night party, students and university officials said.

Fellow pledge John DeLiso said the party began Thursday night with an initiation ritual in which he, Callahan and 12 other pledges were given pins indicating the fraternity they intended to join, The Home News of New Brunswick reported.

"After the pinning, you were told to drink and told to drink until you were sick," DeLiso told the newspaper.

THE PLEDGES were then given vomit bags to wear and placed before a table with between 200 and 300 plastic cups of a drink called "kamikazes," a mixture of vodka, triple sec and lime juice, DeLiso said.

Callahan, of North Bergen, was pronounced dead Friday morning at the Robert Wood Johnson University Hospital in New Brunswick, where he had been taken around 5 a.m. CST after he and other students who became ill spent several hours under the observation of fraternity members, officials said.

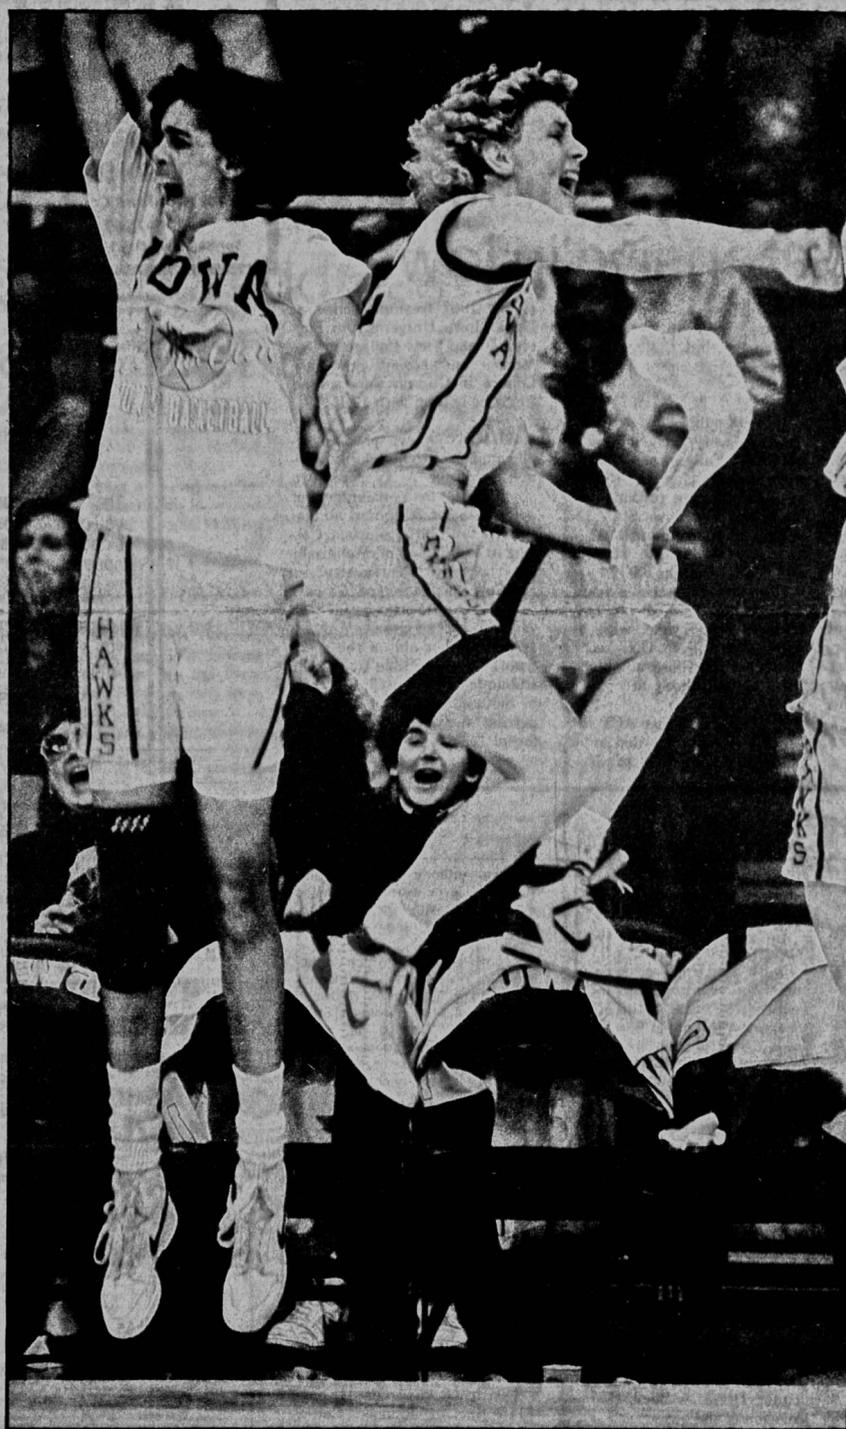

Callahan got sick within the first five or 10 minutes after the drinking began but went back to the bar, DeLiso said.

"I (later) saw Jim being carried out by one of the fraternity brothers," DeLiso said. "I figured they would just lay him down to go to sleep."

RUTGERS SPOKESWOMAN Ruth Scott said as a result of the incident the university has ordered an indefinite ban on all social activities by the school's nearly 50 fraternities and sororities.

Past lawsuits point to long sewage battle

By Craig Sterrett
The Daily Iowan

Iowa City and Johnson County officials may face extensive legal problems over the city's proposed sewage treatment plant if recent court cases involving Story County, Iowa, the city of Ames and landowners neighboring a waste treatment site are any indication.

Iowa City officially filed suit Friday in Johnson County District Court to force the county to rezone the land of the proposed plant site from an agricultural to industrial classification to allow the plant to be built.

Supervisors are refusing to rezone the property because the city has not answered the concerns of the neighbors of the plant and of the county — concerns which parallel those that faced the Ames City Council when trying to build a waste treatment plant in 1980.

Six lawsuits were filed against the city of Ames during the past eight years over the proposed plant — including two that went before the Iowa Supreme Court. The cases were filed by Story County and neighbors of the proposed Ames sewer plant site.

THE COURT CASES came in response to what plaintiffs claimed were abuses of power by the city. The Story County Zoning Board of Adjustments originally rejected a zoning permit for the Ames City Council's proposed plant site because of its location in the Skunk River's flood plain, four miles southeast of Ames.

The board also rejected the application because of concerns neighbors had that the site would lower property values and present possible health problems.

The city claimed it was immune to county zoning laws on city-owned property. The county then filed suit against the city to prevent it from beginning construction.

A district court ruled in favor of Story County, but the Iowa Supreme Court reversed the ruling in August 1986, stating the city of Ames had the right to ignore county zoning rules.

THE SUPREME COURT assured the city of Ames the right of "eminent domain" — a city's right to decide how to obtain and use its property outside its borders, and also granted the city a right to condemn and take the land it wanted to use.

The Supreme Court also ruled a city has the right to forego county zoning rules on city-owned property if the interests of the city are more important than the concerns of the county zoning commission.

"A local government is not subject to the regulations of another local government in the absence of legislation to clearly indicate such intent," court records state.

Suits were also filed against the city by neighbors of the proposed site who feared the plant would dry up their wells, decrease property values and cause offensive odors in the area.

NEIGHBORS ALSO contended the city could have found a better site for the plant or could have restored the city's older plant without taking county land, according to court records.

Members of the Johnson County Board of Supervisors have said they fear lawsuits from property owners neighboring the city's proposed waste treatment plant site south of Iowa City if the supervisors approve rezoning to allow the city to build its plant.

About 15 property owners near the proposed plant site in Ames sued in 1980 when the city threatened to condemn and purchase two farms on which to build the facility and to condemn and purchase portions of other properties to run a pipe to the Skunk River for disposal of the treated sewage.

"My neighbors and I weren't going to go along with it at all. We fought it for eight years and spent a pile of money," Story County resident Duane Severson said. "Sometimes we would spend as much as $1,000 a day in court costs. Really, none of us came out of it all right."

SEVERSON SAID he and the other plaintiffs had spent more than $40,000 in court costs and lawyer fees and Ames had spent nearly $1.5 million before the parties settled out of court earlier this year.

Severson said he and the other plaintiffs finally gave up on appealing the case because they could not afford to fight Ames any longer.

Kemp leads debate attacks, Dole, Bush stress party unity

By Matthew C. Quinn
United Press International

GOFFSTOWN, N.H. — Vice President George Bush and Kansas Sen. Robert Dole sought to steer clear of the bickering that has characterized their presidential rivalry Sunday but grenades were lobbed from the back of the Republican ranks in the last debate before the crucial New Hampshire primary.

Rep. Jack Kemp of New York chided Bush for urging him to "give peace a chance" when dealing with the Soviet Union, and former Delaware Gov. Pete du Pont dramatically produced a no-new-taxes pledge and demanded Dole sign it during the hour-long debate among the remaining five Republican presidential candidates.

But aside from a few barbed indirect references from the two front-runners about each other, Bush and Dole emphasized party unity and the need to bury intra-party differences before going up against the Democrats in November.

THE DEBATE ALSO featured detailed discussions of what to do about acid rain and the AIDS virus as well as what to do about the federal deficit and the Soviets.

Former television evangelist Pat Robertson sought to tone down his religious rhetoric.

But he stunned the audience by saying the Reagan administration had signed the new Intermediate Nuclear Forces agreement with the Soviets, even though he believed the Soviets had stationed SS4 and SS5 missiles in Cuba. He said he got his information from the Senate Foreign Relations Committee but offered no further clarification.

United Way sets record

Johnson County United Way has raised a record $644,000 to distribute to 36 local human service agencies for 1988, according to officials.

The original campaign goal was $600,000 for this year, but Johnson County United Way officials said local residents and businesses reacted to this year's campaign with stronger financial support than expected.

"When we set our goal at $600,000 we knew we'd have to stretch to reach it, and we didn't think it would be easy, but our community came through with flying colors," said Johnson County United Way Campaign Co-Chairman Dwight Seegmiller.

Seegmiller gave credit to new businesses in Johnson County, including Best Buy, Target and Rockwell Avionics, for responding with enthusiasm to the campaign. "They responded to our appeal with great generosity," he said.

He also noted the greatest increase in giving was at Sheller-Globe, where employee giving was up 70 percent over last year.

The division of Johnson County United Way which raised the most money was the industrial division with $197,100, followed by the university division with $136,000 and the public service division with $111,000.

UI publishes book on myths

Myth in 20th-century history is explored in a book published last week by the UI Press, Four Theories of Myth in Twentieth-Century History.

Author Ivan Strenski analyzes the work of four writers, each of whom theorized about the function of myth in describing and explaining the 20th century.

The authors and the major movements of their time in which they participated are Ernst Cassirer, in Weimar Germany's primitivism; Mircea Eliade, in the radicalized Romania of the 1930s; Claude Levi-Strauss, in the last days of the French Third Republic and Bronislaw Malinowski, in his struggles with the British colonial administration.

An associate professor of religious studies at Connecticut College, Strenski has contributed to a number of learned journals and is American editor of The International Journal of Religion.

Four Theories of Myth in Twentieth-Century History is published in a 242-page hardbound edition, priced at $22.50. It can be obtained from the UI Press Order Department in Iowa City.

Disability workshops offered

The Iowa City Recreational Division is offering two disability awareness workshops to help the Iowa City community become more aware of people with disabilities.

An "Understanding Blindness" workshop will be held on Monday evenings from 7 to 8 p.m. in the Robert A. Lee Community Recreation Center Room A, 222 S. Gilbert St., from today through March 15.

The workshop is co-sponsored with the Iowa Commission for the Blind, and speakers will give information on services for the blind as well as discussing misconceptions about blindness. No fee is required.

A sign language workshop will be offered on Tuesday evenings from 7 to 8 p.m. in the Recreation Center Room B, from March 29 through May 31. Class members will learn to use sign language and recognize commonly used expressions. There is a $10 fee for this class.

Pre-registration is required for both workshops. For more information or to pre-register, contact the Iowa City Recreation Division office.

WRAC shows film

The film Yes, Ma'am will be shown at the UI Women's Resource and Action Center, 130 N. Madison St., at 12:10 p.m. Feb. 24.

The film shows the role of black domestic workers in New Orleans. The showing is free and open to the public.

Engineers to explain cost overrun of sewer project

By Sara Anderson
The Daily Iowan

Iowa City councilors will allow a Boston-based engineering firm chosen to design the city's sewage treatment plant to explain cost overruns for the project before deciding whether to sue the firm.

Councilors will hear a presentation today at 5 p.m. in the council chambers from Robert Bening, president of Metcalf and Eddy, who will speak before the council in hopes of rectifying the situation which led to the council's decision to terminate its contract with the company.

The council voted unanimously Tuesday to end its contract with the firm after Iowa City Manager Stephen Atkins reported to the council that the firm had defaulted on its contracts to build the proposed sewage treatment plant south of town and to renovate the Iowa City Pollution Control Plant, 1000 S. Clinton St.

ATKINS SAID in a memorandum to council members two weeks ago the firm underestimated project costs and had failed to meet time requirements for submitting plans for the facility.

Atkins said he has asked that the council terminate the city's contract with Metcalf and Eddy because he doubted the firm's ability to meet Iowa Department of Natural Resources specifications.

"My recommendation to the council to terminate (the contract) was based on the fact that we had lost confidence in their ability to meet DNR requirements," Atkins said.

Atkins also said Metcalf and Eddy's design estimates were 30 percent over original budget estimates, which were the estimates used to develop the city's overall budget. The original estimated cost of building the plant and restoring the pollution control plant was $34 million; Atkins said the revised estimate submitted by the firm in August 1987 was $48 million.

ATKINS ALSO urged city councilors to consider suing the firm for damages.

Atkins and city councilors said they are unsure what to expect of Bening's presentation.

"I really have no idea what he's going to say," Atkins said. "Frankly, I thought we'd heard it all. They've been all over the lot with this."

Councilor William Ambrisco said he expects Bening to request the council to reconsider the decision to terminate the contract.

"I think he'll ask us to reconsider the direction we're headed in," Ambrisco said. "And I think we're all reasonable people. The fact that he's flying in from Boston says a lot, that he's making that kind of effort to do this right. I sure want to listen to him."

COUNCILOR Susan Horowitz concurred, saying "It's to his credit that he's coming, but it's also to his credit that he realize a situation exists which warrants his coming."

Ambrisco said Bening would need to explain the 30 percent increase in design estimates.

"As far as I'm concerned, they've really misrepresented the facts and I want to hear from the man who supposedly runs the company and makes these decisions," he said. "I want to know how something like that can come about with a firm with a worldwide reputation for knowing what they're doing."

Grinnell College's tuition is most expensive in Iowa

United Press International

DES MOINES — Iowa's most exclusive institution of higher learning — Grinnell College in Grinnell — is also the state's most expensive, statistics showed during the weekend.

Data provided by the individual schools show Grinnell, located about 60 miles east of Des Moines, this year accepted for admission 61 percent of its applicants. The applicants accepted for the freshman class recorded an average ACT score of 28 out of a possible 36.

Tuition, room, board and fees at Grinnell cost $12,888 a year, compared with $11,200 at second-most-expensive Cornell College in Mount Vernon and $10,790 at third-most-expensive Drake University in Des Moines, statistics show.

Data show the least expensive private school in the state is Iowa Christian College in Des Moines, which charges $3,240 a year.

IN THE public-school category, the University of Northern Iowa in Cedar Falls ranks the best cash bargain, charging $3,566 a year for in-state tuition, room, board and fees. Iowa State University in Ames charges $3,806 annually to in-state students, and the UI charges 3,930.

However, state schools' average ACT scores ranked far below Grinnell's this year, with students accepted to UNI scoring 22 out of 36, those accepted to ISU 23 and those accepted to the UI 23.3.

The lowest average ACT score — 16.3 — was recorded among students accepted for admission to the 1987 freshman class at Upper Iowa University in Fayette, Grand View College in Des Moines and Mount St. Clare College in Clinton were second from the bottom with 17.1.

WHILE NO Iowa schools overall came close to matching Grinnell's average ACT score, two accepted lower percentages of applicants for freshman admission in fall 1987, Simpson College in Indianola and Maharishi International University in Fairfield each accepted 60 percent of their applicants for last year's freshman class.

At the other end of the spectrum, Emmaus Bible College in Dubuque and Briar Cliff College in Sioux City each accepted 98 percent of students who applied for places in their 1987 freshman classes.

Police

An Iowa City resident was charged Friday with failing to yield to a pedestrian after he allegedly failed to stop at a stop sign and struck a UI student at the corner of Washington and Madison streets, according to police reports.

Michael D. Smart, 620 Dodge St., was driving southbound on Madison Street and said he did not see the pedestrian, Amy L. Smith, 132 Stanley Residence Hall, who was crossing east from the northwest corner of the street on crutches.

Smart said he was unable to stop because of the wet surface of the street, according to the report.

Smith sustained possible leg and shoulder injuries during the incident, according to the report.

Report: A fistfight at Burge Residence Hall resulted in the arrest of three men Friday by Campus Security officers, according to Campus Security reports.

Michael Jay Schroder, of Ankeny, Iowa, was arrested and charged with three counts of assault and one count of disorderly conduct in connection with the incident. Joel D. McCaw, 1222 Burge Residence Hall, and Anthony Rod Ortale, also of Ankeny, Iowa, were also arrested and charged with disorderly conduct, according to the report.

Report: A device which looked like a Molotov cocktail, an incendiary bomb, was allegedly thrown at the window of the College Street Club, 121 E. College St., Friday night, according to police reports.

The building glass was not broken by the device, according to the report.

Theft: Items valued at approximately $250 were reported stolen at about 11:56 p.m. Saturday from the Highlander Inn, according to police reports.

A woman pleaded guilty to charges of criminal trespass in Johnson County District Court after she allegedly entered an Iowa City home and took some prescription drugs, according to court records.

Mary Jean Gearheart, no address listed, allegedly entered the home, located at 2302 Tudor Drive, without the permission of the owners.

While in the home, she allegedly took prescription drugs not belonging to her and put them in her purse, according to court records.

Gearheart was ordered to pay a $115 fine in Johnson County District Court in connection with the incident, according to court records.

SAB decides to recommend change in New Wave status

Campus activist group could lose funding if senate agrees with 'political' definition

By Paula Roesler
The Daily Iowan

The UI Student Activities Board last week voted unanimously to recommend the UI Student Senate change the status of the campus activist group New Wave from non-political to political.

The decision ends three months of debate by the board over New Wave's status. If the senate decides to accept the SAB recommendation, New Wave will not be able to receive funding from the senate and will be forced to vacate its office in the Student Activities Center.

In 1987, New Wave received $3,000 from the senate. The senate's 1983 Budget Protocol Act states political groups may be recognized by the senate, but are not eligible for senate funding.

LAST DECEMBER, former UI Student Senator Natalie Dale presented the case against New Wave to SAB, saying the progressive student group was a political group.

But during an informal candidate's meeting Sunday for the Allied Student Advocacy Party — the party which holds the majority of seats in the senate — several senate members discussed tabling the SAB's suggestion, which is to be presented to the senate on Tuesday.

"As of Tuesday, it's going to get tabled for two weeks to review," UI Student Senator Tom Kakert predicted. "We were just talking about getting a new definition of what a political group is."

"We'd like to address the whole issue of political groups, rather than just one," he said. "We'd like to have other political groups there — groups like Young Americans for Freedom and Campus Review — the groups that are politically motivated."

DALE SAID the senate has never overturned an SAB recommendation, but she predicted this case may set a new precedent.

"I think student senate will vote to overrule SAB's recommendation," she said.

"The senate elections are coming up," Dale said. "If they zero-fund New Wave, the left-wingers won't go out and vote for them."

Dale said New Wave has been involved in political activities since 1981 and the "liberally slanted" senate allowed it.

"New Wave does a lot of good activities — like protesting CIA recruitment on campus — but there's just one thing they can't do and that's work for the election or defeat of a political candidate," she said.

"But lately they've been overstepping their bounds by working for the election of Jesse Jackson in Washington and for the defeat of Bob Dole," Dale said.

BUT NEW WAVE member Bruce Nestor said "not a dime of student fees has gone into supporting a candidate."

Nestor said New Wave members have not decided how to refute charges that their group is supporting political candidates.

"We don't think we've done anything wrong," he said.

Nestor last week predicted the senate would reject the SAB's recommendation if its status was changed to political.

Dale said the SAB is scheduled to formally present its recommendation to the senate Tuesday. The following Tuesday, Dale and Nestor are scheduled to speak at the senate meeting, after which senators will vote on New Wave's status.

UI faculty, students address education at public hearing

By James Cahoy
The Daily Iowan

About 29 UI faculty members and students testified Friday about the need to balance research and teaching at a public hearing before members of the State Education Appropriations Subcommittees.

"I think this provided an excellent opportunity to hear the concerns of students and faculty members," said Iowa Sen. Richard Varn; D-Solon, who chaired the hearing, which was held in Levitt Auditorium in the Boyd Law Building. "There is a real need to address the issues that were brought up here today."

Friday's conference was sponsored by the UI Liberal Arts Student Association and was organized by LASA President Gordon Fischer.

Students who addressed the hearing spoke on topics ranging from fire safety to problems students have in registering for classes at the UI. Several were critical of the UI administration.

administration," stated UI Graduate Student Brenda Sutherland. "I'm referring to an us against them type of attitude."

Other students implored legislators to ensure accessibility to education at Iowa universities by holding down costs for students.

"Tuition has risen to the point where students can no longer afford to send their students through college," said United Students of Iowa Assistant Director Wendy Swanson, urging legislators to fund more money to the Iowa College Work Study program as a way of making up the increase.

"In recent years undergraduate and graduate students alike have been subjected to tuition increases on the ground they are necessary to make us competitive in the Big Ten conference," said Graduate Student Senate President Alan Tribble. "But our measure of excellence is not judged by the amount of tuition we charge our students, it is by the type of education our students receive."

research versus teaching at the UI. Most emphasized a need to maintain quality at the UI in both.

"I want to argue strenuously against the idea...that there is a conflict in principle or practice between teaching and research," UI English Professor Donald Marshall said. "I must insist on what 20 years of experience has convinced me of, over and over, I have found good researchers are good teachers."

"It is the active researcher who cares deeply about a field, whose teaching will be informed by the energy and experience derived from research, and who will be committed to sharing his or her knowledge and enthusiasm with students," Marshall said.

The reality is that research and teaching are inseparable, inseparable in individual professors and departments and in the university as a whole," UI Pharmacology Professor Michael Brody said. "At Iowa our more distinguished scholars are in the classroom, providing students with that special kind of teaching that comes only from active involvement in the development of new knowledge."

UI may construct new combination parking ramp, chilled water plant

By Paula Roesler
The Daily Iowan

At this time next year, the UI may have another parking ramp.

The construction of a combination parking ramp and chilled water plant south of North Hall was discussed Friday at a UI Campus Planning Committee meeting.

The plant will be located in the eastern half of a block bounded by Capitol Street to the east, Madison Street to the west and Bloomington Street to the south.

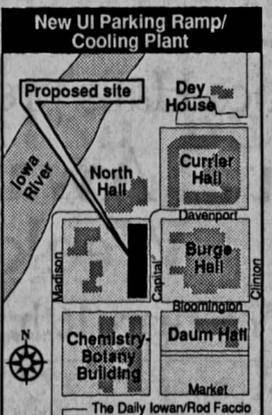

"For years within the context of campus planning, we thought about that site as a location for a chiller plant," Director of Planning and Administrative Services Dick Gibson said. "Then the need arose, in connection with the laser facility, to provide some structural parking."

"I didn't like the idea of taking the site for parking and ignoring the central chiller opportunity, because once it's gone it's gone," Gibson said. "We shouldn't identify alternative sites on the east campus for that kind of facility so it seemed natural to try to combine them."

UI CAMPUS Planning Senior Architect Steve Buckman said the proposal has not been formally presented to the committee, but he said the building has been informally discussed and architectural plans are being finalized.

Gibson said it is still too early to estimate how much the structure will cost.

"I have some conceptual numbers I'm working toward," he said.

Plans for the four-story ramp show 400 parking spaces, intended to replace faculty and student parking spots displaced by the new laser facility. Cooling towers are on the north end of the structure, and underground chilling equipment is on the east side.

The chilled water plant will be used to run the air conditioning systems for campus buildings, including the new laser facility, Gibson said.

"INSTEAD OF having an individual plant in a home or in a window, you put it in a central plant and you pipe chilled water through mains and then you bring back warm water," he said. "Really what you're doing is taking heat out of buildings and getting rid of it at central plants."

In addition to the chilling plant and parking ramp, Gibson said the committee will consider building an outdoor recreational facility, such as a basketball court, on the land.

"We will look at the possibility of including a recreational deck as a project, if we have the budget," Gibson said. "If we do, I will be working with the residence halls and Recreation Services to find what they would like on there."

"I think we've been very sensitive and aware for a long time that there's a shortage of play opportunities around these residence halls," he said. "We look at every opportunity we can to do something about it, given our limited resources."

"BUT THERE'S a limit to how complicated this project can get, and it's already pretty complicated," he said.

Gibson said utility problems need to be corrected before construction, which is targeted to begin in early December.

"There just happens to be some sites that are just loaded with utilities, and the biggest problem we have is the electrical problem of having to move substations that are in use and have to remain in use," he said.

There are also two sewer lines beneath the proposed building site which will have to be rerouted so the underground lines go around the building rather than right under it, he said.

Campaign '88

Simon, Gephardt battle for second place

By Joseph Mianowany
United Press International

CONCORD, N.H. — Having virtually conceded the New Hampshire primary to Michael Dukakis, the six other Democratic presidential candidates pushed their battle for second place Sunday with jabs at each other around the state and on television.

Dukakis, the governor of neighboring Massachusetts, tried to protect his huge lead and guard against complacency by putting in a full day of campaigning through the southern part of the Granite State, which will hold the nation's first primary Tuesday.

Speaking to a Knights of Columbus hall packed with about 200 supporters in Derry, Dukakis urged them on with a quote from baseball's Yogi Berra and reminders of 1978, when Dukakis unexpectedly lost the nomination for governor to Edward King and the Boston Red Sox lost a big lead in the American League's Eastern Division to the New York Yankees.

"A FINAL WORD on the next three days," Dukakis said. "All of you remember 1978. The polls looked terrific; the Red Sox were 14 games ahead at the All-Star break.

"This one is not over, according to a well-known American philosopher, until it's over," he added. "Anything can happen and usually does. We've got to be working today and tomorrow and Tuesday. Wednesday you can rest — I'm going south."

Paul Simon

With polls showing Dukakis outdistancing his rivals by about 20 points, the main focus for the Democrats in Tuesday's primary is who can finish second and propel his candidacy into the critical March 8 "Super Tuesday" primaries and caucuses, which are largely in Southern states.

Running in a dead heat behind Dukakis are Rep. Richard Gephardt of Missouri, the winner of the Iowa caucuses, and Sen. Paul Simon of Illinois, who finished second there.

NEW TRACKING polls by the Washington Post and ABC News taken Wednesday through Friday showed Dukakis with 40 percent support in New Hampshire, followed by Gephardt with 16 percent and Simon with 15 percent. Jesse Jackson registered 8 percent, Sen. Albert Gore of Tennessee had 7 percent, former Arizona Gov. Bruce Babbitt had 4 percent and former Sen. Gary Hart had 3 percent.

Simon and Gephardt, who in the past week have held back very little in attacking each other, continued the verbal battle Sunday and also took a few shots at Dukakis.

Simon's campaign is broke and because of his second-place Iowa finish, he is under more pressure than Gephardt to finish second in New Hampshire. That was clearly reflected in the morning-to-night campaigning he scheduled for the last few days before the Feb. 16 primary.

Gephardt had a much slower-paced schedule Sunday, taking his effort to win part of the 18 national convention delegates at stake to the state's seacoast.

However, he took the opportunity to jab Simon and Dukakis on taxes. Gephardt was a main sponsor of the 1986 tax reform bill and Simon voted no because he said the measure gave too much help to the wealthy.

GOP voters clash as stakes increase

By Susan Page
Newsday

HUDSON, N.H. — Bill Hart does not welcome Pat Robertson and his Christian soldiers into the Republican Party that Hart has belonged to for most of his 44 years. "He ought to stay in the pulpit," the computer systems salesman scoffed at a recent rally here for the candidate he does support, Vice President George Bush.

Linda Ricard, a 44-year-old homemaker who switched her party registration to independent from Democrat so she could vote for Robertson in the New Hampshire primary, has gotten the message. "I think they're a little threatened by us," she said of the Republican establishment. But she and her friends from Liberty Christian Fellowship Church in Milford are undeterred.

"I was never much interested in politics before, but Pat Robertson has given new hope for people who believe in God and believe in this country," she said defiantly. "I think the sleeping giant is waking up."

THESE ARE the voters the GOP is counting on to join hands in electing a Republican president in November — party regulars who largely back Bush and Senate Republican leader Bob Dole, and moral conservatives, many of them nominal Democrats, who are being mobilized by Robertson. They are major elements in the coalition that twice elected President Ronald Reagan to the White House.

But so far this year they are clashing in what sometimes resembles class warfare. "The seams of the Reagan coalition are beginning to show," political scientist William Schneider of the American Enterprise Institute said. Stephen Hess, author and analyst with the Brookings Institution, agreed. "It's the outsiders versus the insiders," he said.

ALREADY, THEY have ignited some of the most contentious infighting in the Republican party in a quarter century, since arch-conservative Barry Goldwater won the 1964 Republican presidential nomination after a bruising battle with party moderates and liberals. That was an election, not coincidentally, that the Republicans lost.

Meanwhile, the leading candidates themselves are engaged in nasty sniping of their own, fueled in part by years of ill feeling between Bush and Dole. Dole has called Bush "a qualified loser;" Bush's campaign has attacked Dole's integrity; Robertson has accused the Bush campaign of Watergate-like dirty tricks; Bush's son has likened Robertson's followers to "cockroaches."

ALL IN ALL, the Republicans this year are acting like the Democrats of years past, feuding and divided. In contrast, the Democrats (though they have stepped up their criticisms of one another in the last few days) seem positively good-natured.

Actually, the Republican candidates differ little on issues, uniformly forswearing tax-rate hikes, endorsing the Strategic Defense Initiative, supporting the line-item veto, opposing abortion rights and promoting prayer in schools. They all say they could support the other candidates; Dole in particular has taken pains to make overtures to Robertson's backers.

But the issues they emphasize are different, with Dole focusing on the importance of cutting the deficit, Bush on his desire to be "the education president" and Robertson on reversing what he calls the country's moral decay.

Nixon: Kennedy's magic is only hope for Democrats

United Press International

LONDON — Former President Richard Nixon Sunday predicted a close U.S. presidential election and said the best hope for the Democrats was to draft Sen. Edward Kennedy, bringing the "still-potent magic" of his family name to the race.

Commenting on last week's Iowa caucuses — Nixon wrote in the Sunday Times newspaper that Vice President George Bush's poor showing and the lack of a decisive winner among the Democrats indicated no clear-cut front-runner from either party was emerging.

"The only flat prediction ... that I will make at this stage is that it is going to be close," wrote Nixon.

Mummified body leads to probe of Holistic Society

By Charmain Kosek
United Press International

KNOXVILLE, Ill. — The head of the Midwest Council on Health Fraud planned to spend today in western Illinois to aid Knox County officials in their probe of the circumstances surrounding the death of a diabetic man whose mummified body was found last month — and a cult to which he may have belonged.

Knox County Sheriff Richard Shearer also was seeking help from the Illinois State Police and the FBI in probing the Holistic Society, a group that believes — among other things — that fluoridation of water is a poison foisted on the public by the government.

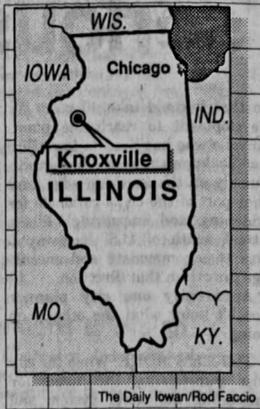

There was no evidence that the group was guilty of any violent activity — only the promotion of allegedly dangerous health-care practices that included use of health-care products such as vitamins, lotions and "mind-altering herbs," Shearer said.

THE CLOTHED AND mummified body of Carl Stevens, who died 8 1/2 years ago, was found in his home in late January.

Stevens' wife, Carole, and a dentist who had been living with the rural Knoxville family, Richard Kuncle, already have pleaded guilty to a misdemeanor charge of failing to report Stevens' death. Both also were charged with forging Stevens' name on bank documents and with cruelty to the Stevens' teenaged children, who were put in state custody.

Kuncle remained in custody in the Knox County jail while Carole Stevens was free on bond.

Authorities said Stevens died shortly after either stopping or severely cutting back on his dosage

of insulin for treatment of diabetes and, instead, trying to treat the condition by "natural" means. The family kept the secret of his death for more than eight years — at times trying to communicate with the dead man through "channeling" sessions — until his body was discovered by a Cudahy, Wis., relative, sheriff's investigators said.

JOHN RENNER, president of the Midwest Council on Health Fraud, said Sunday he planned to spend today in Illinois hoping to help authorities bring some type of logic to the medical, but not legal, aspects of the case.

"There are lots of rather significant missing pieces. I'm just hoping we can get them all pulled together," Renner said Sunday in a telephone interview from his Kansas City, Mo., home.

Renner said he hoped to interview Kuncle in the Knox County jail today. "I have a list of questions I would like whomever can give me the answers," said Renner, who runs the resource library for the National Council on Health Fraud.

"We have a lot of information about holistic activities and practices. This is the first time we've heard of one called the Holistic Society," said Renner, noting his group has collected numerous publications in the last year concerning the holistic approach to nutrition, water fluoridation and channeling.

"THIS IS A group that went way, way too far by taking that man off insulin and substituting their remedies. The most unusual thing is the corpse, but even that probably has more a distorted logic rather than no logic at all," he said.

"If you were one of these individuals and believed some of the things they believe in, keeping someone around hoping you were going to change that (Stevens' death) is very much within the realm of their thinking."

"There are groups of nurses and dentists who have gotten into this holistic thinking, not just a few" people.

Renner said he was interested in the psychology of the Stevens' children, ages 14 and 17.

"Sometimes children survive horrible tragedies a lot better than we give them credit for. Sometimes they detach themselves," he said. "There's one particular incident that involves the son which I want to ask the sheriff about." Renner declined to describe the incident until after he gives his detailed report of the case to the sheriff.

Family members said it was Stevens' brother, Roger, a St. Charles area lawyer, who convinced him to replace insulin injections with vitamins and powdered mixes, authorities said.

Report: Moderate exercise reduces the risk of cancer

By Thomas H. Maugh II
Los Angeles Times

BOSTON — Moderate exercise, particularly during the teen-age years, produces lifelong benefits to health, including a reduction in cancer risk, experts said here Sunday.

Women who played team sports in high school and college had a significantly reduced lifetime risk of breast cancer, colon cancer, cancers of the reproductive system and diabetes, according to epidemiologist Rose Frisch of the Harvard School of Public Health. Less extensive studies of men who exercise in their jobs, she said, show that they also have a lower risk of colon cancer.

But moderation is crucial, the experts said at a meeting of the American Association for the Advancement of Science. Both women and men who exercise intensely undergo temporary hormonal changes that reduce fertility. Those changes are reversed and fertility is restored when the heavy exercise is stopped.

THE STUDIES INDICATE that as little as 20 minutes of exercise three times per week can have beneficial effects on health, said surgeon Tenley Albright of the Advanced Medical Research Foundation in Boston. Albright urged that employers establish a six- or seven-minute program of daily exercise in the workplace to improve their employees' health.

And Frisch urged that young girls, beginning at age 10 to 12, have at least two hours of team sports per week at school. The benefits from that sport, she said, "will last them the rest of their lives."

Frisch also noted that active women who are having difficulty conceiving could increase their chances of success by cutting back on their exercise levels.

Researchers have known for many years that women athletes in training — as well as women who diet intensively — frequently do not have menstrual cycles. As the women become leaner, their reproductive system simply "shuts down" to conserve total energy, said endocrinologist David Cumming of the University of Alberta in Canada. A 5-foot-5 woman of average build, for example, will not ovulate once she falls below 108 pounds.

"But as soon as she puts a layer of fat back on her body, her fertility is restored," Frisch said. She noted that a pregnancy normally consumes about 50,000 calories, and that the body acts to avert a pregnancy until it builds up a reserve of about that size.

ONLY WITHIN THE last two years have researchers discovered that the same effects occur in male athletes. Ariel Barkan of the University of Michigan Medical Center reported in 1986 that she had observed reduced sperm production in marathoners and Olympic-class runners who trained very heavily.

The athletes reported no sexual problems, however, and fertility was restored when their training schedules were reduced.

The new results about the beneficial effects of exercise come from a study of 5,398 Harvard alumnae ranging in age from 21 to 80. Nearly half of the alumnae, 2,622, had participated on college track, basketball, soccer, swimming or tennis teams having at least two practice sessions of two hours each per week. If members of this group were not on an organized team, they ran at least two miles per day five days per week.

The remainder of the group, 2,776, had no formal exercise program.

What about the kids?

Last week Baby M — the New Jersey child who has been in the national spotlight since her birth nearly two years ago — was back in the news. On Tuesday, New Jersey's highest court ruled that the rights of an infant are of supreme importance in surrogate-parent contracts.

Rather than focus on which parent — father William Stern and his wife Elizabeth or mother Mary Beth Whitehead Gould, in this case — most deserves custody, the court chose to emphasize the inherent right a child has to be neither bought nor sold.

Although the seven justices cited additional reasons for labeling surrogate-parent contracts nothing more than "loathsome baby-bartering," the central focus was on the child. This decision may indeed be considered a victory for all those concerned about the welfare of children.

Unfortunately, similar action is not occurring in Iowa, where the rights of not one baby but of five children are still being completely ignored by state officials, specifically the Department of Human Services and the judicial system.

For more than a year, the five Cooper children have been living apart in two Cedar Rapids foster homes. The children were originally taken from the home of Larry and Paula Mick — where all five happily lived for two years — in order to prepare them for a reunion with their biological mother, Karen Cooper.

But last November, Iowa's highest court relinquished Cooper's right to regain custody of the children. While most would expect the state to return the children to the most stable, loving environment possible — in this case, the Micks' home — the five continue to live in Cedar Rapids despite their often expressed desire to return to Kellogg where the Micks live.

Why do state officials continue to completely ignore the rights of the children? In January 1987, state officials should have considered action that would have been in the best interest of the children. Instead, the five were taken from the Micks despite much protest by the children, the Micks and others. Now, the latest chapter in this never-ending saga has Cooper suing the Micks' lawyer, Jane Harlan of Newton, for what she claims was invasion of privacy.

Rather than fight in a court of law for a child's basic right to be raised in a loving environment with his or her siblings, lawyers will soon be arguing about confidentiality and proper disclosure. What better time, then, for state officials to finally begin legal proceedings promptly on behalf of the children? At worst, such action could help protect the credibility of DHS; at best, five children could be much happier.

Whale killing

Last Wednesday the Reagan administration sharply criticized Japan for its continued killing of minke whales "in the name of science." The administration said that Japan's actions hurt international whaling agreements in general.

U.S. Commerce Department Secretary C. William Verity penalized the Japanese by cutting in half their U.S. fishing quotas this year — which doesn't mean a whole lot, since the Japanese have for the last five years been phasing out their fishing in U.S. waters. Their quotas this year, for instance, were zero. The prohibition was meant to be symbolic of the government's displeasure.

The government isn't nearly displeased enough. Since the International Whaling Commission's moratorium on commercial whaling went into effect in 1986, Japan — along with Iceland, Norway and the Soviet Union — has consistently violated that agreement. Its current ploy, that of killing whales "in the name of science," insults the intelligence of all other nations.

A few years ago, the Japanese proposed a "scientific study" which consisted of killing sperm whales — an endangered species — in order to cut open their stomachs and examine the stomachs of the squid which form the whale's diet. The IWC shot that down before the ink was dry.

Their current "scientific study" is called a "feasibility study" in which, essentially, the Japanese want to find out if it's feasible to kill 300 minke whales in Antarctica. The IWC Scientific Review has likewise rejected this project, saying it has absolutely no scientific value. But it does have commercial value, since the "scientific research" the Japanese conduct involves only the removal of a few small pieces of the carcass, leaving the rest for butchering and sale in the same markets, for the same profits.

In 1984 Japan promised to end commercial whaling by early 1988, and in return President Ronald Reagan agreed not to invoke the Pally Amendment, thus ending Japan's importation of fish goods — a trade which the Commerce Department put at around $560 million for last year. Because the U.S. has lucrative fish markets in Japan, Reagan has been reluctant to be so drastic.

But it's time for drastic measures. Japan has repeatedly warranted the strongest sanctions and boycotts possible. Whales are no longer studied through slaughter, particularly when such slaughter has been outlawed by an international agreement.

Reagan has 60 days to decide whether or not he will enact the Pally Amendment. He shouldn't take half that time. It's piracy, not "research," that Japan is practicing in Antarctic waters, and it must be stopped.

City's plan has serious flaws

The city of Iowa City is about to ask for a declaratory judgement against the Johnson County Board of Supervisors to force the board to approve a rezoning application allowing the city to put an inadequately engineered sewer plant in an obviously unsuitable spot. The plant would be within the flood plain, where the water table is only 10 feet below the surface. There are also serious access problems. If any public body is sued, it ought to be the city.

On a moral basis, the city deserves to be sued because, in tried and true city procedure fashion, it has demonstrated a conspicuous lack of interest in the opinions of neighboring property owners and people who live on the routes the sludge trucks will travel on. The only public body that appears to care about the people who will be affected is the Board of Supervisors. The supervisors have listened to the complaints, personally inspected the proposed location and agreed that the project as it is now planned is far less than ideal.

QUITE REASONABLY, the board asked that the plans for the trunk sewer lines to the plant be submitted before it would consider the rezoning. Other practical problems uncovered by the board included concerns about the dumping of the processed sludge (where, in fact, will it go and what route will the trucks take that transport it?), traffic on the possible access roads, the flood plain location and the possibility of neighboring wells going dry during construction — and perhaps longer — as the ground water is pumped out of the site.

The Board of Supervisors notified the city in July 1987 that it was not satisfied with the plan and the information it had received. The suggestion was made that another site, perhaps one further south, be chosen. Certainly, as the board noted, it would be easy to resell the land already purchased and buy other land. That would not be difficult because the land in the city's possession now is so close to its quickly developing southern edge.

THAT'S RIGHT — we just identified another of the many problems: The city has the gall to admit that "odors are inevitable" and assert that a one-mile distance between the city limits and the plant is entirely sufficient. That assertion is in the minutes of the same hearing before the Board of Supervisors — in May 1987 — in which city spokesmen said the average city limit expands one-fourth to one-half of a mile every 10 years, so that it could take 40 years for development to reach the plant. Anyone who has lived in Iowa City while knowing the city has grown quickly on the southern edge, and that part of the city's rationale for widening and improving Gilbert Street south of U.S. Highway 6 was to accommodate and encourage growth in that direction.

Apparently one city planner doesn't know what the others are doing.

THERE'S MORE. When the city was publicizing the need for upgrading the sewer system and telling the citizens why their water/sewer bills would increase, many people thought the new plant would provide tertiary treatment. Unlike secondary treatment, tertiary treatment returns clear water back to the river. Actually, the new plant would provide only secondary treatment and would treat only about 40 percent of the city's effluent. The old plant will be renovated and expected to carry the remaining 60 percent — so citizens living near it will apparently not experience the odor relief they had anticipated.

And again, one must question the city government's interior communications: With an avowed policy of enticing industry to the city, how long will it be before the new arrangements are as inadequate as the present ones now are?

SUSPICIOUS PEOPLE may now be wondering whether the city purposefully delayed answering the board's questions so the Department of Natural Resources would come to the city's rescue by putting a gun to the supervisors' heads and saying: "Rezzone it or else." The supervisors — and the county government — are in a no-win position because owners of properties next to the site may sue if the board rezones.

However, since the attorney retained by the property owners has a history of humiliating the city in court, the choice is fortunately easy. Luckily for the entire citizenry of Iowa City and Johnson County, the Board of Supervisors would be prudent to let the city "sue and be damned."

Now that the city has decided to fire the engineering firm it hired for the sewage plant project — for grossly underestimating the cost and for failing to meet time requirements — it should be possible to start all over and do this thing rationally and properly at a better site, with a new engineering firm and new bids.

This time the city should make a real effort to look at the big picture and cooperate with the Board of Supervisors at every step. The board, after all, is a practical, hands-on bunch of people that is used to addressing and solving practical problems equitably.

What the Olympics should be

Well, the fifteenth Winter Olympic Games got under way this past weekend in Calgary with all the attendant pomp, spectacle and Miller Lite commercials... What? You didn't know that? ... Oh, you did know that but don't care a rat's doodle about it? ...

That's certainly understandable. It's not all that easy to get excited about such weird "sports" as curling (shuffleboard on ice, and just about as exciting as that description sounds), the biathlon (a marriage of two wholly disparate ventures — cross-country skiing and shooting rifles — apparently designed to provide schizophrenics a chance to compete) or luge (sledding, except you lie on your back on the sled looking pretty goofy as you're hurled by gravity down a winding track of ice to the bottom of the mountain, unless you go too fast and are flung off the track and into traction).

Even the most recognizable winter sports don't display the requisite physical demands, mental concentration and opportunities for product endorsements that define sporting extravaganzas deserving of Roman numerals. Figure skating is little more than disco-on-ice, full of comic possibilities that are, sadly, seldom exploited.

J.L. McClure

The hundredths of seconds which separate the medalists in downhill skiing might lead you to think that it's exciting, but a more correct reading would be that it's just not possible to differentiate an Austrian from a Swiss as they schuss down a mountain.

Ice hockey, the most blatantly nationalistic sport of the Winter Olympics and, hence, a favorite among Americans, is little more than an occasion to brawl, a chance to wrestle the other team to the ice and pummel them with fists and sticks.

I think the main reason people don't get excited about the Winter Olympics is that the featured "sports" are simply too alien from what most of us do during these cold, dark months between October and April. When was the last time someone asked you to go luging? Or when did you last slap a puck off the ice and lodge it squarely between the eyes of your respected opponent? Not too recently would be my guess.

If I were in charge of the Winter Olympics — and this is probably why I'm not — I would replace all of the current events with competition that more accurately reflects what winter is really about:

GETTING DRESSED IN THE MORNING. This is a particularly difficult event, requiring both mental concentration and physical dexterity. Athletes have to be prepared for the sub-zero temperatures that will face them when they step outdoors, as well as the often 70-plus temperatures they encounter when they reach their destination. Layering is the key to success, which involves the ability to quickly change from lacing to buttoning to Velcroing between the various layers, depending on the garment appropriate to the particular point in the complicated process.

WALKING ON ICY SIDEWALKS. One of the most dangerous of winter sports, walking on icy sidewalks, requires super-human balance and an unnatural tolerance for neighbors who refuse to shovel their walks. Athletes must, of course, wear protective padding and helmets, yet serious injuries are still quite common.

DRIVING ON ICY STREETS. Similar to walking on icy sidewalks, driving on icy streets adds two tons of metal to the danger and excitement. While some liberal humanitarian groups protest this competition as being gratuitously violent, it remains one of the most popular events for spectators.

CLAPPING HANDS AND STOMPING FEET WHILE WAITING FOR A BUS. This event demands a combination of physical coordination and mental stamina that becomes an art form when performed by world-class athletes. It's difficult enough to keep all of one's extremities moving continuously while waiting in torturous wind-chill factors; when that physical exertion is complicated by a 30-minute delay in the bus schedule, the effort becomes truly Olympian.

SHOVELING SNOW. Clearly, this is the premier event of winter sports, drawing together physical strength, mental fortitude and an unabridged lexicon of vulgar expletives. In the past, this event has been primarily a male-dominated sport. Recently, however, women have become much more competitive and may soon be able to compete on an equal basis with men. At least that's what I kept telling my wife.

Iran reports firing on 2 U.S. copters

MANAMA, Bahrain — Tehran radio said Sunday that Iranian forces fired on American helicopters shepherding a convoy of four U.S.-registered Kuwaiti tankers through the Persian Gulf Friday night, forcing the aircraft to flee.

But a U.S. military official in the gulf said he was unaware of any encounter between U.S. and Iranian forces in the strategic waterway and expressed doubt about the Iranian report.

In Washington, Maj. Randy Morger at the Pentagon said, "We have no reports to that effect," while a White House spokesman said, "We're looking into it."

An Iranian military spokesman said Iranian forces fired on the helicopters Friday in the southern gulf near the Iranian islands of Abu Musa and Sirri, forcing the aircraft to change course and flee, the radio reported.

The radio report made no mention of how many helicopters came under Iranian fire. It said anti-aircraft gunners on oil platforms and the islands, where critical oil platforms are located, opened fire on the aircraft as they approached.

Austrian chancelor threatens to resign

VIENNA, Austria — Austrian Chancellor Franz Vranitzky threatened Sunday to resign if the crisis over the Nazi past of Austrian President Kurt Waldheim continued to take up most of his time.

In an hour-long interview broadcast on Austrian television, Vranitzky said the Waldheim affair was now taking up 60 percent of his work time and whether he remained in office depended on his being able to devote more time to his regular job as head of government.

Vranitzky reaffirmed that he would not personally urge Waldheim to resign, saying that it was a matter for the president himself to decide.

Historians probing Waldheim's past found that Waldheim had not been directly involved in war crimes, but that he had been aware of them and had done nothing to stop them.

Des Moines school teacher found dead

WEST DES MOINES, Iowa — A Des Moines middle-school teacher found dead in his apartment during the weekend died of a stab wound to the chest, police said Sunday.

Police said results of an autopsy performed late Saturday by confirmed suspicions F. Kenneth Eaton Jr. of West Des Moines was the victim of a homicide. Police were treating the death as "suspicious."

Eaton, 41, was found shortly before 7 a.m. Saturday by one of his two daughters, who reportedly lived with him in a unit at the Normandy Terrace apartment complex.

Eaton had taught English, speech and drama at Brody Middle School on Des Moines' southwest side for 14 years.

Changes needed before shuttle launch

WASHINGTON — A NASA report says significant changes should be made before the next space shuttle launch to get rid of sporadic erosion of insulation that protects booster rocket nozzles, the Washington Post reported Sunday.

The 240-page internal document said tests show the insulation has on several occasions suffered "fractures . . . so numerous, so large, so closely spaced and so extensive that the integrity of the entire (nozzle cone) came into question," the newspaper reported.

But the report does not describe the problem as potentially catastrophic.

Researcher says shyness is inherited

BOSTON — Very shy children tend to remain introverted, indicating they were born with a biological tendency to be inhibited, a researcher said Sunday.

Jerome Kagan, a psychology professor at Harvard University, studied 40 children from the time they were about 1 1/2 to about age 7 1/2 and found those who were very inhibited tended to stay that way, apparently despite cultural influences.

Adults who were born with this tendency probably can find ways to cope with their natural tendency to be shy, such as by choosing jobs that make them comfortable, Kagan said. But they probably do not lose their inclination to be reserved, he said.

"I have been surprised and a little disappointed in how difficult it is for parents to change these traits," said Kagan, at a meeting of the American Association for the Advancement of Science.

Moslems clash with Israelis

By Louis Toscano
United Press International

JERUSALEM — Anti-Israeli unrest in the occupied territories spilled into the Golan Heights for the first time Sunday with dozens of Druze Moslems clashing with police to protest Israel's annexation of the northern territory.

At least 20 protesters were arrested but no serious injuries were reported on the sixth anniversary of Israeli formal annexation of the Golan Heights.

In the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip, Israeli soliders fired tear gas and rubber bullets to break up demonstrations in several towns and U.N. refugee camps. The army also imposed curfews on three villages and two camps in the West Bank and two camps in Gaza, Palestinian and military sources said.

There were no reports of serious injuries in any of the disturbances.

THE FUTURE status of the West Bank, Gaza and the Golan Heights, seized from Jordan, Egypt and Syria in the 1967 war, is at the heart of a new U.S. peace initiative to forge peace in the Middle East.

But officials Sunday said Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir has rejected the cornerstone of the plan — the principle of "territories of peace," which would require Israel to return all or most of the occupied land in exchange for a peace accord.

Secretary of State George Shultz laid out the proposal Saturday. He is scheduled to travel to Israel this month to discuss the plan but warned that it would be pointless to pursue the initiative without Israeli agreement on the formula.

THE PRIME minister believes Israel is within its rights in wanting a continuing presence in these areas," said one official, who requested anonymity. "He has never said he was willing to bend on this."

The official stressed, however, that Shamir and Shultz will continue discussions on the issue and compromise was possible.

Shamir has rejected two other key elements of the Shultz initiative — an April start for talks on limited self-rule for Palestinians in the West Bank and Gaza and negotiations on the future status of the territories by December.

The new U.S. initiative was spurred by the Palestinian protests that have swept the West Bank and Gaza since Dec. 9. At least 54 Palestinians have been killed in the unprecedented uprising.

Shamir is locked in a bitter and increasingly personal dispute with Foreign Minister Shimon Peres, his coalition government partner and chief political rival, over Israel's approach to peace talks.

a sense, but a very, very important one," Remington said.

REMINGTON ALSO apologized for any misunderstanding between the UI and Iowa lawmakers. "We're sorry if there was any misunderstanding," Remington said.

But despite Remington's apology, Sen. Jean Lloyd-Jones, D-Iowa City, said the misunderstanding has "left a bad impression in Des Moines" for the UI.

"The legislators feel that they weren't being told the entire truth," Lloyd-Jones said.

Lloyd-Jones said she wasn't sure whether the UI deliberately tried to mislead the legislators or simply misstated the situation.

"My recollection is that it was very clear that the scientists would come if we built the laser facility, and that was the only thing standing in the way, and that if we didn't all vote for it in a hurry we would jeopardize losing these scientists and never having the University of Iowa become a national center for laser research," Lloyd-Jones said.

LLOYD-JONES SAID THAT, during her original meeting with Remington and the UI's vice president concerning the laser facility proposal, "They all expressed the belief that the scientists would come."

"I don't want to accuse him (Remington) of any bad dealings, but my recollections were that the scientists had indeed promised to come, and that the only thing standing in the way was our vote for the laser facility," Lloyd-Jones said.

Iowa Rep. Sue Mullins, R-Corwith, agreed with Lloyd-Jones that legislators were given the impression that "the building had to be there in order to draw these three leading laser researchers."

Mullins said the "fine distinction in the way the information was worded" was unfortunate because state-of-the-art laser equipment already existed at Iowa State University before the proposal for the UI facility.

Mullins added that she was pleased with the UI's recent hiring of laser scientist Susan Allen, but said she was concerned that it may be difficult to obtain more quality researchers for the new facility.

decide to forward Remington's name to the state Board of Regents for consideration, Becker said the committee will wait to forward additional names as well.

The search committee is in the process of identifying additional candidates for the presidency position in response to a request by the state Board of Regents last December, after the committee submitted two names for the job to the regents.

But Collegiate Associations Council President Mike Reck said there are "still a lot of concerns remaining" about Remington's nomination, adding he thought it was "difficult for him to become president."

RECK SAID students interviewing Remington at the meeting were "concerned about his decision-making, a way that is rather autocratic," citing as an example the recent decision to move the UI Foreign Language/International House without talking to students.

UI Faculty Council President Bruce Gronbeck said the interview with Remington by the faculty council went well.

"It was a good interview, we got to ask all the questions we wanted," Gronbeck said. "He responded to all of the questions."

Gronbeck said the faculty council will meet Tuesday to talk about Remington and make a recommendation to the search committee. Remington could not be reached for comment Sunday.

IN A MATTER related to the UI presidential search, controversy erupted last week over a quote attributed to regents President Marvin Pomerantz by the Associated Press during a hearing of a joint state House-Senate budget subcommittee handling university funding.

The news service quoted Pomerantz as saying the two finalists interviewed in December — University of Arizona Provost Nils Hasselmo and University of Kansas Vice Chancellor Frances Horowitz — had been eliminated from the search. Hasselmo withdrew his candidacy for the position in December, but Horowitz said Sunday she is still a candidate.

The Associated Press quoted Pomerantz as saying, "After we'd gone through the process of interviewing those two and clearly not finding the person we thought might fill our requirements, we have gone back to the committee, who now have a much more clear understanding of the regents' point of view, and are cooperating fully."

Pomerantz has said he was misquoted, but was unavailable for comment Sunday. He has previously stated the only reason the search was expanded was to find more candidates for comparison since the board had originally asked for six candidates and only two were submitted by the committee.

The Rutgers party also followed an incident the previous week at Prin-

Bonnie said. "They've got more pull. They've got more money. We learned you just can't fight them and win."

The cost of these court cases was expensive in both time and money, because Ames was under pressure from the Environmental Protection Agency and the Iowa Department of Natural Resources to get going on the project — much like Iowa City — according to Story County Attorney Mary Richards. "It cost the city a bunch because they had to wait to build the sewage treatment plant and that was a very expensive proposition for them," Richards said.

Ames began building its sewage treatment plant 4 miles southeast of Ames along the Skunk River during fall of 1987 and the facility is now nearly half-completed, Richards said.

leadership and Bush his service to President Ronald Reagan as vice president during the debate at St. Anselm's College sponsored by the League of Women Voters just two days before the first-in-the-nation primary. There were no fireworks between the two men.

BUT KEMP TOOK umbrage at a Bush statement made as the vice president defended the Reagan administration's handling of relations with Moscow.

Bush made the comment after Kemp urged the administration to get tough with the Soviets on their promised withdrawal from Afghanistan and criticized the State Department's handling of the matter.

"I don't jump and run from the president when the going gets tough," Bush said. "Wait and see. Don't fight progress when you see it. Don't be afraid. Let's see them move out of Afghanistan. Give peace a chance with your eyes wide open."

Kemp, fighting for third place in New Hampshire with fellow conservatives du Pont and Robertson, noted loudly that Bush was using the same phrase House Speaker Jim Wright, D-Texas, used to urge that peace be given a chance in Central America.

"IT IS EMBARRASSING to have a Republican talk about give peace a chance," he huffed.

After the debate, the upstate New York congressman said, "Give peace a chance is a mindless mention of the word peace," he called it "the equivalent of backing off our commitment to peace and democracy."

Bush offered no rebuttal during the debate.

Du Pont chided Dole, the Senate Republican leader, for not signing a no-tax hike pledge that is circulated among political candidates at all levels in New Hampshire, which has no income or sales taxes. In the past, it has been considered political suicide not to sign the pledge.

"You're one of the candidates that hasn't signed it," du Pont told Dole, holding a piece of paper in the air. "Sign it."

"I have to read it first," Dole said, accepting the paper but not signing. Gesturing to Bush, he joked, "Maybe George will sign it."

DU PONT REPLIED sternly, "You won't sign the pledge."

Dole's reference to wanting to read the document before signing it was one of his barbs at Bush, who has chided him for putting his "finger in the wind" and dilly-dallying before agreeing to support President Reagan's INF treaty that would eliminate U.S. and Soviet medium-range missiles.

"You were for it before you read it," Dole told Bush. "I wanted to read it first."

Dole noted earlier in the debate that he was "leading the fight" for ratification of the treaty.

The two front-runners also tangled on their plans to freeze federal spending to reduce the growing budget deficit.

Bush called Dole's idea of freezing federal spending at all levels for one year leading up to sharp budget cuts a "cop-out freeze."

Dole defended his budget freeze proposal.

But the two men seemed to emphasize party unity, toning down their intensely personal rivalry that dominated the campaign for Iowa's caucuses last week where Dole won handily, with Bush finishing a humiliating third behind Robertson.

No. 15 Hawks set for No. 2 Purdue

By Eric J. Hess
 The Daily Iowan

When Iowa meets Purdue tonight at Carver-Hawkeye Arena at 8:35, national rankings and the Hawkeyes' chance at a Big Ten title will be on the line.

The matchup, which will be shown live on ESPN, will give each team a good indication of how they rate nationally.

The Boilermakers are ranked No. 2 in the country in the latest United Press International coaches poll and are 9-1 in the conference race and 20-2 overall. Iowa is No. 15 in the UPI poll, 7-3 in the Big Ten and 17-6 overall.

Purdue Coach Gene Keady is pleased with his team's position now but knows it only really counts in March.

"You've got the luxury of being greedy," Keady said. "Our biggest concern is to be at our best after March 12."

Men's Basketball

For Purdue, a win would be a plus but a loss doesn't destroy the Boilermakers' Big Ten hopes. For the Hawkeyes, a shot at the conference title would only be likely with a win.

AND FOR THE remainder of the season, Iowa will have to win without 6-foot-9 forward Al Lorenzen, whose Hawkeye career was recently ended by a back injury.

"It was a tough blow for us, but you've just got to go on," Iowa Coach Tom Davis said.

Since losing Lorenzen, however, Iowa has won two of three games and set the school record for scoring in a half (77 points) against Michigan.

To fill the void, Davis moved Bill Jones from guard to power forward and inserted senior guard Jeff Moe into the starting lineup.

Keady said the move certainly gives the Hawkeyes a new look, different from when the Hawkeyes met the Boilermakers in West Lafayette, Ind., earlier this season. Purdue won that game 80-79.

"I THINK BASICALLY what it does is hurt their depth," Keady said. "As far as their talent, it's not going to hurt them."

Lorenzen: Benign cyst was cause of problems

By Marc Bona
 The Daily Iowan

Iowa forward Al Lorenzen, who missed the Hawkeyes' last three games because of a back ailment, revealed he was not suffering from back spasms as previously reported but rather a cyst that was the result of a fractured vertebra.

Lorenzen, who is slated to be released from UI Hospitals and Clinics Tuesday, said a CAT scan in October revealed the cyst, which was benign. It was removed Tuesday.

Lorenzen told The Daily Iowan

Sunday he "never actually suffered from back spasms. The real problem was in October I was diagnosed as having a fractured vertebra . . . it would have been OK except I developed a cyst."

"I'm feeling much better," he said. "I'm as comfortable as I can be."

THE FUTURE FOR Lorenzen is undecided: "I just have to wait and see. In three months I'll be perfectly healthy. It's good that we caught it early enough."

"I've got some classwork to catch up on. I've got to see what can be

Speedskater falls in 500 to end tragic day

By Martin Lader
 United Press International

CALGARY, Alberta — Dan Jansen, one of the strongest medal hopes for the United States in the Winter Olympics, crashed into a wall and was eliminated from the 500-meter speedskating event Sunday only hours after learning his sister had died of leukemia.

The 22-year-old Jansen, skating in the second pair of the competition, appeared to be deeply unnerved by the events on this most tragic day. He was called for a false start on his first attempt off the line. On his second attempt he lost his footing one-third of the way through the race, fell to the ice and slid backwards into the barrier.

THE WORLD sprint champion, in realization of what had happened to him, held both hands straight up, then bent over and covered his face.

Teammate Nick Thometz, the world record holder entering the race, skated in the very next pair and had a poor race, putting himself out of medal contention and starting the U.S. Olympic effort off to a foreboding start.

With half the entrants finished, East German Jens-Uwe Mey was the apparent winner with a world record time of 36.45 seconds.

Jansen will have another chance at a medal in the 1,000 meters Thursday.

Earlier in the day, according to a hospital spokeswoman, Jansen spoke to his sister by telephone shortly before she died. Following her death, Jansen talked with his family on the phone and decided he would compete.

"I'VE DEDICATED the Olympics to her," Jansen said on his arrival in Calgary last week. "She wants me to go out and do my best. I want to go out and do well for her because she's fought so hard. I want to fight, too."

Jane Beres, a 27-year-old mother of three, died at 9:57 a.m. at West Allis Memorial Hospital in Wisconsin. Harry Jansen, Beres' father, See Olympics, Page 5B

No. 1 Iowa drops Minnesota

100-point effort tops season high

By Michael Trilk
 The Daily Iowan

There is talk that the Iowa women's basketball team needs a loss to realize how good it really is.

Problem is, the No. 1-ranked Hawkeyes aren't listening. Iowa bolted by Minnesota 100-51 Friday to run its record to 19-0 overall and 10-0 in the Big Ten. "We talk about peaking too soon

Women's Basketball

all the time and the whole situation is a mess," Iowa Coach Vivian Stringer said. "We can either get better or we can get worse, and we certainly don't want to get worse. We know we have a lot of things we can improve on and we understand that as a team."

"I don't think we have to worry about our heads peaking too soon."

Iowa ran away with the game from the start and took a 48-23 lead into the locker room at halftime. Not even a 25-point lead at intermission was the highlight of the night as far as the Carver-Hawkeye Arena crowd of 4,164 was concerned.

Stringer: Schueler equals future

By Hugh Donlan
 The Daily Iowan

Iowa women's basketball Coach Vivian Stringer has seen the future — and it involves a series of small crimes.

On Friday night her No. 1-ranked band of marauders picked the pockets of the Minnesota Golden Gophers 22 times on their way to a 100-51 Big Ten highway robbery.

"We wanted to play pressure or, so to speak, 'stick 'em up' (defense)," Stringer said. "As a team, we played good defense."

Iowa's tenacious pressure was responsible for the 22 thefts, a season-high for the Hawkeyes and the fourth time this season they have had more than 20 in a game. The banditry was led by freshman point guard Stephanie Schueler.

The Sioux Falls, S.D., native and South Dakota's 1987 Miss Basketball, led the Hawkeyes with seven steals and converted on 5-of-8 shooting from the field for a career-high 10 points in 19 fevered minutes of playing time.

"I JUST HOPE we get far ahead so I can get in the game and play a little," Schueler said.

Stringer said she feels "extremely good" about Schueler's performance because "Stephanie represents the future." Stringer also added she is satisfied with her

Iowa grapplers fall to No. 1 Cowboys

By Scott Wingert
 The Daily Iowan

Oklahoma State wrestling Coach Joe Seay needed one more blast from his six-shooter Saturday, so he took a chance.

Seay moved 177-pound Chris Barnes up to 190 for the Cowboys' sixth and decisive match victory, powering top-ranked Oklahoma State to a 19-15 win over No. 2 Iowa before 5,100 fans at Gallagher Hall in Stillwater, Okla.

The Cowboys, 14-1, almost coasted to victory, but 158-pound John Heffernan (22-6) put Seay's first conquer-of-Iowa party on hold after scoring a takedown with 40 seconds remaining to upset second-ranked Vince Silva, 5-4.

Iowa, 15-3, skidded into 158 pounds trailing 12-3, and Heffernan's victory allowed the Hawkeyes one last chance with wins in the last three bouts.

OKLAHOMA STATE LED 16-6 after the 167-pound match, but the Cowboys were not favored in any of the remaining three bouts. So Seay, like Oklahoma Coach Stan Abel did against Iowa two weeks earlier, moved his nationally-ranked 177-pounder, Chris Barnes, up a weight class to challenge Iowa's Brooks Simpson at 190.

Recruiting experts laud Fry's efforts

By G. Hammond-Kunze
 The Daily Iowan

During the past few years, a trend has developed in Big Ten football recruiting wars — the Michigan Wolverines have been winning most of the battles.

And according to Tom Lemming, publisher of Tom Lemming's Prep Football Report, and Allen Wallace of Super Prep magazine, the Wolverines' good fortunes have continued this year.

"Even with their head coach (Bo Schembechler) in the hospital, Michigan just continues to have great energy and organization,"

Recruiting

Wallace said.

Five schools — Michigan, Purdue, Iowa, Ohio State and Michigan State — did well this year, according to the recruiting analysts. Wisconsin, Northwestern, Indiana and Minnesota had average years, with Illinois, after being placed on probation, losing out on any chance of signing many big-name players.

'I Team' wins regional competition
 The UI Army ROTC "I Team" won the nine-team Ranger Challenge Saturday at Camp Dodge, Iowa, for its fourth consecutive regional title.

The competition was comprised of six team events: a 10K run with full military gear, a rifle marksmanship test, a weapon disassembly test, a patrolling test, a rope bridge construction test and a hand grenade assault obstacle course.

The nine teams were made up of Army ROTC programs in Iowa, Nebraska and South Dakota.

Andy Anderson, an Army ROTC instructor and team coach, said the team now advances to the national competition in Fort Lewis, Wash., April 9-11.

Recruit dies after swallowing crack
 SUTTLAND, Md. (UPI) — A South Carolina football recruit who died after allegedly swallowing six "rocks" of crack deals another blow to the school's football program, already battling criticism of its drug testing program.

Rico Leroy Marshall, 18, died Saturday at Prince George's Hospital Center in Cheverly, Md., just three days after accepting a scholarship to play at South Carolina.

According to police, Marshall told his girlfriend he had to swallow about a half dozen chunks of the powerful cocaine derivative as police were approaching him on a Suttland street corner about 1:30 a.m. Saturday.

Marshall, a 5-foot-11, 225-pound running back, gained 1,026 yards last season and scored 10 touchdowns at Forrestville High School.

Police said the death was still under investigation.

Dawson loses arbitration case
 CHICAGO (UPI) — An arbitrator Sunday found in favor of the Chicago Cubs in their salary dispute with the National League's Most Valuable Player Andre Dawson, who will earn $1.85 million for the 1988 season.

Stephen Goldberg, a law professor from Northwestern University, announced his ruling two days after hearing four hours of testimony from both sides.

Dawson, who accepted a relatively low contract of $500,000 to play for the Cubs in 1987, sought a $2 million contract after hitting 49 home runs and driving in 137 runs last season.

The contract still makes Dawson the highest paid member of the Cubs.

Iowa netters post victories over weekend

Women rout Northern Illinois, sneak past tough Texas Tech

By Hugh Donlan
The Daily Iowan

After a lopsided 8-1 victory over Northern Illinois Saturday, Sunday was a day for the Iowa women's tennis team to be challenged.

The Hawkeyes moved to 3-0 on the spring season as they defeated Texas Tech 5-4 Sunday behind the No. 3 doubles victory by Pat Leary and Susan Evans over the Red Raiders' third doubles team 6-2, 6-7, 7-2.

"I'm pretty excited about our win over Texas Tech," Iowa Coach Micki Schillig said. "It was a good test for us; (Texas Tech) is a good team. It was a good win."

For Leary the victory was sweet revenge for a previous loss to Texas Tech.

"It was kind of neat because when I was a freshman we got killed by them," she said. "Now I'm a senior and it's nice to beat them in my last year."

ALTHOUGH TEXAS TECH is known for its strong doubles play, the senior from St. Louis said she was comfortable knowing the entire match was in the balance.

"After the first few sets, I realized we were just as good as they were and we could win it," she said.

In addition to the Leary-Evans victory Sunday, Iowa also got strong performances from Madeleine Willard and Robin Gerstein. Willard, according to Schillig, faced her "first real test" of the season and defeated Tech's Jaymie McCaffery 6-4, 6-1 in the No. 2 singles match.

Gerstein, back from a leg injury that required surgery, defeated Paula Brigrance 6-4, 4-6, 6-4 at No. 5 singles. The junior from East Brunswick, N.J., said she is confident she has recovered from her injury.

"It still hurts, but not as much as before the surgery," she said.

Men beat Eastern Michigan, Illinois State in spring openers

By Anne Upson
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa men's tennis team kicked off its season with victories this past weekend over Eastern Michigan and Illinois State in Bloomington, Ill.

Iowa Coach Steve Houghton said the results were "expected."

"It was a nice way to start off the year," Houghton said. "If we hadn't won, it would have been disappointing. We did what I had expected. I hope it doesn't give a false sense of security."

In Friday's match against the Eastern Michigan Hurons, Houghton said the win came without difficulty.

"They were an easy win," Houghton said. "We didn't know how much the win told us about our team because we had nothing to compare it with."

Saturday's match proved to Houghton the strength of his team, because the Illinois State Redbirds were a stronger foe.

"THAT WAS A good match," Houghton said. "I was pleased with the results. We played our doubles fairly well."

Men's Tennis

The Iowa coach said this season's schedule will increase in difficulty with every match, and he anticipates his squad will strengthen with it.

"We will be playing better teams as the season gets harder," Houghton said. "We should improve with the season."

Players which have already shown improvement, according to Houghton, were No. 4 singles player, Lars Nordmark, and No. 6 Jay Maltby. The two players won all their matches for the weekend.

"Individually, Jay Maltby and Lars Nordmark played decisively well," Houghton said. "Both of them played strong sets this weekend. Most of the rest also played well."

Roberts' win in mile paces

Hawks at Husker Invitational

By Bryce Miller
The Daily Iowan

Jerry Hassard received a strong performance from Rachelle Roberts in the mile run to pace the Iowa women's track team at the Frank Sevine Husker Invitational this past weekend in Lincoln, Neb.

Roberts gave Iowa its only title by edging Alabama's Elspeth Turner by only seven-hundredths of a second. Roberts' time of four minutes, 48.29 seconds was a personal best for the junior from Columbus, Ind.

Although her time beat her previous best for the season by nearly 10 seconds, it failed to meet the NCAA qualifying mark of 4:45.60.

"I felt that I ran well, but was disappointed that I didn't qualify for NCAAAs," Roberts said.

The Hawkeyes also gained a strong performance from the 3200-meter relay squad. Roberts, Tami Hoskins, Kim Schneekloth, and Jeanne Kruckeberg claimed a third-place finish in a time of 8:52.33.

Women's Track

KRUCKEBERG ALSO participated in the 800-meter run, and Hassard had expressed hopes that she could qualify for NCAAAs in the invitational. However, Kruckeberg's fifth-place time of 2:14.63 was nearly six seconds off the qualifying time of 2:09.00.

"I just didn't have it in me this weekend," she said. "I just hope to have a good week in practice and try to do well at the Big Ten meet."

Iowa's Becky Borg, who has been saddled with a muscle injury, didn't compete this weekend, but that didn't mean that Iowa wouldn't be competitive in the jumps. Junior Lynn McMillan continued to look strong, recording fourth and seventh-place finishes, respectively, in the high jump and the triple jump.

McMillan's effort of 38 feet, six inches in the triple jump exceeded her previous season best by over a foot.

Probably the most surprising Iowa finish of the meet was turned in by freshman Bev Powell in the 600-meter dash. For Powell, her first attempt at that distance was good enough for second place.

The Hawkeyes will take this weekend off in preparation for the Big Ten Championships Feb. 26-27 in West Lafayette, Ind.

Armstrong's hurdles victory leads Hawkeyes to eighth

By Eric J. Hess
The Daily Iowan

James Armstrong won the 55-meter hurdles as the Iowa Hawkeyes took eighth place at the Central Collegiate meet Friday and Saturday at the UNI-Dome in Cedar Falls, Iowa.

Armstrong, a redshirt sophomore from Dallas, sprinted to a time of 7.03 seconds in the event, capturing the Hawkeyes' lone victory.

"It usually takes more experience," Iowa Coach Ted Wheeler said of Armstrong's win. "But James was able to dominate a meet like this."

Armstrong said he will likely take a week off to prepare for the Big Ten Indoor Championships in Columbus, Ohio, in two weeks.

"I just wanted to compare myself with the other guys in the Big Ten," he said of the Central Collegiates meet. Eight Big Ten teams were competing at the meet, which gave the young hurdler a good chance to see the competition.

Men's Track

ILLINOIS, WHICH has six NCAA qualifiers, won the overall meet with 130 points, easily outdistancing its nearest opponent.

Armstrong said he still has a way to go before the conference championships.

"I have a fairly decent start, but I'd like to work on the last two hurdles," he said. "I tend to die at the end of the race."

Wheeler said his mile relay team turned in a disappointing performance in finishing third.

"I expected the mile relay to run better than it did," he said. "Obviously that one area that should be one of our strengths isn't coming."

Wheeler said he thinks captain Pat McGhee's knee injury and stomach problems may have improved enough for him to be competitive in the near future.

"It looks like we might have him back for the Big Tens," he said.

The Hawkeyes also scored in the triple jump and the long jump. Pat Jones claimed third in the long jump and fourth in the triple jump.

Wheeler said the triple jump for Jones, a sophomore from Joliet, Ill., was a personal best of 49 feet-2½ inches.

Iowa's next meet is a return to Cedar Falls at Saturday's UNI-Dome Open.

Hawks

looked like a sure bet. That's before Minnesota went into a delay offense that almost held Iowa under the century mark.

With :08 left, Iowa freshman Felicia Hall hit a pair of free throws to give Iowa 100 points and send the Arena into a frenzy.

"When the crowd started to boo us because we slowed it down we didn't care," Minnesota Coach LaRue Fields said. "At that point we set goals of trying to keep Iowa under 100 points and we wanted to score at least 50. Our last basket was just as important to us as the two free throws that the Hall kid hit was for Iowa."

IOWA RESERVES PLAYED most of the second half and registered some impressive statistics. Freshman point guard Stephanie Schueler played 19 minutes scored 10 points and picked up seven steals. Robin Christian pumped in 18 points off the bench and Hall had six points and five rebounds in only six minutes of action.

Because Iowa used so many players, Fields said she didn't think the Hawkeyes tried to embarrass her Gophers. "No, I don't think they ran up the score. They just played," Fields said. "I've been in that situation before. When you have those type of athletes you have to let them play."

Stringer said she was pleased with the way her team opened the second half of the Big Ten schedule but said that the 100-point total was not important to her.

"WE DON'T SET goals like that," Stringer said. "If I wanted to score 100 points I could have done it a lot sooner. I just would have let the starters continue to play. The important thing is that we played well."

While the point total was not important to Stringer, Hall still felt the pressure as she stepped to the line to shoot two free throws with Iowa leading 98-49.

"I did feel pressure but once that referee handed me the ball I asked God to give me the strength and the rest was free," Hall, who had missed a free throw earlier in the game, said.

Recruiting Hawkeyes blow out Flames with 10-point home victory

tradition of signing some of the best and biggest offensive linemen in the nation this year, including: Rob Doherty, 270 pounds, Doug Skene, 293, Bill Schaffer, 280, John Woodlock, 294, Joe Cocozzo, 300 and Steve Everett, 275.

"Without a doubt, Michigan got the best offensive linemen in the Big Ten," Lemming said.

Lemming also said he thinks the Wolverines snared two of the best running backs in Missouri's Jon Vaughn and Chicago's Levittus Johnson.

According to Wallace, "Michigan also recruited two stellar linebackers from Virginia in D.J. Brown and Martin Davis."

Iowa also landed its share of quality offensive line players.

"This could be Iowa's best offensive line recruits ever," Wallace, who listed Iowa third overall in the league, said.

"THEY HAVE SOME incredibly talented offensive linemen with (Mike) Devlin, (Ladd) Wessels, (Mike) Ferroni, (Scott) Davis — a great get — and (Bob) Rees."

"Overall, Iowa did better than some people might think. (Ted) Velicer and (Darin) Vande Zande are really good players and Marvin Lampkin could be a great back," Wallace added.

"However, I don't think they got the speed they needed to fulfill their needs at wide receiver. But it is still a very good recruiting class."

Lemming ranked Iowa's recruits fourth in the conference.

"Iowa didn't get a lot of the so-called great skilled players," Lemming said. "I'm impressed with Iowa — they're top 25 in my book."

Purdue took advantage of Illinois' misfortune by getting two of the best defensive linemen in the Chicago area — Frank Kmet and Payton Minter. Both players are Parade All-Americans, as are linemen Lonnie Palelei and Bryan Madden.

"AKERS DID AN exceptional job in Illinois," Lemming said. "Kmet is a great player. With Payton Minter and Lonnie Palelei, Purdue has some fine defensive line talent."

The Boilermakers also landed Jeff Lesniewicz, the Big Ten's "best quarterback," according to Lemming. Ohio State recruited two top signal-callers in Kirk Herbstreit and Nick Cochran.

The Buckeyes, under new mentor John Cooper, fought off the negative publicity generated by Earle Bruce's firing to get offensive guard Corey Pargo, running backs Buster Howe and Tony Goodgame, tight end Chris Roy, wide out Greg Beatty, Rich Frimel and linebackers Judah Herman and Tony Closson.

Michigan State was expected to do better than it did after winning the Rose Bowl.

"With (George) Perles talking with Green Bay, it had to hurt their chances," Wallace said.

The Iowa men's gymnastics team started this season's home record with a victory over Illinois-Chicago Sunday in the north gym of the Field House.

The fourth-ranked Hawkeyes dominated the No. 16 Flames 277.85-266.75.

Illinois-Chicago Coach C.J. Johnson said he was disappointed with his team's performance.

"I was quite embarrassed," Johnson said. "I think we could have had a better showing. We did a lot of new routines but our performance wasn't the best."

Johnson added that the north gym in the Field House was also a factor in his Flames' downfall.

"This gym is not lucky for us," Johnson said. "When the team feels down, they break down."

IOWA ASSISTANT COACH Mike Burns said his Hawkeyes' increased effort paid off in the win.

"They were really aggressive — they applied themselves," Johnson said. The Hawkeyes began "applying" themselves in floor exercise, the first event. The teams were nearly knotted after that event with Iowa leading 45.50-45.05.

Men's Gymnastics

Sophomore Keith Cousino headed the floor exercise for the Hawkeyes with a 9.45. The Flames' highest scorer was Jay Rivera with a 9.25.

According to Burns, Cousino has fully recovered from the elbow injury he suffered in December. Burns also said that Iowa Captain Joe Thome, who has been performing in a brace, will also be at full strength soon.

"He should be out his brace within the next two weeks," Burns said.

IOWA INCREASED ITS edge over Illinois-Chicago in the pomel horse with final scores of 46.20-44.15.

Iowa's leading scorers were Jeff Dow 9.55 and Joe Thome 9.5, with Illinois-Chicago's Mike Costa trailing with a 9.2.

The still rings event went like the others, with the Hawkeyes slowly pulling away from the Flames. Iowa's Chris Stanicek led the event, scoring a 9.65 with what Burns called an "outstanding" routine.

A downfall for Iowa was a dismount missed by Paul Wozniak resulting in his score of 9.3. Wozniak, who earlier this season broke the school record in still rings with a 9.80, had trouble with his ending stunt because of lack of practice, Burns said.

"This was a new dismount," Burns said. "He was sick twice last week, so he didn't have it as practiced as he could have. With a little repetition he could be scoring 9.8 to 10."

The following two events, vault and parallel bars, were also won by Iowa, with leading performances again by Stanicek and Thome.

Zussman sets school record in Big Ten loss to Badgers

By G. Hammond-Kunke
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa women's gymnastics team dropped its Big Ten opener to Wisconsin Friday night in Madison, Wis., 179.90-174.70, moving its record to 3-4 on the season.

Iowa sophomore Robyn Zussman set a school record of 9.5 in the vault to win that competition. Zussman broke her own mark of 9.35 which she had established in the first meet of the season at San Jose State.

Zussman tied for third with a 9.25 in the floor exercise and placed third in the all-around at 36.25. Zussman also had 8.75 scores in the balance beam and uneven bars.

"It's great to have one of our gymnasts come out with a winning effort and it's always exciting to have a record set," Iowa Coach Diane DeMarco said.

First-year Iowa gymnast Michele

Women's Gymnastics

Cahal placed second in the uneven bars with a 9.1 effort and took third place in the vault with a 9.15. Cahal's vault score ranks fourth best in the Iowa record books.

"MICHELE HIT A dynamite routine and was most definitely under-scored with a 9.1 in it," DeMarco said.

Tracy Junker, another first-year performer, tied for first in the balance beam with Wisconsin's Kim Wright and Beth Benevente at 9.25. Benevente finished second in the all-around at 36.55, with the Badgers' sophomore Lisa Peterson winning with a total of 37.15.

Niebuhr, with nine takedowns and a technical fall in 6:41 to pull the Hawkeyes to 16-11.

But at 190, Barnes scored three takedowns on Simpson, the last one with five seconds remaining in the second period, to take a 7-2 advantage into the third period.

A final takedown-and-release flurry by Simpson (6-7-1) in the last minute pulled the Newton, Iowa, sophomore to 9-7, but Barnes clinched the Cowboys' victory with a takedown in the final moments to win, 11-8.

"WE HAD TALKED about this (the switch) a couple of days ago and then again after we saw the weigh-ins," Seay said late Saturday. "But you never know about those types of things.

"We gave 15 pounds away (at 190) but we thought we were better on our feet, which we were. We knew he (Simpson) had a wrist-and-roll which he pinned (Iowa State's Eric Voelker) with, so we stayed away from that. We legged him a few times, but stayed off the waist."

For Dan Gable, in his 12th year at Iowa, the loss marked the first time one of his squads has lost three times in a season. His career record against the Cowboys fell to 9-3.

"It's the story of the whole year — having opportunities to win and then making mistakes," Gable said. "With Simpson, we haven't had the time to spend on his defense; we've got to master his offense first."

"BUT WE'VE BEEN putting too much pressure on our upper weights and I think it's getting to Simpson. We had a chance to get into the match earlier, but we froze at 142 and had only one speed at 150 — slow."

At 118 pounds, Steve Martin (24-10) came one second away from gaining a draw against Oklahoma

Results from Saturday's wrestling meet at Gallagher Hall in Stillwater, Okla.:
 118 — Cory Baze (OSU) defeated Steve Martin, 5-4.
 126 — Brad Penrith (I) defeated Kendall Cross, 6-5.
 134 — John Smith (OSU) defeated Joe Melchiorre, 12-5.
 142 — Mark Toarmina (OSU) defeated Eric Pierson, 3-1.
 150 — Wes White (OSU) defeated Mike Carpenter, 9-3.

 167 — Mike Farrell (OSU) defeated Rick Novak, 12-0.
 177 — Royce Alger (I) won by technical fall over Dan Niebuhr, 6-41.
 190 — Chris Barnes (OSU) defeated Brooks Simpson, 11-8.
 HWT — Mark Sindlinger (I) defeated Terry Ullom, 10-2.

State's second-ranked Cory Baze (36-1). Both wrestlers earned four match points, but Baze walked away a 5-4 winner with exactly one minute of riding time.

Brad Penrith (32-2) scored three takedowns in the first two periods at 126 pounds to down the Cowboys' Kendall Cross, 8-5.

Joe Melchiorre (5-3-1) prevented Oklahoma State from adding any team bonus points by holding the Cowboys' 134-pound defending national champion John Smith to a 12-5 victory.

ERIC PIERSON AT 142 and Mike Carpenter at 150 both failed to reverse Iowa's fortunes. Pierson (12-15-1) lost to second-teamer Mark Toarmina, 3-1, and Carpenter (18-6-1) surrendered three takedowns in defeat to Wes White, 9-3.

At 167, Iowa's Rick Novak (8-7) lost to 1987 all-American Mike Farrell, 12-0. At heavyweight, Iowa's Mark Sindlinger (30-6-2) downed Terry Ullom, 10-2.

Oklahoma State's victory was Seay's first over Gable since taking the Cowboys' reins in 1984.

Iowa's next action is Sunday in Ames against fourth-ranked Iowa State.

10 in conference scoring. Forward Todd Mitchell and guard Troy Lewis are averaging 19.1 and 17.1 points per game, respectively.

Guard Everette Stephens, completing what many believe is one of the best backcourts in college basketball, is also second in conference play in steals behind Michigan's Gary Grant.

Stephens and center Melvin McCants also score in double figures for Purdue.

The Boilermakers are coming of a struggling 72-70 victory over Michigan State Wednesday. Victories are great, as every coach will agree, but this one had its problems.

"Well, we just thought there ought to be a lot more mental sharpness with Iowa coming up," Keady said.

But the win over the Spartans was a road win, something which the Boilermakers will have to accomplish again to defeat the Hawkeyes.

"I think it's not necessarily who you're playing — it's a road game," Keady said.

Schueler

decision to deepen her bench as the Big Ten season gets in full swing.

"I felt that through the Big Ten season, we needed to play our bench considerably more," Stringer said.

It was the 5-foot-6 guard who, with the intensity of a Jeff Moe and the determination of a Larry Bird, wouldn't let the Hawkeyes rest on their cushy lead as it increased from 20 to 30 and finally, at game's end, to 49 points.

SCHUELER STEALS a pass and scores on a lay-up. Schueler dives and skids across the court to save a ball from going out-of-bounds. Schueler penetrates Minnesota's zone defense and hits the jumper. Momentum carries Schueler three rows into the stands. Schueler steals the ball from a Golden Gopher and darts across three-quarters of the court for another lay-up.

It's no wonder the crowd rose to its feet and cheered on in encouragement as the Hawkeyes approached the 100-point plateau, a first for a Stringer-coached Iowa team that is now 19-0 and sporting the longest winning streak (19) in the history of Iowa basketball.

As for Schueler, who has played in 12 games this season, her performance in this conference contest was no less than she expects from herself.

"I just get in there and try to do the best I can," she said.

Olympics

flew home from Calgary Saturday night and was in the hospital when she died, according to Ruth Krause, a hospital supervisor.

The U.S. speedskater had been speaking daily with his sister by telephone from the Games, and he called her a last time early Sunday morning. Bob Cornell, the public relations person assigned to the speedskating team by the USOC, said there was no indication Beres was able to understand what he said.

Jansen's brother Mike was at her bedside and gave Beres a kiss for Dan.

CORNELL ALSO said the funeral will be postponed until after Jansen competes in the 1,000. Following the death, the other American speedskaters dedicated their efforts to Beres and allowed Jansen a private room in the village to make phone calls.

For the first time ever, the Olympic speedskating championships were held indoors, in the Olympic Oval at the University of Calgary, and it is expected that some world records will be eclipsed.

The personal tragedy came on a bitterly cold second day of the 16-day Games when medals were to be contested in four events, but the weather again disrupted the program.

WINDS OF UP TO 98 mph at the top of the ski slope forced postponement of the men's downhill race. The race, one of the glamour events of the Olympics, was rescheduled for Monday morning, conditions permitting.

"You can't race in conditions like that. It's absurd," said Gary Miller, the U.S. men's downhill coach. "If the wind is consistent and moderate, fine. But when the gusts are heavy, there's not a chance."

The wind whipped 2 to 3 inches of new snow across the 1.9-mile course and would have made it extremely difficult for the skiers to see where they were going.

The first two of the 46 gold medals to be awarded in the next two weeks were won by Vida Ventene, a 26-year-old Soviet in the women's 10-kilometer cross country ski race, and Matti Nykanen of Finland in the 70-meter ski jump.

salvaged and what can't."

Making a comeback from an injury is nothing new for Lorenzen, whose fiancée, Karen Napolitano, recently had a knee injury end her field hockey career.

"We've both been through this before, so we know what it takes to get over it."

The 6-foot-9, 225-pound senior from Cedar Rapids Kennedy, closes his Iowa career with 10.6 points and 5.7 rebounds per game. He scored a career-high 20 points twice, against Illinois Wesleyan (1984) and Illinois (1986). He scored 862 points during his four years in a Hawkeye uniform.

Honeymoon ends with a splash

United Press International
 LOS ANGELES — The newlywed husband of a woman who fell overboard from a luxury cruise ship and drowned in the waters off San Diego was held by federal authorities Sunday on suspicion of murder, officials said.

Scott Robin Roston, 36, was held without bail at the federal detention facility on Terminal Island in Los Angeles until an appearance early this week before a U.S. Magistrate, FBI Special Agent Fred Reagan said.

Roston's 26-year-old wife, Karen, fell over the side of the M.V. Star Dancer about 12:50 a.m. CST Saturday as the 550-foot ship was cruising about 30 miles southwest of San Diego. Her body was pulled from the water about 10 hours later by the U.S. Coast Guard.

ROSTON TOLD ship officials his wife was blown overboard by a strong gust of wind, Coast Guard Lt. Dennis Fahr said.

But a Coast Guard search vessel reported winds in the area at the time of the incident were measured at only 4 or 5 mph, Fahr said. When asked if such winds could toss an adult overboard, Fahr answered, "I don't think so."

The captain of the cruise liner told investigators that "he suspected foul play" after finding an earring and piece of hair on the deck from which the woman fell, Fahr said.

The couple had "recently" moved to Santa Monica, Reagan said. One passenger aboard the ship told the Los Angeles Times the couple appeared to be on their honeymoon.

Finnish ski jumper tops field

By Michael Barrett
United Press International

CALGARY, Alberta — Matti Nykanen of Finland, the pre-Olympic favorite, turned in the two longest jumps of the competition and easily won the gold medal in the 70-meter ski jump Sunday at the Winter Games.

Pavel Ploc of Czechoslovakia, Nykanen's toughest rival on the World Cup circuit, took the silver medal and Jiri Malec of Czechoslovakia won the bronze.

Nykanen, 24, put together two jumps of 289 feet, 1/2 inch (89.5 meters) and his impeccable style netted him 229.1 points, giving him an easy victory over Ploc.

Still, the competition wasn't decided until the final jump of the competition when Nykanen got off his second 289 1/2 foot jump to wrest the lead away from Ploc.

Nykanen took a 7.9 point lead over Malec after the first jump while another 17 jumpers were within 7.9 points of Malec. Malec leaped 285 feet (88.0 meters) but lost ground on style points to Nykanen.

YUGOSLAVIANS MIRAN Tepes, Primoz Ulaga and Rajko Lotric

Finland's Matti Nykanen waves after capturing the first men's gold medal of the 1988 Winter Olympics by winning the 70-meter ski jump.

He was third, fourth and fifth after the first jump while Ploc was only seventh after a disappointing jump of 277-2 (84.5 meters).

With the jumpers starting in reverse order in the second round, Ploc took over first with his leap of 281-1/2 (87 meters). Ploc had placed seventh on his first jump but when he landed on his second, he shot his right fist into the air.

Ploc's combined total stood as the best until Nykanen, jumping last, unleashed another 289 1/2 foot jump to clinch the gold. Nykanen shook both fists into the air after he landed, equaling his record for the best jump of the day. Nykanen finished with 229.1 points, compared to 212.1 for Ploc. Malec had a second jump of 276-1/2 and tallied 211.8 points for third.

TEPES PLACED FOURTH and Jiri Parma made it three Czechs in the top five with his fifth-place finish.

The elements cooperated, with temperatures in the mid-30s and southerly winds. The practice sessions had been affected by stiff northwest winds, which had given the jumpers problems.

Mark Konopacke of Kingsford, Mich., was the top American finisher, placing 18th after jumps of 272 feet (83.5 meters) and 257-1/2 feet (79.5 meters).

The Olympic results duplicated the World Cup standings for 1988, where Nykanen also leads Ploc.

British hopeful Eddie Edwards placed last of the 58 competitors, but delighted the crowd of about 50,000 with his broad waves and a large grin before and after his last jump.

Soviet skier takes first '88 gold medal

By Jim Slater
United Press International

CANMORE, Alberta — Vida Ventsene, a 26-year-old student from the Soviet Union, won the first gold medal decided at the 15th Winter Olympics, taking the women's 10-kilometer cross country ski race Sunday in Olympic record time.

Ventsene, ranked second on the World Cup circuit, completed the hilly Canmore Nordic Center

Course in 30 minutes, 8.3 seconds, breaking the 12-year-old Olympic mark by 5.11 seconds.

Soviet skiers took four of the top five places. Soviet veteran Raisa Smetanina, who set the previous mark in Innsbruck, finished second in 30:17.0 to take a silver medal for the second straight Olympics. It was the eighth Olympic medal overall for Smetanina.

Finland's Marjo Matikainen, the two-time defending World Cup champion, placed third in 30:20.5 to capture the bronze. Svetlana Nageikaina of the Soviet Union was fourth, while Tamara Tikonova of the Soviet Union, the World Cup leader this season at 10 kilometers, placed fifth.

VENTSENE TRAILED Smetanina's time over the first 4.6 kilometers of the race by more than 13 seconds but closed within two-tenths of a second over the middle third of the course. Smetanina, 25, struggled slightly over the final hills, enabling Ventsene to surpass her time at the finish.

Finland's Marja Liisa Kirvesniemi, who swept all three women's races at the 1984 Games, placed ninth. Simone Petter-Greiner, the East German who leads the World Cup standings, finished 21st.

The top American finisher was Leslie Krichko, 28, Portland, Ore., who placed 36th in a time of 33:25.1.

E. German Mueller leads in luge event

By Morley Myers
United Press International

CALGARY, Alberta — East Germany's Jens Mueller, a subject of heated controversy during training runs, moved halfway to the gold medal in men's luge competition Sunday by leading the 38-member field after two runs.

The 22-year-old army sergeant was the fastest in both of the two runs down the 1,251-meter refrigerated course to finish with an aggregate time of one minute, 32.745 seconds.

The world championship silver medalist averaged 70 miles per hour in posting runs of 46.301 seconds and 46.444 seconds.

West Germany's European champion Georg Hackl placed second in 1:32.908, ahead of Soviet 1984 Olympic silver medalist Yuri Karchenko (1:32.996) and East German Thomas Jacob (1:33.064).

Austrian world champion Markkus Prock, who veered to the left on his first attempt to occupy eighth position, moved up three places at 1:33.269.

MICHAEL WALTER WAS next with 1:33.332, leaving East Germany with three of the top six places going into Monday's final two runs.

Italy's defending champion Paul Hildgartner managed only a 10th-place finish, nearly one second off the pace.

Frank Masley from Newark, Del., was the best of the U.S. lugers, placing 11th in 1:33.703.

Mueller was the subject of controversy during training runs because he wore a plastic girdle to reduce aerodynamics.

Austrian world champion Markkus Prock was among those who protested that Mueller's padding did not conform to regulations and was designed to reduce resistance.

Prock's claim was supported by the International Luge Federation jury president Sepp Fendt, who said the rules outlawed changing the shape of the body.

Following a team leaders' meeting, the East Germans explained Mueller's padding looked excessive because he was comparatively light at 121 pounds. His weight is 77 pounds under the limit and the rules allow him to carry 75 percent of the difference.

Mueller made minor modifications in his girdle before starting Sunday.

ABC denies tampering with hockey schedule

By David Nathan
United Press International

CALGARY, Alberta — ABC Sports and the International Ice Hockey Federation denied Sunday the two organizations worked together to shape the U.S. Olympic hockey team's playing schedule to better suit American TV viewers during the Winter Games.

The Calgary Sun reported in Sunday's editions that ABC persuaded hockey officials to change the United States' opening-game opponent from Czechoslovakia, a perennial power, to Austria, a lesser opponent. The U.S. team, which whipped Austria 10-6 Saturday, will face the Czechoslovaks Monday night.

Also, the newspaper said ABC had influence in increasing the number of teams in the medal round from four to six, which could keep the U.S. playing longer.

"AT THIS POINT there is nothing more that I can offer other than the scheduling is in the hands of the International (Ice) Hockey Federation," ABC spokesman Jeff Tolvins said.

Tolvins said he did not know of any discussions between ABC and international hockey officials about scheduling.

"I'm not aware of any of that happening," he said. "The scheduling is based on the finish in the World Championships."

Hockey federation officials also said scheduling was determined by the outcome of the world tournament, and not by consultations with ABC.

"We have discussed the schedule only with the participating teams and the International Olympic Committee," said Gan-Ake Edvinsson, general secretary of the hockey federation.

THE ONLY SCHEDULING stipulation required by the hockey federation is that no team be forced to play back-to-back games in a span of fewer than 20 hours.

The U.S. team, the No. 7 seed, plays all five of its preliminary-round games at night and will be seen during prime time viewing hours each time. Top-seeded Sweden plays two preliminary games in the morning.

"It's no use complaining," said Kurt Lindstrom, an assistant coach with the Swedish team. "We could argue, but what's the use?"

"We understand the situation with the Americans and television. We've had the schedule for two months, and if we play some games in the morning, that's all right."

Overlooked videos analyzed

Lesser-known, poorly packaged videos can hold surprises

By Locke Peterseim
The Daily Iowan

There's no getting around the fact that, like it or not, watching films on videocassette has replaced going out to the movie theater. However, while you rarely find yourself unable to get a seat at the theater, it's not uncommon to find the blockbuster video you want gone from the shelves of the local video rental store.

With that in mind, here are several films on videocassette which were mishandled by studio publicists or simply not appreciated at the box office. They're likely more available for rental than the megahits but often equal or surpass better-known films in terms of good, clean fun. Ranging from outrageously silly to touchingly humorous, they're perfect for a relaxing night in front of the tube.

Songwriter — One of Alan (Trouble in Mind, Made in Heaven) Rudolph's more down-to-earth films with Kris Kristofferson and Willie Nelson as country musicians on the road. Non-country and western fans shouldn't be scared away; the film is enjoyable and funny even if you don't know Merle Haggard from Minnie Pearl.

Buckaroo Banzai — Peter Robocop Weller is the rock 'n' roll neurosurgeon/physicist/adventurer. John Lithgow is the Italian scientist possessed by the alien from Planet Ten. Throw in Jeff Goldblum and Christopher Lloyd and you've got a fast, funny, intelligent film so tightly packed with bizarre characters, complex plot and hilarious dialogue that it can only truly be appreciated after multiple viewings.

Big Meat Eater — Don't be misled by the suggestive title; this warped ultra low-budget Canadian film contains no nudity and no sex. Looking like it was shot in someone's back yard, it comes off as a campy mix of Little Shop of Horrors, Repo Man and The Rocky Horror Picture Show. Tremendously cheap special effects are combined with bad songs, radioactive bologna and household appliances. It's not for everyone's taste but not to be missed by the more twisted.

Better Off Dead — Everything-including-the-kitchen-sink humor, the more obscure the better. Director Savage Steve Holland takes John Cusack and the usual high-school setting, mixes in homicidal paper boys, Howard Cosell impersonators and singing pork burgers to come up with a kind of John-Hughes-on-acid teen film. You'll either laugh till you vomit, or just sit there saying, "What?"

Creator — Criminally mismarketed, this adaptation of Jeremy Leven's novel shines with Peter O'Toole in his best role in recent years as a biology professor trying to clone his dead wife. Neither a silly mad scientist film nor a stupid sex comedy, Creator is wonderfully warm and very intelligent.

Fandango — Spotted by Steven Spielberg, Kevin Reynolds got to turn a 20-minute project into a feature film. The result is much more than an Animal House clone; it's a fresh, funny and moving look at college students facing the end of the world as they know it — graduation. Kevin Costner and Judd Nelson turn in pre-fame performances which rival anything they've done since.

Swimming to Cambodia — You may find it hard to believe that one man talking — not singing, not dirty dancing, not juggling, fully clothed — just talking, could be not only interesting, but also entertaining and enjoyable. Spaulding Gray talks about his bit role in The Killing Fields and the search for the perfect moment.

Straight to Hell — The worst film of 1987? Many think so, but true cools will know a masterpiece when they smell one. Spaghetti westerns go post-punk with Joe Strummer, Dick Rude and the Pogues under Alex (Repo Man, Sid and Nancy) Cox's thumb. Awful? Perhaps, but Karl's Disco Wiener Haven song is comic genius. Sometimes bad is bad.

Rock and Roll High School — "We're not students, we're The Ramones!" The godfather of modern high-school flicks, this film is pretty much a feature-length promo for The Ramones, including all their classic hits. This film shows what rock was really like in those wild post-disco days of the late '70s. Stellar cast includes Clint "Ron's little brother" Howard, Vincent "Dick's son" Van Patten and P.J. Soles as Riff Randall. And of course the Ramones.

Something Wild — Jonathon Demme couldn't decide whether to make a screwball comedy or a noir thriller. So he made both — sort of. Bringing Up Baby meets Blue Velvet. Jeff Daniels and Melanie Griffith are fine, but it's Ray Liotta who'll steal your heart. There's a neat soundtrack with everyone, including the Talking Heads.

UI student wins composition prize

By Cathy Jackson
The Daily Iowan

When UI School of Music student Marian MacLeod began composing songs to the words of Emily Dickinson poems, she didn't think anyone else had ever done it.

But after winning first prize for the songs in the American Society of University Composers 1988 Student Composition, MacLeod found that Dickinson's poetry has inspired more "art songs" than any other poet.

Still, the judges found MacLeod's set of three songs for choir and piano innovative enough to award her $500 and a chance to get her work published when she attends the ASUC's national conference at the University of Kansas at Lawrence April 27-May 1.

At 45, MacLeod has only been composing for two years. She received a master's degree in dance from Central Michigan University in 1980 but decided to return to CMU to study music theory and composition because of her lifelong interest in music, leaving her job as a children's librarian in Mt. Pleasant, Mich. and enrolling as a full-time undergraduate.

MACLEOD TRANSFERRED to the UI last fall and began studying under UI Professor of Music Richard Hervig when her husband, Jon MacLeod, took a position as associate director of engineering at the UI Physical Plant.

"I feel so behind. I came into this so old — I'm the age of most of the students' mothers," MacLeod said. "But I don't mind being with young people, and I don't think they mind either."

MacLeod said she has not heard her work — a song cycle titled "The Strange Beauty of Emily" — performed or even sung yet. She will hear the songs in April when they are performed for the first time at the ASUC conference.

All three of MacLeod's songs set to music one of Dickinson's poems about beauty.

"Sometimes words dictate how music is going to go," MacLeod said. "I tried to fit the music to the mood of the poems."

At the Bijou

Le Samourai (1967) — Arguably director Jean-Pierre Melville's greatest achievement, this film explores the world of a contract killer who polishes off his victims with all the solemnity of a priest at mass. In French. 6:30 p.m.

Lady Jane (1986) — This poignant tale of a 15-year-old who for nine days was Queen of England is highlighted by fine acting and some brilliant directing. 8:30 p.m.

Tampopo (1986) — Two famished truckers embark on a quest for the ultimate noodle. In Japanese. 8 p.m.

Television

"Television — News: The Power of Pictures" — In the first of two episodes on the news, this series examines the effect television news has had on such events as the Kennedy assassination, war in Vietnam, Grenada, the civil rights movement, Watergate and terrorism (8 p.m.; IPTV 12).

Music

Phi Mu Alpha's New Music Week continues with a Faculty Recital at 8 p.m. in Harper Hall.

Art

An exhibition of 90 prints by French artist Henri Matisse will be on display in the Museum of Art through Feb. 28. Project Art will sponsor the 10th annual staff art show — specifically photography this month — in the UI Hospitals and Clinics Main and Boyd Tower lobbies.

The February exhibit in the main galleries of the Art Center, 129 E. Washington St., will be the artwork of Emily Martin and Emily Gelman Vermillion.

Radio

The Cleveland Orchestra performs the works of Prokofiev, Tchaikovsky and Beethoven, his fantastic, better-than-the-Fifth Symphony No. 8 (8 p.m.; KHKE 89.5 FM). Pianist Emanuel Ax joins James Conlon and the Chicago Symphony Orchestra in an all-Beethoven program: Overture to "Egmont," Violin Concerto in D and Symphony No. 7, the fourth movement of which will certainly inspire (8:30 p.m.; KSUI 91.7 FM).
